Prioritize high-yield medium-lifespan paddy strains

Monsoon has already set in Myanmar. Now, it rains a lot in various regions. Torrential rains have been scattered in some regions in the states and divisions. Farmers will soon begin ploughing fields to grow paddy.

Monsoon entered the country a little late. So, farmers have to honour the directives of the Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation in growingpaddy. They should start ploughing fields as soon as possible in order to make paddy farming successful.

Simultaneously, farmers should make necessary arrangements for saving rainwater as much as they can in roadside drains and lakes, and ensuring that the dykes of paddy fields are water-resistant.

Paddy seeds are to be sowed in advance in the places where supply of sufficient water is available for agricultural purpose. And suitable methods are to be applied to sow paddy seeds in the places where there cannot be sufficient water supply. Direct seeding method is to be prioritized as it can make the lifespan of paddy shorter. Paddy seedlings are to be planted while they are young.

In particular, to boost paddy production, farmers should choose medium- and short-lifespan paddy strains and use organic and inorganic fertilizers in proportion to obtain fast growth of paddy plants and minimize unnecessary loss and wastage.

Agricultural farming is the major business of rural folks, who make up the great majority of the nation’s population. The more farmers boost production of crops the higher socio-economic status they can enjoy, and the greater economic growth the nation can gain.

Therefore, in line with the directives for greater economic growth the nation can gain, the socio-economic status they can enjoy, and the greater economic growth the nation can gain.

Study: Coral atolls hold on despite sea-level rise

WELLINGTON, 3 June— Some South Pacific coral atolls have held their own or even grown in size over the past 60 years despite rising sea levels, research showed on Thursday.

Some scientists worry that many of the tiny, low-lying islands throughout the South Pacific will eventually disappear under rising sea levels. But two researchers who measured 27 islands where local sea levels have risen 4.8 inches (120 millimeters) — an average of 0.08 inch (2 millimeters) a year — over the past 60 years, found just four had diminished in size.

The reason: Coral islands respond to changes in weather patterns and climate, with coral debris eroded from encircling reefs pushed up onto the islands’ coasts by winds and waves.

Surgery increases survival rate for prostate cancer patients

LOS ANGELES, 3 June — Prostate cancer patients who choose surgery have longer survival rate than those who refuse the treatment, a study shows.

“Surgery has been shown to offer a survival advantage to patients with prostate cancer when compared with other treatment options,” said study lead author Naveen Pokala, M.D., an urologist at Henry Ford Hospital.

The study findings were presented on Tuesday at the ongoing annual meeting of the American Urology Association in San Francisco.

The findings show that men who refuse surgery for prostate cancer and instead opt for “watchful waiting”—monitoring cancer progression without undergoing treatment—have a significantly worse long-term survival rate than those patients that choose radiotherapy.

A 10-year overall survival rate is 51 percent for patients who refused any treatment for their prostate cancer, compared to 68 percent for those who chose radiation treatment, according to the study.

The research, a population-based analysis of 9,704 patients chosen from the National SEER database, looked at survival rates among men with a mean age of 64.4 years, of whom 77 percent were white and 16.4 percent black.

Of that group, nearly 30 percent refused any treatment for their prostate cancers, and about 70 percent chose radiation therapy.

Within the group, six percent had well-differentiated cancers, 75 percent moderately differentiated cancers, and 18 percent had poorly differentiated cancer.

More than 70 percent of the patients were unmarried. In all, African American men older than 65 had the worst prognosis.

An earlier study published in 2009 showed that surgery improves 5-, 10- and 15-year survival rates for men younger than 50 with moderately and especially in poorly differentiated prostate cancers, when compared with other standard treatments such as radiation therapy or watchful waiting.

Prostate cancer is second only to skin cancer as the most common cancer in American men, affecting one in six during his lifetime. The majority of the cases are in men older than 65, but it is becoming more prevalent in men under 40. It affects black men twice as often as whites, and their mortality rate is also twice as high.—Xinhua

Scientists find treatment to block malaria mosquito infection

CANBERRA, 3 June— Australian scientists on Thursday said they have found a unique way to block a malaria infection, opening up a new front in the war on the mosquito-borne parasite which infects 400 million people every year, Australian Associated Press reported on Thursday.

Researchers at the Melbourne-based Walter and Eliza Hall Institute for Medical Research have identified an alternative method to that used by conventional treatments, which kills off the parasite once it has gained access to a person’s red blood cells.

The institute’s Dr James Beeson said the new method had proven capable of stopping the parasite from entering the cells altogether, robbing it of the safe haven it needed to multiply while hiding from the body’s defences.

“All of the currently licensed anti-malarial drugs that are used in humans act by inhibiting or slowing down the development of the parasite once it is inside the red blood cell,” Beeson said.

Childhood brain tumours may respond to measles virus

Ono, 3 June— A modified form of the measles virus could become a treatment for a kind of brain tumour in children, researchers report.

The tumour, known as medulloblastoma, occurs in about 20 percent of childhood brain cancer cases. Treatment, which can include surgery, radiation and chemotherapy, has increased the survival rate at five years to 70 percent, but the tumors remain deadly in many cases.

“There is still an urgent need to investigate alternative therapeutic approaches that are more effective and have less toxic side effects,” said study lead author Dr Corey Raffel, chief of neurosurgery at Nationwide Children’s Hospital in Columbus, Ohio.

Researchers have previously used strains of measles virus to kill different types of tumour cells.

In this study, researchers found that a modified form of the measles virus killed brain tumour cells in the laboratory. The approach seemed to also work in mice with tumours similar to medulloblastomas in humans.

“Based on our results, we believe having a larger percentage of tumour volume may be contributing to the aggressive nature of the disease in men with a higher BMI,” he said.

The body mass index, or BMI, is calculated by dividing a person’s weight by the square of his or her height.

Cancer will kill 13.2 million a year by 2030

LONDON, 3 June— Cancer will kill more than 13.2 million people a year by 2030, almost double the number who died from the disease in 2008, the United Nation’s cancer research agency said on Tuesday.

The International Agency for Research on Cancer (IARC) also said that almost 21.4 million new cases of the disease will be diagnosed annually in 2030.

Launching a new database on global incidence of cancer in 2008, the latest year for which figures are available, the IARC said the burden of cancer was shifting from wealthier to poorer nations.

“Cancer is neither rare anywhere in the world, nor confined to high-resource countries,” it said in a statement.

In total, 7.6 million people died of cancer in 2008 and there was an estimated 12.7 new cases diagnosed.—Internet

Study links obesity to more aggressive prostate cancer

WASHINGTON, 3 June— The size of a cancerous prostate tumour is directly proportional to the weight of the patient and the bigger the tumour the more aggressive the cancer, a study published Wednesday has found, “As the patients’ body mass index increased, the tumor volume increased synchronously,” said Dr. Nilesh Patel, who led the six-year study at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit, Michigan.

“Based on our results, we believe that men who are more overweight are at a higher risk of developing aggressive prostate cancer,” he said.

The doctors established the link after examining the cases of 3,327 patients who had cancerous prostate tumours surgically removed through a robotic procedure.—Internet

Premier of the State Council of the People’s Republic of China, members of the Chinese delegation and distinguished guests,

Sharing border along the long regions of forests and lands, Myanmar and China has been cementing friendly ties since yore. New generation leaders are making concerted efforts for maintaining the friendly relations established by the former leaders of the States with farsightedness. Today’s ceremony was the occasion to mark the 60th Anniversary of Diplomatic Relations between the Union of Myanmar and the People’s Republic of China.

Looking back the history of relationships between the two countries, Myanmar was one of the countries that early recognized the founding of the People’s Republic of China on 1 October 1949. This year is the 60th anniversary of founding the diplomatic relations officially established on 8 June 1950 between the two countries. Chinese Premier Mr Zhou Enlai paid an official goodwill visit to Myanmar in June 1954. During the visit, the both countries announced a joint statement on five principles of peaceful coexistence can be used as basic principles in the international relations. Thanks to adopting the five principles of peaceful coexistence, the two countries built the constant friendly ties. Based on these five principles, the two countries have been joining hands in implementing the mutual respect for each other, understanding and reciprocal relationship in the international community and regional one. In addition, the cementing friendly relations could be set up between the peoples of both countries. Despite changing conditions in successive eras, the five principles are the foundation for today’s international relations.

Myanmar and China set up the fine tradition of “Paukphaw”. This word “Paukphaw” friendly ties was forged between Myanmar and China. Thanks to the negotiation, understanding and flexibility, the two countries signed the bilateral agreement on demarcation in Beijing, China, on 1 October, 1960, and that became an example for taking measures for border issues.

Since the Tatmadaw took responsibility of the State in 1988, the People’s Republic of China has also maintained the bilateral friendship while Myanmar has been making efforts for development of the country. Meanwhile, the government of the PRC has promoted the cooperation in economic and technology sectors, and the bilateral cooperation in other sectors has also gained momentum. The bilateral cooperation in oil and natural gas, energy, hydro power, infrastructures, industry and agriculture sectors have been developed in the past two decades and lead to strategic relations between the two countries.

The exchange of visits between the leaders of the two countries shows the good relations, and since many years ago, leaders of the two counties have maintained the practice of strengthening the friendship between the two countries.

As you pay a goodwill visit at a time to mark the 60th anniversary of diplomatic relations which falls on 8 June, your visit has become a historic visit. Meanwhile, the two countries have arranged to send felicitations of the leaders of the two counties to issue commemorative stamps, to hold receptions at embassies and to exchange cultural troupes to mark the 60th anniversary of diplomatic relations. Besides, a traditional cultural troup will entertain the Chinese delegation after this occasion.

The People’s Republic of China has seen political stability and its economy is booming. Besides, the country plays an important role in the United Nations and in international affairs.

Myanmar government and people thank the People’s Republic of China and its people for economic cooperation with Myanmar. Therefore, we believe that the two

In conclusion, Prime Minister U Thein Sein expressed his wish for strengthening the friendship and good relationship between the two countries and wished Chinese Premier and the people of the RRC health and happiness.

Chinese Premier Mr Wen Jiabao in his speech said that he is very glad to visit Myanmar at the invitation of Myanmar Prime Minister U Thein Sein on the occasion of the 60th anniversary of diplomatic ties between the two countries. He added that at first, on behalf of the Chinese government and Chinese people, he extends warm greetings to the Myanmar government and people, and says prayers. He thanked the Myanmar government and people for friendship and hospitality.

He said that China and Myanmar share the same border, and the relations between the two peoples have been over 1000 years. Myanmar people call Chinese people paupkhaw in adoration. Similarly, once, Chinese Marshal Qin Yi composed a poem which says that I (China) am upstream and you (Myanmar) are downstream the river. We share water from the same river with friendship. Those points reflect deep friendship between the two peoples.

In modern times, the two peoples sympathize Myanmar is the first country that signed treaties with China for bilateral friendship and non-aggression. In addition, Myanmar is the first country that can solve the historic border issue in a friendly manner with China. The five principles of peaceful coexistence China and Myanmar proposed together win the recognition from the global family as the standard relations between union countries. The neighbourly relations and cooperation between China and Myanmar over the past 60 years have flourished.

Since the Tatmadaw took responsibility of the State in 1988, the People’s Republic of China has also maintained the bilateral friendship while Myanmar has been making efforts for development of the country.

Prime Minister U Thein Sein said that Myanmar and China share a common desire of the global family as the two peoples, the process is in conformity with the common desire of the two peoples. Winning the strong support of the two peoples, the process always stands as the driving force behind the drive for enhancing the bilateral relations.

To improve China-Myanmar neighbourly and friendly relations is the policy the Chinese government has exercised intensively. In holding discussions this time, he said that he gained many benefits and exchanged broad views with Myanmar leaders. And the two sides signed important treaties. Surely, China-Myanmar relations have opened a new chapter with a prosperous future.

He said that Myanmar is a country with a long history. In the course of the nation history, industrious and farsighted Myanmar people managed to build brilliant natural culture. The Shwedagon Pagoda and ancient pagodas and temples in Bagan are well-known all over the world. In recent years, Myanmar has achieved success in nation-building tasks and international relations, he said, adding that he was pleased for that. He said he wished Myanmar people continuous success in building a new nation. Chinese people will be good neighbours, true friends and good partners of Myanmar forever. In conclusion, he said that he firmly believed that China-Myanmar relations will continuously improve based on the five principles of peaceful coexistence, and paupkhaw friendship deep from the hearts of the two peoples will remain flourishing in successive periods.

At the programmes to mark the 60th anniversary of diplomatic relations between Myanmar and China, Chinese artistes presented dance variety, and Myanmar youths, who had learnt acrobatics in China, acrobatic skills. China expands pioneer special economic zone Shenzhen

SHENZHEN, 3 June—The State Council of China has approved the expansion of the Shenzhen Special Economic Zone (SEZ) in an effort to accelerate its development, the legislature of the booming town in south China announced Wednesday.

Starting on 1 July, Baoan and Longgang districts will be officially incorporated into the SEZ, increasing its total area to 1,953 square kilometres from 396 at present, the legislature said at a press conference. The move is expected to offer more space to enhance Shenzhen’s scientific innovative capacity and seek balanced development in the city, one of China’s first group of SEZs set up in 1980, according to the approval.

SEZs were considered as showcases of China’s reform and opening-up when it initiated the drive more than 30 years ago.

South Africa seeks safety first for nuclear licenses

JOHANNESBURG, 3 June—Safery, health and the environment would be the major considerations when deciding on whether to grant licenses for nuclear power stations, South Africa’s National Nuclear Regulator (NNR) said on Tuesday.

Earlier this year, the South African government said it was committed to building a “fleet” of nuclear power plants to meet the country’s growing energy needs.

South Africa, the continent’s industrial economic powerhouse, relies on coal for 80 percent of its electricity supply, making it also Africa’s biggest polluter. Hence it intends to make more use of cleaner nuclear power.

In the South African parliament on Tuesday, NNR strategy executive Joe Mwase said public objections to building a nuclear power plant in an area must be based on proven threats to either health or the environment if they are to be heeded.

According to the South African Press Association (SAPA), he said: “If a community objects to a [nuclear] power plant being put in its neighborhood because of its effect on the ecosystem, obviously that’s a criterion that the NNR takes quite seriously.”

He said the job of the South African NNR is to protect the environment.

Mystery as ‘drunk’ parrots litter Australian town

Hundreds of seemingly drunk parrots are falling out of trees and the sky in a northern Australian town, mystifying veterinary surgeons who are struggling to care for them.

The brightly coloured lorikeets are showing classic signs of drunkenness by losing all coordination and passing out, and then covering in cages as they recover from their “hangovers”.

“They definitely seem like they’re drunk,” said Lisa Hansen, a veterinary surgeon at the Ark Animal Hospital in Palmerston, near Darwin. “They fall out of trees... and they’re not so coordinated as they would normally be. They go to jump and they miss the next perch.”

Hansen said nobody was sure what was causing the symptoms, although it may be a plant they are eating. Other theories include an outbreak of a mystery virus.

Congratulations, wildlife officials! It’s a baby elk.

Officials at a US Forest Service office in La Grande, Ore, last week found a baby elk left on their doorstep along Highway 30. It was dropped off Wednesday night and is estimated to be less than two weeks old.

Officials are seeking the person who brought in the baby elk to find out where they originally found it, so that it can be returned to its mother.

They say the baby elk probably was not abandoned, because mother elk regularly leave their babies hiding in tall grass or brush while they divert a threat, such as a coyote, and then return to their young. Officials believe the person who found the baby likely thought the animal was lost and needed to be saved.

Greece public sector sell-off planned

London, 3 June—Greece has outlined plans to part-privatise a number of publicly-owned companies in an effort to raise funds to boost government finances. The government plans to sell minority stakes in its state-owned rail company, the postal service, and in two water companies.

The plans form part of the Greece’s austerity measures, designed to cut borrowing and reduce its debts. The plan is expected to raise at least 1bn euros (£837m; $1.2bn) a year.

Privatisation plans include selling 49% of its rail company OSE, which is currently making a loss, while 39% of the state postal service will also be sold.

The government will also sell stakes in regional water companies EYATH and EYDAP of 23% and 10% respectively.

Further revenue will be raised through extending the monopoly of the state’s gambling firm, and extending its regulation of online betting.

China says ‘no thanks’ to US Defence chief

Washington, 3 June—China has ruled out a stopover by US Defence Secretary Robert M Gates, who hoped to make improved military ties with Beijing the centrepiece of his trip to Asia this week.

Mr Gates leaves on Wednesday for an around-the-world trip that will take him to countries in Asia and Europe, but aides said China has explained that this is not a convenient time.

Beijing didn’t elaborate, but China leaders were angered by the Obama administration’s recent decision to go ahead with arms sales to Taipei worth more than $6 billion.

UN investigator calls for halt to CIA drone killings

Geneva, 3 June—A United Nations investigator called on Wednesday for a halt to CIA-directed drone strikes on suspected militants, warning that killings ordered far from the battlefield could lead to a “PlayStation” mentality.

Philip Alston, UN special rapporteur on extrajudicial executions, said missile strikes could be justified only when it was impossible to capture insurgents alive instead and only if they were carried out by regular US armed forces operating with proper oversight and respect for the rules of war.

The Central Intelligence Agency’s use of unmanned Predator or Reaper drones in Afghanistan and Pakistan against al-Qaeda and Taliban suspects had led to the death of “many hundreds,” including innocent civilians, he said in a 29-page report.

“Intelligence agencies, which by definition are determined to remain unaccountable except to their own paymasters, have no place in running programmes that kill people in other countries,” Alston said.

A US Air Force RQ-4 Global Hawk drone aircraft assigned to the 380th Air Expeditionary Wing is being refueled during operations on the flight line of an undisclosed base in Southwest Asia.
Vietnam launches campaign to prevent mother-to-child HIV transmission

HANOI, 3 June—Vietnam launched a campaign to prevent mother-to-child HIV transmission in the country’s southern Ho Chi Minh City on Wednesday, the government website reported. The one-month campaign, themed in “HIV test for mother Health for child”, aims to encourage pregnant women to take HIV test to prevent the transmission of the virus from them to their children. Expecting mothers are advised to go to 225 prevention centres across the country for HIV test and being provided with medicine to prevent HIV transmission in case test shows they are positive with the virus.

Speaking at the launching ceremony, Vietnamese Deputy Prime Minister Truong Vinh Trong said the HIV epidemic is gradually contained in Vietnam, however, the number of women, especially pregnant women, found infected with HIV is increasing. Therefore, the prevention of mother-to-child HIV transmission is of significance, said Trong. About 6,000 pregnant women are tested positive to HIV in Vietnam every year. If no preventive measures are adopted, 35 percent of them will transmit the virus to their babies.

US remains Cuba’s fifth trading partner despite embargo

Havana, 3 June—The United States was Cuba’s fifth largest trading partner in 2009, despite its 48-year embargo against the island, according to official figures published here on Wednesday.

A report from the National Statistics Office (NSO) said the sales of food between the two nations was 675 million US dollars in 2009, a drop of 30 percent over the previous year.

Food and agriculture products have been exempted from the 48-year embargo since 2000. But this commercial activity is carried out in single direction: from the United States to the island, as Washington has forbidden the entry of Cuban products to its territory.

Havana must also pay in cash and use third-country ships to transport the goods.

NSO also said foreign trade was down 34 percent to 11.788 billion dollars in 2009, compared with 17.898 billion dollars in 2008.

Tornado causes “widespread devastation” in Australian state

SYDNEY, 3 June—A tornado smashed into the New South Wales (NSW) north coast town of Lennox Head on Thursday morning, causing “widespread devastation”, police said. Twelve houses were destroyed and debris was sent flying when the storm, which one witness said hit “like a bomb”, careered in off the sea.

NSW Premier Kristina Kenneally said the tornado caused “widespread devastation” and police said more than 30 houses were damaged. However, Inspector Gary Cowan from Richmond Command said only two people had been taken to hospital.

“When we look at the damage it’s just a miracle that no-one was seriously injured or killed,” he said.

Bureau of Meteorology severe weather meteorologist Andrew Haigh said the tornado moved north from Lennox Head to Byron Bay before heading offshore again. “It’s heading further offshore now and that’s where it will stay,” he said.

The low pressure system is moving south, dumping large amounts of rain but the bureau indicated Lennox Head has now seen the worst of it.

But it warns that anywhere south of Yamba and Byron Bay has the potential to see flash flooding.

Singapore’s cases of hand-foot-mouth disease hit epidemic level

SINGAPORE, 3 June—Singapore’s cases of hand-foot-mouth disease (HFMD) crossed the epidemic level of 679 to hit 706 last week, local media reported on Wednesday. The spike in cases could be due to increased awareness and checks in schools, local TV broadcaster Channel NewsAsia said. The country’s health ministry said the two seasonal peaks are usually between March and May, as well as between October and November. It believed that the current situation is part of the seasonal trend. No severe case of HFMD has been reported so far this year.

HFMD usually infects children and infants. Symptoms include fever, ulcers in the throat and rashes on the hands and feet. HFMD is spread from person to person by direct contact through the nasal discharge, saliva, faeces and fluid from the rash of an infected person.

S Africans learn tongue twister national anthem

JOHANNESBURG, 3 June—Before every South African football match, fans and players put their hands on their chest and with serious faces belt out the national anthem. But mid-song some keep quiet or fumble the words.

The South African national anthem includes verses in five of the country’s 11 official languages, a tongue which has prompted the culture ministry to devise ways of encouraging everyone to sing the whole song. Lerato Matshikiza, 25, from Johannesburg, prompted the culture ministry to devise ways of encouraging everyone to sing the whole song.

World Cup take note of All Whites, says captain

WELLINGTON, 3 June—Teams are starting to pick up and take notice of minnows New Zealand after two credible World Cup warm-up matches, says captain and Blackburn Rovers star Ryan Nelson.

The All Whites, considered rank outsiders in South Africa, were unfortunate to lose 2-1 to Australia in Melbourne last week before stunning Serbia 1-0 on Saturday.

Nelson, the long-serving Blackburn centre-half and his country’s most high-profile player, said it had been perfect preparation for New Zealand’s second World Cup appearance.

“It was only this group of players who knew we were a decent team. Unfortunately now, with the results against Australia and Serbia, other teams are starting to realize that,” he told the Labour Times.—INTERNET

World Cup betting big business in Asia

SINGAPORE, 3 June—People like a flutter and betting on football matches is big business, but in parts of Asia it is illegal and police across the region are cracking down ahead of the World Cup.

Tens of millions of dollars is expected to be wagered over the month-long football festival in South Africa on everything from who will win, to who scores the first goal or gets booked.

A large slice of this will change hands at market stalls or in underground gambling dens, often run by organized crime syndicates, and more still on online gambling websites, with thousands now available.

Germany’s rising stars eye World Cup glory

BERLIN, 3 June—Germany’s rising stars Thomas Mueller and Holger Badstuber both admit they sometimes have to pinch themselves to make sure their path to the World Cup is not just a dream.

In the space of a year, the pair have gone from Bayern Munich’s reserve to the brink of World Cup glory with the national side.

Both played a significant role in German league and cup double winners Bayern reaching the Champions League final this season and refer to the last 12 months by using words like “mad”, “crazy” and “amazing”.

“I was so nervous that I couldn’t even come up with a name for my goal,” said Mueller, “I was too excited to control the ball.”

Badstuber concurred.
