PERSPECTIVES

Parents, teachers, students to work in harmony

In this Age of Knowledge, education is at the forefront of every field. So, it is required to increase highly-educated population for further development of the country.

Myanmar’s education goal is to generate an education system to establish a society capable of overcoming the challenges of Knowledge Age. Now, five-year programmes of the 30-year plan for promotion of national education standard are being implemented in order to achieve the goal.

Younger generations with high caliber will be in the heart of shaping the future of the nation. Now, more and more IT buildings, network systems and electronic systems are being established region-wise as a part to improve the education infrastructure for a promising future of the nation.

So far, the nation has seen 40,801 basic education schools and 169 universities and colleges. Teachers play a central role in promoting the national education standard and sharpening the abilities of the youth.

Contribution made by parents is an important part of generating a bright future of younger generations. Children are to be nurtured well so as to be skilled in arts, science and technology. Students on their part are to study hard to become highly-educated.

It is a bounden duty to build a new nation with the education sector in the centre. The programmes for promotion of the national education standard will pick up greater momentum if teachers, parents and students work and deal with one another in harmony.

Suicide bombers kill 12 at Afghan police HQ

KABUL, 28 Nov—Two suicide bombers blew themselves up at an Afghan police headquarters Saturday, killing 12 officers in an area along the Pakistan border that still sees heavy Taleban attacks even as NATO pours in more troops and resources.

The Taleban claimed responsibility for the attack in eastern Paktika Province, which has long been a refuge for extremists from around the world. It is one of the most violent areas of Afghanistan, where NATO and Afghan forces fight daily against the Haqqani network, a Pakistan-based Taleban faction closely tied to al-Qaeda.

The attackers, who were disguised in police uniforms, made it through three security gates, said Nawab Waziry, the head of Paktika’s provincial council. One attacker detonated his explosives inside the police headquarters building, while the other blew himself up near the entrance about 20 minutes later.

“Some people were killed when a suicide attacker disguised in uniform blew himself up inside a police headquarters in eastern Afghanistan.”

NATO incursions of Pakistani airspace continues despite US denials

ISLAMABAD, 28 Nov—Despite Pakistan’s clear-cut political stance adopted amid stern warnings and the subsequent US written apology and denials, the NATO aircrafts continued breaching Pakistani airspace, raising wonders if these incursions are being used as a barometer for more assertive adoption amid the stance amid Afghanistan further into the Pakistan to possibly advancing Pakistani tolerance to possibly advance further into the territory, a general fear creeping into the Pakistani policy.

Since September, the NATO-led International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) gunship helicopters violated Pakistani airspace defying integrity and sovereignty of Pakistan for over half a dozen times in militancy plagued north-west Khyber Pakhtunkhwa and southwest Balochistan provinces bordering Afghanistan further fueling the rising anti-Americanism.

It all started on 27 Sept when two NATO Apache helicopters killed 30 suspected militants within Pakistan territory in a rare manned pursuit. A NATO statement claimed that the militant had allegedly attacked a security post in eastern Khost province of Afghanistan. Later in the day, two Kiowa helicopters killed another four suspects.

JAKARTA, 28 Nov—Five endangered Sumatran elephants have been found dead in Indonesia, and conservationists said Sunday that they suspect farmers poisoned the animals to stop them from damaging crops.

The elephants — four females and one male all under the age of 5 — were found dead late Friday in Riau Province on Sumatra island, said Edi Susanto, a government conservationist.

Susanto suspects that owners of nearby palm oil plantations used cyanide to poison the animals, which are known for damaging crops. He said an investigation is under way and samples from the dead elephants have been sent for analysis.

“We have told the district heads in Riau Province to ban farmers from tending crops in the woods where the elephants search for food,” Susanto said.

Only 3,000 Sumatran elephants are believed to remain in the wild, a number that dwindles each year with poaching and killing by farmers angry over crop losses. The animals are prized by poachers for their ivory tusks.

High alpha-carotene linked to longer life

ATLANTA, 28 Nov—High blood levels of the antioxidant alpha carotene found in produce may reduce the risk of premature death, US researchers say.

Dr Chaoyang Li of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta and colleagues assessed the relationship between alpha-carotene and the risk of death among 15,318 adults age 20 and older in a study that ran from 1988 to 1994 with follow-ups through 2006. A total of 3,810 of the participants died over the course of the study.

The researchers found that compared with those with blood alpha-carotene levels between 0 and 1 micrograms per deciliter, the risk of death during the study period was 23 percent lower among who had concentrations between 2 and 3 micrograms per deciliter, 27 percent lower with levels between 4 and 5 micrograms per deciliter, 34 percent lower with levels between 6 and 8 micrograms per deciliter and 39 percent lower with levels of 9 micrograms per deciliter or higher.

Alpha-carotene is chemically similar to beta-carotene but may be more effective at inhibiting the growth of cancer cells in the brain, liver and skin, the researchers say.

The results support increasing fruit and vegetable consumption as a way of preventing premature death and a need for clinical research into the health benefits of alpha-carotene, the researchers say.

The study’s findings were published online ahead of the March issue of Archives of Internal Medicine.

How to sneak exercise into holiday plans

HOUSTON, 28 Nov—The holidays create extra duties and extra calories, but US experts suggest exercise be added to everyone’s holiday to-do list.

Karen Basen-Engquist, a professor in The University of Texas MD Anderson Cancer Centre in Houston, suggests in addition to the usual recommendations to incorporate daily exercise such as using the lunch break to take a walk, scheduling workouts in advance and enlisting a friend or partner to walk with you during the holidays, break up 30 minutes of daily exercise into three 10-minute or two 15-minute chunks. “For walking to count as exercise, you should be a little bit out of breath and feel your heart beating a little faster,” Basen-Engquist says in a statement. “You should be able to talk in short sentences, but not sing holiday songs.” When shopping, carry purchases instead of using a shopping cart because this increases heart pumping and strengthens muscles, Basen-Engquist says. Cleaning the house by vacuuming, mopping, scrubbing, gardening and even taking multiple trips upstairs to put away laundry or holiday decorations all count as physical activity, Basen-Engquist says.—Internet

Robot arms improve oral cancer surgery

DETROIT, 28 Nov—Robot surgery is offering new options for oral cancer patients, who risk losing speech and the ability to eat from traditional operations, surgeons say. Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit and the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor are among the first in the country practicing TransOral Robotic Surgery, the Detroit Free Press reports. Treatment for oral cancers, or head and neck tumours, have meant large incisions in the lip, jaw and throat, causing complications that interfere with chewing, swallowing and talking. Conventional surgery and radiation also may cause major blood loss and damage to surrounding tissue. The cancers are increasing among non-smokers and are linked to the human papillomavirus, usually associated with cervical cancers.

The robot’s long, thin arms let the surgeon maneuver inside the mouth and throat. The approach “allows me to see the tumour in three-dimension so I can see exactly what I’m doing,” said Dr Tamer Ghanem of Henry Ford. The University of Michigan is studying whether outcomes from the surgery match conventional chemotherapy and radiation.—Internet

China’s 2010 crude steel consumption to hit 596 million tonnes

BEIJING, 28 Nov—China’s apparent consumption of crude steel is likely to reach 596 million tonnes this year, a year on year increase of 5.6 percent, according to a steel association official.

Apparent consumption represents the sum of net imports and output, and can be used to estimate real consumption excluding inventory.

Luo Bingsheng, deputy head of the China Iron and Steel Association, expected the country’s crude steel output to climb 8.2 percent this year from one year earlier, to reach 624 million tonnes. Luo further noted that a rising investment in 2011 would result in an increase in China’s steel demand.

If the year-on-year growth of the country’s social fixed asset investment maintained itself at around 20 percent next year, China’s crude steel apparent consumption would see an annual increase of 40 million to 50 million tonnes next year, said Luo.

Hugo Chavez says Russia lends Venezuela $4 billion for arms

CARACAS, 28 Nov — Russia gave Venezuela a $4 billion credit to buy weapons when President Hugo Chavez visited Moscow last month, adding to billions the socialist leader has already spent on re-equipping the army.

Washington views with suspicion Chavez's purchases of tanks, fighter jets and air defense systems in the last few years but the soldier-turned-president says he is merely modernizing Venezuela's aging kit.

Early snowfall wreaks havoc in Great Britain

LONDON, 28 Nov — Wintry conditions continued to plague much of Great Britain on Saturday as the region struggled to dig out from the earliest widespread snowfall in the past 17 years.

Forecasters are predicting that the storm that saw 35 centimeters of snow fall overnight in northeast England and sent temperatures plummeting across the UK could well into next week.

The unusual weather, the Met Office said, has been caused by high pressure over Greenland and low pressure in the Baltics, forcing cold winds from the northeast across Europe.

"This snow we’re seeing and expecting to see is the heaviest widespread snow since 1993," said Met Office forecaster John Hammond. "Winds are continuing to blow in from a northeasterly direction over the course of the rest of this week and into next week. Even where we haven’t had any snow, temperatures are going down to -5C or -6C in several places."

UAE faces a challenging 2011, despite eco recovery

DUBAI, 28 Nov — United Arab Emirates (UAE) Economy Minister Sultan Bin Saeed Al-Mansouri said economic recovery is still very challenging, despite citing numbers suggesting the emirates’ economy has picked up at a Press conference on Saturday.

The UAE has been growing between three to 3.5 percent in 2010 after the 1.3 percent in 2009, the UAE minister said, noting "in 2008, we established a government committee to tackle the impact of the global financial crisis. Our measure to pump $33 billion US dollars into the domestic banking was a key measure to stabilize the national economy."

During the third quarter of 2010, combined UAE bank profits jumped 46 percent year-on-year.

 Speaking at the opening Press conference of the World Economic Forum (WEF) Summit on the Global Agenda, scheduled to be held from November 29 to December 1 in Dubai, Mansouri said he didn’t want to give a forecast for 2011 yet.

However, Mansouri said while economic relations with China improved in the past years, with trade volume reaching 30 billion dollars in 2010, up from the 22 billion dollars in 2009, the UAE faces new challenges with other trade partners, such as Iran and Canada.

National Day, which well deserves admiration of the people

Padaung Than Kywe

Every race around the world designates their days of national significance. In Myanmar, National Day is one of the days of significance according to national cause.

British colonialists annexed Myanmar by launching three aggressive wars. Myanmar had to surrender Rakhine and Taninthayi regions through Yantabo Treaty after the First Anglo-Myanmar War in 1824. The Second Anglo-Myanmar War took place in 1852, and the colonialists occupied lower Myanmar stretching from Pyay Township and Bago thereafter. They managed to occupy the whole Myanmar after the Third Anglo-Myanmar War in 1885.

In the colonial days, Myanmar people launched varieties of ways to regain independence such as armed revolt, convening conferences repeatedly, and sending Myanmar representatives to British to hold talks with British representatives, but not still effective enough yet. The most effective movement was the uprising that was launched on the 10th Waning of Tazaungmone 1282 Myanmar Era.

Up to 1920, the colonial education system was just designed to stuff the youth of Myanmar with a sense of thinking highly of British. Then, there were no universities, but Yangon College and Judson College in Yangon, which were only branches of Calcutta University. They had to follow the syllabuses of Calcutta University and their examinations were organized by Calcutta University. Examination papers were issued in Calcutta, but students of the two educational institutions had to sit for examinations in Yangon. The majority of young people could not afford that education system at all. That was meant only for children of the rich, land owners and officials. The colonial education system served the interest of colonialists and their cohorts.

YMBA (Young Men Buddhists Association) repeatedly claimed and suggested that Myanmar have a separate university. In June, 1918, the then Myanmar government formed an about 30-member committee led by education governor Mr Matthew Hunter to draw a university act. The majority of the committee members formulated a university act to establish a science university constituted with only one college in which not pragmatic, but much academic subjects were prescribed. And the bill was submitted in September 1920.

The bill stipulates so many points unacceptable to Myanmar people including (1) in Myanmar, there would be only one university, (2) those wishing to join the college shall be boarding students, (3) there would no longer be matriculation examination, and a student had to have passed tenth standard examination, also known as high school final, held by the government, (4) a student would be allowed to register to join the university only if he was outstanding in English and another subject, (5) if a candidate failed an honours class and arts class, he would never be allowed to sit for the examination, and he shall be expelled from the university, (6) even if a student passed university entrance examination, he was not allowed to start to pursue university education, and he shall attend preliminary university class for one year, and (7) a student would not be allowed to pursue university education even if he had attended the preliminary class for one year, but was deemed ineligible for university education. So, college students, newspapers and conferences held by GCBA in the country were categorically opposed to the bill.

However much they objected the unjust education system, Myanmar governor Sir Reginald Craddock remarked that Myanmar people did not have enough experience of education and announced that the University Act was enacted with effect from 1 December the same year. The following day, leaders of college students held knee-to-knee talks and decided that both colleges would make demands in protest at Yangon University Act. At the students’ conference held on 4 December, a resolution was passed to oppose the act. Following the British government’s announcement that the university would be opened on 7 December, students announced on the 10th Waning of Tazaungmone 1282 ME (5 December 1920) that they would no longer attend the classes in protest at the act.

In support of the announcement issued by college students, high school students in Yangon walked out of their schools and signed up in the camp in Bahan. Then, the students’ uprising spread to other regions across the nation. Entire residents of respective regions stood firmly by and supported student protesters.

Ignoring the students’ demands, authorities of Yangon College announced they would expel any students who failed to rejoin the schools till 23 December. Senior student protesters submitted a written report to the authorities to expel them for good.

On 29 December, GCBA held a conference and called for opening of national schools, colleges and universities in Myanmar and changing the schools under YMBA and congenial organizations into national schools, and urged students not to rejoin government schools.

Soon, there emerged many national schools one after another in many regions throughout the country thanks to the goodwill and assistance of nationalistic organizations in respective townships. Many eminent persons including Thakin Kodaw Hmaung, Venerable Monk U Nana, and Deedok U Ba Cho served as voluntary professors and lecturers at the national college.

In August 1921, the national college was successfully launched in Shweegyin Monastery in Bahan. There also emerged the national education council, which then organized the people and encouraged emergence of more national schools throughout the nation.

The 1920 uprising initiated by senior college students in protest at the colonial education system made substantial contribution towards anti-colonialist movements. GCBA’s support for the anti-government movements inculcated the people with a strong sense of nationalistic spirit to a certain degree. Such anti-colonialist movements not only led to emergence of national schools but also stimulated views of modern national education. In addition, the movements revived the political awareness, national unity and nationalistic fervour of entire Myanmar people, thus achieving victory in uplifting the morale of the people.

At the 9th conference of GCBA held in Mandalay on 24 October 1921, the attendees held talks to designate a day as national day. The conference reached an agreement to designate as National Day the 10th Waning of Tazaungmone, on which students launched their movements. Special conference of GCBA held in Jubilee Hall in Yangon in June 1922 adopted the resolution. Since then, National Day has been celebrated on a grand scale as a day of great victory of Myanmar every year.

This year, National Day is in its 90th anniversary. Designation of National Day led to further flourishing of Union Spirit among the people, enhanced the national glory, and helped the nation regain independence. So, entire people are duty-bond to relay the fruitful results of National Day from one generation to the next.

In order to accomplish this national duty, the State’s seven-step Road Map is to be completed successfully. As the fifth step, multiparty democracy general elections were held on 7 November. Measures are ongoing to complete the two remaining steps on schedule. It is, therefore, fair to say that Myanmar has a prosperous future ahead of it.

Kenya to mark 26th anniversary of finding first case of HIV/AIDS

NAIROBI, 28 Nov—Kenya will mark the 26th anniversary of finding the first case of HIV/AIDS in the East African country as the world is bracing for the world AIDS day on 1 Dec.

Kenya is one of the countries in sub-Saharan Africa where the prevalence rate has been going up despite concerted efforts to lower the virus transmission.

Of much concern is the rate at which the transmission is spreading among the married who form the bigger percentage of those infected.

But the country seeks to join the whole world in marking the day by remembering those who have succumbed to the virus and encouraging those living with it, as seems the fight is far from over.

With mixed reactions surrounding the invention of Aids cure and access to antiretroviral drugs (ARVs), most Kenyans think the government has not done enough to control the virus spread and on the other hand enhancing easy access to ARVs for thousands in need.

One scientist’s hobby: recreating the ice age

CHEKKY, 28 Nov—Wild horses have returned to northern Siberia. So have musk oxen, hairy beasts that once shared this icy land with woolly mammoths and saber-toothed cats. Moose and reindeer are here, and may one day be joined by Canadian bison and deer.

Later, the predators will come—Siberian tigers, wolves and maybe leopards.

Russian scientist Sergey Zimov is reintroducing these animals to the land where they once roamed in millions to demonstrate his theory that filling the vast emptiness of Siberia with grass-eating animals can slow global warming.

“Some people have a small garden. I have an ice age park. It’s my hobby,” says Zimov, smiling through his graying beard. His true profession is quantum physics.

Climate change is felt most sharply in the Arctic, where temperatures are warming faster than anywhere else on the planet. Most climate scientists say human activity, especially industrial activity, especially industrial pollution and the byproducts of everyday living like home heating and driving cars, is triggering an unnatural warming of the Earth. On Monday, negotiators representing 194 countries opened a two-week conference in Cancun, Mexico, on reducing greenhouse gases to slow the pace of climate change. Zimov is trying to recreate an ecosystem that disappeared 10,000 years ago with the end of the ice age, which closed the 1.8 million-year Pleistocene era and ushered in the global climate roughly as we know it.

BA, Iberia face last hurdle over landmark merger

LONDON, 28 Nov — Shareholders in British Airways and Iberia vote Monday on whether to approve a multi-billion-euro merger creating Europe’s second biggest airline as the sector recovers after a severe economic downturn.

Investors in London and Madrid are widely expected to back the tie-up, that will value the pair at a combined 6.6 billion euros, less than the share prices of BA and Iberia have spiked by about 40 and 70 percent respectively this year. The boards of the airlines agreed a deal in April, while EU competition regulators have also given the green light for a full alliance.

“The BA/Iberia merger allows the two carriers to ‘catch up’ to rival groupings such as Air France KLM and Lufthansa,” said independent aviation analyst John Strickland. “It provides a wider overall network, with Iberia bringing its Latin American presence to the table and BA its strength across the North Atlantic and to the Middle East and Asia,” he said.

A tie-up, on schedule to be completed in January, would create Europe’s second-biggest airline by market capitalisation after Germany’s Lufthansa, and fly 60 million passengers a year.

BA and Iberia sought to merge as the global economic downturn and the rise of low-cost airlines resulted in steep losses for traditional carriers.

However since the tie-up announcement, the pair have overcome travel chaos due to strikes and the volcanic ash cloud to post healthy returns to profit, indicating that the sector is on a path to recovery after the deep recession.

Tragedy exposes dangers of cosmetic surgery

BEIJING, 28 Nov — The death of an aspiring Chinese pop singer during plastic surgery has cast an ugly light on an obsession with beauty that sees millions go under the knife in China each year.

Wang Bei, 24, a former contestant on Super Girl, China’s version of American Idol, died on 15 Nov during “facial bone-grinding surgery” in Wuhan, capital city of Central China’s Hubei province, media reports have said.

That Wang even felt she needed to improve her looks has underlined the extent to which cosmetic surgery has taken hold. Her beauty had already made her a popular contestant on the smash television hit Super Girl.

Her death has fuelled concerns about the dangers of plastic surgery in a country where three million people have operations each year to improve their appearances, according to figures published by State media.

An “anaesthetic accident” occurred during Wang’s procedure at the Zhong’ao Cosmetic Surgery Hospital, Xinhua News Agency reported, citing the local health bureau.

Wang’s jaw suddenly started bleeding during the procedure, blocking her windpipe and causing her to suffocate, reports said.

Wang’s mother was having the same procedure at the clinic when her daughter died.

Eyeless cave fish found in lost world

Jakarta, 28 Nov — Eyeless cave fish and a frog that carries its offspring on its back are among the new species a team of scientists have discovered in Indonesia’s eastern Papua region.

The researchers from the Institute of Research and Development (IRD) in Montpellier, southern France, studied caves, underground rivers and jungles in the remote Lengguru area of New Guinea island.

“In terms of discoveries almost everything remains to be done in this area, which is very difficult to access but which has exceptionally rich biodiversity,” IRD scientist Laurent Pouyaud told AFP.

For seven weeks, the team including biologists, paleontologists and archaeologists explored the vast limestone “labyrinth” where species have evolved in isolation for millions of years.

In one previously undocumented cave they found a new species of fish which had developed without eyes or pigmentation.

US man jailed for killing wife in toilet

Wisconsin, 28 Nov — A man has been sentenced to 25 years in prison for drowning his wife in a toilet in 1999. Doug Plude was accused of poisoning 28-year-old Gemell Plude with migraine medicine, drowning her in the toilet at their northern Wisconsin home and trying to make it look like a suicide. The 43-year-old pleaded guilty to first-degree reckless homicide as part of a plea deal.

Plude initially was convicted of first-degree intentional homicide in 2002, and served five years. That conviction was overturned because an expert witness had exaggerated his credentials. Plude received credit for time served, so he’ll serve a little more than 19 years.

In court Wednesday, Plude reasserted that his wife killed herself with prescription drugs and that he was sorry it happened.

Alaska polar bears given ‘critical habitat’

WASHINGTON, 28 Nov — The US has designated a “critical habitat” for polar bears living on Alaska’s disappearing sea ice. The area — twice the size of the United Kingdom — has been set aside to help stave off the danger of extinction, the US Fish and Wildlife Service said.

The territory includes locations where oil and gas companies want to drill. Environmentalists hope the designation will make it more difficult for companies to get permits to operate in the region.

“This critical habitat designation enables us to work with federal partners to ensure their actions within its boundaries do not harm polar bear populations,” said Tom Strickland, assistant secretary for fish and wildlife and parks. Any proposed economic activity in the area, which covers 187,000 sq miles (almost 500,000 sq km) must now be weighed against its impact on the polar bear population. “Polar bear habitat statement from US Fish and Wildlife Service” Mr Strickland said in a statement.—Internet

Spanish woman claims ownership of the Sun

After billions of years the Sun finally has an owner — a woman from Spain’s soggy region of Galicia said Friday she had registered the star at a local notary public as being her property.

Angelaes Duran, 49, told the online edition of daily El Mundo she took the step in September after reading about an American man who had registered himself as the owner of the moon and most planets in our Solar System. There is an international agreement which states that no country may claim ownership of a planet or star, but it says nothing about individuals, she added.

LOS ANGELES, 28 Nov — It’s not exactly opening your home to guests at a holiday party, but for film and singing star Barbra Streisand and her fans, it’s pretty close. Newcastle United 1 vs 1 Chelsea

St James’ Park, 28 Nov—Chelsea’s Premier League title aspirations hit the skids again on Sunday afternoon as they were held to a 1-1 draw at Newcastle United.

Despite boasting possession for large spells at St James’ Park, Carlo Ancelotti’s struggling side failed to find the killer touch in the north east.

They now trail Manchester United by two points after picking up just one win and one draw from their previous five outings.

Newcastle made a dream start, but Andy Carroll’s early goal was handed on a plate by defender Alex and goalkeeper Peter Cech. An innocuous through ball was prodded back towards goal by the Brazil defender.

But with the shot-stopper racing off his line, he was left flat-footed as the ball rolled past him, allowing the recent England cap to round him and slot into the empty net.

Chelsea huffed and puffed their way back into the contest but the resolute central defensive partnership of Sol Campbell and the returning Steven Taylor held firm.

But on the stroke of half-time, Salomon Kalou’s deflected strike squeezed inside Tim Krul’s corner as the champions restored parity.

The Blues started the second period as they ended the first and it appeared as though the Londoners would grab a second.

However, when Kalou broke free in the area and, with Krul grounded, the Ivorian inexplicably hit the side-netting with an open goal at his mercy.

Substitute Nile Ranger almost fashioned a chance out of nothing at the end only to run into a number of Chelsea men and a winner could not be found in the end.
