Bounden duty

The entire people are duty-bound to safeguard the motherland through the might of national unity for ensuring non-disintegration of the Union, non-disintegration of national solidarity and perpetuation of sovereignty, while keeping a watchful eye on attempts of neocolonialists to harm the sovereignty of the country.

For perpetuation of independence, sovereignty

The Union of Myanmar is a land where national brethren have been living through thick and thin from time immemorial. Myanmar national races have preserved and promoted national culture and prestige and safeguarded sovereignty in the course of the history.

Taking a look back to the historical background of Myanmar, the First, Second and Third Empires stood tall in the global family. However, the colonialist resorted to all possible ways to undermine national solidarity.

In late 19th century, Myanmar fell under the colonial rule and lost its sovereignty and independence. It was patriotic national people who fought back the invaders with a strong sense of Union Spirit, and the spirit of making sacrifices in the national interests, thus enabling the motherland to regain independence and sovereignty.

To value and safeguard independence that cost heavily is the bounden duty on the shoulders of all national people, Myanmar achieved independence, but not an easy way: only after sacrificing a huge number of lives of its people. The nation has got painful memories of the yoke of the colonial rule.

So, it is compulsory for the entire people upholding Our Three Main National Causes to safeguard perpetually independence and sovereignty and to remain constantly vigilant against threats posed by neo-colonialists.

Mexican drug cartel faces new challenges

Mexico’s federal police said Friday that the once-feared La Familia drug cartel has been “completely dismembered” and has broken down into small groups that commit robberies to pay their members.

The cartel has dominated crime in the western state of Michoacan for several years, making money by trafficking methamphetamine and extorting protection money from businesses. It has also become known for its bloody ambushes of federal police.

La Familia has been thrown into disarray, however, by the recent arrest and deaths of top members, including cartel leader Nazario Moreno, nicknamed “The Craziest One,” who was killed in a shootout with police on 9 Dec.

“Following the death of Nazario, the Familia Michoacana, as we know it, has been completely dismembered,” federal police official Luis Cardenas Palomino told a news conference as he announced the arrest of another La Familia leader: Francisco Lopez Villanueva, known as “El Bigotes,” or “The Mustache.”

“What are left are little groups that are isolated and completely disorganized,” Cardenas Palomino said.

US drone strikes in Pakistan

KABUL, 1 Jan—US drones on Saturday fired missiles into Afghanistan’s North Waziristan tribal region and killed at least 11 people, local TV channels reported.

Pilotless aircraft carried out two strikes, targeting a house in the Binishala area of Kandahar city and killing at least eight people, Dawn TV reported. Four missiles were fired in the strike. It was not clear as to who were targeted but TV channels said that suspected Taliban militants were travelling in the vehicle. In the second strike three people were killed when missiles hit a house at Ghizar area near Mir Ali, a main town in North Waziristan.

New Year’s Eve tornadoes kill six in Ark, Mo

LITTLE ROCK, 1 Jan—Tornadoes fueled by unusually warm air pummelled the South and Midwest on Friday, killing at least six people and injuring dozens more across Arkansas, Missouri and Illinois. Forecasters said storms could hit along a stretch from near Chicago to New Orleans later in the evening as New Year’s Eve celebrations begin.

Three people died in the northwestern Arkansas hamlet of Kansasville when a tornado touched down just before sunrise, and three others died when a storm spawned by the same weather system ripped up the Missouri countryside near Rolla. A number of storms were also reported in the St. Louis area. Storms later Friday knocked out power to more than 19,000 Mississippi residents, while broad swaths of Louisiana and Mississippi were under severe weather watches and warnings that threatened New Year’s Eve revelry.

“It sucked me out of my house and carried me across the road and dropped me,” Chris Sisemore of Cincinnati told The Associated Press on Friday. “I was superman for a while. You’re just free-floating through the air. Trees are knocking you and smacking you down.”

KABUL, 1 Jan—Afghan and coalition troops killed the Taliban “shadow governor” of a northern Afghan province in an overnight raid, local officials said Friday, while NATO said militants attacks claimed the lives of two coalition service members.

Once relatively peaceful, security in northern Afghanistan has deteriorated as the Taliban, squeezed by NATO operations focusing on militant strongholds in the south, have expanded their reach to other parts of the country.

NATO said a joint force stormed a compound in the Chahar Dara District of Kunduz Province before dawn, killing an militant and detaining several suspects in an operation targeting a high-level Taliban leader believed to make roadside bombs and suicide ve

NATO soldier killed in Afghanistan on New Year’s Day

KABUL, 1 Jan—Taleban-linked activities claimed the life of a NATO soldier in Afghanistan on the New Year’s day Saturday, the military alliance confirmed in a statement released here.

“Ambush attack on a joint force of British and Afghan forces killed a British soldier and wounded two more in Helmand Province today,” the statement said.

This is the first casualty of NATO-led troops, reported by the military alliance on the first day of 2011. However, it did not identify the nationality of the victim, saying it is ISAF policy to defer casualty identification procedures to the relevant national authorities.

Troops mostly from the United States, Canada, Britain and Australia have been stationed in southern Afghanistan commonly known as the heartland of Taliban militants.
Budding research links climate change and earlier flowering plants

University of Cincinnati biologist Denis Conover has done extensive plant studies in Hamilton County Parks and the Oxbo area. Here he studies a specimen at Burnet Woods. INTERNET

New York, 1 Jan—According to research published 16 November by a University of Cincinnati faculty member, native plants in southwestern Ohio are flowering significantly earlier, a finding it attributes, at least in part, to global warming. UC biologist Denis Conover, field service associate professor, has spent countless hours walking the Shaker Trace Wetlands at Miami Whitewater Forest over the last 18 years to survey hundreds of different plant species.

Conover’s results, published in the December issue of Ecological Restoration, reveal that for species that were observed flowering during two distinct multi-year surveys, a significant number of wild plants (39 percent) bloomed earlier from 2005 to 2008 than when he recorded the same species blooming times from 1992 to 1996. Forty-five percent of the plants bloomed at the same time, and 16 percent bloomed earlier.—Internet

New cognitive robotics lab tests theories of human thought

New York, 1 Jan—In a new Cognitive Robotics Lab, students at Rensselaer are exploring how human thought outweighs brute force computing in the real world. The lab’s 20 programmable robots allow students to test the real-world performance of computer models that mimic human thought.

The real world has a lot of inconsistency that humans handle almost without noticing—for example, we walk on uneven terrain, we see shifting light,” said Professor Vladislav Daniel Veksler, who is currently teaching Cognitive Robotics. “With robots, we can see the problems humans face when navigating their environment.”

Cognitive Robotics marries the study of cognitive science—how the brain represents and transforms information—with the challenges of a physical environment. Advances in cognitive robotics transfer to artificial intelligence, which seeks to develop more efficient computer systems patterned on the versatility of human thought.—Internet

China’s 4G technology to go global

BEIJING, 1 Jan—China’s homegrown fourth-generation (4G) telecommunication technology is expected to go global and be widely adopted by 2015, with countries in Africa and Latin America the most likely to use the technology, according to industry experts.

The Time Division-Long Term Evolution (TD-LTE) technology is the next-generation telecommunication standard that China Mobile Communications Co is promoting.

Under ideal conditions, TD-LTE can easily reach download speeds of more than 150 megabytes per second, much faster than third-generation (3G) TD-SCDMA technology.

“Many international operators have contacted China Mobile and expressed a willingness to adopt TD-LTE networks,” Chen Jinquao, deputy chief engineer at the China Academy of Telecommunication Research (CATR), told China Daily.

He said the most likely partners in building TD-LTE networks may come from Africa and Latin America, as many countries on those continents have a good relationship with China both economically and politically. “They are more likely to accept

Scientist maps the meaning of Mid-Level clouds

NEW YORK, 1 Jan—Clouds play a major role in the climate-change equation, but they are the least-understood variable in the sky, observes a Texas A&M University geoscientist, who says mid-level clouds are especially understudied. The professor, Shaima Nasiri, is making those “in-between” clouds the focus of her research, which is being funded by NASA.

Mid-level clouds are so understudied, Nasiri says, that scientists have yet to develop a common nomenclature for them. “We do not have a unified definition, so the scientific community can’t look at the statistics with a shared level of understanding. Also, because mid-level clouds are formed either from water droplets or ice crystals or a combination of both, they can be more difficult to model. “Only in the past few years have we focused on the

Remote Conductor app makes iPad a Mac input device

WASHINGTON, 1 Jan—Mobile software developer m3me has released the $10 Remote Conductor app for iPad, which makes your iPad a new input device for your Mac. The app has three modes. In Trackpad mode, the entire iPad surface becomes a large trackpad, with support for multitouch actions. In Launch mode, a master list of all of your applications, organized by folder, is displayed onscreen to provide you with rapid access to these icons. (An added nice touch: your Dock is replicated on the iPad for even faster access.)

But in my opinion, the pièce de résistance is Switch mode, which displays all of your Mac’s windows in a horizontal tree inspired by Exposé. Scroll left and right to see application windows organized by application; scroll up and down if a single application has more windows than can be displayed onscreen. Switch covers windows you’ve minimized, as well as windows in any additional Spaces you’re running, so it’s easy to find windows you’ve temporarily misplaced. Tap on a window to bring it to the front on your Mac; tap on the application icon to do the same for all of the application’s windows.

NTT DoCoMo to launch tablet computer

TOKYO, 1 Jan—Japan’s top mobile operator, NTT DoCoMo, is looking to launch a tablet computer that will be produced by LG Electronics and run on software developed by Google, the Nikkei business daily reported on Saturday.

The device, which is scheduled to be released in Japan by the end of March, is expected to have a smaller than 9-inch screen, but other details have yet to be determined, the newspaper said without identifying the source of its information.

DoCoMo officials were not immediately able to comment on the report. The tablet PC would compete with a slew of models from the likes of Dell, Samsung Electronics and Sharp to challenge Apple’s iPad in the new gadget segment.—Reuters

Health Tip: Healthy habits can help Parkinson’s symptoms

Though there is no cure for Parkinson’s disease, making certain lifestyle changes can help you manage symptoms.

The University of Maryland Medical Centre offers these suggestions:
* Eat a healthy diet.
* Exercise regularly, but don’t try to do more than you have the energy for.
* Allow your body time to rest, and do your best to minimize stress.
* Consider physical therapy, speech therapy, and occupational therapy.
* Think about special accommodations, such as utensils to make eating easier or the addition of handrails at home.
* Consult with a social worker or counsellor to find out if they may be of help.—Internet

In US, obesity afflicts even some of the tiniest tots

Los Angeles, 1 Jan—American kids are becoming obese, or nearly so, at an increasingly young age, with about one-third of them falling into that category by the time they’re 9 months old, researchers have found.

There are some caveats about the research, however. The infants were not studied recently. They were born about a decade ago. And it’s not clear how excess weight in babies may affect their health later in their lives. The study found no guarantee that a baby who’s overweight at 9 months will stay flabby when his or her second birthday rolls around. Still, the study in the January-February 2011 issue of the American Journal of Health Promotion does present a picture of babies and infants who are carrying around a lot of extra weight.

The findings also suggest that small changes in an infant’s diet can make a big difference, said Dr Wendy Slusser, medical director of a children’s weight programme at Mattel Children’s Hospital at the University of California, Los Angeles. For example, she said, “if you don’t give your kid juice and have them eat the fruit instead, suddenly there’s 150 calories less a day that can make a big difference in weight gain over a long term.

The researchers examined federal data about 16,400 children in the United States who were born in 2001. After adjusting the statistics so they wouldn’t be thrown off by such factors as high numbers of certain kinds of kids, the study authors found that 17 percent of 9-month-olds were obese and 15 percent were at risk for obesity, for a total of 32 percent.

Eating lots of red meat ups women’s stroke risk

New York, 1 Jan—Women who eat a lot of red meat may be putting themselves at increased risk of stroke, a new study in more than 30,000 Swedish women hints.

The study team found that those in the top tenth for red meat consumption, who ate at least 102 grams or 3.6 ounces daily, were 42 percent more likely to suffer a stroke due to blocked blood flow in the brain compared to women who ate less than 25 grams (just under an ounce) of red meat daily.

Diets heavy in red meat have been linked to a number of ill effects, including an increased risk of certain cancers, heart disease, and high blood pressure. Yet, just three studies have looked at red meat and stroke risk. One study found a link, but the others did not.—Internet

Brig-Gen Ye Aung, ministers, the chairman of Magway Region PDC, deputy ministers, departmental heads, Indian Ambassador Dr. Vithur Sundararajan Seshadri, responsible persons of Tata Motors Ltd of India and China New Era International Inc of China, officials of the Ministry of Industry-2, departmental officials, members of social organizations and local people.

Commander Brig-Gen Ye Aung, Minister for Industry-2 U Soe Thein, Minister for Electric Power No. 1 U Zaw Min, Minister for Communications, Posts and Telegraphs U Thein Zaw and Chairman of Magway Region PDC U Phone Maw Shwe formally opened the Heavy Turbo Truck Assembly Shop and the Gear & Transmission Plant of No. 3 Automobile Factory (Magway).

The Prime Minister, the commander, ministers and guests posed for documentary photo together with officials of the factory.

The Prime Minister sprinkled scented water on the plaque and so did the commander, ministers and the Indian Ambassador.

The Prime Minister and party viewed 13 steps of chassis assembly at Heavy Turbo Truck Assembly Shop of No. 3 Automobile Factory (Magway) and machine parts to be installed at Heavy Turbo Truck LPT (2116). Minister U Soe Then conducted the Prime Minister round the factory.

After visiting the factory by car, the Prime Minister cordially greeted the staff, social organization members and local people.

The Prime Minister viewed 4 seater mini-saloon, Myanmar double cab, Myanmar single cab, TE-21 (6.4 ton) truck, TE-31 (25 ton) truck, TE-31 (3600 Gals) oil tanker, city bus, static road roller (25 ton), and vibratory soil compactor. Minister U Soe Then conducted the Prime Minister round the factory.

At the hall of the factory, Minister U Soe Then reported on formation of Magway Industrial Region, facts about the project, organizational set-up of the factory, types of vehicles to be manufactured and benefits for construction of the factory.

After hearing the reports, the Prime Minister said that the State has systematically established industrial regions and industrial zones at the suitable areas for emergence of factories and industries with a view to ensuring establishment of an industrialized nation.

He said that wider scale use of the vehicles manufactured by already-opened automobile factories will contribute much to transport and flow of commodities. Therefore, he added that emphasis is to be placed on improvement of producing vehicles in quality and quantity and manufacturing the products meeting set standards with the use of domestic industrial products plus the assistance of national technicians.

He noted that as the State has spent a large sum of foreign exchange and kyats in addition to time, location and labour on establishment of industries, it is necessary to manufacture the products at full capacity to be lucrative.

He stressed the need to focus on availability of skilled workers and carry out maintenance of machines for operating the machines at full capacity. He pointed out that it is necessary to uplift skills of workers provided with trainings and on-job training courses and give priority to maintenance of machines in line with the mechanical regulations.

Moreover, he said that it is necessary to take preventive measures against natural disasters such as outbreaks of fire and storm and exactly issue security plans.

The Prime Minister presented a fruit basket to technicians of Tata Motors Ltd of India and China New Era International Inc of China. Afterwards, the Prime Minister and party viewed the production of machine parts of gear and transmissions at the Gear & Transmission Plant of the factory.

Newly-opened No. 3 Automobile Factory (Magway) is located on 125 acres of land, about six miles from Magway and about three miles southwest of Magway-Taungdwingyi Road. Heavy Turbo Truck Assembly Shop has 250 metres in length and 135 metres in width, and Gear & Transmission Plant is 120 metres long and 36 metres wide.

No. 3 Automobile Factory (Magway) will manufacture LPT 2116-6x2 Cargo with 160HP engine, Field Artillery Truck, 9128 6x4 Tractor with 280 HP engine, 3128T-8x2 Cargo with 280 HP engine and 1613T-4x2 Cargo with 160HP engine.

Heavy Turbo Truck Assembly Shop was built with the assistance of Tata Motors Ltd of India and it will produce five thousands 20-40 ton Heavy Turbo Truck (6x2&8 6x4) LHD vehicles per year.

The Gear & Transmission Plant built with the assistance of China New Era International Inc of China will manufacture gear & transmission 750 unit.

Automobile manufacturers from local industrial zones can get production technology from No. 3 Automobile Factory (Magway) which is the first-ever heavy turbo truck manufacturing factory in Myanmar.

led by General Aung San was formed, a constituent hluttaw was held in April, 1947. At that time, independence struggles were in full swing. The people, who believed that the Anti-Fascist People’s Freedom League (AFPFL) led by General Aung San was capable enough of helping the nation regain independence, all voted for AFPFL candidates. AFPFL won all seats, except seven seats won by Communist candidates. There were not any forms of rigging nor violence in the elections.

Independence was regained after the demise of the general. In the post-independence period, AFPFL split into many factions. In 1950, Red Social members broke away from the Socialist Party, the hard-core party of AFPFL. And Communists and Ba-Ka-Tha members turned back on the AFPFL. Pyithu Yebaw Party collapsed into two groups: White Yebaw and Yellow Yebaw. In 1958, AFPFL (remaining Socialist Party members) split into Swe-Nyein or Stable AFPFL and Nu-Tin or Clean AFPFL.

In the post-independence period, the armed insurrection was ablaze the whole nation. The AFPFL government was not capable of coping with the issue, due to its members’ rivalry for power. So, there was a sharp decrease in the public support for AFPFL. However, power-craving AFPFL leaders were claiming that the party would continue to win public support for 40 years. They kept pocket forces (Pyasawthit force, defence force, militia force, servicemen force and special police force) and came to arrest, torture and kill opposition members. They breached all possible forms of rigging in the elections. The elections held in 1952, 1956 and 1960 were rigged with a wide variety of cases such as a nine-man murder in Minhla, a massacre in Sitaung-ang Village, Myeik, murders in some townships, and a six-man murder in Ngazun. Such cases were featured in announcements issued and publications published by Opposition Pa-Ma-Nya-Ta (Red Social); tribunal records, the book “To Fair Multiparty Democracy General Elections” by Chairman of the Election Commission Saya Che, and the book “A Fist to Mt. Myinmoo” by Yebaw Hla Myo.

Armed insurgents made armed threats that residents of the villages in the black regions and brown regions which were under the influence of insurgents) would have to vote for the candidates of Opposition (left-wing Communists and Red Social) Pa-Ma-Nya-Ta in the elections. Similar cases took place in the elections in May 1990.

The people were disappointed with AFPFL, from which many groups had been broken away and whose members were vying with one another for power. So, Opposition won 48 seats. It was the ruling AFPFL that violated all possible breaches with its motto “Whatever results come out, we must win in the elections”. So, AFPFL could extend its rule, winning the 1952 elections and the 1956 elections. The people considered that what Opposition Pa-Ma-Nya-Ta members would pay was just lip-service. So, they cast votes for the ruling party. That was why Opposition branded the AFPFL government the one-party dictator government. The elections in February 1960 were merely a two-horse race: Stable AFPFL and Clean AFPFL. Opposition Pa-Ma-Nya-Ta dreamt that it would win a landslide victory in the forthcoming elections because the people were weary of AFPFL. Before 1960 elections, there were 119 MPs of Swe-Nyein (Stable AFPFL) led by U Ba Swe and U Kyaw Nyein, 83 MPs of Nu-Tin (Clean AFPFL) led by U Nu and Thakin Tin and 44 MPs of Opposition Pa-Ma-Nya-Ta.

BCP (Burma Communist Party) insurgents squeezed villages to vote for Pa-Ma-Nya-Ta in the 1960 elections. Stable AFPFL used pocket forces especially special police force formed with Pyasawthit militias to make threats to Opposition members. About 10 battalion commanders in favour of Stable AFPFL rigged the elections. U Nu’s Clean AFPFL canvassed for votes with the incentive that they would prescribe Buddhism as the official religion if they won in the elections. Stable AFPFL-back newspapers such as Ahtaikaw, Pyi Kyaw, Mandaing and Deedok, and Clean AFPFL-back newspapers such as Bama Kht, Pyidaungsu and Ohwai stated news with political bias, thus violating the press ethic. On 19 December 1959, the caretaker government of General Ne Win dissolved the parliament, and held pyithu hluttaw elections on 6 February, and chamber of nationalities elections on 29 February 1960.

At the conference of battalion commanders held in Meiktila on 9 November 1959, the then Commander-in-Chief General Ne Win delivered a speech, saying that the Tatmadaw would have to be neutral in the elections; that he issued an order on 11 the previous month to make sure that the upcoming elections would be fair; and that the country would go hungry if the Tatmadaw did not follow military codes of conduct. In that way, he reminded military commanders not to meddle in the elections in order that the elections would be fair. Again at Yangon conference of the security (See page 9) council on 21 December, he ordered that all servicemen and civil servants concerned would be neutral.

The great majority of the people were Buddhists, so they voted for U Nu’s Clean AFPFL in the elections held in February 1960. The party won 159 seats; Stable AFPFL, 42 seats; and Pa-Ma-Nya-Ta, nil despite the participation of its 135 candidates. Leader of Stable AFPFL (Pa-Hta-Sa) U Nu became Prime Minister. A complaint was lodged with sound evidences against some Socialist Party member military commanders who rigged the elections in favour of Stable AFPFL. General Ne Win took action against and fired about 10 commanders led by Maj.-Gen Maung Maung and Brig-Gen Aung Shwe. In the period of elections, six Clean AFPFL candidates were assassinated in Ngaung which was later known as the Ngaung six-man murder.

In the time of the Myanmar Socialist Programme Party from 1974 to 1988, the nation saw elections four times. In those elections, in a constituency, a voter has to put his vote into the white ballot box if he favoured or into the black ballot box if he did not favour the only candidate nominated by the one-party government. At that time, Socialism was popular among the people. In some constituencies, some objection voters were found in black ballot boxes. There were no rigging cases nor violence in the elections.

On 27 May 1990, the Tatmadaw government held multiparty democracy general elections. It did not invite in the elections at all. It practised the ballot paper system in place of the ballot card system in order that the elections could not be rig. Voters cast votes in polling booths freely and put them into the ballot boxes. When the voting hours were over, the cast votes were counted before candidates in the polling stations. Election results were recorded in front of many witnesses and were submitted to respective commissions at higher levels. By contrast, in the time of the AFPFL government, ballot boxes were stored for many days in the offices of district commissioners concerned, and only then, were the votes counted. However, in the run-up to the 1990 elections, BBC, VOA and All India Radio aired fabricated broadcasts in order that the party they opposed would not win victory. Armed insurgents also made armed threats. And diplomats also tried to meddle in the elections.

Election breaches were stated in publications. Losers and opposition members complained breaches of elections. After the elections, objection notes were heard in line with the law, which were featured in tribunal records.

In the referendum held in May 2008 for the State Constitution (2008), a transparent suffrage was exercised, which won recognition of the diplomats who visited polling stations. As soon as a polling station was opened, voters were invited to check the ballot boxes in the station. Then, the empty ballot boxes were set in clearly visible sites. A voter had to show his Citizenship Scrutiny Card to draw a ballot paper, enter a polling booth and put a tick, fold the paper in half and put it into a ballot box in front of many others. When polling hours were over, latecomers were invited and votes were counted before them. Then, results were recorded and the lists were put into bags and returning officers put their signatures on the bags, and they were submitted to higher commissions.

The multiparty democracy general elections were held freely and fairly on 7 November 2010. Diplomats, representatives from UN agencies, and local and foreign journalists observed and applauded the voting processes. Many countries including the ASEAN chairman and the Chinese government praised the process.

Many persons from neo-colonialist countries and local pessimists who claimed that the ruling government was not a legitimate government as it was not a democratically-elected one persuaded the people to oppose as well as dissuaded the people from casting votes in the elections, instead of welcoming the elections in which the people could cast their vote for the candidates they favoured. The elections were organized in line with the Election Law and Rules based on the 2008 State Constitution.

In every polling station, voters could cast votes freely and put them into the ballot boxes in visible sites. When polling stations were opened, ballot boxes were examined in front of voters. When polling stations were closed, ballot boxes were opened and votes were counted in front of the representatives of the candidates. Diplomats and journalists were given opportunity to observe the voting processes.

The 2008 State Constitution was formulated by the National Convention, based on the principles laid down by the representatives of the 10 legal parties, representatives of seat-winning political parties, workers, peasants, civil servants, intellectuals and intelligentsia, and representatives of national races from the four corners of the nation. Altogether 98.12 percent of eligible voters cast their votes and the constitution was approved with the support of 92.98 percent of the voters.

The 2010 elections were held in 325 of the 330 Pyithu Hluttaw constituencies, accounting for 98.48 percent, in all the 168 Amyotha Hluttaw (including nationalities) hluttaw constituencies, 661 of the 673 Region or State (a) All the national people to constantly join hands for ensuring the perpetuity of independence and sovereignty of the Union; and democrats may be the decisive factor in the election. A vote in advance is the right bestowed in line with the law for the people who are abroad or in the nation on duty, who are away from the constituency concerned, who are in hospitals, bed-ridden people, the disabled and older persons. The election results of the Union Election Commission show that there are many votes for representatives of other parties and for independent candidates.

The results of the 2010 elections are the fruits of democracy or the democratic right of the people to transform the nation from the rule of the Tatmadaw that is taking State duties unavoidably to the democratic government system. The previous elections were free from rigging and violence. So, the State Constituency will come into force soon. The Union will perpetuate with sovereignty and independence. Therefore, that is a good sign of perpetuation of independence.

Progress of infrastructures across the nation in the time of the State Peace and Development Council

Agriculture and electric power sector

Today's endeavours become sound foundations for progress and prosperity in the future

During the period of its assumption in taking State’s responsibilities, the government is building sound foundations for emergence of a democratic new nation by developing all parts of the Union in equal term with momentum. Due to its belief that it is necessary to provide full infrastructures for all-round development of a nation without fail, the government is striving for construction of sector-wise infrastructures in the initial status of the State’s future.

As utmost efforts were made for enhancement of agricultural sector so as to promote socio-economy of rural people, accounting for about 70 per cent population of the nation, the numbers of dams, sluice gates, irrigated acres and sown acreage raised in leaps and bounds. It is true that cultivation and production of crops were on the increase for many times compared with all-round development of infrastructures in agriculture sector. At present, remarkable achievements have been secured that Myanmar is standing on the list of high paddy production countries and becomes a leading country in South-east Asian region in terms of producing beans and pulses.

In shaping the nation as a modern industrialized nation with high technology, it is necessary to strive for development of electricity sector. As such, plans are under way to generate electricity by utilizing all natural resources as much as possible including hydropower plant projects. Generating electricity hit 529.1 megawatts before 1988 compared with 3045.4 megawatts as nearly six times at present. As 41,206.5 more megawatts will be generated from over 60 ongoing power plants and 25 more megawatts from one more power plant to be built, all the projects on their completion will generate 442,276.9 more megawatts. Due to improvement of lifestyle and condition of socio-economy, demand of electricity is increasing day by day. Upon completion, the completed projects will satisfy the electricity demands cent per cent in addition to surplus production.

Today’s developments that did not emerge automatically are the fruitful results of endeavours made for many years through collaborative efforts of the State, the people and the Tatmadaw. That is why today’s endeavours become sound foundations for progress and prosperity in the future.

Literati to discharge bounden duty through …

The literati and those of today’s literary field are to constantly strive for disseminating the literary knowledge to the people for practicing correct moral ideology, cultivating the Union Spirit, preserving honourable national characters and raising the strengths of knowledge and technology to be able to build a new country nation while preserving fine national legacies of the nation.

The literature that specializes the national affairs can disseminate correct ideology and knowledge to the people and inspire the property of knowledge so as to preserve fine characters and traditions of Myanmar through nationalistic spirit and patriotic spirit. Therefore, the literati are to create the knowledgeable and aesthetic works in line with the secular and religious ethics and codes of conduct.

Today, over 10,000 types of books, journals and magazines are published in Myanmar every year. Of them, the books in line with the rules and regulations of National Literary Award were scrutinized in 14 genres. A total of 2288 books were scrutinized for 2009 National Literary Awards and the books for ten genres were chosen.

Since 2001, the Life-time Achievement for National Literary Award has been presented to the winners as recognized by the State for their outstanding performance in serving the interest of the Myanmar literary world. This year, the ninth award of its kind will be given to the winner.

With a view to flourishing the literary works that serve the interests of the State and the people, the Sarpay Beikman Manuscript Award Contest has been organized yearly, and the manuscripts in 12 genres have been scrutinized and awarded annually. This year, a total of 30 prize winning works among 174 entries will be awarded. As the best works of prize winners in Sarpay Beikman Manuscript Award Contest have been published, the good reading emerged from the prize winning works. In addition, the contest can encourage the new generation literati.

In the 21st Century, it is known to all that the big countries enjoying economic and modern technological privileges are interfering in internal affairs of developing countries through media with the reasons of democratization and human rights for seeking their interests and put these countries under their management practicing neo-colonialism. At the same time, the developing countries are encountering influential activities of big countries that dull nationalistic ideology, own culture, fine traditions and own national characters of respective countries.

Upholding Our Three Main National Causes to be conformity with Myanmar society as the correct national policy forever for ensuring the nation peaceful and developed, the government has adopted and is implementing the political, economic and social objectives as national objectives to be able to serve the national interest. Therefore, the persons in the literary field are to work in concert with the government.

The literati are to discharge bounden duty through literary strength to enable the entire people to correctly know internal and international progress in serving the national interest and to develop and strengthen the national culture. Protecting against alien culture through literary and own cultural strengths, the literati are to participate in building a Union in line with the political, economic and social objectives of the State.

Therefore, the literati are to apply their literary strength in broadening the horizons of the people and providing them with nationalistic outlook to be able to analyze the instigation of foreign media.

Myanmar’s literacy rate is upward as the government is implementing the Myanmar education vision with the aim of building the sustainable learning society which can overcome the challenge of the current education age in accordance with the motto “Build the modern and developed country through education”. The majority of the population is living in rural areas, and the country will enjoy the development of its human resource in parallel with the improvement of reading habit of rural people. Therefore, in accordance with the guidance of the Head of State, self-reliance libraries have been established in almost every village across the country.

Today, the government has been making efforts for development of all sectors including the information and communication technology sector for development of the human resource. Meanwhile, in the education sector, students are trained to become intellectuals of modern technology, the literati are to participate in the drive for development of the knowledge society.

In conclusion, the Secretary-1 urged the literati to join hands with the people for achievement of the seven-step road map and for implementing the steps for building a modern state with the works of literature; to do their literacy duties best while conserving the fine traditions of their literacy world and to work hard, joining hands with other literacy forces with Union Spirit, to reach their good works which can propagate belief for national interests among the people.

Afterwards, Secretary-1 Thiha Thura U Tin Aung Myint Oo presented Life-time Achievement for National Literary Award for 2009 to Dr Khin Maung Nyunt and the literary awards for 2009 to Linka Yi Kyaw, Maung Cheint, Maung Ni Win and Maung Khin Min (Danubyu).

Minister for Information U Kyaw Hsan presented literary awards for 2009 to Ma Kyan, Pho Swe (Timber Enterprise) and U Saw Aung Hla Tun and Sarpay Beikman Literary Awards to Thu Thein, Ko Yaw (Economics) and Thein Zaw (ShweliOo).

Minister for Foreign Affairs U Nyan Win presented Sarpay Beikman Literary Awards to Maung Yin Hlaing (Pyinmamyaing), Dr Cho Cho Tint (Myanmarair), Shwe Hintha (University of Mandalay), Thaung Nyunt Thit, Aung Soe (Agriculture/107) and Pho Swe (Timber Enterprise).

Landlord arrested on suspicion of murder

BRISTOL, 1 Jan — Joanna Yeates’s landlord Christopher Jefferies has been arrested on suspicion of murdering the landscape architect. Detectives arrested the 65 year-old at his home at 7am in Bristol, England. The arrest comes after Mr Jefferies, who taught English at nearby public school Clifton College, appeared to make contradictory comments on Wednesday about whether he had seen Miss Yeates leaving her flat with two people on the night she disappeared.

This morning they were seen removing his car — a silver Chrysler Neon — for forensic examination. Forensic officers in white overalls were seen across the face of goal. Maxi Rodriguez had bundled Gerrard’s delivery through the club captain. Dominant display and all Liverpool’s play came to rescue Liverpool with an injury-time winner in a dramatic Anfield affair.

Auschwitz sign theft:
Swedish man jailed

WARSAW, 1 Jan — A Polish judge has jailed a Swedish man for two years and eight months for plotting the theft of the “Arbeit macht frei” Auschwitz entrance sign. Anders Hogstroem, a former neo-Nazi leader, admitted theft under a plea bargain last month and will be moved to Sweden to serve his sentence. The infamous sign was stolen in December last year and recovered in three pieces three days later. The judge in Krakow also jailed two Poles for up to two-and-a-half years.

One of the pair, named as Andrzej S, apologized in court for the offence. Polish media report that the original sign has been repaired although it now hangs in the Auschwitz museum. The sign has since been repaired and is now displayed in the Auschwitz museum.

Match previews - Sun 2nd Jan

LONDON, 1 Jan — A look ahead to Sunday’s fixtures in the Barclays Premier League.

Chelsea (4+) v Aston Villa (15+)

Aston Villa will be keen to avenge their thumping 7-1 defeat in last season’s corresponding fixture when Chelsea won 7-1. The Blues also won the FA Cup semi-final meeting against Aston Villa and concludes with Newcastle United’s visit to Wigan Athletic.

Six (16+) wrought-iron slogans which translates as “Work sets you free” is a potent symbol of many of the Nazi-era atrocities. During the Nazi Holocaust, 1.1 million people - most of them Jews — were murdered at Auschwitz. The sign has since been repaired and is now displayed in the Auschwitz museum.

Henin beats Molik at Hopman Cup

CANNBERA, 1 Jan—Justine Henin came back from injury to beat Alicia Molik 6-4, 6-4 on Saturday, giving Belgium an early 1-0 lead over Australia at the Hopman Cup mixed team’s tennis tournament. Former world No 1 Henin was playing her first match Saturday since suffering an elbow injury at Wimbledon in June. Henin, a seven-time Grand Slam winner, broke Molik’s serve in the opening game of the first set and, after dropping serve, regained the break to serve out the set at 6-4. She broke again in the first game of the second set, setting up her straight sets win. Australia’s Lleyton Hewitt will play Belgium’s Ruben Bemelmanns later Saturday, then the four players meet in mixed doubles.—Internet

Literati to discharge bounden duty through literary strength to enable the entire people to correctly know internal and international progress in serving the national interest
Literati to participate in building a Union in line with political, economic and social objectives of the State

Secretary-1 of the State Peace and Development Council Thiha Thura U Tin Aung Myint Oo presents Life-time Achievement for National Literary Award to Dr Khin Maung Nyunt.

Nav Pyi Taw, 1 Jan—The ceremony to present Life-time Achievement for National Literary Award, National Literary Award and Sarpay Beikman Manuscript Award for 2009 to the winners was held at the hall of the Ministry of Information, here, yesterday morning, with an address by Secretary-1 of the State Peace and Development Council Thiha Thura U Tin Aung Myint Oo. Also present on the occasion were the commander of Nay Pyi Taw Command, ministers, the chairman of Civil Service Selection and Training Board, deputy ministers, departmental heads, members of Myanmar Historical Commission, members of Life-time Achievement for National Literary Award, National Literary Award Scrutiny Committee, members of Sarpay Beikman Manuscript Award Scrutiny Committee, literati, members of the reference committee, social organization members, mediamen, prize winners and their family members, guests and staff.

Speaking on the occasion, the Secretary-1 said that while shaping a peaceful, modern, developed and discipline-flourishing democratic nation, the government is building necessary infrastructures for physical development and raising spiritual development of the people to equip them with correct ideology through literature, culture and fine arts. It can be seen that literati members of the Sangha and patriots have been preserving heritage of Myanmar culture and fine arts in the successive eras of the Union of Myanmar successfully. Based on social and religious directives in Myanmar literature, they could uplift the prestigious national culture, lineage and religion.
