Growers generate more income through extended cultivation of grape in Yamethin

Only when agricultural produce can be transported to the market in time, will the products be sold easily. Therefore, the inter-district roads and inter-village roads are essential for transporting crops from the farmlands to the market.

The rural people are enjoying fruits of better transport. On 31 March, I had interviews with some grape growers in Ingon and Alegon village-tracts of Yamethin Township.

In the first interview, U Kyaw Ohn of Ingon Village conducted me round the grape farm where 10 workers were at the farm works. The farm work cost K 800,000 per acre in growing 500 grape plants.

SANTIAGO, 24 April—One of the 33 miners rescued from a Chilean mine after being trapped underground for 69 days is suffering from an incurable lung disease that often afflicts miners.

“The tests I had at Chilean Safety Association showed that I have silicosis,” Yonni Barrios, 51, told Las Ultimas Noticias newspaper. “It is normally around this age that silicosis is detected. As it is a progressive illness, I am not sure if I will make it to retirement or if I will die.”

Barrios has worked for 30 years down the mines, and during the workers’ lengthy ordeal a basic medicine saw him play the role of nurse to the group as they awaited their rescue.

During their long confinement from 5 August to 13 October, he kept medical records on his co-workers and even administered shots to protect them from infection in the dark, underground conditions. He also gained notoriety as both his wife and his mistress maintained an anxious vigil for him on the surface, during the huge, complex rescue operation.

Silicosis is a serious illness of the lungs caused by lengthy exposure to crystalline silica dust in mines.

The Chilean miner Yonni Barrios (C) is helped by rescuers after being brought to the surface from the San Jose mine, near Copiapo, Chile on 13 October, 2010. Barrios, one of the 33 miners rescued from a Chilean mine after being trapped underground for 69 days, is suffering from an incurable lung disease that often afflicts miners.

Asian carp found at Wisconsin border

MILWAUKEE, 24 April—While authorities concentrate on keeping invasive Asian carp out of Lake Michigan, the fish are heading into Wisconsin’s inland waters, officials said.

A commercial fisherman caught a 27-pound bighead carp Monday just north of the St Croix River’s confluence with the Mississippi and contacted the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel reported.

It was the sixth Asian carp found in Wisconsin-Minnesota border waters since 2003, officials said. “This is not a crisis, but these fish are knocking on our door,” said Luke Skinner, Minnesota DNRF’s invasive species supervisor. —Internet

The rocket blasted off from the European space centre at Kourou, French Guiana, at 2137 GMT Friday.

Amazon wrapping with online hosting woes

SAN FRANCISCO, 24 April—Amazon on Friday was still wrangling with troubles at its Web hosting service used by Foursquare, Quora, Reddit and other popular websites.

Amazon EC2 was being slowly restored a day after the onset of disruptive problems, but it may take a while to fully recover, according to updates on the service’s online status dashboard.

“When a service that is heavily redundant, like this one is, goes out of hand this long, they have a serious problem and they don’t have their arms around it,” said analyst Rob Enderle of Enderle Group in Silicon Valley.

Websites hosted by Amazon EC2 were sluggish or knocked offline on Thursday and the company has yet to disclose a cause.

“These things are supposed to be incredibly bulletproof so it would take something serious to cause a problem like this,” Enderle said of datacenters designed to host websites or software in the Internet “cloud.”

“If it was something simple, by now they would have told us what it was.”

Apple updates iBooks for iPad, iPhone, and iPod touch

NEW YORK, 24 April—Apple has released an update to iBooks, its native e-reading app for iPhone, iPad, and iPod touch.

iBooks 1.2.2 brings with it “a number of important stability and performance improvements.” Apple said it “addresses issues playing video included with enhanced books from the iBookstore” and “resolves a problem where some books open with a different font than expected.”

iBooks was announced along with the first iPad last spring. It was released for the iPad in April and became available for the iPhone and iPod touch later in the year when Apple rolled out iOS 4.

After Random House adopted the “agency model” for e-books earlier this spring, it became the last of the “big six” publishers to be included in the iBookstore. Under this sales model, Random House sets consumer prices for e-texts and awards a commission to retailers for each sale. As with other publishing apps, Apple takes a 30 percent cut and awards the remaining 70 percent back to the publisher.

When the iPad 2 was unveiled on 11 March, Apple CEO Steve Jobs opened the keynote with a PowerPoint slide that confirmed Random House’s inclusion in the iBookstore.

iBooks 1.2.2 is a minor update. Apple rolled out iBooks 1.2 in December, after which Apple expanded the stores selection, adding more than 100 colour e-books including picture books, children’s books, cookbooks, and photo books. —Internet

Meteor shower approaching peak

LONDON, 24 April—Skywatchers hoping for an impressive astronomical display say the Lyrid meteor shower should reach its peak over the next two days, experts in Britain said.

Astromomers said the Lyrid shower can be fickle but under ideal conditions 10 to 20 meteors an hour may be visible to watchers, the BBC reported on Friday.

Light from the moon, which is in a so-called gibbous phase around the full-moon period, could hamper observations this year but experts say stargazers should watch in the hours before dawn to get their best views of the meteors.

The source of the shower, known as the radiant, is located near the bright star Vega. The Lyrid shower occurs when Earth passes through a trail of debris left by the comet Thatcher, astronomers say. —Internet

New Zealand scientists find link between pregnancy diet and fat offspring

Wellington, 24 April—New Zealand scientists have helped find a link between a woman’s diet during pregnancy and her child’s chances of becoming fat.

Professor Peter Gluckman, who led the New Zealand and Singapore arms of the study, said the study proved the path to obesity, diabetes, or heart disease started before a child was born.

“It’s a major breakthrough... Frankly, it’s the biggest, most important finding I’ve ever made as the result of 15 years’ work,” he told New Zealand news agency NZPA.

Findings revealed a mother’s diet during pregnancy could alter her child’s DNA, through a process called epigenetic change, which could lead to her child putting on extra weight later in life.

“Now we know that mothers who don’t eat balanced diets during pregnancy — their babies are at greater risk,” he said.

The international study found there was something in a women’s diet, particularly during the first third of a pregnancy, that was of crucial importance.

The study had produced the first data that quantified a link between events before birth and the chance of obesity but researchers found the mother’s size and the child’s weight at birth had no bearing on that link.

Health Tip: Curb snoring with lifestyle changes

Snoring can undermine the quality of sleep — for the snorer and anyone sleeping nearby.

The American Association of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgeons lists these lifestyle changes that can help to curb snoring:

* Try losing weight — even just 10 pounds.
* Instead of sleeping on your back, try sleeping on your side.
* Avoid alcohol and caffeine, and don’t eat large, heavy meals — particularly within about two hours of heading to bed.
* Don’t take a sedative, which relaxes the muscles in your throat and increases snoring.

Smoking could raise odds for advanced kidney cancer

New York, 24 April—Smoking increases the chances of developing advanced kidney cancer, the most deadly form of the disease, warn researchers from Duke University Medical Center.

The investigators examined the smoking histories of 845 people who had surgery for kidney cancer between 2000 and 2009. The group included 164 current smokers, 246 former smokers and 435 people who’d never smoked.

Advanced kidney cancer was diagnosed in about 20 percent of those who had never smoked and 29 percent of both current and former smokers, some of whom had smoked for decades before they kicked the habit.

However, every decade that a former smoker was smoke-free led to a 9 percent reduction in the risk for advanced kidney cancer. Quitting smoking, the researchers emphasized, does reduce the likelihood of developing advanced kidney cancer.

Former smokers who had not smoked for at least 20 years had a 22 percent risk for developing advanced kidney cancer, just slightly higher than the 20 percent risk for those who’d never smoked.

German retailer to double outlets in China

Beijing, 24 April—German retailer Metro Cash & Carry International said plans to double its outlets in China in the next four years.

“We want to expand in the 35 cities in which we already have a presence to increase our current network. However, as China is very homogeneous in terms of economic development, we are focusing on three very prosperous areas: The Bohai Bay area, the Yangtze River Delta and the Pearl River Delta,” said Tino Zeiske, president of Metro Jinqiang Cash & Carry Co Ltd, China Daily reported Saturday.

“We’ve also noticed that the western part of China is growing faster than before,” Zeiske said.

By 2015 the company expects to have 100 outlets in China.

“If Chinese people have more money to spend, they will have a choice (of products). And, as for Metro, we will be able to offer our professional customers more competitive products by providing differentiated solutions,” he added.

Beijing, 24 April—In response to the recent sluggish sales of oversupplied vegetables, China’s Ministry of Commerce is adopting measures to expedite sales of seasonally-impacted agricultural products.

Dongfeng Motor’s net profit down in Q1

Beijing, 24 April—China’s homegrown automaker Dongfeng Motor said Sunday that its net profit fell 2.41 percent year on year to 2.10.69 million yuan (32.34 million US dollars) in the first three months of 2011.

However, net profit belonging to its parent company rose 2.17 percent to 190.48 million yuan during the period, the company said in a statement filed with the Shanghai Stock Exchange.

The leading Chinese automaker attributed the net profit decrease to rising costs such as consumption taxes for its sports utility and multi-purpose vehicles which together saw a 65.22 percent year-on-year rise in sales, the statement said.

Also, the market value of stocks held by the company decreased 424.74 percent, or 1.04 million yuan, from January to March, it added.

In addition, it received less government subsidy in the first quarter of the year with the subsidy down 1.9 million yuan from the same period of 2010, it said. Meanwhile, the company’s revenues rose 19.6 percent year on year to 5.43 billion yuan from January to March as its sales rose 17.73 percent during the period, it noted.

Treat depression to boost diabetes self-care

Ann Arbor, 24 April —Treating diabetes patients’ depression boosts their overall health, according to a new study.

It included 145 people with type 2 diabetes and depression who received a year-long depression intervention that included 12 weeks of cognitive behavioral therapy over the phone, followed by nine monthly booster sessions. They also took part in a walking programme.

They were compared to a control group of 146 diabetes patients with depression who received usual care.

At the end of the year, depression symptoms were in remission for 58 percent of the patients in the intervention group and 39 percent of those in the control group, said the researchers at the VA Ann Arbor Healthcare System and the University of Michigan Health System.

The intervention programme also led to lower blood pressure, an increase in walking of about one mile per week, and improved life quality.

However, most patients already had good blood sugar control at the outset of the intervention, so A1C levels, a measure of blood sugar control, did not drop.

The study appears online ahead of print in the journal Medical Care.

Depression and diabetes often go hand in hand, and depression can be a major problem for people with diabetes because it makes them less likely to follow their medicine schedule or exercise programme, the researchers explained.

“Depression is a common, treatable issue for many people who have diabetes,” said study lead author John Piette, a senior research scientist at the VA and professor of internal medicine at the University of Michigan Medical School, in a university news release.

“Unfortunately, most busy clinicians cannot provide the level of intensive care these patients need. This study shows that telephone-delivered counseling can improve patients’ access to effective depression care, improve their cardiovascular health and get them moving again,” he added.

“The rail penetrated through his vehicle, struck him and he was ejected,” California Highway Patrol Officer Ed Jacobs told the Times, adding the officer was wearing his seatbelt at the time of the crash.

The officer was transported to Ronald Reagan UCLA Medical Centre, where he was pronounced dead at 6 am, Los Angeles Police Department officer Gregory Baek told the newspaper.

The cause of the accident was being investigated.

Wal-Mart tests online grocery delivery in California

Chicago, 24 April —Wal-Mart Stores Inc has begun testing an online grocery delivery service in San Jose, California, a company spokesman said on Saturday.

The world’s biggest retailer had been rumored to be considering dipping its toe into online grocery delivery for the past few years.

The “Wal-Mart To Go” test allows customers to visit Walmart.com to order groceries and consumables found in a Walmart store and have them delivered to their homes, the spokesman said.

Products include fresh produce, meat and seafood, frozen, bakery, baby, over-the-counter pharmacy, household supplies and health and beauty items.

No other details were immediately available.

The online grocery business has proven difficult to succeed in given the perishability of fresh food and the industry’s small profit margins, analysts have said. If Wal-Mart decides to stay and expand in the online grocery delivery business, its competition would include Peapod and Amazon Fresh.

Wal-Mart’s US grocery business generated more than $140.6 billion in sales last year, up 2.1 percent from the previous year, according to a recent media report.

Five women brutally murdered in Mexico beach resort

Mexico City, 24 April —Five women, all apparently connected to a beauty parlor, were found brutally murdered in the Mexican beach resort of Acapulco on Saturday morning, state police said.

The semi-naked and bound bodies of two women and a 14-year-old girl were discovered in the salon in the early hours of Saturday morning. All three had their throats slashed. Police later found the corpses of another two women with cut throats dumped in the streets. Mexican media said both victims worked at the beauty parlor. No motive was given for the killings. Acapulco, famed in the 1960s as a glamorous haunt for Hollywood stars, has been convulsed by drug violence in recent months as powerful cartels battle for smuggling routes, prompting the United States to warn tourists against visiting the downtown centre of the resort. Mexican officials have been anxiously to downplay the impact of the violence on tourism, one of the country’s main foreign exchange earners, pointing out that the number of tourists arriving in Mexico has continued to rise in recent years.

Spreading drug violence that killed more than 15,000 people last year has prompted foreign governments to issue a number of travel warnings for parts of Mexico.

He explained cost and profit of the grape farm. As grape fruit can be produced once four months, the farmers can get benefits in two seasons despite facing loss and damage in the rainy season.

I visited the grape farm of Ko Min Thein in Alegon Village. Bunches of grape covered all the places of farm. Ko Min Thein said that he was growing 340 grape plants and explained procedure of growing grape saplings, nurturing them and feeding fertilizer. He further explained picking up of grape at eighth or ninth month. He said that it is necessary to water at the farm and weed the plants three-four times a month. Moreover, he explained the grape plants are to be sprayed for prevention against pests. As every country across the world is striving for their development, our country is also making utmost efforts for gaining development momentum similar to that of others and catching up the developed world. A government under the duty of the State is responsible for sticking to the principle: “The motherland must always have achievement”. It is obvious that the newly-constituted government upholding the above-mentioned principle is striving for development of the nation and prosperity of its citizens.

It is known to all that despite having plenty of water, land and natural resources, our country lagged behind in development due to various reasons. It is therefore necessary to undertake nation-building tasks with added momentum so as to catch up with the neighbouring countries by tapping human resources and natural resources in an effective way. While other countries are working as usual, we all are to make earnest efforts ten times. Only when nation-building tasks are to be added with momentum, can the nation and the people enjoy fruits of development speedily.

Within two or three years, the new government has planned to complete the construction of motor roads, bridges, railways, airports and hydropower projects that have not been completed in the time of the Tatmadaw government. The earlier these projects complete, the earlier the people will enjoy benefits.

Within two or three years, the new government has planned to complete the construction of motor roads, bridges, railways, airports and hydropower projects that have not been completed in the time of the Tatmadaw government. The earlier these projects complete, the earlier the people will enjoy benefits.

All the people were delighted by the news about the coordination meeting (1/2011) of the Special Projects Implementation Committee on 22 April. At present, development indication of the nation is going up due to the development in all aspects. Indeed, the special projects are playing an important role in fulfilling the requirements of the nation in all corners, serving the long-term interest.

Some projects for development of the nation such as dams, river water pumping, hydropower plants, strategic railway networks and strategic road networks need great investments and much time, they are to be included in the list of special projects and implemented under the supervision of the Union Government.

As special projects will mainly contribute to modernization and development of the nation, it can be said that all the projects are pillars for the new nation. Therefore, all the people are to join hands with the new government for gaining greater achievement in implementing the special projects.

Nowadays, Myanmar has secured the unprecedented development in the transport sector. All the people have easy access to various parts of the nation from the north to the south and from the east to the west. Thanks to construction of road network, there are 11018 miles long earthen and gravel roads, 10343 miles long asphalt roads, totalling 21361 miles compared with 8092 miles long earthen and gravel roads and 5543 miles long asphalt roads totalling 13635 miles in 1988. Moreover, the nation has 6620 under-180 feet long bridges and 463 above-180 feet long bridges at present compared with 3305 under-180 feet long bridges and 198 above-180 feet long bridges in 1988. It can be seen that the road and bridge sector has achieved remarkable progress.

Special projects—guarantees of brighter future...

According to the meeting of the Special Projects Implementation Committee, the Ministry of Construction has planned to implement 19 more projects. These projects are construction of Putao-Yabbawt-Nagmon road, construction of four bridges on Kyauktaw-Paletwa road in Rakhine State, and building of Yaw (Kantwin) bridge on Chauk-Seikpyu-Pakokku road in Magway Region. As these new bridge projects are located in various regions of the Union, it is sure that these facilities on completion will contribute much not only to speedy and smooth transport of respective regions and the whole nation but also to socio-economic development of the people.

The Ministry of Communications, Posts and Telegraphs will implement two main projects. With the aim of contributing to improvement of living standard of the people and enhancement of social and economic sectors and ensuring smooth communication for regional administration and natural disaster preparedness works, telecommunication works are extended annually. As a result, the telephone density has risen to 5 per cent across the nation. As a plan is under way to extend 30 million GSM mobile phone lines within five years, it is good news for the nation and the people. On completion of the five-year project, Myanmar will have 50.6 per cent of telephone density. A State-owned satellite will be launched for uplifting the capability of communication and information sector and for acquiring the aerospace technology. As such, it will be vigorous efforts for higher capability of future communication and information sector.

In realizing one of four economic objectives of the State “Building the modern industrialized nation through the agricultural development, and all-round development of other sectors of the economy”, it is necessary to place emphasis on undertaking the main task to establishment of a modern industrialized nation. As the State will build the nation to be an industrialized nation in the long run, the special projects submitted by the Ministry of Industry-2 are the most important for the aim of the nation.

The Ministry of Industry-2 has planned to implement the project to manufacture 1000 sets of Automobile Mold & Die, Jigs & Fixtures per year in order to produce spare parts locally for vehicles with momentum and the projects for manufacturing 10000 sets of various types of axles and spare parts for light trucks, medium trucks, heavy trucks, super trucks and commercial vehicles, and arrangements are being made for implementation of the projects in Ywatha region of Myingyan Township. As the State on its part takes responsibility for undertaking the heavy industries that the private sector cannot carry out, the farsightedness and goodwill of the new government for the future of the nation are the most valuable.

Moreover, a plan is under way to open the Industrial Training Center with the assistance of the Republic of India for fulfilling the requirement of industries and turning out the skilled workers. At present, four technical training centers are opened in Hsinte, Mandalay, Thaga and Pakokku that turn out about 750 skilled workers yearly. Thanks to one more training center, the number of industrial skilled workers will increase in the future to be able to shape the new industrialized nation.

The energy sector is one of the sectors securing the good prospects for future State economy. Myanma Oil and Gas Enterprise under the Ministry of Energy will join hands with North Petro-Chem Corporation Ltd (NPCC) of the People’s Republic of China for exploration and production of oil and natural gas in inland block F (Ngahlaingtwin region), with SNOG Pte Ltd and UPR Pte Ltd of Singapore for exploration and production of shale in Mepalay region of Kayin State, with Korea Myanmar Development Co Ltd (KMDC) and Brilliant Oil Corporation Pte Ltd (BOC) of the Republic of Korea for exploration and production of oil and natural gas at block A-5 and block A-7 at offshore Rakhine State, block M-15 and block M-16 at offshore Taninthayi. Furthermore, a plan will be implemented for renovation of Petrochemical Plant (Thanbawayan).

As the electric sector is essential for shaping the new nation we aspires, it is obvious that the State is making relentless efforts for improvement of electric sector. Up to March 2011, Myanmar has 3285.9 megawatts installed generating capacity in total to generate 18765 million kilowatt hours yearly. A total of 32 power plants—17 hydropower plants under control of the Ministry of Electric Power No. 1 and 15 gas power plants under the Ministry of Electric Power No. 2—are generating 3285.9 megawatts. Moreover, a total of 67 projects—14 projects to be implemented by the Ministry of Electric Power No. 1, nine by private companies and 44 through foreign investments—will generate 45378.5 megawatts. As such, the electric power sector is totally reliable for the future nation.

New technology improves fuel cells

LOS ALAMOS, 24 April—US researchers say they’ve developed an inexpensive substitute for expensive platinum that’s been a stumbling block to widespread use of hydrogen fuel cells.

Los Alamos National Laboratory scientists say eliminating the need for platinum — currently costing almost $1,800 an ounce — in fuel cells that convert hydrogen and oxygen into electricity could bring the price down for the environmentally friendly devices that might replace current power sources in everything from personal data devices to automobiles, a Department of Energy release said Thursday.

The Los Alamos researchers have developed non-precious-metal catalysts using carbon and inexpensive iron and cobalt instead of platinum that have yielded high performance output, good efficiency and longevity, the release said.

“Encouraging point is that we have found a catalyst with a good durability and life cycle relative to platinum-based catalysts,” said Los Alamos researcher Piotr Zelenay.

“For all intents and purposes, this is a zero-cost catalyst in comparison to platinum, so it directly addresses one of the main barriers to hydrogen fuel cells.”

Japan advisor says nuclear threat receding

TOKYO, 24 April—The Japanese prime minister’s special advisor on the nuclear crisis says the immediate risk of a major radiation leak from the Fukushima power plant has receded, the Wall Street Journal reported.

The government could not say the situation had been completely stabilised at the plant, but after studying the possibility of severe deterioration Tokyo was comfortable with the current evacuation policy, Goichi Hosono told the paper in an interview Saturday.

“There is no way Tokyo or Kyoto will come into harm’s way,” said Hosono, Prime Minister Naoto Kan’s special advisor on management of the nuclear crisis. The atomic plant, where reactor cooling systems were knocked out, has been hit by a series of explosions and leaked radiation into the air, ground and sea in the world’s worst nuclear disaster since Chernobyl 25 years ago.

The government last week imposed a no-go zone 20 kilometres (12 miles) around the plant, giving legal weight to an existing exclusion zone over fears of the effect of long-term exposure to radiation on residents.

More than 85,000 people have moved to shelters from areas around the plant, including from a wider 30-kilometre zone, where people were first told to stay indoors and later urged to leave.

Ex-Sony chief, ‘father of the CD’, dies

TOKYO, 24 April—Former Sony president Norio Ohga, who helped transform the music industry with the development of the compact disc format, has died at the age of 81, the company said.

The music school graduate served as president from 1982 to 1995 and led the electronics manufacturer to become an entertainment empire with a portfolio encompassing music, movies and computer games. He died on Saturday of multiple organ failure, Sony said.

“By redefining Sony as a company encompassing both hardware and software, Ohga-san succeeded where other Japanese companies failed,” said Sir Howard Stringer, current Sony chairman, chief executive and president. “It is no exaggeration to attribute Sony’s evolution beyond its legendary foundation by Romulus in 753 BC.”

Australian bitten after taunting shark

SYDNEY, 24 April—An Australian teenager who was taunting a shark with a dead fish ended up getting bitten on the heel, according to reports. The 17-year-old was airlifted for surgery after being attacked by the one-metre (three foot) reef shark near the west coast city of Carnarvon late Saturday, the Royal Flying Doctor Service said.

Witnesses said the teen was dangling a fish he had caught to try and attract the reef shark in shallow water and was bitten after being knocked over by a wave. “There were heaps of people on the beach, heaps of kids in the water, so it was pretty silly really,” feeding sharks when there were kids about, one witness told ABC Radio. Reef sharks are not considered particularly aggressive but have been known to attack if provoked.

Sharks are common in Australia but fatal attacks are rare, with only 53 deaths in the last half-century, according to the Australian Shark Attack File. Most recently, a surfer and wakeboarder were savaged by sharks in separate incidents north of Sydney last month.
Letters trace Civil War for writer’s forebears

This 5 April, 2011 photo shows Dr Bowman Bigelow Breed with a pipe in an 1861 photograph at Camp Essex, Md, next to letters written to his wife Hannah during the Civil War while he served as a surgeon in the Union Army. Their ‘precious letters’ which managed to survive the ravages of time and several family fires would total nearly 1,000 by war’s end.

Boston, 24 April
Alone in his hotel room after a solemn dinner with his brother, the newly enlisted Army surgeon took up pen and paper to make the first installment on his promise. “I have a few moments,” he wrote to his wife, just 10 miles up the coast in Lynn. “I am his wife, just 10 miles up moments,” he wrote to promise.

Bowman Bigelow Breed my great-grandfather was on a train south, bound for Boston, and for war.

Bowman and my great-grandmother, Hannah, vowed to write to each other every day, “if only a line.” And they kept their promise as well as one can during a time of war.

Except for brief furloughs and the few months when she would join him at one of his postings, they were apart from the fading echo of those first cannon shots in South Carolina until an assassin’s bullet ended Lincoln’s life four years later.

Their “precious letters,” as each called them, would total nearly 1,000 by war’s end.

Having survived the ravages of 150 years and several family fires, they were doubly precious to me. The very next day, Dr.

Earth quickly managed ancient CO2

West Lafayette, 24 April—Earth may be able to recover from rising carbon dioxide emissions faster than previously thought. US researchers studying prehistoric climate events say.

Scientists at Purdue University say when faced with high levels of atmospheric carbon dioxide and rising temperatures 56 million years ago, Earth increased its ability to pull carbon from the air. Earth and atmospheric sciences Professor Gabriel Bowen said this led to a recovery that was quicker than predicted by many current models of the carbon cycle, though still on the order of tens of thousands of years.

A university release reported Thursday, “We found that more than half of the added carbon dioxide was pulled from the atmosphere within 30,000 to 40,000 years, which is one-third of the time span previously thought.” Bowen said.

FAA falls short on plan to aid fatigued workers

WASHINGTON, 24 April — The Federal Aviation Administration told a government watchdog nearly two years ago that it was prepared to let air traffic controllers sleep or rest during work shifts when they weren’t directing aircraft. It still hasn’t happened.

When the FAA proposed new limits on airline pilots’ work schedules to prevent fatigue last year, it rejected its own research recommending that pilots be allowed to take naps during the cruise phase of flight typically most of a flight when the plane is neither climbing nor descending so that they are refreshed and alert during landings. And an FAA committee that has been working for several years on new work rules to prevent fatigue among night-shift airline mechanics has made little progress, said one committee member.

Allowing naps during breaks on overnight shifts was dismissed as a nonstarter. In a 24/7 industry like aviation, fatigue is a fact of life. Managing work schedules to minimize fatigue can make the difference between life and death.

Research says heavier models encourage obesity

BEIJING, 24 April—New research suggests that banning size zero models from catwalks to promote a healthier ideal of beauty may actually make people’s eating habits even worse.

According to the research carried out at the University of Bologna, increasing the average size of models could mean the weight that many people aspire to will also increase.

The authors argue that increasing the size of models on the catwalk will alter the ideal weights of a wide section of the female population.

The research suggests that for most people, seeing slimmer models on the catwalk acts as an incentive to stay trim.

Australia’s university student number grows

CANBERRA, 24 April—The Australian Federal Government on Saturday released new figures showing the number of students at Australian universities has grown by an average of 10 percent over the last two years.

About 50,000 additional undergraduate students enrolled in universities across the country in the last two years.

The university with the biggest growth is the Australian Catholic University, with a 36 percent increase, followed by the University of Canberra and the University of the Sunshine Coast.

The University of Western Australia had an 11 percent increase, and its vice-chancellor Professor Alan Robson said the increase in numbers has intensified competition between the universities.

Police and coast guard to investigate botched rescue

LONDON, 24 April — A seriously sick grandmother was dropped into the chilly Norwegian Sea as rescue workers took her off a cruise ship. Janet Richardson, 73, spent several minutes treading water after Norwegian coast guard officers let her stretcher slip as they were evacuating her from a cruise ship, her husband, George, said. The sea was a few degrees above freezing at the time. Mrs Richardson spent a week in intensive care and remains in hospital in England. “She’s not getting any better,” Mr Richardson said yesterday. “The stretcher went into the water and she fell into the water, too, as she was not strapped in. “She had a lifejacket on and I could see her swimming, treading water and trying to stay afloat.” Passenger Colin Prescott said Mrs Richardson was in the water “for the best part of eight minutes”. “I’m surprised she survived, because I know how cold it was on deck and that water would have been a lot colder,” Mr Prescott said. Mrs Richardson, from Penshurst, in northern England, was taken to a hospital in the Norwegian town of Bodo before being flown to hospital in the UK. NYC cabbie drives 2 guys across US — for $5,000

A New York City cab driver has racked up the fare of a lifetime.

Mohammed Alam is being paid $5,000 to drive a pair of friends to Los Angeles. The trio left Saturday night and had reached Las Vegas by Thursday.

Investment banker John Belitsky, of Leonia, NJ, tells the New York Post that the idea was hatched during a birthday celebration for Dan Wiebken of Queens.

Belitsky said they wanted to do something “magical.” When they decided on a cab ride to California, they found Alam at LaGuardia Airport and brokered the deal.

Classic Hong Kong ghost film remade 24 years later

HONG KONG, 24 April—When “A Chinese Ghost Story” hit movie screens in 1987, it wowed audiences with its novel plot of man falls for female demon in an ancient Chinese setting. The unlikely couple played by late Hong Kong superstar Leslie Cheung and actress Joey Wang quickly became a classic romance, and two sequels followed, as well as an animated movie.

Twenty-four years later, Hong Kong director Wilson Yip has reimagined the love story for a wider audience with a new cast, a new plot twist and modern special effects.

While the original was released during the heyday of Hong Kong cinema, the remake is largely targeted at the lucrative mainland market, where censors once averse to supernatural-themed productions. The 1987 version, directed by veteran filmmaker and action choreographer Tony Ching, takes inspiration from “Strange Stories from a Chinese Studio,” Qing Dynasty writer Pu Songling’s famed collection of ghost stories. —Internet

Lohan quickly released from jail in theft case

LOS ANGELES , 24 April—The day unfolded all too familiarly for Lindsay Lohan: a court hearing, a jail sentence, a quick release. The starlet appeared before a judge Friday for the fourth time in nearly a year and was sentenced to 120 days for violating her probation by taking a designer neck- lace. Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Stephanie Sautner said she thought the actress had inten tionally taken the $2,500 necklace from an upscale Venice store and shown poor judgment in not returning it to police when she was released from jail in theft case.

Inter Milan’s Leonardo coy over future

ROSE, 24 April—Inter Milan coach Leonardo refused to be drawn on his future beyond the end of the season after his side staged a remarkable comeback to beat Lazio 2-1 on Saturday.

The win moved them up to second but they still trail leaders and city rivals AC Milan by eight points.

Torres may despite Chelsea goal

LONDON, 24 April—Fernando Torres has been warned he is not guaranteed a starting spot despite finally scoring his first Chelsea goal in the 3-0 victory over West Ham. Torres netted in the 84th minute, 10 minutes after he appeared as a second-half substitute to end a 733-minute goal-drought in his 14th appearance for the club he joined in January.

Blues manager Carlo Ancelotti admitted the goal came as a relief and believes it will give the striker the confidence to finally kick-start his Stamford Bridge career following his British record £50 million move from Liverpool.—Internet

Messi sets 50-goal mark as Barca stay eight clear

MADRID, 24 April—Argentine superstar Lionel Messi on Saturday became the first player to score 50 goals in a Spanish season as Barcelona and arch-rivals Real Madrid both triumphed ahead of their mouth-watering Champions League duel.

Messi reached his latest landmark when he found the target three minutes from time in his team’s 2-0 win over Osasuna as Barcelona maintained their eight-point lead at the top of La Liga.

He had already equalled the previous best mark of 49 goals scored by Real Madrid legend Ferenc Puskas when he netted in the 1-1 draw against Real last weekend.

Now Messi has 31 goals in the league and nine in the Champions League after finishing with seven in the King’s Cup and three in the Spanish Super Cup.—Internet

Darchinyan defeats Perez in boxing clash

LOS ANGELES, 24 April—Former two-division world champion Vic Darchinyan has claimed a five-round technical decision victory over former International Boxing Federation bantamweight title holder Yonny Perez.

Armenian-born Australian southpaw Darchinyan rattled Colombia’s Perez in the first round and sent him to the canvas in the second.

Arsenal’s title bid in tatters after Bolton defeat

LONDON, 24 April—Arsenal blew their last chance to get back in the Premier League title race as the Gunners were beaten 2-1 at Bolton on Sunday.

Arsene Wenger’s side needed a victory at the Reebok Stadium to have any chance of catching Manchester United, but Daniel Sturridge put Bolton ahead and Tamir Cohen headed a last minute winner after Robin van Persie’s equaliser.

Arsenal’s first defeat in 17 league games leaves them nine points behind leaders United with only four games to play and their hopes of a first trophy since 2005 are over for another year.

Once again Arsenal were punished for their defensive frailties as Sturridge put Bolton ahead in the 38th minute.

Gary Cahill outjumped Gael Clichy to head goalwards from a corner and the ball may have crossed the line before Samir Nasri cleared, but Sturridge was on hand to head home for his seventh goal since joining on loan from Chelsea.

Bolton should have increased their lead straight after half-time when Sturridge won a penalty with a theatrical fall after minimal contact from Johan Djourou.

But Kevin Davies’s tame spot-kick was saved by Wojciech Szczesny and Arsenal equalised two minutes later as Van Persie fired in from the edge of the penalty area.

In the process Van Persie set a new Premier League record as the Dutch forward has now scored in seven successive away games.

Yet Arsenal wasted a host of chances to take the lead and Bolton took advantage when Cohen got in front of Djourou to power a header past Szczesny in the 90th minute.—Internet
