Suicide bomber kills eight tribesmen in NW Pakistan

KHYBER PAKHTUNKHWA, 29 May—A suicide bomber targeted pro-government tribal elders in Pakistan’s northwestern frontier Saturday, killing eight men, officials said, a day after US Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton during a visit here implored Pakistanis to take decisive steps to fight terrorism.

Ten people were also were wounded when a bomb ripped through a restaurant at a market in the troubled Bajur tribal region, near the Afghan border, officials said.

A government administrator, Shad Khan, said a man on foot carried out the suicide attack. The Pakistani Taleban claimed responsibility.

The attack came a day after Clinton and Adm Mike Mullen, chairman of the US Joint Chiefs of Staff, made a seven-hour trip to Pakistan in a bid to repair ties damaged by the US raid that killed Osama bin Laden, which Pakistanis say was an attack on its sovereignty. On Saturday, Pakistan’s Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Tahmina Janjua said Clinton’s visit had helped clear up misunderstandings and that the two sides would cooperate on raids against terrorist suspects.

Delta jet has rough landing in Atlanta; four hurt

ATLANTA, 29 May—The landing gear of a Delta Air Lines jet apparently caught fire during a rough landing Saturday afternoon at Atlanta’s main airport, but the flight’s approximately 50 passengers and crew were evacuated safely, authorities said.

Four people suffered minor injuries that did not require hospitalization, Atlanta city fire officials said. Passengers were evacuated through the rear stairs. Firefighters quickly extinguished the fire with foam spray.

There were conflicting accounts as to what caused the trouble for Delta Flight 2284 from Pittsburgh, which landed at Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport at around 4:18 pm. Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Kathleen Bergen said the MD-88 jet suffered either a blown tire, a locked-up brake or perhaps both, which caused a fire.

Fire officials initially said the fire was in the plane’s right engine, then said it was actually in landing gear toward the back of the plane. Crews had the blaze extinguished less than a minute after they arrived, Atlanta Fire Department Capt Jolyon Bundrige said.

Honda Canada warns customers of major data breach

TORONTO, 29 May—The personal information of more than 283,000 customers at Honda Canada has been breached, the company confirmed on Friday. Honda Canada said the stolen data included names, addresses, vehicle identification numbers and in some cases financing account numbers.

It said the data was not the type that would typically be used for identity theft or fraud, such as birth dates, telephone numbers, email addresses, credit card numbers, bank account numbers, driver’s license numbers, social insurance numbers, or dollar amounts of financing or payments.

The company said the information was collected in 2009 as part of a series of customer mail programs encouraging Honda and Acura vehicle owners to register at the myHonda and myAcura websites. It added that the unauthorized access was recent. The Toronto Star reported Honda first noticed suspicious activity on the e-commerce websites in late February and that it said in a letter to affected customers dated May 13 that it was tipped off by unusual volume on the sites, including “some unauthorized attempts to access account information.” Honda would not confirm the additional details the newspaper gave in its report.

The company said it is notifying all the affected customers by mail. It said it does not recommend taking any specific action at this time, other than being alert for marketing campaigns from third parties that reference Honda vehicle ownership.

Astronauts pack up on next-to-last shuttle flight

CAPE CANAVERAL, 29 May—Endeavour’s astronauts took care of some last-minute space station chores Saturday before packing up to come home and end the next-to-last shuttle flight.

The space shuttle and its crew of six will depart the International Space Station late Sunday night. They worked to repair one of the space station’s air purifiers and straightened out the suits that were used in four spacewalks.

The final spacewalk of the mission, on Friday, completed the US portion of station construction. Now that the spacewalks are over, Mission Control told the astronauts they “can bask in the glow of a job well done.”

Shuttle pilot Gregory Johnson said it will be bittersweet to leave. He and his crewmates installed a $2 billion physics experiment at the orbiting outpost, as well as an extension pole and a platform full of spare parts. “It’s been a fantastic mission,” Johnson said in a series of news interviews. “It’s the sort of mission that astronauts dream of having.”

Johnson said his and his colleagues are spending their final hours at the space station doing “everything we can do to help the space station out before we return to Earth.” The station is so big now, he said, that sometimes he takes a wrong turn and finds himself in the wrong chamber. Endeavour is scheduled to return to Florida before dawn Wednesday, 16 days after blasting off. After Sunday night’s undocking, Johnson will guide Endeavour through a victory lap around the space station. He said he’ll try to maintain a good position for the shuttle, “so we can get great photos of one of the final fly-arounds of the space station.”

The shuttle crew also will test out an experimental navigation system for future spacecraft.

This is the final voyage of Endeavour, the youngest in the shuttle fleet. NASA is closing down the shuttle programme this summer after 30 years. Atlantis will fly one last time to the space station in July.

Facebook is building a Desktop Software Team, Despite Lack of iPad App

SEATTLE, 29 May—Need a job? Give Facebook a call. The company is seeking engineers for a new desktop software team. TechCrunch pointed out a posting on the jobs page titled “Software Engineer, Desktop Software” at Facebook’s recently-opened Seattle office.

The description reads: “The desktop software team is a new team at Facebook based out of Seattle, WA. We will be working on new products that we expect to deliver to millions of users’ computers to help make their entire computing experience more social. Facebook is seeking experienced software engineers in Seattle to join this team.”

The page says the other responsibilities of the job are to “create desktop applications for Mac and/or Windows, work closely with our product and design teams to define feature specifications, work closely with our Platform team to build server-side APIs and interfaces in support of these applications, [and] conduct design and code reviews.”

Interestingly enough, Facebook is building this team for the desktop before it ever has an iPad app. The lack of the iPad app is also curious considering Facebook’s iPhone app is the most downloaded application of all time. Could Facebook be building a desktop app? Possibly, but Tech-Crunch notes that it “doesn’t seem to make a lot of sense given their stated (over and over again) commitment to HTML5 and that being the key driver for why they don’t have an iPad app.”

Last fall, Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg addressed the absence of an iPad app. “iPad’s not mobile,” he said. “I don’t mean to be rude to Apple. iPad just isn’t mobile in the same way [an iPhone] is.”

It’s unclear whether or not Facebook will eventually cave and build an official iPad app. For now it seems we might see an increased emphasis on the desktop.
More sleep may cut kids’ risk of obesity

DUNEDIN, 29 May—Youngsters who do not get enough sleep on a regular basis are more likely to be overweight, a new study has found. Conversely, when children got more shut-eye, they had a reduction in body mass index (BMI) and a significant drop in their risk of being overweight, the researchers found.

The investigators also found lower BMIs resulted from differences in fat mass (not any effect on fat-free mass, such as muscle), indicating that poor sleep has negative effects on body composition.

In conducting the study, Rachael Taylor, a research associate professor in the department of human nutrition at the University of Otago in Dunedin, New Zealand, and colleagues followed 244 children from the age of 3 years to 7 years. Every six months the children’s weight, height, BMI and body composition were measured, and their sleep and dietary habits were recorded. The children also wore accelerometers (devices that monitor body movement) to assess their level of physical activity. Additional factors known to be associated with BMI in kids were also taken into account, such as the children’s birth weight and their mother’s level of education and income. The study, published online in May in BMJ, revealed that the children got an average 11 hours of sleep per day. Those who consistently slept less, however, had an increased risk of having a higher BMI by the time they turned 7 years old. On the other hand, among 3- to 5-year-olds, each extra hour of sleep per night was linked to a reduction in BMI of 0.49 and a 61 percent drop in the risk of being overweight or obese by the age of 7.

Gestational diabetes predictable before pregnancy, experts say

OAKLAND, 29 May—Whether or not a woman will develop diabetes during pregnancy can be predicted up to seven years before she even conceives, new research suggests. In the study of 580 ethnically diverse women, investigators found that routine evaluations of blood sugar and body weight — long before pregnancy — could help determine those at greater risk for the condition, according to the report published in the 26 May online edition of the American Journal of Obstetrics & Gynecology.

Spencer Dale indicated that interest rates would rise this year. They were held at a record low of 0.50 percent this month, as anaemic British growth offset surging inflation. Britain’s central bank has held the rate for 26 months.

“I think the next year or two will be a relatively bleak time. I think we have relatively hard times ahead,” Dale told the BBC.

“I am not confident about the strength of the recovery, particularly in terms of the weakness we see in the household sector and the implications that may have for consumption.

“I am even more worried about inflation and the risk that we may see price pressures from the rest of the world continue to push up and the high levels of inflation we have seen in the UK persist for longer than we otherwise expect.”

Bank of England policymakers voted 6-3 this month to keep its key interest rate at 0.50 percent. Dale voted for a 0.25 percent rise.

Despite high inflation, the central bank has refrained from hiking its key lending rate due to Britain’s weak recovery from recession.

MORELIA, 29 May—Mexico’s federal police detained nearly 50 members of two major drug cartels, including suspects in the recent armed attack on a police helicopter, authorities said Saturday.

Panda lovers flocked to Chiang Mai Zoo to join the celebration Friday, christened with a huge birthday cake carved with designs of China’s Great Wall and the ancient City wall of Chiang Mai. Lin Bing was born in 2009 through artificial insemination.

Her parents were loaned to the Chiang Mai Zoo in 2003.

Lin Bing is located at a mountainous area in northern Thailand with an average temperature of 21 degrees centigrade. Although the temperature is higher than Wolong, Southwest China’s Sichuan province, the homeland of panda, it is relatively cool for Southern Asia.—Xinhua

Camera fetches record euro1.3 million

VIENNA, 29 May—An Austrian auction house says an 88-year-old Leica camera has sold for a record euro1.3 million ($1.9 million). WestLicht says the rare camera is part of a small series dating back to 1923 and was valued at up to euro450,000 ($643,640).

It says the camera, which had a starting price of euro200,000 ($286,000), went to a private Asian collector after a nail biting, 20-minute bidding process. WestLicht claims Saturday’s auction makes the Leica the most expensive camera ever sold.

Why fathers have post-natal depression

LONDON, 29 May — A Gloucester man has been acquitted of murdering his six-month-old daughter, after saying he had had post-natal depression. The case of Mark Bruton-Young has put the issue of men who struggle to cope with becoming fathers in the headlines. One out of every seven new mothers has post-natal depression — but, according to the Fatherhood Institute, one out of every 10 fathers are depressed both before and after their baby is born.

The peak time for fathers' depression is thought to be between three and six months after the birth. Like women, they can struggle with the huge life changes a baby brings. Adrienne Burgess, research head for the Fatherhood Institute, says: "Hormones, lack of sleep, increased responsibility and general life stresses can apply to men just as much to women.”

"Men can feel the stress and responsibility of fatherhood weighing heavily on their shoulders." — Internet

"And if their partner is depressed, then men are more likely to be too." — Internet

"Men and women who have pre-existing mental health problems are more at risk of developing depression after the birth of a child." — Internet

"But a father's depression can begin during pregnancy, when relationships are already changing. Fathers can feel left out while their partner is the focus of increased attention." — Internet

"The idea that "the whole world must know what is between the baby's legs is unhealthy, unsafe, and voyeuristic." — Ms Witterick

Aussie woman, 89, beats off bandit with handbag

An 89-year-old Australian woman who used a handbag to beat off a knife-carrying would-be robber said Friday she would do it all again, adding she would have “killed him if I could”.

The woman, known only by the pseudonym Jean, was chatting with two friends in an underground car park in Melbourne on Thursday after buying a bottle of wine to enjoy after a day’s shopping when a “grubby” man approached.

When he allegedly held a knife to the throat of Jean’s 82-year-old lifelong friend and demanded her handbag, Jean acted without hesitation.

“I thought he was going to kill (her) and I wasn’t going to have that, and I just hit him with my bag on his face,” Jean said.

“I’d have killed him if I could.”

The grandmother with the knife at her throat had already attempted to kick the would-be thief in the groin.

A San Francisco ATM repairman has been charged with substituting counterfeit homemade bills for real ones in the machines he fixed.

Samuel Kioski, 64, was arrested after a traffic stop in Phoenix two weeks ago, KCBS-TV, San Francisco, reported. He allegedly made crude $20s using a copying machine and placed them in six Bank of America cash machines in San Francisco and one in Daly City, Calif, on 4 July, 2010. San Mateo County District Attorney Steve Wagstaffe said Kioski became a suspect after his wife reported him missing.

“He’s not a 21-year-old. This man was in his sixties, and he suddenly decided to fleece the area to go for a new life. The why of it is the answer we hope to get in the proceedings,” he said.

“He did get 10 months of a new life, we’re not fully sure what that new life was, but it certainly satisfied him down in Arizona I guess.”

Kioski is back in California and appeared in court Wednesday in Redwood City.

Wagstaffe said bank customers who got the phoney bills have been reimbursed.

SCUBA diver Diana Potter dives off of Pompano Beach, Florida while participating in Oceanwatch Foundation’s Reef Sweep on 9 June, 2007.

Diver finds credit card lost 25 years ago

A Florida contractor found a credit card a friend lost 25 years earlier a mile offshore and 90 feet down on an artificial reef. John Krayeski of West Palm Beach told the Palm Beach Post he likes to leave the ocean floor tidier than he found it, so he picked up the card he saw in the sand. He recognized it as an old JC Penney card and then, when he had a chance to examine it more closely after he had surfaced, realized the name on it was familiar.

Krayeski called Jack Jacobs, a caterer who lives in Delray Beach. Jacobs’ wife told him she and her husband had never had an JC Penney card, but Jacobs called back to say the card was indeed his. “I told him I’d lost that card 25 years ago when I was living in Davie, before I was married,” Jacobs said. “The befuddling thing is, how did it get a mile offshore on some reef?” That’s a question no one can answer. Barcelona squad head to Shakira to celebrate win: Pique

Barcelona, 29 May — Barcelona's players will go to a Shakira concert in Barcelona on Sunday to celebrate their Champions League victory, the Colombian pop star's boyfriend, Barcelona defender Gerard Pique, said on Twitter. "Champions!! Champions!! thank you so much!!" Pique wrote on his Twitter account Saturday after a thrilling 3-1 win over Manchester United in the Olympic Stadium!! The 24-year-old Pique, a former Manchester United player, met the singer last year while shooting the video to her song "Waka Waka (This Time for Africa), which was won by Lionel Messi and David Villa. I played one game with some typically beefy instincts that have been a feature of the opposition that the Spanish international has had the better chances and nice to lose of course. They had the better chances and we made one or two mistakes and they punish you," Van der Sar said. — Internet

Nadal, Djokovic at a canter, Murray in injury scare in French Open

Paris, 29 May — Rafael Nadal and Novak Djokovic stayed on course for a second Grand Slam final showdown with both notchting up straight forward wins in Saturday's third round action. But if the top two seeds enjoyed a worry-free afternoon, the same could not be said for fourth seed Andy Murray. The 24-year-old Scot had been coasting along at 6-2, 2-1 and deuce on German Michael Berrer's serve when he badly jarred his right ankle trying to run down a drop shot. Murray won the point, but he hopped about in agony and then collapsed onto his back in the red dirt of the Suzanne Lenglen showcourt. After taking punchalkers and having the ankle strapped at a medical time-out, Murray returned to clinch the break and lead 3-1. Second seed Djokovic made it 40 straight wins this year by finishing off giant Argentinian Juan Martin del Potro 6-3, 6-3, 6-2 in a third round tie held over from late Friday when the two men had parted at one set all. On the resumption, Djokovic once again showed all the composure and killer instinct that have been a feature of his stunning unbeaten run since January and he comfortably dealt with some typically beefy hitting from the 2009 US Open champion. Top seed and defending champion Nadal made it through to the fourth round with a 6-1, 6-3, 6-0 win over Croatian qualifier Antonio Veic in a centre-court mismatch. It was the Spaniard's 41st win at the French Open as the best side he beaten like that to think in any other way. No one's given us a hiding like that." Saturday's victory was Barcelona's third triumph in the Champions League in three years — and their third in five years. Ferguson admitted that Barcelona would be difficult to beat so long as their star players Lionel Messi, Andres Iniesta and Xavi Hernandez remained in their ranks. —Internet

Jackson beats Hamill at UFC 130

Las Vegas, 29 May — Former light heavyweight champion Quinton "Rampage" Jackson dominated Matt Hamill on Saturday night, winning a unanimous decision at UFC 130. Jackson was able to neutralize every takedown attempt by the former NCAA wrestling champion while easily controlling the stand-up action throughout the fight. All three judges scored the bout 29-27. "On a scale of 1 to 10, I give myself a 5," Jackson said. "But I did what I had to do to scrape out a victory." Jackson came on strong at the end of the first round, bloodying Hamill's mouth just before the bell. He also landing a number of power punches in the final two rounds on his way to a convincing victory. Jackson said Hamill had a great game. — Internet
