He also urged the farmers to work hard for development of their respective villages when they arrived back their respective areas.

Cargo jet crashes in Afghan east

KABUL, 7 July—A Russian cargo plane crashed into treacherous mountains in eastern Afghanistan overnight and casualties were feared, with reports indicating eight people were on board, senior officials said on Wednesday.

Transport and interior ministry officials said the plane was chartered by NATO’s International Security Assistance Force but a spokesman for the military said it was not yet clear who had been running the flight.

“A cargo plane crashed in the Siagird area of Ghorband District of Parwan Province last night. The plane was a Russian IL-76 cargo plane chartered by ISAF,” a senior interior ministry official told AFP.

He said initial reports indicated that the plane had eight crew members but investigations were ongoing. Their nationalities were also unclear.

Transport ministry spokesman Nangyalai Qalatwal confirmed the crash in the Shakar Dara mountains, around 70 kilometres (40 miles) north of the capital Kabul, and said it was chartered by the military.

An airport official, speaking anonymously, also confirmed it was an IL-76 cargo plane. The cause of the crash was not immediately clear with no adverse weather or reports of fighting in the area overnight.

ISAF spokesman Major Tim James said the crash site was at an altitude of 12,500 feet (3,800 metres), which could complicate rescue and recovery attempts. There was no immediate information on casualties.

Facebook launches video calls, group chat features

NEW YORK, 7 July—Quick on the heels of Google’s launch of its latest social-networking venture, Facebook said Wednesday that its 750 million users will now be able to make video calls on the site.

The feature will be powered by the Internet phone service Skype. Facebook also redesigned its chat feature, so that the people a user messages the most often show up first.

To make video calls, Facebook users with webcam-equipped computers have to select the friends they want to chat with. In the chat window that pops up, clicking on a small blue video icon brings up the video chat feature. Currently there is no option to video chat more than one person. That feature is available on Google Plus, a social service that Google began testing last week with a small number of invited users.

Facebook is also adding a group chat option. This works much the same way as the group chat on Google Plus. Once you are chatting with one friend, you can click an icon to add more people to the conversation.

Facebook’s new products come after a relatively quiet period for the world’s largest online social network. Zuckerberg, 27, said the company is embarking on “launching season 2011.” Users can expect “a lot of stuff coming out” from Facebook in the next couple of weeks and months, he said at an event at the company’s Palo Alto, California, headquarters.

Facebook updated its user count — to 750 million users worldwide — for the first time since last summer, when it reached half a billion people. Zuckerberg said that because “we don’t think it’s a metric to watch anymore.”

You-Tube’s The Gregory Brothers release Auto-Tune iPhone app

WASHINGTON, 7 July—First rising to fame in 2010 when they auto-tuned Antoine Dodson’s now infamous interview for the Bed Intruder Song, The Gregory Brothers have partner with app developer Khush to release Songify, an iPhone app that transforms ordinary speech into song.

“We had already admired Khush’s work with LaDiDa and they also worked with artists we were already familiar with.” Evan Gregory the oldest of the group’s four members said. “We’re really excited to release this as our next step as music makers online.”

To use the app, users simply Press record and speak into their iPhone, iPod Touch, or iPad. Songify will add a melody, generously apply some pitch correction, and break the speech into a few verses and a chorus.

The app takes no talent, but that’s the point. “The app democratizes music for all the fans. Now if they see a double rainbow they can create a song right then and don’t need to wait for us to make a song about it.” Michael Gregory said. “Everybody has a song in their heart somewhere. It can be about the most mundane things, like what they ate for lunch, or it can be philosophizing. It is can be an unrequited love.”

Songify is free to download and comes with three styles, including once based on the Gregory Brother’s Double Rainbow song. Twelve additional styles can be purchased for $0.99 each. Currently, the app is only available on Apple’s iOS, however Khush does plan to one day expand its app operation onto Google’s Android devices.

NASA’s Juno spacecraft ready for launch

LOS ANGELES, 7 July— NASA’s Juno spacecraft is 30 days away before its first launch window opens, the Jet Propulsion Laboratory (JPL) announced on Tuesday.

“One month from today, our first launch window opens at 11:34 am EDT (8:34 am PDT) and lasts 69 minutes,” said Jan Chodas, Juno project manager from NASA’s JPL in Pasadena, Los Angeles.

“Our primary launch period is 22 days long, and so if weather or other issues come up on 5 Aug, we have 21 more days to get Juno flying. Once we get Juno into space, it’s a five-year cruise to Jupiter.” “The launch window is the length of time allotted every day for an attempt to launch the spacecraft,” said Chodas. “The launch period is the period of time in days when everything is in the right place to get your mission off to the right start.”

For a mission like Juno, getting everything in the right place includes considering the size of the rocket and spacecraft, where our home planet — and in particular Juno’s launch pad — is pointed at any moment, and its location in space relative to other celestial objects like Juno’s final target, Jupiter. Juno is scheduled to launch aboard a United Launch Alliance Atlas V rocket from pad 41-C at the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station, Florida.

The solar-powered spacecraft will orbit Jupiter’s poles 33 times to find out more about the gas giant’s origins, structure, atmosphere and magnetosphere and investigate the existence of a solid planetary core.

JPL manages the Juno mission for the principal investigator, Scott Bolton, of Southwest Research Institute in San Antonio.

The Juno mission is part of the New Frontiers Programme managed at NASA’s Marshall Space Flight Centre in Huntsville, Alabama.

Green tea lowers cholesterol, but only a little.

INTERNET

New York, 7 July—Drinking green tea seems to cut “bad” cholesterol, according to a fresh look at the medical evidence. The finding may help explain why green tea has been linked to a lower risk of heart disease, the leading killer worldwide, Xin-Xin Zheng and colleagues from Peking Union Medical College in Beijing report.

Because few people in the US drink green tea, encouraging Americans to down more of the brew could have significant health benefits, the researchers write in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition. Still, one US expert cautioned the drink shouldn’t be used as medicine for high cholesterol, as the effect found in the Chinese study was small.

The new report pools the results of 14 Previous trials. In each of those studies, researchers randomly divided participants into two groups, one that drank green tea, or took an extract for periods ranging from three weeks to three months, and one that got an inactive preparation.

On average, those who got green tea ended up with total cholesterol levels that were 7.2 milligrams per deciliter (mg/dL) lower than in the comparison group.

Their LDL, or “bad,” cholesterol dropped 2.2 mg/dL — a decrease of slightly less than two percent. There was no difference in HDL, or “good,” cholesterol between the two groups.

The cholesterol-lowering effects of green tea may be due to chemicals known as catechins, which decrease the absorption of cholesterol in the gut, according to the researcher.

Satisfaction with life seems good for the heart

New York, 7 July—Atisfied with your life can be good for your heart.

That’s the finding of a new study that included almost 8,000 British civil servants, average age 49, who were asked about their satisfaction in seven areas of their lives: romantic relationships, leisure activities, professional activities, job, family, sex and self — was also associated with a 13 percent reduced risk of coronary heart disease.

Satisfaction in four main areas — job, family, sex and self — was also associated with a 13 percent reduced risk of heart disease.

The reduced risk, however, was not associated with love relationships, leisure activities or standard of living, the researchers found.

“Taken together, this research indicates that being satisfied with specific life domains — in particular, one’s job, family, sex life and self — is a positive health asset associated with a reduction in incident coronary heart disease independently of traditional risk factors,” the researchers wrote in a news release from the European Society of Cardiology. The study was published online 4 July in the European Heart Journal.

The findings suggest that people at high risk for heart disease may benefit from programmes to boost a Positive state of mind, study author Dr Julia Boehm, of Harvard School of Public Health, noted in the news release.

Visa sees lower revenue growth after debit crackdown

New York, 7 July—Visa Inc , the world’s largest card processing network, said revenue growth will slow next year as a result of a US regulatory crackdown on debit card processing fees.

The San Francisco based-company said on Wednesday it now expects annual net revenue growth “in the high single-digit to low double-digits range” for the next fiscal year ending 30 September, 2012.

Visa still expects annual net revenue growth of 11 percent to 15 percent for fiscal 2011.

The Federal Reserve finalized last week rules slashing the “swipe” fees merchants pay banks and networks such as Visa and MasterCard Inc every time a customer buys something with a debit card.

“The impact is manageable,” Chief Executive Joseph Saunders told analysts during a conference call on Wednesday.

He added that the rules “affect, but far from eliminate,” a portion of the US debit revenue that make up about 20 percent of Visa’s global net revenue.

Banks pay card networks such as Visa and MasterCard for processing debit transactions and investors had worried that a cut in the fees that banks earn from retailers would translate into a cut in the fees they were willing to pay the networks.

Visa said it is in a conference call with analysts on Wednesday that its new guidance “contemplates” some pricing concessions to banks, but executives would not be more specific. Saunders said during the call he expects the 2012 fiscal year to “bear the weight” of the debit fee crackdown, and that revenue growth would “regain momentum” in fiscal 2013.

The company also expects lower profits next year.

It sees earnings per share growth “in the middle to high teens” in fiscal 2012, compared with the “greater than 20 percent” earnings-per-share growth it expects for the current year.

Last week, the Fed softened its initial restrictions, which were required by the 2010 Dodd-Frank financial reform law. But the final rules are still expected to cost the banking industry some $9.4 billion out of an estimated $23 billion in annual debit card processing fee revenue, according to the website, CardHub.com.

Samsung says 2nd-quarter operating profit fell

Seoul, 7 July—Samsung Electronics’ profitability slumped in the second quarter as strong performance in fast-growing smartphones could not overcome weakness in liquid crystal displays.

Operating profit for the three months that ended 30 June will fall to between 3.5 trillion won and 3.9 trillion won ($3.7 billion) from 5.01 trillion won a year earlier, Samsung said in a statement.

Consolidated revenue for the period is expected at between 38 trillion won and 40 trillion won. The company recorded sales of 37.89 trillion won in the same period last year.

Samsung Electronics Co will release a full earnings report including net profit on 29 July when it will provide reasons for the performance, spokesman Nam Kyung-sung said.

Suwon, South Korea-based Samsung is a major force in the global electronics industry and the world’s largest manufacturer of memory chips, liquid crystal displays and flat-screen televisions. It ranks No 2 in mobile phones behind Nokia Corp of Finland.

Lee Min-hee, an analyst at Dongbu Securities in Seoul, said that the company again suffered from weakness in its display division, which he expects to record a net loss during the quarter on the back of similar red ink in the first three months of the year. The bright spot for the company, however, was clearly smartphones.
Rural people to do their bit in poverty alleviation tasks

Kyaw Myo Naung

Economic growth is the driving force behind national development. Boosting rural productivity is a large part in development of a country. With increase in productivity, rural folks can enjoy higher incomes, which helps alleviate poverty and improve their socioeconomic status. Better socioeconomic life of rural people ensures equitable development of all parts of a country. That is interrelation between poverty alleviation and national economic development.

In Myanmar, about 70% of the population lives in rural areas, and the majority of them live below poverty line. The National Workshop on Rural Development and Poverty Alleviation was organized from 20 to 22 May to improve the socioeconomic life of rural residents and alleviate poverty to an extent.

In the time of the previous government, the five programmes for rural development were implemented and sound foundations have been laid to a certain degree in the fields of education, health, transport, clean water supply and irrigation water supply. The workshop is designed to implement work programmes making good use of those sound foundations.

Today, times and systems are changing. Administrative systems are also changing in accordance with times. Therefore, building an economically strong nation must be at the centre of attention in the transitional period. Only with economic growth will it be possible to transform the nation into a modern and developed one. At the workshop, economists, agritourists and representatives from government departments and private organizations held talks about programmes for rural development and alleviation of poverty. The workshop adopted eight tasks for rural development and poverty alleviation. They are (a) development of agricultural productivity, (b) development of livestock breeding and fisheries, (c) development of rural small-scale productivity, (d) development of micro saving and credit associations, (e) development of cooperative tasks, (f) development of rural energy, and (g) environmental conservation.

Concerning the situations of the global economy, world countries and peoples have come daunting challenges of global financial crisis, climate changes, food security and energy supply. Myanmar is still an agro-based country, so top priority is to be given to development of agriculture and meat and fish sectors in rural areas and increasing incomes of rural populace. It is welcoming news for farmers that programmes will get underway to provide crop seeds of high-yields strains for them, to educate them about suitable advanced agricultural methods, to set up research farms, to transform their regions from conventional into mechanized farming, to provide farm subsidies, and to establish lucrative businesses and small- and medium-scale agro-based enterprises. The higher per acre yield of a crop, the more profitable it will be. To boost agricultural production, farmers should choose high-yield strains of crops and scientific methods. If so, agricultural productivity will get higher and higher and rural people can get better incomes.

Rural areas have favourable conditions for livestock breeding such as vacant lands for breeding farm animals, pastures, supplementary feedstuff and water. These advantages should be used most effectively for domestic food security and boosting production and export of meat and fish. Transport is already smooth in all regions. So, the programmes will go well. The Ministry of Livestock and Fisheries will render all types of assistance including technical support for development of the livestock and fisheries sector. In addition, commercial-scale production of meat and fish will run in suitable rural areas of Regions and States. That will create large numbers of jobs and local people get better incomes. It is therefore to step up implementation of the tasks gradually village-and-syndicate-wise.

Rural people can be divided into two groups: farmers and farm workers. Farmers are producers, and farm workers are their employees. Farm workers live on daily wages, so they need work continuously. In summer in which crops are not grown in general, there should be other types of productivity jobs for them. On average, it takes three to five months for a crop to be harvested. So, they need regular incomes in the intervals. It is therefore to ensure development of production enterprises and cottage industries in rural areas apart from agricultural farming. The government will take responsibilities to fulfill the requirements such as encouraging locals to produce marketable handicrafts and household utensils, to provide technical support on small- and medium-scale industries, and to set up manageable-scale agricultural and livestock farms.

Some urban people are among those who are living at poverty line. They are the minority of the poor, but they should be taken into account. The poor need to get daily incomes to earn their living. That calls for encouragement of other production enterprises in addition to agricultural farming. However, they lack capitals. So, it is to encourage emergence and development of private credit societies. If need be, farmers, cottage industry owners and shopkeepers can get small loans. Now, there have been some entrepreneurs and NGOs who run on their own. The government has to designate criteria for such entrepreneurs and NGOs and an organization should take responsibility supervise tasks so that they can stand as legal ones. Those organizations can not only provide loans for capitals but also fulfill fundamental requirements such as medical treatment to sick people and educating children at schools.

Rural products come not only from agricultural farms but also from small-scale agricultural and livestock farms. That is secondary source of income for rural people. Small-scale farming and production of goods are also parts of the secondary incomes. All the rural products should be delivered to consumers as soon as possible. In that regard, crops should be transported in a systematic way to avert devaluation and loss of transported crops. Therefore, goods should be transported and marketed group-wise rather than individually to avoid waste and devaluation of crops. When they win trust and reliance, the organizations should be reconstituted as village cooperative syndicates. Then, additional benefits will go to rural people.

Improvement of socioeconomic life of rural people covers the five spheres: education, health, development of human resources, transport and communications. Development of human resources rests on that of the education and health sectors. And smooth transport ensures improvement in the education and health sectors. Moreover, it is to encourage emergence and swift flow of rural goods. Therefore, transport is necessary for development of the other four sectors. Tasks for improving the socioeconomic status of rural people will be carried with contributions from ten sources — the government, banks, credit cooperative societies, foundations, entrepreneurs, NGOs, international organizations including UN, INGOs, well-wishers, social organizations and local people. So, it is fair to say that better socioeconomic status of rural people is within the touching distance.

Today, rural people still rely on natural sources for energy. For instance, they use firewood and charcoal for energy, and home-made products, wooden equipment and cattle for agriculture and transportation. The programmes the State will implement for energy supply including solar energy, hydropower, wind mill, bio-gas power, and engine power. Better energy supply to rural areas can bring benefits including cost effectiveness, swift flow of goods, and contribution towards environmental conservation along with improvement of living conditions.

Environmental conservation is largely interrelated to life of rural people. Natural forests, mountains, rivers and creeks are sources of their food. They can easily get abundant vegetables, meat and fish from those natural sources. Searching things for food from natural sources costs less, but is somewhat entertaining. However, there is a notable point that it is hard to conserve the environment individually with a sense of obligation, so there must be necessary restrictions. For example, rural energy supply must be encouraged to avoid cutting down trees indiscriminately for firewood and producing charcoal. Local people must be restricted from cutting down trees for agricultural farming, and they should be encouraged to use terrace cultivation instead of slash and burn system. Moreover, it is needed to mobilize participation of rural people in growing trees to make forests, conserving biodiversity, soil and water sources, ensuring safe water, preventing air pollution, reducing effects on climate change and production of bio-gas energy. Only then will it be possible for conservation of the environment and improving the living conditions for countrymen.

Rural people to do their bit in poverty...

Programmes in various sectors for increasing incomes of the needy contribute to poverty alleviation and boost purchasing power. Local people face many fundamental requirements but they buy the most necessary things in proportion to their incomes. So, their purchasing power will be high only if they get higher incomes.

Today, the government is paying serious attention to tasks for rural people’s poverty alleviation. It has laid down many approaches to achieve the goal. The National Workshop on Rural Development and Poverty Alleviation held in Nay Pyi Taw from 20 to 22 May passed eight tasks for rural development and poverty alleviation. At the Meeting (1/2011) of the Central Committee for Rural Development and Poverty Alleviation held on 20 June, work committees, subcommittees and Region and State and Nay Pyi Taw work committees were formed to expedite the tasks. The meeting of the Central Committee adopted the frame of the Action Plan. The term of the plan is 1 July 2011 to 31 December 2015. The Work Committee is in talk with subcommittees and State and Region committees to enable State and Region committees to lay down suitable plans.

With temperate climate patterns and fertile soil, Myanmar stood as an agricultural power in the past. It used to be the world’s leading rice exporting country. Nevertheless, farmers, ordinary class, remained poor and could not rise from the nightmare of poverty.

Now, the government is providing rural farmers with technical support and setting up enterprises systematically for boosting production of agricultural produce, meat and fish, and medium- and small-scale enterprises in rural areas to secure regular incomes. Therefore, rural farmers will soon become affluent, leaving poverty behind. Rural people on their part should take part with heart and soul in the programmes the government is implementing for rural development. Rural development and national development go together. Therefore, I would like to urge rural people to do their bit in the tasks for rural development and poverty alleviation for improving the socioeconomic status of farmers and workers who form ordinary class of the nation.

Mortar bomb used as school bell in Uganda

KAMPALA, 7 July— Anti-landmine activists in western Uganda were stunned to discover a primary school using an unexploded mortar bomb as a bell, the group's coordinator told AFP on Monday.

"It was a big shock. When we arrived at the school we even found one of the students striking it," Wilson Bwambale, coordinator of Anti-Mines Network Rwenzori, said.

Bwambale said his team visited the 350-pupil Ikobero Model primary school, one kilometre from Uganda's border with Democratic Republic of Congo, last week after being tipped off by a curious community leader.

"The bottom was hollow, that is why they used it as a bell, but the fuse at the top was still live," Bwambale said. "Fortunately no one hit it with enough (force) to explode the bomb."

Following the discovery, Bwambale said he called the shocked teachers to a meeting, where he was told that the school had been using the bomb as a bell for three years.

"We recovered it and put it in a safer place and recommended that the school look for something else that could be used as a gong," Bwambale said.—Internet

Bombardier to cut 1,400 jobs in Britain

LONDON, 7 July—Canadian train maker Bombardier is cutting more than 1,400 jobs at its plant in Derby, central England, after losing out to German group Siemens in a competition to upgrade rolling stock on the Thameslink cross-London railway.

Bombardier said it would cut 446 permanent jobs and 983 temporary jobs from its 3,000-strong Derby workforce having missed out on the Thameslink contract and completed much of its current workload, which includes supplying London Underground.

"The culmination and successful delivery of these projects and the loss of the Thameslink contract, which would have secured workload at this site, means it is inevitable that we must adjust capacity in line with economic reality," Francis Paoessa, president of the passenger division for the UK, said in a statement on Tuesday.—Reuters

Mexican woman arrested for ‘trying to sneak hubby out of prison in suitcase’

LONDON, 7 July—Mexican police have arrested a woman, who was trying to sneak her common-law-husband out of a prison in a suitcase, following a conjugal visit.

One dead, 13 injured in Dutch stadium roof collapse

ENSCHDE, (Netherlands) 7 July—The roof of a Dutch sports stadium partially collapsed during off-season construction work Thursday, killing one person and leaving 10 others hospitalized, some with severe injuries, a local mayor said.

In all, 14 people were injured when the roof at the southern end of the FC Twente stadium collapsed around midday, said Peter den Oudsten, mayor of the Dutch town of Enschede where the stadium is located.

Three people were treated at the scene, he said.

Two of hospitalized workers had serious injuries, Den Oudsten said, without elaborating. News video showed at least one construction worker, apparently bleeding from a head wound, being taken away by paramedics. Den Oudsten said sniffer dogs and cameras were being used to search for anybody else still trapped under the tangle of girders and red roof panels — the colour of FC Twente’s shirts — behind the goal at the southern end of the Grolsch Veste stadium.

The cause of the collapse was not immediately known. The construction work aimed to increase the stadium’s capacity to 30,000 from 24,000 by adding a new tier above existing seating.

FC Twente director Jan van Halst said the club “is terribly upset. Our sympathy goes to the victims.”

He appealed to supporters of the soccer team not to visit the stadium while emergency services were still at work.

The FC Twente team, which was the Dutch national champion in 2010 and runner-up last season, was training in the southern province of Zeeland at the time of the collapse.—Internet

Patient disparities seen in lung cancer drug trials

WASHINGTON, 7 July—Women, older people and minorities are under-represented in lung cancer drug trials in the United States, according to a new study. Researchers say that this could have a significant impact on the efficacy and safety of new treatments among these groups, particularly the elderly.

“Our results suggest that the trial population used for approval of drugs do not represent well the US population who may receive the marketed agent,” the study’s principal investigator, Dr Shaukan Malik, a medical officer at the US Food and Drug Administration in Silver Spring, Md, said in a news release.

“This fact is concerning particularly for older patients who may experience greater toxicity when given the same dose and combination of drugs based on testing in a younger population,” Malik explained in the release from the International Association for the Study of Lung Cancer.
Lucy the Elephant survives lightning

Lucy the Elephant is a building that has stood on the Jersey Shore for almost 130 years, survived her second lightning strike in four years almost unscathed.

Richard Helfant, head of Save Lucy, said air conditioning, computers and other electrical systems were damaged by the hit early Sunday, The Press of Atlantic City reported. But the structure of the building in Margate appeared unharmed.

In May 2007, lightning hit the howdah, the carriage on Lucy’s back. It had to be lowered to the ground for repairs and then hoisted back up at a total cost of $162,000.

Entenmann’s sorry for ‘not guilty’ tweet

The Pennsylvania makers of Entenmann’s cakes apologized for an “insensitive, albeit completely unintentional” tweet post appearing to evoke Casey Anthony.

Bimbo Bakeries, based in Horsham, apologized Tuesday for a Twitter posting under the Entenmann’s name appearing to evoke the not guilty verdict in the trial of Anthony, who was accused of killing her 2-year-old daughter, Phoenix, on Wednesday.

“Who’s not guilty about eating all the tasty treats they want?”, the offending post read.

The company quickly removed the posting and posted an apology to the Twitter account saying the person in charge of the account did not realize the connection could be made between the post and the Anthony verdict.

Bronchitis-hit Taylor Swift cancels three more shows

LOS ANGELES, 7 July—Country-pop singer Taylor Swift on Wednesday canceled three more of her US concerts due to bronchitis but said she hoped to be better for a 14 July date in Montreal.

Swift, 21, was advised by doctors not to perform at all this week. She postponed dates in Charlotte and Atlanta on 8 July, and 9 and 10 for October and November, after pulling out of a show in Louisville on 2 July.

“It’s the first time that the popular ‘Speak Now’ singer has had to postpone or cancel a show because of illness. It breaks my heart to miss out on other for a special themed segment to be broadcast on ‘Talk’ Thursday.

The segment was taped before the competition show’s contestants arrived for the season, which premieres Thursday night.

Bret Michaels lawsuit over Tonys accident moved to NY

LOS ANGELES, 7 July—Bret Michaels’ lawsuit over an accident at the 2009 Tony Awards that the singer claims nearly killed him should be heard in New York where the accident happened, a federal judge in Los Angeles has ruled.

It makes more sense for the case — which stems from Michaels being hit in the head by a set piece after performing at Radio City Music Hall — to be handled by a federal court in Manhattan, US District Judge Dolly Gee wrote in a ruling Tuesday.

The Poison frontman sued CBS Broadcasting and Tony organizers in March in Los Angeles, claiming the accident contributed to a brain hemorrhage that nearly killed him. His attorneys argued the case should be heard on the West Coast since Michaels lives in Los Angeles and Arizona, as do some witnesses, including his manager and other workers.

Museum claims to have Lincoln’s hair

The Motto Military Museum in Ohio said it has a lock of hair believed to be from Abraham Lincoln on display alongside a piece of the president’s casket.

Warren Motts, founder of the museum in Groveport, said the lock of hair was donated in 1995 by Prudy McNeer of Baltimore, Ohio, who said the artifact was formerly in the possession of her late mother, The Columbus Dispatch reported Wednesday.

“It wasn’t uncommon in those days for people to clip a lock of someone’s hair,” Motts said. “It was a piece of the person they could hang on to.”

He said the lock of hair is on display alongside a piece of the bunting from the 16th president’s casket.

motor racing-Valencia dip was just a blip, say McLaren

LONDON, 7 July—McLaren’s poor performance in Valencia was just a blip and this weekend’s British Grand Prix should see Lewis Hamilton and Jenson Button back up to speed, managing director Jonathan Neale said on Wednesday.

“We underperformed at Valencia, we didn’t really get the car dialed in properly,” he told reporters on a conference call when asked about the 26 June Eu-

“Europe Grand Prix.

“I don’t think we delivered to our full potential there, and therefore I’m certain regarding it as a blip. “We understand the reasons why, and we’ve done something about it,” he added.

Hamilton and Button, both past world champions, were fourth and sixth respectively in Valencia while Red Bull’s Sebastian Vettel ran untroubled to his sixth win in eight races.—INTERNET

It will be the second time in the last four years that Woods has missed two majors in one season.

Six forest fires remain active in Russia’s Far East

VLADIVOSTOK, 7 July—Firefighters and rescuers have extinguished three forest fires in Russia’s Far East in the past 24 hours and are still battling another six blazes, the regional emergencies ministry said Thursday.

“As of 8:00 local time on Thursday (2100 GMT Wednesday) six forest fires continue raging in the Far East covering an area of 4.09 hectares,” a spokesman said.

Forest fires are common in Russia during the dry and hot summers.

The Russian government has fought wild fires for months this year to prevent a repeat of last year’s tragedy of massive casualties and a halt to grain exports.

Report: tabloid’s hacker targeted dead soldiers

LONDON, 7 July—A published report says that the telephone numbers of relatives of dead military personnel have been found in files amassed by a detective employed by a Sunday tabloid newspaper.

The Daily Telegraph’s report in Thursday’s edition could not be independently verified, and the newspaper did not identify the source of its information.

There was no indication whether any of those telephones had been hacked. The BBC reported that relatives of some soldiers say they have not been contacted by police, but that a newspaper had asked them about possible hacking.

NAY PYI TAW, 7 July—The Myanmar Gems Emporium Central Committee continued the Jade, Gems and Pearl Special Sales 2011 at Mani Yadana Jade Hall near Myanma Gems Museum, here, this morning.

Gem merchants viewed jade lots and put tender proposals into the tender boxes.

Today, 2570 lots of jade were sold through tender.

The information, communication, health and other subcommittees are carrying out their respective sectors systematically.

The subcommittees are providing necessary assistance to the local and foreign gem merchants for their convenience at the special sales.

Colon cancer deaths down except in Mississippi

ATLANTA, 7 July—Colon cancer deaths continue to drop across America — except in Mississippi, health officials said Tuesday.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention issued a report that echoes earlier findings of a national decline in colon cancer deaths. Rates fell by as much as 5 and 6 percent in a few states — Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

Mississippi was the only state that saw no real decline, according to the CDC report.

“The big picture is screenings are up, death rates are down, and even more progress is possible,” said the CDC’s director, Dr. Thomas Frieden.

From 2003 to 2007, the colon and rectal cancer death rate in the U.S. fell from 19 to 17 per 100,000 people. That represents nearly 32,000 fewer deaths, the CDC found. — Internet
