Indonesian storm death toll rises to 14

JAKARTA, 29 Jan—The death toll from heavy rains and strong winds in Indonesia has risen to 14, an official said Sunday, with the victims of a tropical cyclone crushed by falling trees.

A policeman at a scene where a driver was fatally crushed by a falling tree in Jakarta on 25 Jan. The death toll from heavy rains and strong winds in Indonesia has risen to 14, an official said Sunday, with the victims of a tropical cyclone crushed by falling trees.

In total, 14 people died, 60 people were injured, National Disaster Management Agency spokesman Sutopo Purwo Nugroho said.

The 14 killed were crushed by falling trees, he added.

More than 2,300 houses in 35 districts and cities across the central island of Java and in the south of Bali, were damaged due to heavy rains in the last four days, Nugroho said.

“The 14 massive rainstorms were brought about by Tropical Cyclone Iggy in the Indian Ocean, south of Bali and the nearby Nusa Tenggara islands, he added.

But now the Tropical Cyclone Iggy has weakened and it’s moving away from Indonesia,” he added.

Last week, The Jakarta Globe newspaper reported a ferry carrying more than 200 people, including five Australians, heading to the Gili islands off Bali nearly capsized after being caught in winds up to three metres (10 feet) high, but there were no casualties.

Britain calls for NATO to stick to 2014 Afghan pullout

LONDON, 29 Jan— Prime Minister David Cameron warned on Saturday against withdrawing troops from Afghanistan too fast, after France said it would pull out a year before the international deadline of 2014. Speaking at a Press conference with Afghan President Hamid Karzai, who was visiting London, Cameron said the speed of the NATO drawdown should depend on security conditions on the ground.

“Obviously, between now and 2014 there will be the opportunities for different countries to reduce their troop numbers. Britain has reduced our troop numbers over the last year,” Cameron said.

“I don’t want to see some of our troops depend on the transition to Afghan control in the different parts of Afghanistan. “And that should be the same for all of the members of NATO who are all contributing and helping to a strong, stable and peaceful Afghanistan, which is in all our interests.”

Britain has around 9,500 troops in Afghanistan, the second largest contingent after the United States.

This comments appeared to be a rebuke to French President Nicolas Sarkozy, who said Friday that France would pull its forces out of Afghanistan in 2013. Sarkozy’s decision followed the killing earlier of four French servicemen by a renegade Afghan soldier. —Internet

50 more militiants surrender in Baghlan, Afghanistan

PUL-E-KHUMRI, 29 Jan— Fifty more militiants surrendered to the government in the northern Afghan province of Baghlan, a provincial police source said on Sunday.

A total of 50 anti-government militiants, including several group commanders, have surrendered violence and joined the government in Baghlan-e-Maraki District late on Saturday, provincial police chief of Baghlan, Asadullah Shirzad, told Xinhua on Sunday morning.

He said the former group of militiants belonged to Hizb-i-Islami, Hizb-i-Islami, with Gulbadin Hekmatyar as its leader, is the second largest militant group fighting the government. With these people joining the peace process, the security situation will be further improved in Baghlan Province, police chief Shirzad said, adding with the mediation of local elders, more militiants would give up militancy and join the peace process in near future. Police chief Shirzad also said most of them had taken part in the majority of them Taleban, had joined the peace process in the province, some 160 km north of Kabul over the past couple of days. —Xinhua

Iran to continue confidence-building measures in cooperation with IAEA

Tehran, 29 Jan—An Iranian lawmaker said on Saturday that Iran will continue its confidence-building measures in cooperation with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), the official IRNA news agency reported.

Mehdi Medizadeh, member of Iran’s Majlis (parliament) National Security and Foreign Policy Commission, said that the confidence-building measures will be the main subject of talks between Iran and the IAEA, said the report.

Iran will announce again that its nuclear activities are “peaceful” and Iran does not intend to produce nuclear weapons, Medizadeh was quoted as saying.

A high-ranking delegation of the UN nuclear watchdog will visit Iran on 29-31 Jan. Last November, the board of the IAEA adopted a resolution on Iran’s disputed nuclear programme, calling for intensified dialogue to find solutions to unresolved issues.

However, Iranian officials have since been stressing that the IAEA resolution will not stop the country’s nuclear programme. —Xinhua

Bed-wetting may be due to constipation

Winston-Salem, 29 Jan—
Bed-wetting isn’t always due to a bladder issue—constipation is often the culprit—US researchers found. Dr Steve J Hodges, assistant professor of urology at Wake Forest Baptist Medical Centre in Winston-Salem, NC, and lead author of the study, said bed-wetters should be examined for constipation. If it turns out that is the problem, children and their parents might avoid an unnecessarily long, costly and difficult quest to cure nighttime wetting.
The study, published in the journal Urology, found the 30 children and adolescents who sought treatment for bed-wetting all had large amounts of stool in their rectums, despite the majority having normal bowel habits. After treatment with laxative therapy, 83 percent of the study participants were cured of bed-wetting within three months. “Our study showed that a large percentage of these children were cured of nighttime wetting after laxative therapy,” Hodges said in a statement. “Parents try all sorts of things to treat bed-wetting—from alarams to restricting liquids. In many children, the reason they don’t work is that constipation is the problem.” The importance of diagnosing this condition cannot be overstated, Hodges said.

When it is missed, children might be subjected to unnecessary surgery and the side effects of medications,” Hodges said. “We challenge physicians considering medications or surgery as treatment for bed-wetting to obtain an X-ray or ultrasound first.”

Health Tip: Manage pain during childbirth

Pain is a virtual certainty during childbirth, but there are ways to make the discomfort without medication bearable.
The womenshealth.gov website mentions these no-medication possibilities:

- Practicing relaxation and breathing techniques.
- Relaxing in a warm shower or bath, or getting a gentle massage.
- Receiving hot and cold therapy, including placing a cool washcloth on the forehead or a heating pad on the lower back.
- Seeking the care and support of a doula, nurse or loved one.
- Trying various positions to get more comfortable, from crouching to walking.
- Listening to soothing music.
- Using a labour ball.

IMF leads global push for euro zone to boost firewall

DAVOS, 29 Jan—International Monetary Fund chief Christine Lagarde led a global push on Saturday for the euro zone to boost its financial firewall, saying “if it is big enough it will not get.”
Lagarde, supported by the British Finance Minister, George Osborne, said the IMF could boost its support for the euro zone that pressed its leaders to act first. Some attendees at the Davos Forum still pressed its leaders to commit additional resources to the IMF, which this month requested an additional 500 billion euros ($650 billion) in funding. “Now is the time—there has been a lot of pressure building in order to see a solution come about,” Lagarde told a Forum panel discussion on the economic outlook from the lower back.

“It is critical that the euro zone members develop a clear, simple firewall that can operate both to limit the contagion and to provide this safety of the firewall, to ensure that the financial needs of that zone can actually be met,” she said.
Lagarde’s comments rounded out a crescendo of calls at the Davos Forum for the euro zone to boost its financial defences. The annual five-day conference began with German Chancellor Angela Merkel deflecting pressure to do so. In a carefully worded keynote address, Merkel suggested doubling or even tripling the size of the fund may convince markets for a firewall, saying “if it is big enough it will not get.”

“Eventually, may convince markets for a firewall,” Merkel said.

“Market leaders will do so if it is big enough, if it is credible,” she said.

The IMF leads global push for euro zone to boost firewall

Davos, 29 Jan—The break-up of Switzerland’s oldest bank Wegelin on Friday shows the need to set up a durable firewall to boost confidence in such institutions, Lagarde said. “This development shows how important it is that we come to solutions in the discussions,” the finance minister said.

The US Department of Justice is probing 11 Swiss banks, including Credit Suisse, Julius Baer and Bader Kantonalbank.

S Korean conglomerates pull out from food business amid criticism

SEOUL, 29 Jan—Amid mounting public criticism over their aggressive business expansion, South Korea’s family-owned conglomerates, or chaebol, are making a series of announcements of their withdrawal from food business, involving bakeries, coffee shops, and street snacks.
It has been a popular trend among some of the country’s big-name conglomerates, such as Hyundai and LG, to wade into such territory traditionally occupied by mom-and-pop stores. Their rapid advancement into bakeries and street foods has been blamed for putting small, individually-owned businesses out of work.
The number of bakeries operated by self-employed individuals dropped from about 18,000 in 2003 to around 4,000 late last year, according to the Korea Federation of Small and Medium Business.
In sharp contrast, Paris Baguette, the country’s leading bakery chain run by SPC Group, a food and confectionary giant, saw its number soar to more than 3,000 nationwide late last year, about 300 of which were opened last year alone.

On Wednesday, South Korean President Lee Myung-bak lashed out at the sprawling business expansion promoted by a sleuth of chaebol of “Second-generation or third-generation chaebol may be running the business as a pastime, but it is a matter of survival for ordinary people who operate bakeries,” Lee was quoted as saying by his aides in a meeting with senior secretaries. Snowy owls soar south from Arctic in rare mass migration

SALEM, Idaho 29 Jan—Bird enthusiasts are reporting rising numbers of snowy owls from the Arctic winging into the lower 48 states this winter in a mass southern migration that a leading owl researcher called “unbelievable.”

Thousands of the snow-white birds, which stand 2 feet tall with 5-foot wing spans, have been spotted from coast to coast, feeding in farmlands in Idaho, roosting on rooftops in Montana, gliding over golf courses in Missouri and soaring over shorelines in Massachusetts. A certain number of the iconic owls fly south from their Arctic breeding grounds each winter but rarely do so many venture so far away even amid wide-scale, periodic southern migrations known as irruptions.

“What we’re seeing now—it’s unbelievable,” said Denver Holt, head of the Owl Research Institute in Montana.

This is the most significant wildlife event in decades, added Holt, who has studied snowy owls in their Arctic tundra ecosystem for two decades.

Holt and other owl experts say the phenomenon is likely linked to lemmings, a rodent that accounts for 90 percent of the diet of snowy owls during breeding months that stretch from May into September. The largely nocturnal birds also prey on a host of other animals, from voles to geese.

An especially plentiful supply of lemmings last season likely led to a population boom among owls that resulted in millions being offered every winter by the booming bird population may have then driven mostly younger, male owls much farther south than normal. Research on the animals is scarce because of the remote and extreme conditions of the terrain the owls occupy, including northern Russia and Scandinavia, he said.

The surge in snowy owl sightings has brought birders flocking from Texas, Arizona and Utah to the Northern Rockies and Pacific Northwest, pouring tourist dollars into local economies and crowding parks and wildlife areas. The irruption has triggered widespread public fascination that appears to span ages and interests.

Russian cargo vessel arrives at space station

MOSCOW, 29 Jan—A Russian cargo vessel docked safely at the International Space Station on Saturday, carrying mainly water and fuel, the mission control centre said. The Progress M-14M spacecraft was launched from the Baikonur cosmodrome in Kazakhstan early Thursday and arrived at its destination at 0008 GMT, it said in a statement. There are six men aboard the orbiting space station; three Russians, two Americans and a Dutchman.

Russia has sole responsibility for taking US and other international crew members to the ISS following the withdrawal of the US space shuttle in July last year, but its own space programme has been hit by a string of problems. In 2011, the Russian space industry suffered five failed launches.

South African scientists invent bone reconstruction device

CAPE TOWN, 29 Jan—Researchers at the University of Cape Town (UCT) have developed a new device to bring back the smiles to people with upper jaw abnormalities, a news report said on Saturday.

The device, invented by Maxillo-facial surgeon Rushdi Hendricks with two mechanical engineers, is a plate-guided distractor which can help grow new bone in the upper jaw, according to the South African Press Association. Hendricks described the device as superior in treating jaw problems. “I am growing bone as well as bone lining. Not only that; I’m also concentrating on your smile; on the aesthetics, the way the teeth are going to sit in your mouth,” he said.

The device works like a hose clamp made to work as a claw on a track. As the bone grows, the hose clamp is moved to allow the bone to extend.

The principle behind the invention was that new bone and tissue developed to fill the gap when a carefully severed bone was pulled apart, said the report.

A similar method for regrowing the lower jaw—distraction osteogenesis—was already in use. However, it was believed that Hendricks and his team were the first to use it on the more complex upper jaw, the report said.

Kinect technology is heading to laptops

SARASOTA, 29 Jan—According to a recent report from The Daily, Microsoft is working manufacturers third-party manufacturers on prototypes of laptops utilizing a built-in Kinect sensor. Microsoft has already discussed desktops that include Kinect functions while at CES this year, but this is the first mention of the motion controller in a portable solution. The prototypes appeared to be ASUS netbooks and they were already running Windows 8, likely to use motion navigation within the metro style version of the operating system.

The potential to release cross-platform, Kinect-enabled games seems like the most obvious use of the technology. However, a smaller, mobile version of the Kinect sensor would need to focus the sensitivity range to a much smaller area in order to work correctly with a typical 15-inch laptop screen. In addition, light sensitivity could be a problem for users that like to sit outdoors while on a laptop. Beyond games, the opportunity for disabled users to utilize gesture and voice control in a portable solution would be excellent.

Using Kinect controls to operate actions within Windows Media Centre could also be interesting. Microsoft started encouraging developers to experiment with the Kinect technology hardware after opening up the KinectSDK during June 2011 and seeks to roll out Kinect-enabled desktops before the end of the year. According to speculation from The Daily, Microsoft is only offering licensing for the Kinect technology manufacturers rather than building a solution in-house. —INTERNET

British police arrest five in tabloid bribery probe

London, 29 Jan—The criminal investigation into British tabloid skullduggery turned full force on Monday when Rupert Murdoch publication Saturday, with the arrest of four current and former employees of Gerry XL, the Times on suspicion of bribing police.

A serving police officer was also held, and authorities searched the newspaper’s offices as part of an investigation into illegal payments for information.

The arrests spread the scandal of British tabloid wrongdoing — which has already shut down one Murdoch paper, the News of the World — to Britain’s best-selling newspaper.

London police said two men aged 48 and one aged 56 were arrested on suspicion of corruption early in the morning at homes and in around London. A 42-year-old man was detained later at a London hotel.

Murdoch’s News Corp. confirmed that all four were current or former Sun editors. The BBC and other British media identified them as former managing editor Graham Dudman, former deputy editor Fergus Shanahan, current head of the paper Chris Parro and crime editor Mike Sullivan.

A fifth man, a 29-year-old police officer, was arrested at the London station where he works.

Officers searched the newspaper’s offices in Vauxhall to recover payments to police officers.

A news camera filmed the arrest of the paper’s managing editor, Joel Cawaki, who was seen being led away by police officers.

Cawaki, who was working on the paper’s London desk, was arrested on suspicion of conspiracy to corrupt. He is the first editor to be arrested in the investigation.

The investigation into Murdoch’s News of the World has been ongoing for several months, with the company facing allegations of illegal payments to police and other authorities.

The arrests come amid growing concerns about the widespread use of illegal payments in the British media industry. The investigation has already led to the closure of the News of the World and the arrests of top editors at other newspapers.

Sri Lanka records high number of road accidents

Colombo, 29 Jan—Sri Lanka has recorded an increase in the number of road accidents so far this year with 155 people killed, the police said on Sunday. Police Spokesman Ajith Rohana said that 17 people were killed in separate road accidents within the span of 24 hours between Saturday morning and Sunday morning.

He said that drivers and pedestrians ignoring road rules were blamed for the increase in the number of road accidents.

The police added that almost all the accidents reported in Sri Lanka over the 24 hour period ending on Sunday morning was outside capital Colombo. Rohana said that 15 accidents had occurred during that period and among those killed were two teenagers, aged 16 and 17, when the motorbikes they were riding collided with each other.

Last year, the Sri Lankan motor traffic department said that it was giving local police the right to cancel the driving license of reckless drivers. The Sri Lankan government also made it mandatory for drivers and front seat passengers of motor vehicles to wear seat belts.

Doctors at the state hospital in the capital had said that they got some 200 to 300 road accident victims being admitted for treatment every week.

Rain predicted to lash Fiji’s northern division

Suva, 29 Jan—The rain and floods are moving to Fiji’s Northern Division, leaving the island nation’s government worried about costs of damages. Visitors, tourists and Fijians are being warned to be careful as another flash flood warning is now in place for another part of Fiji — Vatukoula Levu (island) as confirmed by the Nadi Weather Office on Sunday.

The forecast for Tuesday by Fiji Meteorological Service was that the weather condition in the Northern Division is expected to worsen on Sunday night. Prakash said the adverse weather condition was due to a low pressure system moving over the Fiji’s North.

He said the low pressure system will start affecting Northern Division either Sunday or Monday. However, he said there was also a low pressure system coming in from Vamatusu and anticipated to intensify by Tuesday. In addition there is also an active convergence zone with rain affected areas that will affect the north of Fiji from Tuesday. The Western Division should also anticipate heavy rain from Monday. This after they have lost over 30 million worth of damage reported so far from the flood affected areas between Nabogadro and Commune Western Commander Joeli Cawaki says the figures are expected to rise as their officials have not been able to reach some areas as estimates reported so far from the flood affected areas.

The flood survivors rebuild in Philippine danger zones

MANILA, 29 Jan—Less than six weeks after killer floods swept away their slums homes along a Philippine river, Lydia Abulanda and her neighbours are rebuilding despite warnings disaster could strike again.

In a poverty-driven tale repeated with depressing frequency across the storm-plagued Southeast Asian nation, Abulanda said they had no other option but to take their chances again in the danger zone.

Governments officials said that 1,268 people were killed in the storm, but the total number of fatalities may never be known as entire families were washed away, leaving no survivors in unofficial slum areas to report the deaths.

Italian financial police scuba divers sale around the grounded cruise ship Costa Concordia off the Tuscan island of Giglio, Italy, on 27 Jan. The Concordia ran aground on 13 Jan off the port of the island of Giglio after the captain deviated from his planned route and crashed the hull of the ship on a reef. Some 4,200 passengers and crew endured a panicked evacuation after the abandoned ship alarm didn’t sound until the ship had capsized so much that some life boats couldn’t be lowered.

Some 16 people remain unaccounted for and are presumed missing.

On Saturday, the body found on the ship’s deck on 28 Jan is officially identified as(requested) Erika Soria Molina, 25, of Peru by Doris Sotomayor, Peru’s consul general in Florence, Italy, on 28 Jan. She said the Associated Press that the body was found in a submerged part of the deck.

Soria, who was wearing a service uniform, studied tourism in Peru and was born in the Andean city of Cuzco, southeast of Lima. The removal of the fuel aboard the Concordia is a key concern since the seas around Giglio form part of a protected marine sanctuary and are a favorite destination for scuba divers. So far, no leakage has been detected.

Dutch shipwreck salvage firm Summerwalt has been contracted by the Concordia’s owner Costa Crociere SpA, a unit of Mediterranean-based Carnival Corp, to remove the fuel. Summerwalt has made the necessary preparations to begin pumping out fuel from six outer tanks that hold more than half of the 500,000 gallons of fuel oil that are aboard the ship.

Drivers of the Concordia reportedly ran aground around 1am Saturday after the captain deviated from his planned route and crashed the hull of the ship on the reef near a marine sanctuary and is a favorite destination for scuba divers. Before that, the ship’s alarm didn’t sound until the ship had capsized so much that some life boats couldn’t be lowered.

Three killed in Sacramento SUV-light rail train crash

SACRAMENTO, 29 Jan—The driver of an SUV veered around a crossing arm and ignored flashing warning lights before the vehicle was struck by a light rail train in Sacramento on Saturday, killing an infant and two adults, authorities said.

The other person inside the Nissan Pathfinder, a woman in her 30s, was taken to a local hospital with serious injuries, said Nikol King, assistant chief with the Sacramento Fire Department. Six of the roughly 50 passengers on the light rail train suffered minor injuries and were taken to a hospital, he said.

King and a spokeswoman for the transit line said video from a camera at the crossing clearly shows the SUV driving around the crossing arm. The light rail followed two Union Pacific freight trains, which use separate tracks, and the arms had remained down during the interval, said Alane Masui, spokeswoman for the Sacramento Regional Transit District.

“They were down after the UP trains and before the (light rail) train approached, so the crossing arms were properly working,” she said.

She said the length of time between the freight trains clearing the intersection and the light rail train crossing it had not yet been determined and would be part of the investigation. Investigators also were reviewing video from a camera mounted on the light rail train.

The collision, in a working class neighbourhood south of downtown, occurred shortly after 4 pm and pushed the Pathfinder about 30 yards from the point of impact.

“All I heard was a big bang, and I saw a light-rail train heading south with a big truck smashed on it,” said Ravi Pratap, 42, of Davis, whose car was among those waiting for the train at the rail crossing, on the opposite side of the tracks from the Pathfinder.

Indian police arrest five Bangladeshi pirates in Bay of Bengal

NEW DELHI, 29 Jan—Indian police said on Saturday that they had arrested five Bangladeshi pirates who were captured by a group of fishermen in the Bay of Bengal off the coast of eastern Indian state of West Bengal on Friday.

“We have arrested the pirates who had been handed over to us by some fishermen who captured them when the sea robbers intercepted three trawlers off Kenduakhali area in the Bay of Bengal with an aim to rob them,” a police official said on condition of anonymity.

The incident took place Friday morning when a group of eight Bangladeshi pirates came in a motorized boat and attacked the three of the trawlers and fired at the Indian fishermen, killing three fishermen and injuring 10 others.

However, after a scuffle, the Indian fishermen managed to capture the eight pirates, but three of them jumped into the waters and escaped, the official said.—Xinhua

Somalia journalist shot dead in capital

MOGADISHU, 29 Jan—A producer at a Somali radio station says gunman shot dead the station’s director in the chaotic capital, Mogadishu.

Mu’awiye Ahmed Mudey, a producer at Shabile radio, said unidentified gunmen killed Hassan Osman Abdi on Saturday. He was on his way home. The 29-year-old father of three worked at the station for three years.

Attacks on journalists are common in war-ravaged Somalia. Two journalists were killed last year, and there have been numerous attacks in the northern semi-autonomous region of Puntland.

Emergency declared in 13 Serbian areas due to heavy snow

BELGRADE, 29 Jan—A state of emergency has been declared in 13 Serbian municipalities, buried under a thick blanket of snow after days of constant snowfall, reported Radio Television Serbia (RTS) on Saturday.

The Serbian Army has been summoned to clear roads with transmission lines inaccessible.

Residents of a village near Babunica, near the Bulgarian border, where snow drifts over one meter have made it inaccessible.

The most critical areas are along a swath of territory stretching from near the Montenegro border eastward to Bulgaria, with Nova Varos, Prpajpali and Ivanjica hardest hit. Many villages have also been without electricity for days, with transmission lines downed by heavy snow and strong winds.

Members of Serbia’s Ski Service helped evacuate residents of a village near Burs, not far from Serbia’s most notable ski destination on Kopanik, which has recorded more than 134 centimeters of snow this season.

According to Predrag Maric, head of emergency services, it will take days of cleanup to be able to reach many of the snowbound villages.

Body found as bad weather delays liner fuel pumping

ROMA, 29 Jan—Heavy weather forced salvagers to suspend pumping thousands of tonnes of fuel from the wrecked Costa Concordia liner Saturday, though recovery operations continued and divers found another body. With waves reaching more than one metre (over three feet) in height, technicians from the Dutch salvage company Smit and Italy’s Neri said it was too dangerous to start siphoning off an estimated 2,380 tonnes of fuel from the tanks of the Concordia, which ran aground 13 January.

Salvage workers on Friday attached valves to six of the stricken vessel’s 23 tanks as part of the first phase of operations. It was unclear how long the delay would last, with weather forecasts showing worsening conditions Sunday.

Once they start, pumping operations are expected to take several weeks. Many in the region are concerned about fuel leaks from the ship into the area’s popular recreation waters, saying a spill would be environmentally disastrous in one of Europe’s biggest marine parks. Despite rough weather, recovery work continued and divers pulled the body of another victim from a submerged deck on the stricken ship.

She was not immediately identified. Italy’s civil defence organisation said the woman was discovered on deck six in the damaged part of the vessel.

The Costa Concordia ran aground on rocks with some 4,200 people aboard and is lying on its side off the Tuscan island of Giglio. Fifteen people remain missing.

Authorities on Saturday said another woman, whose identity had not previously been released, was German passenger Inge Schall.

Of the 17 bodies found, 15 have now been identified. They are: five Germans, four French people, three Italians, a Hungarian, a Spaniard and a Peruvian.

On Friday, six Costa Concordia passengers sued parent company Carnival Cruise Lines in Miami, demanding compensation totaling $460 million. It’s one of many to likely be a slew of lawsuits against the cruise firm, and several consumer associations have already announced their intention to bring a class action case.

Holiday firecrackers kill one, injure 200 in Beijing

BEIJING, 29 Jan—Firecrackers lit by Beijing residents to celebrate the Chinese new year killed one person and injured more than 200 others in the Chinese capital during the past seven-day holiday, the government reported on Saturday.

The holiday firecracker casualties this year, however, were down nearly 50 percent from a year earlier, according to the municipal health bureau.

Nine of the injured remain hospitalized, the bureau said, without revealing any detail about the only fatality.

Setting off firecrackers was believed to be an effective way to dispel misfortune and evils in ancient times, and thus became a must for the Chinese during major festivals and celebrations.

However, safety hazards caused by firecrackers were a major concern in China in the late 1980s, and 282 cities banned them successively in the 1990s, resulting in controversies as some complained that the centuries-old tradition would disappear if the ban continued. People also complained that there had been a loss of festivity without the bangs of firecrackers.

Following suit with other cities, the Beijing municipal government lifted its 12-year ban on firecrackers in December 2005, but still restricts the locations and timing for igniting firecrackers.

Last year, urban residents in Beijing left 183.7 tonnes of paper scraps from firecrackers set off during the holiday, prompting authorities to mobilize more than 5,000 sweepers to keep the streets clean, government officials earlier said.—Xinhua
Yangon-Mandalay Highway links whole Myanmar

Construction of Yangon-Mandalay Highway (Nay Pyi Taw- Yangon section) began in April, 2005 and finished by 25 March, 2009. The route from Yangon No. 3 Junction to Nay Pyi Taw Junction is 202 miles and one furlong long and is of about-four-hour drive.

Construction of Nay Pyi Taw-Mandalay section started on 10 October, 2005 and completed by 29 December, 2010. It takes three hours from Nay Pyi Taw to Mandala, 150 miles and five furlongs long route.

Construction of Sagar-in-TadaU-Dagundine section of Yangon-Mandalay Highway was put into operation on 1 January, 2011 and the road section was opened on 23 December, 2011. It is of 13 miles and five furlongs long section.

The thickness of the concrete highway is 18 inches. There are a total of 172 bridges small or large on the highway. The concreting work was carried out with labour and machine power and liquid chemicals were used where necessary to enhance the road resistance.

The highway is of four-lane one, allowing two-way traffic, 100 feet in total width. It was built by Public Works under the Ministry of Construction with the assistance of Directorate of Military Engineers of the Ministry of Defence. Five computerized toll gates are opened on the road.

A total of 884 culvert boxes were built in to ensure separation of traffic and roadside safety and 75 under passes and three rest camps for communication between villages near the highway. Restaurants, automobile workshop, petrol-filling station, car parking and police station were also built on the highway.

It lies between Middle Yoma Mountain Ranges (Bago Mountain Ranges) and East Yoma Mountain Ranges (Shan Mountain Ranges). The highway is latest communication link added to old Yangon-Mandalay motor road, Yangon-Mandalay railroad, Pyinmana-Taungdwingyi-Kyaupadaung railroad and Pyinmana-Pinlaung motor road, connecting Nay Pyi Taw with regions and states.

It is a pride of people across the nation and of the locals as well. In addition, it is greatly beneficial to economic, health, education, social development of the region apart from social and economic cohesion.

The first and foremost advantage of the highway is of course shortened travel time and it is expected to bring more visible benefits for economy, trade, social affairs and health of the region.

In a short time, Nay Pyi Taw and regions and states can communicate with each other in all aspects thanks to the advent of the highway, which will contribute a great deal to solidification of Union Spirit and national consolidation.

To grab the golden opportunity

With much interest, I read the editorial of the New Light of Myanmar (NLM, 9 January, 2012) under the heading of “Role of ICE in Youths”. The perspectives urged the youths to acquire ICE—Internet, Computer and English language. I have noticed that every now and then, the NLM carries some editorials and articles that broaden the scope of the young. And I also noticed that gradual reforms the paper is carrying out. Whatever it may be, all sorts of the news times attract the readers especially those who cannot have easy access to the Internet.

To be frank, I am not able to watch the screen of the computer for a long time due to my old age and poor eyesight. Although the Internet is within our reach, I am staying away from it. Sometimes, e-mail, g-mail, blog, Facebook, twitter and so on. However, I am still using my old typewriter for writing. Because of the NLM, I am able to keep pace with the changing world. This is what I take off my hat to the NLM and I think some senior citizens like me will follow suit.

At the same time, I envy the youths who are well-versed in computer science.

Today, the computer, the telephone and the television are no longer separate tools. They are linked together. In the near future, our youths and even our children can have easy access to even supercomputers to perform calculations as fast as the current technology allows and to solve extremely complex problems. They know very well how to use the Internet which provides huge amounts of information from thousands of places.

To be objective, youths and children of today are lucky enough to live a modern life that seemed to be a dream world for us in the past.

No one can deny that our modern world is changing at an enormous rate. New things appear. Old ones gradually disappear. Slide rules make way for electronic calculations. Toys make way for video games. And notebooks give way to personal computers.

Only young people can handle their accelerated changes. We of the older generation can only stand back and stare in astonishment and incomprehension. The young are like empty cups taking in as information as the outside world can give them. The old are like full cups that cannot take in anymore.

Generally, there have been advances in all spheres of human endeavours in all countries regardless of region or size. There are also instances of less achievement, especially where the have-nots are concerned. We can see that since the past decades, there have been advances in Information and Communication Technology (ICT) with the galloping strides made by the Internet.

The invention of communication satellites now allows us to witness any event around the globe at the touch of a switch. The speed at which information is transferred is unprecedented in history. Those who have access to them as well as those who still need to have them know fully well the rewards of the latest modes of communication.

The impact of this improved communication on our lives are great indeed. We are not only better informed of current events all over the world but we are also exposed to multitude of different cultures and ways of life. Never before did we have to face such a huge onslaught of information.

As a matter of fact, this century, and especially these last few decades, witnessed the tremendous strides made in electronic technology. The youths of today, beginning with those in primary grades, are more fortunate than those of the past for their education in consonance with the national character.

As far as the ICE is concerned, we the older generation are fully satisfied with the way our youths do for the first and second letters “IC” (Internet and Computer). However, as far as the last letter “E” for English language, we cannot say that all of the youths are well-versed in English. As long as youths are not good at the tree letters “ICE”, highly-qualified human resources development cannot be vividly achieved. Likewise, a constant learning society will not be materialized as we expect.

Today, English classes both spoken and written conducted by private or governmental work establishments are mushrooming. Audiovisual equipment we had never seen in our schooldays of the past is abundant in the surroundings of the young. Youth of today should grab the golden opportunity to improve their capabilities.
Japan, Russia to boost economic, security ties

Tokyo, 29 Jan—The foreign ministers of Japan and Russia agreed on Saturday to strengthen economic and security cooperation but made no progress on resolving a long-standing territorial dispute over islands off northeastern Japan.

Foreign Minister Koichiro Gemba and visiting Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov said the two countries needed to address the territorial row in a calm manner. The dispute over the islands — called the southern Kurils in Russia and the Northern Territories in Japan — has kept the two nations from forging a peace treaty officially ending their World War II hostilities, a problem Gemba said needs to be rectified.

Both men sought to downplay the dispute and focus on ways the two nations could expand their ties. “As the security situation in the Asia-Pacific undergoes major changes, the Japan-Russia relationship has taken on new importance,” Gemba said at a joint Press conference that followed what he called a “fruitful” two-hour meeting.

“We reaffirmed that we want to strengthen our cooperation in security, defence and economic matters, particularly energy modernization,” he added.

Lavrov welcomed the increased trade between the two nations, which last year grew to 2.45 trillion yen ($31 billion). While the two sides didn’t announce any specific energy projects, they did sign a procedure to simplify visa procedures in an effort to boost visitors and business interaction, particularly from Japan to Russia.

Ties between Japan and Russia soured in late 2010 when President Dmitry Medvedev became the first Russian president to visit the disputed islands, which are located off the northeastern coast of Hokkaido.

They were seized by Soviet troops in the closing days of the war, but Japan claims they are part of its territory. The islands are surrounded by rich fishing grounds and are believed to have oil, natural gas and mineral deposits.

“Resolving this problem and concluding a peace treaty is more necessary than ever,” Gemba said. “But unfortunately, our positions are different. We hope to resolve this through dialogue.”

Lavrov said tackling the matter would have to wait until a new leader is chosen in Russia’s presidential election on April 4, but added that he wants to seek a way “to resolve the dispute in a way that’s acceptable to both sides.”

85 homes to flood-hit Pakistan

Ankara, 29 Jan—Turkey’s Humanitarian Aid Foundation (IHH) has donated a total of 85 homes to Pakistan’s flood-stricken city of Muzaffargarh, the semi-official Anadolu news agency reported on Saturday.

Each home donated in Muzaffargarh has two rooms, a kitchen and a bathroom; IHH’s Bursa chief Huseyn Kaptan was quoted as saying at a Press conference held in Turkey’s northwestern Bursa Province.

Kaptan said that the IHH are trying to provide aid in all corners of the world so that justice and brotherhood could prevail across the globe.

In August 2010, more than 160,000 people received the United Nations’ emergency shelter and relief assistance in flood-affected areas in Pakistan, as the organization launched an initial 41 million-US dollar appeal to meet the needs of more than 560,000 people affected by the disaster, according to the UN High Commissioner for Refugees, which aimed to help 80,000 families.

Colicky Edinburgh Zoo pandas removed from display

London, 29 Jan—Two giant pandas on loan to a Scottish zoo have been removed from display while being treated for colic.

Edinburgh Zoo officials say female panda Tian Tian was treated by a veterinarian for the illness on Saturday, just as her male companion Yang Guang is recovering from a bout diagnosed earlier this month. Officials say the illness is not serious, but can cause discomfort and requires medication.

The zoo said Tian Tian would be allowed “to relax privately away from public view” over the weekend.

Edinburgh Zoo officials say male panda Yang Guang is expected to be back on view on Monday.

The 8-year-old pair are the first pandas to live in Britain in nearly two decades. They arrived from China in December and are expected to draw huge crowds of visitors to the zoo.

Just one aspect of an epic battle over Canada’s oil ambitions — a battle that already has a supporting role in the US presidential election, and which will help to shape North America’s future energy relationship with China.

It is actually a tale of two pipelines — the one that is supposed to end at Kitimat Village, and another that would have gone from Alberta to the Texas coast but was blocked by the Obama administration citing environmental grounds.

Those same environmental issues are certain to haunt Northern Gateway as the Joint Review Panel of energy and environmental officials canvasses opinion along the 1,177-kilometer (731-mile) route of the Northern Gateway pipeline to be built by Enbridge, a Canadian company.

The fear of oil spills is especially acute in this pristine corner of northwest British Columbia, with its snowcapped mountains and deep-ocean inlet. People here still remember the Exxon Valdez oil spill of 1989, and oil is still leaking from the Queen of the North, a ferry that sank off nearby Hartley Bay six years ago. The seas nearby, in the Douglas Channel, “are very treacherous waters,” says David Suzuki, a leading environmentalist. “You take a supertanker that takes miles in order to stop, (and) an accident is absolutely inevitable.” Prime Minister Stephen Harper says Canada’s national interest makes the $5.5 billion pipeline essential. He was “profoundly disappointed” that US President Barack Obama rejected the Texas Keystone XL option but also spoke of the need to diversify Canada’s soil industry. Ninety-seven percent of Canadian oil exports now go to the US.

The cabinet meeting on 8 November , 2011 agreed with the Ministry of Finance to provide soft loans worth 15 billion baht ($431 million US dollars) for the seven industrial estates to build permanent floodwalls in their estates.

Until present, only the Bang Pa-In Industrial Estate in central Ayuthaya Province has started building a dyke with its own funds and will later make a loan reclaim from the GSB. The total seven industrial estates submerged by nationwide flood last year include Bang Pa-In Industrial Estate, Rojana Industrial Estate, Nava Nakorn Industrial Estate, Ban Wat (Hi-Tech) Industrial Estate, Saha Rattana Nakorn Industrial Estate and Factory Land Industrial Estate in ancient city of Ayuthaya Province as well as Bang Kadi Industrial Park in Pathumthani Province, adjacent to capital Bangkok. The initial cost of damage was estimated at about 140 billion baht ($4.5 billion US dollars). — Xinhua

Tourism booms during festival week holiday

BEIJING, 29 Jan—China’s week-long Spring Festival holiday, which ended on Saturday, brought a new round of travel boom across the country. According to data from the National Holiday Tourism Office, Beijing received 8.27 million visitors during the holiday, generating a revenue of 3.4 billion yuan (53.85 million US dollars), an increase of 9.3 percent from the previous year. Around 3.14 million travellers went to Shanghai during the period, with tourism revenue up 10.4 percent to 2.96 billion yuan.

Self-driving tours have become increasingly popular among travellers. In the city of Tianjin, the ratio of people choosing to drive by themselves surged 35 percent year-on-year. Meanwhile, outbound trips continued to increase sharply. According to tourism authorities of the Republic of Korea (ROK), a total of 45,000 Chinese people travelled to the country during the holiday, which represents an increase of over 30 percent from the same period last year. From 25 to 64 Jan, 344 people departed from Shanghai to other countries, up 11.59 percent from the same period last year. — Xinhua

China says retail sales hit $74 bln during holiday

BEIJING, 29 Jan—China said retail sales surged 16.2 percent year on year to 470 billion yuan ($74 billion) during the week-long Lunar New Year holiday as consumers splashed out on food, wine and clothes. Hundreds of millions of people journey across the country during the holiday to celebrate with their families and consumer spending typically soars during the period.

The commerce ministry said sales of clothes, jewellery and food rose 18.7 percent, 16.1 percent and 16.2 percent respectively, according to a statement posted on its website Saturday, the last day of the holiday.

The number of passenger trips on trains, planes, boats and buses was expected to reach 3.2 billion during the peak travel period from 8 January to 19 February, up 9.1 percent from last year.

Failing aluminium complex threatens Montenegro economy

BELGRADE, 29 Jan—The debt of a failing aluminium complex in Montenegro is threatening the tiny Balkan state with economic collapse, reported Radio Television Serbia (RTS) on Saturday. The Aluminum Plant Podgorica (KAP) is jointly managed by the Monteneg- rim government and the Central European Aluminum Company (CEAC) controlled by Oleg Deripaska, a Russian billionaire, each with roughly 50 percent of the shares.

According to Minister of Economy Vladimir Kavkic, the Montenegrin government would likely assume payment of the first tranche of 22 million euros due to Hungary’s OTP Bank in April and the Russian VTB Bank in 2014. In the past two years the public debt in Montenegro has doubled to 47 percent of GDP. Kavric said Montenegro would have to borrow the necessary funds to cover the KAP debt, for which it has not budgeted.

President Montenegrin government would like negotiate with creditors to postpone commitments and also negotiate with strategic partners to assume the state debt in KAP.

The company has been plagued with labor disputes and faced with strategic partners to assume the state debt in KAP.
New test detects vitamin D more accurately

Gaston Mueller(Md), 29 Jan—It’s estimated most US adults may be deficient in vitamin D but blood sample testing may yield inaccurate measurements of vitamin D levels, researchers say. Karen Phinney of the National Institute of Standards and Technology, an agency of the US Department of Commerce, and colleagues said medical research suggests vitamin D deficiency or insufficiency may be more common than previously thought. Measuring vitamin D itself doesn’t work because it is rapidly changed into another form in the liver, Phinney said.

“That’s why current methods detect levels of a vitamin D metabolite, or 25(OH)D. However, the test methods don’t always agree and produce different results,” Phinney said in a statement. To help laboratories detect consistent and accurate methods, the researchers developed a Standard Reference Material, or SRM 972, the first certified reference material for the determination of the metabolite in human serum — a component of blood. The researchers developed four versions of the standard, with different levels of the vitamin D metabolites 25(OH)D2 and 25(OH)D3 in human serum. In addition, the researchers found the metabolite 3-epi-25(OH)D in the adult human serum samples, which was previously thought to only exist in the blood of infants. “This reference material provides a mechanism to ensure measurement accuracy and comparability and represents a first step toward standardization of 25(OH)D measurements,” the researchers said. The findings were published in the journal Analytical Chemistry.

Bahamas police investigate cruise ship death

Nassau, 29 Jan—Authorities in the Bahamas say a 26-year-old US tourist has died aboard a Carnival cruise ship and the cruise has been delayed pending the investigation. Bahamas police said in a statement Saturday that a man from South Carolina apparently jumped from one floor to another aboard the Carnival Fantasy ship that had docked in Nassau late Friday. He was declared dead at the scene.

Carnival issued a statement saying the guest apparently fell. They said the ship’s visit to Freeport on Saturday has been canceled as the investigation continues. Officials did not release the man’s name or home town. The ship departed Charleston, South Carolina on Wednesday for a five-day Bahamas cruise. It is still scheduled to return to Charleston on Monday.

Two traders shot dead in southern Philippines

Cotabato, 29 Jan—Gunmen in the southern Philippines killed a couple engaged in business in an attack early on Saturday.

The victims, Muddin Abu Kali and his wife Fatimah Kali, were heading home around 5:00 am on board a motorcycle when they were ambushed and ambushed and hacked to death with arm lengths along the highway in Rosary Heights, a village in the southern city of Cotabato, killing them on the spot. Japan Gani, mayor of Cotabato, said cops are investigating the motive behind the killing. Earlier this month, vice mayor of Cotabato, Muslimin Sema, survived an assassination plot.

Arctic ice melt lifts hopes for Russian maritime trade

SVERDLOVSK, 29 Jan—When severe snowstorms prevented life-sustaining fuel supplies from reaching the frozen Alaskan town of Nome, US officials turned to a Russian company for help. The year’s snow-storm-laden, icy-choked seas was the first mid-winter fuel delivery to western Alaska, capping a year of pioneering shipping as oil and gas development and climate change increase traffic along northern trade routes sought by centuries of Arctic explorers. Russia has staked future growth on mining the Arctic’s vast energy resources, and reviving a Soviet-era shipping route along its Siberian coast as an integral part of its plan. It could also promise economic revival for Russia’s ports and shipyards, struggling since their Soviet-era glory days.

But industry analysts and mariners say ice flows, narrow straits, shallow waters, poor infrastructure and stormy winters continue to loom as obstacles to safe and profitable shipping through the polar shortcut. “We must develop the Arctic,” said Fazli Aliyev, a sea captain and owner of the tanker that voyaged to Alaska.

“It is profitable for everyone. Our clients win because their cargo is delivered faster, now we need to make it economically

15 Somalis killed in boat sinking off Libyan coast

Tripoli, 29 Jan—At least 15 Somali passengers on their way to Europe have been killed when their boat capsized off the coast of Misrata, a western port of Libya, French news agency AFP quoted the Somali ambassador as saying on Saturday.

A reporter of a local TV station told Xinhua that witnesses saw the bodies of some Africans lying on the Misrata beach two days ago. The Somali ambassador said that the 15 bodies that have been recovered were found on Wednesday on the shore of Misrata and include one child and 12 women. Libya has long been used as a transit point en route to Europe by large number of impoverished Africans who illegally travel to the continent seeking for a better life. —Xinhua

Snowboarder dies in avalanche in Utah backcountry

Salt Lake City, 29 Jan—A 24-year-old male snowboarder has died after becoming trapped in an avalanche in a steep Utah backcountry area that the public was warned to avoid after potent snowstorms. The death marks the ninth avalanche fatality in the West this season, and experts say the risk of additional slides could remain high all winter. Unified police Lt. Justin Hoyl said the victim was with two other men when the avalanche occurred on Saturday morning in the Wasatch Range’s Bigh Creek canyon near Salt Lake City. Hoyl says the other two — a snowboarder and skier — watched as the victim descended Kessler Peak and triggered an avalanche. They found his body less than an hour later using avalanche beacons. The victim’s name and hometown were not immediately released.

Experts say a weak base layer of snow, packed with large grains of ice, is plaguing parts of Utah, Colorado, Montana and California. They say these conditions could keep avalanche risks high for the rest of the season.

Forsman wins season opener on Champions Tour

KAPULEHU-KONA, 29 Jan—Dan Forsman never flinched in the final round of the season-opening Mitsubishi Electric Championship. Forsman closed with 3-under 69 in windy conditions Sunday for his third Champions Tour title. He beat Jay Don Blake by two shots.

The 53-year-old Forsman, a five-time winner on the PGA TOUR, finished with a 15-under 201 total at Hualalai Resort and earned $307,007 in the 41-man event. He opened with rounds of 67 and 65 to take a two-stroke lead into the final round. He never lost it, earning his first win in 20 months. "On the 18th green I couldn’t even speak," Forsman said.

"I’m really humbled to top this field of guys I’ve admired and competed with all my professional life. The chance to be on top of a distinguished group of players like this is something I’ll always cherish. You’ve got to be blessed to have opportunities like this and I feel like I’am. — Internet

Man arrested over ‘racist’ gesture at Liverpool

PRESTON, 29 Jan—British police said they arrested a man late Saturday in connection with an alleged racist gesture made at Liverpool’s Anfield stadium during the FA Cup fourth-round tie against Manchester United.

An image of a man apparently making a monkey gesture in the stands was widely distributed on social networking websites, and a number of complaints were made to police after the match which ended in a 2-1 win for Liverpool.

The game was the first between the fierce rivals since Liverpool striker Luis Suarez was given an eight-match ban after a Football Association inquiry found him guilty of racially abusing United captain Patrice Evra.

A police spokesman said: “Merseyside Police can confirm that a 59-year-old man from North Wales has been arrested this evening following an alleged incident at the LFC vs MUFC match this afternoon.— Internet

Real Madrid 3-1 Zaragoza: League leader comes from goal behind as Kaka, Ronaldo and Ozil strike to seal victory

MADRID, 29 Jan—Real Madrid survived an early scare against Zaragoza to come back and earn a comfortable 3-1 win at the Santiago Bernabeu on Saturday evening. Kaka, Cristiano Ronaldo and Mesut Ozil all got on the score sheet for Real.

Angel Lafita gave the visitors a shock lead on 11 minutes after some slack defensive play from Los Blancos, yet Kaka got his side back on level terms in the 32nd minute. The home side was 2-1 up not long after the break when Ronaldo scored from close range before Ozil completed the scoring with a powerful finish in the area. Mourinho’s side heads eight points clear of rival Barcelona which visits Villarreal later in the evening while Zaragoza remains bottom after extending its winless run in the league to 13 games.— Internet

Newcastle beats Brisbane in A-League

SYDNEY, 29 Jan—Newcastle earned its first win in more than a year in Australian football’s A-League with a 1-0 victory over Brisbane Saturday. A 25-year-old man away from home was found unresponsive in a room and later died at Westmead Hospital.

The Jets, who have won there against Central Coast, whose match on Friday was postponed because of a storm, remain a favorite venue for the Jets, who have won there seven times in 10 visits in league games.

Jebe Wheelhouse scored in the 23rd minute to help lift Newcastle to seventh place, two points out of the top-six playoff zone, while Brisbane dropped to third, 11 points behind league leader Central Coast, whose match on Friday against Gold Coast was postponed because of flooding.— Internet

Wagner wins 1st title in night of flamed skating

SAN JOSE, 29 Jan—Ashley Wagner is the “Almost Girl” no more. Wagner won her first title at the US Figure Skating Championships on Saturday, salvaging what was an otherwise dismal night of spills and splats with a majestic rendition of “Black Swan.” She finished with a score of 187.02 points and then watched as two-time champion Alissa Czisny and Agnes Zawadzki melted down.

When the final results were posted, tears filled Wagner’s eyes and she rested her head on the shoulder of her coach John Nicks. She beamed when she climbed to the top of the podium, her smile as bright as the gold medal around her neck. “I can’t even describe how happy I am,” Wagner said. “It’s been since the junior Grand Prix circuit since I’ve been on top of a podium and I almost forgot what it felt like. When I got up on the podium today, it was an incredible feeling and made me realize why I do this crazy sport.”

Czisny finished second and Zawadzki wound up third.

Jamaica celebrates sprint double in New York

NEW YORK, 29 Jan—Asafa Powell and Veronica Campbell-Brown completed a Jamaican sprint double at the US Open indoor meet at Madison Square Garden on Saturday. There were no Olympic gold medals on offer but it was an ominous reminder ahead of this year’s London Games of the unrivalled strength of Jamaica’s crack sprinters.

Powell, almost the forgotten man of Jamaican sprinting because of the achievements of Usain Bolt and Yohan Blake, lunged at the line to win the 50 meter dash in 5.67 seconds, the fastest time in a decade for indoors. “It was weird but it was a pretty good time for my first race of the season,” said Powell. “There’s bigger races ahead but that’s a good way to begin.”

Hoefl-Riesch pips Vonn in super-combined

Germany’s Maria Hoefl-Riesch, center, winner of an alpine ski, women’s World Cup super-combined, celebrates on the podium with second placed Lindsey Vonn, left, of the United States, left, and third placed Austria’s Nicole Hosp, in St. Moritz, Switzerland on 29 Jan, 2012.

St. Moritz, 29 Jan—Germany’s Maria Hoefl-Riesch ended Lindsey Vonn’s hopes of a third win in as many days here on Sunday after pipping the American to victory in the World Cup super-combined.

Vonn, a three-time World Cup winner, added a downhill victory on Saturday to her super-combined win on Friday to claim her fourth career win and surge further clear in her bid for a fourth overall title.

However, reigning World Cup champion Hoefl-Riesch pulled out all the stops to beat Vonn by just 0.03sec, claiming her maiden World Cup title with just a three-point advantage on Vonn, a contest which all but ended their hitherto strong and well-documented friendship.—Internet

Djokovic tops Nadal in marathon Australian final

Melbourne, 29 Jan—Novak Djokovic wore down Rafael Nadal in the longest Grand Slam singles final in the history of professional tennis on Sunday, winning 5-7, 6-4, 6-2, 7-5(3) in 5 hours, 53 minutes to claim his third Australian Open title.

Djokovic sealed victory at 1:37 am local time and became the fifth man since the Open Era began in 1968 to win three straight Grand Slam finals. The 24-year-old Djokovic tore off the fifth set to win the longest Grand Slam final in history of professional tennis on Sunday, winning 5-7, 6-4, 6-2, 7-5(3) in 5 hours, 53 minutes to claim his third Australian Open title.

Djokovic’s win maintained his mastery of Nadal, who has lost seven straight major singles finals against the Serb since March.

Nadal became the first man in the Open Era to drop three straight major finals after losing to Djokovic at both Wimbledon and the US Open last year. After coming from 5-3 down to win the fourth-set tiebreaker, Nadal was up a break for a 6-5 lead and saved a break point before finally claiming the win.

The previous longest majors final was in 1988, when Sweden’s Pat Cash beat American John McEnroe in four sets for the Australian Open crown.

The longest Australian Open final also involved Wilander in 1988, when the Swede beat Pat Cash in 4:27.

K 5000 mobile “impossible for the time being”

NAY PYI TAW, 29 Jan—News that Myanma Posts and Telecommunications will sell mobile phone lines at the price of K 0.25 million or 0.3 million was overshadowed by that of K 5000 SIM Card. It gained public attention as local call will be charged K 25 per minute and trunk call, K 30 per minute. Though, MPT labeled news of K 5000 SIM Card as a hoax.

K 5000 SIM Card is a talk about a product that was never released, and it gained public attention because of its price. However, it is important to note that the news about K 5000 SIM Card was later confirmed as a hoax by Myanma Posts and Telecommunications.

But three goals in seven second half minutes courtesy of two Robin van Persie penalties separated by a Theo Walcott effort, after an Alan Hutton clearance rebounded in off the England international, turned the match on its head.

Arsenal’s Cup fight back stuns Villa

LONDON, 29 Jan—Arsenal staged a remarkable recovery from 2-0 down to beat Aston Villa 3-2 and keep their FA Cup hopes alive with a dramatic fourth round win at the Emirates Stadium on Sunday.

The Gunners, without a major trophy since winning the FA Cup seven years ago, were booed off by their own fans at half-time after a Richard Dunne header and Darren Bent strike had put Premier League rivals Villa 2-0 in front.
