President U Thein Sein calls for cutting “red tape”

NAY PYI TAW, 26 Dec— President U Thein Sein delivered an address on reforms to improve the management and administrative capacity of the government at the Credentials Hall of the Presidential Palace, here, at 9:00 am today.

Also present on the occasion were Union Ministers, Attorney-General of the Union, Auditor-General of the Union, Chairman of the Union Civil Services Board, Region/State Chief Ministers, deputy ministers, deputy attorney-general, deputy auditor-general, members of UCSB, Chairmen of Self-Administered division/zones and departmental heads.

At the ceremony, President U Thein Sein delivered a speech on reforms to improve the management and administrative capacity of the government. The full speech are as follow:

It has been one year and nine months since our government took over managing the affairs of the country. During this transition period, we have undertaken democratic reforms by establishing a new administrative system both at the Union and the state/regional levels, by revising older laws that are not in line with reform processes, and by promulgating new laws. This institution-building process is a work in progress. Numerous consultations, seminars and workshops are ongoing across all sectors as we search for new modalities and paradigms for democratic state-building. Furthermore, reforms to some laws, rules and regulations are being honed to better accommodate both local conditions and modern needs.

In spite of both our government’s and society’s inexperience in promulgating such significant political reforms, as well as the range of time pressures and sectoral challenges that our entire country faces, the transition process in Myanmar has been remarkably smooth. This is largely because of the positive contributions of the Hluttaw, various government agencies, the judiciary, the Tatmadaw, the citizenry and many supportive organizations from inside and outside the country, to the reform process. I want to take this opportunity to express my sincere thanks to all these stakeholders.

In the process of transitioning from one form of governance to another, Myanmar’s previous government, following the wishes of the people, entrusted our new government with the duty to undertake democratic and market-oriented economic reforms. In the first stage of the reform process, our new government has undertaken several major political reforms within the mandate of the 2008 Constitution. Because the country will not be able to enjoy peace and development without national reconciliation, many political organizations and ethnic armed groups have set aside their differences with the government and began to work with us in the areas where we share common interests. In fact, such cooperation has made all the achievements we have had so far possible. However, we still have a lot of work to be done. In order to successfully complete all the remaining work, the government will take whatever actions are necessary, in consultation and cooperation with all stakeholders. In so doing, I would like to request our ethnic brothers and sisters and the rest of the populace to work hand-in-hand with the government in undertaking all the necessary reforms in the country.

While undertaking political reforms, the government has adopted broadly socially-oriented economic reforms that are designed to ensure secure livelihoods and create job opportunities for the citizens, to improve the living standards, and social and economic status of the general public. Myanmar has lagged far behind its neighbouring countries both socially and economically. The scale of the challenges that remain are immense. The government will have to systematically formulate short-term and long-term economic policies in order to ensure that the reforms will truly benefit the country and the general public. Therefore, the National Economic and Social Advisory Council has drafted the framework for economic and social reforms, which will be approved in this meeting of the national planning commission.

While the proposed framework for economic and social reforms was being drafted, line ministries and state/region governments openly sought advice and recommendations for economic reform plans and regional development by holding frank discussions in workshops with Hluttaw members, scholars and experts. While holding these consultations, government leaders have revised several by-laws and regulations in light of the changes that have taken place in the country.

In undertaking the reforms, instead of a strictly linear approach of getting each task done one after another, we employ a multi-focal approach. Along the way, we, in recognition of the livelihood needs of the people, have repeatedly given priority to issuing licenses to businesses that can create jobs for ordinary citizens.

In the last year or so, we have undertaken monetary and exchange rate reforms in order to ensure greater macro-economic stability and relaxed restrictions on foreign investments.

New York man left note declaring plan to kill people

NEW YORK, 26 Dec — A gunman who killed two volunteer firefighters and wounded two others in a Christmas Eve ambush in upstate New York left a typewritten note saying he planned to burn down his neighbourhood and start “killing people,” authorities said on Tuesday. The gunman, William Spengler, 62, opened fire on volunteer firefighters who responded to a house fire he deliberately set early on Monday morning in Webster, New York, a suburb of Rochester, authorities said. Spengler shot and killed himself in an ensuing gunfight with police. He had spent 17 years in prison for beating his 92-year-old grandmother to death with a hammer in 1981, authorities said.

Police said Spengler set the fire, laying a trap for the firefighters, and began shooting when they arrived.

He left a typewritten note describing his intent, Webster Police Chief Gerald Pickering said at a televised news conference.

Iran navy says its subsurface capabilities enhanced

TEHERAN, 26 Dec — Iranian Navy Commander Rear Admiral Habibollah Sayyari said on Tuesday that the country has experienced a leap in the expansion of its subsurface capabilities recently, semi-official Fars news agency reported.

“Iran’s subsurface power has been enhanced to a remarkable degree in recent months,” said Sayyari, adding that “Our surface and subsurface tactics, which used to be inspired by foreign tactics, have now become fully indigenized.”

“We have the capability to manufacture different types of submarines and we have shown this by building Ghadir submarines and overhauling heavy submarines,” he was quoted as saying. The Ghadir-class submarine was first unveiled in 2007.

The 120-ton vessel has shallow-depth performance and can conduct prolonged coastal missions.

In September, Iran’s navy announced that it launched the overhauled super-heavy Tareq 901 submarine which had been repaired by Iranian experts.

On Tuesday, Sayyari said that Iranian army will start a naval drill in the country’s southern waters on Friday, according to Fars.

The six-day drill, to be held in Strait of Hormuz, Sea of Oman and Persian Indian Ocean, will cover an area of one million square km, Sayyari was quoted as saying. Long-lived bats offer clues on diseases, aging

HONG KONG, 26 Dec—The bat, a reservoir for viruses like Ebola, SARS and Nipah, has for decades stumped scientists trying to figure out how it is immune to so many deadly bugs but a recent study into its genes may finally shed some light, scientists said on Friday.

Studying the DNA of two distant bat species, the scientists discovered how genes dealing with the bats’ immune system had undergone the most rapid change. This may explain why they are relatively free of disease and live exceptionally long lives compared with other mammals of similar size, such as the rat, said Professor Lin-Fa Wang, an infectious disease expert at the Duke-NUS Graduate Medical School in Singapore who led the multi-centre study.

“We are not saying bats never get sick or never get infections. What we are saying is they handle infections a lot better,” Wang said in a telephone interview. What was missing from both species of bats was a gene segment known to trigger extreme, and potentially fatal, immune reactions to infections, called the cytokine storm.

Cytokine storms end up killing not only offending viruses in the body, but the host’s own cells and tissues too.

“Viruses rarely kill the host. The killing comes from the host’s immune response. So it looks like what bats are doing is depress the inflammation (cytokine storm). If we can learn that, we can design drugs to minimize the inflammation damage and control viral infection,” Wang said.

The study, which saw the participation of researchers from China, Denmark, Australia and the United States, was published on Friday in the journal Science.

Compared with other mammals of similar size, bats live a long time, with density lifespans of 20 to 40 years. Rats live between 2 and 3 years, on average.

Mundie, one of Gates’ successors, to retire from Microsoft

NEW YORK, 27 Dec—Craig Mundie, one of two Microsoft Corp executives who took over Bill Gates’ role at the company, has relinquished control of Microsoft’s large research organization and is to retire from the company in 2014.

Mundie is taking on a new role as a senior adviser to Chief Executive Steve Ballmer, according to a memo circulated internally earlier this month but only made public on Monday.

Eric Rudder, another Microsoft veteran, is taking on responsibility for Microsoft Research, Trustworthy Computing, and the Technology Policy Group, which were all run by Mundie. A 20-year Microsoft veteran, Mundie was one of two men hand-picked by co-founder Gates to take over leadership of the technical side of Microsoft when he retired from day-to-day work at the company in 2008.

Mundie took over responsibility for the company’s long-term research activities, while Ray Ozzie became chief software architect. Ozzie left Microsoft in 2010. According to Ballmer’s memo, Mundie will retire from Microsoft in 2014, when he will be 65.

Mundie’s new role was first reported on Monday by the All Things D tech blog.

China may require real name registration for internet access

“China’s Ministry of Public Security has had a ‘real name’ policy for internet users for open debate. It could also prevent people from exposing corruption online if they fear retribution from officials, said some users.

It was unclear how the rules would be different from existing regulations as state media has provided only vague details and in practice customers have long had to present identity papers when signing contracts with internet providers. Earlier this year, the government began forcing users of Sina Corp’s (SINA.O) wildly successful Weibo microblogging platform to register their real names.

Internet grows to more than 246 million domain names

NEW DELHI, 27 Dec—More than five million domain names were added to the Internet in the third quarter of 2012, bringing the total number of registered domain names as of 30 September, 2012 to more than 246 million worldwide across all Top-Level Domains (TLDs), a report said on Monday.

According to Domain Name Industry Brief, published by VeriSign Inc, a provider of Internet infrastructure services for the networked world, the increase of 5.7 million domain names globally equates to a growth rate of 2.4 percent over the second quarter of 2012, and marks the seventh straight quarter with greater than two percent growth. “Worldwide registrations have grown by 26.4 million, or 12 percent, since the third quarter of 2011,” a VeriSign statement said. The .com and .net TLDs experienced aggregate growth in the third quarter of 2012, reaching a combined total of 119.9 million domain names in the adjusted zone for .com and .net.

This represents 1 percent increase in the base over the second quarter of 2012 and a 7.1 percent increase over the third quarter of 2011.

As of 30 September, 2012, the base of registered names was equal to 105 million names, while net equalled 14.9 million names, it was stated.—PTI

Israelic archaeologists unearth “elite” Stone Age society

JERUSALEM, 26 Dec—An excavation of an ancient village in the north of Israel has unearthed hundreds of artifacts linking the residents’ upper class to Mesopotamia and other distant civilizations.

Archaeologist Yair Mileyvsky, who headed the excavation together with Nimrod Getzov and Ein Tzipori site, near Nazareth, told Xinhua on Monday that this discovery helps understand Stone Age upper class society and commerce in the area.

“We discovered some kind of elite part of society that lived in this village and who were in contact with other cities in the northern Levant — even in Anatolia and Mesopotamia,” Mileyvsky said.

The artifacts unearthed belong to the Chalcolithic period over seven millennia ago, and have been identified as a part of the local Wadi Rabah culture.

The find revealed that this culture had strong commercial ties with other cultures as distant as Mesopotamia and Anatolia, in current Turkey.

“This kind of commerce was not uncommon, but what’s special is that we have a large collection of items in the same place, and most probably they were conducting these exchanges through terrestrial means,” Mileyvsky said.

“We think that they had barter deals, because they didn’t have money, and sometimes this exchange was coming from faraway sites since we also found items made from Obsidian coming from Anatolia and other parts of Turkey, as well as other items from Syria and northern Levant region,” the researcher stressed.

Archaeologists believe that the luxury items discovered in Ein Tzipori were for the upper class’s consumption and that the site was not a religious or affluent commercial settlement.

Among the artifacts are bowls containing hundreds of colored flint beads, engraved earthenware and palettes decorated with ostriches, showing influence from Mesopotamia and Syria.

“We know that there are few cases in the southern Levant with such patterns on palettes or other artifacts, even in the Near East. We believe there was a common background of ideas or beliefs that reflects continuous commercial activity,” Mileyvsky said.
LONDON, 26 Dec—A decline in the number of companies listed on London’s junior market slowed to a crawl in 2012. The junior stock market, the Alternative Investment Market (AIM), had fallen every year since 2007, but the fall in 2012 was just 4 percent, compared with 16 percent in 2009, its fastest year of contraction. “During the time of the financial crisis...the principal reasons why companies were leaving the list were negative,” said Richard Thornhill, capital markets partner at Deloitte. “Either they no longer perceived that the market offered them value...or the economic climate forced them to de-list. The situation in 2012 has been very different, with the driving force behind companies leaving the list being transactions which have consistently realised value for shareholders.” Of the 113 companies who had left the market by the end of November, 41 were acquired, 17 were subject to reverse take-overs and three transferred to London’s main market. Those companies which were bought received an average premium of 53 percent to their closing share price on the day before the acquisition. By the end of November, 65 companies had joined AIM, and the share prices of the 44 which raised money on admission had risen an average 26 percent since listing. “There are good reasons to be confident about the market in 2013,” said Thornhill. —Reuters

Jaguar Land Rover’s China unit to recall cars over safety worries

BEIJING, 26 Dec—Jaguar Land Rover’s Chinese subsidiary will recall 337 cars because of standard braking and steering box issues, China’s national product quality watchdog said on Tuesday. The General Administration of Quality Supervision, Inspection and Quarantine said in a statement on its website that Jaguar Land Rover’s China unit is recalling 190 2012 Evoque and Freelander vehicles produced on 11 June this year. The agency’s statement said the recall was prompted by concerns that standard braking and steering boxes, which contain “security risks”. British retailers start online sales early

LONDON, 26 Dec—British retailers have brought forward their Christmas clearance sales online in the hope that shoppers will log on to buy bargains and offset lacklustre spending in stores. Marks & Spencer launched its sale online at midnight on Monday, it said on its website, while department store John Lewis said it would cut online prices when its stores closed at 1700 GMT. Debenhans has already started its online sale. Retailers in recent years have started sales online on Christmas Day, ahead of the clearances in stores from Boxing Day, but are increasingly launching their online offers before Christmas after delivery deadlines for the day have passed. Hard-pressed shoppers have been leaving it late to buy presents in the hope that retailers would slash prices, the British Retail Consortium said. It was forecasting that 5 billion pounds ($8.1 billion) would be spent in the shops on Saturday and Sunday combined, the last weekend before Christmas. Richard Dodd, the BRC’s head of Media and Campaigns, said weekend trading had met expectations. “Christmas, ultimately once all the final sums are done, will turn out to be acceptable but not exceptional,” he said. He said the sector expected a modest increase in cash spending against a year go, but not necessarily any significant increase in real terms once inflation was stripped out. Many British families’ budgets are stretched, according to a survey from Market that showed the biggest deterioration in household finances in seven months. —Reuters

Sony says China business has recovered, foresees growth

BEIJING, 26 Dec—Sony Corp’s (6758.T) business in China has “more or less” returned to levels seen before recent protests against Japan’s actions over a group of disputed islands, the Japanese company’s China chief, Nobuki Kurita, told reporters on Tuesday. Calls for boycotts of Japanese products broke out across China in September after Japan nationalized two of a group of disputed East China Sea islands, known as the Diaoyu in Chinese and the Senkaku in Japanese, by purchasing them from their private owners. Kurita declined to comment on what impact the election of the hawkish Shinzo Abe as Japan’s new prime minister could have on Japan-China relations. Abe has vowed not to back down on the island dispute, but still must balance that stance with the need for stable relations with Japan. Chinese media have reported that he will send a special envoy to China to mend ties. “There’s no market that has no risk,” he said when asked about Japan-China relations. “Our mandate is to maximize our business potential in any given situation.” Kurita said he expects Sony’s business in emerging markets to grow about 40 percent from the current level to reach some 2.6 trillion yen ($31 billion) in the business year ending in March 2015. China would account for “a good chunk” of that growth, he said. —Reuters

US reprimands some eye centres on LASIK surgery advertising

WASHINGTON, 26 Dec—US health regulators warned five eye care providers to stop misleading advertising and promotion of refractive lasers used in eye surgery procedures such as LASIK. The US Food and Drug Administration found that the advertisements and promotions materials did not offer consumers adequate information about risks and possible side effects. Warning letters were sent to certain eye centres in Indiana, California, Florida, Texas and Georgia. “Providers whose advertising does not provide adequate risk information are finding out today that the FDA is serious about consumer protection,” said Steve Silverman, compliance Director at FDA’s Centre for Devices and Radiological Health in a statement posted on the agency’s website. Surgery with refractive lasers is intended to reduce the need for glasses or contact lenses. It involves the removal of corneal tissue by a special laser and permanently reshapes the cornea and changes its focusing power. The most common risks of LASIK surgery include dry eyes, the possible continued need for glasses, visual disturbances such as halos, starbursts or double vision, and even loss of vision. The FDA said it issued letters in 2009 and 2011 to eye care professionals across the country explaining the agency’s concerns about improper advertising and promotion of FDA-approved lasers. It also issued letters in March 2012 to the American Society of Cataract and Refractive Surgery and the American Academy of Ophthalmology, providing additional information about disclosing risk in eye care professionals’ advertisements and promotional materials. “The FDA reminds consumers that eye surgery such as lasik is irreversible, not all patients will achieve optimal results, and that some patients may need additional procedures,” the FDA said. —Reuters

Zimbabwe tourist operators expect better prospects next year

HARARE, 26 Dec—Zimbabwe’s tourist operators have said the year 2012 has seen an influx in the number of hunters and tourists into the country, which is a sign of better prospects next year.

Zimbabwe Safari Operators Chairperson Emmanuel Fundira was quoted by state radio on Monday saying the safari industry had good business from traditional markets such as Europe and the United States.

Fundira said they are expecting an influx of hunters and tourists, adding that bookings have already been made.

Next year, the country is hosting the United Nations World Tourism Organization (UNWTO) General Assembly, an event which is expected to attract thousands of delegates in the tourism industry.

The signing of a tripartite agreement in May 2012 has been believed to greatly contribute to the increase in tourist arrivals in the country in the second half of the year.

The agreement was signed at the Victoria Falls Bridge by President Robert Mugabe, Zambian President Michael Sata and UNWTO Secretary-General Taleb Rifai.

Barbara Murusirawna, an official of the Zimbabwe Council for Tourism in Victoria Falls, said the agreement brought confidence among international travelers as it endorsed the country as a safe tourist destination.

"I believe the signing of the tripartite agreement between the two presidents and the UNWTO brought confidence to travelers in the whole world, and also confirmed Zimbabwe as a safe tourist destination," Murusirawna said.—Xinhua

Dockworkers at Northwest ports reject pact offer

SEATTLE, 26 Dec—Dockworkers at four US Pacific Northwest ports moved closer to a possible labour clash with grain shippers on Monday, as parties in a larger, separate dispute at 15 East and Gulf coast ports agreed to mediation ahead of strike deadline set for 30 December.

The International Longshore and Warehouse Union (ILWU) announced nearly 3,000 of its members had voted to reject a contract proposal that management called its "fast, best and final" offer.

The proposed contract covers six of the nine grain terminals operating in Puget Sound and along the Columbia River that account for more than a quarter of all US grain exports and nearly half of US wheat exports.

The stalemate in contract talks in Oregon and Washington state and management’s failure to win approval of its offer, fueled speculation that grain shippers might impose a lockout of union members in a bid to keep terminals operating with replacement workers.

The ILWU has not asked its members to authorize a strike, nor has it set a strike deadline or made mention of a walkout. The union urged the shippers to return to the bargaining table.

Talks have founndered over numerous work-rule changes sought by the companies to improve efficiency, but opposed by the ILWU as onerous give-backs ultimately designed to break the union.

The Pacific Northwest Grain Handlers Association, which represents the shipping companies and the grain terminals they own, said in response to rejection of their contract offer that employers were “reviewing their options.”

The ILWU has said the shippers have hired a Delaware-based company that specializes in providing security and replacement workers in labour disputes.—MNA/Reuters

As part of the attempt to create more jobs for the general public, the government has formulated plans to develop special economic zones and industrial zones as well as a systematic rural development plan. However, the global economic downturn, the decline in overall global purchasing power, the lingering impact of Western economic sanctions and the natural disasters caused by global climate change have invariably slowed down Myanmar’s economic growth. The entire country will have to work together in order to improve the economic performance of the country significantly.

A national development plan cannot automatically bring wealth to the people. Only when the plans are properly and effectively implemented, will our nation see real economic growth and development.

In order for the government to implement reform plans effectively, it must have necessary management capability and expertise.

In general, the capacity of the government will play an important role in deciding the success and failure of economic reforms in the country. In addition, systemic reforms would not be very effective, if the implements are reluctant to give up the values and practices of the previous regime and adopt new political, economic, social, and administrative values that are in line with democratic principles. With all this in mind, both the government and the representatives elected by the citizens and the civil servants who draw salaries from tax revenue by corruption and serve the public, must strive with determination to create the conditions to foster good governance and an efficient government. In addition, all political, economic, social and administrative reforms undertaken by the government must aim at achieving grassroots-based development.

However, in townships and wards across the country, many citizens are having many problems in dealing with local government officials. Local government officials in some areas run their offices:

- Without paying attention to public opinion or without consulting with the general public,
- Without transparency or without informing the public of the plans that are about to be implemented,
- Without paying attention to public inquiries or without thinking about how they might better meet the needs of the public,
- Without following the rules and regulations adopted by the line ministries or regional governments,
- By accepting bribes that are made possible by corruption
- As deliberately ineffective institutions that make it difficult for the public to interact with the government, and
- Without necessary management capability and performance of both city and skills.

On the whole, it is quite clear that the elements of good governance and clean government are absent in many local administrative bodies. As a result, local state officials have come to lack the capacity to meet the needs of the local people and to solve the problems that they are facing. In some areas, the public has come to lose faith in the administration and in the government. We must therefore undertake administrative reforms from the ward/village level to the union level. Only then will good governance and clean government prevail in our country.

The government will therefore implement the reforms that are designed to improve the management and administrative performance of government agencies in the third stage of the overall national reform strategy.

The administrative reforms that should be in line with the people-based development strategy should transform government officials into public servants who truly serve the public. In order for this to happen, officials from the ward/village level to the union level must change their mindset,旧 habits, and the entire bureaucracy and public service must wholeheartedly try to improve the capacity and performance of both individual public servants and the entire bureaucracy as a whole.

Under a system in which good governance prevails, the government and the people will not have much difficulty cooperating with each other. As I have repeatedly noted, we need public cooperation in order to be able to implement democratic reforms and development plans successfully. We must therefore undertake the administrative reforms in ways that will attract public participation in the reform process. Under the new administrative system, the township administrative officer will form a township administrative committee and sub-committees with township officials from other government agencies, community leaders, and representatives from civil society, business and professional associations to manage law and order, security, the rule of law, and economic and social issues in the township. The township committee will collectively discuss and make decisions on all the matters that used to be handled by few township officers.

President U Thein Sein calls...

The committee will then collectively implement the decisions. Similar administrative reforms will be undertaken at the district level as well. At the ward and village level also, village or ward level committees with the village or ward level administrator and community leaders will perform similar functions. I believe that such an arrangement will reduce public grievances caused by the highhanded actions taken by individual administrators. I therefore would like to instruct state and region governments to form committees at various levels properly and in conformity with the law.

Because municipal work is very important in improving the livelihood and living standard of the people and in developing townships and villages, it should not be handled only by a small group of officials. The Municipal Act that was enacted according to the 1898 Myanmar Nainggyan Act No.3 was in force until 1993 and elected public representatives were involved in Municipal committees and their activities. I would like to instruct responsible officials to start studying clearly what kind of laws, rules and regulations might need to be adopted in order to elect public representatives for Municipal Committees and to specify the roles public representative should play in running township municipalities.

Union Ministers must also relax legal and procedural restrictions to cut the bureaucratic red tape in their respective ministries. In addition, all ministries must try to cut any budget deficit in their ministries. We will need to promulgate new laws and by-laws that will require state-owned enterprises to turn themselves into truly profit-oriented enterprises by forming boards and corporations.

We will also try to overcome the weak cooperation and coordination between different ministries by forming cabinet committees. This will allow the cabinet to adopt policies and plans in a proper and coordinated manner.

In order to deal with the weak coordination between Union Ministers and state and regional governments, we will need to divide the division of power and responsibilities between the central and local governments more

The reforms that are designed to improve the administrative and management systems of a government could also contribute significantly to the successful completion of the political reforms and the dissemination of democratic values and practices in the society. I therefore would like to encourage all government employees to perform their assigned duties wholeheartedly and with goodwill. From now onwards, if individual citizens, the government, and political parties do everything they can in the roles they are assigned to, the country will definitely be able to overcome all the challenges and difficulties it is now facing. We will then be able to hope for a new peaceful and harmonious Myanmar.

In conclusion, I would like to draw your attention to the fact that governance in Myanmar falls short of international good governance standards. Of all the measures we need to undertake to create good governance, I would like to ask you all to eradicate bribery and corruption in the country. In bribery cases, both givers and takers are responsible for it. If the government is tainted with bribery, it will seriously damage the image of the country and its national and international prestige. Therefore, I would like to request the general public to actively participate in the anti-bribery and anti-corruption campaigns. It is time for public servants who receive a portion of tax revenues as salary to prove that they are good citizens and nationalists who wish to enhance the prestige of both the country and all ethnic nationalities, by keeping themselves and their government departments clean from corruption. I will conclude by requesting all of you to work together with discipline and goodwill in order to improve the efficiency of the government and to foster good governance and help build clean government in the country.—MNA

Freezing Kyrgyzstan to sell its gas company to Gazprom

BISHKEK, 26 Dec—Kyrgyzstan will sell its state gas company to Russia’s Gazprom early next year, to ease a crippling energy crisis, its president said on Monday.

Gas supplies to Kyrgyzstan’s north via its Uzbekistan’s north via its Kazakhstani pipeline to its European market have dried up in recent weeks as Moscow demanded a higher price for gas. The Kazakhstani pipeline to its European market has been shut by Moscow.

Bakytzhan Kurmanbekov, who took over as president on Dec 5 after the ousting of Almazbek Atambayev, said Moscow had ended all deliveries from their pipeline to its European market, a source said on Dec 20.

Kyrgyzstan sells all of its gas to Russia, which absorbs 80% of Kyrgyzstan’s gas production.

Kyrgyzstan’s gas industry is very small and produces only 2.6 billion cubic metres per year compared with 26 billion cubic metres per year from Russia.

Kyrgyzstan has just 2.6 billion cubic metres of gas deposits, a source said.

Find room for God in fast-paced world, pope says on X’mas eve

VATICAN CITY, 26 Dec—Pope Benedict, leading the world’s Roman Catholics into Christmas, on Monday urged people to find room for God in their fast-paced lives filled with the latest technological gadgets.

The 85-year-old pope, marking the eighth Christmas season of his pontificate, celebrated a solemn Christmas Eve mass in St Peter’s Basilica, during which he appealed for a solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict and an end to the civil war in Syria. At the mass for some 10,000 people in the basilica and broadcast to millions of others on television, the pope told his homily around the theme of God’s place in today’s modern world.

“Do we have time and space for him? Do we not actually turn away God himself? We begin to do so when we have no time for him,” said the pope, wearing gold vestments. “The faster we can move, the more we find our time-saving appliances become, the less time we have. And God? The question of God never seems urgent. Our time is already completely full,” he said.

The leader of the world’s some 1.2 billion Roman Catholics said societies had reached the point where many people’s thinking processes did not leave any room even for the existence of God. “Even if it seems to knock at the door of our thinking, he has to be explained away. If thinking is to be taken seriously, it must be structured in such a way that the ‘God hypothesis’ becomes superfluous,” he said.—MNA/Reuters

New Delhi, 26 Dec—

Lindsay Lohan is reportedly furious with Scary Movie 5 producers. A new preview clip for the movie released on Friday (21.12.12) shows the troubled 26-year-old actress screaming in horror while watching a fake news clip of her probation being revoked but Lindsay claims the clip, which mirrors her real life troubles, wasn’t approved by Lindsay.

According to gossip website TMZ: “Producers assured Lindsay she’d have the final say on what jokes went in... so she was livid when she saw the probation joke instead.”

“Lindsay feels this final joke was meant as payback from producers — all because they blame her for holding up the shoot and crashing her trailer.”

“She plans to speak to her team this week over the alleged breach of contract.”

The working script for the movie is said to make fun of Lindsay — who recently had her probation revoked after it was claimed she lied to police over a car accident in June and police are prosecutors are hoping she will be sent to prison — and her multiple brushes with the law.

It also calls for her to poke fun at her public persona in the opening scenes of the movie, during which she is lying in bed making a sex tape with Anger Management star Charlie Sheen. According to the script, the actress then says: “Okay but let’s do this quick, I got a court hearing in the morning... It’s a driving mishap thing.”

Charlie then makes her promise she won’t drive, and Lindsay replies: “That’s very sweet. You’re worried about me behind the wheel.” He then says: “I’m worried about you, I’m a pedestrian.” —PTI

Demi Moore, Ashton Kutcher’s divorce stalled over money

New Delhi, 26 Dec—

Demi Moore and Ashton Kutcher’s divorce has stalled over money.

The former couple, who announced their split in January — are planning to spend Christmas Day (25.12.12) together with their four kids, Leni, seven, Henry, six, Johan, five, and two-year-old Lou, and are determined to act civil despite their stormy relationship.

A source told the New York Post: “They’re trying to be co-parents and show up for their children. They have been trying to work it out, mainly for the kids.

“They have been talking on the phone regularly.”

Heidi is currently dating her bodyguard, Martin Kristen and revealed she loves how wonderful he is with the kids.

She said: “They like him very much. This is also one reason why I’m so fond of him. He’s been helping me for four years now. And he takes wonderful care of the kids. He plays with them, he protects them. I trust him.”

The model admitted that she is madly in love with Martin but doesn’t want to flaunt their relationship because her beau prefers to keep a low profile.

She said: “Yes! I’m in love! Martin is not hiding. He’s just not the sort of guy looking for the spotlight. He prefers to stay in the background. There will always be people who will criticise whoever I live with, what kind of clothes I wear or what hairstyle I have. At the end of the day, you have to do what makes you happy. That’s the rule I live by.” —PTI

Courtney Love slams Nirvana reunion with Paul McCartney

New York, 26 Dec—

Nirvana member Kurt Cobain’s widow Courtney Love has voiced her disapproval at the band’s three surviving members’ performance with Paul McCartney at a 12-12-12 concert.

Love took to Facebook to criticise the recent performance, reported New York Post.

Many people suggested McCartney was filling in for the late Cobain as part of a Nirvana reunion.

Some critics were not too happy to see the Beatles playing with Cobain’s ex-bandmates on the Madison Square Garden stage.

Love said she was “not amused” by McCartney’s involvement.

“Look, if John Lennon were alive, it would be cool,” she added.

During the show, McCartney took the lead for a new song called Cut Me Some Slack.

Love also said that she was upset with Nirvana members Dave Grohl and Krist Novoselic calling the performance a “reunion” because she says that Cobain was the heart and soul of the band.—PTI

Flamengo make approach for Robinho

RIO DE JANEIRO, 26 Dec—Three Flamengo directors on Monday met with Milan vice-president Adriano Galliani to discuss a potential deal for Brazilian striker Robinho.

Flamengo’s intention is to pay 38 million reais for the 28-year-old, paid in installments, and give him a monthly salary of one million reais.

Galliani arrived in Rio de Janeiro last Monday to spend the Christmas holiday. It is thought he will use his time in the city to negotiate Pato’s deal to Corinthians as well. Besides Flamengo, Santos have also expressed an interest in signing the attacker.

Robinho has already had two spells at the Sao Paulo club and it is believed Santos is his preferred destination. His wife and children still live in the area, and personal reasons are behind his desire to quit Milan as soon as possible.

Santos have made an offer of 17 million reais, which has been rejected.

Playoff puzzle nearly complete with one week to go

ARLINGTON, 26 Dec—With one week remaining in the regular season, the National Football League’s playoff picture has come into sharper focus with only a few more pieces of the post-season puzzle to be put into place.

Much of the remaining drama is focused on the NFC East, where the Washington Redskins, Dallas Cowboys and New York Giants will stage a battle royale for the division crown with a ticket to the post-season going to the survivor.

The Redskins (9-6), riding a six-game winning streak and with rookie sensation quarterback Robert Griffin III healthy and calling plays, host the Cowboys (8-7) in the Sunday evening prime-time finale to the NFL regular season that will see the winner claim the division.

With the Cowboys’ (8-7) only path to the post-season requiring a victory, the Redskins could still scarp into the playoffs with a loss if the Chicago Bears and Minnesota Vikings also lose their finales.

The situation is much more dire for the slumping Giants (7-7-1) and with the NFC West title still possible first round bye.

Newcastle boss refuses to release Ameobi for national duty

Newcastle United’s coach Alan Pardew reacts ahead of their English Premier League soccer match against Manchester City in Newcastle, northern England on 15 Dec, 2012. Reuters

London, 26 Dec—Newcastle boss Alan Pardew insists that the club need striker Shola Ameobi for the English Premier League and will not be available for Nigeria at January’s Africa Cup of Nations. The 31-year-old Ameobi had been named in Nigeria’s provisional squad by coach Stephen Keshi for the tournament which gets underway in South Africa on 19 January.

“Shola won’t be going to that, and the national team manager knows the reasons behind that, which I am going to keep to myself,” said Pardew.

Ameobi, who once played for the England Under-21 side, scored the winning goal in Newcastle’s 1-0 win over QPR on Saturday. He made his Nigeria debut in a 3-1 friendly win over Venezuela last month.

Dutch striker Huntelaar extends Schalke contract to 2015

Berlin, 26 Dec—Schalke 04’s prolific Netherlands striker Klaus-Jan Huntelaar has extended his contract by two years until 2015, the Bundesliga club said on Sunday.

“I’ve thought about this decision long and hard and I’m very grateful that the club officials allowed me the time to do so. But now I’ve made the choice I’m most comfortable with,” Huntelaar, 29, said on the club website (www.schalke04.com).

“I’ve always felt at home at Schalke, with the club and the fans, and I want to send out a positive signal now because I believe in our team and I believe we can still achieve a great deal in the second half of the Bundesliga season. “And we aren’t without a chance against Galatasaray in the last 16 of the Champions League, of course,” he added.

The news will be a boost for Schalke manager Jens Keller, who was promoted from youth team coach a week ago to replace the sacked Huub Stevens until the end of the season.

Schalke, who topped their Champions League group, have been struggling domestically with four defeats and no wins in their last six Bundesliga games leaving them in seventh place, trailing 17 points behind leaders Bayern Munich.

They travel to Turkey for the first leg of their Champions League first knockout round clash against Galatasaray on 20 February and Gelsenkirchen stadium on 12 March.

Huntelaar, who joined Schalke from AC Milan in August 2010, was the Bundesliga top scorer with 29 goals last season and has scored 11 times in all competitions so far this term.

He also broke Hermann Eppenhoff’s club record, set in 1941, for the most goals in a season with 48 in all competitions in the last campaign.—Reuters

Pagano joins playoff bound Colts after battle with cancer

Kansas City, 26 Dec—The Indianapolis Colts and their fans got an early Christmas gift when head coach Chuck Pagano returned to work on Monday, three months after being forced to the sidelines to battle cancer.

Diagnosed with leukemia in late September, Pagano spent the last three months undergoing treatment, including chemotherapy, while his inspired team led by rookie quarterback Andrew Luck battled on the field earning an unlikely playoff spot.

“Circumstances don’t make you, they reveal you,” an emotional Pagano told reporters after reporting for work at the teams Indianapolis training facility.

“The way I look at it, my job has just begun. “Besides my job here... my job now is to give back everything I’ve possibly give back to everyone out there who’s fighting some type of illness, some type of disease, some type of cancer,” the Colts, who tied for the NFL’s worst record last season at 2-14, improved to 10-5 with their win over the Kansas City Chiefs on Sunday clinching an AFC wild card.

After three games into a rebuilding season, the Colts learned Pagano would take indefinite leave to fight his cancer and was replaced by assistant coach and offensive coordinator Bruce Arians.

The goal of the Colts became to keep playing until Pagano could return to work. Indianapolis went 9-3 under Arians, who will hand over the head coaching job back to Pagano for the regular season finale this Sunday against the Houston Texans. “It’s a fairy tale,” said owner Jim Irsay. “It’s a Hollywood script. But it’s real.”—Reuters

Cohesiveness among regional authorities and Union ministries key to comprehensive planning: President

Nay Pyi Taw, 26 Dec—Chairman of Planning Commission President U Thein Sein addressed third planning commission meeting at the Presidential Palace here this morning.

The President delivered an opening speech, calling for cohesiveness among the region and state authorities and Union ministries in planning processes to make the planning more comprehensive.

The President underscored a grasp of realities in planning which, he said, require seeking advice from various stakeholders including various unions and MPs.

Framework for Economic and Social Reform (FESR)—guideline for second phase of reforms—has been drafted through “people-centered development” approach, the President, who also praised the positive international attitude towards Myanmar within past six months.

Myanmar is simultaneously drafting National Comprehensive Development Plan (NCDP) which covers next 20 years and Myanmar Comprehensive Development Vision (MCDV) for next 25 years with the help of Japanese and ASEAN economists.

The President tipped the people-centered approach as the criterion for deciding whether growth or equality, concentration or dispersion, private sector leadership or public sector leadership, and capital aid or migration will be given priority in region or state plans.

The President stressed the need to adopt policies for increased productivity, job opportunities, free market, price stability and foreign trade while attaching an immense importance to foreign investments.

He pointed out lack of capacity to smartly harness natural, human and financial resources as the factor for lagging behind.

He said “development financing and capital formation” would be made possible in the coming fiscal year.

The meeting was also attended by Vice-Presidents Dr Sai Mauk Kham and U Nyan Tun, Union ministers, the Union attorney-general, the Union auditor-general, the chairman of Union Civil Services Board, the state/regional chief ministers, deputy ministers, chairmen and heads of leading bodies of self-administered zones/division and departmental heads.

Vice-President Dr Sai Mauk Kham urged those present to establish public-private partnership without delay, demanding sale and lease of public enterprises which bear less or no profit.

Vice-President Dr Sai Mauk Kham called for community driven development which requires entrepreneurship, innovation and good governance.

Union Ministers Dr Kan Zaw and U Win Shein and officials are involved in discussion as well.

The commission met twice in Nay Pyi Taw in June and August, discussing National Plan, urbanization plan and land use policies.

Managing Director U Htoo Thet Htway and Deputy Managing Director U Aung San, Director Captain Soe Win, Director U Hlaing Bwa and Purser Daw Khaing Su Naing also answered queries.
