Vice-President U Nyan Tun visits “Shwe” offshore natural gas project, Myanmar-China oil and gas pipeline project

Chairman of National Energy Management Committee Union Minister for Energy U Than Htay, Vice-Chairman Union Minister for Electric Power U Khin Maung Soe, Rakhine State Chief Minister U Hla Maung Tin and Deputy Minister for Energy U Htin Aung accompanied the Vice-President on his tour.

The Vice-President heard reports on production process and environmental conservation measures presented by Site Representative Mr Thomas Coleman and Managing Director Mr SB Joo. He presented a basket of fruits to local and foreign technicians working there.

The Vice-President and party then attended the opening of the gas platform of “Shwe” offshore natural gas production project. The Vice-President then looked round operations at the platform which is situated 70 kilometers from Sittway and 105 kilometers from Kyaukpyu.

The Vice-President then visited Myanmar-China oil and natural gas pipeline project in Ma-de Island in Kyaukpyu Township and heard reports on implementation progress of the project presented by South East Asia Pipeline Co Ltd (SEAP) Chairman Mr Jiang Changliang of CNPC Company and Union Minister U Than Htay. He then looked round the construction works of the project.

The Vice-President then viewed construction of onshore gas terminal being undertaken by Daewoo Co, construction of No.1 concrete pontoon bridge and another pontoon bridge built by Daewoo for locals. The Vice-President and party arrived back here in the evening.

Central African Republic signs peace deal with rebels

Libreville, 12 Jan—Central African Republic’s government and rebels agreed on Friday to the formation of a national unity government under a ceasefire deal to end the country’s conflict, a new agreement including the release of political prisoners and a prime minister drawn from the opposition, and for a parliamentary election to be held within 12 months to replace the current national assembly. “We will judge Mr. Massi’s sincerity in the coming days,” Massi told Reuters by telephone. UN special envoy to Central African Republic, Margaret Vogt, told the UN Security Council on Friday that the government and rebels needed to discuss why past peace deals had failed to avoid history repeating itself.—Reuters

France launches military intervention in Mali against terrorists offensive

Paris, 12 Jan—French President Francois Hollande announced on Friday that French forces have launched military intervention in support of Malian troops countering rebels’ offensive. “We are faced with a blatant aggression that is threatening Mali’s very existence, France can not accept this,” said the French head of state. “I have decided that France will respond, together with our African partners, to the request from Malian authorities. We will do it strictly within the framework of a UN Security Council resolution,” the president said, referring to motions adopted by the UN Security Council since the beginning of the crisis in Mali in March 2012. Hollande’s remarks came after Malian President Dioncounda Traore made a request to UN Security Council and Hollande, seeking for military aid from France countering the military movements and attacks by terrorist and extremist groups.

The UN Security Council had agreed last month to authorize the African-led International Support Mission in Mali (AFISMA), with 3,300 soldiers deployed, to support the African country in its fight against terrorists and armed rebel groups. Latest reports showed that Mali’s rebel groups had controlled the northern half of the country and are heading south. They have captured the strategic city of Konna, a central town of 50,000 people some 700 km northeast of capital Bamako, putting Mali sovereignty at risk. The situation had caused UN’s grave concern about the military movements of rebel groups along the front line in northern Mali.

The Security Council met on Thursday, calling on member states to “assist the settlement of the crisis and, in particular, to provide assistance to the Malian Defence and Security Forces in order to reduce the threat posed by terrorist organizations and associated groups.”—Reuters

Syria rebels seize base as envoy holds talks

Beirut/Geneva, 12 Jan—Rebels seized control of one of Syria’s largest helicopter bases on Friday, opposition sources said, in their first capture of a military airfield used by President Bashar al-Assad’s forces.

Fighting raged across the country as international mediator Lakhdar Brahimi sought a political solution to Syria’s civil war, meeting senior US and Russian officials in Geneva. “But the two world powers are still deadlocked over Assad’s fate in any transition,” said one opposition source. The United States, which backs the 21-month-old revolt, says Assad can play no future role, while Syria’s main arms supplier Russia said before the talks that he exit should not be a precondition for negotiations. Syria is mired in bloodshed that has cost more than 60,000 lives and displaced millions of people. Severe winter weather is compounding their misery. The UN children’s agency UNICEF says more than 2 million children are struggling to stay warm.

The capture of Taftanaz, a key hub of sporadic fighting, could help rebels solidify their hold on northern Syria, according to Rami Abdelrahman, head of the pro-opposition Syrian Observatory for Human Rights. In Geneva, UN-Arab League envoy Brahimi’s closed-door talks began with individual meetings with US Deputy Secretary of State William Burns and Russian Deputy Foreign Minister Mikhail Bogdanov. Obama, Karzai accelerate end of US combat role in Afghanistan

Washington, 12 Jan—President Barack Obama and Afghan President Hamid Karzai agreed on Friday to speed up the handover of combat operations in Afghanistan to Afghan forces. “We will do it with our African partners, French head of state Hollande can not accept this,” said the President Francois Hollande. The presidents also said that the administration does not rule out a complete withdrawal after 2014, a move that some experts say would be disastrous for the weak Afghan central government and its fledgling security apparatus.

Obama on Friday closed the so-called “zero option” when he several times used the word “if” to suggest that a post-2014 US presence was far from guaranteed. Amazon offers free digital versions of purchased CDs

San Francisco, 12 Jan—Amazon.com Inc, taking aim at Apple’s dominant iTunes store, on Thursday unveiled a service that it hopes will boost digital music sales and encourage more people to use its Cloud music service.

Amazon announced a new service that gives customers free digital versions of music CDs they purchase from the world’s largest online retailer.

The digital music files are automatically stored in customer libraries in remote datacenters run by Amazon, where they are available to play or download immediately through the company’s Cloud Player service, the company said.

Amazon customers who have bought AutoRip-eligible CDs at any time since the company started selling discs in 1998 will also get digital versions of that music stored in their Cloud Player libraries for free, the company added.

Amazon’s MP3 digital music business has been around since 2007, but its market share is less than 15 percent, according to The NPD Group. Apple Inc’s iTunes store is the clear leader, with over 50 percent of the market.

The move is aimed at capturing the lucrative music industry, which has seen sales of physical CDs decline sharply in recent years.

Amazon is trying to distinguish itself from Apple’s dominance in the digital music market by offering free digital versions of CDs purchased through its Cloud Player service.

More than 50,000 albums are available in the AutoRip service, and Amazon said it is likely to add more titles in the future.

Amazon expects its AutoRip service to be more popular among its customers during the past 15 years.

Amazon’s move is part of a broader strategy to compete with Apple in the digital music market, where the company has been losing market share to the iPhone and its App Store.

EU says Google must change search results presentation

London, 12 Jan—Google will be forced to change the way its search results are presented in Europe in face of antitrust charges for “diverting traffic” to its own services.

The European Commission’s investigation into Google’s practices is the most significant challenge the company has faced in Europe.

The EU’s competition commissioner, Joaquin Almunia, told the newspaper in an interview published on Friday that he intends to prevent Google from allegedly distorting choices for consumers and taking business from rivals.

“We are still investigating, but my conviction is the company is diverting traffic,” the newspaper quoted him as saying, referring to Google’s preferential treatment of its own vertical search services.

They are monetising this kind of traffic, the strong position they have in the general search market and this is not only a dominant position, I think—but also—there is an abuse of this dominant position,” he said.

The EU issued Google an ultimatum on 18 December, giving it a month to come up with detailed proposals to resolve a two-year investigation into complaints that it used its power to block rivals such as Microsoft and Yahoo from appearing in its search results.

More than 50,000 albums are available in the AutoRip service. Steve Boom, head of digital music at Amazon, said the company focused on music that has been the most popular among its customers during the past 15 years. Albums include “21” by Adele; “Overexposed” by Maroon 5; “Dark Side of the Moon” by Pink Floyd and “Thriller” by Michael Jackson.

Boom declined to estimate how many CDs Amazon expects to digitize through the AutoRip service. However, he noted that the company has sold hundreds of millions of CDs to millions of customers.

“When we picked those 50,000 titles we focused on having a substantial majority of our physical CD sales cover,” he added. “People will be exposed to Cloud Player and our digital music offering, which is a good thing.”

GM to open third US tech centre, hire 1,000 people

Detroit, 12 Jan—General Motors Co will open a third US information technology centre as part of its plan to bring that work in-house and improve the automaker’s efficiency and productivity.

GM said on Thursday it will hire about 1,000 people, including software developers, database and business analysts, to staff the centre near Atlanta. It will be the third of four centres in the United States GM previously said it was planning to open.

Last summer, GM, a pioneer in outsourcing information technology, said it would reverse that trend with plans to vastly expand the number of in-house IT experts over three years.

At the time of the announcement, GM outsourced some 90 percent of its IT services and provided 10 percent of that work in-house, an approach that had been the model at the Detroit company for most of the last three decades. The US automaker said it planned to flip those percentages.

GM Chief Information Officer Randy Mott, a former Hewlett-Packard Co executive, outlined his plans last June to GM’s IT employees, which then numbered about 1,500. GM currently employs about 2,200 IT staff and that number will rise to about 9,000 when the transition is completed, Mott said on Thursday.

“We’ve been on a journey for the past few months to transform GM IT,” Mott told reporters on a conference call. “One of the key strategies in this turnaround is the opening of information technology innovation centres in key US markets and bringing the work back in-house to GM.”

Last October, GM said it would shift 3,000 people over six months to its pay-roll from HP, which has long handled IT work for the automaker. In the two months prior to that, GM had announced plans to hire 2,000 workers to staff new IT centres in Texas and Michigan. The opening of the fourth GM IT centre will be announced later but employment will be on the same scale, Mott said.

GM said it has hired more than 700 IT specialists to work at the centres in Austin, Texas, and Warren, Michigan. The Georgia centre will be located in Roswell, a northern suburb of Atlanta, and Mott said interviews for the location will begin next week with hiring to occur as soon as possible.

Verizon CEO says no Verizon Wireless buyout talks with Vodafone

Las Vegas, 12 Jan—Verizon Communications is not in talks with Vodafone Group Plc about taking full ownership of their Verizon Wireless venture, despite market speculation this week that such a deal could happen.

“We’re in discussions about a variety of topics, but we’ve had no discussions on anything to do with Verizon Wireless,” said Lowell McAdam, Verizon’s chief executive officer.

There’s no discussions about it,” Verizon Chief Executive Lowell McAdam told reporters late on Tuesday at the Consumer Electronics Show in Las Vegas.

Vodafone, which owns 55 percent of the wireless venture, has long said that it would be interested in buying out Verizon if the 45 percent owner would sell its stake.

Vodafone shares rose 2.6 percent on Tuesday and added almost 8 points to the FTSE 100 Index, the UK benchmark. McAdam was quoted in a Dow Jones report saying that a deal could be feasible.

But McAdam said his comment did not mean that Verizon was any more likely now to be able to purchase Vodafone’s 45 percent stake in Verizon Wireless than it was before.

Weightlessness no cure for “morning clusmes,” astronaut says

Cape Canaveral, (Flor.), 12 Jan—Like many people, Canadian Astronaut Chris Hadfield confesses that he’s sometimes clumsy in the morning just after waking up.

The three-time astronaut, now living aboard the International Space Station, was surprised to learn that did not change in the weightless environment of space.

“When I come out of my sleeping berth to go into our galley and our bathroom, I bump into things even though I’m floating weightless,” the 53-year-old pilot told reporters during an in-flight Press conference on Thursday.

“You can still have the morning clusmes up here and that surprised me,” said Hadfield, who is in line to become the first Canadian commander of the orbital outpost in March.

Hadfield has been sharing his experiences in orbit with a growing flock of Twitter followers. His “Cmdr Hadfield” Twitter account has added more than 130,000 new subscribers since the astronaut blasted off on 19 December for a six-month stay on the station.

“What we’re doing on the space station is funda-mentally fascinating ... It encapsulates where we are in history, with people per-manently living off Earth. With these new technologies and communications, we can directly give people the hu-man side of that,” said Hadfield, who now has more than 163,000 followers.

In between Twitter posts about false fire alarms and fixing the station’s toilet, Hadfield has been sharing photographs taken from his unique vantage point 250 miles above Earth.

His favourite subject so far has been so-called noctilucent, or “night shining” clouds that form at the outermost edge of Earth’s atmosphe-phere. These tenuous patches of ice crystals are barely visi-ble from the planet’s surface, but sparkle clearly in orbit, Hadfield said.—Reuters

A prolonged period of zero interest rates may substantially increase the risks of future financial imbalances and hamper attainment of the 2 percent inflation goal in the future,” she said in her most extensive remarks in a year on policy. “Monetary policy, by contributing to financial imbalances and instability, can just as easily aggravate unemployment as heal it,” she said in a speech in Kansas City.

That stance is hardly representative of other influential officials at the central bank, including Bernanke and the vice chair, Janet Yellen. Their view was more closely captured by comments from Narayana Kocherlakota, who noted inflation was forecast to remain below the central bank’s 2 percent target for an extended period, even by the Fed’s own estimates. “This forecast suggests that, if anything, monetary policy is currently too tight, not too easy,” he said in remarks in Minneapolis.

Last month, the Fed voted to keep up asset purchases at an $85 billion monthly pace to lower borrowing costs and spur hiring. It said it would continue that policy, called quantitative easing, until it saw substantial improvement in the labour market outlook. US central bankers also pledged to hold interest rates near zero until unemployment falls to 6.5 percent, provided inflation does not threaten to rise above 2.5 percent.

George will cast her first vote this month on monetary policy since taking the helm at the Kansas City Fed in October 2011, while Kocherlakota is not a voter this year. “The latest remarks from Kansas City Fed’s Esther George have cemented the presence of a hawkish dissenter on the FOMC in 2013, with Richmond Fed’s (Jeffrey) Lacker along passing the hawkish torch,” said Gennadiy Goldberg, US strategist at TD Securities.

The reductions will be completed by the end of 2014, the company said. Boeing announced a major restructuring of its defense division in November that would cut 30 percent of management jobs from 2010 levels, close facilities and consolidate several business units. American Express to cut 5,400 jobs, takes charges in fourth quarter

New York, 12 Jan.—Credit card company American Express Co said it would cut about 5,400 jobs, or 8.5 percent of its workforce, as it restructures its business and pays legal bills. The steps will cost the company about $600 million in charges in the fourth quarter after taxes, which will halve its net income. Nearly $300 million of the charges are to cover restructuring, primarily in its travel division, to save money and adapt to the fact that customers increasingly book travel online and on their smartphones instead of with travel agents.

The other half of the charges are for higher costs from customers redeeming more rewards for spending with cards, as well as $153 million of payments totrim expenses that were overcharged or short-changed benefits.

American Express tends to cut staff at the beginning of recessions. But CEO Kenneth Chenault, speaking to stock analysts after the announcement on Thursday, said spending on its cards continues to grow.

“This is not driven by our view of the macro environment,” he said. The company said the job cuts will happen over the year and come even as it hires some new employees and adds resources in its online customer service. The current workforce of 63,500 people will be about 4 to 6 percent smaller by the end of 2013.

Fed hawks worry about threat of inflation

Two top Federal Reserve policymakers expressed discomfort on Thursday with the US central bank’s easy monetary policy, in comments suggesting Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke may face more dissent this year.

San Francisco, 12 Jan—Boeing Co (BA.N) said it will cut a little more than 40 percent of jobs, or 160 positions, at its El Paso plant as it looks to reduce the impact of planned US defence budget cuts.

The company said it will reduce occupied square footage 50 percent at the plant by moving from three buildings to one. The plant in Texas manufactures electronics for a variety of Boeing products.

As Fed officials mull when to reduce or end the asset buying - some, including Bullard, say that could happen this year - the debate may focus on potential inflation as well as the outlook for the economy.

In the latter front, George was decidedly more upbeat than Bullard, saying she expected the US economy to grow just above 2 percent this year, while unemployment falls about half a percentage point.

Bullard sees growth at 3.2 percent this year and said, he said Thursday, and sees the jobless rate dropping to 6.5 percent - the Fed’s threshold for rethinking its low-rate policy - by the middle of next year. The US jobless rate in December was 7.8 percent.

Kocherlakota predicts US gross domestic product will expand at a 2.5 percent pace in 2013 and 3 percent next year, estimates that put him on the weak end of Fed policymakers’ forecasts.

“This growth will do little in terms of returning the economy to the historical trend,” Kocherlakota said in prepared remarks to a Minneapolis Fed event.

US court delays trial of suspected mass shooter until March

AURORA, United States, 12 Jan—The US District Court hearing James Holmes’ case for his suspected role in killing 12 people in a theater shooting spree decided on Friday to postpone his arraignment until 12 March, despite objections from prosecutors and the overwhelming majority of the victims and their families. Shortly after the announcement, the court was recessed following an outburst. The father of a victim of the theater shooting yelled “rot in hell!” at the alleged gunman and was immediately detained by Arapahoe County sheriff deputies. The judge reconvened the court and brought back all parties, including hand-cuffed Steve Hernandez, father of Rebecca Wingo, one of the 12 people killed in the shooting.

“I’m terribly sorry for your loss...I can only imagine the emotions that are raging,” Sylvester said in a consoling tone. “But we don’t want to have any outbursts,” added Hernandez, apologized, promised never to act out again, was released and taken out from a back door of the court building. He was escorted to his car by 5 sheriff deputies and refused to talk to the media. Sylvester ruled on Thursday night that prosecutors had presented enough evidence to proceed toward trial — after a week of emotional testimony that included tearful police officers recalling the horror they faced, riveting emergency phone call recordings and disturbing self-portraits taken by Holmes just prior to the shootings.—Xinhua

Czech president urges voters to avoid media influence in election

PRAGUE, 12 Jan—The first ever direct presidential election in the Czech Republic started on Friday afternoon, with a colourful spectrum of candidates vying to take over eurocentric out-going President Vaclav Klaus. Casting his ballot, Klaus said the voters should not let their decision affected by media as the country’s first ever direct presidential election started on Friday afternoon.

The new president should be someone who has already done something for the Czech Republic, whose experience is evident to everyone and “who really cares for this country,” Klaus said when casting his ballot.

He said he hopes all people will take part in the election and will “decide according to their own minds, their own heads, not in accordance with the strong media campaign that has culminated these days.”

Klaus refuted the speculations that he may shun the direct election, which he had sharply criticised.

Milos Zeman, former Social Democrat (CSSD) prime minister now running for the Citizens’ Rights Party (SPOZ), is considered a favorite out of the nine presidential candidates.

Another candidate expected to advance to the second round of elections is former interior prime minister Jan Fischer (unaffiliated).

No matter who wins, there is hope that the first direct presidential election in Czech may bring a new political balance between the government and the Presidential Office.

The campaigns before the election have showed that presidential candidates have promised to push through a clear political agenda, which may cause tension in the Czech parliamentary system that does not identify with a strong role of the president.

The new president can use his direct, strong mandate from the voters in possible disputes with the executive power.

The presidential candidates have thus far presented a wide choice for Czech voters. Apart from Fischer and Zeman, the tattooed artist Vladimir Franz showed that one can succeed with a campaign without big sponsors by concentrating on social networking websites.

Despite the disputes over the registration of candidates for which Japan-born senator Tomio Okamura requested the election be postponed in vain, analysts said the presidential campaign shows candidates are focused on political programs rather than backstage political bargaining.—Xinhua

Harsh winter brings new difficulty for 600,000 Syrians

GENEVA, 12 Jan—The severe winter conditions across Syria and the surrounding region in the past week have brought new difficulties for over 600,000 Syrian refugees fleeing the conflict, said the United Nations Refugee Agency (UNHCR) on Friday.

To date, UNHCR has registered or assisted 612,000 Syrians around the region, in which 194,000 taking refuge in Lebanon, 176,000 in Jordan and 153,000 in Turkey, others are in Iraq, Egypt and North Africa, said Adrian Edwards, spokesman for the agency. “There has been no let-up in the numbers of people fleeing Syria into neighbouring countries,” he said.

Despite the preparations for the winter months, many refugees are facing particularly cold and damp conditions, Edwards added.

UNHCR and its partners are working together to provide significant winterization aid to refugees, including blankets, mattresses and emergency clothing.

However, with difficulties of access in Syria, they cannot reach all people in need.—Xinhua

Investigation launched over Guangdong officials property suspicions

GUANGZHOU, 12 Jan—Disciplinary authorities in south China’s Guangdong Province have begun investigating accusations that two local officials own huge property portfolios that suggest corruption.

An investigation team was set up on 4 January by the disciplinary committee in Xiaolan Township, Zongshan City, to look into the case surrounding Huang Xinze and Huo Chengtang, according to Feng Jiehong, top disciplinary official of the township.

Huang is the chief of the Communist Party of China Lianfeng community committee, while Huo is the community’s top financial official. The duo were exposed by an Internet user “13800abc” on the popular Sina Weibo microblogging service of owning eight pieces of land and properties valued at more than 100 million yuan (15.87 million US dollars).—Xinhua

Greek parliament approves tax bill to ensure next rescue loans tranche

ATHENS, 12 Jan—Greek parliament approved onerously Saturday a new tax bill to ensure the disbursement of the next tranche of international rescue loans aiming to lift the debt-laden country onto the path of recovery.

The so-called “mini” tax bill which is part of a wider tax system overhaul scheduled to continue in spring, passed with the backing of the 165 deputies of the three-party coalition government at the end of a marathon session which was broadcast live on the parliament’s television channel.

During the roll call vote the bill’s articles were ratified by a wide majority with 208 MPs present in the 300-member chamber.

The new law aims to boost revenues by approximately two billion euros (2.65 billion US dollars) over the next two years through extra taxes, to simplify the taxation system and address widespread tax evasion, which is seen as a fundamental factor behind the debt crisis which erupted three years ago.—Xinhua

New Light of Myanmar
Synergy of pluralism

In his New Year Message to the Parliament, the President praised the resurrection of the new political culture that enables the ideological differences to coexist peacefully in the Myanmar society which is on the right track to a pluralistic democracy.

Hopes are high again and we are convinced of peace and tranquility in 2013 despite the peace talks between the government and KIO/KIA is at a standstill while the people want to get both sides back to the negotiation table.

We firmly believe that efforts to resolve the last of the country’s decades-long ethnic conflicts in the northern part of the country will be realized soon and the peace dialogue with renewed enthusiasm will facilitate the peaceful ending of the conflict.

Only a negotiation process within the pluralistic framework that can bring about a common good acceptable to all stakeholders could help us achieve the lasting peace.

Within the pluralistic framework, it is very important to guarantee a point that no one is put aside and given undue privileges. Generally saying, all stakeholders are to be allowed to make their cent per cent commitment in decision-making process.

All players are to be free from obstacles like fear, external influence, display or exercise of power, sense of disenchantment and suspicion, mistrust and misrepresentation of the facts and figures that can all forbid a carefully negotiated series of concession from emerging. Only if these conditions are fulfilled can all players be prevailed upon to participate in the good-faith peace negotiation with no ethically ambiguous tactics.

Myanmar is home to more than a hundred nationalities. So we have different cultures and traditions, different languages and ideas and different races and religions. Although we live in a multicultural society, we all belong to the Republic of the Union of Myanmar.

Now the country sees cease fire agreements with 10 main nationalities armed groups. The government and its hand and open-nerd policy for the last armed group. If both sides were at peace, the Union would regain the synergy of pluralism which has been lost since post-independence period.

A war of words over which one should come first—cessation of ongoing fighting or a genuine political dialogue—is not the answer to the people’s woes, especially displaced persons in the conflict area. Actually, an immediate ceasefire would be much more sensible to do at once.

Trust in Reform

Examples of some Northeast Asian countries

Many analysts have been concerned that decline of public trust in governments over a few decades is a phenomenon global in nature. A wave that some developed countries have been committed to efforts for engendering public trust is also found. Some say it is because there is a change in perception of the people and in dynamics of politicians. Some claim that negative popular perception of the government is due to the government’s public trust efforts and “social capital”. It was a major issue not only in the western countries but also in East and Northeast regions. Here is a brief account of related reforms in China, Japan, South Korea, Vietnam and Mongolia.

China has shifted clearly from central-planned economy to market-oriented one over past three decades. The rapidly growing market of China could attract substantial foreign investment. According to a January 2010 press release of World Values Survey, public trust in the Chinese government and National People’s Congress was pretty high then. According to 2009 official figures, China had 415,000 registered civil societies and thousands of business organizations and unregistered civil societies.

Many NGOs are initiating socio-economic development of China and serving the interests of people in environmental conversation, education, health, science research, culture, poverty alleviation, legal assistance and so on.

The 2005 Public Servant Law is one of the prominent steps in reform processes of the government. The reforms in public service include four aspects: institutional reform, from cadre management to public service, organizational reform, wage reform and reform in training public servants. These reforms include downsizing the management structure, recruiting the qualified staff from private sector as government employees, removing barriers in management and other important issues, considering only expertise and qualifications in recruiting new staff, increasing wages of government employees. In 2001, the government department, granting promotion to the staff based on their performance and training and recruiting qualified staff for ministries directly.

Most of initial legislative reforms are associated with economic sector. According to 1994 administrative law, every citizen has a right to sue any corruption officials. Constitutional amendment that covered human right protection and corruption in 2004 and the establishment of National Bureau of Anti-corruption in Beijing in 2007 were regarded as major reforms.

In Japan, according to statistics of World Values Survey, although public trust in governmental departments is generally low, judiciary and police force win high public trust. Public trust in parliament, political parties and civil societies is slightly low compared with that of the people in government. There has been high trust in media. Despite difficulty in the legitimacy of independent social organizations, there is provision with support and encouragement from the government. Some argued that non-governmental organizations that have the least ideological differences and that are assisting in the government policy are allowed to enjoy more social capital.

There have been calls for reform in public servant affairs. In Japan starting from 19th century, the best men were allowed to discharge duties in selected departments.

As the traditional method of selection in which the best men were appointed as government servants gradually led to insufficient manpower not only because the bureaucrats continued to take major positions in private sector after their resignations from the government duties but also because traditionally, bureaucrats of central government had authority over legislation and financial matters. This trend calls for reform emerged.

However, it can be witnessed that reform in public servant affairs could be made easily as government employees themselves prefer the current tradition.

According to Transparency International’s 2008’s corruption perception index, Japan was ranked 18th among 180 countries.

There has been more substantial reduction in corruption than before and it is expected to continue to reduce corruption in future.

Regarding the facts on the Republic of Korea collected until recent years, public trust in government has slightly decreased and they have placed great trust in media, system and police force. It is found that there has been a high degree of public trust in public servants and media. It is witnessed that the government has been lower in parliament and political parties. So it can be said that public trust in political process is low in ROK. By 1990s, the ROK became a mature democracy. The National Assembly of the ROK is vested with enough power. Civil societies with the rapid development are playing a role of criticizing social and economic systems, doing positive monitoring and developing an awareness of all-round development in politics. It is the time of Kim Dae-Jung administration, reforms in public adnistration, financial, economic and worker sectors associated with the programme for tackling 1997 economic crisis were undertaken.

The government had initiated management systems based on transparency, competition and capability. According to the course of the history, laws which were once employed by the government were amended, making them useful in democratic transition.

Although there have been considerable criticisms on weaknesses in the Constitution, the government gained public satisfaction as its functions were working in support of the verdict of the Constitutional Tribunal. Iran warns of civil war in Iraq: cleric

TEHRAN, 12 Jan—Tehran’s interim Friday Prayer leader warned on Friday of what he referred to as the threats of civil war in Iraq.

Several cities of Anbar Province in western Iraq have been the scene of anti-government protesters in the past days. Anbar protests, which first began on 23 December, swiftly spread to cities in the Sunni Provinces of Nineveh, Kirkuk, Salahudin and D钢结构，以及在巴格达的Sunnis District of Azamiya.

The Sunni protesters complained about injustice, marginalization, Discremation, double standards and politicization of the judicial system. They also accused Iraqi Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki of using judiciary to fight his political opponents in order to legally tame the opposition in the political process.

“The United States and the Zionist regime have devised a plot for Iraq and seek to ignite the flames of sedition and civil war in the country,” Jannati was quoted as saying.

He warned that the people of Iraq should remain vigilant and not pay attention to the enemy efforts which aim to sow discord among Iraqis.”

The two sides had made rapid progress in mutual political trust, achieved fruitful results in exchanges and cooperation in such fields as the economy, trade, culture, education and healthcare, and maintained close coordination in international and regional affairs and important issues of common concern, he said.”

UN chief appoints acting head for Department of Safety and Security

UNITED NATIONS, 12 Jan
—UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon announced on Friday the appointment of Kevin Kennedy of the United States as Acting Head of the UN Department of Safety and Security (DSS), a UN spokesman told reporters here.

Kennedy “brings to the position extensive experience in organizing the international community’s responses to humanitarian emergencies worldwide at the strategic, political, policy and field levels,” said Martin Nesirky, Ban’s spokesman, at the daily briefing.

Kevin Kennedy was appointed as Under-Secretary-General for Safety and Security last May by the Security Council.

Established in January 2005, DSS is responsible for providing leadership, operational support and oversight of the security management system to enable the safest and most efficient conduct of the programs and activities of the UN system.

The acting head of DSS is replacing Gregory B Starr, “who announced his intention to leave the position of the Under-Secretary-General for Safety and Security due to personal and family reasons,” Nesirky said.

Prior to this appointment, Kennedy recently served as Deputy Special Representative for the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti (MINUSTAH) from April 2010.

Cyprus obtains qualified support for bailout from Eurozone leaders

NICOSIA, 12 Jan — Cyprus obtained qualified support from Friday from Eurozone leaders in its efforts to push through a bailout agreement after several warnings from German lawmakers that the German parliament was not ready to endorse the deal.

German Chancellor Angela Merkel, participating in a meeting of European People’s Party (EPP) leaders in Cyprus’ southern city of Limassol, said Cyprus deserved solidarity from the European Union but at the same time it has to pursue economic reforms. “Cyprus must move forward with reforms of its economy but on the other hand we must show solidarity,” said Merkel, who had earlier warned Cyprus not to expect special treatment by its Eurozone partners.

Even as she spoke, government spokesman Stefanos Stefanou said Cyprus had been complying with conditions set by the troika—the European Commission, the European Central Bank and the International Monetary Fund—including enacting stricter legislations to fight money laundering.

“We have proven our will to do all it takes to overcome difficulties and this has been recognized by the most recent Eurogroup meeting,” Stefanou added.

He also said Cyprus did not ask for special favours.

“Only ask for justice, given the fact that Cyprus is the victim of a European decision for a haircut to the Greek debt,” he said. The Greek debt write-down cost Cyprus banks an estimated loss of 4.5 billion euros (about 6 billion US dollars) and forced them to apply for state support to recapitalize.

The Cypriot government says that it was forced to apply for bailout because of the recapitalization needs for the banks, estimated at 10 billion euros, although it is negotiating an additional amount of 7.5 billion euros for budget financing and paying back the sovereign debts up to the end of 2015.”

Austria court convicts three for glorifying Nazism

VIENNA, 12 Jan—An Austrian court has sentenced a leading neo-Nazi figure to nine years in prison for glorifying Nazism on an extreme-right website.

Gottfried Kuesssel, 54, was convicted on Thursday for running the “Alpen-Donau” website and glorifying Nazism which is banned in Austria.

Kuesssel has denied any wrongdoing and said he would appeal against the conviction.

“I had expected an acquittal because of the very thin evidence. There was only circumstantial evidence, not more,” he was quoted as saying by Austria’s ORF radio. Two others of his accomplices were also convicted to seven and four and a half years in jail.”

Foreign ministers of Singapore, Japan discuss economic cooperation, Singapore says

Singapore, 12 Jan—Singapore’s Foreign Minister and his Japanese counterpart exchanged views on boosting bilateral economic cooperation on Friday, according to Singapore’s Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Fumio Kishida, who was on his first overseas visit since his appointment as Japanese Foreign Minister, met with Singapore Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong on Friday. Separate talks were also held, according to the ministry.

The Singapore leaders and Kishida “reaffirmed the excellent bilateral ties and close cooperation between Singapore and Japan, which are underpinned by longstanding and deep economic and business links,” the statement said.

The bilateral trade and investment has expanded steadily since the conclusion of the Japan-Singapore Economic Partnership Agreement (JSEPA) in 2002. Both countries also work closely under the Japan-Singapore Partnership Programme for the 21st Century (JSPPP21) to extend joint technical assistance to other countries in the region.

“Our leaders discussed with Minister Kishida how both countries could further strengthen cooperation in the bilateral and regional context through the JSEPA, JSPPP21 and other mechanisms,” it said.

The statement mentioned briefly that both sides have been engaged in an exchange of views on regional political and security developments.—Xinhua

Japanese PM to visit Thailand next week

Bangkok, 12 Jan—Japan’s Prime Minister Shinzo Abe will pay an official visit to Thailand next week and hold talks with his Thai counterpart Yingluck Shinawatra on bilateral and regional issues.

The newly-named Japanese Prime Minister will visit the Thai capital on 17 and 18 January to discuss with the Thai lady Prime Minister at the Government House on issues of economic cooperation, bilateral trade and investment, a senior Thai government official said on Friday.

Topics of mutual interest between the two leaders also include infrastructure development projects in Thailand, anti-flood measures, human resources issues and regional security, according to Thailand’s East Asia Affairs Department head Damrong Kraikruan.

“Nevertheless, no military issue will be included on the agenda of bilateral talk. We’ll only create an atmosphere of regional peace and constructive cooperation. We will by no means discuss anything which might otherwise be misconstrued or cause international tension,” he said.

Thailand remains as Japan’s largest overseas investment site in the South-East Asian region, and Japan has remained Thailand’s biggest trade partner with last year’s bilateral trade volume amounting to 70 billion US dollars. Besides, the number of Japanese tourists to Thailand accounted for the third largest, after the Malaysians and Chinese in 2012. An estimated 1.2 million Japanese tourists visited Thailand last year.

The Japanese prime minister is scheduled to visit Hanoi before coming to Bangkok from where he will proceed to Jakarta during his first ASEAN tour.

Indonesia outlines plans to bolster tourism by 2014

Jakarta, 12 Jan—Indonesia’s government will boost 16 tourism destinations within the country and set up seven particular interest tour zones by 2014, according to the nation’s tourism ministry statement on Friday.

A total of 5 destinations, including Bromo-Tengger-Semeru volcano chain in East Java, Komodo dragon in East Nusatenggara, Wakatobi and Toraja in Sulawesi and Sanur in Bali, would be developed this year, Director General of Tourism Marketing of the ministry Esthy Reko Astuty said in a statement.

Meanwhile, the seven special-interest tours planned to be developed by the ministry were historical and cultural tour, nature and eco-tour, recreational sports (such as diving, surfing, sailing, trekking, hiking and golf), cruise ship, shopping and culinary, health and wellness, and convention.

“Until November last year Indonesia recorded a year-on-year growth of 5.09 percent growth in tourism sector,” Esthy said.

Indonesia is aiming at attracting 9 million foreign tourists this year. The tourism and creative economy industry is the seventh largest sector contributing to the country’s growth.—Xinhua

Climate change costs Vietnam 15 bln USD annually

Hanoi, 12 Jan—Climate change has cost Vietnam 15 billion US dollars per year, equal to 5 percent of the country’s GDP, local Dan Tri newspaper reported on Friday, quoting results of a survey by DARA International, a member of the Climate Change Working Group.

According to DARA International’s research on vulnerable climate change in 2012, the damage to Vietnam’s seafood sector due to climate change ranks top.

Nguyen Quang Thanh, member of the Live & Learn Centre, said without effective and urgent measures taken, the impact caused by climate change will likely cost Vietnam more, up to more than 11 percent of its GDP by 2030.

DARA International’s report revealed that the sea rising costs Vietnam about 4 billion US dollars per year. Specifically, damages to the production input annually reach 8 billion dollars, to the fishery sector with 1.5 billion dollars and to agriculture with 0.5 billion dollars.

Philippine police nab Abu Sayyaf member in Manila

Manila, 12 Jan—The Philippine National Police (PNP) arrested early on Friday a suspected member of the terrorist Abu Sayyaf group in Metro Manila, the capital of the country, a ranking police officer said later that day.

PNP spokesman Chief Superintendent Generoso Cerbo Jr said that joint police and military operations resulted in the apprehension of Suhod Salasim in Taguig, a city of Metro Manila, at around 6:20 am. The suspect was nabbed by virtue of three arrest warrants for his involvement in the kidnapping of nurses in a hospital in Lamitan City in June 2011, kidnapping and illegal detention of teachers and students in Sumisip town, both in southern Philippine Province of Basilan.

Authorities recovered from Salasim a grenade and two cartridges of ammunition for M203 grenade launcher, Mr Cerbo said.

The Abu Sayyaf was founded in early 1990s by Islamic extremists, and it has degenerated into a loose alliance of local armed bandit groups over the past decade, carrying out a series of public terrorist attacks and high-profile kidnappings.—Xinhua

Nigerian navy says detained Russian crew handed over to police for prosecution

ABUJA, 12 Jan—The Nigerian Navy on Thursday said the 15 illegal Russian crew members arrested on 19 October, 2012 had been handed over to police for prosecution.

Chief of Naval Staff Admiral Dele Ezeoba told reporters in Abuja that the crew members were handed over to police for prosecution. Admiral Dele Ezeoba told reporters in Abuja that the 15 illegal Russian crew members were detained in the Lagos waters by the Navy for alleged illegal entry.

The Navy also alleged that the Russians did not declare their cargo and were found in possession of a cache of arms and ammunition. Items found with the crew included 14 assorted AK47 rifles with 3,643 rounds of ammunition and 20 Benelli MRI 20 barrel with 4,955 rounds ammunition.

He noted that three years after the earthquake the focus is now moving from emergency to stabilisation, Nesirky said.

During his visit, Lud- doux is scheduled to meet a number of government officials, including the Haitian interior minister and foreign affairs, said Nesirky.

The under-secretary general will also meet with officials and staff from the UN and the ICRC before returning to New York over the weekend, Nesirky added.

Founder of Kurdish PKK among three women slain in Paris

PARIS/ISTANBUL, 12 Jan—A woman who helped find the Kurdish PKK rebel movement and two other women were found shot dead in Paris overnight after execution-style killings that cast a shadow over peace moves between Turkey and the guerrillas.

The bodies of Sakine Cansiz, a founder of the Kurdistan Workers Party (PKK) in the early 1980s, and her two fellow activists were found in the early hours of Thursday at an institute in the French capital that has close links to the PKK.

They appeared to have been shot in the head, a French police source said. Kurdish media said one woman was also shot in the abdomen. Workers had broken into the room at the Information Centre of Kurdistan in Paris, where three Kurdish women were found shot dead, on 10 Jan, 2013.—Reuters

Cansiz was a prominent PKK figure, initially as a fighter and later in charge of the group’s civil affairs in Europe, according to a Kurdish lawyer who knew her. A 1995 photograph shows her standing next to militant leader Abdullah Ocalan, wearing olive battle fatigue and clutching an assault rifle.

“The choice of Cansiz as a target is because she was symbolic of the Kurdish movement,” said Frane Cenc, a Kurdish lawyer in Paris who met Cansiz at least half a dozen times and described her as exceptionally well-spoken and well-educated. “She had been one of its founding members, she had spent years in prison on terror convictions, and she had become a historical figure,” he told Reuters, adding that he found it hard to believe fellow Kurds would have taken her life.

Two hurt in California high school shooting

LOS ANGELES, 12 Jan—Two people were injured in a high school shooting in Taft city of Kern County, California, on Thursday morning.

According to local police, one of the victims, a science teacher, suffered minor injury, while the other was a student who is now in serious but stable condition. The student went to Kern Medical Centre after the shooting.

Kern County sheriff’s spokesman Ray Pruitt told media that the suspect was a student, and is now under police custody. He also said the suspect’s weapon was a shotgun.

The motivation behind the shooting is still under investigation, Pruitt added.

The Bakersfield Californian, a local newspaper, quoted another police source as saying that the 16-year-old suspect walked into his class at around 9:00 am local time (1700 GMT) with a 12-gauge shotgun.

A neighbour in the area saw the student walking to school with a gun and called 911. It is reported that the suspect talked to the student before he shot at him. A teacher named Ryan Heber and a campus supervisor fired the gun shots, and managed to persuade the suspect to put down his gun.

The police said the wounded student was an intended target of the suspect, who also named a second intended target that was not hit. School students were evacuated to a football field in the wake of the incident, and their parents were called to pick them up.

Also on Thursday, US Vice President Joe Biden held talks with hunters, wild-life interest groups and gun rights groups over gun control.

Children in Central African Republic at edge of survival

UNICEF: 12 Jan—Children in the Central African Republic (CAR) need urgent protection amid widespread tension between pro-government forces and Seleka rebels, a UN humanitarian official said. “You can imagine children living in a temporary shelter or outside in a field, children that do not have access to a school, children that fall sick and cannot get access to medical treatment,” Shannon Strother, Chief of the UN Children’s Fund (UNICEF) emergency team in CAR, in a recent interview with Xinhua.

The Seleka rebels, who accused CAR President Francois Bozize of reneging on a 2008 peace deal and cracking down on dissenters, launched another revolt early December, forcing tens of thousands of people to flee their homes.

Singapore’s long-haul budget airline Scoot makes debut flight to China’s Qingdao, Shenyang

SINGAPORE, 12 Jan—Scoot, the long-haul budget unit of Singapore Airlines, made its debut flight to Chi-na’s Qingdao and Shenyang early on Friday. The airline had before canceled some 20 flights from Singapore to the two cities last year, citing problems with regulatory approval.

The new schedule requires the thrice-weekly service to operate a route of Singapore—Qingdao/Shenyang—Qingdao/Shenyang, instead of the originally planned circular route of Singapore—Shenyang—Qingdao/Shenyang, the company said in a statement. They’re the eighth and ninth routes for Scoot.

The route between Sin-gapore and Shenyang via Qingdao will be operated on Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday every week.

Flight information on Changi Airport’s website has unveiled that the flight was scheduled to leave Singapore at 0005 am on Friday, but the departure time had been revised to 0130 am. Last November, the Scoot said it had rescheduled the departure time between 27 November last year and 8 January this year were canceled. —Xinhua
News Corp’s Fox leads Hollywood studios in Oscar nods

Los Angeles, 12 Jan—News Corp’s 20th Century Fox led the Oscars race among Hollywood studios by scoring 31 nominations, including best picture nods for both “Lincoln” and “Life of Pi,” setting the stage for the box office bounces that selected films often get.

The coveted nominations for the 85th annual Academy Awards, to be held on 24 February, will trigger new and frenzied marketing efforts for the highlighted films, as studios jostle to take advantage of the buzz before Hollywood’s biggest night. The high scorecard for Rupert Murdoch’s News Corp marked yet another triumph for the media company which has seen its stock almost double from a panic-driven sell-off in 2011 in response to a phone hacking scandal that engulfed its British newspapers.

Its Fox film unit earned 12 nominations on Thursday for “Lincoln,” a US Civil War-era movie starring Daniel Day-Lewis that took home more nominations than any other film. Fox co-financed the film and distributed it internationally. “Lincoln” was produced by Dreamworks and distributed domestically by Walt Disney, ranking third among studios in nominations, with 17 nods, including 12 for “Lincoln.” Sony Pictures Entertainment, which was second with 24 nominations, earned nods for “Zero Dark Thirty,” “Skyfall” and “Amour,” with five nominations each. Fox also earned 11 nominations for “Life of Pi,” among them best picture, best director and adapted screenplay, while its Fox Searchlight unit scored four nods for independent film “Beasts of the Southern Wild,” including best picture and best director.

“We couldn’t be more thrilled to have such a diverse range of films recognized by the Academy,” said Jim Gianopulos, CEO and Chairman 20th Century Fox Film. “And it’s been equally gratifying to see how audiences throughout the world have embraced these pictures.”

Tom Cruise turns down Psy’s Gangnam challenge

Seoul, 12 Jan—Tom Cruise turned down a chance to try out his Gangnam Style dance skills on Thursday, despite topping South Korean rapper Psy’s list of celebrities who should attempt the signature horse-riding dance.

When asked last year which person he would most like to see “go Gangnam Style”, Psy named the Mission Impossible star as his first choice.

Tom Cruise, who was in Seoul to promote his new film, hailed Psy as “quite a sensation” but declined to follow the likes of UN secretary general Ban Ki-moon in imitating the singer’s dance moves.—PTI

Taylor Swift reportedly told ex-boyfriend he was “lucky to even be with her”

Los Angeles, 12 Jan—Taylor Swift reportedly told Harry Styles he was “lucky to even be with her.”

The pop couple ended their two-month relationship earlier this week with a blazing argument, in which Taylor told the One Direction lothario her career was more important than his.

A source close to the couple told The Sun newspaper: “Taylor Swift knows she’s far more high-profile in America and way richer, and saw her career as more important. She always brushed off his schedule and needs and put hers first. When he complained his handcuffs were getting irritated and she should do more to make things work, they started to yell crazy things. Taylor even yelled he was lucky to be with her.”

Cash Warren is my soul mate: Jessica Alba

Los Angeles, 12 Jan—Actress Jessica Alba says she felt a kindred connection when she met her producer husband Cash Warren on the sets of Fantastic Four in 2004. The 31-year-old, who has two daughters with Warren, said she instantly knew they would stay together forever, reported Showbizspy.

“I just knew when I met him that I was going to know him forever. It was with him I instantly felt like family. I never felt like that with anyone. We got each other. We’re kindred spirits,” she said. Jessica Alba has daughters Honour, four, and 16-month-old Haven with Warren after tying the knot in 2008.

On a weekend Cash might say, ‘Go get your nails done with a girlfriend. Haven is down for a nap and Honor and I will play. I know you work hard. You deserve some time for yourself’. ‘That, to me, is romantic. He’s saying, ‘You matter’, and that’s more than just the mother of the kids or the wife who goes out to events with him.’—PTI

Uruguay’s striker Abreu joins Nacional

RIO DE JANEIRO, 12 Jan—Uruguay’s international striker Sebastian Abreu has ended his three-year deal at Brazilian club Botafogo to join Montevideo outfit Nacional. The 36-year-old agreed to a two-year deal with Uruguay’s reigning top-flight champions on Friday, according to a statement on the player’s official website.

It will be his third stint at the club, having scored 24 goals in 38 appearances from 2004 to 2005 and 16 matches while on loan from Spain’s Deportivo La Coruna in 2001.

“Sebastian ‘Loco’ Abreu has just confirmed his exit from Botafogo and return to the club where his heart belongs,” the statement said.

Abreu has won 70 caps for Uruguay and scored 26 goals since his international debut in 1996.

Top runners to show up at Houston marathon

HOUSTON, 12 Jan—A number of top runners will be among about 30,000 half-marathoners and marathoners at the 2013 Chevron Houston Marathon on Sunday, organizers said on Friday.

The Houston marathon, in its 41st year, will bring roughly a quarter-million people to the Houston area this year between the three races this year and great interactive experiences.

“We have 30,000 runners for the year that the 5k is the day before the Chevron Houston Marathon and Aramco Houston Half Marathon,” said Houston Mayor Annise Parker. “We hope that I’ll get back to my old level. That means playing healthy and riding at the front again and if I am at my best I think I will be well worthwhile for the team to ride as a leader,”

Evans told reporters at BMC’s season launch on Friday. Team mates and world champion Philippe Gilbert has the same aims as every year.

Ishikawa and Wiratchant get Masters invitations

MIAMI, 12 Jan—Japanese Ryo Ishikawa and Thai Thaworn Wiratchant have received invitations to play in this year’s Masters at Augusta, tournament organizers said on Friday.

“The Masters has long established a tradition of supporting the global game, and they were excited to extend invitations to Thaworn Wiratchant and Ryo Ishikawa, who we hope will provide added interest and enthusiasm for golf in Asia through their participation in the tournament,” said Billy Payne, chairman of Augusta National Golf Club.

The tournament is scheduled for 11-14 April. Wiratchant, who won the 2012 Asian Tour Order of Merit, will be making his first Masters appearance.

“I think Armstrong... That story has been going on way too long. I think it’s time for it to be over,” said the BMC rider. Meanwhile, the team’s Italian former world champion Alessandro Ballan is recovering after a crash at high speed in December on a training run in which he broke his leg and a rib as well as having to have his spleen removed.

He has announced that his ex-world champion on the BMC team, recently spoke to Ballan.

“He’s feeling better and better but, of course, he went through a really bad crash and I feel sorry for him and his family, what he went through,”

The Norwegian said. “But hopefully he will come back to his former level. That’s his goal and that’s our team BMC’s goal.”

Djokovic backs old routine to break new ground

MELBOURNE, Jan 12—For Novak Djokovic, the formula for success at the Australian Open is simple—if it ain’t broke, don’t fix it. The world number one will try to create history over the next two weeks by becoming the first man to win three straight Australian Open titles in the professional era. Twelve months ago, Djokovic picked up his fifth grand slam title with victory over Rafa Nadal in an epic final, lasting just short of six hours.

Back in Melbourne after a few weeks rest, including a holiday in the Maldives, Djokovic looked fresh and raring to go again as he looks to create history. “So far so good,” the Serb told reporters after taking part in the Australian Open Kids Tennis Day on Friday, which drew a packed crowd to the Rod Laver Arena. “We haven’t changed much the daily routines in preparing for the new season for the Australian summer. Generally it’s all the same. I have the same team of people around me that are making sure that I’m prepared well, so I’m just looking forward to start playing here.” The last man to win three straight titles in Melbourne was Roy Emerson, who won five in a row from 1963-67, his last claimed in the year before tennis turned professional.

The hot conditions and its place in the calendar makes the demands of the Australian Open unique but Djokovic, who also won the title in 2008, seems to have worked things out perfectly. “I like playing here because it’s after probably five, six, seven weeks of break with no official tournament,” said Djokovic, who plays Frenchman Paul-Henri Mathieu in the first round next week.

“You get time to recover, regroup, recharge your batteries mentally and physically, try to get ready for the new season with four, five weeks of good practice. You come here fresh. You’re motivated and inspired to play some good tennis. “Yes, the Australian summer can be brutal sometimes with the heat. But it has been this way for so many years. I got used to it, I know how it feels like to practice, to play in the heat.—Reuters

British bottle thrower at Bolt found guilty

LONDON, 12 Jan—A mentally ill British man who shouted abuse at Usain Bolt and threw a beer bottle at the track on London Olympics was found guilty of a public order offence on Friday. Ashley Gill-Webb, 34, shouted at the Jamaican sprinter on 5 August last year.

As 80,000 fans in the packed stadium fell silent and all eyes were fixed on the competitors in the starting blocks, Gill-Webb looked over each shoulder to check no one was looking at him, hid behind a group of spectators and lobbed the bottle at the track, video evidence showed. “I am sure that he was at that point acting rationally and wrongly and that he intended to cause harassment, alarm or distress to the competitors, and accordingly, he is guilty,” said judge William Gill of Southwark Magistrates’ Court in east London, a short distance from the Olympic Stadium. The court heard that Gill-Webb, who suffers from bipolar disorder, was in the throes of a manic episode at the time. The crux of the legal case was whether, despite his condition, he acted with the intention to cause distress to others.—Reuters

Despite short time frame, CB trying to provide best global money transfer services: CB’s general manager

Interview: Moe Thuzar Soe

Bank of Malaysia, and Sing Post of Singapore. Western Union Company has branches in 220 world countries and CB has launched the global money transfer services. Money can be transferred to Myanmar from 220 world countries now directly. Cash is now transferred even from Lebanon and Papua New Guinea. We have been dealing with transfers from Australia and Canada and many other countries. Myanmar customers are found to be satisfied with the services. We started a money changer and received Foreign Banking Authorized Dealer on 9 July, 2012. We then provided foreign currency opening. We are providing services as regards trade including export and import in cooperation with Bank of Tokyo of Japan, UOB, DBS and OCBC of Singapore, May Bank of Malaysia, four Thai banks, and Commerce Bank of Germany. We are trying to provide the best banking services within short time frame of launching services.

NLM: How much do you charge for foreign transfer?

TN: As the service is currently available for receipt, CB charges nothing for it. The foreign bank where the transfer is made charges the fee. Sometimes, we have to exchange the transferred foreign currency to Myanmar Kyat, but we do not charge for it. We will expand the services for transfer and receipt.

As a special discount, Western Union charges a relatively cheap rate for Myanmar citizens in Singapore, Malaysia and Thailand.

NLM: Does the service cover all branches of CB?

TN: CB has 31 branches across the country. All the branches can provide the service. Branches which will be opened next will also provide the service.
