Obama says FBI investigating Boston explosions as “act of terrorism”

WASHINGTON, 17 April—US President Barack Obama said on Tuesday the FBI was investigating Monday’s explosions at the Boston Marathon finish line as an “act of terrorism.” Speaking at the second televised statement following Boston explosions, Obama said the federal government will continue to mobilize and deploy all appropriate law enforcement resources to the investigation and response work. "We’ll use the tools at our disposal to find out who did this, to bring them to justice," he said.

Venezuela accuses opposition of plotting coup, seven dead

CARACAS, 17 April—Venezuelan President-elect Nicolas Maduro accused the opposition on Tuesday of planning a coup against him after seven government supporters were killed in clashes over his disputed election victory. Opposition leader Henrique Capriles wants a full recount of votes from Sunday’s election after official results showed a narrow victory for Maduro, who is late socialist leader Hugo Chavez’s hand-picked successor. Opposition demonstrations outside electoral authority offices around the country passed off peacefully on Tuesday, in contrast to Monday night when youths in Caracas and other cities blocked streets, burned tires and fought with police. The authorities said the seven deaths included two people shot by opposition sympathizers while celebrating Maduro’s win in a middle-class area of the capital, and one person killed in an attack on a government-run clinic. “This is the responsibility of those who have called for violence, who have ignored the constitution and the institutions,” a furious Maduro said in a speech to the nation. “Their plan is a coup d’état.” Officials also said more than 60 people had been injured, including one woman whom protesters tried to burn alive, and 170 people were arrested.

England stages grand funeral for “Iron Lady” Margaret Thatcher

The bells of London’s iconic Big Ben clock tower will fall silent for the first time since Churchill’s funeral and more than 700 men and women from Britain’s armed forces will honour a woman who led them to victory in the 1982 Falklands War as foreign dignitaries from around 170 nations look on. Thatcher, who ruled Britain from 1979 to 1990, died on 8 April after suffering a stroke. In life, the woman the Soviets christened the “Iron Lady” divided the British public with her free-market policies which sometimes wrought wrenching change on communities. In death it is no different.

Polls have shown that many are unhappy that the estimated 10 million ($15 million) pound bill for the funeral is being picked up by the taxpayer, while some left-wing lawmakers say the pomp-filled funeral is excessive and amounts to a party political advert for her ruling Conservative party. But her admirers, of which there are many in her party and in southern England, argue that her historical profile merits such a funeral. She was the country’s first and only woman premier, Britain’s longest-serving prime minister of the 20th century, and won three general elections.

More than 2,500 mourners will attend including 11 serving prime ministers from across the world, the British government’s entire cabinet, two heads of state and 17 foreign ministers. But there will be notable absences. Former Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is too frail to attend and Nancy Reagan, the widow of Thatcher’s great US ally Ronald Reagan, is also unable to come.—Reuters

HP aims to revolutionize computers with motion-control technology

San Francisco, 17 April—Computers controlled by a swipe of the hand — a staple of science fiction flicks like “ Minority Report” — could soon hit the mass market as the result of a new deal between Hewlett-Packard Co and a San Francisco startup called Leap Motion.

As the world’s largest PC maker, HP’s move to embrace motion-sensing technology could potentially change how people interface with computers in the same way that Apple Inc’s touchscreen technology mainstreamed with the 2007 launch of the iPhone — or when Apple first introduced the mouse to consumers in 1983. Leap Motion, a three-year-old firm with less than 100 employees in San Francisco, manufactures sensor units about the size of a pack of gum, which it claims can track the individual movements of 10 fingers with 1/100th of a millimetre precision.

“Leap Motion can plug into any computer and allow the use of apps or software designed for motion-control sensors. Under the new deal, HP will initially ship Leap Motion’s sensors with its products before eventually embedding the technology directly into HP computers, the company said.

The sensors are on sale at major retailers for $80 but will not ship until 13 May. The companies did not say how many HP devices with Leap Motion sensors would be sold. “Consumers want to go to the next level when creating and interacting with digital content,” Ron Coughlin, an HP senior vice president in charge of consumer PCs, said in a statement on Tuesday. “Leap Motion’s ground-breaking 3-D motion control combined with HP technology and amazing developer apps will create incredible user experiences.”

The agreement came at a time when tech manufacturers like Microsoft Corp, Google and Apple have all expressed interest in motion-sensing technology. In 2010, Microsoft brought the technology to millions of living rooms with its popular Kinect box made to be used with the XBox game console. Lastly, Samsung Electronics Co Ltd unveiled an augmented reality smartphone that could be controlled from the room with hand gestures.

Andy Miller, Leap Motion’s chief operating officer and a former Apple executive, said the motion technology could both enhance recreational uses such as gaming and be a practical tool for business professionals. In order to show off its wide appeal, Leap Motion has invited third-party developers to make apps in a model similar to Apple’s App Store. So far, 50,000 developers have requested developer toolkits to create apps that use gestures to create 3-D models, simulate musical instruments or even manipulate surgical robots.

White House threatens veto of House cybersecurity bill

WASHINGTON, 17 April—The White House on Tuesday threatened to veto a House of Representatives bill aimed at improving US cybersecurity, citing among other things concerns about privacy protections.

In a repeat of last year’s events, the Obama administration issued a new veto threat on the cybersecurity bill co-authored by House Intelligence Committee Chairman Mike Rogers, saying it needed to better protect private information and gave too much liability protection to companies.

“The Administration still seeks additional improvements and if the bill, as currently crafted, were presented to the president, his senior advisors would recommend that he veto the bill,” the statement of administration policy said on Tuesday.

The House is expected to vote on the bill later this week. To try to gain support of the White House and in an effort to appease concerns of civil liberties groups, Intelligence Committee leaders made some changes to the wording of the bill, which is very similar to a bill passed by the House in 2012 that focused on helping companies and the US government share information on cyber threats. Changes this year included a provision preventing companies from using information they receive for anything but cybersecurity purposes. It also includes added rules for privacy and civil liberties oversight.

“The committee adopted several amendments to the bill in a good faith effort to incorporate some of the administration’s important substantive concerns. However (it) ... still does not address these fundamental priorities adequately,” said Caitlin Hayden, a National Security Council spokeswoman. In 2012, legislation authored by Rogers and Democrat Dutch Ruppersberger passed the House but died in the Democrat-controlled Senate after President Barack Obama similarly threatened to veto it. The White House has shown a more comprehensive piece of legislation that would set national security standards for critical companies.

Michelle Richardson of the American Civil Liberties Union on Tuesday called the veto threat “completely justifiable” and said it did not bode well for the bill’s future in the Senate. Rogers’ office did not immediately comment.

Cape Canaveral (Florida), 17 April—A second US company hired by NASA to fly cargo to the International Space Station was cleared to test-fly its Antares rocket from a newly developed commercial spaceport in Virginia, officials said on Tuesday. Orbital Sciences Corp plans to launch its 130-foot (40-metre)-tall Antares rocket late Wednesday afternoon from the newly built Mid-Atlantic Regional Spaceport, located at NASA’s Wallops Flight Facility in Chincoteague, Virginia.

The rocket will carry an 8,378-pound (3,800-kg) dummy capsule designed to mimic the company’s Cygnus spacecraft, which is slated to debut on Antares’ second flight this summer.

Like startup SpaceX Exploration Technologies, or SpaceX, a privately-owned firm based in Hawthorne, California, Orbital Sciences built its cargo ship in partnership with NASA. SpaceX followed up a May 2012 test flight with two cargo runs to the space station under a $1.6 billion contract.

In addition to winning $288 million from NASA for Antares and Cygnus development, Orbital holds a $1.9 billion contract to fly cargo to the station, a $100 billion research laboratory that flies about 250 miles above Earth.

SpaceX also is working on upgrading its Falcon 9 rocket and Dragon capsule to fly astronauts to the station. Orbital lost out on its bid to develop a space taxi service, but hopes toparlay its cargo-hauling business into additional government and commercial contracts.

“We feel pretty strongly that a successful test flight, and also a successful demo (run to the space station) later, will help us in our marketing a great deal,” said Frank Culbertson, executive vice president with Orbital Sciences and a former astronaut and NASA manager.

The company had hoped to debut its new rocket and capsule more than a year ago, but the program was delayed due to construction and certification issues with the Wallops Island launch pad. NASA regularly flies small suborbital rockets, high-altitude balloons and scientific airplanes from Wallops. The Antares booster will be the biggest rocket to be launched from the island.

The goal of Wednesday’s mission is to place the simulated Cygnus cargo ship into an orbit about 160 miles above the planet, demonstrating the rocket’s lift capacity and the ability to separate the payload.

An international team of flu experts will go to China this week to help with investigations into the deadly H7N9 strain of avian flu that has killed 14 people among livestock in all.

One of the points the mission wants to investigate is how some people seem to fight off the infection. “There are some examples of mild cases, and also some cases of people improving, who have gone from critical to a stable condition, and that is something that will be explored by the fact-finding mission,” Thomas said.—Reuters

Ford Motor Co (F.N) has raised its stake in Jiangling Motors Holding Corp Ltd (000550.SZ) to 31.5 percent and is looking to increase it to as much as 32 percent over the next year, both companies said on Wednesday.

Ford has bought 13,002,396 of Jiangling’s Hong Kong dollar-denominated B-shares for $705 million. “We will continue to evaluate the market,” Ford’s Vice President of Operations in China said, and purchase the remaining portion of the 2 percentage points between now and January 20, 2014,” it said in a brief statement.

During the first three months of this year, Jiangling, which makes cars for limited customer demand, may terminate from its joint ventures. In this case, it will deliver the drinks to local stores. Unlike in the past, Coke plans to continue producing the drinks.

“This is a different model than elsewhere in the world, but we see this as the right time to go forward with these bottling partners,” Steve Cahillane, president of Coca-Cola Americas, said in an interview.

The five bottlers expected to expand their territories in upcoming transactions with Coke are Coca-Cola Bottling Co Consolidated (COKE.O), Coca-Cola Bottling Co United Inc, Swire Coca-Cola USA, Coca-Cola Bottling Co High Country and Corinth Coca-Cola Bottling Works Inc.

Depending on the situations, the deals might include an outright territory sale, a territory swap or a sub-bottling arrangement by which the bottler would make ongoing payments to Coke in exchange for operating rights. Brahimi eyes new UN envoy role in Syria, dropping Arab League

UNITED NATIONS, 17 April — UN-Arab League Syria envoy Lakhdar Brahimi hopes to revamp his role as an international peace mediator in the Syrian conflict as a United Nations envoy without any official link to the Arab bloc. UN diplomats said on Tuesday, Brahimi has become increasingly frustrated with the league’s moves to recognize the Syrian opposition, which he feels has undermined his role as a neutral mediator, diplomats told Reuters on condition of anonymity.

“The joint special representative feels that the Arab League approach makes it difficult for him to carry out his mandate,” a diplomat said. “He feels that it would be best to be associated only with the United Nations at this point to ensure his neutrality.” Another UN diplomat confirmed the remarks. There have been rumours circulating for weeks that Brahimi might resign, though diplomats said his preference was to remain involved in Syrian peace efforts through the United Nations, an organization he has worked with for decades.

Brahimi will present an update to the UN Security Council on Friday about the situation in Syria’s two-year-old civil war, which the UN says has claimed more than 70,000 lives. “We expect Brahimi to offer another bleak report,” a diplomat said. The Arab League has suspended Syria’s membership and last month invited opposition leaders Moaz Al-Khatib and Ghassan Hitto to attend a summit in his place. The Syrian National Coalition, an opposition bloc recognized by the Arab League as the sole representative for conflict-torn Syria, opened its first embassy in Qatar last month in a diplomatic blow to President Bashar al-Assad.

Assad said earlier this month that “the Arab League itself lacks legitimacy. Daily death tolls in Syria of around 200 are not uncommon, monitoring groups say. More than a million refugees have fled the country and the Syrian Red Crescent says nearly 4 million have been displaced internally. Diplomats said Brahimi has grown extremely frustrated at the inability of the Security Council to unite behind his calls for an end to the violence and a peaceful political transition. His predecessor, former UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan, voiced similar frustration when he resigned last August.

The 15-nation Security Council has been deadlocked since the start of the conflict, with Assad’s close ally Russia, with the aid of China, using its veto power to block any condemnations or actions against the As- sad’s government. Syria’s conflict started with peaceful protests against four decades of Assad family rule that were violently suppressed. An armed struggle ensued.—Reuters

Ex-rebels launch reprisals in Central African Republic capital

BANGUI, 17 April — Members of a rebel movement that seized power in Central African Republic last month launched a reprisal raid on a stronghold of the ousted former president on Tuesday as the United Nations voiced concern at the deteriorating security situation there. Fighters from the Seleka rebel coalition, which overthrew President Francois Bozize on 24 March, opened fire in the same area of the capital Bangui where at least 13 people were killed and dozens more were injured in clashes on Sunday.

Seleka gunmen told Reuters they reacted after one of their members was killed by residents in the Boy-Rabe neighbourhood, a bastion of Bozize loyalists. “One of our men was riding a motorcycle through the neighbourhood this morning when youths stoned him to death. You think we can let that go?” an angry fighter told Reuters as heavy gunfire rang out nearby. “Since these guys want to prove they’re as stubborn as their boss, Bozize, we’re going to show them what we’re made of,” he said.

The shooting continued for around two hours, but there were no immediate reports of casualties.

US Pentagon chief to pay first visit to Israel

WASHINGTON, 17 April — US Secretary of Defence Chuck Hagel said on Tuesday that he will visit Israel in a few days in the first trip to the Middle East since taking office in February.

“I’m gonna be in Is- rael in a few days. Our in- terests are very clear and common … and I think the Israelis know that and we know that,” Hagel told a US House Appropriations Defence subcommittee hearing, without disclosing further details of the trip.

Dealing with Iran’s nu- clear crisis is expected to top the agenda of Hagel’s first visit to Israel, the staunchest US ally in Mid- dle East. Hagel, who was criticized for his shaky stance toward Israel dur- ing his nomination process, said that the military rela- tionship between the two countries “is as close as it’s ever been, whether it’s missile defence, Iron Dome (anti-missile systems), or in the rocket defence.”

When asked whether the US would provide aid even if Israel launches uni- lateral strike against Iran to rid it of its nuclear pro- gramme, Hagel said it is a policy issue that President Barack Obama would have to decide.

But he stressed that the US military is “able to support whatever policy decisions the president makes.”—Xinhua

A true PSM

Although we are not so much familiar with public service media—PSM yet, this system has been in operation in Europe for more than 70 years even though their systems may be different from one another. A significant example is the BBC that has been an independent PSM institution for many years.

The truth is that PSM never represents any government or political party or economic organization. So PSM means an independent organization totally free from any kind of economic, political or other influences. It holds a broader perspective in presenting an issue or a problem as a way of disseminating comprehensive public knowledge. Especially, its view of a crisis is to solve the root cause with the participation of all stakeholders whether individual persons or organizations. Its ultimate aim is to defuse a crisis, and not to ignite or fuel it.

Besides, PSM never regards any piece of information that may lead to disintegration of the nation, incite racial or religious conflicts or hatred and communal violence as valuable.

The uniqueness of PSM is that it always stands by the poor, the weak, the vulnerable, the aged—are, and new constructions of religious buildings and implementations of religions matters and affairs leading to the purification, perpetuation, propagation and promotion of the Buddha Sasana throughout the country. We all Buddhists know that such all-round developments of the renovations and new constructions of religious edifices have been done since the time of the State Peace and Development Council of the Union of Myanmar.

According to the present statistical census of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar, the present population of the entire nation stand at over 60 millions. About 85 per cent of population takes faith in Theravada Buddhism.

It is known that the Republic of the Union of Myanmar has been a predominant Theravada Buddhist Nation in the world throughout age since years ago.

Consequently, the members of the Sangha, the entire multifarious Buddhist people and the Government of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar, hand in hand, are striving to carry out the noble tasks of all-round developments of the renovations and new constructions of religious buildings and implementations of religions matters and affairs leading to the purification, perpetuation, propagation and promotion of the Buddha Sasana throughout the country.

leading to the purification, perpetuation, propagation and promotion of the Buddha Sasana were successfully carried out. And now, the new Government of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar is carrying out these noble tasks in continuation.

In order to confer more religious titles on the eminent members of the Sangha for their outstanding activities and contributions to promotion and propagation of the Buddha Sasana (teachings of the Buddha) at home and abroad, the law for presentation of religious titles was enacted in 1991 as law No. 41/91 of the State Peace and Development Council of the Union of Myanmar. According to the Law for presentation of religious titles, more religious titles have been accorded to the eminent members of the Sangha at home and abroad since then. It is learnt that members of Sangha from foreign countries have not been presented religious titles since 1962.

With a view of strengthening the friendly and religious relations between the People’s Republic of China and the Republic of the Union of Myanmar and to promote and propagate the Buddha Sasana (teachings of the Buddha) over the world, the Sacred Tooth Relic of the Buddha from the People’s Republic of China was conveyed to the Republic of the Union of Myanmar in 1955, 1994, 1996 and 2011 respectively to be paid homage here. While the Sacred Tooth Relic of the Buddha from the People’s Republic of China was being paid homage in the Union of Myanmar in 1994 and the other two Sacred Replica-Tooth Relics of the Buddha were also paid homage at the same time.

According to the strong wishes of the members of the Sangha, the pious Buddhist people and the Government of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar under the guidance of the State Sanghamahayana Committee of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar, two other two Sacred Replica-Tooth Relics of the Buddha were enshrined in each of the two Buddha Tooth Relic Pagodas, one in Yangon and another in Mandalay. The Buddha Tooth Relic Pagoda (Yangon) was completed in November 1996 and the Buddha Tooth Relic Pagoda (Mandalay) in December 1996 respectively.

These two Pagodas will stand forever as significant symbol of everlasting friendship and relationship between the People’s Republic of China and the Republic of the Union of Myanmar, and also will be a sacred place of Buddhist people and Buddhist Image is respectfully located in Insein Township, Yangon Region. Furthermore, we all Buddhists across the world heartily know that the significant World Buddhist Summit which was attended by both internal and international Buddhist delegates and representatives was successfully held in the Republic of the Union of Myanmar in December 2004. The Summit was earnestly organized and sponsored by the Government of the Union of Myanmar. This concrete and noble effort of successfully holding such significant world Buddhist Summit is the most important milestone in the world Buddhist history.

And now, we all Buddhists throughout the country are very pleased and honored to learn that the Uppatantisu Pagoda of 325 feet in height, the Replica of the most famous Shwedagon Pagoda, has been already built in Nay Pyi Taw, the capital of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar.

Paying homage to the newly-built Uppatantisu Pagoda, the Replica of the most famous Shwedagon Pagoda in Yangon, will be like just paying homage to the most famous Shwedagon Pagoda which was built in the lifetime of the Omnicent Buddha in 103 Great Era (589 BC) over 2257 years ago.

And also, we all Buddhists throughout the Republic of the Union of Myanmar know that monastic education schools which were fain and nearly disappeared in our country could have been re-introduced by the Government of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar. For higher studies of Buddhism, the two Pariyatti Sanana Universities could be established, one in Yangon and another in Mandalay. And now, young members of the Sangha at home and abroad are attending these two universities for further studies of Buddhism.

Besides, an International Theravada Buddhist Missionary University has been established already in Yangon, the second capital of Republic of the Union of Myanmar. This university will be a permanent learning centre for further studies of the Theravada Buddhism in the Buddhist world.

Such noble tasks of all-round renovations and new constructions of pagodas, monasteries and other various religious buildings throughout the country were successfully carried out in a large scale across the Republic of the Union of Myanmar.
Letter sent to US senator tested positive for ricin

WASHINGTON, 17 April — US police on Tuesday intercepted a letter addressed to Senator Roger Wicker, which has been tested positive for ricin. Lawmakers on Capitol Hill confirmed that the Capitol Police intercepted the letter at an off-site postal screening centre on Tuesday morning and advised senators in a later briefing that none of their offices were in danger.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid confirmed that the letter was addressed to Senator Wicker. Senator Mary Landrieu told reporters after the briefing that the Capitol Police were investigating the sender of the letter and had shut down the post offices in both the upper and lower chambers of US Congress.

Landrieu said the police were in full investigation and did not think anyone on Capitol Hill was in danger. The incident came one day after two bombings rocked near the finish line of the Boston Marathon on Monday had killed three people and injured over 170.

Plea deal talks under way for US soldier accused in Iraq killings

SEATTLE, 17 April — A US soldier charged with killing five fellow service-men in 2009 at a military counseling centre in Iraq is seeking a plea deal with Army prosecutors that would spare him from facing the death penalty, his lawyer told Reuters on Tuesday.

Army Sergeant John Russell, under confinement at Joint Base Lewis-McChord near Tacoma, Washington, is accused of going on a shooting frenzy at Camp Liberty, adjacent to the Baghdad airport, in an attack on his lawyers have insisted stemmed from combat stress. Jury selection for his court-martial had been set to begin this week.

But those proceedings were paused while negotiations continued between the two sides on a possible deal in which Russell would plead guilty to murder in return for prosecutors agreeing not to seek the death penalty, his civilian attorney, James Culp said.

Florida battles slimy invasion by giant snails

ORLANDO, 17 April — South Florida is fighting a growing infestation of one of the world’s most destructive invasive species: the giant African land snail, which can grow as big as a rat and gnaw through stucco and plaster. More than 1,000 of the mollusks are being caught each week in Miami-Dade and 117,000 in total since the first snail was spotted by a homeowner in September 2011, said Denise Feiber, a spokes-woman for the Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services.

Residents will soon likely begin encountering them more often, crunching them underfoot as the snails emerge from underground hibernation at the start of the state’s rainy season in just seven weeks, Feiber said. The snails attack “over 500 known species of plants ... pretty much anything that’s in their path and green,” Feiber said. In some Caribbean countries, such as Barbados, which are overrun with the creatures, the snails’ shells blow out tires on the highway and turn into hurling projectiles from lawnmower blades, while their slime and excrement coat walls and pavement.

“It becomes a slick mess,” Feiber said. A typical snail can produce about 1,200 eggs a year and the creatures are a particular threat to the Florida Department of Agriculture Division of Plant Industry taken on 9 Sept, 2011. — Reuters pest in homes because of their fondness for stucco, devoured for the calcium content they need for their shells. The snails also carry a parasitic rat lungworm that can cause illness in humans, including a form of meningitis, Feiber said, although no such cases have yet been identified in the United States. — Reuters

Japan’s population falls by record 0.22% to 127.52 million in 2012

TOKYO, 17 April — Japan’s population fell by a record 0.22 percent to 127,515,000 as of 1 Oct, 2012, while people aged 65 or older surpassed the 30 million mark for the first time, government data showed on Tuesday. The figures in the survey of the Ministry of Internal Affairs and Communications were the latest proof of Japan’s aging society. The decline of 284,000 in the total population, which also included foreign nationals, was the largest of its kind since comparable data became available in 1950.

Data showed that it was also the second year in a row that the population has fallen. Ministry officials attributed the decline to the number of deaths exceeding births and a rise in the number of foreign residents who left Japan compared with those entering Japan because of the impact of the March 2011 earthquake and tsunami in northeastern Japan and the country’s economic slump. The ministry’s figures showed people aged 65 or older accounted for record high 24.1 percent of the total population.

The number of those in this age bracket rose by 1,041,000 to 30,793,000 partly because many of those born in Japan’s baby-boom years of 1947-1949 have now turned 65 years old, in a telling sign that measures such as increased social welfare spending must be addressed swiftly. Meanwhile, those aged below 14 fell to a record low of 13 percent. The population decreased in 40 of the country’s 47 prefectures. Fukushima Prefecture ranked first with a decline of 1.41 percent. The prefecture in northeastern Japan is host to the Fukushima Dai-ichi power plant that was crippled by the March 2011 disaster.

Of the seven prefectures that posted gains, Okinawa topped the list with a 0.56 percent increase. The ministry survey found that it is the first time for the number of people aged 65 or older to surpass those aged below 14 in all prefectures. Akita Prefecture had the highest percentage of those aged 65 or older at 30.7 percent, followed by Kochi Prefecture at 30.1 percent and Shimane Prefecture at 30.0 percent.

Suicide bomb attack kills 16 in Pakistan

ISLAMABAD, 17 April — A suicide bomb attack near a meeting of the anti-Taliban Awami National Party on Tuesday night killed 16 people and injured more than 35 others, including a prominent leader of the party, local media said.

Tehrik-e-Taliban Pakistan, known as the Pakistani Taliban, has claimed responsibility for the attack against the ANP. Bilour, who is contesting a National Assembly seat from Peshawar, was slightly injured and taken to hospital. Four policemen including a senior official were among those killed, according to local police. “We won’t bow before terrorism. Powerful quake hits Iran-Pakistan border area, kills 40

Islamabad, 17 April—A powerful earthquake measuring magnitude 7.9 struck Iran’s southeastern region bordering Pakistan on Tuesday afternoon, killing at least 40 people and injuring 300 others in the Province of Baluchistan in western Pakistan, Pakistani authorities said. Iranian authorities said it had yet to confirm any quake-related death as of Tuesday night, maintaining that the damage did not become serious due to the fact that the area is a sparsely populated desert. But The Associated Press said it is possible that Iran may have tried to cover up the extent of the damage. The earthquake caused no damage to the nuclear power plant a Russian company is building in Iran’s port city of Bushehr, company officials said. Kyodo News

Two local train lines from Japan, Taipei begin partnership

Yokosuka, (Japan), 17 April—Enoshima Railway Co said on Tuesday it will partner with Taiwan’s regional Pingxi Line to start a programme in which passengers on one line will receive an all-day pass in exchange for an all-day pass on the other. The campaign, which will run on 1 May to 31 March, is part of a tourism cooperation agreement between the Japanese railway line, known also as Enoden, and Taiwan Railway Administration. The Pingxi Line is popular among Japanese tourists for its scenic route. The 12.9-kilometre line travelling through valleys near Taipei opened as a coal mine railroad in 1921 when Japan ruled Taiwan. Sites along the line are popular among Taiwanese and Japanese tourists for their nostalgic appeal, such as a shopping district and towns with old-fashioned mailboxes. “We hope that the programme will boost tourism on both sides,” an Enoden employee said. Eden will run a roughly 10-km link—through a residential area, a tunnel and along a beach—between Kamakura and Fujisawa, both in Kanagawa Prefecture southwest of Tokyo.—Kyodo News

Sculptor Whiteread explores the simple life in new UK show

LONDON, 17 April—

Garden sheds, tin cans and other everyday objects form the backbone of a new show by British sculptor Rachel Whiteread which celebrates people’s markings in simple things we take for granted in life. “Detached”, which runs from 11 April to 25 May at London’s Gagosian Gallery, is the culmination of three years’ work and marks a departure for Whiteread from her large-scale works such as “Embankment”, which filled the massive Turbine Hall in London’s Tate Modern.

Upon entering the gallery, visitors are greeted by the sight of three concrete casts of common garden sheds, marked with the rough granity texture of wood and brick marks. “They are casts from little humble buildings — sheds essentially — and they’re cast in concrete, so there is no entrance, you can just see it from the outside,” Whiteread said.

The works are a far cry from “Embankment” where Whiteread decked out the Turbine Hall with thousands of translucent white polyethylene casts of cardboards, a swimming pool and her “Judenplatz Holocaust Memorial” in Vienna where she cast an inverted library in concrete with the closed pages of the books turned outward in remembrance of Austrian Jews killed by the Nazis.

“I’m hoping people will somehow think about how humble the pieces are and maybe how our lives are and how we relate to the world and really that all of this work is made from nothing,” the artist told Reuters.

“Things these are just very simple objects that we totally take for granted from day to day.” The exhibition also features coloured resin casts of doors and windows as well as her experimentations with smaller objects such as tin cans, bones and bottles.

Whiteread, who is the first woman to have won Britain’s prestigious Turner Prize, is famous for her large scale installations of houses, buildings and rooms exploring the presence of empty spaces. “The first thing I ever cast was a spoon. I pressed the spoon into the sand and then poured in some metal and then what I ended up with was a spoon without its ‘spoonness’ and that was a very kind of powerful starting point for me.”

Justin Bieber takes heat for hoping Anne Frank would have been fan

LOS ANGELES, 17 April—Teenage pop star Justin Bieber is taking heat on social media after the Anne Frank House reported he visited the Amsterdam museum and wrote in the guest book he hoped the young Holocaust victim would have been a “belieber,” the popular term for his fans.

A post on Saturday on the Facebook page of the museum said Bieber had visited the previous night and stayed over an hour, along with a group of friends and guards as fans waited outside to “see a glimpse of him.”

“In our guestbook he wrote: ‘Truly inspiring to be able to come here. Anne was a great girl. Hopefully she would have been a belieber,'” the museum said in the Facebook post.

Regarding that last sentence in the guest book, a large share of the hundreds of commentators on the museum’s Facebook page reacted negatively to Bieber’s choice of words.

“There’s an Anne Frank, right? That is by far one of the most self-serving things I’ve ever read, like ever,” Facebook user Tania Saez Pinto wrote.

“I think she would be smart enough not to buy his records,” Facebook user Menachem Rephun wrote on the page.

Media commentators also joined in the fray.

Anne Frank, who died at age 15 at the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp in 1945, is one of the most well-known and celebrated Jewish victims of the Holocaust.

Readers around the world have read her diary, which was first published in 1947 and details the deprivations and personal triumphs she and her family experienced in hiding during the Nazi occupation of the Netherlands.

A representative for Bieber declined to comment.

Some commentators on social media sites condemned Bieber for caring enough about Anne Frank’s story to visit the Amsterdam museum, which is built into the house where she and her family hid before their arrest.

And the museum itself in its post about the visit from Bieber, a Canadian-born sensation whose hit songs include “Baby” and “U Smile,” did not criticize him.
Shaqiri, Gomez steer treble-hungry Bayern to Cup final

BERLIN, April 17—Xherdan Shaqiri scored one goal and set up three and substitute Mario Gomez notch a quick hat-trick as Bayern Munich, chasing a treble of titles, crushed VfL Wolfsburg 6-1 on Tuesday to move into the German Cup final.

Germany international Gomez, who came on as a substitute in the 77th minute struck three times in six minutes to complete another big-scoring win this season.

The Bavarians, who won the Bundesliga title earlier this month and face Barceelona in their Champions League semi-final first leg next week, will face either VfB Stuttgart or Freiburg, who play on Wednesday.

With Franck Ribery suspended, defender David Alaba injured and coach Jupp Heynckes rotating the line-up, Bayern needed some time to adjust.

“Wolfsburg made it hard for us for a long time,” Heynckes told reporters. “We were not fully there at the start.”

I told them at halftime what I think must change and it seems to have worked. “I am happy for Mario that he got his hat-trick. It goes to show that we have three top strikers in this team.”

Forward Mario Mandzukic struck against his former club in the 17th minute after good early work from Shaqiri. Arjen Robben doubled their lead after another pin-point pass from the Swiss midfielder.

Wolfsburg briefly bat-tled back and Brazilian Diego cut the deficit with a stinging 18-metre shot that flew past Manuel Neuer on the stroke of halftime. Boxer Vijender Singh cleared in drug test

MUMBAI, April 17—India’s boxing pin-up boy Vijender Singh, who had been accused of taking heroin, has been cleared in an out-of-competition drug test, the sports ministry said on Tuesday.

Singh, who won a middleweight bronze at the 2008 Beijing Olympics, was or-dered by the ministry to take a test after local police ac-cused him of using heroin on several occasions amid alleg-a-tions from a fellow boxer.

“Vijender Singh...along with four others was subject- ed to an out-of-competition test for banned substances,” the sports ministry said in a statement.

“The Ministry...is glad to announce that on the ba-sis of these tests none of the boxers were found to have used any banned substances in the recent past.”

Singh came under scrut-inity when a fellow boxer told investigators after a $24-mil-lion drug haul in the northern state of Punjab last month that he and Singh had con-sumed heroin supplied by a drug dealer. The 27-year-old Singh denied the allegation.

Portugal increases investment in Colombia

BOGOTA — 17 April — Colombian President Juan Manuel Santos on Tuesday praised Portugal’s increased investment in Colombia and forecast more. Portuguese companies now operating in Colombia included Jeronimo Martins, started building a large industrial park near Bogota, and the Pestana hotel chain, Santos said on Tuesday while welcoming Portuguese counterpart Amibal Cavaco Silva, who is leading a business delegation here.

“We are expecting more than 1 billion US dollars in Portuguese investment through these and other companies... and the list will continue to grow thanks to the important business delegation that accompanies you today,” he said.

“Portugal, a country of seafarers and explorers, has found a new destination in Colombia,” Santos added, noting the good diplomatic relations between the two countries. Meanwhile, Silva affirmed the interest of Portuguese businessmen.

Portuguese business owners show great interest in the Colombian market. We want Colombian entrepreneurs to get to know better Portugal’s potential,” Silva said, adding his country had made advances in the technology field. Silva also offered Portugal’s support in the Colombian government’s ongoing peace talks with the rebel Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC), saying, “Peace is fundamental for consolidating democracy, but also for development (and) the improvement of people’s well-being.”

The Portuguese head of state is scheduled to leave Colombia on Wednesday for Peru.

Fed official warns monetary easing risk on financial stability

WASHINGTON — 17 April — US Federal Reserve Vice Chair Janet Yellen on Tuesday said that central bankers should remain alert to the financial risk against the backdrop of ongoing monetary easing policies.

Speaking at a seminar hosted by the International Monetary Fund (IMF) before the upcoming Spring Meetings of the IMF and World Bank scheduled to kick off on 19 April, Yellen said that the concern about financial stability risk was a “very important question.”

The Fed’s monetary easing policies are “intended to promote a return to prudent risk-taking, reflecting a normalization of credit markets that is essential to a healthy economy,” Yellen said. “Obviously, risk-taking can go too far.”

Since the onset of the financial crisis, the Fed has kept its short-term interest rate at a historically low level and completed two rounds of quantitative easing programs, known as QE1 and QE2. It is now purchasing longer-term government debt and mortgage-backed securities at a pace of 85 billion US dollars per month, doubled as QE3, to stimulate bank lending and economic growth.

“Low interest rates may induce investors to take on too much leverage and reach too aggressively for yield. I don’t see pervasive evidence of rapid credit growth, a marked buildup in leverage, or significant asset bubbles that would threaten financial stability,” she said.

“But there are signs that some parties are reaching for yield, and the Federal Reserve continues to carefully monitor this situation,” she added.

“We are prepared to use any of our many instruments as appropriate to address any stability concerns,” Yellen added.

Arsenal held to goalless home draw by Everton

LONDON — 17 April — Arsenal missed the chance to take another step towards securing a Champions League place after fellow European hopefuls Everton held firm in a lively 0-0 Premier League match at the Emirates on Tuesday.

The Londoners, who had won four in a row to move up to third and are chasing qualification for the continent’s elite competition for a 16th straight season, had the better opening with French striker Olivier Giroud guilty of two bad misses.

Giroud prodded wide at full stretch with the goal at his mercy late in the first half and blazed over from a good position near the end to cap a frustrating night for the hosts who were put off their stride by a well-organised and combative Everton side.

“The referee let a lot go unpunished and in the end we put a lot of effort in. Maybe we used too much power instead of placing the ball,” The finishing was missing. I think (Everton midfielder) Darren Gibson could have been sent off. He got away with a few too tonight. We are in a strong position but we have to win our next game. If we keep this spirit...” said Arsenal manager Arsene Wenger.
