Japan, China, S Korea to launch panel to address PM2.5 air pollution

A meeting of Japan, China and South Korea environment ministers is held at a hotel in Kitakyushu, Fukuoka Prefecture, on 6 May, 2013.—Kyodo News

Japan over air pollution originating in China spiked earlier this year due to harmful concentrations of PM2.5 air-borne pollution reaching Japanese cities. On Sunday, participants including businesspeople and college students from the countries discussed topics such as the development of ecologically focused businesses and communities.

The discussions will be followed by a joint statement on Monday, which will also focus on enhancing joint academic research by the three countries. At a dinner party Sunday evening, Japanese Environment Minister Nobuteru Ishihara talked with his South Korean counterpart Yoon Seong Kyu and China’s vice minister for environmental protection Li Ganjie for the first time since he assumed the current post in December. “It is delightful that we could hold the meeting despite strained ties between Japan and two other countries,” Ishihara told reporters. “I hope I will be able to perform my duty as chair so we can make our cooperative stance on tackling the PM2.5 and other issues closer.” —Kyodo News

Egypt’s prime minister unharmed by shooting near his car

Cairo, 7 May—Egyptian police on Sunday detained a young man who opened fire on Prime Minister Hisham Kandil’s convoy and his four companions in Cairo in an incident the authorities said had no political motive. Kandil was not injured.

The young men were on their way to settle a feud when their vehicle crossed paths with Kandil’s convoy at 11 pm (5 pm EST) in Dokki, a residential and commercial district of the capital, the Interior Ministry said in a statement. When Kandil’s security guards tried to force the vehicle away from the convoy, one of the men fired two shots at their car. The police gave chase and caught the five men, the Interior Ministry said. The incident had no “political motives or other dimensions”, it added. The five men were aged between 18 and 29, the Interior Ministry statement said.—Reuters

Najib sworn in second term as Malaysian PM

Kuala Lumpur, 7 May—Najib Razak entered his second term as Malaysia’s Prime Minister on Monday with a daunting task of national reconciliation after a closely contested general election.

Najib’s ruling Barisan Nasional retained power in Sunday’s general election by winning 133 parliamentary seats, a simple majority in the 222-seat lower house of parliament. It failed to improve from the 2008 election when it lost its long held two-third parliamentary majority, as more voters, especially the Chinese minority who consisted of around 25 percent of the total population, swung to the opposition, causing a heavy blow to the Chinese based parties in the Barisan.

Speaking at a Press conference after claiming victory on early Monday, Najib warned against a “worrying” voting polarization. He said his government will embark on a national reconciliation to prevent “extremism and racism.” “We will continue to promote moderation among multi-racial Malaysians as the Barisan government places great importance on racial harmony and national unity,” he said. —Xinhua

Five killed in steam-driven ash explosions at Philippine volcano

Manila, 7 May—People who were killed, including four foreigners, after a volcano on the main Philippine island of Luzon spewed steam and ash on Tuesday morning, according to the local governor.

Albay Province Governor Joey Salceda said the four foreigners of unknown nationalities and one local tour guide were part of a group of 20 people climbing the volcano at the time of the steam-driven explosions, which occurred around 8 am.

He said there were also three people injured in a separate group of seven who were on the volcano, which is located more than 500 kilometres south of Manila. National Disaster Risk Reduction and Management Council Director Ed Rosario told reporters five people were killed and seven injured.

Earlier, ABS-CBN TV quoted volcano tour guide Kenneth Jesalva as saying four people — three foreigners and a fellow tour guide — died when they were crushed by large rocks. He said another mountaineer was in critical condition.

“We were on our way up, and while we were having a short break, we heard sounds of falling rock. Some of our companions were hit by the rocks,” Jesalva said.

Salceda said operations to rescue survivors are under way, taking priority over recovery of the bodies of the dead. Zea Rivera, a student from Daraga town in Albay Province, told Kyodo News that she heard a loud explosion and rushed out of the house to see a column of grey ash around its crater. “Thick white ash has shrouded the top of the volcano like a cloud,” she said.

Mary Rafael, a nun and resident of Legazpi City, told local radio DZBB she and others at her convent were started their prayers when somebody spotted the ash column shortly after 8 am.

But as of 8:36 am, she said the “mushroom effect” had dispersed. “It didn’t blow like smoke but no longer resembling a mushroom,” she said.

Rafael said the people near the convent did not appear to panic. “It’s part of our life in the Bicol area,” she said.

Disaster officials reminded residents to stay away from the 6-kilometre radius “permanent danger zone,” warning that phreatic explosions and ash puffs may occur without warning. Volcanologists said they will continue monitoring the volcano to see if there is a need to raise the alert level in the coming days. —Kyodo News

Electronic Arts, Disney strike “Star Wars” games deal

SAN FRANCISCO, 7 May—Electronic Arts and Walt Disney Co sealed a multi-year licensing deal under which the video game publisher will develop games for mobile devices, PCs and consoles based on the “Star Wars” movies. Disney, which bought George Lucas’s Lucasfilm Ltd and the blockbuster sci-fi franchise for $4.05 billion in October, will retain the rights to develop online and mobile games, both companies said in a statement on Monday.

They did not reveal the financial terms of the agreement. EA bet big on the Star Wars’ world of jedis and wookies in 2011 by releasing its “Star Wars: The Old Republic”—a massive multiplayer player online game, or MMO, that allows thousands of people to play simultaneously for a monthly subscription fee as opposed to a one-time purchase. Analysts said EA made a record investment of between $100 million and $300 million to build “Star Wars: The Old Republic,” but EA has not disclosed costs.—Reuters

Looking for a comeback, Zynga embraces austerity and FarmVille

SAN FRANCISCO, 7 May—In the past twelve months, Zynga Inc has struggled with a contracting player base, a deflated stock price and waves of layoffs. Now it is coming to terms with downsized ambitions.

As Chief Executive Mark Pincus, 47, leads the online games developer he founded in 2007 perhaps the most crucial year of his tenure, he is pushing to restore revenues by doubling down on “FarmVille,” the franchise that took Facebook users by storm four years ago and launched Zynga to stardom. Though some industry observers had declared farm simulation games afad and predicted FarmVille 2’s early demise, the sequel to Zynga’s best-known title has defied expectations at its San Francisco headquarters, Pincus said in an interview.

FarmVille 2 has clung to its perch near the top of Facebook charts and the number of people who play the game each day still hovers near all-time highs of 8 million, even six months after launch.

Given a glaring weakness in mobile games, however, one of Zynga’s current priorities is porting FarmVille 2 to mobile devices so players can move from PCs to smartphones and back without losing their data.

That presented technical challenges that the company is ironing out, Pincus said. “The ideal is to make that one seamless experience between Web and mobile so you can transfer that experience from work to home,” Pincus said.

“We’re having to retool and reinvent around our process and technology.”

Pincus badly needs a reliable hit franchise. In the past nine months, Zynga has shuttered 30 titles and closed offices in Baltimore, Boston and Tokyo.—Reuters

Clearwire says Sprint offer best option for minority stockholders

NEW YORK, 7 May—Wireless service provider Clearwire Corp said on Monday its proposed buyout by majority owner Sprint Nextel Corp was the best option for Clearwire’s minority stockholders.

Clearwire shares, which fell about 6 percent in an initial reaction to the statement, recovered to trade just above the closing price of $3.38 on Friday. The Clearwire board has unanimously concluded that the proposed transaction with Sprint is the best strategic alternative for stockholders ... especially in light of the company’s limited alternatives and the well-known constraints of its liquidity position,” Clearwire said. Four shareholders holding about 17 percent of Clearwire’s shares said on Friday they would work together to seek a better deal for the wireless service provider.

Sprint offered to buy Clearwire in December for $2.2 billion but satellite TV provider Dish Network Corp announced a counterbid of $2.3 billion in January. Dish followed up in April by making a bid for Sprint. Clearwire said in February it would evaluate Dish’s bid but continued to recommend Sprint’s offer.—Reuters

Telefonica renews contract to rent network to cable firm ONO

MADRID, 7 May—Telefonica has signed a new contract with Spanish cable operator ONO allowing it to use its network for another 2-1/2 years to sell on phone services, a source familiar with the deal said on Monday.

ONO and rival Jazztel, known as virtual operators because they do not own networks, are making headway in an increasingly competitive environment since the market shifted to convergent offers that bundle phone with television and internet services.

The major attraction of virtual operators, especially in a market like Spain with a 27 percent unemployment rate, is their low prices. Telefonica, Europe’s biggest telecoms firm by revenue, and ONO declined comment on the deal. The source, who declined to be named because he was not authorized to speak to journalists, did not give financial details of the contract. ONO, which has used Telefonica’s Spanish network since 2007, stepped up efforts in its mobile business in recent months, selling the service as part of packages with television, internet and home phone offerings. Fixed-line-specialist Jazztel has also recently made gains in Spain’s mobile market. While virtual players still have only a small share of the market, they are attracting new clients as Telefonica and No 2 player Vodafone shed customers.—Reuters

Some Verizon investors OK with paying premium for Vodafone stake

NEW YORK, 7 May—Some shareholders of Verizon Communications Inc say they could be happy for the company to pay up to $130 billion for Vodafone Group Plc’s stake in its US wireless venture. Reuters reported last week that Verizon had hired advisers to prepare a $100 billion cash-and-stock bid for Vodafone’s 45 percent stake in Verizon Wireless, though several major Vodafone investors have said that figure is inadequate. Two large shareholders in Verizon told Reuters they could be comfortable with paying 20 percent to 30 percent more to secure the No 1 US mobile service provider, which generates 66 percent of Verizon’s revenue and almost all of its profit. “Nowadays I dream that $100 billion is going to get this deal done. It’s just not going to happen,” said Craig Leopold, principal manager at Columbia Management Investment Advisors. His firm, with $341 billion assets under management, is Verizon’s 10th-largest shareholder with 22 million shares, according to the latest publicly available records.

“Intel shareholders would be willing to accept a price as high as $130 billion and quite likely would be accretive to Verizon. But the price would be a lower price like $120 billion,” Leopold said. Verizon declined to comment on what it might be willing to pay for full ownership of Verizon Wireless, and it is not clear if the company would be willing to go beyond $100 billion, which would already be the third-largest deal on record.—Reuters

Ancient elephant tusk found in east China

HEFEI, 7 May—A fossilized elephant tusk that can be dated back at least 10,000 years has been unearthed in east China’s Anhui Province, local cultural heritage authorities said on Monday.

A villager spotted the fossil tooth, more than three metres in length, on Thursday while working on his farmland in the township of Guancheng, Huaiyuan County in Bengbu City, said Chen Liding, director of the county’s institute of cultural heritage management. Experts with the institute identified the tusk as belonging to an adult elephant of the extinct genus Palaeoloxodon after uneartthing the fossil buried over two metres underground, Chen said.

The tusk was fragile as a result of calcification, he added. The species is believed to inhabit Anhui and Henan provinces of the Huaihe River basin between 120,000 and 10,000 years ago. Petrocaribe summit ends with plan for economic zone, new members

CARACAS, 7 May—Petrocaribe member states agreed to create a new economic zone and granted membership to Honduras and Guatemala at their 7th summit that ended here on Sunday.

Venezuela created Petrocaribe in 2005 to sell fuel to Latin American and Caribbean nations at cheaper prices and help finance their oil infrastructure projects.

Venezuelan President Nicolas Maduro said the planned economic zone for Petrocaribe member states and other regional blocs is designed to boost regional development by promoting joint investments in trade, tourism, industry, agribusiness and science.

Venezuela has also proposed the establishment of a permanent headquarters in Caracas for the Petrocaribe Secretariat. In 2012, Venezuela supplied on average 108,000 barrels of oil a day to 14 Petrocaribe members, or 40 percent of their energy needs.

Speaking at the start of the meeting, Maduro said regional alliances such as Petrocaribe are growing stronger, despite attempts by the "international right wing" to sow division among Latin American countries. "They look at us with absolute scorn, as if they would be happy to see Petrocaribe fall apart. But Petrocaribe is consolidating and growing stronger," said Maduro.

Petrocaribe now consists of Antigua and Barbuda, the Bahamas, Belize, Cuba, Dominica, El Salvador, Grenada, Guatemala, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Jamaica, Nicaragua, the Dominican Republic, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Suriname and Venezuela.—Xinhua

New York to sue BofA, Wells Fargo over mortgage practices

NEW YORK, 7 May—New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman on Monday said he plans to sue Bank of America Corp (BAC.N) and Wells Fargo and Co (WFC.N) for violating the National Mortgage Settlement brokered last year between the country’s biggest banks and 49 state attorneys general.

Schneiderman said that since last October he has documented 339 violations of standards that Bank of America and Wells Fargo agreed to follow. He said homeowners victimized by the banks’ violations would speak at a Press conference later Monday.

Representatives of the banks did not immediately return calls seeking comment.

BofA and Wells Fargo were among five big US banks that agreed to a $25 billion settlement in February 2012. The pact was supposed to curb abusive foreclosure practices and was expected to help roughly one million borrowers.

The settlement released the banks from claims over faulty foreclosure practices and the mishandling of requests for loan modifications.

It was supposed to speed mortgage relief to homeowners in need and provide $2,000 payments to borrowers who lost their homes to foreclosure.

JPMorgan Chase & Co (JPM.N), Citigroup Inc (C.N) and Ally Financial Inc also entered into the National Mortgage Settlement.—Reuters

Sucking on your kid’s pacifier: good idea or gross?

NEW YORK, 7 May—Toddlers are less likely to have asthma and itchy rashes if their parents “cleaned” their pacifiers by sucking on them when the kids were infants, a small new study suggests.

The findings don’t prove that technique protects kids against asthma, eczema or other allergies. But researchers said it’s possible the transfer of mouth microbes from parents to baby may help boost the bacterial diversity of the young child’s digestive system and foster immunity.

“We know these bacteria are important for development,” said Dr Wilfried Karmaus from the University of Memphis, who has studied asthma and eczema but wasn’t involved in the new research.

Being delivered through a vaginal birth, for example, exposes babies to more of their moms’ bacteria and has been linked to fewer allergies in childhood.

But no one has ever looked at transfer of bacteria through pacifiers, Karmaus said.

For the new study, researchers recruited pregnant women at one Swedish hospital and followed them and their children through phone calls and exams over three years. The 184 infants in the study were particularly allergic, and 65 percent had at least one parent with allergies. When the babies were six months old, 65 parents reported “cleaning” their pacifiers by sucking on them. Most parents also said they rinsed pacifiers with tap water.

The children were then brought in for allergy testing at 18 and 36 months of age.

At the first visit, 46 of them had eczema and 10 had asthma symptoms.—Xinhua

New brain research shows benefits of dual parenting

VANCOUVER, 7 May—Dual parenting may be more beneficial than single parenting as it would lead to enhanced brain cells production in the later stage of life, according to a latest Canadian research.

In the study, researchers from the University of Calgary’s Hotchkiss Brain Institute studied mouse pups that were raised by either dual or single parents. Differences in cell production in the brain of these two groups of pups were found when they grew up.

Specifically, female pups raised by two parents had enhanced white matter production as adults, increasing motor coordination and sociability. Male pups raised by dual parents displayed more grey matter production as an adult, which improves learning and memory.

The advantages of dual parenting were even able to be passed along when these two groups reproduced, even if their offspring were raised by one female. It indicates that the benefits are persistent and transmissible to the next generation, according to the study. Scientists said that this research provides evidence that, in the mouse model, parenting and the environment directly impact adult brain cell production.—Xinhua

H7N9 vaccine needs international cooperation

BEIJING, 7 May—Chinese studies of a H7N9 bird flu vaccine needs technical support and cooperation from the World Health Organization (WHO) and professional institutions, an official said on Wednesday.

“It’s a hard job to develop the H7N9 vaccine, which can take a long time,” said Yang Weizhong, deputy director with the Chinese Center for Disease Control and Prevention, at a China-WHO meeting on preventing and dealing with H7N9 bird flu.

Nancy Cox, a WHO official, said that it is wise for some countries to launch early studies of H7N9 vaccines, which will help select suitable H7N9 virus strains for research.

Some countries started to develop bird flu vaccines three years ago, she said, adding that the WHO has organized nations to select from many candidate vaccines via network monitoring global laboratories.

A total of 108 H7N9 cases have been reported in the Chinese mainland, including 23 that have ended in death, since the first infections were announced on 31 March. Taiwan reported its first case on Wednesday.—Xinhua

KBUL, 7 May—The World Bank (WB) on Monday provided a grant of 100 million US dollars to the Afghan government to help improve the health sector in the war-hit country, said a statement of WB issued here.

“A 100-million-US-dollar Grant, to finance the Afghanistan System Enhancement for Health Action in Transition (SEHAT) Programme, was signed today between the Ministry of Finance and the World Bank,” the statement said.

“The encouraging achievements in the health sector over the past decade were possible because of the (Afghan) Ministry of Public Health’s commitment to improving health services and measuring service delivery performance with assistance from its partner NGOs,” WB Acting Country Director Ilango Patchamuthu said in the statement.

This new programme will help ensure expansion of basic health and hospital services for both urban and rural areas where due to lack of such services thousands of people, particularly women and children, lose their lives every year. “We believe these packages of health services we finance play a vital role in improving the health of Afghans,” he added.

“Provision of health care to its people remains one of the main priorities of the Government of Islamic Republic of Afghanistan during the transition,” said Afghan Minister of Finance Omar Zakhailwal in a statement. —Xinhua
Seven-time Italian PM Andreotti dies at 94

ROCHELLE, 7 May — Seven-time Italian prime minister Giulio Andreotti, one of the central figures of Italian politics for decades, died on Monday at the age of 94.

A former leader of the Christian Democrat (DC) party which dominated post-war Italy until a series of scandals led to its collapse in the 1990s, Andreotti had suffered from ill health in recent years.

His last term in office as prime minister was from 1989 to 1992. Even when he was not fighting things himself, most notably in the mid 1980s, Andreotti was always said to be pulling most of the strings behind the scenes. Though he contributed to turning Italy into one of the world’s biggest economic players, Andreotti was a strongly controversial figure at the centre of long trials for allegedly helping the Mafia, which Italian courts eventually rejected.— Xinhua

At least ten killed, 26 wounded in attacks in Iraq

BAGHDAD, 7 May — At least 10 people were killed and 26 others injured on Monday in attacks in Iraq, the police said. Six people were killed and 13 others injured when unidentified gunmen threw a grenade at worshippers when they were leaving the Sunni Ihsan Mosque in the Mansour district in western Baghdad, a police source told Xinhua.

The gunmen fled to an unknown destination after the attack, he said, adding that security forces sealed off the scene and began to search for the perpetrators of the attack. Earlier in the day, at least two people were killed and seven injured when two car bombs went off in al-Huseiniyah district in northeastern part of Baghdad, an Interior Ministry source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

In a separate incident, two people were killed and six wounded in a roadside bomb explosion near a restaurant in Doura District in southern Baghdad, the source said.

On Thursday, the UN Assistance Mission for Iraq said the death toll among Iraqis from violence in April hit its highest level since 2008, with 712 people killed across the country. Violence is still common in war-torn Iraq despite the dramatic decrease since its peak in 2006 and 2007 when the country was engulfed in sectarian killings.

Turkey to stage military exercise near Syria border

ANKARA, 7 May — The Turkish Armed Forces is set to stage a 10-day “planned exercise” in the southern province of Adana bordering on Syria, Turkish Daily News reported on Monday.

The exercise, named the Yildirim-2013 Mobilization, is slated for 6-15 May, according to a statement by the Turkish General Staff. Israeli PM’s visit to China to lift bilateral ties to new height

JERUSALEM, 7 May — The upcoming visit of Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu to China is expected to further promote mutual political trust and cooperation in the fields of economy, trade and science. Netanyahu is due to leave for China on Sunday night for a five-day official visit, the first of its kind since 2007 when then Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Olmert visited China.

Chinese Ambassador to Israel Gao Yanping told Xinhua in an interview that China and Israel have maintained close high-level contact in recent years, creating a good atmosphere for the growth of bilateral ties. Recent years have also witnessed increasingly closer exchanges in various fields between the two countries, with bilateral communications and coordination continuously strengthened on security, economy, finance and efforts to deal with regional issues and global challenges, she added.

During his stay in China, Netanyahu will visit Shanghai and Beijing and meet with many Chinese entrepreneurs. The two sides are expected to sign a series of inter-governmental cooperation documents and commercial agreements on economy and trade, science and technology, and people-to-people exchanges. China and Israel have made considerable progress in developing bilateral relations since the establishment of diplomatic ties in 1992, with bilateral trade surging to nearly 10 billion US dollars from 50 million dollars recorded in 1992.

China has become Israel’s largest trading partner in Asia and the third largest in the world. China is also a vital destination for Israel’s investments abroad in the fields of high-tech, new energy, water technology, environmental protection, agriculture and life sciences, and pharmacy, according to the Chinese envoy.

Israel is the first country to establish RMB venture capital funds in China, which have been invested in a wide range of fields, including China’s agriculture and electronics industries. Observers here believe Netanyahu’s upcoming visit will further tap potential for cooperation between China and Israel.— Xinhua

BEIJING, 7 May — China and India have ended a standoff in their border area, the Chinese Foreign Ministry’s spokesman said on Monday.

“China and India have reached an agreement on resolving the incident in the western section of the border. The frontier forces of the two countries have terminated the standoff at the Tiannan River Valley area,” Han Songying said in a statement. A new bout of fighting erupted on Monday in a border area between Afghanistan and Pakistan, the latest indication of a sharp deterioration in relations between the important US allies.

Pakistan is seen as vital in bringing stability to Afghanistan, as most Western powers prepare to withdraw by the end of next year. The United States and other powers involved in Afghanistan have been trying to promote cooperation between the Asian neighbours, who have a history of mistrust. Afghan officials said the clash on Monday erupted after Pakistani troops tried to repair a gate on the border, in the Afghan District of Goshota, where last week an Afghan border policeman was killed in an exchange of fire. It is unclear if there were any casualties on Monday.

“This morning’s clash began after the Pakistan side continued to repair the gate, which was damaged in the previous fighting,” said Ahmad Zia Abdulzai, a spokesman for the government of Nangarhar Province. Afghanistan says the gate at Pakistan’s Gursal military post encroaches on its territory. The Nangarhar governor has spoken several times to Pakistani consular officials to tell them not to repair the gate, Abdulzai said. Pakistani military spokesmen were not immediately available for comment.

Afghanistan and Pakistan have had tense relations since Pakistan was formed in 1947, at the end of British colonial rule over India. Afghanistan has never officially accepted the border between them. Pakistan helped the Taleban take power in Afghanistan in the 1990s.

Many Afghan leaders say Pakistan is still helping the militants, seeing them as a tool to counter the influence of its old rival, India, in Afghanistan. Pakistan denies helping the Taleban and says it wants peace and stability in its western neighbour.— Reuters

Say no to narcissistic leaders

Leadership is fundamentally about leading and interacting with humans, not machines and processes. It is a series of arbitrary choices and decisions. So, to exercise leadership in the human terrain, emotional intelligence is paramount. Certainly, when leaders become more senior, they need to manage and lead larger organizations and deal with higher levels of complexity and uncertainty. However, these different complexities and contextual variables do not negate or minimize the human dimension of leadership. In fact, they only highlight its critical nature.

Leaders need to be the best they can be. Leader attributes and competencies include respect, empathy, interpersonal tact and the ability to create a positive environment. A leader cannot practice emotional intelligence if he is not self-aware and does not practice self-regulation. A truly effective leader is distinguished by a high degree of emotional intelligence, which includes self-awareness, self-regulation, motivation, empathy and social skills.

Conversely, narcissistic leaders tend to be egotistical, manipulative, self-seeking and exploitative. Some narcissists have such an inflated self-confidence that they do not believe that others have anything useful to say to them. They also avoid taking responsibility for shortcomings and failures but take more credit than they deserve, often at the expense of taking credit for the contributions of co-workers and subordinates.

Narcissistic leaders have been around for years and will continue to serve in government departments and organizations, devastating the spirit of corps, morale, initiative, drive and willing service of subordinates. When steps are being taken to create an open society where all citizens can enjoy equal opportunities to pursue their dreams, all are to say no to narcissistic leaders who pose a grave threat to democrization process being implemented with added momentum in the country.

GERMANY 7 May—Germany riveted at start of neo-Nazi murder trial

MUNICH, 7 May—The survivor of a neo-Nazi cell blamed for a series of racist murders that scandalized Germany and shamed its authorities goes on trial on Monday in one of the most anticipated court cases in recent German history.

The chance discovery of the gang, the National Socialist Underground (NSU), which had gone undetected for more than a decade, has forced Germany to acknowledge it has a more militant and dangerous neo-Nazi fringe than previously thought, and exposed staggering intelligence failings.

The trial in Munich will focus on 38-year-old Beate Zschaepe, who is charged with complicity in the murder of eight Turks, a Greek and a policewoman between 2000-2007, as well as two bombings in immigrant areas of Cologne, and 15 bank robberies.

“With its historical, social and political dimensions the NSU trial is one of the most significant of post-war German history,” lawyers for the family of the first victim, flower seller Enver Simsek, said in a statement. The case has profoundly shaken a country that believed it had learned the lessons of its past, and has reopened an uncomfortable debate about whether Germany must do more to tackle the far-right and lingering racist attitudes.

The trial in Munich will focus on 38-year-old Beate Zschaepe, who is charged with complicity in the murder of eight Turks, a Greek and a policewoman between 2000-2007, as well as two bombings in immigrant areas of Cologne, and 15 bank robberies.

As one of the French commanders, a well-known Mexican financial journalist David Paramo, who hosts a radio show, appears on TV Azteca and has a national newspaper column, and Martha Gonzalez, the editor of the local El Peso newspaper.

“We still don’t know what they were doing there,” Carles Gonzalez said. “But this has nothing to do with the professional activities of their parents.”

Mexican journalists are often targeted and killed by drug cartels for reporting on their activities. The Committee to Protect Journalists, a New York-based advocacy group, says 25 journalists have been murdered in Mexico since 1992. In a separate incident, authorities found seven bodies dumped in a car in a Mexico City suburb on Sunday morning, a local police official said. Two of the men were found naked.

Police have identified three of the men, who ranged in ages from 14 to 42, the official said.

It appeared all seven men, who were found in the suburb of Ecatepec, had been shot, the official said. Last year, police discovered eight corpses dumped in the down-at-the-heels suburb of 2 million people. Ecatepec lies in the State of Mexico, which borders the capital to the north and where more than half the population of greater Mexico City lives.

Until 2011, Enrique Pena Nieto, now the president of Mexico, was the governor of the State of Mexico.

He has vowed to take a different tack than his presidential predecessor, Felipe Calderon, who sent in the troops to tackle the warring drug cartels.

Pena Nieto has focused instead on stopping kidnapping and extortion. Roughly 70,000 people have died in drug-related killings since 2006, when Calderon launched his military-led campaign. More than 4,200 have died in the first four months of Pena Nieto’s term, a slower pace than early 2012.— Reuters

Gunmen executed two women and two young men in Chihuahua state on Monday, the fourth double killing in a week in the northern border state where drug cartels are waging a brutal war.

The shooting was the latest in a series of apparently targeted killings in Chihuahua, the state where the Juarez and Sinaloa drug cartels control lucrative smuggling routes, and where vigilante groups have sprung up to try to preserve law and order.

The regional secretary of the Public Security Office said police acting on an anonymous tip discovered the cache of drugs on Monday night in the Guarulhos, part of the metropolitan area of Sao Paulo, Brazil’s largest city.

The marijuana had been pressed into tablets and stored in 23 boxes labeled “fragile,” according to authorities.

Two men arrested were in the refrigerated truck and the other two were riding alongside in a separate vehicle, apparently protecting the cache. Cambodian PM says to stay in power until age of 74

PHNOM PENH, 7 May—Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen, 61, said on Monday that he will stay in power until he is 74.

At the groundbreaking ceremony for the construction of a China-funded road in Kampong Speu Province, the prime minister also appealed to people to vote for his Cambodian People’s Party (CPP) in the upcoming general election.

Cambodia is to hold a general election for the 123-seat parliament on 28 July.

Political analysts predicted that the CPP of Prime Minister Hun Sen will dominate the election. In March, Hun Sen also projected that his party would win at least two-thirds majority in the upcoming poll.

Hun Sen, one of the longest serving political leaders in the world, came to power in January 1985.

India Supreme Court gives go-ahead to Kudankulam nuclear plant

NEW DELHI, 7 May—India’s Supreme Court gave the go-ahead Monday to start up the Kudankulam nuclear plant in southern India, saying the nation needs nuclear energy and the plant is “safe and secure.”

Nuclear power plants are needed in the country for the present and future generations. The Kudankulam nuclear plant has been set up by the government for the welfare of the people, the court said in its decision.

Dismissing public safety concerns, the Supreme Court said the Kudankulam plant, with two Russian-designed 1,000-megawatt reactors under construction, is “safe and secure” and nuclear energy is necessary for the country’s larger public interest and economic growth.

The Supreme Court’s decision means the plant will be commissioned soon.

Antinuclear activists launched protests against the Kudankulam project in the wake of the Fukushima nuclear accident in Japan in March 2011. The government-owned Nuclear Power Corp. of India already has 20 nuclear reactors in operation in six locations. The Supreme Court gave its judgment after hearing petitions filed by antinuclear activists that safety measures had not been put in place.

The protesters also objected to the Kudankulam nuclear plant on grounds of nuclear waste disposal, the plant’s impact on the environment and the safety of people living nearby.

The protesters say more than 1 million people live within a 30-kilometre radius of the nuclear plant and it would be impossible to evacuate them in the event of a major nuclear disaster like the one that occurred at the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear plant in the wake of a huge tsunami.

JAL group plane’s engine catches fire after landing at Osaka airport

OSAKA, 7 May—An engine on a Bombardier CRJ200 operated by a Japan Airlines Co. group firm caught fire after landing at Osaka airport on Monday, the transport ministry said.

There were no injuries among the 52 passengers and three crew members on board J-Air Corp.’s Flight 663. The engine caught fire after landing at Osaka airport on Monday, Osaka, southwest Japan, according to the Land, Infrastructure, Transport and Tourism Ministry.

A display in the cockpit showed that fire broke out on one of two engines. After stopping the engine and turning off the fire extinguishing system, the sign went off, the ministry said. A mechanic later found traces of fire on the engine.

The Japan Transport Safety Board will send three inspectors to Osaka International Airport on Tuesday to find out what caused the fire.

The airport straddling Osaka and Hyogo prefectures in western Japan now serves only domestic flights. JAL said passengers were not affected by the engine fire.

The plane was scheduled to fly later Monday from Osaka airport to Hakodate, Hokkaido, and back, but the round-trip flight was canceled.

S Korea, US hold joint naval drill in Yellow Sea

SEOUL, 7 May—South Korea and the United States launched a five-day joint naval military drill on Monday in the Yellow Sea with the participation of a nuclear-powered Los Angeles-class submarine, the Yonhap News Agency reported.

The Democratic People’s Republic of Korea (DPRK) said on Sunday that if Seoul really worries about the future of the Kaesong industrial zone, it should stop all its hostile policies and provocative military drills toward Pyongyang.

In response to Pyongyang, South Korean defence ministry spokesman said in a briefing Monday, “Just like students must study hard to prepare for the exam, all the armies have to participate military exercises. Therefore, as long as the combined forces and South Korean military exist, the drill will continue.”

LOS ANGELES, 7 May—William Friedkin, the US film director who scared up a fright with “The Exorcist” and set pulses racing with thriller “The French Connection” in the 1970s, will get a lifetime achievement award from the Venice Film Festival, organizers said on Thursday.

Friedkin, 77, will also present a restored version of his initially poorly received but now acclaimed 1977 film “Sorcerer” at the 28 August-7 September festival in the Italian city.

Venice film festival director Alberto Barbera said that Friedkin had made major contributions to US cinema “the revolutionary impact of which has not always been recognized.”

“Friedkin exploded the rules of documentary filmmaking in several works for television that were seminal for their dry, harsh and unpredictable point of view, and later revolutionized the popular genres of the crime film and the horror film, basically inventing the modern blockbuster with ‘The French Connection,’” Barbera said in a statement.

“The French Connection,” a drug smuggling drama starring Gene Hackman, won five Oscars in 1972 including Best Picture and Best Director. Friedkin has gone on to make more than 30 films, documentaries and TV series, moving between smaller independent films and big studio movies. His most recent movie “Killer Joe” screened in competition at the Venice Festival in 2011.

LIVERPOOL, 7 May—Liverpool will play a post-season friendly in South Africa — their first match in the country in nearly 20 years — after this month, the English Premier League club announced on Monday.

The Reds will face Ajax Cape Town at the Cape Town stadium on 21 May and Liverpool’s chief commercial officer, Billy Hogan, said in a statement: “It will be fantastic for the club to return to South Africa after almost twenty years.”

He added: “We know we have a large fan base in South Africa which is rapidly growing, in the last eight months the number of South African fans visiting the club’s website has doubled.

Liverpool are the second most popular overseas club in South Africa behind arch-rivals and English champions Manchester United and Hogan said: “This visit is part of our off-season activity and shows our commitment to bringing the club closer to their fans all over the globe, no matter how far away from Anfield they may live.”

The north-west club recently launched a special Twitter account for their South Africa supporters @SouthAfricaLFC.

Whilst on that visit, the Liverpool party also met with then South Africa president Nelson Mandela.

Liverpool, the dominant force in English football from the mid 1970s through the 1980s, have not won a domestic title since 1990 and are currently seventh in the Premier League following Sunday’s goalless Merseyside derby draw with Everton.

Pacquiao returns to the ring to take on Rios in Macau

LAS VEGAS, 7 May—Manny Pacquiao will return to the ring to fight American Brandon Rios in a 12-round welterweight clash in Macau on 24 November, the Filipino’s publicist told Reuters on Tuesday.

It will be Pacquiao’s first fight since he was knocked out by Juan Manuel Marquez in December, a defeat that prompted many to suggest the 34-year-old should retire after being left unconscious, face down on the canvas by his Mexican rival. However, Pacquiao, winner of world titles at eight different weight divisions, has ignored the calls to quit and after the lengthy break will fight at the Cotai Arena in The Venetian Macao-Resort and Hotel, Fred Sternburg said.

It will be a first bout outside the United States since 2006 for Pacquiao 54-5-2 (38 knockouts), who also lost to Timothy Bradley in his only other bout last year.

The back-to-back defeats have seemingly ended all hope of a lucrative clash against undefeated American Floyd Mayweather Jr. Rios 31-1-1 (23 knockouts) is also coming off a loss, Mike Alvarado claiming a unanimous points decision in their March contest in Las Vegas.

Pacquiao’s trainer Freddie Roach predicted a swift end to the non-title bout.

“Manny is definitely going to get his mojo back with this fight,” Roach told ESPN.com. “I think it’ll be an exciting fight but that Manny is going to land… and knock this guy out somewhere along the way. Rios likes to exchange and his style is not really difficult to figure out, so Manny’s gonna hit him.”

Referees not always aware of racist incidents, says Webb

ZURICH, 7 May—Referees are on the front line in the fight against racism but cannot always be expected to be aware of what is going on off the field, English referee Howard Webb said on Monday.

Webb took part in the first meeting of FIFA’s anti-racism task force and said that one suggestion was the use of off-pitch officials to help referees identify serious incidents.

“We are very much in the front line, we are the first port of call for the players,” Webb told Reuters after the meeting which he described as a “brainstorming” session.

“If we become aware of anything from the players or officials which they deem to be racist or discriminative, then we’ve got an obligation to respond and referees will do that.”

But he said that, ideally, referees needed help to take the pressure off them.

“We talked about the limitations because you are not always aware of what’s happening in the stands,” he said.—Reuters

O'Shea rescues point to ease Sunderland relegation fears

London, 7 May—John O'Shea scored a second-half equaliser as 10-man Sunderland rescued a 1-1 draw at home to Stoke City on Monday that moved them three points clear of the Premier League relegation zone.

Jonathan Walters gave the visitors an early lead when he reacted smartly in the box to poke home from close range on nine minutes after his header had been blocked.

Sunderland had a player sent off for the second week running when Craig Gardner was shown a straight red card for a lunging, studs-first tackle on Charlie Adam with only 33 minutes on the clock.

Stoke looked to be cruising to victory in a one-paced and slightly subdued encounter before defender O'Shea equalised after 63 minutes when he shifted his balance quickly to side-foot home a dangerous Sebastian Larsson corner at the far post.

Sunderland climbed to 15th, level on 36 points with north-east rivals Newcastle United and Norwich City and three clear of Wigan Athletic who are in the relegation zone but have a game in hand. “In some way we are a masochistic team,” said new Sunderland manager Paolo Di Canio who also watched Stephane Sessegnon being sent off against Aston Villa last time out.

“it is a massive point for us but it wasn’t easy. After 10 minutes we gave an easy goal away even if we knew before kick-off that they had five or six who are giants compared to our physical presence,” the Italian told Sky Sports.

“The first corner kick we conceded we give a goal away. Then you saw Craig’s bad challenge. “We have to be careful and to handle our aggression. We have to make sure we don’t repeat the same mistakes otherwise we are in real trouble.

After slumping to a 6-1 defeat by Villa when playmaker Sessegnon was sent off, Sunderland dug deep to find a route back into the match.

They had looked to be dead and buried after the first half when they created little, but came close to winning the match late in the second half when a low shot from Danny Rose grazed the outside of post.

Stoke stayed 11th on 41 points and should be safe.

“We are pleased that we’ve got that point,” manager Tony Pulis said. “That takes us to 41. There are a lot of teams down there this time around.

“I am amazed it isn’t sorted out yet. It’s one of those funny seasons. It seems to have happened at all levels, not just the Premier League.”—Reuters

Uchiyama defends super-feather title with knockout

Tokyo, 7 May—Japan’s Takashi Uchiyama successfully defended his WBA super featherweight title for the seventh time on Monday, when he knocked out ninth-ranked contender Jaider Parra of Venezuela in the fifth round. The 33-year-old Uchiyama knocked out the previously undefeated Parra 25 minutes, 15 seconds into the fifth round, floooring him with a left to the body.

“He was strong, in keeping with his undefeated record,” Uchiyama said. “I was thinking of trying to knock him out in the later rounds, but I decided it a little early.” It was clear there was a gap in ability between the two fighters. In the early stages, Uchiyama dictated the pace as he cleverly worked his opponent with both hands, up and down.

Although Parra was repeatedly able to land left jabs, they had no telling effect on Uchiyama, who staggered Parra in the fourth round with a right to the chin. Uchiyama improved to 20 wins and one draw, with 17 wins by knockout, while Parra fell to 29-1-1 with one draw. In an earlier fight at Tokyo’s Ota City Gymnasium, Japan’s Kohei Kono lost his WBA super flyweight crown on Monday in his first defense of the title he won on New Year’s Eve. The 32-year-old Kono lost by 2-0 decision to top-ranked contender and WBA interim champion Liborio Solis, who is also from Venezuela. “I thought perhaps I’d won,” Kono said. “Truthfully, I think the low blow for which I lost points) was not very low, I think the judging favored the other guy.” Kono’s record fell to 28 wins, including 11 knockouts, and eight losses. The 31-year-old Solis improved to 15 wins, seven by knockout, against three defeats and a draw.
