MYEIK, 13 May — Central Body on Trafficking in Person of Myanmar confirmed its acceptance of one man and one woman who are in Pathumthani centre of Social Welfare and Development Department of Thailand where victims of human trafficking are being given care.

The two victims will be accommodated at a training school of Social Welfare Department in Myanmar and they will be subjected to close scrutiny before sending back them to their hometowns as data related to the victims in the case report sent from Thailand remained incomplete, it is learnt.

“We know in general that the female victim is thought to be from Lahu or Wa regions. The male victim is said to be from Mon state. They are not clear where they are from and their exact addresses because they have been in Thailand since their childhood. We have not found out any firm evidence that can prove they are citizens, but there would be a happy reunion with their parents and relatives for them when detailed scrutiny was over. When CBTC is informed of those who have fallen victims to human trafficking, victims will be accepted if they can prove their citizenship status,” an official said.

686 candidates register for Iran's upcoming presidential election

Tehran, 13 May—The latest report released by Iran’s Interior Ministry showed a total of 686 candidates had registered for the upcoming presidential election slated for 14 June. Among the contestants from diverse walks of life, a number of prominent conservative and moderate political figures as well as incumbent President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad were among the new independent candidate hopefuls, which means the man behind the mannequin may have more chances of winning the race.

Several conservative figures, or “principlists,” as some of them prefer to be referred to, have signed up for the forthcoming race. On Saturday afternoon when the registration deadline was about to terminate, many’s surprise, Iran’s chief nuclear negotiator Saed Jalili appeared in Iran’s Interior Ministry and made an announcement about his decision to run for the upcoming presidential contest. Other hopefuls, either before or on the registration day, made comments on their campaigns, but Jalili left the Interior Ministry without making any remarks or talking to negotiators.

A hardliner conservativist, he currently leads Iran’s negotiation team with the world powers on the country’s nuclear issue and also secretary of Iran’s Supreme National Security Council. On Saturday, Mayor of Iran’s capital Mossoum Baqer Qalibaf, also signed up for the election.

MSDF vessels to make 1st port call in Myanmar

Tokyo, 13 May—Maritime Self-Defence Force training vessels will make a port call in Myanmar for the first time during an around-the-world voyage starting later this month, Defence Ministry officials said on Monday.

The ministry believes a goodwill visit will significantly democratize Southeast Asian country that has close ties with China will benefit Tokyo amid rising tensions between Japan and China over a territorial dispute.

The world voyage by MSDF training vessels began in 1957 for young cadets. This year, about 160 MSDF members will leave Japan in late May aboard two training ships and a destroyer and visit more than 10 countries in Asia and Europe as well as the United States during a five-month trip, the officials said.

Sharif closes in on majority in parliament, world leaders congratulate Islamabad, 13 May—Former Pakistani Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif has started talks to form a new government, as unofficial results from Saturday’s general election showed on Monday that his Pakistan Muslim League Nawaz appears on course to secure a majority in Pakistan’s parliament.

In a statement on Sunday, Indian Prime Minister Manmohan Singh congratulated Sharif on his “emphatic victory,” saying he hoped the two governments will work together to “chart a new course in the relations between Pakistan and India.” Sharif has “received a strong mandate to lead Pakistan toward a stable, peaceful and prosperous future,” Singh said, inviting Sharif for a visit to India.

US President Barack Obama also vowed to work with the new government “as equal partners.” During his election campaign, Sharif had pledged to end Pakistan’s involvement in the US-led war on terror, causing unease in Washington.

Sharif, who served as prime minister for two terms in the 1990s, already claimed victory on Saturday. “Thank God, it is now confirmed that the Pakistan Muslim League has emerged as the biggest party in the national assembly,” Sharif said late Saturday in his “victory speech” at the party’s office in Lahore. “We can have a government without crutches and we do not have to seek support from coalition partners,” he said.

Sharif called on all parties to agree on a national agenda, inviting opposition leaders to a conference to discuss the future of Pakistan.

Saturday’s election saw one of the highest voter turnouts in the country’s history, with votes still being counted. Official results could take days, election observers said on Monday.

Dhaka, 13 May—More than two weeks after thegrim recovery work in Bangladesh’s worst industrial tragedy, the death toll approached 1,200 on Sunday. Tarek Alam of the Dhaka district administration’s control room, which was set up outside the horrendous tragedy site to coordinate the rescue operations, told Xinhua “the confirmed death toll stands at 1,126 with recovery of two more bodies by 3 pm (local time) on Sunday.”

He said 63 corpses have still been kept at the nearby Adharcandra High School grounds for identification. But the official said only a handful of bodies were recovered on Sunday in the wreckage of the collapsed building at Savar, on the outskirts of capital Dhaka. It’s believed that many more bodies were expected to be found in the rubble as cranes and bulldozers cut through the preponderance of concrete and mangled steels at the building’s basement where the－last survivor－was believed to be. At the official’s recovery operation would likely end sometime on Monday as they expect to remove the entire debris from the catastrophe site within Monday.

“We’re near the end,” said an official who-preferred to be unnamed. An initial government probe has blamed vibrations from giant generators combined with the vibrations of sewing machinery for the collapse of the building, allegedly constructed without proper permission with substandard materials. At least 12 people have been arrested, including the owner of the collapsed building and owners of the factories—Phantom Apparels, Phantom Tac, Ether Tex, New Wave Style and New Wave Bottoms—which make clothing for many major global brands.－Xinhua

Police end hostage standoff in New Jersey, detain suspect

Newark, 13 May—A tense weekend standoff in a South Trenton, New Jersey, neighborhood ended early on Sunday when police took a man into custody after he held several children hostages for about 36 hours.

“The hostage situation has been resolved,” State Police Sergeant Adam Grossman told Reuters. “The children are safe.” Grossman said the suspect was taken into custody at 3:45 am EDT (0745 GMT), but declined to comment on his identity or any other details of the standoff. The man barricaded himself inside a house in the New Jersey state capital on Friday afternoon after police were called to do a wellness check on a resident at the address, a Trenton police spokesman said on Friday.

On Saturday, the Times of Trenton cited two unidentified law enforcement sources as saying police officers checking on the house had discovered the partially decomposed body of the man’s girlfriend, but pulled back when they saw he had a gun. The newspaper also reported that one of the woman’s children was killed and that the man was holding three more of her children inside the house. A fifth child, age 19, was reportedly safe at another location with relatives.

State police said tactical units, including hostage negotiators, canine units and SWAT teams, were on the scene. Federal investigators and hostage negotiators were assisting state police, according to the FBI. Adam Grossman said additional information would be released at a news conference in Trenton at 10 am EDT (1400 GMT). A spokesman for the Trenton police could not immediately be reached on Sunday morning.

Syria rebels free UN peacekeepers held in Golan

Manila/Dubai, 13 May—Syrian rebels have freed four Filipino UN peacekeepers who they had captured on the ceasefire line between Syria and the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights last week, the Philippines’ foreign minister said on Sunday.

Al Jazeera English television, monitored in Dubai, quoted sources as saying the four had been transferred to Israel.

Philippine Foreign Minister Albert del Rosario confirmed to Reuters in Manila that they had been released. The ministry will issue a statement later in the day, he said. The rebel Yar-"mouk Martyrs Brigade had said they were holding the peacekeepers for their own safety after clashes in the area had put them in danger.

Google+ struggles to attract brands, some neglect to update

SAN FRANCISCO, 13 May—To mark the Cinco de Mayo holiday this year, Domino’s Pizza festooned its Facebook page with a string of posts, including an image of a Mexican-themed guacamole pizza that garnered over 2,000 “likes.” But visitors to Domino’s companion Google+ page on that day found less festive fare: The most recent post was from October 2012.

Two years after introducing its social network, Google Inc is struggling to win over the brands and businesses that have been its most loyal customers in the Internet search market. For Google+ to thrive, it is vital to draw in household names, not just to lay the groundwork for potential future business, but also because users of the site have come to expect being able to follow, comment on or even vent about their favorite brands. Progress has been slow. Rival services from Twitter to Amazon.com Inc are increasingly competitive in vying for corporate attention and marketing budgets, while technical shortcomings of Google+ have put off some companies accustomed to the flexibility of Facebook, marketing and corporate executives say.

The biggest problem for Google+ is that many more consumers use Twitter and Facebook — and they log in to Facebook for much longer periods. A Google spokeswoman said Google+ has been used by millions of brands and businesses, and that the benefit of the service extends beyond Google+ Web pages, by providing brands with social capabilities that enhance Google’s other products. Google+, which was first introduced in June 2011, has roughly 135 million users that it says actively use its website news stream, and about 500 million that have set up Google+ accounts at some point, according to the company. Still, Facebook has 1.1 billion users who engage with the service at least once a month, while Twitter has 200 million.

The average US visitor to Google+ spent 6 minutes 47 seconds on the site in March, versus more than 6 hours on Facebook.com, according to Nielsen Media Research, though the data does not include activity on the social networks’ mobile apps.

“The main reason we are more active on Facebook than Google+ is because that is where our customers and our target demographic are spending their time,” said Dave Galtman, co-founder of online eyewear company Warby Parker. Many businesses do build outposts on Google+, eager to benefit from its integration with Google’s popular Internet search service. Some corporations have even used its online video feature for splashy product launches.

But the flurry of commercial activity common on other social networks —from restaurant promotions to movie trailers — is harder to spot on Google+, raising questions about its ability to rival Facebook or Twitter from its integration with Google’s popular Internet search service. Some corporations have even used its online video feature for splashy product launches.

For banks in cyber heist, how to get their money back?

NEW YORK, 13 May—Because the sums were large and such attacks are relatively new, the two Middle East banks hit in a $45 million ATM heist face an uncertain path in trying to recover their losses, financial, insurance and legal experts say.

Oman-based Bank of Muscat lost $40 million and United Arab Emirates-based National Bank of Ras Al Khaimah PSC (RAK-BANK) lost $5 million in the global heist, US prosecutors said on Thursday. Computer hackers broke into third-party companies that processed transactions for prepaid debit cards issued by the banks, the prosecutors said. Then, gangs in 27 countries withdrew the money from cash machines in two coordinated hits, one on 21 December last year and the other on 19 February this year.

While details of what happened are still sketchy, experts say the banks could bring claims against the processing companies in court, or they could file claims with their insurers and those of the processing companies.

“There’s no hard and fast rule,” said Dan Karson, the Americas chairman of Kroll Advisory Solutions. “We’re in very much a new cyberspace of finance, and allocating liability is still very much evolving.” Any claims by banks against the processing companies would depend on the contracts between the two parties, Karson and other experts said. Those contracts include industry security standards, which are required by the major credit card payment networks, in this case MasterCard.

In most security breach cases, the processing company in question did not fully comply with the standards, said Doug Johnson, vice president for risk management policy at the American Bankers Association.

However, even if the processor failed to comply with security standards, banks may still be unable to get back their money. That is because the contracts between processors and banks, under terms set by credit card companies like MasterCard or Visa, typically limit the processor’s liability.

“They can’t make everybody whole, or they’ll be out of business,” said Michael Klaschka of In-trevo Insurance Brokers, which has many financial institutions as clients. “The bank may have very little recourse against the credit card processor.”

Hon Hai’s Apple pie under threat from Pegatron

TAIPEI, 13 May—Hon Hai Precision Industry Co Ltd (2317.TW), the world’s largest electronics contract manufacturer, faces growing competition from cross-town rival Pegatron Corp (4938.TW), a company that is just a quarter of its size by revenue.

Hon Hai, better known by its trading name Foxconn, draws an estimated 60 to 70 percent of its revenue from assembling products for Apple Inc (AAPL.O). But it has been struggling to grow in a smartphone market increasingly dominated by Samsung Electronics Co Ltd (005930.KS).

Former Taiwanese manufacturer Pegatron wants to grab more orders for Apple Inc’s fast-selling iPhone and iPad from the California-based tech giant. Analysts say Pegatron offers more competitive pricing -at the expense of lower margins - and appears to be succeeding in pulling in more orders from Apple.

Pegatron’s announcement last week that it would increase its number of workers in China by up to 40 percent in the second half of the year fuelled market speculation that it would be the sole assembler for a widely expected cheaper iPhone.

“Pegatron posts a long-term risk to Hon Hai because it catches up on margins by supplying more components, it can provide more aggressive pricing,” Darva Capital analyst Birdy Lu said. “Hon Hai’s margin upturn is not a guarantee.”—Reuters

Icahn, Southeastern mount challenge to Dell buyout

NEW YORK/BOSTON, 13 May—Carl Icahn and Southeastern Asset Management Inc have mounted an aggressive challenge to Michael Dell’s controversial $24.4 billion offer to take Dell Inc private, offering $21 billion in cash to shareholders while vying to wrest control of the company from its co-founder.

Michael Dell, major shareholders such as Southeastern and billionaire activist investor Icahn are waging a battle over the future of the world’s third largest personal computer maker, once a tech-industry high flyer, but now struggling to evolve as people embrace smartphones and tablet computers.

Michael Dell and private equity firm Silver Lake want to take the company private for $13.65 per share, making it the largest buyout since the 2008 financial crisis. But many shareholders, including Southeastern and T Rowe Price, complain that offer severely undervalues the company.

Instead, Icahn and Southeastern, two of Dell’s biggest shareholders, proposed a deal that gives shareholders $12 of cash for every share they own, as well as allow them to keep their stock.

Given that they retain their stake in the company and that Dell’s offering only pays $13.65 a share, every stock owned takes on a value of $16.65, Icahn and Southeastern argue.

At $12 apiece, the cash portion of Icahn’s and Southeastern’s offer will come to $21 billion.

Should Dell’s board rebuff them and put the go-private offer to a shareholder vote, the pair will nominate a slate of 12 directors to challenge the current board.

Firm dollar hits oil, gold, shares; Nikkei jumps on weak yen

Reuters

Tokyo, 13 May — Oil and gold prices fell on Monday as the dollar strengthened, dragging Asian shares lower, but Japanese equities outperformed on the back of the yen’s slide to a fresh 4-1/2-year low against the US currency.

Investors remained cautious ahead of a set of data due later in the session to gauge the current state of the world’s top two economies, the United States and China. Both countries will report retail sales for April.

“A strength in the dollar is weighing on commodities across the board,” said Ben Le Bruyn, analyst at OptionsXpress in Sydney.

“For oil, worries of ample stocks across the board,” said Mercatus OptionsXpress in Sydney. “A strength in the dollar is weighing on commodities across the board,” said Ben Le Bruyn, analyst at OptionsXpress in Sydney.

The drop in commodities prices weighed on the Australian dollar, which eased 0.2 percent to $0.9980 after hitting an 11-month low of $0.9961 on Friday.

The dollar’s firmness was also cemented after Japan avoided criticism from its peers for pursuing bold reflatory policies which have resulted in nearly 50 percent more than for similar districts such as upper Fifth Avenue. Lloyds banks warned of a “steady decline in the Japanese currency, which improves earnings prospects for exporters and underpins the export-reliant Japanese economy.”

Research on Alzheimer is major challenge for Europe

Reuters

Milan, 13 May — Researchers attending an Alzheimer Disease (AD) conference in Italy’s Milan on Friday said this devastating illness is a major challenge for scientific research in Europe.

AD is the most common of the brain-related disorders which cost nearly 800 billion euros (about 1,035 billion US dollars) in Europe every year, according to a study of the European Brain Council.

“Consequently the brain-related disorders, the AD in particular, and research on new treatments represent a challenge and one of the priorities in the strategic programmes of all European countries,” said Monica Di Luca, a professor of pharmacology at the University of Milan.

The conference was organized by the Italian Society of Pharmacology (SIF) as part of the European Month of the Brain, a full May of events and activities to make aware of the successes achieved and the challenges still laying ahead for brain research.

Europe has invested heavily in brain research. Between 2007 and 2012, it funded projects and scientists with an investment of almost two billion euros.

By 2025 some 20 percent of Europeans will be 65 or over. Di Luca said at present the number of those living with dementia, of which the AD is the most common cause, is around 6.5 million including some one million in Italy, but could rise to some 14 million by 2030, according to estimates.

“Currently there is no cure for AD, but I am confident in research considered that it has made great progress over the last few years,” a biology professor at University of Rome Tor Vergata and group leader at the Belgium-based Flemish Institute for Biotechnology, Claudia Bagni, told Xinhua.

Bagni said that improved knowledge of the molecular mechanisms of neurodegeneration has allowed experts to increasingly work on drugs to treat AD.

“We do not have the right drug yet and it is possible that we will need a cocktail of drugs,” she noted.—Xinhua

Second French coronavirus case confirmed

Reuters

Paris, 13 May — A second diagnosis of the new SARS-like coronavirus has been confirmed in France, the Health Ministry said on Sunday, in what appeared to be a case of human-to-human transmission.

The new infection was found in a 50-year-old man who had shared a hospital room with France’s other known sufferer, the ministry said in a statement.

Health experts are concerned about clusters of the new coronavirus strain, nCoV, which was first spotted in the Gulf and has spread to France, Britain and Germany. There has so far been little evidence of direct and sustained human-to-human transmission of nCoV — in contrast to the pattern seen in the related Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS) virus, which killed 775 people in 2003. The first nCoV case in France, confirmed on 8 May, is a 65-year-old man who fell ill after returning from Dubai late last month.

Both French patients are in hospital in the northern city of Lille, where the younger man was transferred to intensive care on Sunday as his breathing deteriorated.

His case suggests that airborne transmission of the virus is possible, though still unusual, said Professor Be noit Guery, head of the Lille hospital’s infectious diseases unit. “Fortunately, this remains a virus that is not easily transmitted,” Guery told the BFMTV channel.

“I don’t think the public should be concerned — it has been out there for a year and we have 34 cases globally,” he said. The second French case had occurred because the first patient presented “quite atypical” symptoms and had not been isolated immediately.

Health officials screened 124 people who have come into contact with him and carried out laboratory tests on at least five, including three medical staff.

Hong Kong has world’s most expensive retail space

New York, 13 May — There’s expensive and then there’s Hong Kong.

The Asian shopping haven in the first quarter kept its crown as having the world’s highest rent, according to a report by global property advisor CBRE Group Inc (CBRE).

The 10 most expensive cities for retailers benefit from strong demand and modest new supply, a recipe for stable record-high prime rental rates, the report released on Sunday showed. In some markets, such as Hong Kong and London, the sky-high rents have prompted some newcomers to look nearby. For example, in London, Mayfair has benefited from those priced out of Bond Street.

Annual retail rent in high-end shopping areas in Hong Kong averaged $4,328 per square foot (36,351 euros per square metre).

“Given that space is so expensive in Hong Kong’s prime shopping streets largely driven by continued demand from international luxury brands, many traditional retailers have moved into more niche secondary retail locations as they still want to be in and access the market, but have been priced out of the prime space,” Joe Lin, CBRE’s executive director of research, told in a statement.

Mixed signals for the global economy

Washington, 13 May — A flood of data this week will paint a mixed picture of the global economy, with the US economy continuing to dampen activity in the euro zone, but accommodative policies helping to stimulate growth in Japan.

Reports from the United States are expected to show some slowdown in momentum early in the second quarter, and the Chinese economy’s prospects are unlikely to have changed much.

The anticipated improvement will mostly reflect a return to growth in Germany, which will help offset ongoing weakness in France and Italy. In another hopeful sign for the automotive industry, US car sales were up at a flat performance in the fourth quarter — thanks in part to the government’s radical steps to end two decades of deflation.

Despite winning top world trade job, even Brazil looks beyond WTO

BRAZILIA, 13 May—Brazil campaigned hard to get itself on the list of countries at the Trade Organization this week but behind closed doors even it acknowledges that the WTO’s main mission — putting forward in global trade talks — looks for the moment like a lost cause.

Instead, President Dilma Rousseff’s government is moving, albeit cautiously, towards less ambitious bilateral deals that may have a greater chance of success. Rousseff’s hope is that more trade could shake Latin America’s most insular major economy from a surprisingly deep slump. Rousseff was thrilled that Brazilian diplomat Roberto Azevedo won an election on Tuesday to head the Geneva-based WTO, cheering the choice as a victory for developing nations in a trade club long dominated by the rich.

Azevedo’s victory over a Mexican candidate, made possible by support from African nations with which Brazil has worked hard to cultivate ties during the past decade, was also hailed as another sign of Brazil’s growing economic clout. Yet officials in Brasilia who do the heavy lifting on trade matters say their focus remains elsewhere. With WTO-led talks in limbo for years, several officials told Reuters they have been instructed to prioritize greater integration with the United States and the European Union.

12 people killed in Iraq’s violence

BAGHDAD, 13 May—A total of 12 people were killed and a government official was wounded in separate incidents in central and northern Iraq on Sunday, the police said. In northern Iraq, the police found five bodies in execution-style near the town of Hamam al-Ali in southern Mosul city, some 400 km north of the Iraqi capital of Baghdad, a local police source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

The five victims were handcuffed and blindfolded with bullet holes in different parts of their bodies, the source said. In a separate incident, three people were killed by unidentified gunmen who opened fire on a crowd of civilians in the town of Mashahda, some 40 km north of Baghdad, an Interior Ministry source anonymously told Xinhua. Also on Sunday, gunmen broke into a house in Karada District in central Baghdad and shot dead four women, the source said without giving further details.

In addition, gunmen using weapons fitted with silencers seriously wounded Junan Yusouf, a director general in the Iraqi Ministry of Electricity, while he was driving on a highway near the district of Shula in northern Baghdad, the source added. Violence is still common in the Iraqi cities despite a dramatic decrease from its peak in 2006 and 2007, when the country was engulfed in sectarian killings.

Israeli air force crash-lands drone due to malfunction

JERUSALEM, 13 May—The Israeli Air Force (IAF) has downsized one of its surveillance drones by the sea on Saturday night due to a technical malfunction that prevented a safe landing, a military source confirmed on Sunday.

The Heron-class drone, also known as “Shoval,” was crash-landed into the waters off the coast of Netanya in central Israel after its operators discovered an engine malfunction. The unusual decision to down the drone was made in light of fears that it might crash into a populated area and harm civilians.

“The drone was flying a routine security patrol over the sea when a malfunction forced crashing it. The IAF searched the crash site and has recovered the remains,” a military spokeswoman told Xinhua on Sunday. She said the IAF has grounded its fleet of Heron-class Shovals until the conclusion of an investigation.

The Shoval, regularly used for surveillance and reconnaissance missions, is considered relatively rare. The drone has a wing span of 16 metres, reaches an altitude of 30,000 feet (9,144 metres), carries a payload of 250 kg and can remain aloft for more than 30 hours.

A week ago, a drone known as “Sky Rider,” which is operated by the Israeli Defence Force’s ground forces, crashed while flying near the Gaza Strip. Last January, the IAF’s flagship drone, nicknamed “Eitan,” crashed during a test flight in southern Israel. Local media speculated at the time that the craft was damaged due to an irregularly heavy payload.

Nineteen shot in New Orleans Mother’s Day parade

NEW ORLEANS, 13 May—Nineteen people including two children were shot in New Orleans on Sunday when gunfire erupted at a Mother’s Day parade, and city police said they were searching for three suspects. Ten men, seven women, a girl and a boy aged 10 were hit when wild gunfire opened up at about 1:45 pm as the parade marched along North Villere Street, according to police spokesman Gary Flot.

Two victims are undergoing surgery, Flot said in a statement. The children were grazed and are in good condition, he said. It was unclear if the victims were marching or bystanders watching the parade. Police Superintendent Ronal Serpas told reporters that officers saw three suspects running away, with one about 18 to 22. No arrests were made.

“It appears that these two or three people, for reasons unknown to us, started shooting at, towards or in the crowd,” Serpas said, adding that the incident was over “in just a couple of seconds.”

Serpas said a witness reported hearing two different shooting parts unknown to us, started two or three people, for reasons unknown to us, started shooting part of “the relentless drum beat of violence” on the streets of New Orleans. “It’s a culture of violence that has enveloped the city for a long, long period of time,” Landrieu told a news conference outside University Hospital, where three victims were being treated for serious injuries.

Temporary household registrations misapplied in low-cost SIM card draws

YANGON, 13 May—Complaints over misapplication of temporary household registration certificates for low-cost SIM card draws arise as certain individuals use the certificates to apply for SIM cards.

Inlay Lake conservation

Inlay as we all know is one of the very few lakes that have permanent dwellers making the natural water body more attractive and interesting through their culture, customs, traditional food and products and the leg-rowers.

Located at an altitude of nearly 3000 feet above the sea level on the Shan table mountains, it is the highest lake in Myanmar and with an estimated surface area of 44.9 square miles (116 km²) it is the second largest natural water body after Indawgyi in Kachin State. During the dry season, the average water depth is 7 feet (2.1 m), with the deepest point being 12 feet (3.7 m), but during the rainy season this can increase by 5 feet (1.5 m).

Last April saw water level of the lake going down to lower marks. But thanks to the rains that came earlier, the water surface began to rise. Like its counterparts in everywhere around the globe, Inlay is also facing environmental degradation mostly from man-made problems.

The remaining slash-and-burn cultivation on the hills surrounding the lake is causing silt and nutrients to run off into the rivers that feed the lake. This silt fills up the lake; the nutrients encourage the growth of weeds and algae. The development of floating garden agriculture also has some side effects on the environment.

Another major cause is water hyacinth. It grows rapidly, filling up the smaller streams and large expanses of the lake, robbing native plants and animals of nutrients and sunlight. Now the departments and organizations concerned are implementing Inlay Lake conservation projects and gaining success to a certain degree.

As the lake is our natural heritage, the home to and source of food for our ethnic Inthas and the source of income for tourism business, seeking the best ways for sustainable conservation of the inland sea has become a must.

On 4th May 2013 Saturday, the 20th Pakokku Literary Award ceremony was held in Pakokku township downtown Yangon. It was attended by Honourable Union Minister for Information U Aung Kyi, State and Region dignitaries, heads of department, the President and members of the Myanmar Writers Association, the President and members of Pakokku literary supervision and scrutiny committees, literary prize winners, outstanding students, and distinguished guests, lending grace and stature to the event.

The ceremony had special significance for the author because he was honoured with the ‘Literary Lifetime Award’, a prestigious citation for his lifetime contributions to the literary arts. In his 23rd recipient. The author and his wife were invited to attend the ceremony.

The author mused, as he listened to the agenda of the ceremony, to recount the inauguration of the Pakokku U Ohn Pe Literary Award in 1992 and its 20 years of progress of literary history. On that occasion, he was the resident of Pakokku, owner of ‘Theintayar Virginia Tobacco Treatment Plant’ pioneered a private literary endowment fund for the progress and perpetuation of Myanmar literature. He donated K 7,601,279.00 to the State in a trail blazing literary award ceremony. He stipulated that (1) the literary fund be named as ‘Pakokku U Ohn Pe Literary Fund’; (2) the Management and Scrutiny Committee be formed under the auspices of the Information Ministry and Myanmar Writers’ and Journalists’ Association (MWJA); (3) manuscript copies be accepted for literary competition; (4) the prizes be classified under 5 categories; (5) one literary lifetime award be nominated for the most outstanding writer of the year; and (6) the literary award ceremony be celebrated alternatively in Pakokku (origin of the Fund) and Yangon.

The first literary award ceremony was held in pomp and ceremony at Pakokku on 7th February 1994. The first literary lifetime award was presented to two renowned doyen writers, U Hin Fatt (Maung Hin) and U Tin Myint (Thinkhar). Since then the literary award ceremonies were held annually in Pakokku town and after the National Literary award ceremony and Sarpy Beikman manuscript award ceremony. The National Literary Lifetime award conferred by the State was the highest in ranking, and Pakokku Literary Lifetime award came second.

It would be pertinent to pass a second to delve into the interesting biography of this humble hardworking philanthropic donor U Ohn Pe. A typical Anyar village lad, he was born in a small hamlet of Shitaw village in Meiktila Township in 1279 Myanmar era (1918 AD). Sadly enough his parents were too poor to provide basic education for him. He was of ten when he was entrusted to the village Sayadaw Venerable U Zawana to study primary monastic education till 15 years.

From thence onwards till 1956 he struggled through stressful arduous life as migrant worker shifting from job to job, place to place. He worked for three very large Pariyatti teaching monasteries, building a hospital, a library and sturdy worthy causes. He kept a diary not missing a single noting of daily events till his last breath. He walked daily to his tobacco fields, only at times riding on a bicycle. Being a disciplinarian in work, he was frugal he donated the last detail. Though up to date entering to tobacco business, and running his own business, he was a good writer too, noting down his life experiences in simple legible Myanmar. His biography: ‘My life experiences’ won him Dr Tin Shwe literary award in 2001. In his later years he became feeble though his works published in 13th April 2008 he passed away. The literary legacy was taken over by his junior philanthropic U Tint Swe, a no less accomplished and boisterous orator with booming voice and plump Anyar personality and equally captivating as his mentor. The Pakokku Literary Award also the literary beneficiaries, their family members, and their literary legatees will follow suit resulting in the boom of Myanmar literature into dizzying heights commencing with the opening up of the national environment following the transforming of the nation towards transparency, good governance, and economic growth, many philanthropic donors will follow suit resulting in the boom of Myanmar literature into dizzying heights commencing with the opening up of the national environment following the transforming of the nation towards transparency, good governance, and economic growth, many philanthropic donors will follow suit resulting in the boom of Myanmar literature into dizzying heights commencing with the opening up of the national environment following the transforming of the nation towards transparency, good governance, and economic growth, many philanthropic donors will follow suit resulting in the boom of Myanmar literature into dizzying heights commencing with the opening up of the national environment following the transforming of the nation towards transparency, good governance, and economic growth.
Departments concerned, Region/State governments to help ...

economic performance of the country. Private sector entities will cooperate and coordinate under the aegis of Union ministries, and region and state governments for private sector development. The President called for effective cooperation between government and private sector during his recent tour of small and medium enterprises of the private sector. We will meet private entities and ask them to form working groups that can operate effectively and government departments will also form efficient working groups. These working groups will make field studies to collect accurate data on the ground and take an important part in implementation process.

Q: What would be the steps of Ministry of Hotels and Tourism and other ministries for development of private hospitality industry?
A: U Htay Aung (Union Minister for Hotels and Tourism)
The private sector takes the most part in tourism industry. When the visitors come, they stay and spend in the country. All of these contribute to private sector. So, I would like to see the systematic development of private sector. In so doing, we need to form working groups to get better results and to bring more benefits for the beneficiaries instead of working through regular procedures.

Working groups from government side and from private sector side will operate together. Those groups won’t interfere in works and projects of local administrative bodies. But, they will see to the real situation and collect accurate information, systematically compile the data and report to the respective region and state governments. The respective local governments will put them forward to the Union government. Only when it obtains comprehensive and accurate information, the Union government can give necessary guidance and determine the policies.

We met today with this intention. The main point is, I believe, would be the best to assign the departments concerned with relevant tasks after those working groups are formed. Other departments are to support the main implementer. The same theory should be applicable in private sector. We have hotel zones across the country. Chairman of the hotel zone of a specific region will take the lead role in the group with the help of a personal assistant and the group should comprise hoteliers concerned, hotel managers, restaurants, tour agencies. They will cover the true situation on the ground and submit the report. Departments for example, if it is about hotel and tourism industry, union government will take the lead and find out what is required and what should be done for development of hotel and tourism industry. Which points are required to be fulfilled by ourselves, which are required to be fulfilled by departments concerned, which are to be fulfilled by the remaining departments and information and real situation are occasionally reported. In this way, local governments concerned and Union ministries concerned will collect necessary data and report to the upper form. It thereby contributes to speed of our operation.

For example, these work procedures are similar to tasks being carried out in ASEAN. Working groups and task groups comprising directors are formed. They implement the tasks and submit reports to the NTO comprising directors-general who make necessary coordination and submit reports to the ministerial meeting. After reviewing the reports at the ministerial meeting, final work procedures are sent to the summit that gives guidance.

Q: May I know preparations to be done by departments concerned and region/state governments for private sector development?
A: U Zaw Oo (Member of National Economic and Social Advisory Council to the President)
The President called for political and economic reforms in the country. This year saw administrative reforms and initiatives for development of important sectors. The focus is placed on emergence of people-centered development works through market economy.

In implementing the task, private sector is very primary because it encourages public participation. Development of people-centered businesses is the main objective of reform process initiated by the President.

Third stage of reform processes that targets emergence of public administration, good governance and clean government will also lead the country to private sector development. Looking at the market and development tasks, private enterprises will take more responsibility as a result of reform processes we laid.

Government departments and service organizations encourage private sector development and plan to form working groups that foster inter-operability and cooperation between the government and private sector. In this way, private sector development is being taken into consideration.

Township level supportive groups comprising the administrator, departmental officials and townswilld are being formed to produce initiatives for development of the township. This new formation can be said as fruitful results of reform processes. I would like to urge all to be ready to move towards development schemes that are more sustainable and stronger through the present formation.—MNA

“I’m sure that we had accepted some 1517 SIM cards. But I have no idea where 500 cards have gone,” said a member of township management committee for distribution of mobile phones.

Regarding the gone 500 SIM cards, a servant of Myanmar Posts and Telecommunications said, “Due to our failure to sell them off, Nay Pyi Taw Council took them back.” A man impatiently waiting for drawing lots said, “There shouldn’t be any more like that at the time when transparency manners are being taken.”

In a phone interview with an official from Kakhin State Posts and Telecommunications Office, he said, “It is true that 500 SIM cards have been sold to Kantawyan Village.”

Vietnam politburo selects its first US-educated member

HANOI, 13 May — Vietnam’s ruling Communist Party has appointed for the first time a US-educated official to its powerful politburo, a landmark decision as pressure mounts to reform an economy stagnating after years of boom growth.

The top decision-making body of the party that has ruled Vietnam since 1975 voted to increase its membership and bring in Nguyen Thi Nhan, a deputy prime minister overseeing education, health and technology, it said on its website (dangcongsan.vn).

Nhan, 59, has a master’s degree in public policy from the University of Oregon and joins an elite group long dominated by politicians educated locally or in the former Soviet Union.

Vietnam’s ruling party is facing its toughest economic challenges in years and has vowed reforms to tackle crippling debt in its banking system, and mismanagement at scores of cash-sapping state-owned firms.

Economists say policymakers have acted effectively to rein in inflation but have been too slow, or reluctant, to implement the sweeping structural changes needed to revive what was a promising “tiger” economy now growing at its slowest pace in 13 years, and put Vietnam back on foreign investors’ radar. Vietnam’s economy is hamstrung by weak credit growth and consumer demand that has forced 113,000 businesses to close since 2011, when inflation soared to over 20 percent and foreign investors delivered only a sixth of the $64 billion pledged.

The politburo also picked its second female member, Nguyen Thi Kim Ngan, as deputy chairwoman of parliament. Ngan, also 59, is a former deputy minister of trade and finance.

The two appointments will increase the politburo’s size to 16 members. Nhan studied in the former East Germany in the 1970s before being awarded a scholarship to the United States. He also served as vice mayor of Ho Chi Minh City. — Xinhua

A-bomb survivors pass on own experiences to support Fukushima

NAGASAKI/HIROSHIMA, 13 May — “I wonder if I can ever have children in the future?”

These words were written in a note from a Fukushima high school girl to 83-year-old Masahito Hirose in the fall of 2011, outlining her worries about the health effects from radiation.

The girl and her classmates had visited Nagasaki on a school field trip and listened to Hirose speak about his experiences as a survivor of the 1945 US atomic bombings.

This prompted Hirose to decide he wanted to use his own experience of living with the impact of radiation to support young people in Fukushima Prefecture in the long term. — Kyodo News

13% of middle-aged men quit jobs for taking care of parents

Tokyo, 13 May—Middle-aged men are quitting paid work to care for elderly parents in increasing numbers, a survey by a research institute showed on Sunday. According to the study by the Institute for Research on Household Economics, 13.4 percent of men aged between 40 and 64 living with parents requiring nursing care had quit jobs at some stage to tend to the relatives, compared with 27.6 percent of women in the same bracket.

“Turnover among men to provide care (to their parents) is rising,” said Keiko Tanaka, a researcher at the institute.

The increase apparently reflects more men remaining unmarried and not having reliable siblings around them. Women, meanwhile, are more likely to be in a position to quit work and care for parents due to having a primary breadwinner spouse.

The survey was conducted between September and November in 2011 via the Internet, with 206 men and 264 women responding. The average age of the respondents was 52.6, and that of their parents stood at 82.7. Given that the respondents have to spend 69,000 yen on average per month for home-based care, Tanaka said, “They are squeezed by high nursing costs,” stressing the need for providing enough public support to caregivers.

Houston hosts world’s biggest art car parade

Houston, 13 May—The world’s largest art car parade traveled through the city of Houston on Saturday, giving art car-lovers a rare chance to view about 300 art cars of every shape and design imaginable.

Entries for the parade, which is in its 28th year, include anything on wheels from unicycles, bikes, lawnmowers, to cars and go-carts, and participants include everyone who is interested in art cars, from community groups, public and private schools, professional organizations to ordinary individuals.

Bob Wink changed his go-cart body up every two years to keep things fresh. This year his entry was titled “Fried Chicken” and Wink dressed up as Colonel Sanders who founded the Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant chain.

Artist Andy Harrell brought his entry “Heroicar” to the Houston art car parade. He imagined a driver being rescued from some unseen peril as Superman swoops in and picks him up, car and all. The Houston Art Car Parade was first held in April, 1988, with a 40-car parade seen by an estimated 2,000 spectators. Today, the parade features cars from across the country as well as from Canada and Mexico, and draws an estimated 250,000-plus spectators. Its official website said the two-hour parade wants to send the message that art is an integral part of everyone’s everyday life.

Los Angeles, 13 May—Tony Stark’s superpowers lifted blockbuster “Iron Man 3” back to the top of movie charts in the United States and Canada, beating out a strong debut over the weekend for lavish Jazz Age drama “The Great Gatsby.” Coming off a gigantic opening a week earlier, “Iron Man 3” commanded $72.5 million (47.1 million pounds) in ticket sales from Friday through Sunday in its second weekend. “Gatsby,” starring Leonardo DiCaprio as millionaire Jay Gatsby in the classic F Scott Fitzgerald tale, earned a strong $51.1 million, according to studio estimates.

Domestic ticket sales for “Iron Man 3” dropped 58 percent from a week earlier, when the film hauled in $174.1 million for the second-biggest movie opening of all time. The film from Walt Disney Co’s Marvel Studios stars Robert Downey Jr as Stark, a billionaire businessman with a superhero alter ego.

International sales for “Iron Man 3” reached a massive $664 million through Sunday after adding $89 million from the weekend, Disney said. The film’s worldwide take now stands at $949 million.

“The Great Gatsby” outpaced pre-weekend forecasts for an opening of up to $455 million. Directed by Australian filmmaker Baz Luhrmann, it is the latest Hollywood rendition of Fitzgerald’s classic American novel, “The Great Gatsby.” A 1974 version starring Robert Redford and Mia Farrow fared poorly at the box office.—Reuters

Los Angeles, 13 May—Former world heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson will star as a cartoon detective, with a pigeon as a sidekick, in a new animated series, US cable network Adult Swim said on Friday.

Tyson, who recently toured his one-man autobiographical stage show, “Mike Tyson: Undisputed Truth,” will give voice to his cartoon character on the “Mike Tyson Mysteries” crime-solving series.

Tyson, 46, will be aided by a magical tattoo on his character’s face and a foul-mouthed pigeon as a partner on the 15-minute show, Adult Swim said. Tyson in real life owns racing pigeons.

The network, which is known for its zany youth-oriented programmes, did not say when the show would premiere.

Some plot lines include attempting to defeat a super computer at chess and why an author/werewolf cannot finish a novel, Adult Swim said. Tyson, who became better known for his erratic behaviour and 1992 rape conviction than for his skill in the ring, has seen his reputation rise following a cameo in the 2009 hit comedy “The Hangover.”—Reuters

Los Angeles, 13 May—“Django Unchained” finally on screens in China

Beijing, 13 May—“Django Unchained” was back on Chinese theatre screens on Sunday more than a month after the movie was suspended due to “technical reasons.”

The Oscar-winning film, which is Quentin Tarantino’s first commercial release in China, is not expected to be a big winner in terms of ticket sales as it faces fierce competition from other blockbusters, according to analysts at mtm.e.com, a popular entertainment website.

Tom Cruise’s sci-fi adventure “Oblivion,” debuted on Friday, with “Iron Man 3,” by American director Shane Black, currently the box office champion.

Also showing is “The Croods,” a cartoon set in the stone age. There will also be competition from domestic productions like “American Dreams in China,” a drama by Hong Kong director Peter Chan, which is scheduled to open on Saturday.

A statement posted on mtm.e.com said “Django Unchained” is expected to rake in 60 million yuan (9.68 million US dollars) at Chinese cinemas.

An official with Saga Cinema in downtown Beijing late Saturday said tickets for the opening showings of “Django Unchained” were still available.

New York, 13 May—Pioneering journalist Barbara Walters, the first woman to co-anchor a US evening news programme, plans to announce her retirement on “The View” on Monday, the host network ABC said. In an entertainment blog posting on Sunday, the network said Walters, 83, would announce on Monday on “The View,” the all-women talk show she created in 1997, that she would retire from television journalism next summer.

“Until then, she will continue to anchor and report for ABC News, appear on ‘The View,’ and anchor specials throughout the year,” the blog stated, noting that Walters would remain an executive producer of the show.

“I am very happy with my decision and look forward to a wonderful and special year ahead both on ‘The View’ and with ABC News,” the blog quoted her as saying. —Reuters

Nadal wins Madrid to lay down French Open marker

MADRID, 13 May—Clay king Rafa Nadal sent another reminder he is not about to surrender his Roland Garros crown without a fight when he crushed Swiss 15th seed Stanislas Wawrinka 6-2, 6-4 to win the Madrid Open on Sunday.

It was the Spanish world number five’s fifth title since he returned from a seven-month injury layoff in February and was more evidence that his troublesome knees are not about to bring his career to a premature end.

Nadal now heads to Rome, where he beat world number one Novak Djokovic in last year’s final, for another Masters event on his favoured surface before the French Open starts at the end of this month.

Since he recovered from his latest knee problem, the 26-year-old has won the events at Sao Paulo, Acapulco, Indian Wells, Barcelona and now Madrid.

“Maybe this win is even more special given where I have come back from,” Nadal, a seven-times French Open champion, said in an interview with local television broadcaster La Sexta.

“Playing in Madrid is always very exciting for me and the tournament couldn’t have worked out better.”

Wawrinka, who came through qualifying matches against Jo-Wilfried Tsonga and Tomas Berdych on the way to his second Masters final, never looked like claiming a first win against Nadal at the ninth attempt.

Nadal broke Wawrinka’s serve three times in the match and such was his dominance, the Spaniard did not face a single break point.

He collapsed on to his back in celebration when Wawrinka’s backhand went long on match point.

The red dirt clinging to Nadal’s shirt was a reminder that a year ago he had threatened to boycott the 2013 tournament if organizers had stuck with the controversial blue claycourt they had unveiled last year, when he was knocked out in the third round by compatriot Fernando Verdasco.

Wawrinka has never taken a set off Nadal in their nine meetings and said he had not been at his best physically or mentally on Sunday after an intense couple of weeks.

The 28-year-old arrived in Madrid having beaten Nadal’s countryman David Ferrer in the final in Estoril last Sunday, his fourth career title.

“I felt like I was in control and dominant,” said the world number one, who had parred the fabled island hole.

Woods wins long awaited Players title—Reuters

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, 13 May—Tiger Woods held on to clinch his second Players Championship by two strokes over Sunday’s after-long time adversary Sergio Garcia spectacularly imploded on his last two holes.

Spaniard Garcia shared the lead on 13-under with Woods when he teed off at the short but treacherous 17th, but hit into the waterboard.

Woods had appeared in complete command, and led by two strokes before stumbling at the 14th after hooking his tee shot into the water on the left.

That set up a four-way tie with Garcia, Lingmerth and Maggert for the lead at 12-under.

“It was a tough battle. I felt like I was in control of it after I birdied 12 and gave it right back at 14 with a double,” said Woods af-ter claiming his 78th PGA victory in his 300th career start.

“It was game on and anybody could win the golf tournament.”

The 49-year-old Maggert, bidding to become the oldest Players winner, slipped out of contention when he hit his tee shot in the water on the way to the 17th green and Lingmerth took a step back with a bo-gey at the 14th.

It narrowed to a tie at 13-under between Woods and Garcia, who had exchanged some mean-spirited barbs as well as birdies and bogeys in their third-round pairing on Saturday.

Moyes bid emotional farewell to Goodison Park

LONDON, 13 May—Everton manager David Moyes said his goodbyes at Goodison Park on Sunday in perfect fashion with his tal-ented side cruising to a 2-0 win over West Ham United in the Premier League.

Goals in each half from their Belgian striker Kevin Mirallas ensured Moyes de-parled from the blue half of Merseyside a winner after 11 years in charge of the Toffeemen. Moyes, 50, is joining Everton’s rivals Manchester United as the replacement for fellow Glaswegian Alex Ferguson, who is stepping down after 26 years in charge at Old Trafford. It was not clear how Everton fans would feel about their manager leaving for United but he was warmly received by the crowd, who showed their appreciation for the progress the club has made under him despite the failure to win a trophy.

Their reaction was also helped by the fact they will finish above great rivals Liv-erpool for the second consecu- tive season. “There’s always a worry when you’re joining another club, but Everton fans were magnifi- cent for me today,” Moyes told the BBC. “David Unsworth scored my first goal at Goodison 11 years ago after about 25 seconds and I’m de-lighted I finished it off here with a win.—Reuters

Serena subdues Sharapova to defend Madrid title

With the sliding roof over the Manolo Santana show court open to a cloudless sky, Sharapova struggled to find her range as Williams battered winners to all corners to race into a one-set lead. The Russian world number two mounted a fightback at the start of the second set but could not sustain it and Williams broke her for a fifth time in the match to secure a first title on red clay - the Madrid courts were blue last year - since the 2002 French Open. “It’s not the ultimate title, but it’s a good start in the right direction,” Williams, who was upset by Virginie Razzano in the first round at Roland Garros last year, told a news conference. “I don’t know how many more (titles) I can win,” she added.

“Like I say every day, who knows if I’ll ever win another title? I just want to live the moment and the dream every chance I get.”

Sharapova, 26, the French Open champion, has a woeful record against Williams. She has only beaten her twice in 15 attempts, and never on clay, with both victories coming almost a decade ago. She did not seem too depressed by her latest reverse to the American and said she was pleased with the way her preparations for Roland Garros were going.
