UN head calls for disaster-resilient Africa amid instability concern

UN Secretary General Ban Ki moon (R) speaks at the Tokyo International Conference on African Development in Yokohama near Tokyo on 2 June, 2013. At left is Beninese President Boni Yayi.

YOKOHAMA, 3 June—UN Secretary General Ban Ki moon on Sunday called on industrialized countries to provide funds to developing countries to combat climate change, and expressed concern that shifts in climate may be linked to political instability in Africa.

“Countries destabilized by climate change are potential breeding grounds for extremism and international criminal activity (and) they are a source of mass migration,” Ban said at an event held on the sidelines of the Tokyo International Conference for African Development in Yokohama, citing the Sahel region of Africa as an example.

At the conference, Japan, African countries and international organizations renewed their pledges to work together toward realizing an Africa that is resilient to climate change and natural disasters.

Prime Minister Shinzo Abe referred to Japan’s experience of the massive earthquake, tsunami and subsequent nuclear disaster in 2011, and noted the significance of disaster prevention as it is linked with human security.

“Japan is committed to making contributions to the creation of disaster-resilient societies in the world,” Abe said. The Japanese leader also mentioned the Sendai dialogue on disaster risk management held last year and said its message to consider disaster prevention in every aspect of development resonates with TICAD as well.

World Bank President Jim Yong Kim said Africa “holds the key” to eliminating poverty in the world as the region will be one of the most important engines of growth in the future, although it is still “extremely vulnerable to the impacts of disasters and climate change.”

Iran’s Arak reactor looms into Israeli, Western view

Vienna/Jerusalem, 3 June—Iran aims to start a reactor next year which the West fears could arm an atomic bomb; Israel, which has bombed such construction sites around the Middle East before, may try to stop the plant being completed.

The timetable for the planned start-up of the Arak heavy-water research plant is closely watched: Israeli and Western experts say any attacker would probably prefer to act before it becomes operational — to avoid generating radioactive fallout.

The Islamic Republic says it will make isotopes for medical and agricultural use. But analysts say this type of facility can also produce plutonium for weapons if the spent fuel is reprocessed — something Iran says it has no intention of doing. Time may be pressing for adversaries who want to act.

“Whoever considers attacking an active reactor is willing to invite another Chernobyl,” former Israeli military intelligence chief Amos Yadlin said, referring to the 1986 Soviet reactor accident which sent radioactive dust across much of Europe.

“And there is no one who wants to do that,” Yadlin, who runs Tel Aviv University’s Institute for National Security Studies, was among eight pilots who in 1981 bombed Iraq’s Osirak reactor.

Still under construction, Israel believes nuclear fuel was about to be loaded and decided to hit it then, avoiding a risk of sending fallout over nearby Baghdad.

Turkey protesters clash with police into early hours

Istanbul, 3 June—Turkish protesters clashed with riot police into the early hours of Monday with some setting fire to offices of the ruling AK Party as the fiercest anti-government demonstrations in years entered their fourth day. Turkey’s streets were calm in the morning after a night of noisy protests and violence in major cities.

In the western port city of Izmir, protesters threw fire bombs at AK Party offices overnight and television footage showed part of the building ablaze. Firefighters put out the fire, the Dogan news agency reported.

Bus shelters, paving stones and street signs ripped up by protesters to make barricades that littered a major avenue by the Bosphorus strait in Istanbul where some of the heaviest clashes took place overnight, and graf-fiti covered walls. Roads around Prime Minister Tayyip Erdogan’s office in Istanbul were sealed off as police fired teargas to push back protesters in the early hours of Monday.

In the central street near Erdogan’s office, one demonstrator drove a small mechanical digger towards police lines as other protesters set fire to busses. At a nearby mosque, medical staff including trainee doctors treated those hurt in the clashes.

US lawmakers want better Russia cooperation after Boston bombs

Moscow, 3 June—US lawmakers on a mission to Russia said on Sunday they had found no evidence that an American intelligence error enabled the Boston bombings, but that closer cooperation between Washington and Moscow might have helped to thwart the attack.

US investigators suspect two brothers who emigrated from Russia, one since shot dead by police, staged the attack at the Boston Marathon on 15 April that killed three people and wounded 264 others.

Two congressmen on the fact-finding visit said the countries — former Cold War foes now at odds over issues from Syria to President Vladimir Putin’s treatment of opponents — had to work together better against a shared threat from Islamist militants.

“Radical Islam is at our throat in the United States, and it is at the throat of the Russian people,” said Republican Representative Dana Rohrabacher, who led a group of six US lawmakers on the weeklong visit to Russia.

President Barack Obama’s administration and US intelligence have faced scrutiny over claims they failed to see the danger from the suspects, Tamerlan and Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, ethnic Chechens who emigrated with their parents a decade ago.

“We’ve been asked a number of times, do we believe that the Boston Marathon massacre could have been thwarted — could it have been prevented? And the answer is, there’s nothing specific that could have been done that we can point to that, had it been done differently, would have prevented this,” Rohrabacher said. “But we can say that had we had a much higher level of cooperation all along, so that the whole situation would have been different, I believe that would have been one of the type of things we could have thwarted,” he told a news conference at the US Embassy in Moscow.

113 dead in NE China slaughterhouse fire

Changchun, 3 June—At least 113 people were killed on Monday morning in a poultry processing plant fire in northeast China’s Jilin Province, local sources said.

The fire broke out at around 6:06 am at a slaughterhouse owned by the Jilin Baoyuanfeng Poultry Company in Mishazi Township of Dehui City, according to firefighters.

The complicated internal structure of the prefabricated house in which the fire broke out and the narrow exits have added difficulties to the rescue work, sources with rescue forces said.

As of 12 am on Monday, the fire has not been put out and rescue work is ongoing.

The exact number of those trapped in the plant has not yet been confirmed.

New York, 3 June—Apple Inc goes to trial on Monday over allegations by federal and state authorities that it conspired with publishers to raise the price of e-books. The trial pits the maker of the popular iPad and iPhone against the US Justice Department in a case that tests how Internet retailers interact with content providers.

“Two cases will effectively set the rules for Internet commerce,” said David Balto, a former policy director for the US Federal Trade Commission. The Justice Department filed its case against Apple and five of the six largest US book publishers in April 2012. The lawsuit accused them of conspiring to increase e-book prices and break Amazon Inc’s hold on pricing. Apple is going to trial alone after the five publishers agreed to eliminate prohibitions on wholesale discounts and to pay a collective $56 million to benefit consumers. The five publishers were Pearson Plc’s Penguin Group, News Corp’s HarperCollins and Hachette Book Group Inc, CBS Corp’s Simon & Schuster Inc, Harlequin Mills & Co Inc and MacMillan.—REUTERS

British manufacturers urge health budget cuts to fund growth

London, 3 June—British manufacturers urged the government on Monday to cut the healthcare budget and put money into growth-generating areas such as infrastructure and technology when it unveils its latest spending review next month. The criticism of Prime Minister David Cameron’s decision to exempt healthcare from budget cuts highlights growing concerns that efforts to reduce Britain’s fiscal deficit could endanger its economic recovery.

“The government is making the shift towards growth-enhancing spending unnecessarily difficult by protecting large areas of spending,” said Terry Scuoler, chief executive of the EEF, a manufacturing group which represents over 6,000 companies. The government aims to cut 11.5 billion pounds ($17.5 billion) off the 2015/16 budget at its 26 June spending review.

So far the finance ministry says it has agreed around 20 percent of the cuts it needs but there have been growing signs of re-sistance, particularly from within the defence and infrastructure and technology ministries. Danny Alexander, the government’s chief economic assistant, has indicated that the government will deliver a new round of cuts without resorting to higher taxes.—REUTERS

Vinegar screening helps cut cervical cancer deaths in India

Chicago, 3 June—A simple screening programme for cervical cancer using vinegar and visual exams helped reduce deaths caused by the cancer by 31 percent in a group of 150,000 poor women in India, research- ers reported on Sunday. If implemented broadly, the screening programme could lead to the prevention of 22,000 deaths from cervical cancer in India, and 72,000 deaths in the developing world each year, the team reported at the American Society of Clinical Oncol- ogy meeting in Chicago. “We had a 31 percent reduc- tion in cervical cancer death. That was very significant,” Dr Surendra Shastri of Tata Memorial Hospital in Mumb- aii, India, who led the study and presented the findings at the meeting. The study also showed a 7 percent reduction in deaths from any cause, although that finding was not statistically significant.

Cervical cancer is the leading cause of cancer deaths among women in In- dia and in many parts of the developing world. “Low- cost screening programmes such as described in India are desperately needed,” said Dr Kathleen Schmeler of the University of Texas MD Anderson Cancer Centre in Houston. Shastri said cur- rently there are no cervical cancer screening programmes in India, mainly because PAP smear screening, the conven- tional test done among women in developed countries, is not possible because of issues such as logistics, infrastructure and high costs.—REUTERS

First Facebook president Sean Parker weds in California

Los Angeles, 3 June—Billionaire Sean Parker, co-founder of music-sharing website Napster and the first president of Facebook, was married on Saturday in Northern California, a representative for the couple said.

Parker, 33, married his fiancée Alexandra Lenas in a ceremony at an inn in the coastal retreat of Big Sur with 300 family and friends in attendance, he said. His represen- tative Matthew Hilzik said in a statement. Their daughter, Winter, who was born this year, was part of the ceremony. Parker’s for- mer fiancée, actress Brita- nica, played Parker as a hard-partying ladies man in a 2010 movie, “The Social Network,” about the crea- tion of Facebook by Mark Zuckerberg, who was then a student at Harvard Univer- sity. After the film, Parker dismissed the portrayal as fictional.

Vaccine exemptions rising, tied to whooping cough

New York, 3 June—The number of New York parents who had their child skip at least one required vaccine due to religious reasons was over 6,000 in the past decade, according to a new study. What’s more, researchers found counties with high religious exemptions also had more whooping cough cases — even among children that had been fully vaccinated.

States set their own requirements on which vaccines a child must have received to enter school. All allow exemptions for medical reasons, and most, including New York, also permit parents with a reli- gious objection to forgo vaccination. Less than half of states permit exemptions due to personal or philo- sophical beliefs. But those also can get counted under religious objections in places with less strict exemption policies. “Particularly in New York State, I do be- lieve that parents are using religious exemptions for their personal beliefs,” said Dr Jana Shaw, who worked on the study at SUNY Upstate Medical University in Syracuse.

“There’s a lot of vaccine hesitancy,” Studies have shown cases of whoop- ing cough, also known as pertussis, have been on the rise across the US. Researchers suspect that’s due to the use of a new type of pertussis vaccine — which is safer, but less effective over the long run — and to more children missing or delaying vaccination. For their study, Shaw and her colleagues tracked data from the New York State Department of Health on both religious exemptions and new whooping cough cases. Children were re- ported as having a religious exemption if they had been allowed to skip at least one required vaccine for non- medical reasons.

Between 2000 and 2011, the proportion of re- ligiously exempt kids in- creased from 23 in 10,000 to 45 in 10,000, the study team reported on Monday in Pediatrics. —REUTERS

Drought-fueled wildfires rage in New Mexico, California

Santa Fe, 3 June—A trio of drought-fueled wild- fires burned out of control in New Mexico and Califor- nia on Sunday as shifting winds and other adverse weather conditions ham- pered fire-fighting efforts, authorities said. The Power house wildfire in Califor- nia’s Lake Hughes area, 65 miles north of Los Angeles, had destroyed six houses, said Ronald Ashdale, a spokesman for the US Forest Service.

It was threatening more than 1,000 homes and had already charred 15,900 acres, according to the US Forest Service, said, adding that the blaze was not expected to be contained before on Thursday. High temper- atures and dramatic wind shifts have contributed to the fire, according to Ash- dale, who said as many as 975 firefighters and other personnel had been strug- gling to contain the blaze in an area as dry as a tin- derbox.

In New Mexico, two other fires also raged out of control on Sunday, one near Santa Fe and the other near Los Alamos. The other New Mexico fire had consumed 1,745 acres of the Valles Cal- dera National Preserve near Los Alamos, triggering the evacuation of about 50 families, fire officials said.

Asian shares cautious on US data, Fed concerns

Traders work at their screens in front of the DAX board at the Frankfurt stock exchange on 7 May, 2013. (Reuters)

Tokyo, 3 June—Asian shares were capped on Monday as investors took profit from recent highs in the face of uncertainty over how much longer the current US stimulus would continue, and data underscoring the fragility of China’s economy. Investors will scrutinize more data this week from the United States for clues to growth and demand prospects in the world’s largest economy. Speculation over whether and when the US Federal Reserve will start scaling back its current massive bond-buying programme emerged following a string of positive American data and was the catalyst for corrections across markets which had drawn strong support from the Fed’s largesse.

Reports showing Chinese growth was failing to pick up momentum gave no reason for a turnaround from soft sentiment. China’s factory activity shrank for the first time in seven months in May as both domestic and external demand softened, while activity in the services sector also slipped, pointing to slowing momentum in the world’s second-largest economy. “We still cannot see any signs of recovery but the chances of any sharp slowdown are also small,” said You Hongye, an economist at China Essence Securities in Beijing. These reports followed an weekend release that showed China’s official PMI rising to a more-than- five-year high in May from 50.6 in April.

ANZ said in a commentary that this single indicator did not change its view on China’s softening economic condition. “Structural reforms are needed in order to help sustain the growth prospect,” it wrote. “Inconsistent data will continue to complicate China’s economic policy making and potentially impair the judgment of policymakers,” the Australian bank said.

Israelis among top 10 countries with most millionaires

Jerusalem, 3 June—Israel is among top 10 countries and regions with highest percentage of millionaires in ratio to the population, according to a report issued by the International Boston Consulting Group, a global management and business consulting firm.

Israel ranked No10 with 84,000 millionaires as of 2012, out of a population of 8 million people, said the report titled “Maintaining Momentum in a Complex World: Global Wealth 2013.”

Qatar topped the ranking with 50,000 millionaire households (14.3 percent of households) out of a population of 2 million, followed by Switzerland, Kuwait, Hong Kong and Singapore.

“Israel ranks in the top 10 of countries with millionaires, which is a result of the country’s strong economy and well-developed financial system,” said the report.

CEO of world’s largest advertising firm sees global prominence for Chinese brands

London, 3 June—Chinese companies are looking at a promising future where domestic brands will become famous internationally, according to the chief executive of the world’s largest advertising company.

In a recent interview with Xinhua, Sir Martin Sorrell, chief executive of WPP (Wire & Plastic Products Group), said he believes that China’s size offers its domestic business a big advantage, which can be used as a platform to grow its firms into global brands. Sorrell is about to embark on a two-week trip to China in which he will discuss with his top executives the strategy of his firm’s 1,500-odd business units in the country. “In China you have 1.3 billion people. It’s four or five times bigger than America. So, if you think about it from a Chinese company’s point of view, and if I was running a Chinese company I would want to make sure that I had done everything I could in China that I could before expanding abroad,” he said.

Sorrell, whose firm employs 165,000 people in 110 countries, said a large and strong domestic market was a good base for international growth, and pointed to the advantages that the United States and Japan have in the global economy. He also said that people worldwide are going to see more and more of global Chinese brands.

Japanese PM Abe says watching market closely, won’t comment on moves by Bernanke

Tokyo, 3 June—Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe said on Monday he is closely watching market movements but refrained from commenting on Bernanke’s recent statements.

Abe, speaking to reporters after the Tokyo International Conference on African Development (TICAD) held in the city of Yokohama, said he expected the financial markets to calm down gradually as the Bank of Japan is communicating with the markets.

The benchmark Nikkei share average tumbled to a nearly six-week low on Monday as sharp declines in US stocks dampened already fragile sentiment in Japanese equities that have now fallen 15.5 percent from a 5-1/2 year peak hit last month.

Bernanke jokes about own future in Princeton commencement speech

Washington, 3 June—Never believe Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke doesn’t have a sense of humour. “I wrote recently to inquire about the status of my leave from the university, and the letter I got back began, ‘Regrettably, Princeton receives many more qualified applicants for faculty positions than we can accommodate,’” Bernanke said in remarks prepared for delivery on Sunday to new Princeton University graduates in his commencement speech.

“Note to journalists: This is a joke,” said a footnote attached to the text provided to reporters. Behind the joke, and Bernanke’s care to make sure journalists didn’t miss it, is the mounting obsession over who may replace him when Bernanke’s second term expires. Bernanke has said little about his future at the Fed, where he took over as chairman in 2006.

Talk that he is reluctant to accept a third term has been swirling for months, and speculation that he plans to leave the post got a boost in late April when the Fed confirmed he will skip the annual Jackson Hole monetary policy symposium in August due to a scheduling conflict. Bernanke’s absence would mark the first time in 25 years that a Fed chairman has not attended the conference, which draws top central bankers from around the world and is periodically used as a setting to preview important policy shifts.

Merck melanoma drug shrinks tumours in 38 percent of patients

Chicago, 3 June—A Merck & Co drug designed to unmask tumour cells and mobilize the immune system into fighting cancer helped shrink tumours in 38 percent of patients with advanced melanoma in an early-stage study, US researchers said on Sunday.

Based on the findings about the drug lambrolizumab, published in the New England Journal of Medicine and presented at the American Society of Clinical Oncology meeting in Chicago, Merck says it will move directly into a late-stage clinical trial, which will start in the third quarter.

“This is a top priority at Merck,” Dr Gary Gilliland, senior vice president and head of oncology at Merck Research Laboratories, said in a meeting with investors. “We’re going flat out to deliver benefit to patients with this novel mechanism.” The moves may heap pressure on market leader Bristol-Myers Squibb, maker of Yervoy — the only approved immune system drug for the treatment of advanced melanoma, the deadliest form of skin cancer. Bristol-Myers is conducting three phase-three studies of its own drug called nivolumab in advanced melanoma, and is studying the drug’s effect on a range of other cancers, including lung cancer.

Both nivolumab and lambrolizumab are part of a promising new class of drugs that disable programmed death 1 or PD-1, a protein that keeps the immune system from spotting and attacking cancer cells.

“Even though it’s (lambrolizumab) the second player in the field and even though it’s all early, it impressed me,” said Dr Antoni Ribas of the University of California Los Angeles’ Jonsson Comprehensive Cancer Centre, the lead author of the study. Last month, the US Food and Drug Administration deemed the treatment a “breakthrough therapy,” a designation FDA cancer drugs chief Dr Richard Pazdur described as “knock-your-socks-off therapies.”

One dead, two missing in Austrian floods, landslides

Vienna, 3 June—Torrential rain caused widespread flooding and landslides across Austria on Sunday, forcing hundreds of people to evacuate their homes.

At least one person died and two were missing in the deluge, which in some places has dumped up to two months’ worth of rain in just days.

One clean-up worker was killed in a mudslide in the town of St Johann near Salzburg, the Austrian Press Agency reported, while two other people were missing in the province after being swept into raging streams.

The provinces of Upper Austria, Tyrol and Styria were also hit hard by the severe weather, which triggered the worst flooding in some areas since 2002. A flood alarm for the northern side of the Alps was in effect until early on Monday, national broadcaster ORF said. The ZAMG weather service forecast that rain would slacken by Monday.

Merkel coalition partner warns against higher state spending

German Chancellor Angela Merkel speaks during the Annual Reception of the SOS Children’s Village organization in Grimmen, on 31 May, 2013. —Reuters

Berlin, 3 June—The leader of Chancellor Angela Merkel’s junior coalition partner chided her over spending promises made ahead of September’s federal election and said now was not the time to abandon “economic sense.”

Merkel, whose centre-right Christian Democrats (CDU) are well ahead in opinion polls, has signalled that more funds will be made available for families and for infrastructure projects if she wins a third term in office.

“I urgently advise staying in the realm of economic sense. Social policy promises like those now being proposed by the CDU have to be financially feasible,” Philipp Roessler of the liberal Free Democrats (FDP) told the Welt am Sonntag newspaper.

Germany must not abandon its aim of achieving a balanced budget, said Roessler, whose pro-business party is a staunch advocate of fiscal discipline.

The top-selling Bild daily on Saturday put a price tag of 28 billion euros on Merkel’s spending promises and said it showed Germany’s election campaign had finally begun.

“The euro and financial market crises are already yesterday. Four months before the federal election the parties criss-cross the country promising citizens what they supposedly want to hear,” said Bild in a commentary in Sunday’s edition.

Finance Minister Wolfgang Schauble, a close Merkel ally, denied in a statement to Reuters any weakening of government resolve to cut public debt, though he said he saw scope for some modest additional spending in priority areas.

In Sunday’s interview, Roessler criticised the European Commission’s decision to grant France and Spain more time to reduce their budget deficits, saying it sent a “wrong signal” that could harm confidence in Europe’s readiness to reform.

Budding democracy’s promising business

Tourism actually is a business of showing natural or man-made wonders, especially the ancient ones, or cultural ethos of a country concerned.

The world has various brands of tourism, namely, cultural, adventure, leisure, health, transit, luxury, event, bicycle, beer and wine tourism, and ecotourism and geotourism. There are even sex tourism, nightlife tourism and casino tourism in some countries.

In countries like Korea, temple stay is a popular and attractive variety of tourism in which visitors stay and dine like monks at a Buddhist monastery.

But whatever the name is, it is nothing more than a holiday business that provides the most indulgent treatment every one wishes to enjoy, with eventual motive of making handsome profits like any other business industry.

And like any other business industry, it needs sustainable development that calls for responsibility, accountability and the liability. In fact, tourism depends on culture, ancient edifices, natural and man-made heritage, natural environment which are so delicate that always needs special care and attention and preservation and restoration measures in dealing with them. As for our country Myanmar, she has the cultural ethos, a diversity of unique people having different customs, picturesque landscapes such as Inlay Lake, ancient heritages such as Bagan and Mrauk U, natural wonders like Khagaborazi and Mount Victoria, and wonderful beaches, for instance, Ngapali and Ngwesaung, all with their exceptional qualities even to charm a discerning visitor.

Some of the types of tourism are not fit with our religious and cultural values. But of most of the types can be much beneficial to our country that is receiving more and more visitors year after year. In fact, the most important thing here is that we must keep in mind the long-term interest and not just the short-term profits as this leisure industry is one of the most promising businesses of our budding democracy.

M6.3 quake hits central Taipei, two dead, one missing, 21 injured

TAIPEI, 3 June—A powerful earthquake measuring 6.3 in magnitude struck central Taipei on Sunday, shutting down railway and road traffic, killing two people dead while leaving one missing and 21 people injured, National Fire Agency officials said.

The quake, which struck at 1:43 pm, triggered landslides and disrupted transport on sections of railway and high-speed rail systems. Certain segments of the Central Cross-Island Highway connecting the east and west coasts were also shut down.

The quake’s epicentre was at the aboriginal township of Jenai in Nantou County, central Taiwan, and its focus was 10 kilometres below the earth’s surface.

Officials said two men were killed by falling rocks and one man who had gone fishing was reported missing in Chiayi and Nantou counties.

According to local media, about 100 villagers living near the epicentre of the earthquake were briefly stranded by landslides.

Shockwaves were felt throughout the island, including Taipei in northern Taiwan where the tremor was felt for about 30 seconds.

The Central Weather Bureau said the earthquake was the strongest recorded this year. The quake originated in the same fault line where an earthquake with a magnitude of 6.2 hit the same township on 27 March. Seismic data show that there are 33 active fault lines around the island, including the one that triggered an M7.3 earthquake in Nantou County on 21 Sept, 1999. Minister orders review of rule for easier dismantling of nuke plants

TOKYO, 3 June — Japan’s industry minister Toshimitsu Motegi said on Sunday he has instructed his ministry to review an accounting rule for electriccity companies in order to make decommissioning of nuclear power plants less financially onerous for their operators.

Motegi told reporters in Yokohama that he has given the instruction to “consider an organization and schedule so that a review of the rule can be started at an early date.” Under the current rule, utilities are required to build reserves for decommissioning over a period of 40 years on the assumption that nuclear plants will be used for 40 years or longer.

If a plant is to be decommissioned in less than 40 years, the utility operating that plant must cover any short-fall in reserves. In informed sources, a possible revision will allow multi-year booking of losses resulting from decommissioning instead of single-year booking under the current rule.—Kyodo News

Promotion of shark eco-tourism could bite into fin trade

VANCOUVER, 3 June—A new study spearheaded by academics at the University of British Columbia could be a blow to the global trade in shark fin as it suggests the animals can generate more money in the water as tourist attractions rather than as food product.

In the paper Global Economic Value of Shark Eco-tourism: Implications for Conservation, the scholars say that 590,000 dedicated shark watchers worldwide collectively spend about 314 million US dollar annually in a tourism sector that supports around 10,000 jobs in such places as the Caribbean, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, Mexico and the Philippines, among others.

The research, billed as the “first global estimate of the current and potential contribution of shark eco-tourism in terms of tourism, tourism spend and employment,” was collected over a one-year period by five academics, three from Ukraine, Slovakia and some other European countries. The team is expected to arrive at Champs Elysees in Paris on 29th June to finally end the 12,247-kilometre journey.

“Beijing-Paris” vintage car rally first began in 1907, when there were five cars from Beijing to Paris, completing the world’s first intercontinental car race - Beijing-Paris rally course.

Honda returns in Japan on eve of World Cup q’fier

TOKYO, 3 June—CSKA Moscow midfielder Keisuke Honda on Monday arrived back in Japan on the eve of Japan’s crucial World Cup qualifier against Australia. Honda, who is returning home on a high after completing a trophy double with his club side in the Russian Cup final on Saturday, did not speak to reporters as he came through the arrival lobby at Narita airport carrying his young son.

Honda played 67 minutes of CSKA’s victory over Anzhi Makhachkala and said after the match that he was confident he had fully recovered from a thigh problem. CSKA won 4-3 on penalties after a 1-1 draw. Stuttgart’s Shinji Okazaki and Gotoku Sakai arrived at Hanaeda airport in Tokyo after both played as substitutes in Saturday’s 3-2 German Cup final defeat to Bayern Munich. Japan top Asian zone World Cup qualifying Group B with 13 points from six games and need only to draw to qualify for Brazil 2014. Jordan have seven points from six, while Australia have six with a game in hand on the top two. Japan were beaten by Jordan 2-1 away in their last qualifier and were blanked 2-0 at home to Bulgaria on Thursday thanks to a rare blunder by goalkeeper Eiji Kawashima and an own goal by captain Makoto Hasebe.

Okazaki scored the goal that sealed qualification for Japan for the 2010 World Cup in Brazil, a scrappy header in a 1-0 victory away to Uzbekistan, and he said he was hoping to get on the scoresheet against Australia. “If you don’t score goals you don’t win games. Scoring is first and foremost for me.”

Dempsey scores twice as US beat Germany

WASHINGTON, 3 June—Clint Dempsey scored twice as the United States held on to beat a below-strength Germany 4-3 in a friendly soccer match on Sunday, giving America 4-3 in a friendly soccer match on Sunday, allowing to get free by a header from a Max Kruse a goal for his country since 2011. He can expect more of the same when he faces another Frenchman, Jo-Wilfried Tsonga, in the last eighth. Sixth seed Tsonga won an entertaining encounter with Serbia’s Viktor Troicki 6-3, 6-3, 6-3. As Federer lived to fight another day, Spaniard Tommy Robredo proved there was more than one warrior an extra in Japan soccer history.” The Americans, celebrating the centenary of the US Soccer Federation, had grabbed the lead in the 13th minute thanks to a powerful volley from Jozy Altidore, his first goal for his country since November 2011.

Four minutes later, the advantage was doubled via an appalling error by German keeper Marc-Andre ter Stegen, who somehow allowed a routine back pass from Benedikt Hoewedes slip-off his hands. Germany rebounded strongly afterwards half-time break, pulling one back in the 51st minute when Heiko Westermann, allowed to get free by Omar Gonzalez, powered in a header from a Max Kruse corner. Two superbly finished goals from Dempsey, the second a beautiful curling effort from 25 yards, gave the USA a three-goal lead, to the delight of the 47,359 crowd, before the Germans began to pile on the pressure.

Federer but not out, Serena swaggers on

PARIS, 3 June—Seeing the usually majestic Roger Federer down on his hands and knees — literally — is a rare sight in tennis but that turned out to be the least of his problems at the French Open on Sunday as he flirted with a last-16 exit. Federer has not fallen before the quarter-finals at a grand slam for a decade but a nasty tumble in the sixth game of the second set against Gilles Simon sparked a sequence of events that threatened to deny him a 36th successive last-eight spot at a major. As it was, the Swiss masqueraded himself off the clay, dusted himself down, lost the second and third sets before dousing the fires of the gallant Frenchman with a heart-pumping 6-1, 6-6, 2-6, 6-2, 8-3 win.

“I work hard to be exactly in this situation in a tough match where the crowd is going crazy and I want to stay calm within the storm. Honestly, for me it’s what I play for,” said Federer. He can expect more excitement for teams and spectators remained undiminished. “It feels good to be a winner. I am very happy for me it’s what I play for,” said Federer. Iron man Robredo completes third great escape

PARIS, 3 June—Once commendable, twice is extraordinary but winning from a two-set-deficit for the third round in success at a grand slam tournament like claycourt warrior Tommy Robredo did at the French Open on Sunday stretches the boundaries of credibility. Especially considering last year the Spaniard could hardly run, needing leg surgery and had fallen to 471 in the rankings. The 31-year-old looked down and out when he trailed fellow Spaniard Nicolas Almagro by two sets and 4-1 in the third but produced another Houdini-esque escape and fought back to claim an emotional 6-7(5), 3-6, 6-4, 6-4 victory.

After a shattered Almagro dumped a backhand volley into the net, Robredo collapsed to the court and could not stop the tears flowing as the enormity of his feat sunk in. In the second round Robredo gave Dutchman Igor Sijsling a two-set lead and he was at it again against Frenchman Gael Monfils in round three, storming back to win in five after saving four match points. On Sunday it was 11th seed Almagro’s turn to suffer at the hands of the comeback king as Robredo became the first player to overturn three successive two-set deficits since Frenchman Yannick Noah showed a fondness for lost causes at Wimbledon in 1983.

“It’s funny, because the last three, four years I couldn’t even run that much,” Robredo, who needed surgery to repair his continually-tearing left hamstring last year, told reporters. “And I love to run. Before the match I was tired, I was in pain everywhere and I was hoping to try and win the first set because if not I knew it was going to be tough for me,” he added.

Prague welcomes birth of first quintuplets

PRAGUE, 3 June—The first quintuplets were successfully born in a Prague maternity hospital shortly before 8:00 am (0600 GMT) on Sunday and the babies and their 23-year-old mother are in a good condition, said a doctor in the Prague-Podoli hospital.

The quintuplets who were naturally conceived are four boys and one girl. They are also the first quintuplets in the Czech Republic.

Podoli maternity hospital director Jaroslav Feyereisel returned from a congress in Dublin to Prague to assist in the delivery of the quintuplets. “We did our utmost to be prepared for possible complications,” he said.

The hospital doubled all health care personnel on the shift, including the number of doctors in the operating theatre. The laboratories and services for a possible blood transfusion were also on alert, he added.

UNHCR voices concern over attacks on foreigners in S Africa

CAPE TOWN, 3 June—The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) on Sunday voiced concern over recent attacks on foreigners in South Africa.

“UNHCR is extremely concerned over the recent spate of violence in Gauteng and Eastern Cape provinces affecting foreigners, including refugees and asylum-seekers,” the agency said in a statement emailed to Xinhua. Since last week, foreign-owned shops were attacked in several locations in Scherkenburg, Ewton, Orange Farm and Lakeside townships in Gauteng Province.

According to the information received, the attacks started off during service delivery protests which then transformed into attacks on foreign-owned shops. In Diepsloot township in northern Johannesburg, violence and looting began last Sunday evening after a Somali man allegedly shot and killed two Zimbabweans following a dispute. Foreign-owned shops were the prime targets though other local shops were also looted. In Port Elizabeth, the Eastern Cape Province, about 20 foreign owned shops were also looted during the same period.

The police, however, managed to contain the violence. UNHCR added it was working closely with the South African Police Service (SAPS) to try to prevent more violence.

The attacks drew condemnation from the South African government and the ruling African National Congress (ANC). The government said it would not tolerate “criminal activities against each other” as such acts would impact negatively on the country’s economy and image. The UNHCR said it has taken note of the statements and appreciates the efforts made by the City of Johannesburg, and the SAPS to restore order and provide safety to the victims.

“While we appreciate the efforts made so far, UNHCR is calling on the Government to do all it can to prevent any future incidents,” said UNHCR’s Regional Representative for Southern Africa, Clementine Nkweta-Salami.

Myanmar ready to hold 22nd World Economic Forum on East Asia

Workers prepare for the 22nd World Economic Forum (WEF) on East Asia at Myanmar International Convention Centre in Nay Pyi Taw.

Nay Pyi Taw, 3 June—

The upcoming 22nd World Economic Forum (WEF) on East Asia on 5-7 June is central for Myanmar as the forum would bring benefits and business opportunities to the country. Local and foreign workers have been working hard preparing for the forum at the Myanmar International Convention Centre in Nay Pyi Taw since a few days ago. Meanwhile, the government has set up sub-committees and supporting groups to hold the forum successfully. We interviewed some of the responsible personnel of sub-committees for holding the forum.

Police Col Ko Ko of Ministry of Home Affairs, Security Sub-committee for holding 22nd WEF

Q: Which security measures are being taken by the Security Sub-committee?

A: “Days before the forum takes place, we have been taking pre-security measures inside and outside the MICC. We are also working hard to be able to provide security systematically of the building, routes and dignitaries who will attend the forum.”

U Nyein Aye, Director of Ministry of Transport, Transportation Sub-committee for holding 22nd WEF

Q: How about the measures being taken by the Transportation Sub-committee?

A: The Transportation Sub-committee has taken the role of transporting the dignitaries who will attend the forum. We have planned to use about 60 vehicles including Mercedes for VIPs from deputy minister level to prime minister and president level. We are also planning to provide fuel and ground services to planes at the Yangon International Airport and Nay Pyi Taw Airport. We estimates that there would be 54 flights and we have already made plans for transporting State-level dignitaries and VIPs.
