Greater Yangon Project: building and water supply aspects

In accommodating properly the potential population in the future, not only the current central business zone but also the new other places as the main parts will constitute the downtown area. The new downtown areas will be categorized into secondary business zone, business zone divisions, and the hearts of new towns.

As to industrial sector, Yangon currently has 24 industrial zones covering an area of 5105 acres including unexploited land. The number of employment in industrial sector is estimated to increase by 554000 in 2040, and thus around 700 acres of new economic zones apart from Thilawa SEZ will be needed.

The water supply project aims at providing the potential population with fair share of water, gradually increasing the water supply network, establishing separate water supply zones and complying with equitable basic water supply system, strengthening the beneficial water distribution system by controlling water wastage, and finding a balance between human resources and organizational set-up to ensure effective water distribution to fulfill water demand.

The water supply development goal and effectiveness index is for the provision of tap water to cover 23 to up to 70 per cent of urban Yangon, 21 to 60 per cent of Greater Yangon, to reduce water wastage from 63 per cent to 25 per cent, to deliver round-the-clock service to half of the population, cent per cent provision of chlorinated water, and improving the water quality to 50 per cent.

It is estimated that the total water distribution area will increase from 21 per cent in 2011 to 36 per cent in 2025, and 60 per cent in 2040.

The urgent measures in implementing water supply plan include improving water resources, building water treatment plants in water storage tanks and river water pumping projects.

Xi proposes building new type of ties in all aspects of China-US relations

INDIAN WELLS, 9 June—Chinese President Xi Jinping called for implementing the spirit of building new type ties with the United States in all aspects of the bilateral relationship, Chinese State Councilor Yang Jiechi said on Saturday.

Xi made the proposal during the 7-8 June summit with his US counterpart Barack Obama at the Sunnyside estate in Rancho Mirage, California, Yang said.

Laying out the four-point proposal, the Chinese leader said that, first of all, the two sides need to elevate the meetings between leaders of the two nations at multilateral venues such as the Group of 20 and the Asian Pacific Economic Cooperation forum, while making good use of the existing over 90 dialogue and communication mechanisms between the two governments.

Secondly, to open a new horizon for pragmatic cooperation, Washington should take active steps to relax restrictions on hi-tech exports to China and promote the bilateral trade and investment structures toward a more balanced future.

Thirdly, to create a new mode of interaction between major countries, the two sides need to main- tain close coordination and collaboration on the Kore- an Peninsula, Afghanistan and other global hotspot issues, and work more closely on issues such as crackdown on piracy and transnational crimes, peacekeeping tasks, disaster relief, cybersecurity, climate change and space security.

Last, the two sides need to find a new way to manage their difference and actively foster a new type of military relations in accordance with the new type of inter-power ties.

Danube flood breaks record in Budapest, still rising

BUDAPEST, 9 June—The Danube river reached a level of 863 centimetres on Saturday afternoon, breaking the hitherto all-time high of 860 centimetres set in 2006, the Water Management Office of the Interior Ministry reported.

The river is still rising and not expected to crest until Monday at close to 9 metres. Budapest Mayor Istvan Tarlos said earlier that the city would be able to withstand a flood level of 930 centimetres without causing significant damage. But in the meanwhile, the city has set up a facility on its permanent fargrounds, able to temporarily house nearly 15,000 evacuees, should it prove necessary.

The Roman Embankment, a riverside commu- nity in northwest Budapest, is the most vulnerable section of the city. Temporary dikes have been reinforced and while leaks have been observed, the flood barriers appear to be holding. Some 200 people are on duty along this flood-line, ready to make emergency repairs if necessary.

In another development, Pest County (the county surrounding Bu- dapest) has closed down Route 11, a major highway running adjacent to the Danube and connecting the capital city with its northern suburbs.

Pakistan summons envoy after US drone strike kills nine

DERA ISMAIL KHAN, 9 June—A US drone strike killed nine people in northwest Pakistan, security officials said, prompting newly sworn-in Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif to summon America’s envoy on Saturday to protest against such attacks.

The missile strike, on a compound near the Af- ghan border in the North Waziristan region late on Friday, was the first US drone attack in Pakistan since Sharif was sworn in on Wednesday. There was no information about the victims.

In his inaugural address, Sharif called for an immediate end to the US drone strikes.

Pakistan’s Ministry of Foreign Affairs said the demand for an immediate halt to the attacks was repeated on Saturday.

“It was conveyed to the US charge d’ affaires that the government of Pakistan strongly condemns the drone strikes, which are a violation of Pakistan’s sovereignty and territorial integrity,” the ministry said in a statement.

“The importance of bringing an immediate end to drone strikes was emphasized.”

The attack came 10 days after a similar US drone strike killed a Pakistani Taliban’s second-in-command, Wali-ur-Rehman, and six others in a major blow to the militant group.

President Barack Obama said last month the United States would scale back drone strikes, only using them when a threat was “continuing and imminent”.

Drone casualties are difficult to verify. Foreign journalists must have permission from the military to visit the Pashtun tribal areas along the Afghan border. Taliban fighters often seal off the sites of drone strikes immediately.—Reuters

Two Koreas hold working-level talks at Panmunjom

SEOUL, 9 June—Working-level officials from North Korea and South Korea on Sunday held talks for about an hour in the morning at the South Korean side of the truce village of Panmunjom and agreed to continue the talks in the afternoon. South Korea’s Unification Ministry said.

In the morning session, the two sides made their opening remarks, touching on preparatory details of planned ministerial talks between the two sides such as the agenda and size of the delegations, ministry spokes- man Kim Hyung Sook said.

The ministerial meeting is scheduled to take place on Wednesday in Seoul. “The talks were carried out in an atmosphere in which the two sides wanted to hold substantive talks in a mutu- ally cooperative way, build- ing the status of the talks as a working-level contact,” Kim said.

Sunday’s talks are the first inter-Korean official dialogue since September 2012, according to the Unification Ministry.

The meeting, slated to begin at 10 am, got under way about 15 minutes late due to “technical matters,” according to South Korea’s Yonhap News Agency.

Chun Hae-sung, a senior Unification Ministry official, is leading the three-member South Korean delegation at Sun- day’s talks. The North’s three-member delegation is headed by Kim Sung Hyun, a senior official at the Com- mittee for the Peaceful Re- unification of Korea. “The talks are to discuss admin- istrative and technical mat- ters to successfully hold ministerial talks between South and North Korea on 12 June in Seoul,” Chun told reporters prior to de- parting for Panmunjom. He said he will “do his best on the basis of the spirit of the Korean Penin- sula trust-building process that requires the two sides to build trust from small steps and to develop inter-Korean relations.”

Sunday’s meeting comes just three days after North Korea made a sur- prise overture for the two countries to hold their first governmental talks in years aimed at normalizing two strikes and opening economic ties. Economic Development Agency, an official at the Foreign Ministry said.

G8 host Britain calls for action to save children from hunger

LONDON, 9 June—Setting the stage for this month’s G8 summit of rich industrialized countries, British Prime Minister David Cameron on Saturday called for fresh approaches to help eliminate malnourishment and hunger among the world’s poorest children.

As donors, charities and officials gathered for Saturday’s Nutrition for Growth event, up to 45,000 people rallied in London demanding global leaders take specific steps to tackle hunger when they meet in Northern Ireland later this month.

Charities have linked different in terms of sci- ence. And different in terms of government.”

At the event, govern- ments and development agencies made commit- ments of up to $4.15 billion to tackle under nutrition up to 2020 in a deal dubbed the Global Nutrition for Growth Compact.

This echoes an earlier goal by the Group of Eight, set in 2000, to halve the proportion of people living on less than $1.25 a day by 2015 and other similar global targets, where pro- gress has been mixed at best.

“We will never beat hunger just by spending more money or getting de- veloped nations and phi- lanthropists to somehow ‘do development’ to the de- veloping world,” Cameron said.

“It has to be about do- ing things differently. Dif- ferent in terms of business. Different in terms of sci- ence. And different in terms of government.”

Washington Launches Rocket for Galaxy Formation Study

WASHINGTON, 9 June — US space agency NASA on Wednesday night launched a rocket from Cape Canaveral Cosmio Infrared Background Experimiment (CIBER) designed to study the formation of the first galaxy.

The Black Brant XII suborbital rocket carrying the CIBER took off at 11:05 pm EDT (0305 GMT Thursday) from NASA’s launch range at the Wallops Flight Facility in Virginia. With the CIBER, scientists will study when the first stars and galaxies formed in the universe and how brightly they burned their nuclear fuel.

This is the fourth flight for the CIBER on a NASA sounding rocket. The previous launches were made in 2009, 2010 and 2012, respectively, from the White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico. After each flight the payload was recovered for post-calibration and re-flight. For this flight, the CIBER flew on a larger and more powerful rocket than before. They will loft it to a higher altitude than those previously obtained, thus providing longer observation time for the instruments, said NASA. The experiment, which will splash down in the Atlantic Ocean more than 400 miles (about 644 km) off the Virginia coast, will not be recovered, NASA said.

BEIJING, 9 June — Chinese publishing industry insiders said on Saturday that with the official entrance of Amazon Kindle products into the country, more Chinese will start paying for e-books.

Huang Lei, senior manager of the Chinese branch of Amazon.com, said that the Kindle Paperwhite and Kindle Fire HD e-readers were officially launched in China on Friday.

While many netizens have praised the arrival of the products, others have complained about their prices, which are higher than in some other countries.

Yu Dianli, general manager of Commercial Press, a major Chinese publishing house, said Kindle products will bring more choices for Chinese readers. “Although a large number of domestic readers are not used to paying for e-books, growing demand and the government review of their proposed deal, Sprint and SoftBank signed a National Security Agreement that includes board oversight of security issues. Other companies that have had such arrangements have historically opted for former military officers as well.” — Reuters

More Chinese to pay for e-books with Kindle’s arrival

According to a 2012 survey of 18,619 people in 28 provincial-level regions, Chinese people read 4.39 books, 77.20 newspapers, 6.56 magazines and 2.35 e-books on average, with the latter increasing by the most, 65.5 percent, year on year.

Mongolian “Warriors Tyrannosaurus” fossils return home, on first exhibition

ULAN BATOR, 9 June — Hundreds of spectators and reporters gathered at the Sukhbaatar Square of Ulan Bator on Saturday, waiting to have their first look at an exhibition of “Warriors Tyrannosaurus” fossils returned from the United States.

The Mongolian “Warriors Tyrannosaurus” fossils had been smuggled into the United States, but they would soon become a valuable heritage of Mongolia. Tsedevdamba Oyungerel, Minister for Culture, Sports and Tourism, said at an opening ceremony.

In order to effectively protect the country’s abundant dinosaur fossil resources, the government has decided to build a Mongolian dinosaur museum, with the temporary exhibition open till September, said the minister.

A large number of Mongolia’s dinosaur fossils have been smuggled into Europe, North America and Asia. More than 120 pieces of them would be returned to their homeland in the near future.

A nearly complete fossil of a giant Tyrannosaurus, which was unearthed in Mongolia, was put on auction in New York on 20 May last year. The Mongolian government lodged a protest, asking the US government to return it back.

A US District Court in Manhattan ruled this piece of fossil must be returned to Mongolia, and it was sent back home on 18 May this year. Mongolian dinosaurus fossils are mainly distributed in the south, middle and east gobi. Since 1922, scientists have found many fossils of Cretaceous dinosaurs, including protoceratops and oviraptors.

World’s 1st bionic eye may bring vision to the blind

MELBOURNE, 9 June — A group of Australian scientists and industrial designers published their latest development of world’s first bionic eye, a device that may help thousands of people in darkness to see shapes and light again, local media reported on Saturday.

Recipient is hoped to be able to see the basic outlines made of light through a pair of sunglasses shaped like Google Glass. It takes images and information from the digital camera attached to it and processes them into signals, which will be sent wirelessly to a microchip implanted in the recipient’s brain.

The basic idea of bionic eye is bypassing the damaged eye by transmitting the vision signal directly to the brain via wireless link.

Mark Armstrong, the leader of the Monash University Bionic Eye Industrial Design Team, told local media that with the clinical trial starting the coming year, the bionic eye is anticipated to give some vision to those who lost their sight completely. “Signal is transmitted wirelessly from what’s called a coil, which is mounted at the back of the head and inside the brain there is an implant which consists of a series of little ceramic tiles and in each tile are microscopic electrodes which actually are embedded in the visual cortex of the brain,” Armstrong said. “This is the first human cortical implant with a wireless link,” said Professor Arthur Lowry, the project head from the Monash Vision Group. “A small amount of information to someone who has no vision at all is enormously useful,” he said. With this new technology, people with blindness won’t need to have a permanent hole to put the wires for processor connection in the head any more, he added.

China May CPI slows, gives room for easy monetary policy

BEIJING, 9 May—China’s annual consumer inflation slowed to 2.1 percent in May from April’s 2.4 percent, data showed on Sunday, below market expectations and adding to views that the world’s second-largest economy could slow further in the current quarter.

The National Bureau of Statistics also said that China’s producer prices fell 2.9 percent last month from a year earlier, compared with a drop of 2.6 percent in April.

Economists polled by Reuters had expected annual consumer inflation of 2.5 percent and factory-gate prices to fall 2.5 percent in May.

“The inflation data showed China’s economic growth continued to slow down. Q2 growth is probably even slower than Q1. In particular, the PPI continued a trend of falling prices as deflation pressures persist,” said Andrew Johnson, chief economist at Mizuho Securities Asia in Hong Kong.

China’s economy grew at its slowest pace for 13 years in 2012, and it has so far surprised on the downside, bringing warnings from some economists that the country would even miss its annual growth target of 7.5 percent.

On Saturday, data showed that China’s exports posted their lowest growth rate in almost a year in May while imports unexpectedly fell, underlining concerns that growth in the world’s second-largest economy could slow anew in the second quarter.

Government economists from top think-tanks in Beijing told Reuters this week that the new leadership of Xi Jinping and Premier Li Keqiang will tolerate quarterly growth to slip as far as 7 percent before hitting the stimulus button.

Some improvement of such a scale may be starting to emerge in the second quarter, said EEF economist Andrew Johnson.

The survey, published on Sunday, found the balance of companies who said the cost of credit was rising rather than falling sank to 2 percent, the lowest since the survey began in 2007, although the improvement was largely concentrated among big businesses.

“The counterpoint to this cautious optimism, however, is that there is lingering on internal funds to support investment because they found many of the criteria that banks set for fresh borrowing unreasonable,” EEF called on the government to consider ways of doing more to stimulate banking competition for smaller companies, such as making it easier for firms to switch banks or lowering the set-up costs for new banks.

“China has rising room for further rate cuts,” said Andrew Johnson, chief economist at Mizuho Securities Asia in Hong Kong.

China has risen this year to keep an easy monetary stance and some see the possibility that the People’s Bank of China could cut rates later this year to reduce financing costs for struggling Chinese firms, provided that housing inflation does not flare up.

“China has rising room and the possibility to cut interest rates in the second half of this year,” Shen added.

“The financing cost for companies is very high now and the central bank should further pursue interest rate liberalization. China’s fiscal policy in the second half needs to protect consumption growth and support investment.”

LONDON, 9 June—Brit- ish manufacturers are in- creasingly turning away from external funding to grow their businesses, a survey found, despite ten- tative signs that the cost of credit is easing.

Nearly 52 percent of companies polled by manu- facturers’ organization EEF for its quarterly Credit Con- ditions Survey said they had no need to borrow to support their business, a record high.

Industry turning its back on sources of credit would be bad news for the government and the Bank of England, which are trying to get lending going with measures such as the Funding for Lending scheme (FLS) that makes it cheaper for banks to lend to small businesses.

Some improvement of such a scale may be starting to emerge in the second quarter, said EEF economist Andrew Johnson.

The survey, published on Sunday, found the balance of companies who said the cost of credit was rising rather than falling sank to 2 percent, the lowest since the survey began in 2007, although the improvement was largely concentrated among big businesses.

“The counterpoint to this cautious optimism, however, is that there is lingering on internal funds to support investment because they found many of the criteria that banks set for fresh borrowing unreasonable,” EEF called on the government to consider ways of doing more to stimulate banking competition for smaller companies, such as making it easier for firms to switch banks or lowering the set-up costs for new banks.

Figures earlier this week showed that banks were drawing down funds under the FLS, but cutting net lending as they run down massive pre-credit crunch loans. EEF, which represents over 6,000 Brit- ish engineering, manufac- turing and technology firms of varying sizes, surveyed 210 companies between 1 and 22 May.

Cheese, dairy products may help prevent cavities

WASHINGTON, 9 June—Consuming cheese and other dairy products may help protect teeth against cavities, a new study led by an Indian-origin researcher has claimed.

Consuming dairy products is vital to maintaining good overall health, and it is especially important to bone health. However, there has been little research about how dairy products affect oral health in particular.

The new study pub- lished in the General Dentistry, the peer-reviewed clinical journal of the Acad- emy of General Dentistry (AGD), sampled 68 sub- jects ranging in age from 12 to 15, and the authors looked at the dental plaque pH in the subjects’ mouths before and after they con- sumed cheese, milk, or sug- ar-free yogurt.

A staggering 90 percent of women have experienced problems and 20 percent admitted to having their teeth “embarrassed” by their feet while walking barefoot because they could not bear the pain any longer.

The study of 2,000 British adults also found that only 12 percent of men have put up with stylish but uncomfortable shoes.

The study indicated that almost half of women who have suffered foot problems after wearing an uncomfortable pair of shoes, but 43 percent will suffer in the name of fashion.

One third of women also admitted that they had worn heels they knew did not fit, simply because they “looked nice”—and could not find a pair in their size, The Telegraph reported.

Syrian forces capture final rebel stronghold in Qusair region

BEIRUT, 9 June—Syrian government troops backed by Hezbollah guerrillas seized the western village of Buwayda on Saturday, ending rebel resistance around the town of Qusair in a fresh success for President Bashar al-Assad.

The swift fall of Buwayda came just three days after rebels were swept out of Qusair, de-nying them an important supply route into neighboring Lebanon and giv-ing renewed momentum to Assad’s forces battling a two-year civil war.

Several opposition activists confirmed Buwayda was in government hands and said dozens of rebels, including a num-ber of foreign fighters, had been captured alive. There was no immediate word of their fate.

“We can now declare Qusair and the surround-ing area to be a fully liber-ated area. We will go after the terrorists wherever they are,” an un-named, senior Syrian army officer told state television from the rubble-filled streets of Buwayda.

Fighting flared else-where in Syria, including close to the capital Da-mascus and in the northern province of Idlib, which is expected to be the focus of renewed attack by Assad’s forces following the collapse of the Qusair rebel front.

In Syria’s third city Homs, an epicentre of the anti-government revolt, a suicide bomber detonated a car full of explosives in a pro-Assad neighbourhood, killing seven people, Syrian television reported.

Three women were among the dead and at least 10 people were wounded, with the video showing pools of blood on the ground and at least one badly charred body.

The report could not be independently verified as the Syrian government restrictions access to indepen-dent media.

The United Nations estimates at least 80,000 people have died in the conflict. UN humanitar-i-an agencies launched a $5 billion appeal on Fri-day, the biggest in their history, to cope with the fallout from the fighting that has sent some 1.6 million refugees fleeing to neighbouring coun-tries.

Syrian state television broadcast live from the de-serted streets of Buwayda.

Mandela in ‘serious’ condition in hospital

JOHANNESBURG, 9 June—Former South African president and anti-apartheid hero Nelson Mandela was in a “serious but stable” condition on Saturday after being taken to hospital with a recurrence of a lung infec-tion, the government said.

The 94-year-old, who became the first black lead-er of Africa’s biggest econ-omy in 1994 after his historic all-race elections, has been in hospital three times since December. He has been bat-ting the infection for a few days, the government said in a statement.

This morning at about 1:30 am (12:30 am British time) his condition deterio-rated and he was transferred to a Pretoria hospital. He re-mains in a serious but stable condition,” it said.

The government’s cho-ice of words, in particular the use of “serious”, was clear cause for concern to South Africa’s 53 million people, for whom Mandela remains a potent symbol of the struggle against decades of white-minority rule.

“It’s such painful news but I pray for him that he can get better and better and better as he is the best man in this country,” said Pretoria resident Khodani Mulwena.

President’s critics say the health of the Nobel Peace Prize laureate. “What I am told by doctors is that he is breathing on his own and I think that is a positive sign,” he said.

“Madiba is a fighter and at his age, as long as he is fighting he will be fine,” Maharaj said, referring to Mandela by his clan name.

Mandela’s wife, Graca Machel, accompanied him to the hospital, the South African Press Associa-tion reported. Machel had been scheduled to speak on Saturday at a conference on hunger in London but cancelled the engagement, SAPA reported.

Mandela stepped down as president in 1999 after one term in office and has been removed from poli-tics for a decade. His last appearance in public was at the final of the soccer World Cup in Pretoria in 2010.

He appeared in a brief television clip aired by state television in April during a visit to his home by President Jacob Zuma.

At the time, the ruling African National Congress (ANC) assured the pub-lic Mandela was “in good shape”, although the foot-age showed a thin and old man sitting expression-less in an armchair with his head propped against a pil-low.—Reuters

Three Americans killed after argument with Afghan soldier

KABUL, 9 June—Three Americans, two soldiers and a civilian, were killed in Afghanistan on Saturday when a man in an Afghan army uniform turned his weapon on them in the east-ern Province of Paktika, the NATO-led force said.

So-called insider at-tacks by Afghan soldiers on their NATO-force allies have become an increasing problem over the past year or so, threatening to undermine already waning support for the war among Western nations sending troops.

Last year, a surge in such attacks prompted NATO to temporarily cur-tail some joint operations with Afghan government forces. The three Americans were shot dead by the man following an argument, the Paktika provincial govern-or’s spokesman Mukhlas Afghani said, adding that three other Americans had been wounded.

The attacker was him-self shot dead soon after opening fire, the spokesman said. “Two US Interna-tional Security Assistance Force service members and one US civilian were killed today when an individual wearing an ANA uniform turned his weapon against them,” a statement from Afghanistan’s NATO-led force said. A previous state-ment had said all three were soldiers.

Three insider attacks accounted for one in every five combat deaths suffered by NATO-led forces in Af-ghanistan and 16 percent of all American combat casu-alities, according to 2012 data. The toll has alarmed Afghanistan’s Western al-lies and raised troubling questions about the unpop-u lar war’s direction as most interna-tional forces prepare to withdraw by the end of next year.

Also on Saturday, an Italian soldier was killed and three were wounded when a child threw a gre-nade at a NATO convoy in the western Province of Farah, a spokesman for the governor and a Taleban spokesman said.—Reuters

At least five fishermen killed as gales whip Sri Lanka coast

COLOMBO, 9 June—At least five fishermen were killed and 13 injured when gale force winds lashed Sri Lanka’s south coast on Sat-urday morning.

Officials said that air force helicopters and naval craft rescued 20 stranded fishermen, some severely injured.

The bodies of four men were washed ashore, trig-gering an angry response from fishermen who said they had not received a bad weather warning.

A group of fishermen staged a protest in Colombo’s southern suburb of Dehi-wela, dragging a boat across the south coast railway line and further disrupting train services with bonfires along train tracks.

The government’s me-teorological department said on Saturday that it had issued a bad weather warn-ing on Friday, but adding how no explanation why the fishermen had not been warned against going out to sea.—Kyodo News

No water no life

The world has faced energy crises because of the constantly rising (sometimes rapidly growing) worldwide demand that pushes many countries to adopt energy security policies of their own. Especially, the big consumer nations are in hot pursuit of new energy resources and gaining ground in the existing important global markets. This has sometimes led to tense diplomatic situation in the global arena.

World nations are always in need of energy as the machines they are operating run on various kinds of energy in which oil, natural gas, coal, and hydropower and nuclear are the main sources. So if there is no energy at all, the world can even stand still. But what about water as there cannot be life without it?

The not so good news is that many areas of the world are already experiencing stress on water availability. Due to the accelerated pace of population growth and an increase in the amount of water a single person uses, it is expected that this situation will continue to get worse.

Mainly, human beings are consuming fresh water for everything from household needs to mass agriculture and industrial purposes and environmental conservation globally using large amounts of clean water every day in every part. But the problem is that 97% of the water on the Earth is salt water. However, only three large amounts of clean water every day in every part.

There will be no life without water, and as for human beings their survival totally depends on fresh water. So, a shortage of freshwater would be detrimental to the mankind as it would affect everything from sanitation, to overall health and the production of grain, eventually life on Earth itself.

Turkey rules out early polls, thousands defy call to end protest

ISTANBUL, 9 June—Turkish Prime Minister Tayyip Erdogan’s AK Party on Saturday ruled out early elections as tens of thousands of anti-government demonstrators defied his call for an immediate end to protests.

Huseyin Celik, deputy chairman of the Justice and Development (AK) Party founded by Erdogan just over a decade ago, said local and presidential elections would be held next year as planned, and a general election in 2015.

“The government is running like clockwork. There is nothing that necessitates early elections,” he told reporters after a meeting of the party’s executive committee in Istanbul.

“The world is dealing with an economic crisis and things are going well in Turkey. Elections are not held because people are marching on the streets. A few kilometres away, tens of thousands of Turks defied Erdogan’s call on Friday for an immediate end to anti-government demonstrations, massing again in the central Taksim Square, where riot police backed by helicopters and armoured vehicles first clashed with protesters a week ago.

Tourists and curious locals swelled their numbers around a makeshift protest camp in Gezi Park, a leafy corner of the square where activists have been living in tents and vandalised buses, or wrapped in blankets under plane trees.

Senior AK officials said they had discussed calling a rally of their supporters in Istanbul or Ankara next week but no decision had yet been taken, with some party figures urging restraint for fear of provoking the situation on the streets.

What began as a campaign against government plans to build over the park spiralled into an unprecedented display of public anger over the perceived authoritarianism of Erdogan and his Islam-rooted AK Party, leading to the worst riots in decades.—Reuters

UNITED NATIONS, 9 June —Armed groups in Mali continue to pose a serious security threat to the entire region while African troops forming the core of a UN peacekeeping mission are not yet properly equipped, the UN chief said in a new report.

France launched a massive military campaign in January which broke al Qaeda-linked Islamist fighters’ control over the northern two-thirds of Mali and allowed the Tuaregs to regain control of their traditional homeland of Kidal.

But UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon said in a report to the Security Council on Saturday that despite the gains made by French troops, Malian security forces and an African force known as AFISMA, “the situation continues to be precarious.”

“The situation on the ground remains ... fluid, with sporadic clashes between armed groups and continued asymmetric attacks across the three regions of the north,” Ban said in the report, obtained by Reuters.

“Therefore, it is important to re-examine the MDSF’s (Malian defence and security forces) northwards towards Kidal and the fatal clashes with MNLA (separatist Tuareg) elements a few days ago,” Ban wrote. “Exercising control over the city, the MDSF has thus far blocked the MNLA’s offensive.”

Strangers backed by helicopters spotted at the road to Kidal, a stronghold of Kidal in the remote northeast to a ceasefire ahead of national elections next month and paved the way for a permanent peace deal.

“The talks in the capital of Bamako have made the island’s goods and local currency more attractive to importers, thereby reducing the volatility of the foreign exchange market and increasing the value of the foreign debt.”

“Bearing in mind the expected rise in the local price of goods and services, the depreciation of the local currency is a concern given the expected rise in the local price of goods and services.”

“The situation on the ground remains ... fluid, with sporadic clashes between armed groups and continued asymmetric attacks across the three regions of the north,” Ban said in the report, obtained by Reuters.

The government of neighbouring Burkina Faso, due to conclude on Monday, the first fighting in months between Mali’s army and the MNLA rebels this week as government forces advanced toward the Tuaregs’ last stronghold of Kidal in the remote northeast.

Husband of former Indonesian president Megawati dies

SINGAPORE, 9 June—Taufik Kiemas, husband of former Indonesian president Megawati Sukarnoputri, died at a Singapore hospital Saturday evening.

Taufik, 70, was warded at the Singapore General Hospital after complaining of exhaustion following Pancasila celebrations last Saturday in Ende Regency, East Nusa Tenggara.

He is also the chairman of the People’s Consultative Assembly. “We have confirmed from the family that he has died,” said Tjahtjo Kumolo, the secretary-general of the opposition Indonesian Democratic Party of Struggle, of which Megawati is chairman.

His body is expected to arrive in Jakarta on Sunday morning and will be buried at the Kalibata Heroes Cemetery in South Jakarta.

Megawati, who is also the husband of former president and chairperson of PDP Megawati Sukarnoputri, died in a hospital in Singapore on Saturday afternoon, a senior official of the party said.

Tokyo plans to oppose fishing subsidy ban in TPP trade talks

Tokyo, 9 June—Japan plans to oppose a US-proposed ban on fishing subsidies in the Trans-Pacific Partnership free trade negotiations that Japan will join from July, due to concern the ban would have numerous adverse effects on Japan’s fishing industry, government sources said on Saturday.

If the subsidy ban is introduced by other TPP countries, the Japanese government will call to limit its scope to subsidies that would obviously lead to overfishing, as the Japanese fishing industry heavily depends on subsidies according to the sources.

Japan’s position also reflects concern the ban may cover subsidies for fishing fleets and other infrastructure developments, hindering recovery efforts in coastal regions of northeastern Japan where the 2011 earthquake and tsunami devastated the fishing industry.

The issue of banning fishing subsidies is far from a done deal, as a gap lies between countries like the United States, Australia and New Zealand that are hoping to protect the environment and fishing resources through the ban, and other countries that are opposed to the ban.

Mongolian miners’ operation at Tavan Tolgoi may foil int’l bidding

BEIJING, 9 June—Mongolia’s state-run coal miner plans to start mining operations at the country’s Tavan Tolgoi coal mine, a move that would raise uncertainty over the international bidding for rights to develop one of the world’s largest coal deposits.

Yaichil Batsuuri, chief executive officer of Erdenes Tavan Tolgoi LLC, told Kyodo News on Saturday that the miner plans to start and continue operations on the mine with other Mongolian companies until the selection of a successful bidder.

Batsuuri said the Mongolian government approved the tentative operation by the Mongolian companies and that they plan to produce 2.6 million tons of coal by the end of this year.

The operation could start as early as this month, and the coal produced is expected to be exported to China.

The Mongolian side has apparently chosen to prioritize early development of the mine instead of waiting for the completion of the international bidding.

But concerns are spreading over how the operation by the Mongolian companies would affect the bidding procedure. An official at a Japanese company said the move may lead to cancellation of the international bidding.

The bidding procedure for the Tavan Tolgoi mine began in December 2010, and the major Japanese trading houses Itochu Corp. and Marubeni Corp. are among the bidders.

Labour and Welfare Ministry to relax conditions for war dead's remains retrieval

Tokyo, 9 June—The ruling Liberal Democratic Party is planning to propose new legislation to speed up the retrieval of remains of Japanese soldiers and civilians who died in the country and abroad during World War II, party sources said.

The LDP aims to submit a bill to an extraordinary Diet session in the fall to accelerate the recovery of the remains of some 600,000 Japanese war dead in hard-fought battlefields such as Iwojima in the Pacific, Okinawa and the Philippines, the sources said.

The bill will call for appointing a state minister in charge of the retrieval of remains to reduce red tape, and setting up a period for intensive collection of the remains during which the government will increase budget and personnel for the recovery activities.

According to the Health, Labour and Welfare Ministry, about 2.4 million Japanese war dead have been returned to Japan. The government began collecting ashes of those people in 1952. The remains of some 1.13 million have yet to be recovered and excluding those believed to have sunk into the sea, the remains of about 600,000 Japanese nationals can be retrieved.

Due to the difficulty of gaining information on burial sites from aging in-formants, the remains of up to 2,000 war dead were collected each in fiscal 2011 and 2012.

An LDP special committee on the retrieval of the remains decided the government is slow in recovering them as legal basis for the activities is weak, according to the sources.

A bill submitted on a Cabinet approval in 1952 in the return of the remains, the welfare ministry mainly takes charge of the recovery activities with support from the foreign and defence ministries. However, the lack of firm legal ground for the project has led the retrieval to be snarled in red tape, the sources said.

Under the new legislation, the LDP is considering designating the coming seven to 10 years as a period for intensive collection of the remains and increasing staff at Japanese diplomatic missions abroad to beef up information gathering on burial sites. The Japan Youth Memorial Association, a nonprofit organization supporting the recovery of the remains, has called for enactment of a new law to speed up the retrieval, saying it usually takes two years for the government to take some action after receiving information on the remains.

Singapore launches blood donation website

SINGAPORE, 9 June—Singapore launched a website on Saturday to make blood donation more convenient with real-time updates and information on the blood bank’s stock requirements and needs for specific blood types.

The Red Cross Connection microsite also features a calendar of upcoming blood drives, closest blood bank locations, as well as information about the blood donation process.

Information from the microsite can be linked and shared on the user’s social media networks.

Local organizations celebrated the 10th anniversary of the World Blood Donor Day on Saturday.

The blood donations in Singapore increased by almost 80 percent over the past decade to 118,000 units in 2012, organizers of local celebrations said.

The National Blood Programme is aiming to collect 126,000 units of blood this year to meet the needs of patients in Singapore.

It is targeting the youths, as people aged 25 and below made up 32 percent of the donors last year. The aim is to increase the figure to 35 percent by 2014.—Xinhua

Nepali business leader sees Chinese dream as inspirational

KATHMANDU, 9 June—Nepal’s private sector leader Suraj Vaidya, who chairs the Federation of Nepalese Chambers of Commerce & Industry (FNCCI) has said the Chinese dream is appreciable as well as inspirational to Nepal. In a recent exclusive interview with Xinhua about the Chinese dream, the head of the federal representative body of Nepali business community, said Nepal can follow the road to prosperity inspired by the Chinese dream.

He said the Chinese dream is vision of successful leadership in China and it is all about aspiration and guidance of the leadership to integrate the huge population, huge geographical differences and multietnic culture of China into a single dream.

“The Chinese dream could take forward the prosperity of China to a step ahead and indeed the dream will benefit every fellow citizen in coming days,” he said.

Nepal should appreciate the Chinese dream and the Chinese people who are working hard to fulfill the vision of the leader, said Vaidya. “The Chinese dream will also help China to transform itself into more open economy for the investors worldwide,” he said.

Industrialist Vaidya who owns several commercial agricultural farms and largest tea estates in the eastern part of the country, believed that Nepal should focus on exporting agricultural products to China’s Tibet to get better economic advantages from China.

As the cost of agricultural production is much expensive in Tibet due to the lack of enough agricultural land on the average 3,000 meters high altitude, Nepal can export food and vegetables there, he said.—Xinhua

American yogurt producer wins Ernst & Young World Entrepreneur of 2013

MONACO, 9 June—Hamdi Ulukaya, founder of American yogurt producer Chobani, was named the Ernst & Young Entrepreneur of the Year 2013, at an awards ceremony held in Monaco on Saturday evening.

As president and CEO of Chobani, Ulukaya was picked from among 49 finalists vying for the title across 14 regions, each of whom had already been named the Ernst & Young Entrepreneur Of The Year in their home country and region.

Turkish-born Ulukaya founded Chobani in upstate New York in 2005 and launched Chobani Greek Yogurt two years later. Less than six years after its launch, it became the best-selling yogurt brand in the US with annual sales of more than one billion dollars. Chobani has 3,000 employees and operates the largest yogurt factory in the world selling its products to Australia and the UK as well as the US.

“| It’s delighted and honored to receive this award and I would like to dedicate this to our fans, employees, local communities and health professional friends. Without them, none of our successes would have been possible,” said Ulukaya.

Jim Turley, global CEO, said that Ulukaya epitomizes the vision and determination that set entrepreneurs apart and is very worthy of the title Ernst & Young World Entrepreneur Of The Year 2013.”

The Ernst & Young Entrepreneur Of The Year Award is a global program that’s run in over 50 countries, across six continents.

Regional unrest’s impact begins to show in Iraq

BAGHDAD, 9 June — Iraqi Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki on Sunday said the Middle East unrest has begun to show its impact on Iraq and urged all factions to reconcile to confront the threat.

“The area is witnessing a violent storm, because of the re-emergence of extremist organizations like al-Qaeda and al-Nusra,” Maliki said in a speech to his cabinet in the city of Erbil, the capital of the autonomous region of Kurdistan in northern Iraq.

Iraq is part of the area, and we started to get affected by the storm that engulfed the area, therefore, we all have to revive national reconciliation to confront the menace,” Maliki said, referring to the impacts that threatens Iraq’s fragile stability of the unrest in neighboring Syria and Turkey.

Maliki’s Shiite leadership has long been at odds with the Kurds over the distribution of oil wealth and the control of some disputed areas, while the Sunni Arabs have been protesting the government for over five months, accusing him of marginalizing them and his troops of indiscriminate arresting their sons and torturing them.
Sonakshi Sinha: Ranveer Singh is hyper, I am calm

Mumbai, 9 June—Actress Sonakshi Sinha, who has teamed up with Ranveer Singh in Lootera, says both of them have different working styles. Lootera is a period romance drama set in the Bengal of 1950s and it has Ranveer Singh romancing Sonakshi Sinha for the first time on screen.

"Ranveer and I are opposites. As hyper as he is, I am calm. Even as actors, our styles of working are different. He likes to prepare whereas I don’t switch on until the camera comes on,” Sonakshi said in a statement. Sonakshi is happy the way the film has come out and finds it magical. "The beauty of Lootera lies in how Vikramaditya Motwane (director) tuned two diametrically opposite actors so well with each other. I’m sure that the audience will love to see our fresh pairing,” she said.

Even Motwane of Udaan fame is quite happy with the way both Sonakshi and Ranveer have played their roles. "The most important thing in a love story for me is the intensity and passion that my lead actors bring into playing their characters. Both Ranveer and Sonakshi have portrayed their love to perfection like seasoned actors even though Lootera is their first film together,” Motwane said. Produced by Balaji and Phantom, the film releases on 5 July.—PTI

Jennifer Lawrence turns producer with The Rules of Inheritance

Los Angeles, 9 June—Oscar-winning actress Jennifer Lawrence will do a double task of starring and producing The Rules of Inheritance.

The 22-year-old actress will team up once again with director Susanne Bier, who serves behind the lens for Lawrence and Bradley Cooper’s next film Serena, reported Ace Showbiz. The film is based on Claire Bidwell Smith’s memoir about a woman who loses both her parents to cancer as a young adult. “We are thrilled to be working with the dream team of Jennifer Lawrence, Susanne Bier, Abi Morgan and Bruce Cohen,” FilmNation CEO Glen Basner and production chief Aaron Ryder said in a joint statement. “We have no doubt that this inspirational and hopeful book will be turned into an emotionally powerful movie that audiences around the world will fall in love with,” they added. Lawrence has meanwhile wrapped up The Devil You Know, which is set for a 9 July release. The Hunger Games: Catching Fire, her next chapter as Katniss Everdeen, will open nationwide on 22 November.—PTI

Brad Pitt gifts lacy lingerie to Angelina Jolie on birthday

London, 9 June—Post Angelina Jolie’s double mastectomy, Hollywood superstar Brad Pitt has reportedly treated his fiancee with some beautiful lingerie on her 38th birthday.

The actress, who celebrated her birthday on 4 June, recently underwent a breast removal surgery to reduce her risk of breast cancer, reported Sun online. “Since Angelina Jolie has recovered from the surgery, they have been acting like a couple of lovestruck teenagers. They can’t keep their hands off each other.” “It was her birthday on Tuesday, Brad arranged for the French fashion designer Heidi Slimane, from Saint Laurent in Paris, to sort her out with a whole wardrobe full of new clothes. Angelina was so touched by Brad’s gifts that she teared up. She can’t wait to marry him this summer,” a source said. Aishwarya is ecstatic to meet Al Pacino

New Delhi, 9 June—No body can keep her away from her daughter Aaradhya, not even the world’s most famous ‘Godfather’ Al Pacino, and actress Aishwarya Rai Bachchan proved just the same when she skipped meeting the legendary Hollywood actor for her daughter.

While her husband, actor Abhishek Bachchan was ecstatic to meet Pacino during their stay in London early this week on 2 June, Aishwarya chose to skip the envious rendezvous because there was no one around to look after their Aaradhya.

Aishwarya’s mother Vrinda, who was also with the couple in London was also leaving back for India the same day, leaving the actress on her own to look after her toddler. The Bachchan couple was in London to attend the charity event ‘Chime for Change’.—PTI

No messing as spectacular Serena sinks Sharapova

PARIS, 9 June—The look in her eyes said “don’t mess with me” and no one dared to cross Serena Williams during an unforgettable French Open fortnight when the American proved she “really, really wanted” the title “more than anyone else”. Just how much she wanted it was clear for all to see when at 5:02pm local time on Saturday the world number one fired a lethal 198-kph ace, tossed her racket, sunk to her knees andarched back to let out a primal roar that went on and on and on.

“I think that really creates a real champion. My winning appetite is really high. I definitely want to continue my journey to get a few more.” Since that shock 2012 defeat Serena has scooped up titles at Wimbledon, the Olympics, the US Open and now Paris.

After 11 years it’s incredible. I want to come back here and win again. I think I’m Parisienne,” a delighted Serena told the crowd in French after becoming the oldest woman to win the title since tennis went professional in 1968. The last time she triumphed at the spiritual home of clay-court tennis, the 31-year-old American turned out to be an unstoppable force as she went on to complete what she dubbed the “Serena Slam”. After conquering the surface that is considered to be the weakest, it could well be game on for yet another “Serena Slam” as she is now on an astonishing 31-match winning streak following her humbling of Sharapova.

The top seed, who flashed up 10 manicured fingers and then six more on Saturday to signal her total 14 grand slam haul, completed a remarkable turnaround from 12 months ago when she surprisingly perished in the first round. “I’ve always said a championship isn’t about how much they win but it’s about how they recover from their downs, whether it’s an injury or whether it’s a loss,” said

Palace Malice beats Oxbow, Orb in Belmont

NEW YORK, 9 June—Palace Malice followed a perfect script to upstage the Kentucky Derby and Preakness Stakes champions on Saturday and win the Belmont Stakes, the final race of year-old thoroughbreds. Palace Malice, who was 12th in the Kentucky Derby, won by 1/4 lengths with Mike Smith aboard after prevailing in a stretch run duel with the Triple Crown for three-year-old thoroughbreds. Palace Malice, who was 12th in the Kentucky Derby, won by 1/4 lengths with Mike Smith aboard after prevailing in a stretch run duel with Serena who is already guaranteed a place among the all-time greats.

“Jockey Smith saluted trainer Todd Pletcher’s game plan for Palace Malice, who paid almost $30. ‘Likely you’ll be sitting right outside of Oxbow, just keep your eye on him and you just play it from there,’ Smith said about his pre-race talk with Pletcher. ‘That’s really what we did. ‘We thought Freedom Child would probably be in front. I knew Oxbow would be sitting right of him and we just parked ourselves right outside of him.’ Smith said his winning move past Oxbow and his rider, Gary Stevens, was like a movie moment. ‘I was keeping a close eye on him,’ Smith said about the ride as he headed toward the end of the backstretch. ‘I felt I was moving better.’”

France friendly vital for Brazil’s morale

PORTO ALEGRE, 9 June—Striker Fred admits Brazil must win Sunday’s international friendly against France to restore their confidence ahead of the FIFA Confederations Cup. The match at Arena do Gremio will be Brazil’s last warmup fixture before their Confederations Cup debut against Japan in Brasilia on 15 June. Luiz Felipe Scolari’s team has won just once since the 64-year-old replaced Mano Menezes as national coach in November. The victory against Bolivia has been accompanied by a loss to England and draws against Chile, Russia, Italy and England.

“This match will be important to build up our morale ahead of the tournament,” Fred said during a Press conference on Saturday.

The 29-year-old will face two of his former Lyon teammates, goalkeeper Hugo Lloris, now at Tottenham, and Real Madrid striker Karim Benzema.

Bryan twins make it a good day for the 30-somethings

PARIS, 9 June—The 30-somethings have enjoyed themselves at the French Open this year and American twins Bob and Mike Bryan continued the trend by winning a record-extending 14th grand slam doubles title at Roland Garros on Saturday. Just a few hours after 31-year-old fellow American Serena Williams hoisted the women’s trophy, the Bryans broke French hearts by beating Nicolas Mahut and Michael Llodra 6-4, 4-6, 7-6(4) in an entertaining final.

“After 11 years it’s incredible. I want to come back here and win again. I think I’m Parisienne,” a delighted Serena told the crowd in French after becoming the oldest woman to win the title since tennis went professional in 1968. Chicago Blackhawks join Boston Bruins in Stanley Cup Final

CHICAGO, 9 June—The Chicago Blackhawks beat the Los Angeles Kings 4-3 in double overtime on Saturday to win the series and join the Boston Bruins in the National Hockey League’s Stanley Cup Final. The Blackhawks completed a 4-1 series win over the Kings, who won the Cup last season, to claim the Western Conference for the first time since winning the NHL championship in 2010. Chicago will have home-ice advantage for the best-of-seven series with the Bruins because they had the better regular season record.

The Blackhawks won the Presidents’ Trophy for having the most points in the regular season. Boston sealed their place in the Final with a 4-0 sweep of Pittsburgh to capture the Eastern Conference title.

Nadal wary as Ferrer finally enjoys the spotlight

PARIS, 9 June—David Ferrer is used to wearing the “best of the rest” label when it comes to Spanish claycourters, but on Sunday against Rafa Nadal the 31-year-old has the chance to add his name to the pantheon of greats. The Valencia-based player has reached the French Open final without dropping a set, and on Friday produced a ruthless display of power and accuracy to torment French hope Jo-Wilfried Tsonga.

It was a magnificent performance to end a sequence of five defeats in his five previous grand slam semi-finals, yet once again Ferrer was left in the shade by Nadal’s extraordinary five-set semi-final thriller over Novak Djokovic. Ferrer, who matched that as “le final” in all but name, but Nadal has too much respect for Ferrer—a player who shares his work ethic—to relax as he aims to become the first man to win the same grand slam tournament eight times.

“He didn’t lose a set during the whole tournament, so he’s a player that brings you to the limit,” he said, “and on Saturday. “He’s a player that if you are not playing perfect, you will be in big, big trouble.” The statistics do not look good for Ferrer, although he will take some heart from the fact that the last time two Spaniards met in the French Open final, in 2002, Albert Costa was the underdog but defeated Carlos Moya in four sets.

Ferrer won his first claycourt clash with Nadal in 2004. Since then he has lost 16 in a row on the surface. Add the facts that Nadal has suffered one defeat in 59 matches at Roland Garros, has never lost any of his 13 finals against Spaniards, and is just five behind Argentine Guillermo Vilas’s record of 46 career claycourt titles, and the odds are stacked against fourth-seed Ferrer.

Ferrer has arguably been unlucky in that his career has spanned an era containing some of the greatest players in the sport’s history. More often than not in recent years the only players he loses to at grand slams are the top four of Djokovic, Nadal, Andy Murray and Roger Federer.

Heidi Klum puts fashion aside as TV’s ‘Talent’ judge

LOS ANGELES, 9 June— German supermodel Heidi Klum, who has straddled from the runway to entrepreneur and reality TV host, will now try her hand as a judge on NBC’s television competition show “America’s Got Talent.”

Klum, 40, nicknamed “The Body” for her statuesque figure, has carved a career beyond modeling, as the host of Lifetime’s fashion series “Project Runway” and “Germany’s Next Top Model.” For “America’s Got Talent,” the model stepped out of her role as fashion expert for the first time, to sit alongside former Spice Girl Mel B, comedian Howie Mandel and radio host Howard Stern on the judging panel for the show’s eighth season, which began this week.

Storm kills 14 Sri Lankan fishermen, more missing

COLOMBO, 9 June—A sudden storm which lashed parts of Sri Lanka for two days has killed 14 fishermen while 36 others are missing, an official said on Sunday.

Deputy Minister of Fisheries and Aquatic Resources Development Sarath Kumara Gunaratne told Xinhua that more than 20 fishermen were also injured after their boats were caught in rough waters on Friday night and early Saturday morning.

He said that the Sri Lankan navy and air force were involved in a search and rescue operation but there are fears more may have been killed at sea.

The Sri Lankan Department of Meteorology on Saturday issued a weather alert telling fishermen not to go out to sea as strong winds created rough sea conditions.

The winds began on Friday night uprooting trees in parts of the capital Colombo as well as on the outskirts, Transport along some railway lines had been hampered as a result of the bad weather while roads were also blocked on Saturday night as uprooted trees had fallen across them.

The Sri Lankan Department of Meteorology said on Sunday that the showery and windy conditions has reduced over the country. However it said showers were still expected at times in several parts of the country during the night.

At least 4 killed in suicide car bomb in Baghdad

BAGHDAD, 9 June— At least four people were killed and 17 wounded in a suicide car bomb attack targeting a police headquarters in the Iraqi capital on Sunday, police said. The attack occurred at about 8:00 am local time (0500 GMT) when a suicide bomber rammed his explosive-laden car into the entrance of the headquarters located in Baghdad’s northern district of Kadhimiya and blew it up, a source at the Interior Ministry told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

The death toll of the attack could rise as ambulances and police vehicles were evacuating the victims to different hospitals and medical centres in the area, the source said. —Xinhua

Cross border trade between Myanmar, India to get boost from a new road

As part of efforts for promoting the border trade and tourism, Myanmar and India are planning to build a road linking Paletwa in Chin State in Myanmar and a border town in India. The new road that runs from Paletwa, Chin State, Myanmar to a border town in India, would serve as the ASEAN road network and the corridor that connects Myanmar and other countries in ASEAN community and Asia.

India renewed its proposal to build the road instead of maintaining the waterway from Paletwa to Kalatwa.

The two countries will build the road which comprises two road sections: the 73-km long Paletwa-Kalatwa (Satpyitpyin) road section and the 60-km long Kaletwa (Satpyitpyin) to Myeikwa at Myanmar-India border. Engineers from the M/S IR CON International Ltd from India and Myanmar engineers have completed the initial tasks of the work on construction of the Paletwa-Kaletwa road section, choosing axis and carrying out measurements for the road while the detailed report of the project is on the table of the Indian government.

The cost for the 60-km long section connecting Kaletwa to Indian border town is being calculated by the two countries based on the detailed assessment for the road section.

When completed, the road would become a new trade route between the two countries and would help India to link with the ASEAN Highways network and Asian Highways which pass through Myanmar. Myanmar and India, that both are members of the BIMSTEC, have been promoting trade through the BIMSTEC Highway linking Morahat-Myanmar-India border and Tachilek at Myanmar-Thai border passing through Tamu, Mandalay and Meiktila.

Similarly, Myanmar and Indian governments are coordinating to build a road linking Reef at Myanmar-India border and Tiddim.

The two countries also share the 845-mile long Greater Mekong west corridor with Thailand. Besides, India and Myanmar have owned the Asia Highway No. 1 passing through Myawady-Hpa-an-Thaton-Payagyi-Mandalay-ChaungU-Pale-Gangaw-Kalay-Tamu route which is 1665 km long. Similarly, the trade between India and Myanmar is increasing thanks to the ASEAN Highway No. 1. If new border crossing roads between the two countries emerge, the cross border trade between Myanmar and India will see a rosier picture.
