Iran hedges on nuclear talks with six powers or US

Iran's long-standing political resolution for revived hope that a international climate while setting release of opposition coalition, Moaz Al-Khatib, the top US military officer, said, in an interview broadcast on Sunday that the United States has the capability to stop any Iranian effort to build nuclear weapons, but Iranian "intentions have to be influenced through other means."

Diplomatic efforts to resolve a dispute over Iran's nuclear programme, which Tehran says is peaceful but the West suspects is intended to give Iran the capability to build a nuclear bomb, have been all but deadlocked for years, while Iran has continued to announce advances in the programme. Over 100 flights canceled as snow sweeps Beijing

Beijing, 4 Feb—More than 100 flights were canceled on Sunday by Beijing Capital International Airport (BCIA), the world's second-busiest airport by passenger volume, as snow hit China's capital. Altogether, 113 flights scheduled to depart from or arrive at the airport were canceled as of 7 pm, including 14 international flights, according to flight status information on BCIA's website. Some of the cancellations were due to foul weather in other cities, as many parts of China were influenced by a cold snap. The airport had mobilized more than 800 workers and 230 automobiles to remove ice and snow from planes, runways and parking aprons on Sunday, a BCIA official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

More than 1,500 passengers would have flown around 114,000 passengers from the airport on Sunday as planned originally, the official said.

Light to moderate snow and sleet will fall on northeast and north China from Sunday to Tuesday while heavy rain will sweep central and east China, the China Meteorological Administration has forecasted.

BCIA saw passenger volumes grow 4.2 percent year on year in 2012 to reach 81.8 million passengers, a number second only to Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport in the United States—Xinhua

KIRKUK, 4 Feb—At least 33 people were killed in the Iraqi city of Kirkuk on Sunday when a suicide bomber detonated a truck packed with explosives outside a police headquarters and gunmen disguised as officers tried to storm the compound.

Central bank issues commemorative coins for navigation system

BEIJING, 4 Feb—China’s central bank has issued a set of two commemorative coins marking the official launch of the BeiDou Navigation Satellite System (BDS) last December. The set includes one gold and one silver coin, both of which are fiat money of the People’s Republic of China (PRC), according to the People’s Bank of China (PBOC).

The coins both feature a variety of decorative elements, including the national emblem, images of satellites and binary codes.

The PBOC will issue 30,000 gold coins with a face value of 150 yuan (24.08 US dollars) and 60,000 silver coins with a face value of 10 yuan. The BDS was developed by the government in order to take a share of the GPS-dominated domestic navigation market. The first BDS satellite was launched in 2000. The system went into official use on 27 Dec, 2012 following a trial period that began in 2003.

Intel faces long march to mobile salvation

NEW YORK, 4 Feb—Intel Corp, the world’s biggest chipmaker, has a new front on Thursday in a long and stuttering campaign to get its processors into mobile phones, although it appears to still have a long way to go.

It joined PC maker Acer Inc in Bangkok to unveil the Liquid C1 smart- phone, a $330 device running Google Inc’s Android operating system, which will be launched first in Thailand and then rolled out across Southeast Asia, one of the fastest-growing markets for mobile phones.

“We’ve made a conscious effort to go after these fast growing markets as our first foray into the business,” Mike Bell, who heads Intel’s mobile division said in a telephone interview.

The company’s ninth such device in nine months, the Liquid C1 represents a step forward in a market dominated by the likes of Qualcomm Inc and Nvidia Corp.

“First and foremost they have to prove they can play in this space at all,” said Scott Bicheno, senior analyst at Strategy Analytics. “There’s no obvious technical fault with Intel’s chips. It’s just that the incumbent are very established.”

Intel has little choice but to get into mobile. It saw revenue fall 3 percent in the last quarter on weak sales of PCs, part of a steady decline in revenue growth since 2009.

It has also watched as devices like Apple Inc’s iPad cannibalize sales of PCs. So, in the past year, the company has launched phones with Intel chips in Europe, Africa, Latin America, Russia, India and China.

Some were effectively designed and built by Intel as what it calls “calling cards”, convincing carriers like Orange to brand and offer the phones on their own networks in France and the United Kingdom. Last year, it persuaded Chinese hardware manufacturers like ZTE Corp and Lenovo Group Ltd to build their own phones with Intel chips.—Reuters

MTN says probe dismisses corruption allegations

JOHANNESBURG, 4 Feb—An external committee appointed by African mobile phone group MTN to investigate claims by rival Turkcell of corrupt dealings in Iran has dismissed the allegations as “a fabric of lies, distortions and inventions”.

The committee, chaired by retired British judge Lord Hoffmann, also found nothing to support claims that MTN had promised to get the South African government to supply Iran with defence equipment in exchange for a telecoms operating license.

MTN and its local partner were ordered to return a lucrative license in 2005 to launch a new Iranian mobile phone carrier, but the deal became embroiled in controversy when Turkcell filed a $4.2 billion lawsuit in the United States last year. “Following a critical examination of the evidence, the Hoffmann Committee found that Turkcell’s allegations are a ‘fabric of lies, distortions and inventions’, MTN said in a filing to the Johannesburg Stock Exchange on Friday.

Turkcell declined to comment. The Turkish telecoms company’s allegations come against the backdrop of the Western world’s forceful economic sanctions designed to deter Iran from pursuing its nuclear development programme.

Turkcell claims that MTN won the Iran contract by offering to use its influence in Prorussia to help Teheran to obtain military hardware and sway South Africa’s votes at the International Atomic Energy Agency. Backed by a collection of alleged MTN internal documents including emails, invoices, memos and presentations, Turkcell’s lawsuit accuses the South African company of “a staggering brazen orchestration of corruption”.—Reuters

New US Secretary of State Kerry speaks out about peace

WASHINGTON, 4 Feb—US Secretary of State John Kerry stressed his commitment to promoting Israeli-Palestinian peace on Sunday in telephone calls to the leaders of both sides, the State Department said.

Kerry underscored his personal commitment and that of President Barack Obama to support Israel’s security and to pursue a lasting peace between Israelis and Palestinians.” State Department spokeswoman Victoria Nuland said of Kerry’s conversation with Netanyahu. A spokesman for the Israeli prime minister confirmed that the call took place but provided no details. Netanyahu assumed the responsibility on Saturday of forming a new Israeli government following the 22 January election in which his rightist Likud-Beitenu lost ground but still emerged as the biggest party, with 31 seats in the 120-seat Israeli parliament.

His new government is expected to include a new centrist party headed by former TV personality Yair Lapid, which with 19 seats is the second-largest party in parliament, and the 12-seat far-right pro-settler Bayit Yehudi. —Reuters

Pakistan army battles legacy of mistrust in Taleban heartland

CHAGHMALAI, 4 Feb—In a Pakistan army base high in the mountains on the Afghan frontier, a general explains a strategy for fighting the Taleban he calls simply “WHAM.”

The name has a distinctly bellisce. But the soldiers are learning to fight a new kind of war in a region US President Barack Obama has called the most dangerous on Earth.

“WHAM—winning hearts and minds,” explains the straight-talking General Nazir Butt, in charge of converting the army’s gains on the battlefield into durable security. “The plan is to turn militant sanctuaries into safe havens for the people.”

The term WHAM has been used before, but the focus this time is South Waziristan, an enclave on the Afghan border once the epicentre of a spreading Pakistan Taleban insurgency that shocked the country with its challenge to the authority of the nuclear-armed state.

According to the army narrative, the campaign includes winning over the region’s ethnic Pashtun tribes through dialogue, creating commercial opportunities and providing education in new schools and colleges.

During a three-day trip with the army, Reuters got a rare glimpse not just into the scale of the army’s state-building project in South Waziristan, but also the challenges that lurk in the inhospitable territory.

Several thousand Taleban have been killed or captured this year in military operations, but underneath the WHAM strategy the army is working to transfer power to local councils, accepting that civilians can only drive out militant groups if they feel secure in their own home.

Egypt takes delivery of US fighter jets

CAIRO, 4 Feb.—The United States has delivered four F-16 fighter jets to Egypt, Egypt’s military and a US military delegation said on Sunday, highlighting military links between the two countries despite Egypt’s political upheaval.

A statement from the Army’s Embassy in Cairo said a US delegation and Egypt held a joint ceremony on Sunday to mark the arrival of the jets, the latest of 224 F-16s delivered to Egypt, US aid, which has brought criticism in the US Congress, has given the United States leverage over Egypt for decades and has given its warships preferential access to the Suez Canal.

The US delegation also discussed preparations for October’s Bright Star joint training exercises, the largest of their kind in the region, an Egyptian military source said.

Bright Star, held every two years, was scrapped in 2011 following the political upheaval that saw the ouster of former President Hosni Mubarak and the instalment of the military council as interim leaders until Mohamed Mursi was elected president in June of last year.

Pakistani girl shot by Taleban has successful skull surgery

London, 4 Feb.—A Pakistani schoolgirl shot in the head by the Taleban for advocating girls’ education has undergone successful surgery at a British hospital to reconstruct her skull and help restore lost hearing.

A team of doctors carried out a five-hour operation on Saturday on 15-year-old Malala Yousufzai, who was shot in October and brought to Britain for treatment.

The procedures carried out were cranial reconstruction, aimed at mending parts of her skull with a titanium plate, and a cochlear implant designed to restore hearing on her left side, which was damaged in the attack.

“Both operations were a success and Malala is now recovering in hospital,” said a statement on Sunday from the Queen Elizabeth Hospital in Birmingham, central England, where she is being treated.

The girl’s condition was described as stable and the statement said her medical team were very pleased with the progress she has made. “She is awake and talking to staff and members of her family.”

The attack on Yousufzai, who was shot in the head at point blank range as she left school in the Swat valley, drew widespread international condemnation.

She has become an international symbol of resistance to the Taleban’s efforts to deny women education and other rights, and more than 250,000 people have signed online petitions calling for her to be nominated for a Nobel Peace Prize.

Yousufzai will now continue recuperating at the Queen Elizabeth hospital, which has a special arm for where doctors have treated hundreds of soldiers wounded in conflicts in Afghani.

Syrian troops repel rebels’ attack on gunship

Damascus, 4 Feb.—Armed rebels tried on Sunday to attack a Syrian helicopter gunship in the northeastern province of al-Raqqa when its crew members responded and killed many of the assailants, a pro-government TV said.

The helicopter had to land 15 km away from the al-Thawra military airport in that area due to a mal-function, al-Ekhbaria TV said, adding that the gunmen tried to attack the gunship but they were repelled by the troops.

The TV also reported clashes between the armed rebels and government troops in the vicinity of the central prison of the eastern Province of Deir al-Zour on Sunday, adding that many armed men were killed during the clashes.

Meanwhile, the Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, a London-based activists’ group, said that the local councilor of the city of Aleppo, Ibrahim Azouz, was killed on Saturday by rebel fighters along with his wife and daughter.

The Observatory on Sunday posted on its Face book a video footage purporting to show Azez lying dead in an alley in the Sheikh Saeed District. It also posted a video showing the rebels executed four young men on charges of having connections with the Syrian security forces and the killing of a rebel fighter.

Another video posted by the Observatory showed bodies being pulled out from a destroyed building in what the network said was a result of a bombardment by the Syrian army on al-Ansari al-Sharqi District in Aleppo.

However, pro-Syrian government online news websites said the building was destroyed when armed rebels tried to target a Syrian iran war jet with a rocket that missed the target and slammed the building at al-

Ansari and killed many of its residents. Yet, neither report could be independently verified.

French planes pound Islamist camps in north Mali desert

Paris, 4 Feb.—French warplanes pounded Islamist rebel camps in the far north of Mali on Sunday, military sources said, a day after French President Francois Hollande was hailed as a savior during a visit to the West African country.

Thierry Burkhard, spokesman for the French army in Paris, said the overnight raids targeted logistics bases and training camps used by the al-Qaeda-linked rebels near the town of Tessalit, close to the Algerian border.

“These were important air strikes,” Burkhard told Reuters. Tessalet, some 200 km (125 miles) north of the regional capital Kidal, is one of the main gateways into the Adrar des Ifoghas mountainous where the rebels have sought refuge after fleeing major towns.

France says the rebels are also holding hostage in these mountains seven of its citizens, seized in recent years in the Sahara region. Malian military sources said French and Chad-ians troops had chased members of the Ansar Dine militant group in the region around Kidal on Saturday.

French attack helicopter-

ers and transport planes carrying special forces left the city of Gao to reinforce the French and Chadian contin-

self is under the control of the pro-autonomy MNLA Tuareg rebel group, which occupied it after Ansar Dine fighters fled six days ago.

SARAJEVO, 4 Feb.—Vje-koslav Bevanda, Chairman of the Council of Ministers of Bosnia and Herzegovina (BiH), on Sunday called for regional cooperation before he left for Serbia for an official visit.

Bevanda noted he will talk with his Serbian counterpart to pave the way for future bilateral cooperation, saying good relations with neighboring countries are important to BiH.

“Because we are neighbours. As in our life, neighbours are very important,” he said, adding that warming ties and cooperation between countries of the Western Balkans will make Bosnia stronger.

He said neighbouring countries should solve problems through talks.

“When we talk, we can get rid of some problems...If we do not talk, they will remain unresolved and we will be in the next 20 years continue to talk about unresolved issues.”

No mountain too high

Since the very start of human civilization man has been overcoming various difficulties and challenges while opening more and more ways for greater progress. So, mankind has the power to handle any kind of issue for its survival and advancement. That is why man is the smartest creature on Earth.

Truly, we in Myanmar too have difficulties and challenges we are dealing with in our democratization process. Some of these difficulties and challenges may linger till in the future as there is not a single problem-free country in this world. At the same time our present prospects and opportunities are brighter than ever before. We should not fail to grasp them.

But the question here is how are we going to overcome all our challenges and difficulties, and how are we going to make our dreams come true. In fact, we need a force powerful enough to settle all disputes, solve all problems, overcome all challenges and endure all kinds of hardships. This powerful force will make headway in every facet and for our perpetuation.

Yes we do have this kind of powerful force, and it is not other than the internal strength or in other words the united strength of the whole Union. As a heterogeneous society, our first priority is the unity of all the nationalities of the Union. We may have some disputes or disagreements among our brethren. But this does not mean that we lack unity, as we are finding all possible means, enlisting all available forces and employing all helpful ways in our efforts for national integration because unity is the greatest strength and asset for the Union in braving challenges and advancing with might and main.

So, it is crystal clear how important national unity is. With national unity we have no mountain too high and no country too far.

REGATA AND EQUESTRIAN TOURNEY

The two non-religious royal festivals held by Myanmar kings in the months of Pyatho (September) and Pyatho (January) respectively. These two festivals displayed Myanmar kings military might or main. Myanmar traditional military organizations followed the model of those of Buddha jataka stories. Being a mass land entity with a long coastal line, Myanmar kept both land and water forces for her national defense. “Yevy” or “Kyi” (yuvadhaya) (march) (march with water and land forces) frequently appeared in Myanmar chronology and history. Water forces included war crafts— from simple mobile war canoe to heavy sea galleons and mid and big sized ships with well armed and well armed naval fighters. Yearly display, exercise and recruitment of water forces took place in the way the country–lakes, rivers and shallow seas with the ceremonial and active participation of the king and all male members of the Union. The king in his court in September when the weather was fine and favourable. This Festival was known as “Yevy Khan Taw” (Royal Regatta Festival).

Royal equestrian tourney too closely took place in Pyatho (January) the chilly month of Myanmar’s cold season. Myanmar land forces consisted of four main elements, namely Elephants, Cavalry, Chariotry and Infantry. Elephantry was an army of well-trained elephant fighters, with at least seven men soldiers on each elephant. Elephant compared of well-trained horsemen. Chariotry with more than three soldiers on each chariot trained for speed and lightning attack. Infantry was comprised of regiments of foot soldiers— swords men, spearmen, lancers, archers, gunners and artillery men including speedy messengers. This royal festival was known as “Myin Khan Taw”. Just as in the case of Royal Regatta Festival, Royal Equestrian Tourney was held to display, exercise and recruit, in the spacious open ground facing the Palace or the Htutaw (Royal Privy Council) Building, within the palace city.

The month Pyatho is most belittling for this festival. Pyatho is also known as “Taung” in astrology. The zodiac sign of this month is Makan (a mythical sea monster or dragon) with a prehensile snout). The northernly cold breeze turns the entire environment misty and chilly. Khwyo Nyo (a yellow flower or Clementis), Thazin (orchid) and Gamone (aromatic herbal plant) bloom and send out their fragrances. The Pyatho festival is sprained with myriad of conslations.

In such a pleasant season, the equestrian Tourney which required bravery, skill and physical strength, was held in the courtyard or open ground within the palace city.

Evidences of this festival were found invading and performing arts, history and literature. The Kasongs and dances of Pinya Period (1288-1364 A.D) depicted the activities of the equestrian tourney of the time.

Broadly speaking traditional equestrian festival had two programmes— display, and contest. In display, 37 different styles of horsemanship and 37 different modes of the fighting oxwanes (wovanes, spears and other war weapons) were demonstrated by select equestrian soldiers. Besides archers, and single combats on war elephant, horse or chariot took part in the display.

Court hand and rhyme sters of different history periods transformed these displays in different poetic forms. Maha Dhamma Thinyan, a royal adviser Minister to King Bagiyawda (1819-37 A.D) composed 37 Lotta Verses, 37 music and songs describing 37 modes of horsemanship and 37 ways of playing and performing with horses. For easy memorisation the also composed them in 37 Thanhaub couples.

In contest or Tournament, the players displayed different ways of horse-riding used in war and on battle ground in Myanmar traditional martial arts were competed such as equestrian combat on horse, elephant and chariot, horse race, elephant race and chariot race, skill in using weapons. In some 11th century – 13th century the Tourney was named “Set Thhwin Pwe” or “Set Hoo Pwe” because equestrian combat was organized to hit the centre of the circular target on poles of different heights placed at different distances. Such a skillful competition was honoured with awards of title, gifts, cash and kind by their Majesties. Every participant received a scarf from the King and Khwyo Nyo flower.

King Thibaw (1878-1885 A.D) the last Myanmar king, held the equestrian tournament in 1878 which was probably the last festival held in the courtyard or open ground within the palace city.

In the year 1240 M.E, second equestrian tourney of Pyatho was used by King in accordance with the traditional display of cavalary, elephantry, chariery, archery, and demonstration of princely martial arts as competitive sports. In the past, five circle target posts were set up in straight line in the courtyard to the left side of Meey Nan Palace Buildings. The heights of five circle target posts ranged from 5 cubits, 20 cubits, 25 cubits, 30 cubits to 50 cubits.

To the north side of the Royal Thedaban stair-case in royal position was built. It was decorated with royal emblems and was ready for the event.

On the 3rd waving day of Pyatho, princes, ministers, ministers of the interior, Commander of the army, representatives of the King’s men, and army officers dressed in their respective military uniform rode caparisoned steeds. Each turn with 10 lances participated in the contest. Riding the horse at high speed, each by turn threw a lance at a time, to hit the circular targets on the high post, until all ten had been thrown. Princes dressed in the army uniform of their rank also contested. His Majesty wearing priceless military uniform and gem studded helmet, and chief Queen, and the entire court appeared in the royal pavilion occupying the grand view of the equestrian tourney. Their Majesties awarded the winners each a scarf woven with gold threads, emblems and a bunch of Thazin orchid for every lance that hit the centre of the circular target.

When the tournament was over, officers of Royal Horse [Monjupi Regiment] and Akashat Horse [Assam Regiment] of cavalry and their equerries gave display in their version of war weaponry and horsemanship, such as cutting banana stems, halving lime fruit and water pot in one stroke with swords, lances or lance, while riding at high speed, and different techniques of horse-riding in war and on the battle ground.

For what it’s worth, some of the authors of the days of Myanmar monarchy this game was one of the favourite games Myanmar royalty, nobility and aristocracy played many times of the year. It is in an equestrian game requiring skill in horse-riding and so it was included in the programme of Equestrian Tourney. Its origin was claimed by all countries with horse tradition such as Mongolia, China, Persia, Tibet and central Asiatic countries. They had their version of Gu-Lei (Polo) game.

How and when Gu-Le赢 game came to Myanmar need research. Form what cultural anthropologists and historians say, we may make some surmises. Ethnically speaking, the Tartars of Mongolia. They still have cultural traits, not dissimilar to those of the Mongols. The earliest time when their forefathers migrated gradually from the central Asia, riding horses and driving caravans in guest of new green pasture in Myanmar.

From page 8 their Mongoloid tradition and customs including equestrian game like gu lee were brought into Myanmar. Historians say that Gu-Lee game was mentioned in Myanmar chronicles and literature only in the 15th century. Form Tongoon Period (1480-1509 A.D) to the end of Konbaung Period (1752-1885 A.D) Gu-Lee was the popular game among ruling class.

Court bard composed different forms of verse describing this game in association with equestrian festival. The virtuous ratu-poems compose of Tongoon Period Vicemery King Nat Shin Naung composed more than 100 ratu-poems about Gu-Lee games he played with his princely mates. In Myanmar traditional performing arts Gu-Lee game was sung, and mimed in dance. Thirty seven songs of propitiation for thirty seven nat-spirits have description of Gu-Lee game. In the dance styles of a female inaugural dancer in Myamar a dramatric performance are mimetic movements of horse-riding and playing Gu-Lee game. In Inwa Period of Myanmar history, at the court of King Shoe Nan Kyaw Shin, there was a high-ranking knight named Shoe Nave Aha who was an excellent Gu-Lee Player. Legend has it that when he became Nat spirit after his violent death, songs were sung in praise of his mastery of Gu-Lee game. His statues have a Gu-Lee stick in one hand and a Gu-Lee ball in the other. These evidences show that Myanmar already had Gu-Lee game long before the British introduced it as polo game to Myanmar.

Royal regalia and equestrian tourney ceased in the colonial period though boat races were held at local pagoda festivals. The British introduced their horse races, building race courses at Yangon and Mandalay for revenue and fundraising many Myanmar wealthy men were ruined due to belting at horse races. New generations of Myanmar people learnt about these festival only from school textbooks.

Joint efforts of the Government and the public how revived these traditional monthly festivals to maintain Myanmar cultural heritage. In Mandalay such festivals chairmen deputy ministers, departmental heads, officials and cultural delegate groups from regions and states.

Cuba elects new national, local parliaments

Havana, 4 Feb—Over 8.5 million Cubans on Sunday started to cast their votes for the picking of nearly 1,900 members of the country’s new national and provincial legislatures.

They are expected to elect 612 National Assembly members from an equal number of candidates, and select nearly 1,270 delegates to the 15 provincial people’s power assemblies, or the local legislatures, for a five-year period.

A total of 29,942 polling stations were set up across the island nation and are running from 7 am (1200 GMT) to 6 pm (2000 GMT) on Sunday. The elections involve 147,737 electoral commissions of various constituencies and over 225,000 election offtices, energy, 150,000 working in the polling stations.

According to the Cuban constitution, candidates for the national and provincial legislatures must gain more than 50 per cent of all valid votes to get elected.

Cuba’s Electoral Act also stipulates that within 45 days after the National Assembly elections, the new Assembly should hold an inaugural meeting and appoint a 31-member Council of State, including its president, for a term of five years.

Incumbent President Raul Castro is expected to secure a second term at the upcoming meeting. But it would also be his last due to a 10-year limit for anyone to hold government offices introduced in 2011 by the ruling Cuban Communist Party.

Raul Castro, 81, is running for the new National Assembly as a candidate representing the municipality of ‘Second Front’ in the eastern province of Santiago de Cuba. JOHANNESBURG, 4 Feb—South Africa’s International Relations and Cooperation Minister Maite Nkoana-Mashabane on Sunday met with Russia’s Minister of Natural Resources and Environment Sergey Donskoy in Pretoria to explore ways of enhancing cooperation in various fields.

Donskoy is in South Africa to attend a meeting of South Africa-Russia Intergovernmental Committee on Trade and Economic Cooperation (ITEC), according to the South African Government Communication and Information System (GCIS).

The ITEC is a bilateral cooperation mechanism between South Africa and Russia that meets annually in order to strengthen mutually beneficial economic, commercial and social relations as well as technical cooperation between the two countries.

The meeting presents an opportunity for the ministers to follow-up on decisions taken during the 11th ITEC meeting held in Moscow in November last year.

The ministers are also expected to finalize priority projects and agreements that will be concluded during President Vladimir Putin’s official visit to South Africa in March.

The agreements under consideration are in the fields of agriculture, education, energy, justice, minerals resources, science and technology, and transport.

Donskoy’s visit came as Russia is showing growing interest in the continent’s mining industry. Russian mining companies will take part in this year’s Investing in African Mining Indaba (conference) scheduled for February 4 to 7 in Cape Town, organizers said.

India proposes major developing countries be labelled “re-emerging powers”

NEW DELHI, 4 Feb— India has proposed that the India, China and other major developing nations be labelled “re-emerging powers” rather than “emerging powers, taking into consideration of their historical role they played in the past, according to local daily The Hindu on Sunday.

Indian National Security Adviser Shivshankar Menon told the Munich Security Conference on Saturday that the Western construct of labeling India, China and other developing countries as “emerging nations” did not do justice to their history, according to the newspaper.

Speaking at the first-ever special session on “rising powers and global governance” at the Munich conference, Menon felt he was not sure if this label fitted the description of newly rising economic powers like China and India.

He said some people feel these countries are in the process of restoring the historical norm in the international power structure.

“Re-emerging powers would be less condescending,” he suggested.

He said the notion was largely inspired by Western history that the re-emergence of these countries on the global stage would lead to conflict and dissonance in the global order.

Such concepts were a result of the European experience with the Treaty of Westphalia, as four out of five instances of reordering of the balance of power had involved conflicts of major proportions. This led to the assumption that the rest of the world will follow a similar course, he said.

Colombo, 4 Feb — The Sri Lankan government on Sunday accused four members of the International Bar Association (IBA) of attempting to violate the visa rules of the island nation.

A statement by the External Affairs Ministry said that following the detection of inaccurate information contained in the visa applications of the four member delegation representing IBA, which had unilaterally scheduled a visit to Sri Lanka, the government was constrained to withdraw visas for the four applicants.

In a statement issued on Friday, IBA said it was forced to postpone a visit to Sri Lanka after the visas of its members had been revoked.

The visit was to investigate the imprisonment and subsequent removal of former Sri Lankan Chief Justice Shirani Bandaranayake.

“It may be noted that the Business Visa category which had been applied for in the case of 3 persons were issued on the basis of the purpose of the visit being reflected as Conference, Workshops and Seminars, while the 4th person had been issued a gratis visa and the purpose of the visit being cited as Private. However it came to light that the stated purpose for the visit in the applications was not in conformity with the actual nature of the visit,” the Sri Lankan External Affairs Ministry said.

Considering the prestigious repatriation of the IBA, the External Affairs Ministry said it would be expected that the organization would scrupulously adhere to the rules and regulations governing a country’s visa regime.

The External Affairs Ministry said that in keeping with the Government of Sri Lanka’s interest in transparency, bona-fide applications for visits of this nature are processed with objectivity.

However, it said that in keeping with universal practice, appropriate action would be taken in the event there is a misrepresentation of information by a visa applicant.

Year of the Snake may smile on Psy, but health woes could bite

TAIPEI, 4 Feb—The coming Lunar Year of the Snake is likely to smile on South Korean rapper Psy with increased prosperity, but he will need to leave Korea to make money and could risk exhaustion. As Chinese communities around the globe prepare for the Lunar New Year on 1 February, which ushered in the Year of the Snake, a Taiwanese fortune teller predicted a mixed bag of luck for famous "snake" people around the world. Psy, who shot to global fame last year with "Gangnam Style," and was born in 1977, is likely to make even more money this year if he continues to travel around the world, though he also faces a few challenges, said fortune teller Chan Wei-chung. "First, he must take care of his health. Second, he must make good judgments. Third, his career will be helped by people of prominence—but most importantly, he will need to leave Korea and run around the world," Chan told Reuters.

He will work and receive rewards, but he must be careful not to exhaust himself and become ill, because it could bring disaster to his year of the snake."—Reuters

As Chinese communities continued to celebrate the 65th annual Directors Guild of America on Saturday for the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, it was born in 1999. "What an incredible year," he said. "I have nothing but respect for the Academy," Affleck said after collecting his first DGA award. The Hollywood star, a producer of "Argo," said he was thrilled the film was nominated for the Oscars' Best Picture award. "You are not entitled to win anything," he said.

"Argo" has picked up the three top awards from the industry's guild, whose members are also often members of the Academy. Last weekend, the film was the victor at both the Producers Guild and the Screen Actors Guild awards, leaving Steven Spielberg's Civil War-era epic "Lincoln" in its wake. Affleck also won Best Director at the Golden Globes while "Argo" won Best Drama. The Oscars will be held on 24 February.

On Saturday, Affleck hosted four directors who had all previously won the top DGA honour and gone on to win the Best Director Oscar. "It has been a particularly tough awards season for Spielberg, nominated by the DGA for the 11th time with "Lincoln,"" a two-time winner for "Schindler's List" in 1994 and "Saving Private Ryan" in 1999. Los Angeles, 4 Feb

Actor-turned-filmmaker Ben Affleck won the top honour from his peers at the Directors Guild of America on Saturday for the movie "Argo," cementing the Iran hostage drama's frontrunner status for the Oscars. The Hollywood directors' recognition for Affleck, however, is an awkward result for the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences, which failed to nominate him for Best Director in what is considered one of the biggest snubs of this year's Oscars. Since 1948, there have been only six occasions when the Directors Guild of America (DGA) winner has not gone on to win the Oscar for Best Director. "I have nothing but respect for the Academy," Affleck said after collecting his first DGA award. The Hollywood star, a producer of "Argo," said he was thrilled the film was nominated for the Oscars' Best Picture award. "You are not entitled to win anything," he said.

Barca take point from tricky Valencia trip

MADRID, 4 Feb — FC Barcelona dropped just their sixth and seventh points of the season as they were held to a 1-1 draw in Valencia on Sunday night. Although some may be disappointed by the result the fact is that Barca did well to take a valuable point in one of their most difficult games remaining this season, which came on the back of a draining match in midweek. Either side could have won in a game where both teams made a series of good saves to stop the final score being higher. Barcelona had the best of the early exchanges in the first half, but were unable to create clear-cut chances, defender Gerard Pique going closer. In a fast and furious 45 min period, Valencia took the lead after 33 minutes through Ever Banega who drilled home a loose ball from the edge of the Barcelona area. The Argentinian was criticized for arriving late at training at the end of the week, but was in the right place at the right time to fire past Victor Valdes after Barca failed to clear a cross into the area.

Leo Messi equalized from the penalty spot just six minutes later after Joao Pereira clearly caught Pedro Rodriguez. Messi drilled the ball into the top corner of the net to give Guita no chance. As the ball drew to a conclusion, Valdes saved well from Jose Guanado, who tried his luck from distance. Barca had the first chance in the second half as Messi worked his magic to set up Cesc Fabrigas, who was unlucky to see his shot hit the base of the Valencia post. Barca had played a tough Copa del Rey semi-final first leg away to Real Madrid on Wednesday night and were not at their fluid best and struggled to break down a packed Valencia midfield, although Messi put a dangerous low cross into the Valencia area just after the hour. — Xinhua
