Ops Bersepadu 6p in Malaysia doesn’t mean Myanmars only

Nay Pyi Taw, 4 Sept—A total of 2400 illegal migrant workers have been arrested by Malaysia authorities in “Ops Bersepadu 6p” nationwide operation since 1 September, as part of its nation-wide crackdown on illegal workers. As many as 2,400 detainees were among approximately 8,100 people examined by authorities in 40 operations.

Indonesia nationals made up the biggest number illegal immigrants arrested accounting for 717, followed by Myanmar nationals with 555, Bangladesh nationals with 387, Nepal nationals with 229. The others nabbed included those from Cambodia, Vietnam, India, Pakistan, the Philippines, China, Nigeria and Thailand.

Malaysian Home Minister Datuk Seri Dr Ahmad Zahid Hamidi said that the Ministry would continue to work with the diplomatic missions of the countries which are a source of immigrant workers to facilitate the issuing of permits. He gives the assurance that permits will be issued for applications that are in order. He urged people not to use the services of middle-men but go directly to the 6p One-Stop Centres.

In first phase of the operation that lasts till December, 2013, the arrests were mainly made in construction sites, commercial hubs, departmental stores, shops and traffic gates.

Ops Bersepadu 6p is aimed at cracking down on those who registered under the Illegal Immigrant Comprehensive Settlement Programme in 2011 but did not turn up for further processing, such as legalisation or voluntary repatriation.

During the registration that ended in October 2011, about 1.3 million of the estimated two million undocumented foreigners registered themselves with the Immigration Department.

Of them, 500,000 applications for legalisation were processed and 330,000 illegals were repatriated.

The nation-wide Ops Bersepadu 6p programme is not targeting Myanmar nationals only but the followed-up programme of Ops Bersepadu 6p to trace, arrest, prosecute and extradite all illegal foreigners.

Myanmar Embassy will make coordination with authorities concerned to scrutinize Myanmar detainees and then Myanmar citizens will be sent back to Myanmar.

Thursday, 5 September, 2013
BERLIN, 4 Sept—Angela Merkel urged Germans on Tuesday to re-elect her “clever” government, saying it would shield their businesses and jobs from tax hikes by the centre-left.

The chancellor, whose bid for a third term on 22 September is a close contest despite her popularity, said Peer Steinbrueck would ruin her progress on cutting unemployment and cementing economic recovery if his Social Democrats (SPD) came to power.

“These are all successes of our citizens, employers and entrepreneurs—but also the result of clever political leadership,” 59-year-old Merkel told the Bundestag lower house of parliament in a debate on “The Situation in Germany”.

Seizing on the SPD and Greens’ economic ideas as a weapon for the final stage of the campaign, she said higher taxes on top incomes, wealth and inheritance would “put jobs at risk and German’s nata the Mittelstand”, referring to the family-owned firms that form the backbone of Europe’s biggest economy.

“What citizens must decide on 22 September is nothing more and nothing less than whether we continue on the path of success or see gross mistakes that will destroy our success,” she said.

Steinbrueck, a 66-year-old former finance minister, has a reputation for arrogance which contrasts with the chancellor’s understated style - part of her “play its role in stabilizing Syria.”

Obama wins backing for Syria strike from key figures in Congress

WASHINGTON/BEIRUT, 4 Sept—President Barack Obama won the backing of key figures in the US Congress, including Republicans, in his call for limited US strikes on Syria to punish President Bashar al-Assad for his suspected use of chemical weapons against civilians.

Speaking after the United Nations said two million Syrians had fled a conflict that posed the greatest threat to world peace since the Vietnam war, Obama said the United States also has a broader plan to help rebels defeat Assad’s forces.

In remarks that appeared to question the legality of US plans to strike Syria without UN backing, Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon said the use of force is only legal when it is in self-defence or with Security Council authorization.

If UN inspectors confirm the use of chemical weapons in Syria, the Security Council, which has been deadlocked on the 2-1/2-year Syrian civil war, should overcome its differences and take action, Ban said.

Having started friends and foes alike by delaying a punitive attack on Assad until Congress reconvenes and agrees, Obama met congressional leaders at the White House to urge a prompt decision and assure them it did not mean another long war like Iraq or Afghanistan.

Top US diplomat on E Asia to embark on 1st Asian tour

WASHINGTON, 4 Sept—Daniel Russel, assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs, will visit South Korea, Japan, Brunei, Indonesia and China from 5 to 14 Sept, the US State Department said on Tuesday.

On his first Asian tour since assuming the post in July, Russel is scheduled to meet with senior government officials of these countries to discuss bilateral cooperation and regional issues.

It is believed that Russel will seek to secure support for a possible US strike against the Syrian government over its alleged use of chemical weapons.

Romanians continue protest against gold mine

Bucharest, 4 Sept—Roughly 1,000 people gathered in Romania’s capital late on Tuesday for a third day of protests against plans to start an open-cast gold mine in the small Carpathian town of Rosia Montana.

The catalyst for the protests, which started on Sunday when thousands of people took to the streets in cities across Romania, was a move by the leftist government last week to approve a draft bill allowing the project to go ahead.

The bill, which needs parliament’s approval to take effect, allows Canada’s Gabriel Resources Ltd to mine 314 tonnes of gold and 1,500 tonnes of silver through its local arm, Rosia Montana Gold Corporation (RMGC) in which the Romanian state also holds a minority stake.

The bill also gives the mine “special national interest” status, which will make it easier for RMGC to expropriate the few locals who oppose the project and who own land needed for the mine, a move critics have said is unconstitutional. On Tuesday, protesters blocked the Calea Victoriei (Victory Avenue) in downtown Bucharest, banging plastic bottles on the pavement and setting up tents. Riot police surrounded them. The protests, which have been promoted through social media, have so far been largely peaceful.

“Fundamental laws are being broken for a foreign corporation to start operation,” said Vladimir Borut, a 27-year-old independent publicist and translator who has attended all the protests. “We have very few means of expression left.” Borut said protesters planned on writing their parliamentary asking them to reject the bill.

Abe’s special envoy to visit Iran, discuss Syria

Tokyo, 4 Sept—Former Foreign Minister Taro Asahiyo Komura will visit Iran as a special envoy of Prime Minister Shinzo Abe on the weekend and hold talks with Iranian President Hassan Rouhani on issues including the Syrian crisis, Japanese officials said on Wednesday.

Komura, vice president of Japan’s Liberal Democratic Party, is also expected to discuss bilateral relations and other international issues including Iran’s nuclear programme and the Iran nuclear talks during his two-day visit for talks with the new president and other Iranian officials.

With Iran being one of the principal supporters of the Syrian government of President Bashar al-Assad, which is suspected of using chemical weapons against civilians, Komura told reporters in Tokyo that he intends to tell Teheran that it should “play its role in stabilizing Syria.”

New iPhone expected as Apple asks media to 10 September event

SAN FRANCISCO, 4 Sept — Apple Inc on Tuesday sent official invitations to a 10 September event at which it is expected to unveil the latest version of the iPhone, possibly in colors other than its trademark black and white. “This should brighten everyone’s day,” the typically cryptic invitation read, under a graphic depicting pastel-coloured circles surrounding a stark white Apple logo.

The company, which is making a focused effort to win over consumers in Asia where rivals Samsung Electronics Co Ltd and other Android manufacturers dominate, said in the invitation it will host a breakfast and presentation at its Cupertino, California headquarters. The company did not specify as to what the presentation will be about. But supply chain sources told Reuters in June that Apple is expected to launch two new models this year — widely referred to as the iPhone 5S — with new fingerprint technology as well as a cheaper version in plastic casing. Apple plans to dress up the phone in a range of five or six colours to differentiate it from the more expensive model that has traditionally come only in black and white, according to the sources.

Analysts say the company needs a cheaper phone to drive faster growth in markets like China and India, and to counter Samsung’s edge in having a wide range of devices at varying prices. Growth in Asian markets is seen as key for smartphone makers. China’s smartphone market, for example, is set to grow 48 percent this year, outpacing the global increase of 31 percent, according to industry forecasts. — Reuters

Floating hospital saves sea turtles

HAIKOU, 4 Sept — In Xincun Port, Lingshui County in south China’s Hainan Province, there is a floating fishing village. Local residents seldom set foot on land, and wooden cabins set up on rows of fish rafts. In this village on the sea, there stands one special cabin. The whitewashed structure is a hospital for rescued sea turtles, an endangered species that is under state protection in China. Frederick C. Yeh, a 32-year-old Chinese-American, is the founder of the hospital. Yeh was planning on becoming a doctor when he graduated from medical school at Johns Hopkins University in the United States in 2005. But when he returned to his childhood home in Hainan in 2007, Yeh discovered that sea turtles were sold for meat and shells in local markets. “We have plenty of food that’s available to us, but these animals are endangered, and there are not many left,” he said. “If we keep on eating them, eventually they will be extinct.”

Shocked, Yeh then changed his life plan and decided to devote himself to protecting the threatened species, Chelonia. In 2008, Yeh established Sea Turtle 911, a non-profit organization rescuing sea turtles across coastal regions in Hainan. To better protect the ancient animals, Yeh founded the floating hospital in Xincun one year later to work with local law enforcement agencies and improve awareness of sea turtle conservation among local fishermen. There are currently 14 “patients” being treated at the floating hospital. Among them is a Hawksbill turtle that lost one of its limbs, a green turtle with a sunken shell, and many other injured or sick olive ridley sea turtles.

To save more sea turtles, Yeh and his volunteers travel around Hainan to treat and tend to injured animals. Over the past four years, Yeh and the volunteers have saved more than 150 turtles, about 100 of which have been released back into the sea.

Why Nokia didn’t sell its patents to Microsoft

SAN FRANCISCO, 4 Sept — Nokia may have sold its handset business to Microsoft Corp, but by hanging on to its valuable patent portfolio, the Finnish company could also get a big future payoff at the expense of Android phone makers. Microsoft agreed on Tuesday to pay 3.79 billion euros ($5 billion) for Nokia’s patents, preferred instead of a 10-year license for Nokia’s patents, which it is expected to unveil this week.

If it were to exercise the right to, in effect, make use of Nokia’s inventions, Microsoft could re-examine its decision to acquire the unit later this year. “This involves the transfer or ownership of the patents itself,” Microsoft counsel Brad Smith said on Tuesday. “It doesn’t involve the transfer or ownership of the patents itself. Until now, Nokia has not widely licensed many of its patents, preferring instead to use them to protect its handset business against competitors, Nokia spokesman Mark Durrand said in an email to Reuters. “Once we no longer have our own mobile devices business, following the close of the (Microsoft) transaction, we would be able to explore licensing some of those technologies,” he added.

Once the world’s dominant handset maker, Nokia has failed to close a huge lead opened up by Apple Inc and Samsung Electronics Co Ltd in the highly competitive market for smartphones. It will now concentrate on its networking equipment unit, navigation business and technology patents. The Finnish company has long been a savvy player in the intellectual property market. It sued Apple in 2009 and then reached a licensing deal with the iPhone maker. The terms were not disclosed, but the deal was believed to be worth hundreds of millions of dollars to Nokia.

For Microsoft, taking a license for Nokia’s patents rather than buying them serves a strategic objective as well. Microsoft has already convinced about 20 Android manufacturers to pay patent royalties as part of its effort to raise the cost of Google Inc’s mobile operating system. Now, Nokia remains free to go after the same Android manufacturers for royalties as well, although Nokia spokesman Durrand did not reveal specific targets. “It wouldn’t surprise me at all to see litigation filed by Nokia in coming months,” said one senior IP executive who has dealt with both companies, but did not want to be identified to maintain those relations.

Had Microsoft bought Nokia’s patents outright, the pincer movement against Android likely would have been precluded, the executive said. Nokia also gave Microsoft the option to convert the 10-year agreement to a perpetual license, which Smith said Microsoft would exercise. The market for high quality mobile patents, such as Nokia’s, could be quite strong judging by past deals. Google, for instance, paid $12.5 billion in 2011 for Motorola Mobility, a transaction largely driven by the patent value. — Reuters

Planned LinkedIn $1 billion stock offer is for expansion, products

SAN FRANCISCO, 4 Sept — LinkedIn Corp said on Tuesday it will sell an additional $1 billion of its Class A common stock as the Internet company moves to bolster product development and perhaps make more acquisitions. LinkedIn shares, which have more than doubled this year, were down 2.3 percent at $240.49 in after hours trading on Tuesday following its announcement about the secondary share offering. The company, which had roughly $900 million in cash and short-term securities at the end of June, did not specify when the secondary offering would take place.

The company said it planned to use the proceeds for corporate purposes, including further expansion of its products and services, and corporate acquisitions. — Reuters

Microsoft agreed on Tuesday to pay 3.79 billion euros ($5 billion) for Nokia’s handset business and another 1.65 billion euros for a 10-year license for Nokia’s patents, considered some of the highest-quality patents in the mobile market. “Now, Nokia remains free to go after the same Android manufacturers for royalties as well, although Nokia spokesman Durrand did not reveal specific targets,” said one senior IP executive who has dealt with both companies, but did not want to be identified to maintain those relations.

CDC says one in four US heart disease deaths could be prevented

A woman disposes a cigarette in Los Angeles, California, on 31 May, 2012.—REUTERS

Chicago, 4 Sept—A bout one in four US deaths from heart disease could be avoided with better prevention efforts and treatment, according to a first-of-its-kind report from the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention released on Tuesday. As many as 200,000 Americans might have been spared an early death from a heart attack or stroke if they had received screening and treatment for preventable causes of heart disease such as high blood pressure, high cholesterol, obesity and smoking, the report found.

Heart disease is the leading killer in the United States, accounting for nearly 800,000 deaths a year—about 30 percent of all US deaths. The report looked at preventable deaths from heart disease and stroke defined as those that occurred in people under age 75 that could have been prevented by more effective public health measures, lifestyle changes or medical care.

While the CDC has long tracked deaths from heart disease, it never previously issued a report estimating how many such deaths could be prevented. In 2010, the states with the highest avoidable death rates were located primarily in the South, including Mississippi, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Louisiana, the report stated. The states with the lowest rates were Minnesota, Utah, Colorado, Connecticut and New Hampshire, according to the report.

CDC officials said that the 2014 launch of key elements of the US healthcare law signed by President Barack Obama in 2010 could help reduce avoidable deaths. The law is intended to provide better access to treatment for millions of uninsured Americans and routine coverage for preventable screenings. “Beginning in October, the health insurance marketplaces will provide a new way for people to get health insurance so more patients have access to quality health insurance and coverage beginning as early as January 2014,” CDC Director Tom Frieden told a conference call with reporters.

Researchers say diabetes in China may reach “alert level”

Washington, 4 Sept—Diabetes in China may have reached “an alert level,” with one in 10 adults having the disease while most patients are unaware of their condition, Chinese researchers said on Tuesday. The researchers warned in the Journal of the American Medical Association that China could face “a major epidemic of diabetes-related complications,” including cardiovascular disease, stroke and chronic kidney disease, in the near future without an effective national intervention.

Nearly 12 percent of Chinese adults have diabetes, while about 50 percent are at the risk of developing the disease, which means up to 113.9 million Chinese adults are diabetic and another 493.4 million are estimated to be pre-diabetic, according to the new study. “The prevalence of diabetes in the Chinese adult population has surpassed that of India and is now close to that of the United States,” said lead researcher Guang Ning, vice president of Ruijin Hospital, affiliated with the Shanghai Jiaotong University Medical School.

“A slight increase in the prevalence of diabetes in Chinese adults has been observed in recent years,” said Dr. Xinxin Liu, director of the China National Center for Chronic Disease Prevention and Control. “However, there has been no significant increase in death rates from diabetes, which could be due to improvements in treatment and control of diabetes.”

According to the report, the prevalence was highest among those aged 40 to 49 years and fell sharply thereafter. The prevalence was also higher among men than women, with 12.1 percent of men and 11.0 percent of women having diabetes. The prevalence was also higher among men than women, with 12.1 percent of men and 11.0 percent of women having diabetes. The prevalence was also higher among men than women, with 12.1 percent of men and 11.0 percent of women having diabetes. The prevalence was also higher among men than women, with 12.1 percent of men and 11.0 percent of women having diabetes. The prevalence was also higher among men than women, with 12.1 percent of men and 11.0 percent of women having diabetes.

The researchers found that the prevalence of diabetes among Chinese men was 12.1 percent and among women was 11.0 percent and that the disease is more common among urban residents than rural residents in both men and women. Furthermore, diabetes prevalence increased with age in both men and women, and men younger than 50 years had a higher prevalence, whereas women older than 60 years had a higher prevalence, said the estimated prevalence of prediabetes was 50.1 percent in Chinese adults: 52.1 percent in men and 48.1 percent in women. Rural residents had slightly higher prevalence of prediabetes than their urban counterparts, especially in men.

Additionally, prediabetes was more prevalent in economically underdeveloped regions, as well as in overweight and obese persons. The researchers also found that the proportion of patients with diabetes who were aware of their condition was 30.1 percent of the overall population. Only 25.8 percent of overall patients with diabetes were treated for this condition, and only 39.7 percent of those treated had adequate glycosylated hemoglobin control, they said. “As the country’s economy expanded rapidly over the last three decades, the standards of living and lifestyle styles of ordinary Chinese have changed substantially,” said Dr. Ning.

With increased high-calorie, high-fat, high-sugar and high-sodium diets, decreased physical activity and more sedentary lifestyle styles, all factors that could lead to weight gain, diabetes and other chronic diseases are now reaching epidemic proportions in China, he said. According to the researchers, the prevalence of diabetes was less than 1 percent in the Chinese population in 1980.

Ford’s Vignale to join European upmarket car chase

Frankfurt, 4 Sept—Ford (FN) has drawn on the latest European design trends with its new luxury concept car, tempering the driver with a quilted cream-colored Nappa leather interior to complement its chrome and mocha-hued bodywork. The Vignale, which makes its first public appearance at the Frankfurt auto show next week and launches in Europe early in 2015, is the latest attempt by a mass-market carmaker to woo affluent customers and make more money, Ford’s European sales chief Roelant de Waard says of the new premium line. The term “Vignale” is targeting the market for mid-size aspirational models such as the BMW (BMW.DE) 3 series Audi (VWG.p.DE) A4 and Mercedes (DAIGN.DE) C-Class.

“Vignale is a promising omen. It has a very strong upmarket appeal which we believe is needed,” said Ford’s European sales chief Roelant de Waard. “That’s why we’re looking for Ford customers who believe they need to go somewhere else as they progress in their careers and want to provide better access to quality health insurance and coverage beginning as early as January 2014,” CDC Director Tom Frieden told a conference call with reporters.

Australia economy marks 22 years of growth in Q2

Sydney, 4 Sept—Australia’s economy grew modestly in the last quarter as modest gains in consumer and government spending offset a very flat performance in business investment. The Australian Bureau of Statistics reported gross domestic product (GDP) rose 0.6 percent in the second quarter, from the previous quarter when it rose 0.5 percent. That was enough to send the local dollar higher as there had been fears the report would be weaker. “The result marked 22 years since the country last suffered a recession, but still underestimated,” Crucially, there are few signs as yet that business and consumer spending is ready to take over from mining investment as a growth engine. “Overall it tells us that the economy is continuing to grow but at a very subdued rate and it’s not strong enough to push employment or inflation up,” said Shane Oliver, chief economist at AMP Capital Investors. “We’re still far from the collapse that many had feared, but we’re still looking for a replacement for mining investment as a driver for growth.”

The Reserve Bank of Australia (RBA) has been doing its part by cutting interest rates to a record low of 2.5 percent last month. Many analysts think it will likely have to ease again in coming months. “AU/INT-Financial markets, on the other hand, have pared back expectations for any more easing, in part because of brighter signs in the global economy and especially China,” the latest Australian National University report said. Kerry opens door to ‘boots on ground’ in Syria, then slams it shut

WASHINGTON, 4 Sept — Secretary of State John Kerry briefly opened the door on Tuesday to authorizing US ground troops in Syria, but quickly slammed it shut and told Congress that any resolution approving military force would prohibit “boots on the ground.”

The exchange during the first public hearing in Congress on possible military action in Syria highlighted the worries of many lawmakers about authorizing US military strikes to punish the Syrian government for using chemical weapons on civilians.

Kerry initially told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee he would prefer not to bar the use of ground troops in Syria to preserve President Barack Obama’s options if Syria “imploded” or there was a threat of chemical weapons being obtained by extremists.

“I don’t want to take off the table an option that would not be available to a president of the United States to secure our country,” Kerry told the committee.

But when Senator Bob Corker of Tennessee, the top Republican on the committee, told Kerry he didn’t find that a very appropriate response regarding boots on the ground,” Kerry quickly, and repeatedly, backtracked.

Kerry said he was simply “thinking out loud” and raising a hypothetical situation, but he did not want to leave the door open to sending ground troops to Syria.

“No, I haven’t shut the door,” Kerry said. “The answer is, whatever prohibition clarifies it to Congress or the American people, there will not be American boots on the ground with respect to the civil war.”

The exchange came as Kerry, Secretary of Defence Chuck Hagel and General Martin Dempsey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, visited Capitol Hill as part of the administration’s push to persuade Congress to back Obama’s plan to launch limited strikes on Syria for its alleged use of chemical weapons last month.

Egypt’s president says roadmap on track as Islamists protest

CAIRO, 4 Sept — Egypt’s interim president, Adly Mansour, said on Tuesday that a plan for a return to civilian government after the army’s removal of Islamist President Mohamed Mursi was on track despite “challenges” and that emergency law should be lifted soon.

His comments were broadcast just after thousands of Islamists of the Muslim Brotherhood and supporters of ousted President Mohamed Mursi stage a protest along a highway in the southern suburb of Maadi, trying to mark exactly two months since Mursi was toppled.

The exchange during a televised interview was aired, marking the anniversary of the establishment of the nearly 13 million-member group has taken some of the sting out of the anti-government protest camp on 14 August, during a traffic jam as members show the “Rabaa” or “four” gesture, in reference to the police clearing of Rabaa al-Adawiya protest camp on 14 August, during a traffic jam as members of the Muslim Brotherhood and supporters of ousted Egyptian President Mohamed Mursi stage a protest along a highway in the southern suburb of Maadi, on 3 Sept, 2013.— Reuters

the streets in towns and cities across Egypt on Tuesday evening to denounce the new military-backed rulers and demand Mursi’s return — their second show of mass support in four days. The interim government has launched a various crackdown on Mursi’s Muslim Brotherhood since topping Egypt’s first freely elected president on 3 July, day had not been easy, but “terrorism and the vicious war that was being waged by some of the extremists made it difficult.”

If a “gradual improvement in security” continued, the state of emergency should end as planned in mid-September, he said. Mansour also said a “road map” back to democratic rule, under which the constitution is to be amended, followed by parliamentary and presidential elections early next year, remained on track: “God willing, we will commit ourselves to the timeframe in the coming stages.” “There are no alterations on the priorities of the plan (road map), even though there are some challenges facing us.”

Although the army-backed interim government has begun to revise the political security apparatus that was swelled, but not dismantled, after the 2011 revolt that overthrew Hosni Mubarak, Mansour said there would be no return to the days of political police.

“The role of the security apparatus of Egypt is now limited to protecting security and protecting the people... In terms of political issues, there is no longer a role in that. That was a period that Egypt passed through and it will not return... I assure you of that.”

Although the crackdown on the Brotherhood has taken some of the sting out of the anti-government protests, the well organized million-member group has shown it can still mobilize supporters nationwide.

Shortly before the interview was aired, marchers turned out in cities in the Nile Delta, in Upper Egypt, along the Suez Canal, as well as in the capital, to mark exactly two months since Mursi was toppled.

Zimbabwe suffers worst food shortages in 4 years

HARARE, 4 Sept — Zimbabwe is bracing for the worst food shortages in four years that one in every four Zimbabweans in rural areas are expected to need food support, a UN agency said on Tuesday.

Citing a new study, the UN World Food Programme (WFP) said an estimated 2.2 million people are to hit by hunger before next year’s harvest season, the direst situation since early 2009 when about half of the nearly 13 million population needed food aid.

The current high levels of food insecurity are being attributed to various factors including adverse weather conditions, the unavailability and high cost of agricultural inputs such as seeds and fertilizers and projected high cereal prices due to the poor maize harvest.

The UN agency monitoring in rural markets has found grain prices 15 percent higher than this time last year.

“Many districts, particularly in the south, har- vested very little and people are already trying to stretch out their dwindling food stocks,” said WFP Country Director Sory Ouane. “Ouane said the WFP and its partners will provide regionally — procured cereals as well as imported vegetable oil and pulses. Distributions will be gradu- ally scaled up from October until harvest time in March next year.

Nyaunglebin, 4 Sept—As departments concerned are striving for ensuring sustainability of Inlay Lake and greening its 20 miles radius areas, Irrigation Department of Shan State South has dredged 1.9 million saddles of sand and silt from the lake.

In implementing the five-year plan, the Irrigation Department has accomplished fourth years of the third five-year plan.

“The Irrigation Department is carrying out construction of retaining walls and eight tasks including clearing of weeds in the lake,” said Assistant Director U Soe Aung of Irrigation Department in Nyaungshwe.

Lesser rain falls and silting of the creeks that flow into the lake are the basic root causes for silting the lake. At present, Irrigation Department dredges the silt with the use of heavy machinery.

Inlay Lake was about 104 square miles in the past, but it is now 63 square miles only. A report of Irrigation Department of Shan State (South) stated that root cause of silting the lake is due to silt and sand flowing into the lake and cultivation of crops around the areas of the lake.

Apart from efforts of the departments concerned, participation of the local people plays a key role in the sustainability of the lake with owned attitudes, said Assistant Director U Soe Aung.

Later, they discussed development of the school.

Suriname leader says son’s arrest timed to shame him

WASHINGTON, 4 Sept—President Barack Obama has failed so far to convince most Americans that the United States should launch a limited military strike against Syria in response to a suspected chemical weapons attack by the Syrian government, a Reuters Ipsos poll showed on Tuesday.

Some 56 percent of those surveyed said the United States should not intervene in Syria, while only 19 percent supported such an action, the online poll found. Some 25 percent said they did not know what course of action the United States should take.

The findings are essentially unchanged from last week and indicated that Obama changed few minds on Saturday when he argued that Washington has the obligation to punish Syrian President Bashar al-Assad for what the United States says was a sarin gas attack that killed more than 1,400 people, including hundreds of children, near Damascus on 21 August.

The poll showed that respondents were more likely to support a strike if they were specifically asked about the chemical-weapons attack. Even then, only 29 percent said the United States should intervene, while 48 percent opposed action. Another 24 percent said they did not know.

Obama said on Saturday he had decided the United States should take military action against Syrian government targets but has asked Congress to approve the action in an acknowledgment that many Americans have little appetite for new military engagements after more than a decade of war in Afghanistan and Iraq— Reuters

Car bombs across Iraqi capital kill nearly 60 people

BAGHDAD, 4 Sept—A series of car bombs exploded across the Iraqi capital on Tuesday, killing nearly 60 people in predominantly Shi’ite districts, police and medics said.

It was not immediately clear who had carried out the attacks, which appeared coordinated, but Sunni Islamist militants, including an al-Qaeda affiliate, have been striking with a ferocity not seen in years.

More than two years of civil war in neighbouring Syria have aggravated deep-rooted sectarian divisions in Iraq, fraying an uneasy government coalition of Shi’ite, Sunni and ethnic Kurdish factions. Tuesday’s deadliest single blast took place in Baghdad’s northern Talibiya neighbourhood, where a car bomb in a busy street killed nine people.

In the Hussainiya District on the northern outskirts of the capital, two car bombs exploded in quick succession, killing ten.

“I saw a fireball and a huge cloud of smoke. We couldn’t approach immediately fearing a second bomb, but we could hear the screams of people asking for help,” said Ali Jameel, a policeman in a patrol stationed in Hussainiya. “A minute later a second blast happened nearby. Bodies were lying on the ground and some of the wounded were crying to distance themselves from the blast, leaving a trail of blood behind them”— Reuters

This year’s conference theme, “The Sum Is Greater than the Parts,” would focus on uniting efforts behind 21st Century peacekeeping operations in a United Nations context, it said. A keynote address would be given by Ameerah Haq, the UN under-secretary-general for field support. The two events will run concurrently from 9 to 13 Sept.— Reuters

Chinese, Turkmenian presidents discuss bilateral ties

Ashgabat, 4 Sept—Chinese President Xi Jinping and his Turkmenian counterpart, Gurbanguly Berdymukhamdedov, held talks here on Tuesday and decided to lift bilateral ties to a strategic partnership.

During their meeting, the two leaders spoke highly of the development of bilateral ties and jointly laid out the blueprint for future cooperation between their countries.

Over recent years, the two countries have enjoyed high political mutual trust and witnessed fruitful cooperation in economy, trade, energy and culture, Xi said, noting that China has become Turkmenistan’s largest trading partner.

Their cooperation in natural gas, with the two countries being each other’s largest partner in this field, not only plays an important role in their economic development, but sets a good example for international energy cooperation, Xi added.

Hailing China and Turkmenistan as strategic partners in the real sense, Xi said China will always be Turkmenistan’s good friend, good partner and good brother.

In order to deepen bilateral cooperation, the Chinese leader raised a multi-point proposal that covers politics, security, natural gas, trade, culture and regional affairs.

The two countries, he said, should firmly support each other’s efforts in safeguarding national sovereignty and security as well as territorial integrity, and in promoting social and economic development.

China supports Turkmenistan’s policy of permanent neutrality, and stands ready to maintain high-level contact and expand exchanges between governments, legislatures and political parties, he added.

Suriname leader says son’s arrest timed to shame him

Paramaribo, 4 Sept—Suriname’s president said on Tuesday the arrest of his son in Panama on charges of smuggling cocaine into the United States was timed to embarrass him as he hosted a regional summit.

President Desi Bouterse’s son Dino, 40, was rearaigned on Friday in a New York federal court accused of cocaine trafficking and being armed during a drug-related crime, in this case alleged by an anti-tank rocket launcher. Also on Friday, Bouterse was welcoming Latin American leaders to Paramaribo for a summit to mark Suriname taking the temporary leadership of the UNASUR regional trade bloc. “It was perfect timing... I almost want to say that I could have organized it myself,” the president told reporters on Monday, when asked about the arrest.

“Luckily it did not achieve its goal” of disrupting the summit, Bouterse said, adding that other heads of state had offered him their sympathy and in some cases the services of their lawyers too, should his son need them.

“Y ou have to put aside the issues that affect you personally, emotionally, and say, ‘What is the most important thing?’ The most important thing was the UNASUR meeting.”

Dino Bouterse faces a maximum penalty of life in prison if convicted of either of the two charges, which relate to events between December 2011 and August 2013. He was convicted in Suriname in 2005 for trafficking drugs, illegal weapons and stolen luxury cars, but was later given a senior role in the government’s counterterrorism unit.

Overweight caused Nepal’s plane crash last year

KATHMANDU, 4 Sept — An investigation into the Sita Air plane crash which killed 19 people in Kathmandu has shown that overweight is a main cause for the disaster.

A detailed investigation report which was unveiled 11 months after the plane crash by Ministry of Tourism and Civil Aviation has stated that the plane’s takeoff performance was compromised with both passengers and cargo weight.

On 28 Sept, 2012 the plane bound for Lukka, near Mt Everest, was crashed in the capital city Kathmandu shortly after takeoff from Tribhuvan International Airport.

According to the report obtained by Xinhua, the aircraft takeoff weight was 5,914 kg, whereas the maximum takeoff weight allowed for the Lukka flight is 5,834 kg. The aircraft load sheet recorded a takeoff weight of 5,834 kg, but this figure did not include an allowance for baggage.

The report has also recommended to the Civil Aviation Authority of Nepal (CAAN) to review the suitability of the average weights used for passengers on flights within Nepal and modify them if needed.

Singapore sets up new workgroup to assist SMEs

SINGAPORE, 4 Sept — Singapore government has set up a new workgroup to lead and coordinate efforts to assist small and medium enterprises (SMEs) amid their process of restructuring and raising productivity, the city-state’s Ministry of Trade and Industry (MTI) said on Tuesday.

The SME workgroup consists of 17 Members of Parliament, 12 representatives from the business sector and 11 government agencies and is led by Minister of State for Trade and Industry Teo Ser Luck.

The MTI said the work group will focus on their main areas. It will oversee the implementation of the various government programs and schemes related to SMEs, aiming to “ensure that the various schemes remain accessible and remain relevant to SMEs’ needs.”

The SME workgroup will also gather feedback from local business community about the schemes. The Members of Parliament, representing the advisors of the workgroup, will “help to raise awareness of the wide range of schemes and resources available to SMEs.”

Finally, the workgroup will also identify gaps and make recommendations to improve existing policies related to SMEs based on the feedback received. The inaugural meeting of this workgroup is scheduled for mid-September.

S Korea, DPRK hold subcommittee meetings for Kaesong complex

SEOUL, 4 Sept — South Korea and the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea (DPRK) on Wednesday held meetings of two subcommittees in charge of asset protection and global competitiveness for the joint industrial complex in the DPRK’s border town of Kaesong.

“As to the Kaesong industrial complex, two sub-committees for investment protection and global competitiveness are holding meetings in Kaesong,” Unification Ministry spokesman Kim Hyung-seok told a Press briefing.

On Thursday, the two Koreas planned to hold another meeting for two other subcommittees in charge of passage, communications and customs, Kim said, noting that the second meeting of the joint management committee for the Kaesong industrial park will be held next Tuesday based on the results of the two-day negotiations.

Seoul and Pyongyang agreed in principle to normalize the inter-Korean factory park in mid-August, but they had yet to agree on when to reopen it fully and how to manage it.

The Kaesong industrial zone, where 123 South Korean companies run factories, has been suspended for around five months after the DPRK withdrew all of its workers from the park in early April.

The two Koreas agreed to set up the joint committee at the factory park last Thursday. The committee was expected to give an equal say on the management of the Kaesong park, which had been run solely by the DPRK’s General Bureau for Guidance to Central Special Economic Zones.

Spokesman Kim said that military hotlines should be recovered to normalize operations of the joint industrial zone, reiterating its stance on conditions for the normalization.

Pyongyang has stuck to its stance of normalizing the operations as fast as possible.

One killed in S Philippine bombing

ZAMBOANGA CITY, (Philippines), 4 Sept — A suspected bomber was killed after an improvised explosive device (IED) he was trying to slip exploded near a police station in the southern Philippine Province of Zamboanga del Sur Capt. Jefferson Somera, a spokesman for the regional army’s First Division, said on Wednesday they also recovered another bomb near the area.

Somera told CNN-Philippines that the suspect, who was believed to be the one behind the bombing, was killed when the bomb exploded on Tuesday at around 9:30 pm, local time in the highway in Lagangian town.

The police can’t identify the mangled remains of the suspect. Somera said security forces searching the area later found a bag containing an IED fashioned through a round of 60mm mortar and cell phone acting as a trigger device. They immediately defused the bomb.

Bilateral summit eyes attracting more Chinese tourists to UAE

by Abu Dhabi, 4 Sept — Chinese tourist operators and representatives from the United Arab Emirates (UAE) are brainstorming here on Monday to find ways to lure more travellers from China to the Gulf state.

Some 75 Chinese outbound tourism bookers came to Abu Dhabi for an increased business at a two-day summit organized by Nicholas Publishing International (NPI) in partnership with the Shanghai-based 12i Group.

Rob Nicholas, Managing Director of NPI, said the summit is dedicated to building inbound Chinese visitor numbers by matching buyers to over 70 travel providers from throughout the region and further fields including hoteliers, attractions and retailers keen to tap into this lucrative market.

Nicholas said that with more than half of the delegation having less than three years’ experience working with UAE suppliers, their appetite for new product is “extremely keen.” For Ann Rao, regional manager from Chinese tour operator Uulux, the summit marks her first trip to the UAE. “Interest in the UAE is definitely rising,” said Rao.

Not only have the UAE’s two major carriers Emirates Airline from Dubai and Etihad Airways from Abu Dhabi increased their flight network between China and the Gulf state, but also UAE hotels are increasingly target Chinese tourists by establishing luxury shops and Chinese restaurants.

May Zhan, associate regional manager from Chinese tour operator Uulux, said 10 rhinos were translocated from the Nakuru National Park and 11 others from Lewa Conservancy to Borana Ranch in Laikipia.

“The week-long exercise was completed on Sunday and we managed to move 21 rhinos from Nakuru National Park and Lewa Conservancy. We completed the exercise on Sunday,” Mbega told Xinhua. KWS Assistant Director Central Rift Conservation Area Jonathan Kirui had earlier said the week-long exercise was funded by the World Wildlife Fund (WWF).

“The space for grazers is reducing by the day. However, the KWS is working to create more space for the animals,” Kirui said.

Rhinos are among the big five most sought after species by the illegal poachers due to their pricey horns. According to the KWS, there are about 643 black rhinos and 450 white rhinos in the East African country. The movement of the species, Kirui said, protects them from extinction while providing ample breeding space for remaining matings at the Lake Nakuru National Park.

Plan to re-enter New Zealand disaster mine approved

WELLINGTON, 4 Sept—A plan to reopen the entrance tunnel to New Zealand’s Pike River Coal Mine, where 29 men died in an explosion in November 2010, could be implemented next month in the first step to retrieving the bodies, government and mine company officials said on Tuesday.

Energy and Resources Minister Simon Bridges said the government would fund the cost of the plan, which was estimated at 7.2 million NZ dollars (5.62 million US dollars).

“Out criteria are that any re-entry into the tunnel up to the rock fall is safe, technically feasible and financially credible. Safety is paramount, and the High Hazards Unit of the Ministry of Business, Innovation and Employment has reviewed the plan and is comfortable with it,” Bridges said in a statement.

The scope of the operation did not include entry into the main mine workings, which was blocked by the rock fall.

“The government cannot comment or speculate about re-entering the main mine until the tunnel re-entry has been successfully achieved,” Bridges said.

The new plan involved sealing the ventilation shaft to control the atmosphere; drilling new boreholes to insert a foam seal in the tunnel and then pumping inert nitrogen between the seal and the rock fall to stop the risk of fresh air reigniting fires in the main workings, before ventilating the tunnel up to the entrance.

US actors Michael Douglas, Matt Damon to present awards at Emmys

Los Angeles, 4 Sept— Actors Michael Douglas and Matt Damon will play their new roles of event presenters at the upcoming 65th Primetime Emmy Awards, the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences said on Tuesday. Both stars, neither of whom has presented at the Emmys before, are the first presenters to be announced by organizers for the event, during which stars hand out gongs to their fellow actors. The pair, who starred together in the HBO made-for-television film “Behind the Candelabra,” will also contend for the honour for lead actor in a miniseries or movie at the telecast. In the Liberace biopic, Douglas played the flamboyant pianist Liberace, while Damon acted as the musician’s lover, Scott Thorson. Both men have earned nominations for previous Emmys four times.

Damon was previously nominated in 2002 for a guest role on sitcom “Will & Grace,” and three times for his supporting effort on “The Streets of San Francisco.” Damon earned a nod for a guest role on “30 Rock” in 2011, and three times for his work on “Project Greenlight.” The award show is slated for 22 September at the Nokia Theatre in downtown Los Angeles. It will be hosted by Neil Patrick Harris.—Xinhua

Jennifer Lopez returns as ‘American Idol’ judge

New York, 4 Sept— Pop singer Jennifer Lopez will be returning to “American Idol,” joining new judge Grammy- and Emmy-award winning singer Harry Connick Jr and veteran Randy Jackson, who appeared in the show six to seven years ago. Forbes.com calculated that “Idol” was the most profitable show on TV in 2011, generating some $6.64 million in ad revenue for every half hour it aired.

In the second season in January, “American Idol” has always been about discovering the next singing superstar, and next season our judging panel will deliver a most impressive combination of talent, wisdom and personality to do just that,” Kevin Reilly, Fox Broadcasting’s chairman of entertainment, said in a statement announcing the judging panel. Lopez, 44, returns after a season away.

Lopez and actress, appeared in “The Back-up Plan” and “Parker,” and whose hits include “On the Floor,” will add star power to the singing competition, once the most-watched television show, with 30 million viewers during its heyday six or seven years ago.

Reeves calculated that “Idol” was the most profitable show on TV in 2011, generating some $6.64 million in ad revenue for every half hour it aired. When soul singer Candice Glover won “American Idol” in May and became the first woman to take the title since 2007 the finale drew 14.2 million viewers, the first time it failed to reach 20 million. The season slump in audience numbers prompted an overhaul of the highly paid judging panel. Forbes.com estimated last season’s judges and host Ryan Seacrest were paid a combined $54 million. Former judges Mario Lopez and Nicki Minaj left after the end of the last season. Urban is the only judge who remained.

Johansson alien film disappoints, Korean movie shocks at Venice

Los Angeles, 4 Sept— Scarlett Johansson as a predatory alien on the prowl “Under the Skin,” a comeback for director Jonathan Glazer, who appeared in “The Back-up Plan” and “Parker,” and whose hits include “On the Floor,” absorbing thriller about a pitiless loan shark.

For “Under the Skin” Johansson as the alien Laura was filmed in real-life settings, including a shopping center and a street in a drizzly Scottish town, surrounded by members of the public. “People would take pictures of you with your cameraphone and not help you, all kinds of strange things,” Johansson told a Press conference. This technique was an “important ingredient” in the film, said Glazer, known for the 2004 picture “Birth”.

Laura drives around in a white van, stopping to chat coyly with young men in a cut-glass English accent. Her mysterious beauty prompts one of the men she meets to comment, in a strong Scottish accent, that she reverses the trope of the creepy male motorist picking up female hitchhikers. “It didn’t bother me that the dialogue was indecipherable at times” as long as the characters’ intentions and behaviour were clear, Glazer said.—Reuters

When asked what they would be most willing to die for, 55 percent of people said their children, followed by 12 percent for their spouse, 10 percent for their parents or religion and 5 percent for their country. Only 24 percent of people said they would opt for cryonic preservation, even if it were free, but the number rose to 39 percent among 18- to 34-year-olds. With cryonics, a body is preserved at low temperatures in the hope it can be revived and healed later. A bar or a shopping mall was deemed the worst place to have one’s ashes spread and 84 percent of people said they would prefer their passing to be marked “with laughter, food and drink” rather than something more solemn. The nationwide telephone poll, which will appear in the October issue of Vanity Fair, has a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points. It was conducted from 17-21 July.

Princess Diana is celebrity many Americans would bring back to life: poll

New York, 4 Sept— Britain’s Princess Diana is the deceased celebrity many Americans would want to bring back to life while most men would prefer to die before their spouses, according to a new survey about mortality released on Tuesday. The majority of Americans questioned in the 60 Minutes/Vanity Fair poll said they would die for their children, but fewer were prepared to give up their life for their country or religion.

Thirty-five percent of people said Princess Diana, who died in a car accident in Paris 16 years ago, is the celebrity they would pick to bring back to life, compared to 14 percent for Apple Inc co-founder Steve Jobs and 11 percent for pop stars Michael Jackson and Whitney Houston. Seventy percent of men in the poll of 1,005 adults said they would prefer their wives to outlive them, while 46 percent of women said they would want to die first.

Heavy spending in England but not on English players

Manchester, 4 Sept—Record spending by Premier League clubs signalled a desire to keep up the English top flight’s self-proclaimed reputation as the best in the world, along with a message that home-grown talent was perhaps not.

With Andy Carroll’s move to West Ham for £23 million (14 million pounds) the biggest deal involving an Englishman in the latest transfer window, and a trend for the top clubs to sell off rather than buy local talent, confidence in the country’s players seems low.

Premier League clubs had spent 630 million pounds (£980.53 million) by Monday’s transfer deadline, smashing the previous record of 500 million pounds set last month. The transfer window closed on Monday.

The standout deals were mainly for Spaniards, while the biggest English spenders were mainly for Spaniards, with fifth seed Li Na, who was even lower key.

England’s Manchester United striker Wayne Rooney could have been a big-name move with Chelsea chasing him for much of the close season before cooling off last week and Everton defender Leighton Baines was a United target but neither deal came off.

There was a loan deal for England midfielder Gary Barry from Manchester City to Everton, defender Steven Gerrard—who has one cap—moved to Cardiff City from Tottenham for 10 million but other activity was even lower key.

Midfielder Stewart Downing joined West Ham from Liverpool, Tom Huddlestone swapped Spurs for Hull City and midfielder Jonjo Shelvey went to Swansea from Liverpool, all for single-figure millions again.

The trio of newly promoted clubs, Crystal Palace, Hull City and Cardiff City, were the most active in acquiring English players, mapping out what they could from the bigger clubs for small fees or free.

England manager Roy Hodgson had last week urged clubs to do their transfer business before his squad assembled to prepare for this month’s World Cup qualifiers rather than having players make mad dashes across the country to sign late deals.—Reuters

Serena does out double bagel to reach semi-finals

New York, 4 Sept—Defending champion Serena Williams walloped Spain’s Carla Suarez Navarro 6-0, 6-0 to race into the semi-finals of the US Open on Tuesday.

Top seed Williams served up the dreaded “double-bagel” in a blistering 52 minutes to set up a clash with fifth seed Li Na, who earlier became China’s first US Open semi-finalist by beating Russian Ekaterina Makarova.

“Honestly she’s a great player,” said Williams, blaming the windy conditions for the Spaniard’s futility. “The conditions today were too tough. It was not her best tennis today.”

Madrid, 4 Sept—Mesut Ozil quit Real Madrid to join Arsenal because he realized no longer had the confidence of Real coach Carlo Ancelotti, the German playmaker said. The Premier League club smashed their transfer record to sign Ozil for 42.5 million pounds (£85.5 million) on Monday, days after he said he would stay with the nine-times European champions for a fourth season.

Nashiro defeated in WBA super flyweight title match

Thai boxer Denkaosan Kaowichit (L) punches Nobuo Nashiro of Japan in the seventh round of their WBA super flyweight title match in Nakorn Ratchasima, Thailand, on 3 Sept, 2013.—Kyodo News

Nakorn Ratchasima, Thailand, 4 Sept—Fifth-ranked former champion Nobuo Nashiro failed in his bid to unseat WBA super flyweight titlist on Tuesday when he was defeated by fourth-ranked Thai boxer Denkaosan Kaowichit.

“Despite suffering a cut eye, Nashiro had the better of the later rounds as Denkaosan faded, but the Thai had done enough to win the decision 113-115.5, 116-113.5, 116.5-114.5. Denkaosan, 37, improved to 63-3 (26 KO), while the 31-year-old Nashiro dropped to 19-6-1 (13 KO). “To be honest I didn’t think I could win on a decision. The only way I thought I could win was by KO but I didn’t get enough punches in,” said Nashiro.

“Denkaosan was better than I had expected. He fought dirty and hard. HOUSTON, 4 Sept — The city of San Antonio in the US state of Texas is offering its residents rebates for reducing the size of lawns in an attempt to save water amid the worst drought in decades, local media reported Tuesday.

The water district serving San Antonio said about 2,000 homeowners enrolled over the summer in a pilot program that offered 100 US dollars vouchers in exchange of removing at least 18.6 square meters of lawn, the San Antonio Express-News reported.

Li becomes China’s first semi-finalist at US Open

NEW YORK, 4 Sept— Li Na broke another barrier for Chinese tennis, becoming China’s first semi-finalist at the US Open by beating Russian Ekaterina Makarova 6-4, 6-7(5), 6-2 on Tuesday at windy Flushing Meadows.

The 31-year-old, fifth-seeded Li pumped both fists in joy after 24th seed Makarova sailed a hand-long to end the two-hour, 20-minute match at Arthur Ashe Stadium as the crowd showered her with cheers. “For me, this is the first time to come to the semi-finals, so I'm very proud of myself,” said Li, who looked about to claim victory in two sets after winning the first three points of the tiebreaker and holding a 4-2 lead.

“After I lose the second set, I was sad. But I just told myself to go point by point,” Li’s win over the Russian left-hander followed a three-set victory by determined Russian veteran Mikhail Youzhny.

The 2001 US Open champion Hewitt’s impressive run was stopped in the fourth round by determined Russian veteran Mikhail Youzhny.

The 2001 US Open champion Hewitt, mounting a comeback after a series of foot surgeries, was stopped one hurdle shy of making the semi-finals at the US Open Tennis Championships.

The US Open had been the last grand slam where Chinese women had stalled before reaching the final four. Zheng Jie was the first Chinese player to reach a grand slam semi-final, making the last four at Wimbledon and the Australian Open in 2010, but Li has enjoyed even greater success. Two years ago, Li became the first Chinese to reach a grand slam semi-final when she finished runner-up in australi and a few months later she won the 2011 French Open to become China’s first grand slam champion.

Putin says could turn against Assad - if case proved

BEIRUT, 4 Sept—President Vladimir Putin offered a glimpse of international compromise over Syria on Wednesday, declining to entirely rule out Russian backing for military action as he prepared to host a summit of world leaders.

As the United States and allies prepare to bypass any Russian U.N. veto and attack Damascus, there is little chance of Putin’s support. But his words may herald new efforts to overcome great power rivalries that have let Syria descend into bloody chaos.

Putin’s remarks on the eve of a G20 summit in St. Petersburg stressed Russia did not share Obama’s conviction that Assad has used chemical weapons.

MOSCOW has been the main arms supplier to As- da-linked rebels. Moscow has also provided new offensive weapons and training to Assad, including advanced surface-to-air missiles.

Putin’s remarks were a further blow to Obama and Western leaders, who are seeking ways to contain and put pressure on Assad without using military force.

The White House said that Putin’s comments were “little chance of a resolution that is needed to lead to a political solution.”

Putin’s comments come as U.S. officials say they are weighing options for imposing new sanctions on Russia over its role in Syria, including economic sanctions that could be announced as early as this week.

Putin – he noted suggestions the August 21 gasping was instead the work of al Qaeda-linked rebels.

Alexander Lukashenko, the autocratic president of Belarus, has been a key backer of Assad, providing him with military equipment and training. Mr. Lukashenko has also been a close ally of Mr. Putin.

MOSCOW has been by far the main supplier of arms to the Assad regime, providing about 80% of the weapons it has received on its own.

But Moscow has also been a key partner with Iran in providing advanced arms to the Assad regime, including a range of Iranian missiles and artillery systems.
