IMF praises Myanmar’s reform efforts

WASHINGTO N, 22 Jan—The International Monetary Fund praised Myanmar’s economic reform efforts on Tuesday, saying it had met key targets for strengthening its finances and reforming management.

It said the economic outlook for the Asian country is good, forecasting growth in fiscal 2013-2014 to rise to 7.5 per cent and near 7.8 per cent the following year.

“ Myanmar is undergoing an exciting transition,” Matt Davies, head of a review team, said in a statement.

He cited the sweeping reforms that included removing exchange restrictions and adopting a floating rate for the kyat in the past year; the establishment of an autonomous central bank; and large increases in government and spending on health and education.

“The authorities aim to build on these gains and achieve sustained, strong, and inclusive growth,” he said.

The IMF said the current target of keeping the deficit below 5 per cent of GDP was appropriate, but that tax revenues remain too low and the tax base too narrow. It also said Myanmar still needs several years of sustained reform to modernise the country’s financial sector, stressing close oversight of new policy banks set up by the government “to ensure they are managed soundly and to minimize fiscal risks.”

The Fund said it is ready to continue helping the Myanmar government with reforms through policy advice, progress monitoring and tailored technical assistance to help it build capacity for managing the economy. AFP/MNA

Public awareness campaign increasing fish resources in Inlay Lake underway

“Efforts to increase fish resources and to end a method of fishing with battery shocks in Inlay Lake are undertaken in cooperation with local people and environmentalists,” said U Sein Tun, an official of Inlay Lake Wetland Sanctuary.

Inlay Lake is home to 59 species of fish and 16 species of them are found nowhere. Educational campaigns are being conducted to promote public awareness of fishing with battery shocks that can kill not only fish but also microorganisms that help improve water quality.

According to a tomato grower from Kayla village, fishing with battery shocks has an adverse impact on floating tomato plantations Inlay Lake.

An official of Fisheries Department warned of the decrease in the number of living water resources in the lake due to the method of fishing with battery shocks that can kill all water resources. Moreover, growth and fertility problems happen to the fish escaping the electric shocks and eating fish that received electric shocks may result human health problems in long term.

That’s why, fishing with batterer shocks has been prohibited by Notification No (10/2005) of the Fisheries Department in order to avoid degradation of natural resources in Inlay Lake. Kyemon: 21-1-2014 Trs: YM

Six of Spanish cyclist’s 12 guards killed in Pakistan’s wild west

Quetta, (Pakistan), 22 Jan — Gunmen on Wednesday shot dead six guards protecting a Spanish cyclist in a violent and remote area of western Pakistan where a bus bomb killed 24 Shi’ite pilgrims a day earlier, police said.

The cyclist, who suffered minor wounds, had crossed into Pakistan’s western Province of Baluchistan from Iran, they said. Six guards were wounded.

Police said they did not know why he was cycling through such a dangerous area. He was assigned the escort by security forces because the province is plagued by kidnappers, Taliban militants, a violent separatist insurgency, sectarian killers, paramilitary death squads and drug traffickers.

Two young Czech women taking the same route by bus were kidnapped in March and are still being held.

The cyclist and his guards were travelling through Mastung District when gunmen attacked.

“Six of our security men have been killed trying to save the Spanish cyclist, who has suffered minor injuries,” said Shafqat Anwar Shwani, the assistant police commissioner for Mastung District. One attacker was also killed, he said.

In the same district on Tuesday, a bomb targeting a bus killed 24 Shi’ite pilgrims, many of them women and children. Such sectarian attacks are increasingly common in Pakistan, where Shi’ites make up 20 percent of the 180 million people.

On Wednesday, hundreds of Shi’ites protested against the bus bombing by sitting in the road alongside the bodies of the dead in the provincial capital of Quetta.

The community held similar protests demanding protection after bombings in Quetta, capital of Baluchistan, killed around 200 people, mostly Shi’ites, last year.— Reuters

Perplexed’ India says US probably still most important ally

Washington, 22 Jan — The case of the Indian consul arrested and strip-searched in New York last month was handled “appallingy” and needs to be resolved, but the United States remains probably India’s most important ally, the Indian ambassador to Washington said on Tuesday.

“I won’t underplay this incident, I won’t overplay this incident. I think we need to see it in perspective,” S Jaishankar said in an interview. “I think we are in the midst of working this one out.”

Jaishankar said India was “perplexed” by the decisions of US authorities to arrest and strip-search 39-year-old Devyani Khobragade, India’s deputy consul in New York, after she was accused of visa fraud and underpaying her maid.

“There was a fair measure of anger about both the substance of the problem and the way it was handled,” he said. “It was not just done publicly; frankly it was done appallingly.”

But Jaishankar, who arrived in Washington in December after serving as Indian ambassador to China, played down the impact on the practical side of the relationship — emphasizing that the two sides were still talking despite the postponement of two high-level US visits this month, including one by US Energy Secretary Ernest Moniz.

“Frankly, it’s probably the most important relationship,” he said. “We are not holding up business, or Pentagon dealings, or congressional dealings ... or science programme and saying, ‘They don’t get done until things get sorted out.’” Jaishankar said, however, there was a need to resolve both the Khobragade case and the broader issue of the lesser level of diplomatic immunity accorded to Indian and other foreign consular staff in the United States compared with what it grants for its consular staff serving overseas.— Reuters

Russian police kill Islamist militant leader before Olympics

Moscow, 22 Jan — Police have killed a senior Islamist militant in Russia’s North Caucasus ahead of the Winter Olympics in Sochi, where security forces searched on Tuesday for a woman they fear is planning an attack during the games.

Eldar Magatov, a suspect in attacks on Russian targets and alleged leader of an insurgent group in the Bavurt District of Dagestan, died in a shootout, the National Anti-Terror Committee said on Tuesday.

President Vladimir Putin has staked his political reputation on organizing a successful Olympics and tightened security nationwide after insurgents who hope to create an Islamist state in the North Caucasus threatened to attack the games, which start on 7 February 7. Putin had a phone call on Tuesday with US President Barack Obama to discuss how best to have a “safe and secure” Winter Olympics, the White House said.

In Sochi, which plans to host hundreds of thousands of visitors during the games, security forces were searching for Ruzanna Bhragimovaya, 23, who may have arrived to the Olympic host city on 11-12 Janu-ary, a letter seen by Reuters said. “(She) may be used as a terrorist-suicide bomber by (insurgency) leaders to organize terrorist acts during preparations for and during the 2014 Winter Olympics,” read the letter, asking police to look immediately into the matter.— Reuters

Kennedy’s dolphin hunt tweet reflects US position

Washington, 22 Jan — A recent message posted online by Ambassador to Japan Caroline Kennedy expressing opposition to dolphin hunting in the country reflected Washing-ton’s stance, a US government spokesman said on Tuesday.

The fishing in the tradi-tional whaling town of Tai-ji, Wakayama Prefecture, western Japan, in which fishermen catch dolphins after driving them into a cove, has stirred contro-versy, especially after a US documentary depicting the dolphin hunt won an Oscar in 2010.

“The US does remain committed to the global moratorium on commercial whaling and we are con-cerned with both the sus-tainability and the humane-ness of the Japanese dolphin hunts,” State Department spokesperson Marie Harf told reporters.

“The Ambassador was expressing our view that it was a question for a long time,” Harf said in a teleconference call. “We have discussed our con-cerns directly with Japan.”

Harf also said, without going into details such as lev-els of the diplomatic con-versations.— Kyodo News*
China stresses political solution to Syria crisis

MONTREUX, (Switzerland), 22 Jan — Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi on Tuesday reiterated China’s stance for a political settlement of the Syrian issue, calling for continued political efforts to keep the negotiations going.

Wang made the remarks while discussing with his Russian counterpart Sergei Lavrov Tuesday night about the peace talks on Syria, known as the Geneva II conference.

The latest round of the conference was initiated by Washington and Moscow in May and will start Wednesday in the Swiss city of Montreux to seek the establishment of a transitional governing body in Syria to lead the country out of a protracted conflict that broke out in March 2011. China hoped that the negotiations were not just launched, but more importantly, pushed forward, Wang said, adding that his country put forward the principle of first time since the eruption of their conflict.

Wang said the most pressing task now was to realize a cease-fire and stop violence as soon as possible.

The Chinese foreign minister also stressed the importance of reaching consensus on a framework for peace talks and establish a follow-up mechanism so as to keep the dialogue, negotiations and other political efforts going forward.

Lavrov said that the situation in Syria was very complicated, and the only way out of the crisis was to mudge the Syrian government and the opposition to come to the negotiating table, and reach some consensus on their country’s future.

Lavrov reiterated that Russia and China shared the same stance on a political solution to the Syria conflict, calling on the two sides to continue their close communication.

Nepal’s newly elected lawmakers sworn in

KATMANDU, 22 Jan — Nepal’s newly elected 575 lawmakers were sworn in Tuesday by the eldest lawmaker Surya Bahadur Thapa, the parliament secretary.

Thapa himself was sworn in as assembly chair on Monday by President Ram Baran Yadav.

The formal session of the assembly will convene on Wednesday.

The lawmakers were elected 19 November. The assembly is convening more than two months after the election because of procedural hurdles caused by confusion over whether the president or the chairman of interim government should call the meeting.

Earlier this month, President Yadav entrusted interim government chairman Khil Raj Regmi with the responsibility.

The assembly is tasked with drawing up a new constitution. A previous assembly elected in 2008 failed to achieve the task. It was dissolved in May 2012.

An additional 26 lawmakers in the 601-member assembly will be nominated by the new government.

Pakistan under pressure for tough action against Taleban after deadly attacks

ISLAMABAD, 22 Jan — The latest wave of militant attacks in Pakistan has left the government calls to on the government to launch a major offensive against the Pakistani Taleban in the restive North Waziristan tribal region, their last stronghold.

A Taleban suicide car bomber hit a convoy of security forces in the northeastern Bannu District, killing 22 soldiers and injuring 30 others on Sunday. A day later, a Taleban suicide bomber blew himself up near a checkpoint jointly manned by police and army close to the army’s headquarters in Rawalpindi, killing six soldiers and seven civilians.

The Taleban also declared war on the media and killed three staffers of a major media group in the port city of Karachi last week.

Taleban spokesman Shahidullah Shahid quickly claimed responsibility for all recent attacks and vowed to continue attacks.

The recent attacks have prompted widespread anger and calls for a decisive action against the Taleban in North Waziristan where they are believed to be planning attacks. The tribal region bordering Afghanistan has also been the focus of the US drone strikes as Americans say the militants use North Waziristan as launching pad for cross-border attacks into Afghanistan.

Opposition senators joined hands on Monday to press the government for a major push against Taleban.

Senators from three major opposition groups — Pakistan People’s Party (PPP), Awami National Party (ANP) and the Muttahida Qaumi Movement (MQM) criticized the government of Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif for inaction and demanded a major military operation against Taleban.

The government, which had earlier been in favour of peace talks with the Taleban, is now in a fix as there is no let up in terror attacks. The Taleban leaders are unwilling to clearly accept the dialogue offer and have rejected calls for a halt to their attacks.

Nawaz Sharif, after assuming office in June 2013, had announced to pursue peace talks with the Taleban to end the bloodshed but the process was derailed at the start by US drone strike in November last year which killed the Taleban chief Hakimullah Mehsud.

The Taleban retaliation spoiled atmosphere for any peace dialogue at least in the near future as support for a possible major military action ran high. Some Islamic groups however still insist on peace process.

Aging Fukushima Daini reactor can be safely offline for 10 more yrs

TOKYO, 22 Jan — The Nuclear Regulation Authority on Wednesday confirmed that one of the aging reactors at Tokyo Electric Power Co’s Fukushima Daini plant can remain offline safely for another 10 years, after assessing the deterioration level of related equipment and the impact of the March 2011 natural disasters.

The Fukushima Daini plant is located about 12 kilometres south of the Fukushima Daiichi plant, which saw three of its reactors suffer meltdowns due to the loss of their cooling functions following a huge earthquake and tsunami in March 2011. The Nos. 1, 2, 4 reactors at the Daini plant also lost their cooling functions temporarily, but achieved a stable state of cold shutdown. TEPCO filed for the NRA’s assessment of the No 2 reactor because it first started operating in February 1984.

In Japan, utilities are required to check the deterioration level of reactors before their operation period exceeds 30 years and seek the NRA’s approval.

The assessment on the No 2 reactor was carried out on the assumption that it will remain in a state of cold shutdown. The reactor will have to undergo a different safety assessment process if it is to resume operation.

All of the nuclear reactors in Japan are offline amid safety concerns in the wake of the 2011 Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant disaster. In order to be allowed to resume operation, reactors must first satisfy a set of new safety requirements introduced in July.

Rubble believed to be from the Hiroshima Peace Memorial, known as the Atomic Bomb Dome (seen in background), is salvaged from a nearby river by crane with support from Hiroshima University on 22 Jan, 2014.

Rubble from Hiroshima Peace Memorial salvaged from river

HIROSHIMA, 22 Jan — Rubble believed to be from the Hiroshima Peace Memorial, known as the Atomic Bomb Dome, was salvaged from a nearby river Wednesday by a crane with support from Hiroshima University. Rebun Kayo, a 35-year-old graduate student at Hiroshima University, discovered last June granite rubble believed to have been used for the building registered as a UNESCO World Heritage site.

Two pieces of granite stone were recovered from the Motoyasu River in front of the dome. The larger piece measures 110 by 55 centimeters and weighs close to 300 kilograms, according to Kayo. The stone is thought to have been used for the eaves on the building’s third floor.

In 1996, the UN Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization designated the dome, the only structure left standing in the area where the atomic bomb exploded on 6 Aug, 1945, as a World Heritage site.

Many victims of the US atomic bombing died in the Motoyasu River after searching for water to quench their thirst caused by the blast.

“I found these stone pieces, feeling as if I were gathering ashes of those perished,” said Kayo. “I want many people to come and touch them.” — Kyodo News

Tokyo, 22 Jan — The Japanese government is set to give Japan Post Insurance Co approval to launch a new education insurance product, one and a half year after receiving an application, informed sources said on Wednesday.

The Financial Services Agency and Ministry of Internal Affairs and Communications will endorse the new educational endowment insurance by the end of this month, allowing the company to launch it before the new school year begins in April, according to the sources.

The move comes after Washington has apparently eased concern over Japan’s insurance market following an expansion of business collaboration between Japan Post Insurance and American Family Life Assurance Co, or Aflac.

Japan’s insurance sector is one of the key topics of discussion in bilateral talks between Tokyo and Washington under the envisioned Trans-Pacific Partnership free trade arrangement, but the issue has not been discussed intensively since the collaboration between the insurance unit of the state-owned Japan Post group and the US-based insurer was announced last July.

Japan Post Insurance, a wholly owned unit of Japan Post Holdings Co., applied for the new insurance product in September 2012 for sales to commence by April 2013.

However, the government froze the screening of the application after the insurer’s nonpayment scandal involving 100,000 outstanding policies had been revealed.

The revised education insurance plan will be more savings-oriented than its existing education insurance. Similar products by other insurers have been popular, and the approval suspension has been dragging down the sales of Japan Post Insurance.

Australia rejects claims that navy mistreated asylum seekers

Sydney, 22 Jan — Australia on Wednesday rejected claims by a group of asylum seekers that they were beaten and suffered burns while being returned to Indonesia by the Australian navy under a policy that has strained ties between the neighbours.

The Australian Broadcasting Corporation (ABC) on Tuesday aired video of asylum seekers getting treatment for burns when they said they were beaten and suffered burns while being returned to Indonesia by the Australian navy under a policy that has strained ties between the neighbours.

The Australian government is not going to put up with people pleading the Australian navy," he told reporters in Sydney. "I’ve been given assurances about their conduct and I believe those assurances because I believe in those individuals."

Indonesian police confirmed that a group of asylum seekers had required treatment for severe burns on their hands after they were picked up in Indonesian waters on 6 January. "I received a report from police in Kupang that they said they were burned because they were forced to hold on to the boat engine," Agus Barnas, spokesman for the coordinating ministry of legal, political and security affairs, told Reuters.

New York, 22 Jan — A former engineer for defense contractors has been indicted on charges that he tried to send Iran secret details on the US Air Force’s F-35 joint fighter programme, the office of the US Attorney for Connecticut said on Tuesday.

The accused man, Mozaffar Khazaee, a dual US and Iranian citizen, was arrested on 9 January at Newark Liberty International Airport in New Jersey, after he flew from Indianapolis to Newark, with Teheran as his final destination, prosecutors said.

Khazaee, who moved recently from Connecticut, cut to Indianapolis, was charged with two counts of transporting, transmitting and transferring in interstate commerce goods obtained by theft, conversion or fraud, according to the indictment.

He faces a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison. Federal agents began investigating Khazaee, 59, in November when officers with US Customs and Border Protection inspected a shipment of boxes he sent by truck from Connecticut to a freight forwarding company in Long Beach, California, prosecutors said.

The shipment, listed as containing household goods, actually held boxes of documents with sensitive technical manuals, specification sheets and other material relating to the F-35 programme, and it was intended for shipment to Iran, prosecutors said. Khazaee has been detained in New Jersey pending his transportation to Connecticut to face charges. He has not yet been arraigned in the case.—Reuters

ZAGREB, 22 Jan — The Croatian Supreme Court on Tuesday turned down an appeal by former intelligence chief against his extradition to Germany.

Josip Perkovic, a Croatian who was a ranking Yugoslav secret service official in 1980s and set up the Croatian intelligence after its independence from former Yugoslavia, has been wanted by Germany since 2005 for alleged involvement in the murder of a Croatian dissident in 1983 in Germany.

The Supreme Court’s ruling paves the way for extradition of Perkovic and he would be handed over to Germany within 10 days. But Perkovic’s attorney said they would file a complaint before the Constitutional Court to demand his extradition be delayed.

Perkovic’s case caused disputes last autumn between Croatia and the European Union (EU), which claimed the country changed its laws a few days before it became an EU member on 1 July, 2013 and effectively prevented Perkovic’s extradition.

The European Commission even tried to impose sanctions against Croatia, claiming its amended law, which limited extradition of suspected criminals, failed to comply with EU legislation.

Under pressure Croatia changed the law back in October, paving the way for Perkovic’s arrest on 1 January. A Zagreb court on 8 January ruled he should be extradited to Germany on the basis of a European arrest warrant. —Xinhua

SAP pushes back profit goal to fund cloud growth

WallDorf, (Germany), 22 Jan — German business software maker SAP has pushed back its profit target as it makes further investments in its cloud business to keep up with a fast-growing market. SAP said on Tuesday its operating margin goal of 35 percent would now be reached in 2017 instead of 2015. Its shares were indicated down 1.1 percent before the market open, while Germany’s blue-chip DAX index was seen 0.4 percent higher. SAP and rivals such as IBM and Oracle are racing to meet surging demand for web-based software products, which allow clients to reduce costs by ditching bulky local servers for network-based software and storage in remote data centres. The fast-growing cloud business would create more predictable stream of revenue, SAP said, but additional investments were needed. The global cloud market is currently estimated to be worth $131 billion by research firm Gartner. SAP in recent years has splashed out $7.7 billion to buy internet-based computing companies Ariba and SuccessFactors. SAP’s co-Chief Executive Bill McDermott told reporters he did not exclude more acquisitions to reach the firm’s goals. “When an acquisition makes sense, we will do it,” he said, declining to elaborate.

The company expects total revenues to reach at least $22 billion euros ($29.8 billion) by 2017, of which $33.5 billion is expected to come from the cloud business. SAP published preliminary results on 10 January.
Sydney, 22 Jan — Emerging from an ice-locked Christmas while the world watched and waited, an Australian scientist and researcher with the University of New South Wales (UNSW) was announced on Wednesday as the winner of the prestigious Australian Academy of Science prize for his work in climate change science.

After finding himself in the centre of both an international media and local-ised Arctic storm, Professor Chris Turney will be a controversial winner of the honourable award, presented by the Australian Academy of Science, to celebrate researchers who have made outstanding contributions to their field. Professor Turney has been awarded the 2014 Frederick White Prize for his research on understanding past and present climate change and on improving climate change models.

The energetic Turney, an Australian Research Council (ARC) Laureate Fellow in the UNSW Climate Change Research Centre, was also the now internationally famous (or infamous) leader of the ill-fated expedition to Antarctica that ended with an international ice-breakers also becoming locked in the ice. It was Professor Turney’s calm reports that became the very human voice of unseen climate impacts. “In this little haven of civilization surrounded by a chaotic jumble of white to the horizon, everyone is taking stock of being locked in sea ice for 10 days,” he wrote during the ordeal.

“We are all incredibly grateful for the bravery of our Russian crew, the captain of Captain Jianzhong Wang on the Chinese icebreaker Xue Long and the wonderful perseverance of the Australian icebreaker Aurora Australis.” The Australasian Antarctic Expedition (AAE) set out to retrace the journey of Douglas Mawson using the Russian ship Akademik Shokalsky.

The six-week expedition was split into two legs, the first focusing on the New Zealand sub-antarctic islands and the South America and the immediate area around Mawson’s Huts at Commonwealth Bay.

As the expedition traversed the Southern Ocean, oceanographic measurements were made, weather conditions recorded, trawls for plankton and bird counts noted; while on the sub-antarctic islands, teams coring, dug peat sections, investigated bird burrows and underwater surveys were made in the shallows.

Many were firsts for the region. Shanghai, 22 Jan — A major Internet outage in China on Tuesday that rerouted users to the US website of a company which helps people get around Beijing’s censorship may have been due to a hacking attack, the official Xinhua news service reported. The state-run China Internet Network Information Center (CNNIC) said in a microblog post that the outage, which lasted for several hours, was due to a malfunction in China’s top-level domain name root servers on Tuesday afternoon.

Chinese Internet users were rerouted to a US-based website run by Dynamic Internet Technology, a company that sells anti-censorship web services tailored for Chinese users, including a product that enables the retrieval of microblog posts deleted by Chinese censors. Dynamic Internet Technology did not immediately respond to requests for comment.

The company’s website lists the Epoch Times, a publication produced by the Falun Gong religious sect which is banned in China, as a client. Other clients include Voice of America and Human Rights in China. It is still unclear as to exactly what happened to cause the outage. The Xinhua report quoted Chinese security experts saying the outage could have been exploited by hackers, or could have been the result of a hacking attack.

New York, 22 Jan — A US appeals court granted Apple Inc a reprieve from an external monitor appointed to oversee its compliance with antitrust laws after the company had been found liable last July for conspiring to raise e-book prices.

The 2nd US Circuit Court of Appeals in New York on Tuesday granted Apple a hearing on whether to stop the monitor, Michael Bromwich, from doing his job while the company pursues a formal appeal, which could last several months.

In granting an “administrative stay,” the 2nd Circuit said a three-judge panel would hear Apple’s motion for a stay pending appeal as soon as possible. The US Department of Justice did not oppose the short stay but will fight Apple’s efforts to get rid of the monitor or to replace Bromwich. It has until 24 January to file opposition papers.

Apple has complained that Bromwich has been too intrusive, including by seeking interviews with top executives and board members, and has been charging an inflated $1,100 per hour for his services to rack up high fees.

But the Cupertino, California-based maker of the iPad, iPod and iPhone has said Bromwich’s activities could interfere with its ability to develop new products. Courts often appoint monitors in litigation to ensure that companies comply with the law. But Apple has said US District Judge Denise Cote in Manhattan, who in a nonjury trial found the company liable for a price-fixing conspiracy with five major publishers, improperly granted Bromwich too much power.” —Reuters

Ancient fossil shows new link in dolphin evolution: New Zealand scientists

Wellington, 22 Jan — New Zealand scientists said on Wednesday have identified a previously unknown type of fossil dolphin that could be the ancestor of modern dolphins and toothed whales. Papahau taitapu, the first of its kind ever found, lived 19 million to 22 million years ago, and is one of the few dolphins to be reported globally dating to the start of the Miocene epoch, according to University of Otago researchers.

Judging from the size of its skull, Papahau was about 2 metres long, roughly the size of a common dolphin, and like most living dolphins, it had many simple conical teeth, but its head was probably a bit wider, and not as high-domed, Dr Gairdner Aguirre said in a statement.

It lived at a time of global warmth, in shallow seas around Zealandia, the continental fragment that New Zealand rests upon, along with ancient penguins and baleen whales.

The skull, one jaw, and a few other parts of Papahau taitapu were found in marine sedimentary rocks in the northern South Island, and only a single specimen had been found so far. “Our study of structures of the skull and earbone suggest that Papahau could make and use high frequency sound to navigate and detect prey in murky water. They probably also used sound to communicate with each other,” said Aguirre. Features of the Papahau skull showed it was distinct from all previously-reported fossils, Professor Ewan Fordyce said in the statement. —Reuters

Myanmar is a country rising from ashes. It has many tasks to do to become fully revitalized, but it still has many latecomer’s advantages in hands. These advantages include technology. We are building the country’s e-government system from scratch after a series of attempts in vain.

We have got a number of useful web sites and web portals from government agencies over the past few years. But it is still miles away from achieving e-government network. We need specific IT solutions for procedures of the entire government. It’ll cut the red tape, boost the administration mechanism and promote the easy access to information among the public.

The government mechanism still excessively relies on papers. Fire outbreaks and other disasters could easily destroy them. It is costly, consumes much space and promotes red tape.

There is a joke about record keeping practices at the offices, rather thought to be a true event in Myanmar. A clerk asked for permission from his superior to destroy old papers seemed useless. His superior replied, “Make one new copy and go ahead!” There are a number of internal projects that the government is making strenuous efforts to be able to issue smart cards simultaneously across the country, the deputy minister said.

U Tin Maung of Chanmyathazi Township asked the Ministry of Home Affairs to stop smuggling cattle. Regarding the question, Brig-Gen Kyaw Zan Myint, Deputy Minister for Home Affairs, said draught cattle could be transported with seal of approval from local authority and departments concerned and the cattle could be on sales at markets with approval for ownership of the cattle from local authority. Ministry of Commerce has issued license for trading goats and other cattle except draught cattle. With recommendations of Ministry of Livestock Breeding and Fisheries, the deputy minister said.

Rakhine State Chief Minister looks into Maungtaw violence

MAUNTAW, 22 Jan—Chief Minister of Rakhine State U Hla Maung Tin has called for cooperation of local people in Ducheertan Village, Rakhine State, where police were attacked by mobs, to discover the police sergeant who went missing after the violence.

During his visit to the area, the chief minister looked into the recent violence and told the people about the false news published and aired by foreign media that children and women were killed in the violence.

At the Gawduthara Village, he met with villagers who left Ducheertan Village.

During the meeting, the villagers told him that they did not hear that Rakhinese people killed children and women.

Police Brig-Gen Tin Ko Ko clarified that some villagers are under interrogation and they would be freed if they were found not guilty.

A Mawlavi from Gawduthara Village said he did not see any killing people. During the meeting, Rakhine State Hluttaw representative U Aung Myo Min, Rakhine State Hluttaw representative of Buthidaung Township Dr Bawshah Ahmed, Barbara Babista, coordinator of OCHA and Roka Kodo, resident representative of UNHCR, who visited there along with the chief minister, also talked to the villagers and investigated the situation.

They also inspected the area where police were attacked by mobs while patrolling and the place where uniform of the police sergeant who still missing were found.

In the evening, the representatives from UNHCR, OCHA and the ministry had already made four police members led by Police Sergeant Aung Kyaw Thein patrolled Kinchaung village together with U Maung Ba Tin, head of Kyhay Myaung village, on 13 January, 2014. They continued the patrol together with U Aung Than, 10-household head, U Maung Thein Hla and U Than Oo, DaCheerYar Village tract-crew. On their arrival at Ducheertan (middle) village at about 9.30 pm, they found a group of Bengalis, numbering about 20, sitting around a fire in front of shops. BOJ maintains ultraeasy monetary policy, FY 2015 price outlook

TOKYO, 22 Jan — The Bank of Japan decided on Wednesday to maintain its ultraeasy monetary policy and kept unchanged its consumer price outlook for fiscal 2015 at 1.9 percent, near its 2 percent inflation target aimed at beating deflation. The nine-member Policy Board unanimously decided that the central bank will continue with its large-scale monetary easing policy introduced in April, centering on doubling the monetary base and boosting the purchase of government bonds.

After reviewing its semiannual economic outlook issue in October, the BOJ slightly revised down its estimate for the nation’s growth in fiscal 2014 to 1.4 percent from the 1.5 percent forecast in October, while keeping intact its growth estimates for this fiscal year at 2.7 percent and fiscal 2015 at 1.5 percent. The bank retained its price outlook for the year ending March and fiscal 2014, expecting core consumer prices excluding fresh foods to rise 0.7 percent and 1.3 percent, respectively. The fiscal 2014 projection excludes the impact of three-percentage-point sales tax hike scheduled for next April. The move comes after the consumer price index excluding fresh foods climbed 1.2 percent in November from a year earlier.

It left unchanged its assessment of the domestic economy situation in the fourth straight month, saying in a statement that it has continued to “recover moderately,” while noting an increase in demand has been observed recently ahead of the consumption tax hike.

On the outlook, the BOJ said the domestic economy is “expected to continue a moderate recovery as a trend, while it will be affected by the front-loaded increase and subsequent decline in demand prior to and after the consumption tax hike,” it said.

It said the year-on-year rate of change in the consumer price index is likely to be around 1.25 percent for some time.

The government will study possible measures to ensure the safety of Japanese citizens as well as the smooth operation of Japanese companies in the Southeast Asian country, the top government spokesman said.

Local legislative sessions stress "balanced development"

BEIJING, 22 Jan — Annual “two sessions” — meetings of local legislatures and local political advisors — kicked off in January across China.

Despite differences of economic and social situations from province to province, many local legislative sessions have topics in common.

Many local governments have lowered GDP goals for 2014 in pursuit of more balanced development. In days gone by it was all about GDP.

Shanghai Mayor Yang Xiong declared that in 2013, the city’s GDP was expected to grow by 7.7 percent and fiscal revenue by 9.8 percent. In 2014, Shanghai plans to raise GDP by 7.5 percent and keep fiscal revenue increasing in step with economic growth.

Similarly, Liu Weiping, governor of Gansu in the northwest, also reduced GDP expectations from 12.1 percent growth in 2013 to 11 percent in 2014. Hebei and Fujian lowered growth goals by 0.5 percent.

According to central economic and urbanization work conferences last year, China plans steady, proactive forward progress in human-centered urbanization for 2014.

Urbanization through new construction work is the chosen route toward modernization, and is seen as offering a solution to rural problems. Gansu Provence, for example, will press on with development of the Silk Road economic belt.

Many local government reports reiterate the importance of quality urbanization and its potential to increase domestic demand, raise productivity and end the urban-rural duality.

Fighting smog also appears near the top many of the government reports, much as in 2013, more than 100 big and medium cities in 25 regions were affected by smog. According to a five-year plan on air pollution, China will cut coal use, shut down polluters, promote cleaner production and cut the density of inhalable particulate matter.

In recent government reports, the environment was given much more weight in assessing official performance.

At Beijing’s People’s Congress, Mayor Wang Anshun declared an “all-out effort” to cut coal use by 2.6 million tons and transform 300 polluting companies this year.

North China’s Hebei Province, one of the most polluted, is trying to cut steel and cement production capacities by 60 million tons each year by 2017, striving for a better environment.

No leap forward in improving inter-Korean ties

SEOUL, 22 Jan — South Korean Unification Minis ter Ryoo Kihl-jae said on Wednesday that there will be no leap forward in improving inter-Korean relations, referring to the recent peace call from the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea (DPRK).

“If there is any way to make the inter-Korean relations leap forward at a bound, (South Korea) will follow that way. But, I promise there would be no such a way in the south-north relations,” Ryoo said at a forum held in central Seoul. Ryoo said it would be a mythology to believe that the inter-Korean ties can be improved by South Korea’s epoch-making concessions, reiterating that the DPRK failed to keep its word on family reunions.

Seoul and Pyongyang originally planned to hold reunions of families separated by the 1950-53 Korean War in late September last year, but Pyongyang abruptly delayed the reunions at the last minute.

Ryoo said if the DPRK follows through on what it promised and agreed upon, the two Koreas can reach another agreement, urging Pyongyang to accept Seoul’s proposal to hold the family reunions.

In her first New Year’s Press conference, South Korean President Park Geun-hye proposed to resume the family reunion around the Lunar New Year’s Day that falls on late January. Pyongyang rejected the proposal, saying that atmosphere should be created.

Singapore elevates status of lower courts

SINGAPORE, 22 Jan — Singapore is going to elevate the statuses of its lower courts, with some changes passed on Subordinate Courts Bill mentioned in parliament, local paper the Straits Times said on Wednesday.

The lower courts, previously named the Subordinate Courts, will be renamed “State Courts.”

The office of Chief District Judge will be elevated to the office of the “Presiding Judge of the State Courts,” one held by a judge or judicial commissioner of the Supreme Court. At the same time, the amended bill also increases the minimum statutory requirement for a legally qualified person to be a magistrate and district judge from one year to three years, and five years to seven years respectively.

The changes reflect the primary role the lower courts play in the judicial system and the growing complexity of the cases before them, said Senior Minister of State for Law and Education Indranee Rajah on Tuesday.

US condemns violence in Thailand, urges restraint

WASHINGTON, 22 Jan—The United States “strongly” condemns increasing violence in Bangkok and urges all sides to exercise restraint, the State Department said on Tuesday.

“We urge all sides to refrain from violence, exercise restraint, and respect the rule of law,” spokeswoman Marie Harf said in a statement.

The US also called on the Thai authorities to investigate attacks that have resulted in deaths and injuries and bring those responsible to justice.

The Thai caretaker government on Tuesday declared a state of emergency in capital Bangkok and its surrounding areas after violence continued to escalate since protest began in November last year.

Politically-related violence in Thailand has killed nine people and injured 554 others since 30 November last year, the Erawan Emergency Medical Services Center of Bangkok Metropolitan Administration said on Tuesday.

“We encourage all involved to commit to sincere dialogue to resolve political differences peacefully and democratically,” Harf said, adding that the US supports democratic processes in the Asian ally.

The US has issued a travel warning on Thailand, urging American citizens to keep away from protests and large gatherings in Bangkok and other provinces.

Environment graduates popular in fight against smog

HEFEI, 22 Jan — Chinese college graduates in environmental engineering have seen their job prospects improve as frequent bouts of serious smog have prompted more effective steps to tackle air pollution.

In the fourth quarter of last year, environmental protection posts entered the top ten hot categories in the job market for the first time, said an official with the talent market service centre of Hefei City, capital of Anhui Province.

The latest statistics showed environmental protection and quality safety jobs in the city reached 1,457 in the fourth quarter of Hefei, an increase of 84.7 percent from the third quarter, according to the centre.

The employment rate of 2013 university graduates who majored in environment or ecology sciences was also higher than the average, according to data from the Education Department of neighbouring Jiangsu Province.

Graduates majoring in environment and ecology had an employment rate of 94 percent, compared with 89.5 percent on average for college graduates in the province, said the department.

China has been making enormous efforts to address pollution after decades of rapid economic growth. In September, the central government issued the Air Pollution Prevention and Control Action Plan to control PM2.5, or airborne particles with a diameter of less than 2.5 microns, and reduce the number of smoggy days. It includes limits on pollutant emissions, optimization of energy use and upgrades to technology.
Beckham to team up with Del Boy and Rodney

LONDON, 22 Jan — Former England soccer captain David Beckham is joining forces with two of Britain’s most loveable comedy rogues to make a special appearance in a charity sketch of the sitcom “Only Fools and Horses”.

It is the first time in 10 years that actors David Jason and Nicholas Lyndhurst will reunite as brothers Derek and Rodney Trotter, and Beckham jumped at the chance to be involved. The last “Only Fools and Horses” reunion was a 2003 Christmas special.

The charity Comic Relief said in a statement on Tuesday that the sketch would be broadcast as part of a star-studded television night on 21 March.

“To be able to record a new ‘Only Fools and Horses’ sketch is in itself very special but for David Beckham, who is a huge fan of the show, to be part of this is truly brilliant,” said Comic Relief Chief Executive Kevin Cahill.

“Only Fools and Horses”, a British sitcom that ran in the 1980s, follows the fortunes of the brothers, known as “Del Boy” and “Rodders”, in their dubious and often ill-fated attempts to get rich in Peckham, south London.

As well as “Only Fools and Horses”, the night of television will also feature a special edition of “Strictly Come Dancing” with para-lympians and hosts including Gary Linkeer, Claudia Winkleman and Clare Balding.

Beckham, 38, last appeared in a sketch for Comedy Relief in 2012 when he cuddled up in bed with comedian James Corden. In 2010 he jumped into a bath with Corden.

But the former Manchester United and Real Madrid midfielder, who also played for AC Milan, the Los Angeles Galaxy and Paris St Germain, has quashed speculation that he could take up a career in acting after retiring as a player last May. “I’m not very good at acting, so maybe it wouldn’t be a very good idea to go into that kind of industry,” he said last month.—Reuters

Why Kellan Lutz won’t start a relationship with Miley Cyrus

LONDON, 22 Jan — Twilight co-star Kellan Lutz reportedly does not want to offend Miley Cyrus’s ex-fiancée Liam Hemsworth by getting into a serious relationship with her as he is friends with both.

The 28-year-old actor will never get into a relationship with the pop sensation out of respect for his friendship with Liam Hemsworth.

“Kellan is friends with Liam and doesn’t want to insult him by getting serious with Miley,” a source said.

“Miley came on way too strong for Kellan. All he wanted was to have a good time, and when they first hooked up she told him that was all she was after too,” the source added.

The star also did not realise that the 21-year-old Wrecking Ball singer will get serious. “He didn’t expect her to get obsessed with him, because she acts so cool and independent. He feels bad. He never meant to hurt her,” the insider said.

Amritabh Bachchan: Dancing in front of the camera is “exceedingly enjoyable”

MUMBAI, 22 Jan — Megastar Amritabh Bachchan says at 71 he finds dancing “incongruous”, but nevertheless, he enjoys it only if the retakes are within “tolerable limits.”

Mr Bachchan was last seen on the silver screen in Satyagraha and is currently shooting for his upcoming film Bhoothnath Returns, a sequel to the 2008 horror comedy film Bhoothnath.

“It’s been a while, since I shook my body to dance on camera. Now at 71, it does seem incongruous. But truth be told, it’s exceedingly enjoyable, so long as the number of takes are within tolerable limits,” Big B posted on his blog sbbachchan.tumblr.com on Tuesday.

He also appreciated the work of choreographer Ganesh Acharya, and said that he is the “one that has created some of the most unusual moves in the movies, and the one whose dance moves look incredibly graceful, despite his enormous girth”.

Mr Bachchan then said Acharya informed him that he was one of the group dancers in his 1990 film Agneepath during the sequence where he takes Lord Ganesha for immersion.

Today he is an accomplished director of dance, has directed a film and produced it, opened a dance stage and a kind of school for training, and continues to devour tons and tons of kaaju and rewari and ga- jak,” posted Amritabh Bachchan.—PTI

Messel in good shape as he targets 400 Barca games

BARCELONA, 22 Jan — Lionel Messi will reach the milestone of 400 games for Barcelona when they face Levante in the King’s Cup on Wednesday and coach Gerardo Martino says he is back in top condition following his hamstring injury.

It is over 10 years since the Argentine made his debut for the Catalan side in a friendly against Porto in 2003, and although then described as a prodigious talent his achievements have far exceeded expectations.

The four-times World Player of the Year’s medal haul includes six La Liga titles and three Champions

Leagues and his performances have seen him described as one of the best players of all time.

During 2013 he suffered several hamstring injuries, the latest in November which kept him sidelined until after Christmas. “He has played two full games and is playing well. He feels fine so there is no longer any reason to hold him back,” Martino told reporters.

“He can play all the games until for whatever reason we think that we need to rest him.”

Barca will be without midfielder Andres Iniesta for the first leg quarter-final clash with Levante who claimed a draw against the La Liga leaders at the weekend thanks to a solid defensive display.

Iniesta has a knee injury and is on the sidelines alongside Neymar who will be missing for several matches with an ankle ligament tear.

Martino admitted that he is also likely to rest players for the away game. “The plan is that the players arrive at the end of the season in good condition and that is the main concern. If we cannot beat Levante and I have decided to make changes that is the situation. It is crucial to maintain our level of football,” he said.

“We have talked about the game with Levante and looked at ways that we can break them down. The other day we didn’t have enough depth.” — Reuters

Radwanska snaps Azarenka’s pursuit of Australia Open hat-trick

MELBOURNE, 22 Jan — Victoria Azarenka’s 18-match winning streak at the Australian Open ended today when she lost 2-1 to Simona Halep in Melbourne, Australia on 22 Jan , 2014. Agnieszka Radwanska won 21-1—Xinhua

The first major of the season extends its prevailing titling of star players and dramatic ousting of reigning champions. On Tuesday, three-time reigning champion Novak Djokovic was knocked out the tournament by Stanislas Wawrinka in five-set thriller. In the fourth round, the dominant Serena Williams and Maria Sharapova also suffered early exits. Serbia’s 14th seed Ana Ivanovic, who stunned Williams in three sets then fell victim to Canada’s teenager Eugenie Bouchard.

Fifth-seeded Radwanska ended a streak of three consecutive quarter-final defeats at the Australian Open with a stunning display of versatile shot-making that confused the big-hitting defending champion. She next plays No 20 Dominika Cibulkova, who won the last eight games in a one-hour 6-3, 6-0 quarter-final rout of No 11-seeded Simona Halep.

Azarenka’s loss leaves 2011 French Open champion Li Na as the only major winner remaining in the women’s draw. Li will play 19-year-old Canadian Eugenie Bouchard in the other semifinal. — Xinhua

Nadal survives Dimitrov test to reach semi-finals

MELBOURNE, 22 Jan — World number one Rafael Nadal was forced to battle back from a set down before he blunted the challenge of Bulgaria’s Grigor Dimitrov with a 3-6, 7-6, 7-6, 6-2 victory to advance to his fourth Australian Open semi-final on Wednesday.

The 22-year-old Dimitrov showed the power, court coverage and booming serve that tennis purists have suggested could take him to the top of the game as he tested Nadal, though, he was unable to capitalize on crucial moments of the match.

He held two set points in the third only for Nadal to seize the advantage and clinch the tie-break 9-7, then the Spanish left-hander blunted the challenge of Dimitrov’s hopes when he broke in the second game of the fourth.

Nadal held serve to take a 3-0 lead that he never looked like relinquishing and completed victory to set up a mouth-watering clash against either Roger Federer or Britain’s Andy Murray for a place in the final.— Reuters

Bangkok under state of emergency, anti-gov’t rally continues

Anti-government protesters continue blockading main roads in central Bangkok on 22 Jan, 2014. A state of emergency was imposed by the Thai government the previous day in Bangkok, an adjoining province and two nearby districts.

BANGKOK, 22 Jan — Anti-government protesters continued to rally across Bangkok on Wednesday, one day after the government declared a state of emergency in the capital and surrounding areas.

According to local media reports, Wednesday’s protests have so far been calm despite renewed vows by the opposition to continue their flirtation until Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra steps down.

The protests, led by former Deputy Prime Minister Suthep Thaugsuban, are still occupying the main protest sites in Bangkok, while some groups on Wednesday morning made an attempt to block two more government buildings, belonging to the Defence Ministry and the Civil Aviation Department.

Police said the situation is under control, with no violent incidents reported.

Yingluck told reporters on Tuesday after the announcement that a state of emergency would be imposed, that she has instructed public security authorities to perform their duties with patience and implement security measures under international standards.

“Police will lead this operation...we will take measures step by step, starting with negotiations,” she said. Labour Minister Chalerm Ubumrung, who is handling the implementation of the state of emergency, told a separate news conference on Tuesday that the government will use peaceful means to cope with the protests and prevent confrontations.

Slovenia rejects Croatian bank ruling as “direct infringement”

LJUBLJANA/ZAGREB, 22 Jan — Slovenia rejected on Tuesday two rulings by a Croatian court against the defunct Slovenian bank Ljubljanska Banka (LB) and its successor Nova Ljubljanska Banka (NLB), the biggest bank in Slovenia.

The Zagreb Municipal Court ruled that the defunct LB bank and NLB must compensate two Croatian banks, Zagrebacka banka and Prvredna banka Zagreb (PBZ), which sued on behalf of the government of Croatia for LB deposits that had been guaranteed and paid by Croatia through the two banks.

The total amount of compensation approaches 27 million euros (36.7 million US dollars). The rulings by the Zagreb Municipal Court are “direct infringement of agreements” that would be unenforceable in Slovenia, Slovenian Foreign Minister Karl Erjavec said in a statement.

City reach Wembley with 9-0 aggregate rout of West Ham

LONDON, 22 Jan — Manchester City completed a resounding demolition of West Ham United by winning the second leg of their League Cup semi-final 3-0 on Tuesday to book their place in the final at Wembley 9.0 on aggre- gate. With the tie effectively over after West Ham’s leaky defence shipped six goals in the first leg two weeks ago, City dished out an extra helping of humili- ation with Alvaro Negredo scoring twice and Sergio Aguero also netting.

“It was a very pro- fessional performance,” City manager Manuel Pel- legnini told Sky Sports af- ter his side reached their first League Cup final in 38 years. “It was easy to think the game was finished from the 6-0 in the first leg, but it was important to reach the final winning all the games.”

City will face either Sunderland or local rivals Manchester United in the final on 2 March, with Sunder- land holding a slender 2-1 advantage heading into the second leg on Wednesday. West Ham boss Sam Allardyce might have hoped to see City field a re- serve team as he looked for a morale-boosting, if purely academic, victory but his luck was out as Negredo and Aguero spearheaded a potent lineup. The home side’s hopes of salvaging some pride after the first- leg mauling were shattered after two minutes and 36 seconds.

Boos rang around the Upton Park stadium as West Ham’s comically disorganised defence did little to prevent Negredo opening the scoring for the visitors. Eighteen-year-old Negredo was given a free run down the left and his cross found the Spain in- ternational completely un- marked to head low into the net with West Ham’s near- est defender James Tomkins caught hopelessly off guard. After West Ham’s Nolan had a goal rightly chalked off for offside, the home team’s shambolic rearguard cost them dear again after 24 minutes.

Lopes was again the creator, cutting through the heart of the defence largely unchecked before feeding Aguero.

He jinked into the area and chipped the ball over West Ham keeper Jussi Jaaskelainen to grab his second goal of the night. He strode through a gaping hole in the West Ham defence and flicked it over Jaaskelainen, with de- fenders reluctant to make a challenge and risk a futile sending off. The result was the biggest margin of vic- tory in a League Cup semi- final. “It was bog-standard defending, which was dis- appointing. You cannot do mistakes at this level to the amount we did them,” Al- lardyce said before reveal- ing the club had suffered a further blow with injuries to Joe Cole and Diame.

The “killer of all was the injuries to Joe Cole, who should not be out for so long, and Mo Di- ame, which looked really serious.” — Reuters
