Transparency, political stability contribute to tourism boom in Myanmar

NAI PYI TAW, 27 Feb  — With the establishment of a transparent society in the wake of political stability, the country is experiencing sudden influx of tourists, said President U Thein Sein in meeting with hoteliers from Bagan Hotel Zone in Bagan on Wednesday.

He stressed the importance of cultural heritage conservation works for promotion of tourism industry. He voiced hotel rooms are not enough yet to accommodate throng of foreign visitors that will come into the country while hosting regional summits and related meetings this year.

As tourism industry is one of the important contributors to the national economy, a matter of sharing a success story of tourism industry is of the greatest importance to the country. He highlighted participation of all in the sector in cooperation with the government for economic development of the country. It can thereby contribute towards socio-economic life of the people, he added.

After hearing reports on construction of more new hotels and matters related to better transport, financial assistance and hotel management presented by hoteliers, the President coordinated the matters and attended to the needs. The President made cash donations at Tuyintaung Pagoda, Lawkananda Pagoda and Shwezigon Pagoda after paying homage.

The President enjoyed the panoramic view of Bagan from Tuyintaung Pagoda’s platform and left instructions on greening of environs of Mya Lake at the foot of the mountain and water storage measures.

On his arrival at Kammye Lake which is under renovation in Taungtha Township, Mandalay Region on Thursday, only the success of rural development and poverty reduction scheme could bring socio-economic improvement to rural people. He continued that supply of potable water and irrigated water, rural electrification, better communications and promotion of health and education sectors for the people who have been living in 64000 villages in the country are in the list of top priorities of the government. He called on farmers to deal with agriculture business while the President made meetings this year.

Marine resources to become invaluable treasury for the nation

Marine products such as fish and prawn are in great demand in China and Thailand, he added at the weekly meeting on 25 February. “Chinese merchants waiting at jetties in Yangon purchase fish and prawn from trawlers at good price. High demands of Thai and Chinese merchants are in competitiveness in buying fish and prawn from Myanmar seas,” said fishery entrepreneurs.

In the past, fish and prawn produced from Taninthayi Region were sold to Ranong via Kawthoung. But, it was not cost effectiveness due to low price and travel expense. Now, thanks to border trade camps in Htikhee and Mawtaung, Thai entrepreneurs arrive at Dawei and Myeik by car to purchase fish and prawn.

The root cause of Thailand’s tremendous demand on fish and prawn is high consumption at home. In addition, Thailand exports seafood to the world market including the US and Europe. That is why marine products are essential for Thailand and its trading.

“If we need to conserve fish and prawn for long-term use and to have good price, Myanmar marine products can be dabbed as treasury for the nation,” said General Secretary U Win Kyaing of the federation.

Thai PM faces negligence charges as protest leader broaches talks

BANGKOK, 27 Feb — Thailand’s anti-corruption agency weighed charges of negligence against Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra on Thursday as the leader of protests aimed at forcing her from power suggested a televised debate after weeks of refusing to talk.

The charges relate to a disastrous rice subsidy scheme that paid farmers above the market price and has run out of funds, adding to the government’s woes as farmers — normally the prime minister’s biggest supporters — demand their money.

More than 300 government opponents gathered outside the National Anti-Corruption Commission (NACC) in north Bangkok where the charges were due to be discussed with Yingluck’s lawyers, as riot police stood guard inside the complex.

Because of the protest, the hearing had to be moved to a different location. Yingluck, who has stayed mostly out of Bangkok in recent days, did not attend.

The anti-government protesters elsewhere in the city, whose disruption of a general election this month has left Thailand in paralysis, want to topple Yingluck and erase the influence of her brother, ousted premier Thaksin Shinawatra, seen by many as the real power in the country.

Protest leader Suthep Thaugsuban, known for making dramatic gestures without always following through, said he was willing to appear in a live television debate with Yingluck after weeks of refusing any form of talks.

New Ukrainians propose Russian troops on alert

SIMEPPEL (UKRAINE) KEV, 27 Feb — Ukraine’s protest leaders named the ministers they want to form a new government following the overthrow of President Viktor Yanukovich, as an angry Russia put 150,000 troops on high alert in a show of strength.

President Vladimir Putin’s order on Wednesday for soldiers to be ready for war games near Ukraine was the Kremlin’s boldest gesture yet after days of sabre rattling since its ally Yanukovich was ousted by popular protests that toppled Yanukovich on Wednesday named former economy minister Arseniy Yatseniuk as their choice to head a new interim government. US needs to do more in approach to North Korea talks

WASHINGTON, 27 Feb — US foreign policy and North Korea experts said in a report released on Wednesday that the United States should engage more with North Korea as a way to revive talks aimed at ending Pyongyang’s nuclear-weapons programme.

The joint report from two think tanks, National Security Network and the National Committee on North Korea (NCNK), said Washington needs to shift from an “all or nothing” approach requiring Pyongyang to meet conditions for the resumption of nuclear talks with major powers that were suspended in 2009. The current approach, in which US-North Korean contact generally has been limited to a channel via the North Korean mission at the United Nations, effectively gave the initiative to Pyongyang when Washington should be aiming to set the agenda, the report argued.

“The refusal to engage in any preliminary measures will inevitably lead to a de-facto acquiescence to North Korea’s nuclear status,” it said. “Interim steps can provide immediate value to the United States while also putting more concrete steps towards denuclearization into the real of the possible.”

North Korea promised to abandon its nuclear programme in 2005 but backed away from the agreement, testing nuclear devices in 2006 and 2009.

Negotiations have held up since 2009 and US Secretary of State John Kerry warned Moscow earlier this month that the United States began in 2003 with Bush and candidates for other key ministries, after its members addressed crowds on Independence Square, cradle of the insurgency.

Japan-US summit on Pacific trade talks unlikely

TOKYO, 27 Feb — Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and US President Barack Obama are unlikely to have negotiations over deadlocked regional free trade talks when Obama visits Japan in April, a government source said on Wednesday.

Speculation was growing that the leaders would seek a breakthrough after no broad agreement was reached at ministerial meeting on a Trans-Pacific Partnership trade agreement held through Tuesday in Singapore.

“Negotiations (toward the resolution) would be impossible,” the source said about chances of the leaders taking up the issue during their talks.

Another government source said that “ministers come forward only for deciding the format of negotiations and for concluding negotiations,” indicating it would be hard to hold a ministerial meeting if no progress is made at negotiators’ meeting scheduled for April.

Turkish Prime Minister targeted in second audio tape

ANKARA, 27 Feb — A second audio recording, presented as the voice of Turkish Prime Minister Tayyip Erdogan asking his son not to accept an amount of money on offer in a business deal but to hold out for more, was published on YouTube by an anonymous poster using a pseudonym on Wednesday.

Erdogan said a similar post on the video-sharing site on Monday, allegedly of him telling his son Bilal to dispose of large sums of cash as a graft investigation erupted, was faked by his political enemies.

“Don’t take it. Whatever he has promised us, he should bring this. If he is not going to bring that, there is no need,” the voice on the latest recording, presented by a user under the pseudonym Haramzade—are said to Erdogan, says.

“The others are bringing. Why can’t he bring? What do they think this business is? ... But don’t worry they will fall into our lap,” the voice says.

Reuters could not verify the authenticity of either recording.

“We are going to check whether the tapes are fake or not and no statement is planned at the moment,” a senior government official told Reuters.

The recordings, which appeared within days of the ruling AK Party’s official launch of a campaign for local elections at the end of March, are the latest and potentially most damaging allegations in a graft scandal that Erdogan has cast as concocted to unseat him.

Late on Monday, his office released a statement describing the first recordings as “completely untrue and the product of an immoral montage.”

Iraqi govt. denies arms deal with Iran

BAGHDAD, 27 Feb — The Iraqi government denied on Wednesday it had struck any deal with Iran to purchase arms and ammunition from its friendly neighbour country. A Defence Ministry statement said companies from many countries, including Iran, offered to supply the Iraqi army with arms and ammunition, “but the trade-off was in favour of other companies and there was no signing of any contract with any Iranian company.”

On Tuesday, Iranian Ambassador to Baghdad Hassan Danaei told Al-Arabiya news that Iraq had denied such a claim, saying: “No agreement on military and arms cooperation has been inked with the Iraqi side so far,” reluting recent Western media reports on an Iran-Iraq arms deal. However, Iran will be ready to consider such a request if it is filed by its friendly neighbour Iraq, Danaei told Fars.

Earlier, the standoff was sparked by Hassan al-Senaidi, a senior lawmaker from Iraqi Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki’s Dawat Party, who told reporters that Iraq is negotiating buying weapons from Iran and insisted this was within its right and violated no international sanctions. — Xinhua

Chinese UN envoy stresses poverty eradication in post 2015 development agenda

UNITED NATIONS, 27 Feb — A Chinese envoy to the United Nations on Wednesday said that poverty eradication should remain the core of the post 2015 development agenda.

Wang Min, China’s deputy permanent representative to the UN, made the remarks at a meeting of Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) on 2014 operational activities for development segment.

“Poverty eradication constitutes the biggest global challenge and the core requisite for the sustainable development of the developing countries,” Wang said. “Eradicating poverty via increasing the capacity for self-development of the developing countries should remain the main focus of the UN development system.”

The post 2015 development agenda will succeed the current Millennium Development Goals (MDGs), a set of eight global development targets required for accomplishment by the turn of the year 2015.

Wang highlighted the efforts made by the UN development system and agencies to support developing countries in their poverty eradication efforts, and hoped they will continue to make project planning and implementation more in line with the overall goals.

While stressing that the MDGs embody a solemn commitment of all countries to greater development, the Chinese diplomat said that China has always attached great importance to development.

“It has integrated MDG-related efforts into the overall national strategy for development and is committed to a balanced development in economic, social and environmental areas and has made remarkable achievements,” said Wang.

The Chinese government will continue to provide, to the best of its capability, assistance to other developing countries, Wang noted, adding that China’s development will continue to contribute to the world’s sustainable development. — Xinhua

Picture books reach tsunami-hit city ahead of 3 yr anniversary

TOKYO, 27 Feb — Children and grown-ups in a city of northeastern Japan devastated by the March 2011 earthquake and tsunami are now able to read around 1,500 picture books donated by Tarō Gomi, one of the most notable authors of children’s books in Japan, ahead of the third anniversary of the disaster.

The donation of the books was made possible by the efforts of people in Tokyo’s Ōta Ward who have been supporting the city of Higashimatsushima, Miyagi Prefecture, since shortly after the disaster. “I was at a loss in the face of the mountain of cardboard boxes,” said Mari Murayama who coordinated the donation, recalling the day when she saw the picture books in Gomi’s old house in Tokyo at the end of March last year.

Murayama, 52, had hit upon the idea of sending the books to Higashimatsushima several days before when Gomi told her that he was looking for somebody to take in the books prior to him moving to a new house. Coincidentally, Gomi was also thinking that his books should be offered to a disaster-hit area once the situation stabilized and local people felt the need for them. — Kyodo News

Int'l aid for Ukraine pledged while deposed president wanted

BEIJING, 27 Feb — Western countries pledged on Wednesday political and financial support for the Ukrainian interim government, while ousted President Viktor Yanukovych has been put on the international wanted list.

Ex-editor of HK newspaper seriously injured in stabbing attack

HONG KONG, 27 Feb — The former top editor of an outspoken Chinese-language newspaper in Hong Kong was stabbed and seriously injured on Wednesday.

The attack on Kevin Lau, who was the chief editor of Hong Kong’s Ming Pao Daily until being sacked last month, triggered a chorus of condemnation from the government, political groups and fellow journalists. A knife-wielding attacker stabbed Lau three times in a residential area before fleeing on a motor cycle driven by an accomplice, according to police and media reports.

Food and Health Secretary Ko Wing-man said Lau remains in critical condition. “The government and I are extremely concerned and outraged about the attack on (Lau) this morning,” Chief Executive Leung Chun-ying said after visiting Lau in hospital.

“Hong Kong is a lawful society and we will not tolerate violence. The act of the perpetrator was deliberate and vicious and we strongly condemn this savage act,” Leung said. Leung declined to speculate on the cause of the attack, but reiterated that press freedom and freedom of expression are Hong Kong’s core values that are not to be shaken.

Secretary for Security Lau Tung-kwok said there is no evidence that the attack on Lau is linked to alleged infringement on press freedom. — Kyodo News

KABUL, 27 Feb — Hundreds of Afghans from all walks of life staged a peaceful rally here on Wednesday, calling on the government of President Hamid Karzai to wage an all-out war against the Taleban while condemning the atrocities committed by the insurgent group.

“We are gathered here today to demonstrate our support and unity with the national army and calling upon the president to toughen his stance against the Taleban terrorists,” Mir Ahmad Joyanda, a former legislator, said in his speech. Assembled in a park in downtown Kabul, the peaceful protestors denounced Taleban-linked violent attacks and urged the security forces to seek the Taleban militants wherever they are to put an end to their reign of terror.

Carrying banners and placards reading “Death to Taleban, Death to Extremism,” “The commander-in-chief of the armed forces, are you with us or with our enemies?”, “Long live the national security forces,” the protestors expressed their support for the country’s national security forces.

Rwanda angered by French court decision on genocide suspects

KIGALI, 27 Feb — The decision by a French court to overturn a previous court ruling that approves the extradition to Kigali of three Rwandan genocide suspects has sparked anger in Rwanda. The Cour de Cassation on Wednesday ruled that Claude Muhayimana, Innocent Musabyimana and Laurent Serubuga, suspected of involvement in the 1994 genocide against the Tutsi in Rwanda, cannot be extradited to Kigali because genocide was not legally defined as a crime in 1994.

Wednesday’s decision overturned a November appeals court ruling approving the extradition of Muhayimana and Serubuga, a former colonel. Rwanda’s Prosecutor General Richard Muhumwa expressed disappointment with the ruling by the French court.

Japan, UAE to promote cooperation in energy development

TOKYO, 27 Feb — Japan and the United Arab Emirates agreed Wednesday to enhance cooperation in energy development, including oil production and the construction of nuclear power plants in the Middle Eastern country.

During talks with Crown Prince Sheikh Mohammed bin Zayed Al Nahyan of Abu Dhabi in Tokyo, Prime Minister Shinzo Abe expressed his desire to “further strengthen the comprehensive partnership” with the United Arab Emirates. Abu Dhabi is the biggest of the seven emirates that make up the country.

The United Arab Emirates is the second-biggest exporter of oil to Japan after Saudi Arabia, and around 40 percent of the oilfields Japanese companies have developed abroad are located in waters off Abu Dhabi.

Japan’s interest in many of the Abu Dhabi oilfields will expire in 2018 and Tokyo is seeking to extend the rights.

Abe appreciated the United Arab Emirate’s consent in January to extend the right to one of the oilfields for 15 years beyond its expiration in 2026.

Hydropower plant to spur growth in strategic province

VIETNAM, 27 Feb — Construction has begun on the 450 KW Nhot Ou Hydropower Plant which aims to spur development in the geographically advantageous Phongsaly province bordering China and Vietnam, according to state-run daily Vietnam Times, on Thursday.

The plant is located in the remote northern province of Phongsaly, nestled between China’s Yunnan province and Vietnam’s Dien Bien Province. The plant is expected to supply 3 million kw of electricity a year.

On Monday Prime Minister Thongsaing Tham-mavong paid a working visit to Phongsaly, calling on provincial authorities to increase commercial production.

The Prime Minister also instructed authorities to identify the causes of local poverty so increased employment could be achieved in the province.

During the trip the Prime Minister emphasized the importance of Phongsaly’s geographic location, commenting that the advantage would facilitate the province’s access to trade and investment with China and Vietnam.

Bags banned in Boston Marathon for security

NEW YORK, 27 Feb — Bags are prohibited from this year’s Boston Marathon for security concern following last year’s deadly bombing, the Boston Athletic Association announced on Wednesday.

Marathon runners typically choose not to bring bags or backpacks to keep personal items. Those bags are bused between the starting line in Hopkinton and the finish line in Boston.

But this year, runners will not be allowed to bring backpacks or bags, which will no longer be allowed in certain areas near the start or finish line, or along the 26.2-mile course.

Runners will be given a chance to check gear on Boston Common on the morning of the marathon to allow them to have a change of clothing at the end of the race.

Ireland launches national employment summit

DUBLIN, 27 Feb — Ireland on Wednesday launched a national employment summit to look at the role that technology plays in attracting and retaining talent. The summit, part of national employment week 2014, is also aimed at examining the lessons and successes of corporations who boast high performance cultures.

“To sort out our public finances and get people back to work are the two main pillars of responsibility for this government,” Irish Prime Minister Enda Kenny said at a launching ceremony. “I see so many signs around the country now, the beginnings of confidence and enthusiasm. This needs to be built into, harnessed and driven. That’s why national employment week speaks to itself in what you’re doing,” he added. Of the 58,000 net new jobs that were created in Ireland last year, two thirds came from companies that were less than five years old, according to Kenny. —Xinhua

Biomarkers in blood could predict mortality risk

Helsinki, 27 Feb — A joint medical research conducted by Finnish and Estonian researchers found that some biomarkers in blood sample could predict mortality risk to people who appear healthy, Finnish Broadcasting Company YLE reported on Wednesday.

Researchers used NMR Spectroscopy, which is capable to screen large numbers of blood samples in a cost-effective way, to screen blood samples taken from a total of 17,000 Finnish and Estonian people, and measured 106 biomarkers to check if any of them were associated with risks of death.

A biomarker is a biological molecule found in blood, body fluids or tissues that may signal an abnormal process, a condition or a disease. The level of a particular biomarker may indicate a patient’s risk of disease, or likely response to a treatment. As a result, the researchers found that those people with elevated levels of four biomarkers plasma albumin, alpha-1-acid glycoprotein, very low-density lipoprotein particle size and citrate in their blood samples had a significantly increased risk of death in the next five years.

During the follow-up study, among the participants, 288 persons with a biomarker score in the top 20 percent were dead of life threatening illness, such as heart disease and cancer within five years, while only 15 people in the bottom 20 percent died in the same period.—Xinhua

Older fathers linked to risk for psychiatric, school issues in kids

WASHINGTON, 27 Feb — Children born to older fathers might be at higher risks for a variety of psychiatric problems and academic difficulties compared with children born to younger fathers, a new study said on Wednesday.

The researchers estimated the risk of psychiatric problems, including autism, attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder (ADHD), psychosis, bipolar disorder, suicide attempt and substance abuse, as well as academic trouble like failing grades, low educational attainment and low IQ scores, used siblings, cousins and first- born cousins in comparison.

Compared to a child born to a 24-year-old father, a child born to a 45-year-old father is 3.5 times more likely to have autism, 13 times more likely to have ADHD, two times more likely to have a psychotic disorder, 2.5 times more likely to have suicidal behaviour or a substance abuse problem, the researchers said.

For most of these problems, the likelihood of the disorder increased steadily with advancing paternal age, suggesting there is no particular paternal age at childbearing that suddenly becomes problematic.

“We were shocked by the findings,” said Brian D’Onofrio, lead author and associate professor of psychiatry at Indiana University.

“The specific associations with paternal age were much, much larger than in previous studies.”

Previous research suggested sperm of older men have more genetic mutations, which may increase the risk of psychosomatic, intellectual and academic problems.

D’Onofrio said their study may have important social and public policy implications.” The findings suggest that (a) a vast paternal age represents a risk of numerous public health and societal problems.—Xinhua

Fujitsu to withdraw from smartphone semiconductor business

Tokyo, 27 Feb — Fujitsu Ltd has decided to withdraw from semiconductor development business for smartphones, in which it was engaged to- gether with NTT Docomo Inc and NEC Corp, Fujitsu sources said on Thursday.

The company has found it difficult to compete with its foreign rivals due to its failure to develop a high-performance product at a low cost. The three companies have been developing baseband chips, known as the “brains” of smartphones, which control wireless communication and signals. The companies will liquidate Access Network Technology Ltd, which they jointly established in 2012, by the end of March.

Some 90 employees including engineers will be transferred to Fujitsu and other companies, where they previously worked.

In the baseband chip business, Qualcomm Inc. of the United States holds about 40 percent of the global share. Among other foreign rivals heavily investing in the business is Taiwan’s MediaTek Inc, which produces semiconductors for low-cost smartphones, popular in China. Fujitsu has been struggling to sell its smartphones and is working to reduce its deficit in the mobile phone business.—Kyodo News

Tiny Northwest Biotherapeutics aims to dominate brain cancer

New York, 27 Feb — Ten years ago, cash-strapped biotechnology company Northwest Biotherapeutics Inc was down to three employees and one week from closing its doors when a financial backer came forward at the annual JP Morgan Healthcare Conference. By 2007, that backer, Lindell Powers, had become chairman of the Mary- land-based company.

A venture capitalist, Powers remains one of its largest shareholders and has invested more than $20 million in the company and its experimental drugs for brain cancer and inoperable tumours.

“Biotech is not for the faint of heart,” Powers said in an interview. “Through two major recessions and pummeling in the capital markets, we’ve chosen to keep our focus.” Now worth close to $300 mil- lion, Northwest’s stock has jumped 75 percent this year to the $7 range.

Institutional investors include Goldman Sachs and Franklin Advisers Inc., and more industry analysts are taking notice. But many other investors are betting against the company, highlighting the uncer- tain, high-risk nature of developing drugs for hard-to-treat diseases.

The key to Northwest’s survival has been delivering strong trial results in a tiny cadre of patients for its brain-cancer drug, called DCVax-L.

A similar drug called DCVax-Direct has begun testing for a wide array of solid tumors that cannot be cured by surgery, including cancers of the colon, pancreas, breast and melanoma.

They are among an emerging new crop of drugs that coax the body’s own immune system into tracking down and killing cancer cells. More specifically they harness dendritic cells, master cells of the immune system that give marching orders to its soldiers, including T-cells and B-cells, which make antibodies.

Northwest Biotherapeutics’ entry into the high-stakes field follows two high-profile disappointments of dendritic cell-based therapies from ImmunoCellular Therapeutics Ltd and Dendreon Corp. Powers, chief execu- tive since 2011, is making the case to investors that the future of its drugs looks far different.—Reuters
New species reveals secrets to life in deep oceans

WASHINGTON, 27 Feb — New Zealand scientists say they have discovered a new species of crustacean, which provides an important insight into the little known lives of creatures in the deep sea.

The previously unknown species of sand-hopper was found living inside another deep sea organism on the Chatham Rise, an area of ocean floor to the east of New Zealand, said scientists from the National Institute of Water and Atmospheric Research (NIWA) on Wednesday. The sand-hopper, an amphipod species, was found living inside a see-through layer on a bryozoan, also known as a moss animal, which lives between 500 and 1,500 metres deep, said NIWA marine biologist Dr Dennis Gordon. It was probably the only example of a relationship between these two types of organisms known anywhere in the world, he said in a statement. "It is a significant find as much less is known about relationships among organisms in the deep sea, compared to those in shallower water," Gordon said.

Scientists believed the hoppers reproduced in the bryozoan and when the bryozoan died, the hoppers left to colonize another. They were unsure whether both the amphipods and the bryozoan benefited from the arrangement or whether the hoppers were the sole beneficiaries, deriving nutrients and protection from their host. The scientists have named the new species Tus murus (meaning "safe") and the new amphipod genus bryoconverter ("living in Bryozoan").

Smartphone wars shift from gadgetry to price

Wellington, 27 Feb — New Zealand says they have discovered a new species of crustacean, which provides an important insight into the little known lives of creatures in the deep sea.

The previously unknown species of sand-hopper was found living inside another deep sea organism on the Chatham Rise, an area of ocean floor to the east of New Zealand, said scientists from the National Institute of Water and Atmospheric Research (NIWA) on Wednesday. The sand-hopper, an amphipod species, was found living inside a see-through layer on a bryozoan, also known as a moss animal, which lives between 500 and 1,500 metres deep, said NIWA marine biologist Dr Dennis Gordon. It was probably the only example of a relationship between these two types of organisms known anywhere in the world, he said in a statement. "It is a significant find as much less is known about relationships among organisms in the deep sea, compared to those in shallower water," Gordon said.

Scientists believed the hoppers reproduced in the bryozoan and when the bryozoan died, the hoppers left to colonize another. They were unsure whether both the amphipods and the bryozoan benefited from the arrangement or whether the hoppers were the sole beneficiaries, deriving nutrients and protection from their host. The scientists have named the new species Tus murus (meaning "safe") and the new amphipod genus bryoconverter ("living in Bryozoan").

US space telescope spots 715 more planets

CAPE CANAVERAL, (Florida), 27 Feb — Scientists added a record 715 exoplanets to the list of known worlds beyond the solar system, boosting the overall tally to nearly 1,700, astronomers said on Wednesday. The additions include four planets about 2-1/2 times as big as Earth that are the right distance from their parent stars for liquid surface water, which is believed to be key for life. The discoveries were made with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration’s planet-hunting Kepler space telescope before it was sidelined by a pointing system problem last year. The telescope, launched in 2009, spent four productive years staring at 160,000 target stars for signs of planets passing by, relative to the telescope’s line of sight. The tally of planets announced at a NASA Press conference on Wednesday boosted Kepler’s confirmed planet count from 246 to 961. Combined with other telescopes’ results, the headcount of planets beyond the solar system, or exoplanets, now numbers nearly 1,700.

“We almost doubled, just today, the number of planets known to humanity,” astronomer Douglas Hudgins, head of exoplanet exploration at NASA Headquarters in Washington, told reporters on a conference call.

Milestone

A handful of our human beings could meet with the success till the end of their life. It can be said that his or her efforts and undertakings throughout their life are important milestones that can bring the benefits not only to his or her environs but also to the country.

Only a few people could attain such kind of goal while some others passed away without doing anything. A person should hit an important milestone in his or her life. Thanks to the efforts of people from all fields, the world sees the progress and development. Those from the fields of science and technology, economy and politics could serve the interests of our human society.

It is evident that thanks to efforts of our forefathers, Myanmar has long been standing tall as a sovereign nation. We should lay important milestones not only for our family but also for our human society. Only then, our younger generation would have to enjoy the fruits of it.

Taking a look at the developed nations, people there have made continued efforts to modify and develop the already-existing ones of their forefathers. Our country would see progress and development when each and every body could play their respective roles.

We all should put historic milestones for our younger generations and follow in the steps of our forefathers.

Intensified efforts fail to curb rhino poaching in S Africa

JOHANNESBURG, 27 Feb — Less than two months into 2014, a total of 146 rhinos have been slaughtered in South Africa despite intensified efforts to curb the scourge, authorities said on Wednesday.

During this period, the number of people arrested for rhino poaching-related offences climbed to 44, the Department of Environmental Affairs said in its latest update on rhino poaching statistics.

The Kruger National Park (KNP), one of Africa’s largest game reserves, remains the hardest hit by rhino poaching, having lost 95 rhinos since 1 January, 2014.

A total of 14 rhinos were poached in North West Province, 14 in Limpopo, 10 in KwaZulu-Natal and six in Mpumalanga.

Seven other rhinos were poached in other parts of the country. Twenty poachers have been arrested in the KNP and 10 in KwaZulu- Natal. Last year, South Africa lost 1,004 rhinos to poaching, compared with 333 rhinos killed in 2010.

The government warns that the country’s rhino population will be close to extinction by 2026 if no effective measures are taken. South Africa is home to over 73 percent of the world’s rhino population.

The government blames crime syndicates for growing rhino poaching, which is fueled by demand for rhino horns which are said to cure many diseases, notably cancer, although there is no scientific evidence to prove this.

Sweden’s newborn princess named Leonore

STOCKHOLM, 27 Feb — Sweden’s newborn princess, daughter of Princess Madeleine and her husband Christopher O’Neill, was named Leonore, with the title Duchess of Gotland, local media reported on Wednesday.

The name of the princess was announced by King of Sweden Carl XVI Gustaf at a special cabinet meeting at the Swedish Royal Palace on Wednesday afternoon, said the Swedish daily Dagens Nyheter (Dn).

With reference to the name Leonore, which is quite unusual as a first name in Sweden, it is implied that it was a choice of the parents.

Lilian was the name of the late Princess Lilian of Sweden, who died in 2013 and had been close to Princess Madeleine and the Crown Princess Victoria, while Maria is the name of O’Neill’s mother.

The new princess’s baptism ceremony will be held in the Royal Chapel at the Royal Palace in early summer this year, but the exact date has not been decided yet. Princess Madeleine, the King of Sweden’s youngest daughter, got married with O’Neill, a New York banker, in June 2013.

Oscars pit gravitas of ‘Slave’ against pull of ‘Gravity’

LA/NEW YORK

Los Angeles, 27 Feb — To historian Brenda Stevenson, a scholar on American slavery, “12 Years a Slave” is a masterful cinematic work that achieves more than any other film on slavery, so worthy that she plans to screen it in classes at her university, UCLA. It’s the kind of validation “12 Years a Slave” has been earning from experts, critics, audiences and the film industry for six months now. Even so, the acclaimed drama may falter in the final test, losing out on the most coveted of movie prizes, the Academy Award for best picture.

The film from British director Steve McQueen appears to be the frontrunner for film’s highest honour at Sunday’s ceremony but has at least three factors conspiring against it: another high-quality, groundbreaking movie called “Gravity,” the tricky math of Oscar voting and the film’s own brutal depiction of American slavery. “I think it is a hard film to watch,” said Stevenson. “One of the things I think Steve McQueen does extremely well is capture the violence of the institution.”

That unflinching portrayal of a real American story, that of the free black man Solomon Northup who is tricked and sold into slavery, may win on the gravitas scale. But sometimes the 6,000-plus voting members of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences just want to reward enjoyable entertainment and “Gravity” gives that in spades. If this year’s nine best picture nominees add up to the strongest year for film in recent memory, they also have injected a good dose of uncertainty into Hollywood’s biggest night. Voters had a good and varied lot from which to choose, with big successes such as “American Hustle” and “The Wolf of Wall Street,” and smaller films such as “Philomena.”

“In the 12-13 years that I have been doing this stuff seriously, I can’t remember a best picture race in which there was less certainty than there is this year,” said Scott Feinberg, awards analyst at The Hollywood Reporter. Over at the other trade publication, Variety, awards editor Tim Gray said that “more than ever, I’m totally flummoxed.” “I think best picture is between ‘12 Years a Slave’ and ‘Gravity’ but I wouldn’t bet money on that,” Gray said. In a telling sign of the tight battle, the two films had an exact tie in one of the most reliable predictors of the Oscar best picture, the Producers Guild Award.

The heightened drama around the big prize could give viewers an extra reason to tune in to the live ABC telecast of the glamorous event, hosted this year by comedian Ellen DeGeneres. The cliffhanger category also stands in contrast to more predictable outcomes in the top acting races. Cate Blanchett should win best actress for “Blue Jasmine,” while Matthew McConaughey is favored for best actor for “Dallas Buyers Club” and co-star Jared Leto has a lock on best supporting actor.

The best supporting actress category could see favorite Lupita Nyong’o, the slave Patsey in “12 Years a Slave,” upset by Jennifer Lawrence’s loopy wife in 1970s caper “American Hustle.” For best animated film, the tale of Nordic princesses “Frozen” is expected to give the Disney Animation Studios its first Oscar in that category since it was added in 2002.

‘Frozen’ album reclains top spot for fifth time on Billboard 200

Los Angeles, 27 Feb — The soundtrack for Disney’s hit animated film “Frozen” reclaimed the top spot on the weekly Billboard 200 album chart on Wednesday, becoming the first soundtrack in 15 years to notch more than five weeks at No 1 on the chart. The “Frozen” soundtrack, which features the Oscar-nominated song “Let It Go,” sold another 89,000 copies last week, according to figures from Nielsen SoundScan.

Since its release in November, the album has sold more than 11 million copies and topped Billboard 200 for five non-consecutive weeks. The Walt Disney Co animated movie about two Nordic princesses continues to perform strongly, nearing $1 billion at the worldwide box office. The last film soundtrack to spend more than five weeks at No. 1 on the Billboard 200 was 1998’s “Titanic,” which featured Celine Dion’s hit “My Heart Will Go On” and held the top spot for 16 consecutive weeks, Billboard said.

The “Frozen” album pushed last week’s chart-topper, country singer Eric Church’s “The Outsiders” to No 2 with sales of 74,000 copies. Two new albums cracked the top 10 of the Billboard 200 chart this week. Country artist Cole Swindell landed at No 3 with his latest self-titled record, while rock group Issues came in at No. 9 with its self-titled album. Overall album sales for the week ending on 23 February totaled 4.8 million units, Billboard said, down 12 percent from the comparable week in 2013.

Bieber bodyguard charged with snatching camera at Georgia arcade

Atlanta, 27 Feb — One of pop singer Justin Bieber’s bodyguards has been arrested and charged with stealing a photographer’s $10,000 camera outside an arcade in an Atlanta suburb, police said on Wednesday. The 32-year-old guard, Hugo Hesny, was outside a children’s play center and party business called the Funhouse late on Tuesday when he warned a photographer that he was too close to the teenage entertainer, the Sandy Springs Police Department said in a statement. “A confrontation ensued and the photographer attempted to leave the location, but at some point, the security guard caught up and took the camera,” the police statement said. The incident was the latest in a string of legal problems involving 19-year-old Bieber, who last month was charged with driving under the influence, resisting arrest and using an expired license after Miami Beach police say they caught him drag racing.

Villeneuve returning to Indy 500

New York, 27 Feb — Former Formula One world champion Jacques Villeneuve is taking a crack at winning another Indianapolis 500 by joining Schmidt Peterson Motorsports to race in the famed event he won in 1995, the team announced on Wednesday.

Villeneuve, 42, left the circuit after winning his first Indy 500 and the CART championship that year and has not started an IndyCar race since.

“We started talking not long ago, actually a few weeks ago,” said the Canadian of the 25 May race. “It all went fast. “The discussions happened at the right time because I’d been watching the IndyCars last year, and it looked extremely exciting with the new cars, to the point where I was angry and jealous that I wasn’t racing. So that got me going again.”

The Quebec native left for F1 after his triumphant 1995 season and competed from 1996 through 2006, winning the world championship in 1997. Villeneuve moved to stock cars in 2007 and has run in a variety of series including NASCAR’s Sprint Cup, Nationwide and Le Mans as well as sports cars.

Villeneuve said the new-style IndyCars and the aggressive racing style got him itching to return. “When I started seeing that last year, I started getting excited again, just because the racing was amazing, the cars looked fast and aggressive, it looked hard on the drivers, and the battles were fierce, which is all what I love about racing,” he said.

Salvo, (NC), 27 Feb — Title-holders Ashton Eaton, Ryan Whiting and Bernard Lagat headline a powerful US team mixing youth and experience for next month’s world indoor championships in 2007 and has run in a variety of series including NASCAR’s Sprint Cup, Nationwide and Le Mans as well as sports cars.

Villeneuve said the new-style IndyCars and the aggressive racing style got him itching to return. “When I started seeing that last year, I started getting excited again, just because the racing was amazing, the cars looked fast and aggressive, it looked hard on the drivers, and the battles were fierce, which is all what I love about racing,” he said.

McIlroy says he has head right this time

Carly, (NC), 27 Feb — What a difference a year has made for Rory McIlroy, who 12 months ago tarnished his reputation by quitting during the second round of the PGA Tour’s Honda Classic. McIlroy’s head was a mess and his game was not much better at this time last year as he walked off the course citing a toothache, an excuse he later admitted was rather lame.

The Northern Irishman, who at the time was defending champion, was surprised by the widespread criticism he received for his withdrawal, but on the eve of this year’s event he seemed genuinely contrite as he recalled the incident. “My game wasn’t where I wanted it to be and my mental state wasn’t quite where it needed to be,” a relaxed-looking McIlroy told reporters at Palm Beach National on Wednesday.

There were a few things that were occupying my thoughts that probably didn’t need to be and shouldn’t have been.

“It’s difficult to deal with, especially when you haven’t had to deal with it before. It was a bit of a shock to the system to me.”

Without addressing specific details, McIlroy seemed to be alluding to multiple aspects of his life, both personal and business.

After ending 2012 as the world’s top-ranked golfer, he endured a tumultuous 2013 as he struggled at times on the course, and off it as he ditched his man-management group in a dispute that is headed to court.

But he ended the year on a more upbeat note, winning the Australian Open in December before subsequently becoming engaged to tennis star Caroline Wozniacki.

“There were a lot of things I needed to change off the course to get my head right to be able to go on the course and just think about golf,” said the 24-year-old McIlroy, who has already won two majors.” —Reuters

Regal Real thrash Schalke, Galatasaray hold Chelsea

London, 27 Feb — Real Madrid laid down a marker in this season’s Champions League by inflicting a 6-1 thrashing on Schalke 04 in a one-sided last-16 first leg while Galatasaray and Chelsea drew 1-1 on Wednesday.

Real’s galactico-laced frontline of Karim Benzema, Gareth Bale and Cristianos Ronaldo scored two goals each as the Spaniards secured their second win in 26 trips to Germany and effectively booked their spot in the last eight.

Fernando Torres’s early goal for Chelsea was canceled out by Galatasaray’s Aurelien Chedjou in the second half. Benzema opened the scoring for Real Madrid on 13 minutes after Bale and Ronaldo had caused mischief in the German defence and Wales winger Bale drove through the heart of the Sevilla side to double the lead eight minutes later. Ronaldo scored seven minutes after the break with a left-footed effort after a series of steps by his former club but suffered a largely frustrating evening leading the line for his new side.

Chelsea took the lead when Torres scored the first goal for an English club in this season’s last-16 first legs, side-footing into an empty net from close range after nine minutes. Chedjou equalized after 64 minutes when he tapped in after Wesley Sneijder’s corner was missed by John Terry. The return legs will take place on 18 March.

Mexico president sees swift extradition of kingpin Guzman

Mexico City, 27 Feb — Captured Mexican drug lord Joaquin “Shorty” Guzman faces an outstanding jail term in Mexico and any extradition to the United States is likely to take time, President Enrique Pena Nieto said on Wednesday.

In an interview with broadcaster Unision, Pena Nieto suggested that Guzman, who was Mexico’s most wanted man when he was arrested in the northwest of the country on Saturday, was unlikely to be handed over to the United States quickly.

“The process of extradition can take time,” he said, noting that Mexico’s attorney general’s office would need to consider a request on the basis of investigations that it was carrying out against Guzman, who escaped from a Mexican prison in 2001.

Guzman headed the most powerful drug cartel in Mexico and was responsible for a huge chunk of the cocaine, heroin and other drugs trafficked north to the United States.

In view of Mexico’s position, Pena Nieto said, what was important was not only Guzman’s recapture, “and in consequence that he serve out the term for which he had already been sentenced, but also the new cases that will need to follow.”

“This does not clash with a possible extradition request,” he added.

Top Mexican officials have already said Guzman is likely to remain in Mexico for the time being while he is investigated over the vast criminal empire behind his Sinaloa Cartel.

Cary, (NC), 27 Feb — Tiger Woods, Adam Scott, Phil Mickelson and Rory McIlroy will play in the same tournament for the first time this year when they contest the Honda Classic starting in south Florida on Thursday.

The $6 million PGA Tour event used to be the week link on the four-stop PGA Tour Florida swing, but no longer as a confluence of factors has brought the game’s four biggest global stars together in Palm Beach Gardens.

Woods and McIlroy both now live locally, while Scott and Mickelson opted to skip the World Golf Championships-Match Play event in Arizona last week (as did Woods), and instead will use this week as the springboard for their preparation for the Masters in April.

“Once we get to Florida, we’re all thinking our way to Augusta,” Woods told reporters at Palm Beach National on Wednesday.

He has played only two events this year, struggling by his own high standards both times, but he has at least three more tournaments to find his competitive legs before the first major of the year at Augusta National.

“I was pleasantly surprised by how well I was hitting it today,” said Woods, whose form has prompted former British Open champion Ian Baker-Finch to suggest that the 14 times major champion stop worrying about swing intricacies and instead focus on finding his rhythm.

Woods suggested he is doing that to some extent.

“We’re just working on the same things,” Woods said of himself and coach Sean Foley. “He’s doing a lot of video and he’s looking at it. I’m not really looking at it. I know what I need to do, the feels that are associated with certain parts of the video and I’m just focused on that. He focuses on a more technical level.”

“He comes up with a game plan of what I need to work on and then I go off and work on it. I’ve always done it in the past and it’s worked pretty well for me.” Masters champion on Scott, meanwhile, returns to competition after a six-week break. Since curtailing his schedule, the Australian has been a regular contender in the majors, and he says the less-is-more theory is working.

British soldier murderer sentenced to life in prison

London, 27 Feb — Two men who hacked a British soldier to death on a London street were sentenced to life in prison and a minimum of 45 years in jail, respectively, a British court has ruled.

Michael Adebolajo, 29, was given a whole-life term while Michael Adebowale, 22, is to be jailed for at least 45 years for killing Fusilier Lee Rigby, a 25-year-old British soldier.

Lee Rigby was attacked by Adebolajo and Adebowale with a butcher knife and cleaver near the Royal Artillery Barracks in Woolwich in southeast London in May last year. The assailants later said they had attacked the off-duty soldier to avenge the deaths of Muslims at the hands of British troops.

“This was a murder with a terrorist connection,” the judge said at the court, describing the killing as “sickening and pitiless”.

The murder sparked a string of protests last year, with thousands of British residents and veterans taking to the streets to call for an end to the extremist attacks and hate crimes.

“Extremist behaviour of any kind will never be tolerated in Britain. While nothing can reverse the appalling crime committed on the streets of Woolwich last May, the significant sentences handed down today reflect this,” Britain’s Home Secretary Theresa May said.

110-year old Pugyi Reservoir alerts conservation due to increasing in urbanized population

There is alarm at water supply from Hlawgar Reservoir, which turns 110 year on 22 February, 2014, due to a rapid increase in urbanized population in Yangon.

Water from Hlawgar Reservoir has been supplied to the people in Yangon as from 22 February, 1904, after water quality from the Kandawgyi and the Inya lakes had become bad. The ministry has to take steps to improve quality.

Before Hlawgar Reservoir, the Kandawgyi and the Inya lakes were the main sources for water supply to Yangon. However, lack of knowledge on environmental conservation, traditional sewage system, lack of stringent rules for urbanization near the lakes had caused the pollution of water in the two lakes had decreased and the people in Yangon had to abandon them in 1887.

The long-lasting of Hlawgar Reservoir, the lifeblood water resource for over 5 million people living in Yangon, is threatened by the increasing in population in Yangon.

All people living in Yangon are obliged to conserve the water resource from the reservoir and the environment near it, taking lessons from the past.

Drinking water resource is a renewable resource. However, due to increasing in population in Yangon, the quality of fresh water is decreasing, causing huge impacts on the water resource and challenges for water supply in the long run.

Like in other parts of the country.
