Pyadalin Cave, rare works of Neolithic Age in Myanmar

Pyadalin Cave located in Nyaungchet Village in Ywangan Township, Danu Self-Administered Zone, southern Shan State, is one of the sites where traces of the Neolithic Age of Myanmar can be seen. The cave that emerged as limestone one is situated at an altitude of 1050 feet. In 1969, two cowboys from Nyaungchet Village unexpectedly found the cave. The cave and its related caves were demarcated as Cave-1 and Cave-2. Of them, the former is larger than the latter. In observations, the researchers and experts found human palm works in dark red colour, mural paintings of small cows and pictures of rising sun at the wall of the cave, pieces of animals’ bones, parts of charcoal, conch shells and stone weapons. After conducting the carbon dating tests on pieces of animals’ bones and pieces of charcoal at the Nuclear Scientific Research Institute in New Zealand, the conclusions could be adopted that Pyadalin Cave might emerge in the Neolithic age and now it may be about 11,000 years old. The researchers assumed that the Stone Age men created mural paintings which they found the scenes around their places, at the walls of the cave.

New York, 30 March—Ahead of his trip to Japan next week John Ash, president of the UN General Assembly, said on Friday he anticipates holding discussions with Japan’s top leaders on a range of issues from climate change to reform of the Security Council.

“While there I will be discussing a number of issues of importance to the government of Japan and to how they relate to the United Nation’s General Assembly,” he told Kyodo News during a one-on-one interview in his office. “I will also be using the opportunity to talk about my priorities of the (current) 68th session, which is the post-2015 development agenda—setting the stage.”

After arriving in Tokyo next Tuesday, he is scheduled to visit with Prime Minister Shinzo Abe, Foreign Minister Fumio Kishida, as well as with senior government officials and Diet Members over a two-day period before returning to New York on Friday. The president has high hopes of continuing work with member states, particularly Japan, to lay the groundwork for developing a plan to improve the lives of millions around the globe after 2015.

This new plan builds upon the so-called Millennium Development Goals, which set out to achieve eight global targets, such as halving extreme poverty and achieving universal primary education for all children, by 2015.

At his acceptance speech last June Ash pledged to move forward on the issue of reform of the United Nations, including the highly debated reform of the Security Council.

More than two decades of talks have yielded few results although countries largely agree that the 15 member council is overdue for an overhaul. There is no common agreement on how to do so.

Pakistan military sources say Afghan forces fire six mortars into Pakistan

ISLAMABAD, 30 March — Pakistani security officials said that Afghan forces fired six mortars into Pakistan’s North West Frontier tribal region on Saturday but no casualties had been reported. The mortars from an Afghan National Army post landed near a post of security forces at Ghulam Khan, a small town in North Waziristan, military sources said. It is the second incident of mortars firing from the Afghan side of the border this month.

Pakistan’s military said earlier this month that Afghan security forces fired more than two dozen mortars into the Pakistani territory.

Pakistan and Afghanistan, which share a common border of 2,500 km, routinely accuse each other of border violations.

Kabul often alleges Pakistan fires rockets into Kunar province in northeastern Afghanistan. Pakistani denies the charges and says its forces target the Pakistani militants who have taken shelter in the border regions and routinely launch attacks on Pakistani posts.

Kabul also alleges that the Afghan Taliban have taken shelter in Pakistan.

The incident on Saturday occurred at a time when tensions have once again escalated between Pakistan and Afghanistan following a series of recent Taleban attacks in Kabul. Afghan officials claimed that attacks ahead of the crucial elections in Afghanistan are planned in Pakistan. The charges were denied by Pakistan.—Xinhua

Egypt sentences two Morsi supporters to death

CAIRO, 30 March—An Egyptian criminal court sentenced two supporters of ousted President Mohamed Morsi to death on Saturday over killing youths in protests last year, official news agency MENA reported.

The two Islamists were accused of throwing young men from the roof of a building in the coastal city of Alexandria during violent acts that erupted over Morsi’s disposal.

The court has referred the verdict to the grand mufti, the government’s official interpreter of Islamic law, for review. The mufti’s opinion is consultative.

The Islamists were also accused of joining terrorist groups, hindering the traffic, burning public utilities, possessing weapons, and disturbing public order.

The trial of another 61 involved in the same case was adjourned to 19 May.

On Monday a criminal court in Upper Egypt sentenced some 529 people to death over charges of assaulting police stations last year. Prior to the sentence the authorities had dispersed Morsi supporters’ sit-ins in Cairo, leaving more than 1,000 people killed and thousands arrested.

The mass death sentence, which is the biggest in Egypt’s modern history, has drawn condemnation from human rights groups, the United Nations and the west.

Israel rejects proposal to free Palestinian prisoners for extending peace talks

RAMALLAH, 30 March — Israel rejected a proposal by Palestinian president Mahmoud Abbas to extend the direct peace talks scheduled to end in April for releasing 400 Palestinian prisoners, a senior Palestinian official said on Saturday. The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, told Reuters that Abbas told the United States that if Israel frees 400 prisoners, including women and children, he will accept the extension of the peace talks.

The US-brokered talks have not achieved any tangible results since the negotiations resumed in July last year. The talks ran into a deadlock this week after Israel refused to free the last group of 26 prisoners, out of the 104 prisoners arrested before the two sides signed Oslo peace accords in 1993.

Number of missing in US mudslide drops to 30 as death toll rises

DARRINGTON, (Washington), 30 March — The number of people missing from a landslide that sent a wall of mud cascading over dozens of homes in Washington state dropped to 30 from 90 on Saturday, but the death toll continues to climb as another body was found in the muddy heap of debris.

One week after the catastrophe, the unofficial body count rose to 28. The official tally of those killed is now 18 based on bodies found, extricated and identified by medical examiners.

Five quakes jolt eastern Romania on Saturday

BUCAREST, 30 March — An earthquake measuring 4.9 on the Richter scale occurred late on Saturday in Vrancea seismic zone, eastern Romania, according to the National Institute for Earth Physics (INFP). This is the largest earthquake recorded in the country in the current year.

The quake occurred at a depth of 15 km, rocking a mountainous area of Buzau County, some 130 km northeast of the capital of Bucharest.

The quake was last one in the day when another four measuring between 2.9 to 4.3 degrees on the Richter scale hit the same region.

There is no report of casualty for now. More than 50 felt earthquakes have taken place in Vrancea seismic zone this year, seven of them measuring over 5 degrees on the Richter scale.

An earthquake measuring 5.5 magnitudes on the Richter scale jolted Vrancea region on 6 October, 2013 and another eight quakes measuring over 4 and less than 5 degrees on the Richter scale hit the same region in the last year. Vrancea seismic zone, including counties of Vrancea and Buzau, is one of the most active seismic areas in Europe. It is known for its intermediate-depth (70-200 km) earthquakes, which can reach a magnitude of 7.0 to 7.8.

Taleban attack election commission HQ in Kabul ahead of vote

KAUL, 30 March — Taleban insurgents attacked the Independent Election Commission headquarters in Kabul on Saturday, staff and police said, in the their third big assault on the capital this week aimed at derailing the 5 April presidential election.

Afghan security forces battled the militants for about five hours, while frightened IEC staff and eight international United Nations employees took refuge in safe rooms inside the compound, a security source and staff said.

Four suicide bombers were involved in the attack and all were killed in gunbattles, according to an Afghan army general on the scene in the eastern part of the capital. “The fight is over. All four terrorists have been killed. An investigation team is in the area,” said commander Qadam Shah Shaheem, adding that three security force members had been injured in the operation. No other casualties were reported.

With a week to go before Afghanistan’s presidential election, escalating violence across the country risks undermining the credibility of a vote meant to mark the first democratic transfer of power in Afghan history. It was the second IEC building this week to have been targeted by the radical Islamist Taleban. The attack occurred less than 24 hours after militants stormed a guesthouse used by a US-based aid group. A child was killed in Friday’s attack.

Kabul is on high alert ahead of the presidential election that Taleban insurgents have threatened to scuttle with a campaign of bombings and assassinations. Election commission staff heard an initial explosion at around midday on Saturday at the IEC headquarters, followed by gunfire and rockets, one of which damaged a warehouse inside the compound, according to an IEC employee.

Germany, China say renminbi hub in Frankfurt will boost trade

DUESSELDORF, 30 March — A decision by Germany and China to make Frankfurt a European hub for financial transactions in the Chinese currency will give new momentum to trade between the two economic powers, Chinese President Xi Jinping and a German minister said on Saturday.

In a speech to politicians and business leaders in the city of Duesseldorf, Xi said setting up the hub for the renminbi in Germany "represents an important step on the road of the internationalisation of our currency," according to a translation. The Bundesbank and the People’s Bank of China signed an agreement on Friday to facilitate transactions in the Chinese currency in Frankfurt and to cooperate more closely in clearing and settlement arrangements of renminbi payments.

Up to now, transactions in China’s currency, the renminbi or yuan, have been impractical for all but very large European companies that are able to involve China’s central bank in a deal, because the renminbi is not freely convertible. German Economy Minister Sigmar Gabriel said having the clearing bank in Frankfurt would help trade between the two economic powers.

“Our goal is an economic partnership of equals,” Gabriel said.

The Chinese leader’s first visit to Germany since becoming president last year saw the signing of business deals that will add to trade that was worth about 140 billion euros last year.

Annual trade flows between China, the world’s second-biggest economy, and Germany, Europe’s largest, exceed Chinese trade with France, Britain and Italy combined.

Xi said China would pursue its course of sustainable development, but would rather embrace the "old road of the industrial nations" but would rather embrace sustainable development, even if this meant slower growth.

London, 30 March — The London Metal Exchange (LME) pressed on with reforms to its warehousing network on Friday, unveiling tighter “Chinese Wall” restrictions a day after a court ruling forced the LME to halt a plan to cut delivery backlogs.

The LME said it would bolster rules on firms that both trade on the exchange and are metals warehouses to ensure there was no improper flow of information or conflict of interest.

It aims to carry out a consultation regarding the proposed changes and to introduce them in January 2015.

The rules apply to parties such as bank Goldman Sachs and commodity group Glencore, which both trade metals and own metals storage facilities.

The LME, owned by Hong Kong Exchanges and Clearing, said in a statement that an external review found current restrictions between traders and warehouses were generally adequate.

“The review has, however, helpfully recommended certain modifications to the existing requirements which the LME believes will further enhance certain aspects of the information barrier requirements,” it said. This would “protect confidential information held by warehouse companies, the possession of which by third parties (including trading companies) could otherwise give rise to conflicts of interest and, potentially, market abuse.”—Reuters

Tokyo, 30 March — Two years before Mt Gox filed for bankruptcy, a half-dozen employees at the Tokyo-based bitcoin exchange challenged CEO Mark Karpeles over whether client money was being used to cover costs, according to three people who participated in the discussion.

The question of how Mt Gox handled other people’s money — the issue raised by staff in the showdown with Karpeles in early 2012 — remains crucial to unravelling a multi-million dollar mystery under examination by authorities in Japan.

A bankruptcy administrator and police are seeking to determine how a Tokyo start-up that shot from obscurity to dominate global trade in bitcoin managed to lose more than $27 million in old-fashioned cashed in a bank as well as bitcoins worth close to $450 million at today’s prices. The still-unresolved issue has thrown a spotlight on how Mt Gox functioned as a hybrid between an online brokerage and an exchange.

Gilead says has discounted hepatitis C drug for some health plans

NEW YORK, 30 March — Gilead Sciences Inc, under fire for pricing a new hepatitis C drug at $1,000 a pill, has discount agreements with a number of health insurers, a company executive said in an interview. The medication, Sovaldi, has a list price of $84,000 for a 12-week course of therapy and is seen as a breakthrough in the treatment of the serious liver disease.

It has been shown to raise cure rates and cut treatment time with fewer side effects than older medicines, but critics maintain that a price of $1,000 each is too high for an easy-to-take pill to treat millions of Americans.

On March 20, Democratic lawmakers led by California Representative Henry Waxman asked Gilead to explain the price tag, and with a meeting of the committee is scheduled for next week.

LME tightens ‘Chinese Wall’ rules on warehouses, traders

WASHING TON, 30 March — Switching over to daylight saving time, and losing one hour of sleep, raised the risk of having a heart attack the following Monday by 25 percent, compared to the previous Monday, according to a study released Thursday.

In contrast, heart attack risk fell 21 percent later in the year, on the Tuesday after the clock was returned to standard time, and people got one extra hour’s sleep.

“The not-so-subtle impact of moving the clock forward and backward was seen in a comparison of hospital admissions from a database of non-federal Michigan hospitals. It examined admissions before and after the start of daylight saving time and the Monday immediately after, for four consecutive years.

In general, heart attacks historically occur most often on Monday mornings, maybe due to the stress of starting a new work week and inherent changes in our sleep-wake cycle, said Dr. Am neat Sandhu, a cardiologist at the University of Colorado in Denver who led the study.

“With daylight saving time, all of this is compounded by one less hour of sleep,” said Sandhu, who presented his findings at the annual scientific sessions of the American College of Cardiology in Washington. A link between lack of sleep and heart attacks has been seen in previous studies. But Sandhu said experts still don’t have a clear understanding of why people are so sensitive to sleep-wake cycles. “Our study suggests that sudden, even small changes in sleep could have detrimental effects,” he said.

Sandhu examined about 42,000 hospital admissions in Michigan, and found that an average of 32 patients had heart attacks on any given Monday. But on the Monday immediately after springing the clock forward, there were an average of eight additional heart attacks, he said.—Reuters

Gilead says has discounted hepatitis C drug for some health plans

NEW YORK, 30 March — Gilead Sciences Inc, under fire for pricing a new hepatitis C drug at $1,000 a pill, has discount agreements with a number of health insurers, a company executive said in an interview. The medication, Sovaldi, has a list price of $84,000 for a 12-week course of therapy and is seen as a breakthrough in the treatment of the serious liver disease.

It has been shown to raise cure rates and cut treatment time with fewer side effects than older medicines, but critics maintain that a price of $1,000 each is too high for an easy-to-take pill to treat millions of Americans.

On March 20, Democratic lawmakers led by California Representative Henry Waxman asked Gilead to explain the price tag, and with a meeting of the committee is scheduled for next week.

LONDON, 30 March — The London Metal Exchange (LME) is scheduled for a £1.6 billion initial public offering later this year. It said its new office in New York is expected to be fully operational some time later this year.

The Bundesbank and the People’s Bank of China signed an agreement on Friday to facilitate transactions in the Chinese currency in Frankfurt and to cooperate more closely in clearing and settlement arrangements of renminbi payments.

Up to now, transactions in China’s currency, the renminbi or yuan, have been impractical for all but very large European companies that are able to involve China’s central bank in a deal, because the renminbi is not freely convertible. German Economy Minister Sigmar Gabriel said having the clearing bank in Frankfurt would help trade between the two economic powers.

“Our goal is an economic partnership of equals,” Gabriel said.

The Chinese leader’s first visit to Germany since becoming president last year saw the signing of business deals that will add to trade that was worth about 140 billion euros last year.

Annual trade flows between China, the world’s second-biggest economy, and Germany, Europe’s largest, exceed Chinese trade with France, Britain and Italy combined.

Xi said China would pursue its course of sustainable development, but would rather embrace the “old road of the industrial nations” but would rather embrace sustainable development, even if this meant slower growth.—Reuters

Tokyo, 30 March — Two years before Mt Gox filed for bankruptcy, a half-dozen employees at the Tokyo-based bitcoin exchange challenged CEO Mark Karpeles over whether client money was being used to cover costs, according to three people who participated in the discussion.

The question of how Mt Gox handled other people’s money — the issue raised by staff in the showdown with Karpeles in early 2012 — remains crucial to unravelling a multi-million dollar mystery under examination by authorities in Japan.

A bankruptcy administrator and police are seeking to determine how a Tokyo start-up that shot from obscurity to dominate global trade in bitcoin managed to lose more than $27 million in old-fashioned cashed in a bank as well as bitcoins worth close to $450 million at today’s prices. The still-unresolved issue has thrown a spotlight on how Mt Gox functioned as a hybrid between an online brokerage and an exchange.

Monastic education schools and monastic institutions in the Republic of the Union of Myanmar

Monastic education schools and monastic institutions have existed in Myanmar during the periods of the successive Myanmar Kings since thousand years ago. As you know, Myanmar has been a Theravada Buddhist country since then. About 85 percent of population of Myanmar believes in Buddhism and they all are Buddhists. There is no Myanmar king that does not carry out the purification, perpetuation and propagation of the Buddha Sasana throughout the country. The countless number of shrines and pagodas built and constructed by successive Myanmar Kings can be seen all over the country till now.

There is at least a monastery in every village throughout the country. The Myanmar Buddhist children of ancient time have only to go to monasteries at their villages because there were no academic modern schools at that time. Most of Myanmar nationals of ancient time educated from the monasteries or the monastic education schools. There were many famous and learned monks and people who were well-educated from the monastic education schools all over the country.

The Cocogyun Township in Yangon Region has already collected the data in advance on March 9 due to poor transport.

The census collectors are asking 41 questions for the households and 11 for other difficulties. We can coordinate with others to find answers for them or help ease their burden.

In fact, it is so easy for us to say “busy” when someone comes and ask help, but it is very painful to hear “busy” when we need help. In this context, we all must have sympathy towards others and help others in the interest of humanity. If we help others they will also help us. So, helping others is helping ourselves.

1988 disturbance. It is learnt that the destructive elements who committed these crimes are most young people who do not know the basic essence of the Buddhist and Myanmar culture and traditions.

According to the bitter and cruel experience of 1988 disturbance, the State Law and Order Restoration Council of the Union of Myanmar of that time decided to encourage and support the monastic education schools which lead to cultivate the young new generations to become good, gentle and polite in future.

Besides, the Monastic Institutions, the main centers for the Pariyatti Sasana (learning canonical Texts of the Buddha) which lead to the purification, perpetuation and propagation of the Buddha Sasana have been more supported and encouraged by the Government of the State Law and Order Restoration Council of the Union of Myanmar that time since 18 September 1988.

1948, some of the farsighted learned chief monks, lay devotees and the Government of the Union of Myanmar tried to re-introduce the monastic education schools. But they were not completely successful because of confusion and unstable political situation of those days. And so, many young new generations of those days were not able to go to monastic education schools for learning the real basic essence of the Buddhism and the ancient Myanmar culture and traditions.

Hence, most of Myanmar young generations who were born in those days did not know well and understand the real basic essence of the Buddhism and Myanmar culture and traditions.

We can see vividly and clearly that ruthless and cruel activities of killing and beheading innocent people by destructive elements broke out in the period of...

Japan, N Korea to seek settlement of outstanding issues

BEIJING, 30 March — Japanese and North Korean senior diplomats on Sunday agreed to work toward the settlement of “outstanding issues” as the two gov- ernments held formal talks for the first time since No- vember 2012.

The meeting, to run through Monday in Bei- jing, comes amid recent mixed signals from North Korea over its willingness to re-engage in diplomacy. At issue is whether North Korea will agree to fulfill its promise to re-investi- gate the cases of Japanese nationals it abducted in the 1970s and 1980s.

“I completely feel the same way,” Song replied at the North Korean Embassy, the venue of the first day of the meeting, expressing hope that relations between the two countries will start moving “in a positive di- rection.” In an attempt to make tangible progress on the abduction issue, Japan may offer the possibility of lifting some sanctions now imposed on North Korea over its nuclear and missile development programmes.

But it all remains un- certain if Prime Minister Shinzo Abe’s government, formed in December 2012, can move forward with his goal of making a break- through in the long-fester- ing issue, a major obstacle to normalizing bilateral re- lations. North Korea, which admitted in 2002 to having abducted 13 Japanese na- tionals, has repeatedly said the issue has already been settled.

No tangible progress has been seen on the issue since five of them were re- patriated to Japan in 2002. North Korea has claimed the remaining eight are dead.—Kyodo News

Cambodian opposition marks 17th anniversary of grenade attack amid tight security

PHNOM PENH, 30 March — The opposition Cambo- dian National Rescue Party (CNRP) on Sunday morn- ing held a religious cere- mony at a memorial stupa in a park, just south of the Royal Palace, in remem- brance of the victims of a grenade attack 17 years ago.

Some 60 Buddhist monks were invited to chant at the ceremony, which was attended by CNRP’s president Sam Rainsy and some 700 par- ty supporters as well as family members of the victims.

The attack on an opposition rally on 30 March, 1997 killed 16 people. So far, no one was arrested for the killing. Security has been tightened on Sunday as all roads around the ceremony site have been blocked to ensure safety of the particip- ants.

“They hold the cer- eemony with permission from the City Hall, so our forces have been deployed to maintain security and public order for them,” Gen. Kheng Tito, spokes- man for the National Mil- itary Police, told Xinhua over phone.

Sam Rainsy said at the event that after the ceremon- mony, the CNRP will hold a people’s congress at the party’s headquarters on the outskirts of the capital in the afternoon because the Phnom Penh Munici- pality did not allow the party to conduct the con- gress at the Freedom Park. Xinhua

French set to punish Hollande in mayoral runoffs

PARIS, 30 March — French President Fran- cois Hollande’s Socialists braced for losses in hun- dreds of towns and vil- lages in mayoral elections on Sunday, with far-right National Front candidates seen winning a handful of cities for the first time since 1995.

The runoff round of voting comes at the end of a week that saw French un- employment surge to a new record, making a reverse of first round losses unlikely and a cabinet reshuffle by Hollande possible as soon as Monday.

Some 80 percent of the French want him to dismiss Prime Minister Jean-Marc Ayrault, according to a recent Harris Interactive poll, and ambitious and tough-talking Interior Min- ister Manuel Valls comes top of their favourites for the job.

“I can’t see how (Ay- rault) could stay, unless we save about thirty towns, something nobody really believes,” a Socialist Party source said.

Dissatisfaction with Hollande’s rule and a string of legal intrigues involving opposition conservatives are seen hitting turnout and helping the anti-immigrant FN win in the depressed post-industrial north and in southern towns such as Beziers.

Pollsters identify half of the country’s 150-seat Senate in a key test for Yingluck Shinawatra’s troubled government, a day before the prime minister is due to defend herself against negligence charges over a disastrous rice subsidy scheme. Anti-government forces want to ensure a conserv- ative, pro-establishment, majority to influence any decision to remove Yin- gluck which would require the votes of three-fifths of the senators. Yingluck is due to appear before the National Anti-Corruption Commission (NACC) on Monday to defend herself against charges of derec- tions against her role in overseeing the botched rice scheme.

While party affiliation is prohibited in the non-par- tisan Senate, the majority of the 77 elected seats will be decided on the basis of endorsements from power- ful, party-affiliated, local institutions, particularly in rural areas, meaning that the result could deliver a pro-Yingluck majority.

Candy Crush brings IPO market back to earth

New York, 30 March — The weeks leading up to the IPO of King Digital Entertainment, the company’s bankers scrambled to persuade investors that the maker of popular online game “Candy Crush Saga” was more than a one-trick pony, according to a source familiar with the situation.

As the debut approached this week, the bankers’ job only got harder. On Tuesday, Facebook Inc said it would pay $2 billion for Oculus VR, a two-year-old virtual reality startup that has yet to put a product on the market. Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg described the deal as the social media giant’s decision to bet on “platforms of tomorrow.”

But for some investors, the deal brought back memories of the Internet boom and bust in 1998-2001, where profitability and other financial fundamentals of companies took the back seat to a raging fad about anything with a dot-com identity, according to the source.

Bankers underwriting King Digital’s offering had to call in favours with investors who had received large allocations in previous successful IPOs, the source said. As a result, King Digital priced the offering at the midpoint of its range of $21 to $24, but its shares tanked in Wednesday’s debut, falling 16 percent and fell further on Thursday and Friday. King Digital could not be reached immediately for comment.

Wall Street bankers are now looking at the disappointing opening as a sign that investors are getting more cautious about the IPO market, especially when it comes to technology and biotechnology stocks. Although bankers said companies waiting in the wings so far seemed to want to forge ahead with their IPO plans, the realization is likely to moderate expectations on the size of offerings and valuations.

“You realize that people are going to be a little bit more cautious. You realize that the valuation needs to be reflective of that cautiousness,” said Sam Kendall, global head of equity capital markets at UBS AG.

That would mark a sharp turning point for the IPO market, in which investors have been fed a steady diet of new public offerings this year from companies yet to turn a profit. More than 50 IPOs have priced in 2014, and two-thirds of those are unprofitable, according to Reinsurance Capital, an IPO investment advisor.

Still, companies that have gone public this year have seen their shares rise 33 percent on average from their offer prices, according to Dealogic. “The market has gotten ahead of itself, and you’re seeing a pause in speculation, especially for biotech and some of these new tech names,” said Eric Green, senior portfolio manager and director of research at Penn Capital Management in Philadelphia, which oversees $7.5 billion.

Apple, Google lose bid to avoid trial on tech worker lawsuit

San Francisco, 30 March — A US judge on Friday rejected a request from Apple, Google and two other tech companies to avoid a trial in a class action lawsuit alleging a scheme to drive down wages.

Tech workers sued the companies alleging they conspired to avoid competing for each other’s employees in order to avert a salary war. Trial is scheduled to begin in May.

Apple, Google, Intel and Adobe asked for a judgment in their favour without a trial, arguing that any no-hire agreements between the companies were independent, and were not part of an overarching conspiracy. US District Judge Lucy Koh in San Jose, Calif., however, rejected that argument.

“That the agreements were entered into and enforced by a small group of intertwining high level executives bolsters the inference that the agreements were not independent,” wrote Koh.

A representative for Adobe could not immediately be reached for comment. An Intel spokesman said the company was studying the ruling, and representatives for Google and Apple declined to comment. The case began in 2011 when five software engineers sued Apple, Google, Adobe Systems Inc, Intel Corp and others, alleging a conspiracy to suppress pay by agreeing not to recruit or hire each other’s employees.

These defendants were accused of violating the Sherman Act and Clayton Act antitrust laws by conspiring to eliminate competition for labour, depriving workers of job mobility and hundreds of millions of dollars in compensation.

Panasonic to withdraw from organic EL lighting production

Osaka, 30 March — Panasonic Corp will withdraw from producing organic electroluminescence panels for lighting due to poor earnings prospects for the panels given the high production costs, company sources said on Saturday.

A company established jointly with Idemitsu Kosan Co in April 2011 to produce organic EL panels will cease operating at the end of this month and be dissolved.

Panasonic will focus its resources on light-emitting diode lighting, whose application is diversifying due to relatively low production costs as related technology improves, according to the sources.

Britain to boost agricultural innovation among universities, farms

London, 30 March — The British government has designed a special fund to support agri-businesses and universities to bridge the gap between lab research and the marketplace.

The government funding comes from the 70-million-pound (115-million-US dollar) Agri-Tech Catalyst program announced last year, said the British Department for International Development (DFID) on Friday.

As part of the British Industrial Strategy for Agricultural Technologies, the million-pound program, including an urban farm and spin-outs from various universities in the country will share the funding from the government and industry to develop their innovative business ideas, the DFID said. “This funding will make a real difference in bringing innovative ideas from the lab to the marketplace,” British Universities and Science Minister David Willetts said.

Some of the projects financed by the fund will look into new farming techniques, such as cultivation of seaweed, and focus on solving problems affecting farmers, including tackling a cattle disease that currently costs the dairy industry over 200 million pounds a year, according to the DFID.

Chairman candidates

Telefonica and its three allies, Generali, Intesa Sanpaolo and Mediobanca, are united in a shell company, called Telco, that owns 22.4 percent of Telecom Italia. The three financial investors have pledged to exit Telco, with Generali planning to leave it as early as June.

Telco presented a list of candidates for the next Telecom Italy board that sees Recchi as candidate for the chairmanship. Other shareholders have presented different lists of candidates but as Telco is the largest shareholder Recchi is considered the frontrunner for the job.

The current board of Telecom Italia was almost overthrown at a shareholder meeting in December as investors protested against what they said was a lack of transparency and chronic underperformance at the debt-laden group.

Kumamoto confab seeks to develop, spread “fair-trade towns” concept

KUMAMOTO, 30 March — Promoters of “fair trade towns” agreed on Sunday to take an inclusive approach in developing and spreading the idea of an ethical consumption movement aimed at helping solve wealth inequalities at global, national and local levels.

“Fair-trade towns movement has so far been somewhat about numbers — about how many towns we can achieve...but it is time to heighten the quality of the movement,” said organizer Tatsuya Watanabe, wrapping up the three-day International Fair Trade Towns Conference.

The goal of the movement is not only the self-sustainability of lower-income producers in developing countries, but also “making our lives fair and sustainable” in developed countries in light of the negative impact of global neo-liberalism since the 1990s, he said.

The eighth annual conference was held for the first time outside Europe in the southwestern Japanese city of Kumamoto, which is the first and only Asian fair-trade town, having received the status in 2011.

The next meeting will be held in July 2015 in Bristol, England, which became a fair trade city in 2005.

Participants also discussed the so-called Big Tent inclusive approach in campaigning for fair-trade towns and whether they can adopt a “resolution” endorsing it.

Watanabe said there was still some way to go, but the conference began discussing the matter, with his own ideas on the approach having evolved.

Growing ranks of senile customers pose challenge for Japan inc

TOKYO, 30 March — As Japanese industries grapple with the social changes brought by the aging of the population, dealing with senile people has become a fact of life in shops and over the bank counter. Supermarket operators and banks have been struggling to figure out how best to handle customers suffering from Alzheimer’s disease or other senility disorders, and a government-led care support training initiative is attracting interest as a source of clues.

When shopping in large stores, people with dementia tend to get lost or become erratic, sometimes grabbing food from the shelf and eating it on the spot, for example. At bank branches, it is not unusual to see senile people standing baffled in front of an ATM as they cannot recall their password.

To address problems like these, many supermarket operators and banks require employees to take a care support training lesson sponsored by the Ministry of Health, Labour and Welfare.

People who have undergone such training are recognized as “supporters for people with dementia” or dementia care assistants, although the training is nothing more than a one-off lesson lasting just 90 minutes or so. Aeon Co, a major supermarket operator, started adopting this lesson as part of employee education in 2007. By now around 38,000 Aeon employees have taken it.

At Aeon stores, misbehaving customers presumed to be suffering from dementia are quietly taken away, rather than being reprimanded in the open, and their family or a local administrative office is notified as necessary.

The kid-glove approach has spawned a new challenge: some people attempt to shoplift with impunity by pretending to be senile.

In any case, the care support lesson is apparently providing useful guidance. “Previously I was at a loss how to relate (to people with dementia), but now I listen to them patiently,” an employee said.

Among banks, Tokyo Tomin Bank is a particularly eager adopter of the care support program. In just three months from January 2013, all of the bank’s 1,600 or so employees took the lesson to become dementia care assistants.

Meanwhile, Hachioji Nagafusa Post Office, located within an aging housing complex in the Tokyo suburb of Hachioji, is doing much more than post offices are supposed to do in support of senile people.

Surrounded by apartment complexes mostly inhabited by elderly families, the post office is visited by more than a few customers presumed to be senile each day.

On one occasion, the postmaster, Yuriko Asahara, was worried by the sight of a frail woman who regularly came to the post office. The woman looked thinner on each visit, so it occurred to Asahara that she might be eating little. Asahara contacted a local care support center and explained the problem.

In another case, Asahara went out of her way to escort an elderly couple, both presumed to be suffering from dementia, to the care support center.

“If we properly relate to customers with dementia, we can’t do business,” Asahara said.

By the end of 2013, the number of dementia care assistants under the government-sponsored training initiative surpassed 4.75 million nationwide.

N Korea threatens to conduct “new type” of nuclear test

SEOUL, 30 March — North Korea threatened Sunday to conduct a fresh nuclear test if the United States steps up diplomatic pressure on Pyongyang over its recent launch of two medium-range ballistic missiles.

The North Korean Foreign Ministry said in a statement distributed by the official Korean Central News Agency that Pyongyang will not rule out testing “a new type” of nuclear weapon.

North Korea fired two medium-range ballistic missiles into the Sea of Japan on Wednesday, the day the leaders of the United States, Japan and South Korea pledged to boost military cooperation at a trilateral summit in The Hague. The UN Security Council on Thursday unanimously condemned North Korea’s missile launch.

In a statement, the Security Council president, Luxembourg UN Ambassador Sylvie Lucas, said the council “agreed to consult on an appropriate response,” but she did not elaborate on what possible measures the Security Council might take.

Desire, ice, and fire: ‘Game of Thrones’ returns for fourth season

New York, 30 March—Mystical ice creatures, fire-breathing dragons, and the people caught in between return to the small screen come 6 April, when HBO’s “Game of Thrones” unuels a fourth season that could see it crowned as the cable network’s most watched series in history.

The medieval fantasy drama’s fan base has grown substantially over its first three seasons, with sizable followings among both men and women thanks to its wrenching interpersonal relationships, complex plotting, and, being HBO, plenty of sex and violence.

The show is based on the “A Song of Ice and Fire” series of novels by George RR Martin, of which five of an expected seven have been published. It takes place in the fictional Westeros, following more than two dozen regular characters amid a war for dominance between noble houses.

In addition to the squabbling between regions and families, the characters also face external threats, including dragons and the “White Walkers,” nearly unkillable creatures from the far northern part of the world who can animate the dead.

The third season of the show climaxed with what is now known as the “Red Wedding,” where three primary characters were treacherously murdered along with scores of others at a wedding feast. For some shows, that might be difficult to top, but cast members said this year’s season will be even more dynamic, so as to not lose momentum with a growing audience.

“There just seems to be a whole new army of people watching the show for the first time. The more fans you have, the more pressure you feel to keep up the quality of the product,” actor John Bradley, said in a recent interview along with other cast members. He plays Samwell Tarly, a member of the Night’s Watch, the ancient order that protects Westeros from threats in the frozen north.

Last year, the show averaged 14.4 million viewers across all platforms, only about 50,000 viewers shy of HBO’s most-watched show ever, the sixth season of the mob family drama “The Sopranos.” Among cable dramas, it is second in viewership, trailing only basic cable’s zombie apocalypse saga “The Walking Dead” on AMC Newtworks Inc, which is averaging 17.6 million viewers in its fourth season.—Reuters

Londoners fall in love with cat cafe

London, 30 March—People like coffee and people love cats so together they make the paws that refresh at a London cat cafe that is so popular it’s booked out until June.

Lady Dinah’s Cat Emporium on the fringe of London’s financial district is cashing in on an idea first popularised in Japan to allow stressed-out workers to wind down by stroking a cat while sipping a cappuccino or latte - or tea, if you prefer.

“The idea is you can come have a peaceful lunch or high tea and be surrounded by cats. If you’re lucky one of them will fall asleep on your lap,” said Anna Kogan, an investment banker who is co-owner of Dinah’s along with Australian Lauren Pears.

Part-financed by a crowdfunding campaign which raised more than 109,000 pounds ($181,100) in less than two months, the cafe, which opened its doors on 1 March, is already a runaway success.

Cat lovers stormed the cafe’s online booking system within hours of its launch, making more than 3,000 bookings and causing the system to temporarily crash. It is fully booked until the end of June.

“I thought that it would be really really cool to just hang out with loads and loads of cats,” said recent patron Christy McCormick.—Reuters

Shah Rukh Khan: My parents went too early

Mumbai, 30 March—Superstar Shah Rukh Khan was in a nostalgic mood on Saturday (29 March) as he missed his parents, who he feels “went too early.”

“Talking to boys on the sets. We talked of our parents. Miss my parents now on the drive back from the shoot. They went too early,” the 48-year-old posted on his Twitter page early Saturday morning (29 March).

The actor’s father Taj Mohammed Khan, who came from Peshawar, had died of cancer when SRK was all of 15, while his mother died in 1990 after prolonged illness.

Currently, he is busy shooting for Farah Khan’s Happy New Year with actors Abhishek Bachchan, Sonu Sood, Boman Irani, Vivaan Shah and Deepika Padukone.

No honours at the Palace for Chelsea, Man City held

LONDON, 30 March — Chelsea suffered a shock 1-0 defeat at Crystal Palace while Manchester City were held to a 1-1 draw at Arsenal on Saturday, opening the door for Liverpool to go top of the Premier League in their home game on Sunday.

Jose Mourinho’s Chelsea sank to their first defeat by Palace in 24 years after captain John Terry headed a Joel Ward cross into his own goal early in the second half amid suggestions the ball touched home defender Joe Ledley’s hand on the way in.

The Stamford Bridge club stayed top on 69 points but could be overtaken by Liverpool who are a point behind going into their game in hand against Tottenham Hotspur at Anfield on Sunday.

Title favourites City are third on 67 points with two games in hand on Chelsea. “Now I feel it’s impossible to win the title,” manager Mourinho told Sky Sports. “We depend too much on other results. Two weekends ago we lost three points (to Aston Villa) and now it is too much about other results.”

David Silva opened the scoring for City in the 18th minute before Mathieu Flamini equalised soon after the break to earn a draw for fourth-placed Arsenal who are on 64 points and retain outside title hopes.

Champions Manchester United ended a week of turmoil with a 4-1 win over Aston Villa, a double by England striker Wayne Rooney easing the pressure on manager David Moyes. Palace’s victory lifted them to fifth from bottom with 31 points, five clear of the relegation zone.

Selhurst Park was rocking at the end of the game with the joyous home fans belting out their ‘Glad All Over’ anthem. Chelsea, who have six matches left,ithashed Arsenal 6-0 last weekend but gave a limp performance against Tony Pulis’ Palace who had failed to win in their previous five matches, scoring just once.

The Eagles grabbed the only goal when Terry headed the ball into his own net at the near post in the 52nd minute, leaving keeper Petr Cech stranded.

Eden Hazard had two successful corner kicks to create opportunities to haul the goal back but Arsenal held firm and sealed the win in the 52nd minute courtesy of a goal from Joel Ward into his自己的 net at the near post in the 52nd minute.

The 1-0 win leaves Chelsea seven points behind the leaders with 30 matches remaining.

Chelsea manager Jose Mourinho’s Chelsea are a point behind going into their game in hand against Tottenham. Title hopefuls City are now a point behind going into their game in hand against Liverpool.

Lithuania celebrates anniversary of joining NATO

VILNIUS, 30 March — The ceremony to commemorate the 10th anniversary of Lithuania’s joining NATO was conducted Saturday in the presidential palace where flags of Lithuania and NATO hoisted.

Addressing to the ceremony, President Dalia Grybauskaite said, “Membership in this alliance (NATO) opened a chapter of new values in the history of our country. Our expectations about Lithuania’s security have been fulfilled.” “The partners in NATO have demonstrated that we are not alone in the face of threat,” she added.

The president’s remarks came after some Western powers reaffirmed their defence commitments in the Baltic region. US Vice President Joe Biden paid a visit to Lithuania and Poland last week amid the Ukraine crisis, stressing the collective defence commitment of the US under NATO.

British Prime Minister David Cameron reaffirmed on Wednesday NATO’s commitment to providing certainty and security to its Baltic member states.

Ten F-15 fighter jets and one KC-135 aerial refuelling aircraft from the US are stationed in Lithuania for air patrol mission. A group of F-16 fighters from Denmark will be dispatched to the Baltics this May for air patrol.

Williams beats Li to claim seventh Miami title

Miami, 30 March—Proving there is no place like home, world number one Serena Williams swept past China’s Li Na 7-5, 6-1 in the final of the Sony Open on Saturday, collecting a record seventh win on the Miami hardcourts.

Williams, who lives an hour’s drive from the Tennis Centre at Crandon Park and considers the tournament her home event, treated the second ranked Li like an unwelcome guest, needing just two hours on a steamy afternoon to come good, needing just 68 minutes.

“Serena is actually super excited at the end,” because I remember sitting here last year trying to get to six, obviously I wanted seven but I don’t want to put the pressure on myself to get to seven,” said Williams, who had shared the tournament record of six titles with Andre Agassi. “I wanted to have the most titles here.

“I guess that I’ve grown up coming to this tournament as a kid, watching so many players and to be one of those players now is really, really awesome for me.”

While Williams was critical of her performance earlier in the tournament, calling it unprofessional, the 32-year-old American has been at her best against top players, winning 15 straight over top 10 opponents.

“I feel like when you’re going up against the top players, for me, I have to be ready because they are the best in the world, the whole planet,” said Williams. “So you have to be ready to play.

“I enjoy playing people that are ranked like that because I feel like I can eventually bring out the best in me.”

A minority owner in the National Football League Miami Dolphins, a smiling Williams stepped out onto centre court to wild applause from the home crowd dressed in the orange and turquoise colours of her team.

The ovation, however, failed to inspire Williams as a determined Li seized the early initiative, breaking the American to open the contest and again in the seventh game to storm to a 5-2 lead.

But with Li serving for the set, Williams made her stand overwhelming her Chinese opponent by saving all 11 of the next 12 games.

“I don’t think I was playing bad,” said Li. “She just started to play a little bit better after 5-2.

“I think it was pretty good match.”

Williams launched her comeback by fighting off two set points to record her first break at 5-3 and broke again at 5-5 to get back on level terms against an unsteady Li. A screaming fist-pumping Williams, now in top gear, held serve to take the lead for the first time and then added one more break to seal the first set from a crumbling Li, who was now in full meltdown.

Williams may have needed a warm-up to warm up on a hot humid afternoon but once on track there seemed little Li could do to derail the 17-times grand slam winner.

Li held her opening serve of the second set but a ruthless Williams moved in quickly to deliver the knockout punch roaring through the next five games.

“I definitely don’t do it on purpose,” said Williams when asked about her slow start. “Everyone comes out there, they come really strong.

“Sometimes I do get off to a slow start, but then again, sometimes I get off to a fast start.

“I think for the most part, I try to do the best I can and sometimes things I’m doing don’t work out, but they are the right things and eventually they start to work.”—Reuters
