Monasteries rely on private donations to finance health care and education for the poorest

By Kerstin Winter

YANGON, 14 July—No health care facilities, limited infrastructure and the spread of diseases due to a lack of clean water are currently among the most urgent issues in Bilin Township in Mon state, which, like the majority of townships across the country, relies entirely on private donations from local monasteries to cover a fraction of the most basic needs.

Among the most active groups in Myanmar’s private donor community is the Universities’ Hiking and Mountaineering Association –Invitation of Nature Foundation, which visited Bilin Township from July 10 to 13 to donate cash and provide medical services to 15 remote monasteries, climbing mountains and hiking through dense forests to reach them.

“Hiking is our passion and we meet at least once a month for hiking trips around the country during which we always help out the locals. In the last three days we’ve raised K3.2 million, and as we have many doctors and nurses among our club members we also provide medical assistance to the locals who wait for us at the monasteries,” said U Myo Thant, Chairman of the association, following the end of the tour on Sunday evening.

The trip to Bilin township was joined by two doctors and six nurses, who treated 250 patients as part of their first aid programme, giving injections to locals with high fever and treating patients who suffer from diabetes and high blood pressure. Meanwhile, the remaining members of the club, almost 200 hikers on this trip, were collecting cash donations and handing out food and household items to villagers.

Although Mon state is not amongst the poorest states in the country, most households in Bilin do not have electricity, have never seen a doctor or a nurse and are not able to send their children to school. “It is very sad for me having to send all these people away as we simply do not have enough funds to help them all,” said Bhaddanta Theika, the head monk of Wee-wai KaWa Sa monastery in Taungzan village. Facing the reality that help from officials was not forthcoming, his monastery has been putting the poorest students through school since 2002 and founded the Garuna Centre, which provides medical help, in 2007.

“We do not have any equipment or medical staff here, so we rely on nurses that sometimes come and visit our centre, like the medical team from the hiking club now. They supply us with medicine as well, and that’s all we have to give to the locals. Right now we have 15 inpatients to look after,” Bhaddanta Theika said, urging for more donations as the monastery needs at least K1.5 million per month to help with health and education.

“There are around 2,000 families in the surrounding areas, with many more villagers coming from other parts of the hills to seek help from us, so we constantly have to turn sick people away.”

UNHCR supports Myanmar refugees in Thailand

By Aung Khin

YANGON, 14 July—The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees is now helping Myanmar refugees in Thailand by taking part in a repatriation scheme by the National Council for Peace and Order, according to reports.

Myanmar refugees in the Kingdom were organized into three groups as part of a programme to send them home, according to a report by the Bangkok Post on Monday, quoting a Thai military source.

The combined team consisting of the military, the Mae Fah Luang Foundation and the office of UNHCR has been conducting interviews with as many as 130,000 Myanmar refugees in all nine camps nationwide.

According to the reports, most of the Myanmar refugees who want to return home are elderly people; those who were born and raised in Thailand want to stay there; and some others want to resettle in third countries.

“After talking to all refugees, we divided them into three groups covering those who want to return to Myanmar, the group that wants to stay in Thailand and the group that wants to resettle in third countries,” the source said, adding the United States and some European countries expressed readiness to accept a yet unconfirmed numbers of refugees.

The UNHCR is making plans to provide land and financial support to the refugees, who want to return home, according to the report.

Dept. forecasts severe rain in several states on Tuesday

YANGON, 14 July—The Meteorology and Hydrology Department has forecast that regionally very heavy rain is likely to fall in Rakhine and Mon States, with isolated heavy rain in Yangon, Ayeethauk and Taungthai Regions and Kachin State on Tuesday.

The low pressure area over the Northwest Bay of Bengal still persists and the monsoon is strong tovigorous in the Andaman Sea and Bay of Bengal, the weather department said.

U Tun Lwin, weather expert and ex-director-general of the MHD, has warned of potential landslides in hilly regions due to the heavy rain.

Education is the other costly issue for the monastery, with the monks paying K 30,000 per student per month to cover school fees, food and accommodation, as the children are forced to leave the township to obtain education. “Now we’re paying for 70 middle and high school students and 31 who have entered universities, but we simply cannot afford it,” Bhaddanta Theika said.

Many children in Bilin township will never go to school, like the young boy with a deformed face, who, thanked by his friends, shynily turned his head away as the hiking club members approached the group of children.

“We might be able to help him, because some of our members work for NGOs with good contacts. We will get in touch with the boy’s family via the monastery and also seek help from other donors to finance his treatment,” said club chairman U Myo Thant. As the parents may not let the boy go to Yangon for an operation, the monks will have to provide the necessary support to build trust. “The monasteries are the focal points of the local communities in Myanmar and that is why we help them, so they can support those who need it the most,” said one club member, a university student, who was responsible for collecting money.

At the end of their three-day hike, often through pouring rain, chairman U Myo Thant said, he is “happy to have helped the local people and raised the morale of the young club members to continue doing community work, while enjoying the benefits of hiking.”

The association has already planned its next trip for August to Dedaye in the Delta Region.

Although the National Council for Peace and Order adopted a plan to close all refugee camps in the Kingdom after removing them, the authorities will now focus on humanitarian standards and the refugees’ repatriation preferences under UNHCR monitoring of the operation.

Some NGOs said that insufficient infrastructure will be a problem for the returnees in rebuilding their lives in their homeland.

Another report also said that Thailand’s Labour Department will open six one-stop service centres in Bangkok Tuesday for registrations of all migrant workers in the country.

Thai authorities estimate that each centre is expected to register at least 1,000 migrant workers, with each of the centres operating until August 14.

An estimated number of 2 million Myanmar migrant workers are working in Thailand.

Japan PM Abe wants to hold summit with China at APEC

Tokyo, 14 July — Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe said today he wants to hold a summit with China at the APEC leaders meeting in Beijing in November to improve relations strained by territorial and security issues.

Abe has been in office since late 2012 and has yet to meet Chinese leaders, despite worsening ties over disputed islands in the East China Sea, China’s declaration of an air defence identification zone in the area and Abe’s visits to a Tokyo shrine seen as a symbol of Japan’s past militarism.

“It is a great pity that we have not been able to have a leaders’ summit,” Abe told a parliamentary committee.

“We need to return to the basics of a strategic relationship of mutual respect. I would like to have a relationship of mutual respect was unbreakable,” he said. “It would like to have our ties be strained they cannot be broken, there will be problems between neighbours. For this very reason we need to maintain a relationship that keeps things under control,” he said, repeating that the door for dialogue with China was always open.

Japan has been locked in a bitter territorial dispute with China over a group of tiny East China Sea islets, known as the Senkaku in Japan and the Diaoyu in China. Ships from both countries frequently shadow each other around the islands, raising fears of a clash.

Tensions escalated after China declared its air defence zone in the area in November, a move that also sparked concern from the United States and South Korea.

Abe’s visit a month later to Tokyo’s Yasukuni Shrine, seen as a symbol of militarism because war criminals convicted by an Allied tribunal are honoured there along with war dead, infuriated China and even drew criticism from the United States.

In an interview with Mainichi Shimbun daily published on Monday, Abe refused to rule out another visit to the shrine.

“In the future I hope to maintain my feeling of respect to honour those who have given their lives for the nation, but I would rather not say whether or not I will visit Yasukuni,” he was quoted as saying.

Abe also brushed off reports that Masahiko Komura, a top ruling party official and former Foreign Minister, had told China he would not go to the shrine again. “That was Mr Komura’s thought. I don’t know about it,” he added.—Reuters

APEC summit was largely complete by the time the Supreme Court rejected an Aquino creation of discretionary funds, called a Disbursement Acceleration Programme, which has become the administration’s worst crisis in four years.

Edwin Lacierda, the president’s spokesman, acknowledged a “dip in enthusiasm” but said he was not alarmed.

“These numbers can be considered par for the course or average for this period,” he said. “A healthy majority has expressed trust and confidence in the president.”

Singapore council gives new spin to “prophetic” anti-gambling advertisement

Singapor, 14 July — An anti-gambling council in Singapore on Monday gave a new spin to its anti-gambling advertisement that features a boy whose father bets the boy’s money on Germany, the eventual winner of the tournament.

Germany defeated Argentina 1-0 to win the World Cup trophy on Sunday evening in Brazil.

The previous version of the advertisement, featuring a boy named Andy who told his friend that his father had bet the boy’s savings on Germany, went viral online after Germany shocked Brazil in a dramatic 7-1 victory in the semis. Memes of the advertisement began circulating on social media, with some jokes that the boy’s father is getting rich.

United States talk show host Jimmy Fallon also made a joke on the advertisement, saying last Wednesday, “Chomp up kid, your Dad’s gonna be so rich you don’t even have to go to college anymore!”

The advertisement also came with a sentence, “Often, the people who suffer from problem gambling aren’t the gamblers. Kick the habit.”

The National Council on Problem Gambling, which was set up in 2005 to address problem gambling after Singapore decided to legalize casino gambling and build two casino resorts known as integrated resorts, said that the advertisement would not be pulled. The new version appeared on the website of the council Monday morning after Germany won the tournament.

Andy replies, “No, dad never stops... he wants to bet one more time.”

China, Greece agree to enhance comprehensive strategic partnership

BEIJING, (Greece), 14 July — Visiting Chinese President Xi Jinping on Sunday vowed to further enhance the comprehensive strategic partnership with Greece.

In a meeting with Greek Prime Minister Antonis Samaras, Xi said Greece is a friendly and reliable friend of China in the European Union (EU) and that the two countries have enjoyed deep friendship as they showed mutual understanding and support on matters relating to each other’s core interests and major concerns, and help each other in times of difficulty.

“The Chinese side will continue to support Greece on sovereign debt issues and efforts to promote economic recovery,” said the Chinese president. “China is ready to share its development opportunities with Greece and further enhance the bilateral comprehensive strategic partnership.”

The two sides, said Xi, should maintain close high-level exchanges and focus on cooperation in transportation infrastructure, maritime, energy and green economy. The Chinese side supports Chinese companies to properly manage the Piraeus port project and actively participate in the technical renovation of Greek railways, making Greece an important bridgehead of China-EU cooperation.

China attaches great importance to Greece’s important position in the Mediterranean Sea and Southern Europe, said Xi, hoping that China-Greece cooperation would spearhead China’s cooperation with other countries in the region.

Moreover, China is ready to strengthen communication and coordination with Greece in international affairs and jointly promote the democratization of international relations, safeguard world peace and promote common development, said Xi.

The Chinese president stressed that Beijing firmly supports Europe’s integration and stands ready to build peace, growth, reform and civilization partnerships with Europe.

US concerned foreign fighters in Syria are working with Yemenis

WASHINGTON, 14 July — US Attorney General Eric Holder said he is concerned fighters from Europe and the United States who are supporting violent insurgents in the Syrian civil war are joining forces with Yemeni bomb makers.

“In some ways, it’s more frightening than anything I think I’ve seen as attorney general,” Holder said on ABC’s “This Week,” broadcast on Sunday.

US intelligence agencies estimate around 7,000 of the 23,000 violent extremists operating in Syria are foreign fighters, mostly from Europe.

Holder, who last week met with European justice ministers in London, said the worry is not only about the actions of foreign fighters in Syria, but when they return to their home countries.

US intelligence has dozens of investigations underway on American fighters who have gone to Syria and made their way home, Holder said.

Intelligence that bomb makers in Yemen have been joining forces in Syria with the foreign fighters is particularly concerning, he added.

“That’s a deadly combination, where you have people who have the technical know-how along with the people who have this kind of fervor to give their lives in support of a cause that is directed at the United States and directed at its allies,” Holder said in the interview that was recorded last week.

A Nigerian man who attempted to detonate explosives on a flight from Amsterdam to Michigan in 2009, and who became known as the underwear bomber, was linked to an extremist group that operates in Yemen.

N Korean missiles fired to counter US-S Korea drills: lawmakers

BEIJING, 14 July — North Korea recently fired missiles into the Sea of Japan to counter upcoming military exercises between South Korea and the United States, not to send a message to Japan, a group of Japanese opposition lawmakers said on Monday following a visit to Pyongyang.

“We asked if the missiles were fired because of Japan. They said that wasn’t the case,” lawmaker Taro Yamada told reporters at Beijing’s international airport on his return from North Korea, where he and other legislators met with veteran North Korean diplomat Kang Sok Ju.

He said Kang, who has strong influence over Pyongyang’s foreign policy, described the launch as “countermeasures” against the annual South Korea-US joint military exercises, which are scheduled to start on Wednesday.

Pyongyang has launched a number of rockets and guided missiles off its east coast over the past several weeks, firing two as recently as Sunday.

Yamada traveled to North Korea as part of a delegation led by Diet member and ex-pro wrestler Antonio Inoki, who visited the country in preparation for a wrestling exhibition to be held in Pyongyang in August. Inoki has traveled to North Korea almost 30 times since 1994.

Naoto Sakaguchi, who also joined the trip, said the North Koreans told the group that they are “working with all their might” to resolve the remaining questions surrounding the fates of Japanese citizens kidnapped by Pyongyang in the 1970s and 80s.

The legislators did not, however, receive any updates on the investigation, which was reopened following talks between Tokyo and Pyongyang in Stockholm in May.

Tokyo agreed to ease unilateral sanctions on Pyongyang in early July following the announcement of the new probe into the abductees’ fates.

Merkel and Putin call for stronger peace effort in Ukraine

President Vladimir Putin, meeting briefly on Sunday before the World Cup soccer final in Brazil, called for a stepping-up of peace efforts in Ukraine, Putin's spokesman said.

The pair have been in regular telephone contact over the Ukraine crisis, with Merkel urging Putin to use his influence with pro-Russian separatists to help bring about an end to fighting in the east of the former Soviet republic in which hundreds of people have been killed. Putin's spokesman Dmitry Peskov said Merkel and the Kremlin leader agreed the situation 'has a tendency toward degmation'.

“Both Putin and Merkel stressed the necessity to urgently resume the work of a contact group on Ukraine, possibly in the format of a video conference. It is their common opinion that, in order for the contact group to resume its work, a ceasefire needs to be declared as soon as possible,” Peskov said.

A separate statement released by Merkel’s office said effective controls along Russia’s border with Ukraine and an exchange of prisoners were key prerequisites for a ceasefire.

Russia warns Ukraine after shell crosses border

Ukrainian President Petro Poroshenko, who earlier turned down an invitation to attend the World Cup soccer final in Brazil where he may have met Russia's Vladimir Putin, accused Russian forces of crossing the border and attacking Ukrainian servicemen.

In a telephone conversation with the European Union’s Herman Van Rompuy, he called on the EU to consider “the illegal crossing of the Russian-Ukrainian border of heavy military equipment and an attack by Russian soldiers on the positions of Ukrainian servicemen,” his website said.

His comments were linked to an earlier report on Sunday by the government’s “anti-terror operation” that a convoy of about 100 separatist armed vehicles and trucks had crossed into Ukraine carrying rebel fighters from Russia. A Ukrainian military spokesman said Ukrainian artillery had destroyed the column.

Combat has intensified dramatically in Ukraine since a rebel missile attack killed dozens of government troops on Friday.

Ukrainian forces said their warplanes on Sunday carried out five air strikes on rebel bases near Luhansk airport, at Izvarino on the border and against Chechen fighters who it said had occupied a National Guard base at Lysychansk.

“The enemy suffered significant losses of men and equipment,” a statement from the “anti-terrorist operation” said, adding the attacks had sown “fear and panic” among the rebels.

Rebels controlling Luhansk, on the border with Russia, said Ukrainian forces had now begun to storm the town with about 50 tanks and attack planes. There was no word of this from the Ukrainian side.

In other incidents, local officials said 18 civilians had been killed in shooting in Luhansk and Donetsk, the region’s main city, which is also controlled by separatists. There were no details of these incidents.

Madrid, 14 July — Spain’s opposition Socialists, besieged by upstart leftist movements and struggling to win back voters on Sunday chose an economist Pedro Sanchez to lead the party and try and revive its chances in a looming election.

Pedro Sanchez, 42, a telegenic parliamentarian who only burst into the limelight in recent weeks, was elected by party members as the Socialists bid to overturn a dramatic decline.

“The change of the PSOE (Socialist Party) and the change of Spain started today,” Sanchez said, after beating two other candidates by a wide margin. He promised party executives would be “as far left” as its grassroots members.

Obama, Cameron discuss world situations over phone

Washington, 14 July — US President Barack Obama on Sunday spoke with British Prime Minister David Cameron to discuss the situations in Ukraine, Afghanistan, and Iraq, as well as the ongoing talks on Iran’s nuclear programme.

Obama and Cameron expressed concern about the increasing tensions and ongoing violence in eastern Ukraine and agreed upon the need for Russia to take immediate steps to de-escalate the situation, the White House said in a statement.

The leaders agreed Europe and the United States should take further coordinated measures to impose costs on Russia if it does not take immediate steps toward de-escalation, according to the statement.

On Afghanistan, Obama and Cameron welcomed recent progress toward resolving the election impasse and agreed to continue to urge all parties to play constructive and helpful roles leading to the peaceful and democratic transition of power in Afghanistan, it said.

The election standoff ended on Sunday after two days of intense talks between two rival candidates and visiting US Secretary of State John Kerry. The candidates agreed to audit of all ballots cast during 14 June presidential runoff.

Obama and Cameron also called on Iran to take the necessary steps to assure the international community that its nuclear programme will be exclusively peaceful and reaffirmed their commitments to make progress toward a sustainable agreement.

With regard to Iraq, the two leaders agreed to keep working with all parties to form an inclusive and representative government that can work to promote the interests of all Iraqis, said the statement.—Xinhua

Myanmar has approved its first Consumer Protection Law in March, guaranteeing the prevention of unsafe foods and services. The law stipulates that anyone who sells unsafe and low quality goods, or expired goods to consumers will face a jail term of up to three years, or a fine of K 5 million, and both in serious cases.

However, some consumer advocacy groups are still insisting the country needs stricter enforcement of this law to make it efficient. Before the establishment of the ASEAN Economic Community in 2015, the country should introduce more systematic measures to control substandard products.

The products should be safe not only for people, but also for the environment and animals. Crops sprayed with low quality pesticides can cause loss of lives and spread deadly diseases such as cancer, even if the amount of contamination is small.

Negligence of food safety measures is a crime which can harm generations of a country in terms of health, education and economy. While toxic foods cause chronic illnesses, unhygienic foods can pose danger for school children. This will then turn into a burden for the country.

Experts suggested both law enforcement and educational programmes are important in this matter. Whatever action is taken, safety of life is a top priority. Both government departments and NGOs should put more efforts into this matter, and producers or manufacturers of products should emphasize on the betterment of the state.

Making a difference means generating an effective impact or getting some important desired results. INSIGHT means SEEING THROUGH—seeing the core or essence or content by penetrating the form, the colour or the outer sphere.

For a significant difference to be made, the difference of impact between the following ideas should be earnestly considered:

- Selling vs Telling
- Asking vs Barking
- Showing vs Crowing
- Dealing vs Freewheeling
- Paying vs Playing
- Playing vs Straying
- Walking vs Talking
- Fixing vs Wishing
- Doing vs Brooding
- Gripping vs Slipping
- Smiling vs Beguiling
- Heavy Hitter vs Easy Quitter
- Game Plan vs Blame Plan

If you just read the Signpost directing the way to the City, and don’t follow it, you won’t get to the City.

If you just read the Menu, and do not order a certain dish, you won’t get the taste and you won’t fill your stomach.

If you just TALK and do not WALK you won’t be able to deliver the goods/the results.

If you behave like NATO-NO ACTION, TALK ONLY, you don’t deliver.

It is essential that you have to see the WHOLE while doing just a PART of the WHOLE, to be able to make a difference.

So, in order to make a difference, you have to get to see:

- the CAUSE in relation to an EFFECT
- the MEANS in relation to the END
- the difference between the RIGHT and the WRONG
- the difference between the GOOD and the EVIL
- the RELATION between YIN and YANG
- the RELATION between THEORY and PRACTICE
- both the UNITY and STRUGGLE of Opposites

To be able to make a difference, you have got to substitute:

- A BURNING DESIRE to replace COMLACENCY
- An INDOMITABLE MIND to replace APATHY
- An UNYIELDING EFFORT to replace INERTIA

In order to make a difference, you have got to see:

- INSIGHT WISDOM to replace IGNORANCE
- To make a difference, you have got to be:
  - ACTIVE instead of being PASSIVE
  - DYNAMIC instead of being STATIC
  - POSITIVE instead of being NEGATIVE
  - PROACTIVE instead of being REACTIVE
  - Transformational Change-Driven instead of being Status quo-Driven

If you want to STANDOUT FROM THE CROWD, you have got to be OUTSTANDING like a HAMSA in a group of DUCKS, or like a DIAMOND AMONG the PEBBLES or like a PEARL in a heap of sand.

In short, if you want to make a difference in your life, in your job, and in your relationships, you have got to have FIRE in your guts and in your heart; FIRE being:

- F for Fortitude
- I for Iron Mind
- R for Resilience
- E for Earnestness

With FIRE in your heart and with GOD in your head, you will certainly be UNBEATABLE.

Taleban survivor Malala, in Nigeria, pledges to help free girls

ABUJA, 14 July — Pakistani rights activist Malala Yousafzai, who survived being shot in the head by the Taleban for campaigning for girls’ education, pledged while on a trip to Nigeria to help free a group of schoolgirls abducted by Islamist militants.

On Sunday, Malala met parents of the more than 200 girls who were kidnapped by the militant group Boko Haram from a school in the northeastern village of Chibok in April.

Boko Haram, inspired by the Taleban, say they are fighting to establish an Islamic state in religiously mixed Nigeria. The group, whose name means “Western education is sinful”, has killed thousands and abducted hundreds since launching an uprising in 2009. Some of the parents broke down in tears as Malala spoke at a hotel in the capital Abuja on Sunday. “I can see those girls as my sisters … and I’m going to speak up for them until they are released,” she said.

“This is not an easy thing to do,” Malala added. “I’ve been talking about this for a long time, but now I have to take action.”

South African metalworkers’ union rejects pay offer, threatens wider strike

JOHANNESBURG, 14 July — South Africa’s metalworkers’ union NUMSA rejected the latest pay offer from engineering and steel sector employers on Sunday, saying black workers would not accept anything less than a 10 percent wage increase this year.

NUMSA is demanding a 12-15 percent annual wage increase for its members and on Sunday rejected employers’ latest offer of a 10 percent increase this year, 9.5 percent in 2015 and 9.0 percent the year after that. IRUMA, general secretary of the National Union of Metalworkers of South Africa, said NUMSA would not accept anything less than a 10 percent annual rise over three years at the very least.

While we are fully aware of the state of the industry in the metals and engineering sectors we are also very acutely aware of the miserable conditions of life of the majority of the black and African working class who … survive on extremely low, colonial and very inferior racist-inspired wages,” Jim told reporters.

“We are making a very clear statement that the strike continues and we call on our members to intensify our strike.”

That could mean calling 100,000 NUMSA members in other industries to join the strike as well. — Reuters

Police said on Saturday they had uncovered a plot to bomb the Abuja airport in a transport network using suicide bombers and devices concealed in luggage at major bus stations.

Pakistan’s Taleban militants shot Malala for her passionate advocacy of women’s rights to education. She survived after being airlifted to Britain for treatment, and has since become a symbol of defiance against the militants threatening the tribal areas along the Pakistan-Afghanistan border.

She has won the European Union’s prestigious human rights award and was nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize last year. A #BringBackOurGirls Twitter campaign supported by Michelle Obama and Angelina Jolie heaped pressure on authorities to act, and Jonathan pledged to save the girls, drawing promises of Western help to do so.

“I can feel … the circumstances under which you are suffering,” Malala said. “It’s quite difficult for a parent to know that their daughter is in great danger. My birthday wish this year is … bring back our girls now and alive.”

Several weeks on, the hostages have not been freed and media interest has waned. Around 200 Nigerians gathered in the Unity Fountain park in central Abuja on Sunday to call on authorities to explain what they are doing to get the girls out.

“Nobody has told us anything about where the girls could be, what they are doing to try to rescue them. In three months, we’ve heard nothing,” said Haruna Petuma, one of the parents at the gathering.

“We live in Chibok, and we haven’t seen any soldiers or police in the area since the attack,” Boko Haram, now considered the main security threat to Nigeria, is growing bolder.

It is also struggling with a southern secessionist movement and a local wing of al-Qaeda.

“Unfortunately, some understood our wisdom and patience in dealing with the problem in Omran and other areas as a kind of weakness and foregoing of responsibility and tried to make use of our willingness to end the conflict in a peaceful manner in a cheap way,” Hadi said.

“From now on, the state will not let this conflict continue.”

The Houthis captured Oman last Tuesday after days of fighting against government soldiers and allied Sunni tribal fighters, in clashes that had threatened to turn into a sectarian conflict.

Hadi said Houthis and other armed groups must leave with their weapons and give up the arms they had seized. He demanded they also hand over bodies and release prisoners.

The fall of Oman came less than a week after the collapse of a cease-fire, for which both sides blamed each other.

The Houthis have said their fight was against rivals loyal to the Islamist Saudi-backed military, and that they have no intention of attacking Sanaa.

Debut summer ‘supermoon’ hangs in the summer sky

NEW YORK, 14 July — A “supermoon” rose above cities from Los Angeles to London on Saturday night, the first of three times this year the full moon will orbit nearer the earth and appear unusually large and bright.

The supermoon is technically known as a “perigee moon,” and occurs when the moon is full as it reaches perigee, the point of its orbit closest to the earth. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) said in a statement. It looks largest when it’s closest to the horizon — an optical illusion.

“However, if it gets people out and looking at the night sky and maybe hooks them into astroph- omy, then it’s a good thing,” Geoff Chester of the US Naval Observatory, said on NASA’s website.

A 2013 supermoon was 14 percent bigger and 30 percent more luminous than the average full moon of that year, NASA said.

Two additional supermoons are expected in 2014, one on 10 August and another on 9 September, NASA said.

August’s supermoon is expected to be the most remarkable of the year.

Text more to reduce binge drinking

WASHINGTON, 14 July — Text messages can motivate young adults to reduce their binge drinking by more than 50 per cent, according to a new study.

Young adults who screened positive for a history of hazardous or binge drinking reduced their binge drinking by more than 50 per cent after receiving mobile phone text messages following a visit to the emergency department, the study found.

“Each day in the US, more than 50,000 adults ages 18 to 24 visit ERs and up to half have hazardous alcohol use patterns,” said Brian Saffoletto, of the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine in Pittsburgh.

“More than a third of them report alcohol abuse or dependence. The emergency department provides a unique setting to screen young adults for drinking problems and to engage them with their preferred mode of communication to reduce future use,” Suffoletto said.

Researchers enrolled 765 young adult emergency patients with a history of hazardous drinking in the study.

For 12 weeks, one-third received text messages prompting them to respond to drinking-related queries and received text messages in return offering feedback on their answers.

The feedback was tailored to strengthen their low-risk drinking plan or goal or to promote reflection on either their drinking plan or their decision not to set a low-risk goal.

One-third received only text message queries about their drinking and one-third received no text messages. — PTI

US cargo ship blasts off with supplies for space station

CAPE CANAVERAL, 14 July — An unmanned Orbital Sciences Corp Antares rocket blasted off from a seaside launch pad in Virginia on Sunday, sending a Cygnus cargo ship on its way to the International Space Station, a NASA Television broadcast showed.

The four-storey-tall (41-metre-tall) rocket lifled off at 12:52 pm EDT/1652 GMT from a commercial- ly operated launch pad at NASA’s Wallops Island Flight Facility on the Virginia coast. Perched on top of the rocket was a Cygnus spacecraft, built by Orbital Sciences in partnership with Italy’s Thales Alenia Space, a joint venture of Thales SA and Finmeccanica SpA.

The freighter was loaded with more than 3,660 pounds (1,660 kg) of food, space equipment and supplies for the space station, a $100 billion research laboratory that flies about 264 miles (425 km) above Earth. The capsule was slated to reach the orbital outpost on Wednes- day. The mission is the sec- ond of eight station cargo runs by Orbital Sciences under a $1.9 billion contract with NASA.

Orbital Sciences made its first cargo run to the sta- tion in January.

It has not yet an- nounced other customers for its medium-lift Antares rocket, a two-stage booster that relies on Russian-built AJ-26 engines to power its first stage. — Reuters

YouTube weighs funding efforts to boost premium content — sources

The talks underscore Google Inc’s desire to complete YouTube’s transition from a repository forgrainy home videos to a site sporting the more polished premium content crucial to securing higher-priced advertising.

Over the past two months, YouTube exec- utives have begun making the rounds, talking to Holly- wood producers to explore the kinds of support it could offer its content creators and produce more must-see programming, ac- cording to the two people.

Executives did not lay out exactly how a program would be structured. One of the two people said the site may offer between $1 mil- lion and $3 million to pro- duce a series of programs, and might contribute market- ing funds as well.

The second person said the site was interest- ed in videos shorter than the 30-minute, TV net- work-quality Web shows that Amazon.com Inc and other online sites have re- cently funded. — Reuters

Insurers struggle to get grip on burgeoning cyber risk market

PARIS / BOSTON, 14 July — Insurers are eagerly eying exponential growth in the tiny cyber coverage market but their lack of experience and skills handling hackers and data breaches may keep their ambitions in check.

High profile cases of hackers seizing sensitive customer data from companies, such as US retailer Target Corp or e-com- merce company eBay Inc, have executives checking their insurance policies.

Increasingly, corpo-rate risk managers are see- ing insurance against cyber crime as necessary budget spending rather than just nice to have.

The insurance breaking arm of Marsh & McLennan Companies estimates the US cyber insurance mar- ket was worth $1 billion last year in gross written premiums and could reach as much as $2 billion this year. The European market is currently a fraction of that, at around $150 mil- lion, but is growing by 50 to 100 percent annually, according to Marsh.

Those numbers represent a sliver of the overall insurance market, which is growing at a far more sluggish rate. Premiums are set to grow only 2.8 percent this year in inflation-adjusted terms, according to Munich Re, the world’s biggest reinsurer.

The European cyber coverage market could get a big boost from draft EU data protection rules in the works that would force companies to disclose breaches of customer data to them.

“Companies have be- come aware that the risk of being hacked is unavoid- able,” said Andreas Schlay- er, responsible for cyber risk insurance at Munich Re. “People are now more aware that hackers can at- tack and do great damage to central infrastructure, for example in the energy sector.” Insurers, who have more experience han- dling risks like hurricanes and fires, are now rushing to gain expertise in cyber technology.

“It is a difficult risk to price by traditional in- surance methods as there is not statistically signifi- cant actuarial data available,” said Robert Pa- risi, head of cyber products at insurance brokers Marsh. — Reuters

Israel holds off on escalating Gaza barrage; West wants truce

Gaza/Jerusalem, 14 July — Israel appeared to hold off on a threatened escalation of its week-old Gaza Strip barrage on Monday despite balking at Western calls for a ceasefire with an equally defiant Hamas.

On Sunday, the Israeli military had warned residents of the northern border town of Beit Lahiya to leave or risk their lives when, after nightfall, it planned to intensify air strikes against suspected Palestinian rocket sites among civilian homes.

A UN aid agency said around a quarter of Beit Lahiya’s 70,000 residents fled, fearing Israeli attacks which, according to Gaza officials, have killed more than 166 people, most of them non-combatants, since the cross-border shelling began.

But other than a lone air strike Friday night inside the town, which the Palestinians said caused no casualties, Beit Lahiya was largely quiet in the early hours of Monday. Israel said one rocket was fired from Gaza without inflicting damage.

There have been more than 940 such launches by Gaza’s dominant Hamas and other factions in the past week, Israel says.

It has not suffered fatalities, due in part to the success of its Iron Dome rocket interceptors, but the salvos have disrupted life in major cities, paralyzed vulnerable southern towns and triggered Israeli mobilization of troops for a possible Gaza invasion if the air campaign failed to curb Hamas.

US Secretary of State John Kerry, whose bid to broker a wider peace deal was thwarted by the inconclusive session, said on Monday he would turn to the November 2012 ceasefire agreement.

The call was echoed by France and by Germany, which will send its foreign minister to the region on Monday. But with the United States and European Union, like Israel, shunning Hamas as a terrorist group, Middle Eastern intermediaries were muted.

A US official said that Kerry, in a phone conversation with Netanyahu, “described his engagement with leaders in the region to help stop the rocket fire so calm can be restored and civilian casualties prevented, and underscored the United States’ readiness to facilitate a cessation of hostilities, including a return to the November 2012 ceasefire agreement”. MEDIATION

That referred to an Egyptian-mediated accord that doused the last big Gaza flare-up, Cairo is now again seeking calm. Hamas, said it also received US overtures through Abbas and Qatar. Turkey has sought to intercede as well.

Netanyahu’s spokesman declined to discuss the conversation with Kerry. Another Israeli official played down the truce talk.

“We are not considering this or that proposal,” the official, who declined to be named, said late on Sunday. While allowing that a diplomatic solution could eventually be found, the official said Israel would, for now, pursue its military offensive “to restore quiet over a protracted period by inflicting significant damage to Hamas and the other terrorist groups in the Gaza Strip”. Hamas and Islamic Jihad, the second-most potent Gaza faction, made clear they would not accept a mere “calm for calm” where both Palestinian fighters and Israeli forces stand down.

“Netanyahu began this crazy war and he must end his war first,” Hamas leader Izzat Al-Reshiq told Al-Arabiya television.

“There can be no ceasefire unless the conditions of the Resistance are met,” he added, saying Is-rael had to stop blocking Gaza and free hundreds of Palestinians it rounded up in the occupied West Bank last month while searching for three Jewish seminary students it said it were kidnapped by Hamas.

Rocket fire from Gaza had increased during the West Bank dragnet. Tensions were further inflamed when the three teens’ bodies were discovered, after which suspected Israeli avengers abducted and killed a Palestinian youth from East Jerusalem.

Hamas neither confirmed nor denied responsibility for the West Bank kidnappings, which came as it struggled to parlay the unity deal with Abbas into economic relief for Gaza, whose other border with Egypt has been sealed off by a Cairo government that considers the Palestinian Islamic-led group a threat.

Islamic Jihad welcomed Egypt’s intercessions.

“There can be no settlement or mediation without an esteemed Egyptian role in compelling the (Israel) enemy to cease fire,” the group’s leader, Ramadan Shallah, told Al Jazeera. He added that “the battle will not end unless the (Gaza) siege is ended”.

The Gaza Health Ministry said at least 166 Palestinians — among them about 138 civilians, including 30 children — have died during six days of warfare, and more than 1,000 wounded. — Reuters

Iraqi factions hit new delay in forming government

Baghdad, 14 July — Iraq’s parliament failed on Sunday to break a political deadlock that is holding up the formation of a new government to tackle an Is-lamist-led insurgency raging less than 50 miles (80 km) from Baghdad.

After a brief session, parliamentary officials put off until Tuesday efforts to reach agreement between Shi’ite, Sunni and Kurdish politicians on the posts of prime minister, president and parliamentary speaker.

Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki, whose State of Law coalition is the largest individual list in parliament, is seeking a third term but faces opposition from Sunnis and Kurds who say he has ruled for the Shi’ite majority at the expense of minority communities. Every rival’s parties want to unseat him.

The political impasse has been given added ur-gency by the Islamist-led insurgency which swept through Sunni provinces of northern Iraq last month, encouraging Maliki’s opponents to try to force his departure.

A blast near a busy street in the southwestern district of Bayaa killed three people and wounded seven, police and hospital sources said. In Yusifia, 15 km (10 miles) south of the capital, a bomb went off near a crowded mar ket, killing another three people, medics and police said.

The disagreement over Maliki’s future appeared to be blocking progress on the other political posts.

Sunnis politicians said the main Sunni bloc put forward Salim al-Jabouri, a moderate Islamist, as their candidate for speaker, but accused Maliki of effec-tively torpedoing their proposal by linking it to their acceptance of his bid for a third term. “We have presented our candidate for speaker and done what we should do,” said outgoing speaker Osama Nujaidi. “We hold the other blocs responsible for the delay.”

“Once we manage to complete the democratic process to form the government, this would help to stop the great destruction happening in Iraq, which is jeopardising the country’s unity.”

An arrest warrant on terrorism charges was issued in 2011 against Ja-bouri, who was serving on parliament’s human rights committee at the time. He had confronted Maliki over abuses against prisoners in special jails in the forti-fied Green Zone of central Baghdad where parliament is also located.

UN temporarily moves some international staff out of Libya

United Nations, 14 July — The United Nations said on Sunday it had temporarily relocated some of its international staff out of Libya after heavy fighting broke out between rival militias vying for control of Libya’s main airport.

The fighting killed at least seven people and forced a halt to all flights in the worst violence in the capital in six months.

“We can confirm a temporary relocation for security reasons,” UN spokesman Farhan Haq said, without giving figures.

If the security situation continued to deteriorate, UN sources did not rule out a temporary relocation of all remaining interna-tional staff in Libya. One UN source said UN staff had been “significantly re-duced.”

The United Nations Support Mission in Libya, or UNSMIL, has some 200 national and international staff, according to its website.

Air India flight returns to New Jersey airport after engine trouble
NEWARK, (NJ), 14 July — An Air India flight with 313 passengers on board was forced to return to Newark Liberty International Airport on Sunday after an engine on the Boeing 777 appeared to overheat and catch fire, according to airport officials. The officials previously said a bird strike may have caused the fire but later ruled that out after conducting an investigation, said Erica Dumas, a spokeswoman for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey.

A few minutes after taking off, the pilot of Air India Flight 444 reported flames coming from an engine on the left side of the aircraft, Dumas said. The plane returned to the airport about half an hour after taking off.

The pilot requested that an ambulance wait at the terminal but there were no reported injuries, Dumas said. She added that the flight bound for Mumbai had multiple blown tires that may have been caused by the brakes overheating.—Reuters
Jacqueline Fernandez lost oodles of weight for Kick

Mumbai, 14 July — Jacqueline Fernandez, who is gearing up for the release of her first solo big project Kick, says she had to gain weight to look convincing in her role.

The 28-year-old Sri Lanka beauty had to look like a college girl in the film and she said, during Rustom, I had to thin down completely and cause there were a lot of action scenes. For this film, I was asked to gain weight. I am playing a college girl.”

Dolls become conversation partners for elderly

Tokyo, 14 July— Talking dolls are gaining popularity among elderly people who live alone and may help stave off mental decline.

“After spending about a month with this boy, I started to feel affection for him and cannot leave him alone,” said Nobu Komatsu, 86, who lives by herself in Tokyo’s Itabashi Ward, while patting her doll’s head.

Partners Inc, a Tokyo-based maker of toys and daily goods, developed the 5-year-old boy doll called “Oshaberi Makun” (Talking Makun) that recognizes certain words and gives a limited range of responses in the recorded voice of a real 5-year-old boy.

The doll can have a total of 19 different conversations. It will also speak out on its own once every 20 to 30 minutes, saying things like “I love you very much” or “Please pat my head,” if switched to monologue mode, according to Partners.

The doll is priced at 18,000 yen and about 4,000 units have sold in six months since its launch in November 2013.

Komatsu, who spends most of her time alone, said, “I’m startled whenever he says to me ‘Please hold my hands’ or ‘Please hold me in your arms’...”

“I guess this may help prevent me from suffering dementia,” she said. “Ever since Ma-kun came to spend time with me, I started to feel more positive and talk more often.”

Some experts have acknowledged the dolls’ positive effects on elderly people’s minds.

Kimihiro Yoneyama, a neurologist and writer familiar with medication for dementia, said, “The act of uttering words is the familiar with medication for dementia, said, “The act of uttering words is the brain.” If switched to monologue, it will also say “much” or “Please pat my head,” if switched to monologue.

The doll is priced at 30,700 yen.

Argentina wins Golden Ball, Rodriguez tops scorer

Rio de Janeiro, 14 July— Argentina captain Lionel Messi won FIFA’s “Golden Ball” award as the best player of the World Cup after leading his team to Sunday’s final and Colombia’s James Rodriguez finished as the tournament’s top scorer with six goals.

German goalkeeper Manuel Neuer, who kept a clean sheet as his side beat Argentina 1-0 in extra time to claim their fourth World Cup, was awarded the “Golden Gloves” as the tournament’s top keeper.

Four-times world player of the year Messi had a quiet game by his standards on Sunday but was the driving force behind Argentina’s push to their first World Cup final since 1986.

He scored four of their six goals in the group stage, set up Angel di María’s winner in the last 16 against Switzerland and shouldered the burden of slotting home Argentina’s first penalty on their shootout win over the Netherlands in the semi-finals. Messi also won four successive man-of-the-match awards against Bosnia, Iran, Argentina and Switzerland.

A despondent Messi took little consolation in the award. “It’s a sad prize which I won, because we wanted to lift the World Cup trophy for Argentina,” he said.

While some pundits thought Messi looked jaded after the group stage and did not influence his team as much, Argentina coach Alejandro Sabella said he was a deserving winner. “I think Lionel reached the pantheon of the greats a while back,” Sabella told reporters. “Yes, I think he deserved it. He played a great World Cup to get us where he did.

“I think it’s very deserved,” German forward Thomas Mueller was runner-up to Messi and Netherlands winger Arjen Robben was third.

Mueller also came runner-up behind Rodriguez for the Golden Boot award. The German forward finished with five goals, one behind the Colombian attacking midfielder.

France midfielder Paul Pogba was named young player of the tournament, while Colombia took the Fair Play award after receiving just five yellow cards in five matches in Brazil.

FIFA also praised their positive play and the behaviour of their players and officials.—Reuters

Osaka, 14 July— The first hydrogen charging station in Japan for fuel cell vehicles has been built in western Japan, with a completion ceremony held on Monday. The operator Iwatani Corp said the station in Amagasaki, Hyogo Prefecture, will start retail sales of hydrogen after fuel cell vehicles hit the market, with their debut expected by next March.

The retail price will be set at similar levels as gasoline in terms of automobile running costs, according to Iwatani.

The major provider of industrial gases invested about 500 million yen in the station, which can fill up a regular-size tank within three minutes. The facility, built adjacent to the company’s research center, will be used for training purposes until the commercial operation begins.

The facility “marks the opening of a hydrogen society,” said Masaomi Nomura, president of Iwatani. “We will make further efforts to realize a safe and stable supply of hydrogen.”—Kyodō News
Jubilant Germany become world champions again

Rio de Janeiro, 14 July — Germany are champions of the world again after snatching victory against Argentina in the soccer showpiece with a superb extra-time goal from baby-faced Mario Goetze to lift the trophy for the first time since 1990.

Hatched from the agony of their recent near-misses, Germany’s triumph secured a fourth World Cup title — their first since the country was reunited 24 years ago — with a nail-biting 1-0 win in Sunday’s final at the sprawling Maracana.

The win, sealed by substitute Goetze’s brilliantly taken strike in the 113th minute, marked the first time a European country had won the sport’s greatest prize in the Americas, although this World Cup was ultimately a triumph for all.

“We have been together for 55 days but the work started 10 years ago with (former national team manager) Joergen Klinsmann,” said Germany coach Joachim Loew.

“We did everything to experience this day. The team really deserved it. No one deserved it more than us.”

The Argentina team, their homeland still recovering from a crippling debt crisis, were brave in defeat and with a bit more luck might well have won the greatest prize in sport.

They squandered a string of chances but lost no admirers in a match that was full of end-to-end action and unremitting tension over two hours.

“I am very proud. The boys played an extraordinary World Cup,” said Argentina coach Alejandro Sabella.

“Over and above the pain of a defeat, they can look each other in the eye, they can look in the mirror and know they gave their all for Argentina.”

Carnival Atmosphere

Hosts Brazil did not make the final, finishing fourth as they buckled under the weight of expectation with two humiliating losses, including a 7-1 semi-final thrashing by Germany, but never has the samba nation shone so brightly on the world stage.

Magnanimous in defeat, Brazil proved all the doubters wrong by delivering a World Cup in which some breathtaking action on the pitch was matched only by the contagious carnival atmosphere that infected everyone from the favelas to the golden sands of Copacabana Beach and the jungles of the Amazon.
