UNHCR to help voluntary repatriation of Myanmar refugees in Thailand

YANGON, 16 July—Representative of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees Myanmar on Tuesday said the New Light of Myanmar that the UN organization will focus on an eventual voluntary repatriation of Myanmar refugees in Thailand.

Ayaki Ito said in the report that an eventual voluntary return of Myanmar refugees in Thailand can only take place when the refugees themselves decide in an informed and voluntary way to return; in the meantime, UNHCR will continue support the Royal Thai Government in their efforts to protect and assist the refugees from Myanmar, as well as the Myanmar Government and communities in their preparedness for an eventual voluntary repatriation, and both governments have reiterated their commitment to a voluntary return in safety and dignity.

The Bangkok Post of Thailand on Monday reported that the source from the 9th Infantry Division (Surasea) said joint working teams consisting of the military, the Mae Fah Luang Foundation and the office of UNHCR has been conducting interviews and verifying people’s nationalities in all nine refugee camps nationwide.

Regarding this, UNHCR said that the survey conducted by the Mae Fah Luang Foundation under Royal Patronage was not designed to verify nationality or to sort the refugees based on their intentions as was incorrectly reported in the media; the aim of the survey was to gather socio-demographic and livelihood profiles and to better understand the various vulnerabilities and the concerns of all the participating refugees in the nine camps.

UNHCR also said that the survey included an important question to get a sense of how refugees see their future; the survey was voluntary — people were free to participate or not — and did not lead to any registration; the results are still being consolidated and will be used by agencies to address the concerns and vulnerabilities of the refugee population and to support efforts in vocational skills training and humanitarian assistance activities after life in the camp, whatever and wherever that future life may be; the refugees were informed that the preferences for the future that they provided in the survey are only indicative at this point, and quite naturally may change over time as the overall situation back home is also changing; in short, they are not tied to their stated preferences in the survey.

The Thai newspaper reported, quoting an unnamed source, that the UNHCR has offered to provide land and financial assistance in the first year to refugees who voluntarily return to Myanmar.

UNHCR Myanmar also explained that currently UNHCR’s work with the local authorities and partners focus on initial preparation for potential return; no concrete discussion or decision has been made regarding assistance and support for returning refugees; UNHCR is not in a position to nor has any authority to provide land in Myanmar.

Typhoon kills 10 in Philippines, shuts Manila, prompts mass evacuations

MANILA, 16 July — A typhoon killed at least 10 people as it churned through the Philippines and hit the capital, prompting the evacuation of almost more than 370,000 people and shutting financial markets, offices and schools, rescue officials said on Wednesday.

The eye of Typhoon Rammasun, the strongest storm to hit the country this year, passed to the south of Luzon on Wednesday after cutting a path across the main island of Luzon, toppling trees and power lines and causing electrocutions and widespread blackouts.

Major roads across Luzon were blocked by debris, fallen trees and electricity poles. The storm uprooted trees in the capital where palm trees lining major arteries were bent over nearly double by the wind as broken headstones bounced down the streets.

Richard Gordon, chairman of the Philippine National Red Cross, said there was minimal damage in the capital but staff were trying to rescue people trapped by fallen debris in Batangas City to the south where two people were electrocuted.

“We have not received reports of major flooding in Metro Manila because the typhoon did not bring rain, but the winds were strong,” he said.

The number of evacuated people had reached more than 370,000, mostly in the eastern province of Albay, the first to be hit by the typhoon, the disaster agency said. They were taken to schools, gymnasiums and towns halls converted to shelters.

At least four southeastern provinces on Luzon declared, or were about to declare, a state of calamity, allowing the local governments to tap emergency relief funds.

The storm brought storm surges to Manila Bay and prompted disaster officials to evacuate slum-dwellers on the capital’s outskirts. More surges were expected as the storm headed west.

Some 85 percent of areas serviced by the country’s biggest power distributor, Manila Electric Co, in Luzon were without power and were unlikely to be back up within the day, a company spokesman said.

Tokyo, 16 July — Regulators said on Wednesday a nuclear plant in southwestern Japan cleared an initial safety hurdle, in what is seen as a major step for it to become the first nuclear facility to restart among the country’s 48 offline commercial reactors since the 2011 Fukushima nuclear crisis.

The Nuclear Regulation Authority’s decision-making panel approved a draft report required to resume the operations of two reactors at Kyushu Electric Power Co’s Sendai plant in Kagoshima Prefecture.

The 420-page report—which concluded that the plant’s proposed countermeasures against earthquakes, tsunami and other possible risks meet the standards—will be finalized after a monthlong public consultation period through 15 August. The new standards were introduced in July last year. But the regional utility is not expected to reactivate the plant before this fall as it still needs to secure local consent and complete some other procedures.

With Japan experiencing its first summer without nuclear power in nearly a half century and utilities’ fuel costs for thermal power generation surging, the government of Prime Minister Shinzo Abe is keen to resume the country’s electricity generation surging, which supplied some 30 percent of the country’s electricity before the Fukushima crisis. More than half of respondents in a Kyodo News survey conducted last month, however, said they oppose the reactivation of nuclear plants.

Currently, all 48 commercial reactors in Japan remain offline, as the nuclear crisis at Tokyo Electric Power Co’s Fukushima Daiichi nuclear complex continues. Since the 1986 Chernobyl disaster, it has made it difficult for utilities to resume their operation after mandatory regular checks.

To be restarted, reactors need to pass the regulatory body’s safety assessments based on the new standards, Kyushu Electric is expected of setting fire to a bus packed with school children in Guangzhou in April.

Pakistan military captures Taleban commander

Defra  IsmaI Khan, (Pakistan), 16 July — The Pakistani military has captured a Taleban commander who once tried to blow up former president Pervez Musharraf, security officials said on Tuesday.

Adnan Rashid, who was captured on Friday in South Waziristan in northwest Pakistan near the Afghan border, is the first well-known Taleban commander taken since the military launched an offensive in neighbouring North Waziristan last month.

He was injured in a shootout during his capture in a house where he was living with his family in the Wana area of South Waziristan, the officials said.

The Pakistan army has said it will drive Taleban insurgents from their key strongholds in the region and indicated on Tuesday that it would expand its offensive into the Bajaur tribal region, further north. The Pakistani Taleban, meanwhile, said it would continue to ramp up attacks on Pakistani security forces in Bajaur, along the Afghan border.

Rashid, believed to be in his mid-30s, is a former Pakistani air force officer who tried to become a suicide bomber before he was jailed for a 2003 attempt to blow up then-President Musharraf. He escaped from jail in 2012 along with nearly 400 other militants.

Following his release, he claimed responsibility for masterminding another jailbreak that freed 250 prisoners. He also made a series of YouTube videos and wrote an open letter attempting to justify the assassination attempt on schoolgirl activist Malala Yousafzai.

The Pakistan military’s offensive follows years of pressure on Islamabad by NATO allies to crack down on Taleban havens in North Waziristan. Since the offensive began a month ago the military has seized control of Miranshah, the capital of North Waziristan and claims to have killed hundreds of militants.

Also on Tuesday, three Pakistani soldiers and six Taleban militants were killed in a gun battle in the village of Fateh Khel near the town of Mir Ali in North Waziristan.

The Taleban have killed more than a dozen members of the security forces in Bajaur in the past two months, a military official said.

In a sign that the violence may spread, two senior members of the Pakistani Taleban have resigned in response to the offensive in North Waziristan.

Israel targets top Hamas leader as Gaza ceasefire collapses

Gaza/Jerusalem, 16 July — Israel resumed its air strikes in the Gaza Strip on Wednesday a day after holding its fire in deference to an Egyptian-proposed ceasefire deal that failed to get Hamas militants to halt rocket attacks.

Attacks in the Gaza Strip killed at least seven Palestinians in the early hours of Wednesday, Gaza health officials said, and destroyed the house of Mahmoud Zahir — who is believed to be in hiding elsewhere — in the first apparent targeting of a top Hamas political leader.

The week-old conflict seemed to be at a turning point on Tuesday, with Hamas defying Arab and Western calls to cease fire and Israel threatening to step up an offensive that could include an invasion of the densely populated enclave. The Israeli military said on Wednesday it had sent out warning messages to residents in the northern Gaza Strip to evacuate their homes by 0800 (0600 BST), with hostilities ceasing within 12 hours.

Hamas’ armed wing, the Izz el-Deen al-Qassam Brigades, rejected the ceasefire deal, a proposal that addressed in only general terms some of its key demands, and said its battle with Israel would “increase in ferocity and intensity.”

But Moussa Abu Marzouk, a Hamas political official who was in Cairo, said the movement, which is seeking a deal that would ease the Egyptian and Israeli border restrictions throttling Gaza’s economy, had made no final decision on Cairo’s proposal.

Israel, citing the persistence of salvos, resumed attacks in Gaza six hours after implementation of the truce was to have begun. The military said it targeted at least 20 of Hamas’ hidden rocket launchers, tunnels and weapons storage facilities.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said in remarks late on Tuesday that Israel had no choice but to “expand and intensify” its campaign on Hamas, though he did not specifically mention the possibility of a ground incursion. The Israeli security cabinet which met into the early hours of Wednesday had discussed a limited ground operation, an Israeli official said.

A Gaza medical official said 195 Palestinians, including at least 150 civilians, among them 31 children, have been killed.

One Israeli has been killed in the fighting. Israel’s Iron Dome anti-missile system intercepted 20 of the Hamas projectiles, including two over the Tel Aviv area, and the rest caused no damage or casualties.

Israel’s neighbour and whose military-backed government has been at odds with Islamist Hamas — a mutual “de-escalation” was to have begun at 9 am (0700 BST), with hostilities ceasing within 12 hours.

Ukraine sees Russian role in air strike on town

Kiev, 16 July — Ukraine has made fresh charges of Russian involvement in its conflict with separatist rebels, suggesting Moscow may have had a role in an air strike on Tuesday that killed 11 people.

The accusations come a day before European Union leaders meet to discuss the crisis, where they might consider adopting fresh sanctions against Russia.

“Tomorrow in Brussels, the heads of state and government will again assess the situation on the ground and, should it be required, adopt necessary decisions,” the bloc’s enlargement commissioner Stefan Fuele told the European Parliament in Strasbourg.

In other fighting in the three-and-a-half month conflict with separatists in the Russian-speaking east of Ukraine, government forces said they had lost another six soldiers in attacks on their positions near the border with Russia.

In all, since the start of the government’s “anti-terrorist” operations in mid-April, a total of 258 Ukrainian servicemen have been killed, 922 injured and 45 are captive, military spokesman Andriy Lysenko said.

Hundreds of civilians and rebels have also died.

Iraq names moderate Sunni parliament speaker in move to break political deadlock

BAGHDAD, 16 July — Iraqi politicians named a moderate Sunni Islamist as speaker of parliament on Tuesday, a long-delayed first step towards a power-sharing government urgently needed to save the state from disintegration in the face of a Sunni uprising. But after quickly picking Salim al-Jabouri as speaker, lawmakers argued bitterly for hours over his Shi’ite deputy, suggesting they are still far from a deal on a new government or a decision on the fate of Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki.

Iraq’s army and allied Shi’ite militia launched an assault to retake the executed former dictator Saddam Hussein’s home city Tikrit from the al-Qaeda offshoot known as the Islamic State and allied militants, who seized it in mid-June during a lightning advance through the Sunni heartland. The move was a significant advance by the militants over the past month has put Iraq’s very survival in jeopardy even as its politicians have been deadlocked over forming a new government since an election in April.

Maliki, whose State of Law coalition won the most seats but would need allies to form a government, has ruled since the election as a caretaker, defying demands from Sunnis and Kurds that he step aside for a less-polarising figure.

Washington has made clear that setting up a more inclusive government in Baghdad is a requirement for its military support against the insurgency. Under Iraq’s governing system in place since the post-Saddam Hussein constitution was adopted in 2005, the prime minister is a member of the Shi’ite majority, the speaker a Sunni and the largely ceremonial president a Kurd. Each of the three is meant to have two deputies, drawn from the other two groups.

Picking the Sunni speaker is parliament’s first task, but Sunni leaders had previously refused to nominate one until a deal was reached on a prime minister. Parliament now has 30 days to elect a president, who will then have 15 days to nominate a prime minister.

The lack of job opportunities here is contributing to the increase of human trafficking in Myanmar. When people try to get jobs with higher incomes in neighbouring countries, they often fall victims of human trafficking rings.

Ministry of Sports trains coaches, referees in badminton, table tennis, petanque events

NAY PYI TAW, 16 July—Not only long-term but also short-term plans are being implemented for the development of Myanmar’s sports standard and for achieving victory in the 28th SEA Games. Union Minister for Sports U Tant Hsan said at the ceremony to open a coaching and referee course at the gold camp in Nay Pyi Taw on Wednesday.

The Ministry of Sports extends sports and physical education institutes and sports centres for training new generation athletes under local and foreign coaches, he added.

The Union minister spoke in Myanmar. My father U Thein Maung taught him Myanmar language.

We are now in a sort of family relationship. He donated a water tank to No 2 Basic Education High School of Mohin and school furniture to basic education primary schools. He also presented stationery and food stuffs to the school children,” said teacher Daw Nyein Nyein.

Now, the Japanese is 92 years old. Although daughters and sons-in-law urged him not to visit Myanmar due to his old age, he arrived in Myitkyina by plane in March 2014. But he could not proceed to Mohin due to his health condition, and sent his son-in-law to Mohin to pay tribute to his fallen troops.

The Japanese Captain, who survived the war, paid tributes to his fallen troops under the rain tree at the Mohin station every year, said local people.

“Every cold season, the Japanese arrives in Mohin and stays at our house. He called on the trainees to become qualified coaches and referees to turn out outstanding athletes who will “bring honour to the State.”

Old tree with significance to Japanese cut down

Mohnyin, 16 July—As a rain tree, said to be over 100-year old, in front of the railway station in Mohnyin of Kachin State may fall down during strong wind and heavy rain, officials of the Township Development Affairs Committee started cutting its branches this month to ensure safety and will likely be cut down almost entirely. The tree bears significance to Japanese, locals said.

In the Second World War, Captain Mikio Kino-hita of the Japanese troops served as a station superintendent of Mohin Station. Meanwhile, many of his troops died under the rain tree during bomb blasts of the allied forces.

Migration of hundreds of thousands of people has created an opportunity for traffickers who entice and make false promises. In fighting against trafficking in persons, development of the economy is a crucial. Legal and illegal migration of people is also happening regionally and internationally. However, while emigrants from some neighbouring countries are seeking jobs with high incomes in developed countries of other continents, the destination countries for most of the Myanmar migrant workers are just regional countries where democratic practices and labour rights cannot be fully guaranteed.

Trafficked men are very often subjected to forced labour in the fishing and construction industries abroad, while women are found in the situations of forced prostitution and children are in forced labour as street hawkers.

According to the United Nations Inter-Agency Project on Human Trafficking (UNIAP), the routes of cross-border trafficking are from Kengtung and Tachileik to Mae Sai, Thailand; from Myawady to Mae Sot, Thailand; and from Kawthoung to Ranong, Thailand, and sometimes from these points through to Malaysia. Women from Kachin State and Northern Shan State are trafficked to Yunnan Province, China, via Ruili.

Action taken by anti-trafficking squads is short-term means to eliminate this problem. Economic development plans and creation of more job opportunities are long-term ways to save our nationals from trafficking gangs.

Obama vows intelligence cooperation to Germany’s Merkel

WASHINGTON, 16 July — US President Barack Obama spoke to German Chancellor Angela Merkel on Tuesday for the first time since a new spy scandal dented relations between the two allies, and pledged to be in touch about ways to improve US-German intelligence cooperation.

The call followed a difficult period in US-German relations after Berlin told the CIA station chief last week to leave the country after officials unearthed two suspected US spies.

Berlin said last week it had discovered a suspected US spy in the Defence Ministry. That came just days after a German foreign intelligence worker was arrested on suspicion of being a CIA informer and admitted passing documents to a US contact.

“The president and the chancellor ... exchanged views on US-German intelligence cooperation, and the president said he’d remain in close communication on ways to improve cooperation going forward,” the statement said.

The phrase “exchanged views” may suggest the two leaders were far apart on how they see the issue.

Merkel has said spyng on allies is a “waste of energy.” The White House, while being circumspect about what it would concern about CIA activity, has said the issue should be resolved through diplomatic channels and not through the media.

The United States and Germany are important partners on a host of global conflicts. Obama and Merkel also discussed the violence in Ukraine and talks with Iran about its nuclear programme, the White House said.

The two leaders reiterated that Russia had to take more steps to de-escalate the situation in eastern Ukraine by urging rebels to release hostages and by ending the flow of heavy weapons, equipment, and fighters across the Russian border. “The leaders agreed that to date neither the United States nor Germany has seen Russia fulfill these required actions,” it said.

Obama and US officials have held a number of calls with European leaders in recent days about Russia in a sign that Washington is pushing for a new round of sanctions against Moscow.

US Vice President Joe Biden told Ukraine President Petro Poroshenko on Tuesday that the United States was working with European allies on the issue amid what they cited as further acts of escalation from Russia.

“The leaders discussed Russia’s ongoing support for the separatists and apparent escalation of the conflict over the last few days,” the White House said in a statement about the call between the two men. “The vice president told President Poroshenko that the United States was engaging with European leaders to discuss the imposition of costs on Russia for its continued escalation of the conflict,” it said.

Car bomb attack kills at least 89 in Afghanistan

WASHINGTON, 16 July — A car packed with explosives exploded on Tuesday at a crowded market in Afghanistan’s eastern province of Paktika, killing at least 89 people, officials said, one of the most violent attacks in the country in a year.

The huge explosion took place not far from the porous border with Pakistan’s North Waziristan region, where the military has been attacking hideouts of the Pakistani Taliban in the past few weeks, prompting militants to retreat toward Afghanistan.

“The number of victims may increase,” said General Zahir Azimi, a defense ministry spokesman. UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon condemned the attack as a “despicable criminal act,” which was a serious violation of international law, his spokesman said. The attacks took place as foreign troops are gradually withdrawing from the country. The United Nations said last week that civilian casualties jumped by almost a quarter in the first half of this year as hostilities escalated.

Libyan militia tighten control of Tripoli airport

Tripoli, 16 July — Libyan militia fighters with anti-aircraft guns and mortars fanned out on Tuesday across Tripoli’s airport, transformed into a battle field by two days of fighting that has cut the Libyan capital off from the outside world.

US Secretary of State John Kerry said Washington was working to help end to violence that has brought the north African country to the edge of chaos three years after the uprising that toppled dictator Muammar Gaddafi.

At least 15 people have been killed in the capital and the eastern city of Benghazi since Sunday, fighting between rival militias at the capital’s airport damaged the control tower and wrecked 11 civilian aircraft parked on the tarmac. The main terminal building has been turned into a field hospital.

In Benghazi, irregular forces loyal to renegade former general Khalifa Haftar, a former Gaddafi ally, bombarded Islamist militia bases as part of his self-declared campaign to oust militants. Special forces clashed with militia fighters in the city.

The Tripoli airport battle has prompted the United Nations to evacuate its staff from the country, where a new government is struggling to impose order over streets prowled by fighters who rose up against Gaddafi and never disarmed. The airport area is under the control of former fighters from the western town of Zintan who have held it since the fall of Tripoli in 2011. Rival Islamist-leaning militias fought with the Zintanis in recent days, but failed to dislodge them.

For the past three years, the new authorities have tried to rein in militia fighters by putting them on the government payroll. But months of protests at oil fields and ports caused government revenues to collapse last year, leaving the economy in tatters.

Famed activist, journalist detained by US Border Patrol

HOUSTON, 16 July — A prominent immigration activist and journalist, who made his name known by chronicling his life as an undocumented immigrant living illegally in the United States for years, was detained at a Texas airport by US Border Patrol on Tuesday, authorities said.

Jose Antonio Vargas, a Pulitzer prize-winning journalist and advocate for immigrants’ rights, was arrested on Tuesday after attempting to board a plane out of McAllen in south Texas, the Border Patrol said in a statement. The Border Patrol said Vargas was arrested after telling an agent he was in the country illegally. Vargas was held in custody for most of the day and later was released on his own recognizance with a notice to appear before an immigration judge.

Vargas, born in the Philippines, has been living without papers in the country since 1993. He became well-known for narrating his own life story as an illegal immigrant in American mainstream media and in a film.

He lost no opportunity on Tuesday to publicize his campaign. His team used social media and text messages summoning people to call the Border Patrol station to demand his release.

Vargas’ arrest came at a politically sensitive time when tens of thousands of unaccompanied minors from Central America illegally crossed the border into the United States. The influx of child immigrants has overwhelmed US detention facilities and sparked outrages from the public and in Washington. The White House has requested 3.7 billion dollars in emergency funding from Congress to address the problem. But it was quickly met with pushback from Republicans who blamed US President Barack Obama for what they describe as lenient and confusing immigration policies.

Statistics showed that since October last year, more than 57,000 unaccompanied minors have been apprehended crossing illegally into the United States through the southwest border. Most of them are staying at detention centres and processing facilities in Texas, New Mexico and California.
IBM to offer iPads and iPhones for business users

WASHINGTON, 16 July — International Business Machines Corp will partner exclusively with Apple Inc to sell iPhones and iPads loaded with applications geared at enterprise clients this fall, the company announced on Tuesday.

The announcement comes just two days before IBM releases its second quarter earnings, comes as the company attempts to shift its focus to software and services as its hardware unit continues to slump, and follows a string of mobile software acquisitions. Yahoo's hopes for software sales will contribute half of its total profit by 2015.

The company will release more than 100 apps targeting industry specific issues in retail, healthcare, banking, travel, transportation and telecommunication IBM said on Tuesday.

“We wanted to focus on creating an absolutely irresistible workflow and processes and a design of apps that can be used by every user in the organization,” Bridget van Kralingen, IBM's senior vice president of global business services told Reuters. The company will retrieve apps from Apple headquarters in Cupertino, California.

“With our new solution to solve some of the existing barriers of mobile in enterprise,” she said adding that chief information officers worry about security, utilizing cloud and installing apps in mobile devices.

The partnership, which was six months in the making, will offer services geared at security, mobile device management and big data and analytics. The company also plans to develop cloud services optimized for Apple’s mobile operating system, iOS. The devices will operate through wireless carriers chosen by the client, she said.

BlackBerry Ltd shares were down 3 percent following the announcement. The Canadian smartphone maker has increasingly targeted its secure software at businesses as part of an effort to turn the company around after losing ground to Apple’s iPhone and Samsung Electronics Co.

Apple and Samsung have steadily expanded their share of the mobile enterprise market in recent years, mostly at BlackBerry’s expense, while Microsoft Windows phones have made little headway.

Increasingly, Apple’s expansion has been driven by employees bringing in their own devices and requesting corporate support, the so-called bring-your-own-IT trend.

Looking up with IBM may help address lingering concerns about smartphone software security and data privacy, in the form of a veteran partner that’s led in enterprise IT for decades.

“This deal is a very targeted attempt by Apple with the help from IBM to focus on the enterprise, corporate market which has really been the main business of BlackBerry,” said Tim Ghriskey, chief investment officer at Solaris Group in Bedford Hills, New York.

San Francisco, 16 July — Intel Corp (INTC.O) believes the worst is over for a personal computer industry hammered by the mobile revolution. The Santa Clara, California chipmaker forecast third-quarter revenue above Wall Street’s expectations on Tuesday, sending its stock 4 percent higher in extended trade.

Investors have pushed shares of PC mainstays Microsoft Corp (MSFT.O) and Intel to decade-highs, partly on bets that the global slump in PC demand that began with Apple Inc’s (AAPL.O) launch of the iPad four years ago is hitting bottom.

“PCs have stabilized,” Chief Financial Officer Stacy Smith told Reuters after Intel’s report. He said he expects shrinking demand from consumers in China and other developing countries to rebound, just as it recently has in the United States. From the end of 2010, the year the iPad was launched, to the end of 2013, annual global PC shipments shrank a total 12 percent, according to IDC. Intel now expects the market’s recovery to help it grow its full-year revenue about 5 percent, slightly higher than prior expectations. Chief Executive Officer Brian Krzanich told analysts on a conference call that improved demand from companies replacing old PCs would last at least through the end of 2014.

Also on Tuesday, Intel increased its share buyback to $10 billion. It plans to repurchase about $4 billion of stock in the current quarter, underscoring its confidence in a turn-around and a growing crop of “two in one” devices with detachable keyboards and screens.

My presumption would be that if they’re confident enough to boost it so they see this (PC market) up side maintaining,” Bernstein analyst Stacy Rasgon said. “God help them if they’re wrong.” Intel said in a statement it expects third-quarter revenue of $14.4 billion, plus or minus $500 million. Analysts had expected $14 billion on average, according to Thomson Reuters I/B/E/S.—Reuters

Plumage aplenty: fossil found of ‘four-winged’ feathered dinosaur

WASHINGTON, 16 July — It was built sort of like a biplane but probably did not fly as well, if at all. Scientists on Tuesday described a fossil of a strange dinosaur that lived in China 125 million years ago which was covered in feathers, looked like it had two sets of wings and may have been able to glide.

The meat-eating creature, called Changyuraptor yangi, had exceptionally long tail feathers, the longest feathers of any dinosaur, at one foot in length (30 cm). It had feather-covered forelimbs akin to wings as well as legs covered in feathers in a way that gave the appearance of a second set of wings. Changyuraptor is not considered a bird but rather a very bird-like dinosaur. It illustrates that it is not always easy to tell what is and is not a bird. It measured a bit more than 4 feet long (1.3 meters) and weighed roughly 9 pounds (4 kg).

If a person saw Changyuraptor, the reaction likely would be: “Hey! That is a weird-looking bird.”

According to paleontologist Alan Turner of Stony Brook University in New York, one of the researchers.

“So, think of a mid-sized turkey with a very long tail,” Turner added.

Scientists have identified a handful of these “four-winged” dinosaurs, known as microraptorines. Changyuraptor is the largest.

Birds arose from small, feathered dinosaurs. Crow-sized Archaeopteryx, which lived about 150 million years ago, is considered the earliest known bird. But many dinosaurs before and after that had feathers and other bird-like characteristics.

“Changyuraptor is very, very similar to Archaeopteryx and other primitive birds. So are many other dinosaurs like Anchisaurus and Pedopenna. But they have some traits that birds lack, and lack some traits that birds have,” Turner added.

Natural History Museum of Los Angeles County paleontologist Luis Chiappe, who led the study, said Changyuraptor lived in a forested environment in a temperate climate, hunting birds, mammals, small reptiles and fish. “Animals like Changyuraptor were probably not engaged in powered flight like modern birds. However, Changyuraptor and dinosaurs like it could flap their wings and certainly had large feathered surfaces on both their forelimbs and hind limbs,” Turner said.

“So this does raise the possibility they could glide or ‘fly’ in a primitive sort of way. The way I like to think of it is: if you pushed them out of a tree, they’d fall pretty slowly,” Turner added.

If Changyuraptor were able to become airborne, its long tail feathers may have helped reduce descent speed and enabled safe landings. “This helps explain how animals like Changyuraptor could achieve some form of aerial locomotion — flight, gliding, and/or controlled descents — despite their size,” Turner added.

In birds today, feathers can serve multiple functions beyond flight, including display, species recognition and mating rituals. Turner said his colleagues' and feathers also may have served multiple purposes.

China has become a treasure trove for feathered dinosaur fossils. Changyuraptor was unearthed in Liaoning Province in northeastern China.

The study was published in the journal Nature Communications.
Kerry confers premature knighthood on departing friend Hague

WASHINGTON, 16 July — US Secretary of State John Kerry on Tuesday heaped praise on William Hague after his resignation as British foreign secretary, and even went as far as conferring on him a premature knighthood via Twitter.

“Will miss working so closely with my friend Sir William — when @WilliamHague spoke, we all listened,” Kerry said in a tweet on his page on the social media site, to which a photograph of the two men was attached.

Hague has not been knighted — an honour normally bestowed by the British monarch, Queen Elizabeth, and which carries with it the title “Sir.” It is an honor often given to statesmen, as well as other distinguished citizens from business leaders to entertainers.

Hague said on Monday he was stepping down from his post as Britain’s top diplomat after four years in the job, an unexpected move prompted by a government reshuffle led by Prime Minister David Cameron. He will become leader of the House of Commons, coordinating the government’s business in the lower house of Britain’s parliament.

One killed, one injured in Arkansas shooting

HOUSTON, 16 July — One person was killed and another injured in a late-night shooting in the US state of Arkansas on Tuesday, local media reported.

The shooting occurred late Tuesday night at a residential address in North Little Rock in central Arkansas, the Arkansas Democrat-Gazette reported.

Police found two men had been shot at the scene. Both were sent to an area hospital where one of them was pronounced dead. The other’s condition is not immediately known.

Scant information has been released by authorities. It’s not clear if any arrest was made in regard to the shooting.

A day earlier, another late-night shooting in Pine Bluff, a city 70 km southeast of Little Rock, the state capital city, claimed a life and injured another. A gunman opened fire when robbing the victims. The suspect was later caught and arrested.

Russia detains two over fatal Moscow metro accident

MOSCOW, 16 July — Russian state investigators said on Wednesday they had detained two Moscow metro workers suspected of safety breaches that may have caused an accident that killed at least 21 people.

More than 150 were also injured in Tuesday’s accident in which three carriages derailed on a train during the morning rush hour. Some media reports put the death toll at 22.

Russia’s federal Investigative Committee said it had detained a track supervisor and an assistant track supervisor suspected of failing to properly monitor work carried out on a track switch mechanism in an underground tunnel.

“The work was carried out improperly,” the committee said in a statement. “This resulted in the train coming off the rails, the deaths of 21 people and various injuries to more than 150 passengers.”

The accident is the worst in years on Moscow’s overcrowded metro and highlights concerns about Russia’s patchy transport safety record. There was no sign that the incident was a militant attack.

Mexico rescues 458 children from squalid refugee amid abuse fears

MEXICO CITY, 16 July — Mexico said on Tuesday it had rescued 458 children from a vermin-infested refuge for abandoned boys and girls, some of whom it believes were sexually abused.

The attorney general’s office said police and army troops raided a home known as “La Gran Familia” (The Big Family) in the western city of Zamora on Tuesday, following at least 50 complaints about its operators.

Infested by rats, bedbugs and cockroaches, the refuge was run by Rosa Verdugo, who is now being questioned by authorities, the government said.

The refuge was home to 278 boys, 174 girls and six infants as well as 138 adults aged up to 40, the government said.

“We found that there were around 500 children in truly terrible conditions,” Attorney General Jesus Murillo said.

Five complaints by parents that the home would not return their children to them prompted authorities to act, he added.

The children in the refuge had to beg for money on the streets, eat unhygienic food and sleep on the floor amid vermin, officials said. Some suffered sexual abuse, they added.

14 alive, one out of contact following tunnel collapse

KUNMING, 16 July — Fourteen workers are confirmed to be alive but another one remains out of contact in southwest China’s Yunnan Province after part of a railway tunnel collapsed on Monday afternoon, local authorities said on Wednesday.

As of 7:20 pm on Tuesday, rescuers had drilled a hole in the collapsed tunnel after more than 27 hours of rescue work, and managed to send food, water and flashlights to the workers, according to the local government.

Li Jiheng, governor of Yunnan Province, talks with trapped workers with telephone at the site of railway tunnel collapse in Funing County of Zhaung and Miao Autonomous Prefecture of Wenshan, trapping 15 workers, the local government said.

The tunnel, known as Funing No 1 tunnel, was on a pivotal railway linking Yunnan with southwest China’s Guangxi Zhuang Autonomous Region.

“Fourteen workers are alive and safe, while the situation of another one remains unclear,” the government said in a statement.

The tunnel collapsed at around 6 pm on Monday in Funing County of Zhaung and Miao Autonomous Prefecture of Wenshan, trapping 15 workers, the local government said.

The tunnel, known as Funing No 1 tunnel, was on a pivotal railway linking Yunnan with southwest China’s Guangxi Zhuang Autonomous Region.

Cheryl Cole’s family found out about wedding on Facebook

LONDON, 16 July — Cheryl Cole’s stepfather Anthony Leighton has revealed that only a small group of people were aware of her wedding plans.

The 31-year-old singer surprised fans by announcing that she had got married last week to boyfriend Jean-Bernard Fernandez-Versini after just three months of dating, reported Daily Mirror.

“I am over the moon for her. If she’s happy then I’m happy. It is a right surprise. She’s lovely and I am really happy for her. I found out through Facebook she doesn’t bother with us much. Back surgery has given returning Woods a fresh perspective

HOYLAKE, (England), 16 July — Tiger Woods’s back operation in March robbed the former world number one of a quarter of the golf season but at least it has given him a fresh outlook on his career.

The 14-times major champion will be making his second competitive appearance in four months at this week’s British Open and Woods is just happy to be back at the venue of his memorable 2006 victory at Royal Liverpool. “With this particular injury with my back I didn’t want to do anything,” Woods told reporters on Tuesday. “I couldn’t get out of bed and I couldn’t move around the house. “That made me appreciate just how fortunate I was to be able to play at that high level for the better part of 17 years. It made me appreciate that a lot more.”

Woods famously won the 2008 US Open, the most recent of his major triumphs, virtually on one leg due to anterior cruciate ligament (ACL) problems that eventually led to surgery. “When I had no ACL and my leg was pretty much shredded I could actually still go out there and play,” explained the 38-year-old American. “I couldn’t do that with this back injury. “I couldn’t actually enjoy my life...the daily things of just moving around it. It wasn’t a whole lot of fun.”

Woods missed the cut at his comeback at the Quicken Loans National event in Maryland last month but he is delighted just to be pain-free these days. “The people who have had my surgery, they’ve all said the same thing. It changes your whole life, it just takes away all the pain," said the world number seven. "Yeah, you’re sore from the incision but you don’t have that radiating pain that goes down the leg. Once that was removed, even though I was hurting from the surgery, I knew I could come back and play."

It was just a matter of time before I got out here and was able to play at elite level again. Once I went through the procedure and I was just sitting in the recovery room and I didn’t have that pain any more it was a lot of relief.” Former US Ryder Cup captain Curtis Strange told Reuters earlier this month that Woods had to limit his ambitions at Hoylake because of his limited playing time since surgery.

Pure gold statuette of Godzilla to be sold for 150 m yen

Tokyo, 16 July — The operator of a Tokyo-based jewelry store chain will begin taking orders on Sunday for a pure gold statuette of Godzilla priced at 150 million yen, commemorating the 60th anniversary of the original Japanese film’s release.

Tanaka Kikinzoku Jewelry KK will take orders for the statuette at its nine outlets with production expected to take about two months. Fifteen kilograms of pure gold will be used in each statuette. The statuette measures around 24 centimetres in height, 19 cm in width and 35 cm in length. The jewelry store will produce the golden statuette also to mark the screening of the Hollywood version of the Godzilla movie scheduled to start in Japan on 25 July. A statuette will be put on display at the Shibuya Hikarie shopping complex in Tokyo from 20 to 29 July. — Kyodo News

Flooding inundates historical town, stops trains

CHANGSHA, 16 July — Continuous rain in central China’s Hunan Province has flooded the historical town of Fenghuang and forced train operations to be suspended.

As of Wednesday morning, more than 1,200 rescuers were moving tourists and residents out of the ancient town, said a spokesperson with the Fenghuang County flood control and drought relief headquarters.

A match-making festival scheduled for July 20 has been canceled and organizers have joined flood control efforts, he said. As of Tuesday, more than 120,000 locals and tourists were evacuated, and more than 4,000 shops in the town were affected.

A shoe shop owner surnamed Kuang said the flooding was the worst the town had experienced. His shop was soaked. “The floods came so quickly that I didn’t have time to move the shoes,” he said, estimating his losses would exceed 100,000 yuan (16,110 US dollars).

In Fenghuang’s neighbouring Mayang County, a power substation was flooded. Most of the county’s electricity is generated from hydro power stations and there is no backup from the grid. So far, the county has lost over 10 million yuan in losses, according to county’s flood control authorities.

Affected by the rain, Hunan’s high-speed rail network was disrupted. As of Thursday, 44 trains scheduled from Wednesday to Friday have been canceled, Guangzhou Railway (Group) Corporation confirmed.

Ecstatic Berlin crowds welcome victorious German team home

BERLIN, 16 July — About a million jubilant Germans welcomed their triumphant national football team home to Berlin on Tuesday, many waving flags and banners saying “We are all World Champions!” as they basked in the nation’s fourth World Cup victory.

Hundreds of thousands of revellers packed Berlin’s “fan mile”, a 1.3 km stretch of road running from the west of the capital up to the Brandenburg Gate, for a huge party. Many more lined the streets in the city centre along the team’s route.

The players danced and sang their way onto a stage at the Gate, a potent symbol of the Cold War, dressed in black T-shirts with the number 1 emblazoned on them and threw footballs into the crowd.

“Without you we wouldn’t be here. We are all world champions,” low-key coach Joachim Loew, affectionately known as Jogi, told the fans, many of them holding red posters with the words “Thanks Boys”.

Young and old fans alike were decked out in Germany shirts, many with their faces painted black, red and gold and with wigs and bandanas in the national colours. Many had started drinking beer hours before the team’s arrival from Brazil.

“I am really excited to welcome the World Cup winners during my lifetime. I am from East Germany and this is important,” said Guenther Richter, 51, from East Berlin.

Sunday’s 1-0 victory over Argentina in Rio de Janeiro marked the first time a reunified Germany has been world champion, with West Germany having won the trophy in 1954, 1974 and 1990.

Conte stuns Juventus with shock resignation

LONDON, 16 July — Chelsea’s new striker Diego Costa, a 32 million pound signing from Atletico Madrid at the start of the month, has completed his transfer and signed a five-year deal, the Premier League club said on Tuesday.

“I am very happy to sign for Chelsea. Everybody knows it is a big club in a very competitive league, and I am very excited to get started in England with a fantastic coach and team mates,” Costa, 25, was quoted as saying on the club’s website.

“I know the high quality of the squad I am joining. “I would like to thank everybody at Atletico who made me into the player I am. It was an incredible time for me, but now I am starting a new adventure and I hope to win many trophies with Chelsea.”

Powerful and direct, the Brazilian-born striker built a strong reputation in Spain as a fine finisher, scoring 64 goals in 134 appearances for Atletico, and helping them to the Spanish title last season and the Champions League final.

ROME, 16 July — Antonio Conte, who coached Juventus to successive Italian league titles, has stunned Serie A by resigning after two months after signing a deal for this season.

“I need to announce the decision to mutually terminate my contract with Juventus, which tied us together for this season,” Conte told the Juventus TV Channel. “There was a journey towards this decision.”

Conte, a former Juventus player for 13 years who took charge at the Turin club in 2011, wanted investment in the team in order to mount a serious challenge in the Champions League.

His Serie A champions finished 17 points ahead of second-placed AS Roma as they became the first team to break the 100-points barrier.

The best Conte could muster in Europe, however, was an appearance in the quarter-finals of the Champions League in 2013, when Juventus were brushed aside 4-0 on aggregate by eventual winners Bayern Munich.

Last season they crashed out at the group stage before losing their Europa League semi-final to Benfica 2-1 on aggregate.

The former England international has joined Serie A side AS Roma on a two-year deal after eight trophy-laden years at Chelsea, having spent last season as second choice to Spanish Cesar Azpilicueta.

“English players are probably afraid to come abroad, they’re in a comfort zone in England,” the 33-year-old told reporters at his first news conference in Rome on Tuesday. “This is a chance for me to try a different language, culture and way of living.”

Cole, who retired from international duty after Roy Hodgson did not include him in England’s main 23-man World Cup squad, said he had a good relationship with Chelsea boss Jose Mourinho but it was clear the Portuguese did not see him as an integral part of the team anymore.

“As soon as I spoke to (Rudi) Garcia (Roma manager) and I saw how much they wanted me here at Roma I jumped at the chance,” Cole said.

“I’ve always had a good relationship with Jose Mourinho but I was no longer useful to his project at Chelsea.”

Australia’s former sprint record holder Sullivan retires

MELBOURNE, 16 July — Former 100 metres freestyle world record holder Eamon Sullivan has retired from the pool following medical advice not to swim on to the 2016 Rio Olympics, Swimming Australia said on Wednesday.

The 28-year-old, who also held the 50m freestyle world record, pulled out of the Commonwealth Games with a shoulder injury last month.

Although he won a relay world title in Melbourne in 2007 and another in Shanghai four years later, Sullivan has battled a succession of injuries in recent years and finishes his career without an individual title at any of the major international meets.

“Eamon made his debut onto the Australian swim team as an 18-year-old in Athens and then 10 years later was able to take out the men’s 50m freestyle at this year’s Australian championships which was a remarkable achievement,” Swimming Australia CEO Mark Anderson said in a statement. “As an athlete he’s been the world’s best, which is what we are all striving for as part of the goal to be the best in the world in and out of the pool by 2020.”—Reuters

Cole says English players afraid to leave home

ROME, 16 July — Former Arsenal and Chelsea defender Ashley Cole says English players are afraid of their comfortable zone and playing overseas.
