YANGON, 3 Oct—A direct container shipping service has begun between Myanmar and India on Friday, expecting to boost container business and to change the way of maritime trade which has been on the East Coast of India, according to the report of the Hindu Business Line. The Shipping Corporation of India (SCI), together with the Krishnapatnam Port Company Limited (KPCL), operates the fortnightly service to connect the Krishnapatnam Port in Nellore district of Andhra Pradesh with Yangon Port of Myanmar. The KPCL facilitates the fortnightly service of 1,100 nautical miles, with the new service of SCI and Pyidaungsu Hluttaw (KPCL) will be useful for the traders to export clinker, telecom equipment and cars, and to import pulses, timber and garments, the report said. At the launching ceremony of the service, C Sasidhar, managing director of KPCL, said: “The Shipping Corporation of India new service from our Port will definitely change the way sea trade has been so far on the East Coast, aiming to bring a paradigm shift in the Indian Shipping industry and look forward for more such initiatives in future.”

S Narula, director-Liner and Passenger Services of SCI said: “The Yangon service will boost bilateral trade between India and Myanmar by opening immense opportunities for exporters and importers in these countries. We are glad to associate with Krishnapatnam for the new service and thereby facilitate trade to reach out to the growing markets in Myanmar.”

The service is under the plan to develop bilateral trade between Myanmar and India after KPCL organized a trade meeting Yangon to showcase the business opportunities for mutual trade.—GNLM

Hkakaborazi weather still impedes search for missing climbers

YANGON, 4 Sept—An Italian rescue expert, Captain Piergiorgio Rasati on Saturday suggested the Htoo Foundation stop its search for the two missing Myanmar climbers as adverse weather still makes the search and rescue operations difficult, calling on the foundation to resume its search, weather permitting.

Despite the foundation’s announcement to stop its search for two missing mountaineers on Mount Hkakaborazi, search will go on by China’s Blue Sky Rescue Team, Japanese mountaineering team and residents in northern Kachin State, Phyo Ko Ko Thet, a spokesman of the foundation, told a press conference in Yangon. According to the Italian rescue team, the footprints of the climbers were detected during a one-week search, but no information is available about three missing people on Thai rescue helicopter.

Two mountaineers have gone missing on Mount Hkakaborazi in Myanmar’s Kachin state since 31 August. Aung Myint Myat and Wai Yan Min Thu lost contact with the rest of their team.

According to the CEO of Htoo Foundation, the chances are too slim for rescue teams to find the two unfortunate climbers.

Regarding another incident in which a Eurocopter EC-130-B4 went missing while helping with rescue efforts, a three-crew Thai helicopter, supporting the search and rescue operation of the two missing mountaineers, went missing on its way to the base camp on 27 September.

Htoo’s CEO expressed his belief that the people onboard the aircraft still stand a chance for survival, adding that a team of American rescue experts is reported to come to Myanmar this month to help with the search.

Mount Hkakaborazi, the highest in Southeast Asia and located where Myanmar connects both India and China, is about 5,900 meters high.

Stampede at Hindu festival kills 32 in eastern India

NEW DELHI, 4 Oct — At least 32 people were killed in a stampede during a Hindu festival in the eastern Indian state of Bihar on Friday, most of them women and a few children, the state police chief said.

A huge crowd had gathered at an outdoor venue in the state capital, Patna, for the burning of effigies at dusk, part of the Dusshera festival.

Officials said the stampede happened as people were leaving at the end of the event. Television channels quoted a witness as saying there were not enough lights when the ceremony ended.

At least 15 injured people were taken to hospital, the police chief, PK Thakur said. Police are examining closed circuit television to determine what had triggered the stampede.

"There was very little police presence and there were vendors who had put up their stalls at the exit gates, making it more difficult to leave," a witness told NDTV.

Patna police superintendent Prantosh Kumar Das said some people reported that had they heard a rumour that a live electric wire had fallen on the public ground and it quickly spread through the crowd, prompting a rush for the gates.

Television showed shoes, slippers and handbags strewn over the ground.

Dusshera is one of the biggest Hindu festivals celebrating the victory of good over evil from the epic Ramayana.

India’s Modi makes radio medium for change

NEW DELHI, 4 Oct — Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi delivered on Friday the first of many radio addresses he plans to make to mobilise support among ordinary people for his agenda of change.

Modi used his maiden address to urge hundreds of millions of countrymen, many of whom have no access to television, to do their part to help get India’s economy moving.

A day earlier, Modi launched a campaign to clean up India’s towns and villages that he has said was an embarrassment and an impediment to tourism.

“A lot of us think that it is the government’s responsibility to do everything...if we want to develop, then 1.2 billion will have to work towards it,” he said in the radio show titled “Mann ki Baat”, or “Talking from the Heart”.

Modi, who came to power in May, plans to make his radio speeches at least every month on Sunday mornings to get his message across to two thirds of India’s 1.2 billion people who listen regularly to the radio. His speeches will be translated in 24 local languages.

Blessed with charisma and able to speak in the language of the common man, Modi has adopted a more personalised style of leadership role to bring focus to uncomfortable issues that past governments have often avoided.

He has spoken about the lack of toilets in a country where half the population defecates in the open, putting people at risk of cholera, diarrhoea, dysentery, hepatitis A and typhoid.

During Friday’s 14-minute address, Modi narrated two short stories with the aim of encouraging people to keep the country clean, buy locally produced handspun khadi fabric popularised by independence leader Mahatma Gandhi, and help children with special needs.

“We have to recognize our internal strength. We all have to march ahead with self-confidence, create our own identity and attain success for oneself and the nation,” he said.

Modi has used Facebook and Twitter, where he has about 6.4 million followers, to bypass traditional news media and communicate his thoughts.—Reuters

A China-Germany cooperation guideline is expected to be endorsed by both sides during the visit, detailing on situations and prospects of their cooperation in all fields.

A series of inter-governmental agreements will also be inked during the visit.

Secret Service in disarray, fueling questions over Obama’s safety

WASHINGTON, 4 Oct — When Secret Service officer Timothy McCarthy took a bullet to protect Ronald Reagan in a 1981 assassination attempt and agent Jerry Parr shoved the president into a limousine, they were made “losers” of unification. Reagan away from the scene of the shooting after John Hinckley Jr opened fire outside a Washington hotel 33 years ago.

“What’s happening now is sad. I don’t know why the ball got dropped.”

The damage has been piling up, costing Secret Service director Julia Pierson her job on Wednesday. First came a 19 September incident in which an Iraq war veteran with a knife scaled the White House fence and got deep inside the executive mansion. That was followed by the disclosure that an armed private security contractor voted a criminal record rode on an elevator with Obama in Atlanta 16 September, along with new details of a 2011 incident in which shots were fired at the White House.

There is also growing pressure to consider whether the Secret Service’s divided mission, which includes investigating financial fraud and cybercrime, is diverting resources and attention from providing security for the president, his family and other high-level officials.

And raised questions about its ability to fulfill its most critical duty: protecting President Barack Obama and his family.

Sources inside and outside the administration say many problems such as low morale, a leadership crisis and a culture of covering up mistakes can be traced back 11 years to when the Secret Service was pulled out of the Treasury Department and absorbed into the sprawling new Department of Homeland Security, where it had to compete for turf and money.

Even as the agency’s workload has mushroomed, its manpower levels stagnated and its funding increases have failed to keep pace with growth in overall federal spending in the past decade, a Reuters examination of Secret Service budget data shows.

UN nuclear watchdog seeks to advance Iran investigation

VIENNA, 4 Oct — A high-level UN nuclear watchdog team will visit Teheran for talks in coming days, Iran said on Friday, more than a month after it missed a deadline for answering questions by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) on its suspected atomic bomb research.

Diplomats told Reuters on Thursday that the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) was expected to make a new attempt soon to advance its long-running investigation into Iran’s nuclear program and that a meeting might be held in the Iranian capital early next week.

Reza Najafi, Iran’s ambassador to the Vienna-based UN agency, said the IAEA delegation would be led by the head of its division dealing with nuclear safeguards issues, Deputy Director General Tero Varjoranta.

In an apparent reference to Thursday’s Reuters article, Najafi was quoted as saying on the web site of Iran’s Press TV television: “It is regrettable that classified information in the agency has not been protected again.”

He added: “While Iran and the agency were busy planning (the meeting), the news was published by a Western media outlet... This issue once again confirms Iran’s misgivings that spying exists in the agency.”

There was no immediate comment from the IAEA, which for years has been trying to investigate Western allegations that Iran has worked on designing a nuclear warhead. Iran says its nuclear program is peaceful and that it is working with the IAEA to clear up any suspicions about it.

Western officials say Iran must step up cooperation with the IAEA if it wants to reach a broader diplomatic deal with world powers that would end a decade-old nuclear dispute and gradually end crippling financial and other sanctions on the oil producer.

Last early month, the IAEA said Iran had failed to answer questions by an agreed 25 August deadline about two areas of the investigation into alleged research activities that could be applicable to any attempt to make nuclear bombs — explosives testing and neutron calculations.

“Everything is possible. That’s what I and millions of other East Germans experienced first hand,” she said. “So we shouldn’t be discouraged by everything happening in 2014. On the contrary, unification day shows us what’s possible.”

Merkel, who has been chancellor since 2005, warned Russia against robbing its neighbours of their independence even though at another point she praised Moscow for the constructive role it played in supporting Germany’s path to reunification.

“We in Germany cannot deny others what we received with our reunification, the freedom to decide our future on our own,” she said, adding Germany would work to ensure that Ukraine, Moldova and Georgia had the same rights to self-determination.

Merkel said German unification has been a great success story even though there were still some considerable gaps economically and socially between east and west Germany. “We’ve obviously still got a lot of work to do,” she said.

An opinion poll released by the Emnid institute on Thursday said 23 percent of easterners felt they were the “losers” of unification.

In rare alliance, Shi’ites join Sunnis to defend Iraqi towns

BAGHDAD, 4 Oct — When Islamic State fighters tried to storm the Tigris Rivern town of Dhuluiya north of Baghd ad this week, they were repelled by a rare coalition of Sunni tribal fighters inside the town and Shi’ites in its sister city Balad on the opposite bank.

The assault, which began late on Tuesday and ran into Thursday, was one of several major battles in recent days in which Sunn i tribes joined pro-government forces against the militants, in what Baghdad and Washington hope is a sign of increasing cooperation across sectarian lines to save the country.

Further north, another powerful Sunni tribe fought alongside Kurdish forces to drive Islamic State fighters from Raba, a town controlling one of the main border checkpoints used by fighters pouring in from Syria.

In western Iraq, Sunni tribes have fought alongside government troops in Hit, which was captured by Islamic State fighters on Thursday, and in Haditha, site of a strategic dam on the Euphrates.

Such local alliances are still rare: in most Sunni areas of Iraq, tribes have shown little sign of turning against militants as they did when they were recruited by US troops in 2006-07. Many of the leaders of that Sunni “Awakening” movement were later arrested by Baghddad, in what Sunnis see as a betrayal.

Sectarian and ethnic animosity runs deep after a decade of civil war that has touched nearly every family, making it difficult for Sunnis, Shi’ites and Kurds to trust each other.

But nearly two months into a US-led bombing campaign, this week’s battles have provided the strongest early signs yet of what Washington and Baghdad hope could be a revival of the alliance with tribes to counter Islamic State.

Obama “strongly condemns” murder of British hostage

WASHINGTON, 4 Oct — US President Barack Obama strongly condemned the “brutal” murder of British hostage Alan Henning by the terrorist group Islamic State (IS), the White House said on Friday.

“Mr Henning worked to help improve the lives of the Syrian people and his death is a great loss for them, for his family and the people of the United Kingdom,” Obama said in a statement, adding that the United States would work to “bring the perpetrators of Alan’s murder to jus-

“Standing together with a broad coalition of allies and partners, we will

ately destroy ISIL,” said the president, referring to the group.

Islamic State video shows second British hostage beheaded

WASHINGTON, 4 Oct — Islamic State militants beheaded British aid work-posted on Friday, triggering swift condemnation by the British and US governments.

The footage on You-

a middle-aged man in an orange jumpsuit kneeling next to a black-clad militant in irid scrumblad, similar to past Islamic State beheading videos of two American journalists and a British aid worker.

As in previous videos, Henning appears to read from a script before he is killed. “Because of our par-lament’s decision to attack the Islamic State, I, as a member of the British public, will now pay the price in references to the slain

Henning, a 47-year-old taxi driver from Salford in northern England, was part of an aid convoy taking medical supplies to a hospital in northwest Syria in December last year when it was stopped by gunmen and he was abducted.

In response to the video, Cameron said: “The brutal murder of Alan Henning by ISIL shows just how barbaric and repulsive these terrorists are. My thoughts and prayers tonight are with Alan’s wife Barbara, their children and all those who loved him.”

“Alan had gone to Syria to help get aid to people of all faiths in their hour of need. We will do all we can to hunt down these murderers and bring them to justice.” US officials said they had no reason to doubt the authenticity of the video, titled “Another Message to America and its Allies.”

“The United States

tal murder of United Kingdom citizen Alan Henning,” President Barack Obama said in a statement.

“Standing together with trators of Alan’s murder — said, referring to other captives killed by Islamic State militants.

BAMAKO/DAKAR, 4 Oct — Nine United Nations peacekeepers in Mali were killed when heavily armed gunmen on motorbikes ambushed their convoy on Friday, the deadliest attack yet on UN troops in the west African nation, the mission said.

The attack on the peacekeepers from Niger took place in the region of Gao and highlighted a sharp increase in strikes on foreign troops based in Mali to prevent the return of al-Qaeda-linked Islamists who seized its northern desert region in 2012.

UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon was “shocked and outraged” by the attack and called for the perpetrators to be brought to justice, UN spokesman Stephane Dujarric said.

“They were targeting a convoy that included a fuel truck, knowing full well that an attack on a fuel truck would cause an even greater number of casualties, which adds to the horrendous nature of the crime,” Dujarric said.

Dujarric said that 30 peacekeepers had been killed in Mali since the UN mission began in July last year, while another 90 had been wounded. He said Friday’s attack took place between the northeastern towns of Menaka and Ansongo. The UN mission said aircraft had been dispatched to secure the zone, which is near Mali’s border with Niger. The attack was condemned by the French and the Niger governments.

Both reiterated their commitment to continue the fight against Islamist militants in northern Mali and the wider region.

“In any event, Niger had more than ever determined to fight tirelessly alongside other international forces against all forms of terrorism in the Sahelo-Sahara region,” N’ger’s defence minister Karidjo Mahamadou said in a statement. A security source said the peacekeepers were attacked in a dip in the road as it crossed a dry river bed.

UN peacekeepers have deployed across Mali’s north in an effort to secure the country after the separatists and Islamists took advantage of the power vacuum created by a coup in the capital in 2012 to seize the northern regions.

The Islamists were scattered by French forces early last year, elections have been held and rebels who distanced themselves from extremist groups have begun talks with the Bamako government.

But the peace process is moving slowly and Malian government troops abandoned most positions in the north earlier this year after clashes with the rebels.

Since then, Mali has called on the UN mission to deploy more of its mandated force of 12,000 men in the north, a zone that is awash with smugglers as well as various rebels.

However, diplomats say there is increasing concern that UN peacekeepers who are not trained or equipped for counter-insurgency warfare are over-exposed.

Ten Chadian peacekeepers were killed in Mali last month, prompting accusations from Chad that its troops were being neglected by the UN mission.

The spike in attacks on troops comes as France has redeployed some of its forces away from Mali as part of a plan to have 3,000 soldiers fighting extremists across the Sahara-Sahel band. “There is a lot of concern at the moment,” said one Bamako-based diplomat. “There have been concerns since the early French drawdowns. But the bad guys seem to have access to much more expertise and kit now too.” Reuters

Brazil to hold general elections on Sunday

RIO DE JANEIRO, 4 Oct — Brazil will hold general elections on Sunday to choose a new president, state governor, federal and state representatives, and the senators.

As none of the three front-runner candidates is likely to garner more than 50 percent of the votes, a run-off is expected to be held on 26 October. Silva, presidential candidate of the Brazilian Socialist Party, joined the race in the middle of August. As Brazil has electronic ballots all over the country, the results of the first round of elections are expected to be known on Sunday evening. — Xinhua

British PM meets Afghan unity govt, praises troops

KABUL, 4 Oct — British Prime Minister David Cameron made an unannounced visit to Afghanistan on Friday to meet the new unity government, the first major Western leader to visit since an election stalemate was resolved, easing threats of armed conflict. Cameron met both new President Ashraf Ghani and chief executive Abdullah Abdullah and praised both British troops’ accomplishments in the long war against the Islamist Taleban and also the newly trained Afghan security forces, who number around 350,000.

“It is striking how far they have come,” he said in Kabul of Afghanistan’s army and police forces.

“If the Taleban want to secure a role in the future of Afghanistan, then they must accept they have to give up violence and engage in the political process. That is the way to have a voice in this democratic country.”

Cameron confirmed that all British combat troops would leave Afghanistan at the end of the year but said London would continue to provide 178 million pounds ($268.1 million) per year to support Afghanistan’s government until at least 2017.

Britain has fewer than 5,000 of the about 50,000 service members in the US-led military coalition in Afghanistan.

Cameron’s visit comes four days after new Ghana president was sworn into office after months of political turmoil following disputed elections. The prolonged standoff over the June run-off left Afghanistan and rival Abdullah ended with a political deal that made Ghana president and saw Abdullah appointed to a chief executive’s position with broad powers.

Behind the United States, Britain has been the second-largest contributor to the international military coalition that has been in Afghanistan since the 2001 US-led intervention to topple the Taleban’s radical Islamist regime in the wake of the 11 September terrorist attacks on the United States.

More than 450 British troops have been killed in Afghanistan during the subsequent war.

Hoping to stay out of debt

By Aung Khin

revoces mismanagement in Myanmar has resulted in the country’s foreign debt burden. After new government has made reform processes in political and economic sectors, some of the debtor countries reduced or wrote off certain amounts bad debts.

Fortune has smiled on Myanmar again. Foreign countries and financial institutions have give out southeast Asia country grants and loans as a gesture of good will supporting the democratic reform plans, believing Myanmar might not turn to backsliding. President U Thein Sein on October 2 urged all union ministries and state/region governments to spend and allocate budgets more effectively. The fiscal year of 2014-2015 has nearly reached its midterm at the end of August, remaining seven months before the end of March 2015.

In many circumstances, loans and grants from foreign countries flow into budget allocation for government ministries and the development programmes. Therefore, all the development works of ministries should have fruitful results for the country and people. Infrastructural development plays a crucial role to increase state revenue which will have to be used to return the loans. The President pointed out the importance of earning more revenues and generating more income of state-owned businesses after using the budgets more effectively without letting it go to waste. Debt will have to be paid off at a fixed term.

The respective government ministries are responsible for implementing sustainable development programme by using budgets fulfilling the hope of people to stay out of foreign debt burdens on the country. We have learned to give and take when we owed a debt of someone.

Revolutionary Ideas

Kyi Mun

* Revolution means a great change in conditions, ways of working, beliefs, etc. that affects large number of people: e.g. a cultural, social, scientific, etc. revolution. -Oxford Dictionary

Revolutionary ideas are breakthrough ideas that can transform a man, an organization, a culture or a country. Not all revolutionary ideas are destructive, disruptive or violent, although the word revolution implies violence, forceful attack or overwhelming destruction. Although life is always changing, a revolutionary transformation implies human contrivance and striving.

* Revolutionary means involving a great or complete change. e.g. revolutionary ideas; a time of rapid and revolutionary change.

Revolution means : To completely change the way that something is done -Oxford Dictionary

- R = Reform
  - E = Effectiveness-cum-Efficiency
  - V = Vision and Values
  - O = Opportunities for a Better Future
  - L = Learning
  - U = Unique departure from Mediocrity
  - T = Transformation
  - I = Innovation
  - O = Open-minded transparency
  - N = Networking
  - A = Audacity
  - R = Resources
  - Y = Yin & Yang

IDEA = Thought, plan, aim or purpose

* REFORM

Reform means : (1) To improve a system, an organization, a law, etc. by making changes to it. eg. proposals to reform social security system; The law needs to be reformed.

(2) To improve your behavior; to make somebody do this: He has promised to reform; she thought she could reform him; a reformed character.

* EFFECTIVENESS-CUM-EFFICIENCY

Effectiveness means : Goal Attainment – High Attainment / Low Attainment (Doing the Right things)

Efficiency means : Resource usage – High Waste / Low Waste (Doing the things Right.)

(Management strives for: Low resource wastage – high efficiency; and High goal attainment–high effectiveness.)

Breakthrough : (noun) an important development that may lead to an agreement or achievement: To make / achieve a breakthrough: or a significant break-through in negotiation: or a major breakthrough in cancer research. (Adj) in which a performer or type of product is successful for the first time, when it is likely to be even more successful in the future: It was a break-through album for the band: Breakthrough technology/products.

* VISION & VALUES

Vision means your coveted future life that you want with all your heart and that you see very vividly with your mind’s eyes. Vision is the picture, in your mind, of your ideal future life.

Values are the ideal beliefs and cultural norms that you hold very dear in your mind and that you cherish very loyfily in your heart. Values are usually enshrined in your vision.

* OPPORTUNITIES FOR A BETTER FUTURE

Revolutionary ideas do not crop up automatically. You have to find them in the areas where there is a need for improvement or change. Find out the hole and then fill it. Find out the need and find the ways of satisfying it. Expose yourself to the front lines. Go where action is. Involve yourself in the thick of a fight or a struggle. Go through thick and thin in search of opportunities. And remember what Napoleon Bonaparte had said; “I don’t seek opportunities; I create them.”

* LEARNING

The important thing is to want to learn, to love learning. Learn in your stride, learn by doing and learn from other people. Learn to serve and serve to learn. Learning has the beginning but no end; whereas ignorance has no beginning but has an end.

* UNIQUE DEPARTURE FROM MEDIOCRITY

Mediocrity means the quality of being average or not very good. So, you have to depart from being a mediocrity to begin to become a celebrity, so to speak. You have to make a long march from Mediocrity to Becoming Good to Becoming Great. In spite of everything, make a unique journey from Good to Great.

The Bible says: “Be ye transformed by the renewal of your mind”. Be transformed from good to great. Gold is transformed into pure gold from being mixed other base metal or metals. Gold is not afraid of fire. We human beings can also be transformed into the purest form of value by being purged or got rid of bad thoughts and evil feelings. * INNOVATION

Innovation is the act of transforming the creative new thoughts and ideas into new and better processes, products and services. Innovation is a competitive tool. If you are not constantly being innovative, you won’t have the cutting edge in competition. It is said: “Innovate or die!”

* OPEN-MINDED TRANSPARENCY

To get revolutionary ideas, our minds must be open like the open sky. Ideas can flow into our minds from all directions. To get transformational ideas, we should also have a big-sky mind. If we are narrow-minded, breakthrough ideas will have difficulty to find room for taking root.

* NETWORKING

Networking is somewhat like throwing a net. If you throw a big net, you will get more fish. In the same way, the wider the networking is, the bigger will be your sources of information and network of connections. People matter; people count. People are like the waters of the sea; the seas are indispensable for trade and commerce and culture and ideas.

* AUDACITY

In the Bible it is said: “Be bold and mighty forces will come to your aid.” It also is said: “Be strong and of good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed.” You definitely need courage to be a source of revolutionary ideas. You should have the audacity to:

* Let a hundred flowers blossom, and let a hundred schools of thought contend.”

* RESOURCES

For conceiving revolutionary ideas, you need, on the personal level, the resources of Physical Health & Fitness, Mental Vision & Strategy, Emotional Passion & Values, Spiritual Selflessness & Selflessness, and Life-Achievement Character & Competence. On the organizational level, you will need: Human, Financial, Technological and Organizational Resources.

* YIN & YANG

All human activities are the manifestations of the unity and struggle of opposites male & female, good & bad, high & low, soft & hard, have & haves-not, gain & loss, fame & blame, popularity & isolation, pleasure & pain, bold & timid, advanced & backward, revolutionary & reactionary and the like.

* CONCLUSION

In this age of Corporate Culture, Customer Sophistication, Relentless Competition, Constant Change, you have got to nurture, cultivate and practice revolutionary ideas to survive and prosper.
Light one candle, and you light many!

by Myo Myint

Once they have been ignited and by taking action, the number of such type of teachers should be reduced, as a small number of rotten fish can spoil the reputation of the whole boatload.

Nobody will deny that in this age, with new challenges and opportunities such as technology, they can provide cutting-edge knowledge and skills but they certainly do not become wealthier.

In Myanmar, teachers are often compared to a grinding stone used to sharpen knives. While their students mature and advance, teachers sacrifice and become aged. Teachers become richer in experience, knowledge and skills but they certainly do not become wealthier.

There is a Myanmar saying that teachers are never giv en recognition and a few steps have been taken, such as a small increase in salary for senior primary school teachers and heads. However, more needs to be done, if we are to fully express society’s appreciation to teachers in commensurate with the hard work, self-sacrifice and dedication that they have to put in. These include the better working and living conditions, more opportunities for professional development and career progression, and more recognition for their skill and dedicated service, both from the employers and community as well as from current and former students.

As a person who has had the privilege of having studied under excellent teachers, I believe strongly in the concept of “Light one candle, and you light many.” T

THE NOBLE TEACHER

Ever caring and ever sharing,
Never refusing and never neglecting,
Sometimes scolding and sometimes defending,
Is the loving teacher.

Ever careful and ever cheerful,
Never hateful and never resentful,
Sometimes forgetful and sometimes hopeful,
Is the helpful teacher.

Ever near and ever dear,
Never far and never disappear,
Sometimes feared and sometimes revered,
Is the devoted teacher.

Ever active and ever instructive,
Never passive and never destructive,
Sometimes constructive and sometimes innovative,
Is the creative teacher.

All these attributes and many more put together,
Is the able, humble and noble teacher.

The National Building Code from Industrial Perspective

By Dr Myint-Sein

HE Proposal on Myanmar National Building Code was discussed on the thirteenth day of the eleventh regular session of the Amyotha Hluttaw (Upper House), primarily aiming at safe residential buildings for the public, it was learnt.

In the industrial sector, particularly the pharmaceutical – biopharmaceutical and food manufacturing and R&D plants are among those requiring highly specified structural designs and construction technologies based on GMP, GEP, GLP, environmental, OHSAS, HACCP, ISO, ISPE, WHO and other relevant regulatory guidelines in order to ensure QBD (quality by design), to maximize product safety and/or to maintain zero risk factor, if possible, to the end user/public as well as the operator and other staff in the production environment.

On the other end, a faulty or ill-designed, constructed and poorly managed building for food, drug, cosmetics, blood, plasma, sera, vaccines and other high potency products, would be potentially a primary source of impact to product quality and/or to the environment, e.g. contamination of soil, water and air by the leakage of toxic and exotic chemical substances and the spread of infectious diseases.

In this case, the numerous including cy-tototics, antibiotics or antimicrobials, hormones and polio, SARS, MERS and Ebola viruses are among the examples of the top and contemporary public health as well as environmental concerns, clearly pointing out efficient deactivation and BioSafety criteria as basis of conceptual design. Therefore, it would be suggestive of the draft Code to be inclusive of a chapter on appropriate design criteria and the role of BioSafety professional(s) for pharmacy & biopharmaceutical facilities in our country.
US job market improves remarkably as economy expands

WASHINGTON, 4 Oct — The economy continued to add a considerable number of new jobs in September, and the jobless rate fell to the lowest level since July 2008, the Labour Department said on Friday, another evidence that the world’s top economy is well on track to a booming recovery.

Except August, the job gains have been above 200,000 for seven months. After revision, employment gains were 69,000 more than previously reported in July and August. With the report, American businesses extended the longest streak of private-sector job gains on record.

So far this year, pri-ivate employment has risen by nearly 2 million, on track for the strongest year of private-sector job growth since 1998, said Jason Furman, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, in a statement.

The US economy grew 4.6 percent in the second quarter, boosted by solid growth of personal consumption and private investment. Economists generally forecasted the econ-yomy to increase by more than 3 percent in the second half of the year, as they see a strong recovery is in place.

In spite of the remarkable improvement, the Federal Reserve remained cautious in lifting the inter-terate as it sees considerable slack in the job market.

The labour force participation rate, the share of the working—age population employed or looking for a job, was essentially unchanged at 62.7 percent. The number of long-term unemployed, or those who stay jobless for 27 weeks or more, was little changed at 3 million, accounting for 31.9 percent of the unemployed. Average hourly earnings was barely changed at 24.53 US dollars.

The Centre for American Progress, a Washington-based think tank, said, in a report that the labour force participation rate has been declining since the end of the recession and is generally as low as it was in the late 1970s.

According to the Centre, the labour market is much healthier today than at any point since the Great Recession. But

bers, it still has a long way

tions.—Xinhua

US defends Ebola response, about 50 under observation

WASHINGTON / DALLAS — US officials on Friday broadly defended the response to the country’s first case of Ebola, although one acknowledged that while the government was confident of containing the virus, it had been “rocky” in Dallas where the patient is in serious condition.

Health officials in Dallas charged with checking the spread of Ebola have narrowed their focus to about 50 people who had direct or indirect contact with an infected Liberian visitor, including 10 at high risk who are being checked twice daily for symptoms.

In Washington, officials were asked at a news conference why the visitor, Thomas Eric Duncan, was able to get past screening in his journey from Liberia on 19 September and then be sent home after telling a Dallas hospital a few days later about his travel to a country where there had been an Ebola outbreak.

“They were things that did not go the way they should have in Dallas, but there was a lot of things that went right and are going right,” Dr Anthony Fauci, a director at the National Institutes of Health, told reporters at the White House.

“So, although certainly it was rocky” in terms of how people perceived the response, “the reason I said there wouldn’t be an outbreak is because of what is going on right now,” Fauci said.

Fauci said although it “may be entirely conceivable” that there would be another Ebola case in the United States, the strength of the healthcare infrastructure “would make it extraordinarily unlikely that we would have an outbreak.”

The case has put authorities and the public on alert over concerns that the worst epidemic of Ebola on record could spread from West Africa, where it began in March. The World Health Organization on Friday updated its death toll to at least 4,339 out of 7,492 suspected, probable and confirmed cases. The epidemic has hit hardest in impoverished Liberia, Sierra Leone and Guinea.

At Friday’s news conference, White House adviser Lisa Monaco was asked whether she would recommend to President Barack Obama that he im-nove a travel ban on West Africa, as some public officials have called for.

“Right now we believe those types of steps actually impede the response,” Monaco said.

US Senator Lamar Alexander, a Republican from Tennessee, urged Obama to order US airports to screen travelers coming from Ebola-hit countries.

As part of the US effort to help contain the spread of Ebola, the Pentagon on Friday said the number of miltary personnel that could be deployed to West Africa could reach nearly 4,000, more than earlier estimates of about 3,000.

Scientists check the engine of cheetahs, animal world’s ‘Ferrari’

WASHINGTON, 4 Oct — Cheetahs can aptly be called the race cars of the animal kingdom: sleek, graceful and supremely speedy. Scientists have now taken a bit of a look under the hood of these feline Ferraris to gauge how much energy they burn as they traverse their African habitats and to gain insight into factors that may be contributing to their precocious population plunge.

A study published on Thursday in the journal Science described how researchers tracked 19 free-roaming cheetahs for two weeks at two sites in South Africa and Botswana. They measured energy expenditure after injecting cheetahs with isotope-laden water and later analyzing their feces. They were surprised to learn that cheetahs used relatively little energy in their high-speed chases for prey like gazelles and impalas.

The world’s fastest land mammals, known for their spotted coat, cheetahs accelerate from a standstill to a top speed (96 kph) in three seconds in amazing short bursts of speed. “Our data suggest that they are indeed perfectly adapted to this hunting technique. They recover pretty fast, so the high-speed hunting doesn’t really affect their quality of life,” said one of the researchers, North Carolina State University biologist Johnny Wilson.

The findings also contradicted the hypothesis that cheetahs expend an inordinate amount of energy catching new prey after bigger competing predators like lions and hyenas steal carcasses brought down by them.

Their biggest energy drain was the distances cheetahs must walk while seeking prey thanks to man-made problems like habitat loss in grasslands and other areas, fences restricting free travel and people killing too many of the animals cheetahs eat. Queen’s University Belfast biologist Michael Scantlebury, who led the study, said the cheetahs traveled up to nearly 19 miles (30 km) per day. He said “cheetahs may be Ferraris but most of the time they are driving slowly,” traipsing over sand dunes in baking heat with no water to drink.

Cheetah populations have declined from about 100,000 to 10,000 over the past century, experts say. “It is us humans that are going to be responsible for their dwindling numbers. We need to be even more careful to look after and maintain the remaining areas of the world that are truly wild, and we need to think about the consequences of our actions,” Scantlebury said.

Global seafloor map reveals stunning details of Earth’s depths

WASHINGTON, 4 Oct — Scientists have devised a new map of the Earth’s seafloor using satellite data, revealing massive underwater scars and thousands of previously uncharted sea mountains residing in some of the deepest, most remote reaches of the world’s oceans.

The researchers said on Thursday they used gravity measurements of the seafloor from radar equipment aboard the European Space Agency’s CryoSat-2 satellite and NASA’s Jason-1 satellite to capture underwater geological features in unprecedented detail.

“The pull of gravity reflects the topography and tectonics of the seafloor,” said David Sandwell, a geophysicist at Scripps Institution of Oceanography at the University of California (UC) San Diego. — Reuters

The map reveals major seafloor and sub-seafloor structures. They include a mid-ocean ridge beneath the Gulf of Mexico with a length about equal to the width of Texas as well as another ridge under the South Atlantic west of Angola about 500 miles (800 km) long that was formed just after the continent of South America separated from Africa.

Such “spreading ridges” are cracks in the Earth formed where the planet’s tectonic plates moved apart and molten material called magma came up to fill them, the researchers said. “Knowing where and when such ridges existed is essential for deciphering planet Earth’s geological history,” added Sandwell.

EU approves Facebook’s bid for Whatsapp

BURELSSEN, 4 Oct — The European Commission on Friday announced its approval over Facebook’s bid for Whatsapp, paving the way for the two Internet communication giants’ merger.

Both companies offer applications for smartphones, so-called “apps”, which allow consumers to communicate by sending text, photo, voice and video messages.

Such business has grabbed much market share from telecom industry, which oppose the merger deal strongly.

The Commission found that Facebook and WhatsApp are not close competitors and that consumers would continue to have a wide choice of alternative consumer communications apps after the transaction, saying the investigation showed that the merged entity would continue to face sufficient competition after the merger. “While Facebook Messenger and WhatsApp are two of the most popular apps, most people use more than one communications app.

We have carefully reviewed this proposed acquisition and come to the conclusion that it would not hamper competition in this dynamic and growing market,” Competition commissioner Joaquin Almunia said in a statement.

As regards consumer communications services, the Commission sees this is a very dynamic market with several competing apps available on the market, such as Line, Viber, iMessage, Telegram, WeChat and Google Hangouts. According to public data, Facebook has 1.3 billion users worldwide, 300 million of which are users of the Facebook Messenger app. WhatsApp has 600 million users worldwide.

US, EU wrap up 7th round of trade talks

WASHINGTON, 4 Oct — The United States and the European Union (EU) concluded the seventh round of the Atlantic free trade talks on Friday, moving from general discussions on the framework of the agreement towards concrete discussions based on text proposals.

“Lead negotiators in most of the groups met and took on the important but arduous task of analyzing the increasing number of proposals that are now on the table,” chief US negotiator Dan Mullaney told a press conference after wrapping up five-day negotiations for the Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership (TTIP) here.

“We’re at the phase of the negotiation in which our teams have progressed from discussing general approaches in the agreement to the spade work of reviewing the many proposals and text language that each side has put on the table,” Mullaney said.

Chief EU negotiator Ignacio Garcia Bercero echoed his view, saying that “in a number of areas, there are already consolidated texts that bring together the proposals of the United States and of the European Union.”

“During this round, a lot of the focus has been on the regulatory pillar of the future agreement,” Garcia Bercero said, which includes “horizontal disciplines on issues such as technical regulations, the standards, conformity assessment, sanitary and phytosanitary measures, and the issue of regulatory coherence.”

The negotiators also discussed services and worked on ways to facilitate the ability of small- and medium-sized enterprises to participate in global supply chains, Mullaney added.

Both negotiators gave no indication of when the next round of TTIP negotiations would be held, noting that a lot of challenges lie ahead to conclude the trade talks.

“In an agreement of this importance and magnitude, these proposals are in many cases long and complex and require many hours of detailed and difficult discussion and analysis,” Mullaney said.

The US and EU leaders have initially set a timetable for completing an agreement for TTIP by late 2014. But the negotiations moved very slowly amid rising political and public resistance to the deal on both sides.

Quake lake accident leaves six missing in SW China

KUNMING, 4 Oct — Six workers are missing in southwest China’s Yunnan Province after water escaped on Friday from a barrier lake formed by an August earthquake.

At around 3:20 pm on Friday, 20 people were digging tunnels to allow the water to discharge from the lake safely. “They were about to place dynamite to blow up the blockage, but suddenly water burst through and flooded the construction site,” said a Yunnan official on Saturday.

Ten workers escaped, but 10 others were washed away. Four were rescued and are being treated at Qiaojia People’s Hospital. More than 300 rescuers are involved in the search.

The lake is 15 km long and covers an area of 49 square km in Qiaojia and Ludian counties. It was formed when landslides blocked the Niulan River.

Hundreds of residents downstream of the lake have been evacuated, given the possibility of the lake completely bursting its banks.

The August quake left over 600 people dead and 112 missing in Yunnan.

Serbia to privatize national news agency, media houses

BELGRADE, 4 Oct—Serbia seeks buyers for 11 state-owned media companies, including the prominent news agency Tanjug, it was reported on Friday.

In a second open call published by the state privatization agency, potential buyers were asked to send their letter of intent by 3 November to participate in the bidding process.

The privatization of the media companies is to be completed by July 2015.

The Serbian government in mid-August offered on sale 502 public companies. Among them were 70 media companies, including Belgrade television station Studio B and the 110-year-old Politika daily newspapers.

The second call foresees the privatization of 11 more media companies. Besides the Tanjug news agency that exists since 1943, Serbia will also sell several local television stations, radio stations and newspapers from various cities and towns.

According to Serbia’s privatization law, media that fail to attract new owners by next July will be offered to their employees in the form of free stocks, and if that too proves unsuccessful, they will be shut down and deleted from the business registry. According to the law, companies that get new owners will be obliged to remain in the field of media industry for at least five years.

Italy marks first anniversary of Lampedusa major migrants shipwreck

ROME, 4 Oct—Authorities, residents, and survivors attended the first anniversary of a shipwreck on Friday in which 368 migrants died off the coast of Lampedusa Island in Southern Italy.

Severely of the 155 survivors returned to the island to mourn for their lost friends and relatives, but also to reconnect with the Lampedusa fishermen who saved their lives.

Most of the shipwreck victims were Eritreans, and survivors attended the first anniversary of a shipwreck on Friday in which 368 migrants died off the coast of Lampedusa Island in Southern Italy.

Italy’s Foreign Minister Federica Mogherini, President of the European Parliament Martin Schulz, and president of Italy’s Lower House Laura Boldrini were in attendance.

Schulz praised Italy for its efforts in the search-and-rescue mission Mare Nostrum (Our Sea), which was deployed in the aftermath of the Lampedusa shipwreck. Mare Nostrum patrols the waters between African and Italian coasts to save those who attempt to undertake the perilous journey to Europe in search of a better life.

Of the 130,000 migrants who have arrived in Italy by sea in the last nine months, the vast majority have come via Libya as refugees seeking asylum, Boldrini said. Over 90,000 migrants have been rescued so far, according to Italy’s Interior Ministry. Mogherini, who is the incumbent foreign policy chief of the European Union (EU), said “new, legal immigration routes are needed” in order to prevent similar tragedies from happening again.

Mogherini added that the European priority is for the new Libyan government to sign the Geneva Convention to protect refugees. Additionally, to make it possible for the United Nations Refugees Agency to work freely inside Libya. Meanwhile, migrants continue to try and cross the Mediterranean.

As many as 500 migrants were rescued off the Libyan coast in one of the latest incidents in September, according to the International Organization for Migration (IOM). At least 3,000 migrants have died since January 2014, the IOM states. During the ceremony, residents staged a peaceful protest as Schulz was giving his speech. They complained about what they considered a lack of proper immigration policy by the EU.

Steve Martin honoured with AFI's Lifetime Achievement award

LOS ANGELES, 4 Oct—Actor and comedian Steve Martin is the honouree for the 2014 Lifetime Achievement award from the American Film Institute, the organization said on Friday.

Martin, 69, will receive the award recognising his prolific career spanning four decades at a gala in June 2015, televised on Turner Broadcasting’s TNT.

“Steve Martin is an American original,” said Howard Stringer, chair of the AFI’s board of trustees.

“He is a multi-layered creative force bound by neither convention nor caution. His work is defined by him alone, for he is the author — and a national treasure whose work has stuck with us like an arrow in the head.”

Martin, born in Waco, Texas and raised in Southern California, rose through the ranks of comedy from performing magic at Disneyland to becoming a writer for “The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour” in 1969, for which he won an Emmy award. Known for films such as 1979’s “The Jerk,” 1991’s “Father of the Bride” and 2003’s “Cheaper By the Dozen,” Martin received an honorary Oscar for his achievements in entertainment in 2013. He has hosted the Oscars three times.

He is also an accomplished pianist and banjo player, winning five Grammy awards for the comedy and bluegrass categories.

The AFI organization works to preserve motion picture history through film programs, festivals and awards. Previous recipients of the Lifetime Achievement award include Alfred Hitchcock, Sidney Poitier, Elizabeth Taylor, Meryl Streep and most recently, Jane Fonda.—Reuters

Carice van Houten joins Jesse Owens biopic

LONDON, 4 Oct—“Game of Thrones” star Carice van Houten has been cast in the upcoming Jesse Owens biopic ‘Race’. The 38-year-old actress will star in the HBO show, which will star in the film alongside Jeremy Irons and Jason Sudeikis. James plays US sprinter Owens, who won four gold medals at the 1936 Berlin Olympics, humiliating Adolf Hitler and his claims of Aryan racial superiority.

Hitler had attempted to ban black and Jewish athletes from the games, but backed down in the face of a threatened boycott. Sudeikis will play the runner’s coach and mentor Larry Snyder, with Irons as head of the Olympic Committee that supported hosting the games in Nazi Germany.

PTI Rome opera house sacks orchestra, chorus as arts funding shrivels

Rome, 4 Oct—Rome’s opera house has sacked nearly 200 members of its permanent orchestra and chorus as Italy’s worst economic crisis for decades chokes state spending on the arts. Just two weeks ago, the opera’s internationally respected honorary director, Riccardo Muti, quit after a six-year tenure marked by infuriating, strikes and financial problems.

The Teatro dell’Opera di Roma musicians, whose contracts will be terminated by the end of the year, could be re-engaged as part of an “outsourced” orchestra, the ministry for cultural affairs said late on Thursday, describing its move as a “painful but necessary step to save the Rome Opera and start again”. Opera houses worldwide increasingly rely on freelance staff due to funding short-falls, and venues across Italy — where opera was invented in the 16th century — have been forced to make similarly drastic staffing changes.

Hit by falling revenues and mounting costs, the loss-making Rome Opera, has accumulated debts of more than 40 million euros ($50 million) and relies on subsidies from both the cash-strapped city of Rome and the central government to survive. Thursday’s decision prompted calls from opposition Forza Italia party for Cultural Affairs Minister Dario Franceschini to force Rome Opera’s super-intendant, Carlo Fuortes, to resign. Fuortes, appointed at the end of last year, said the orchestra and chorus cost 12.5 million euros a year and outsourcing would save 3.4 million. Massimo Cestaro, secretary general of theatre workers’ union SLC-CGIL, said, “The truth is that there has been a campaign to dismantle the principal cultural institutions of our country.” He said the real goal of the government was to turn Italian theatres into “empty boxes”.—Reuters

Djokovic downs Murray in Beijing

BEIJING, 4 OCT — World number one Novak Djokovic maintained his perfect tournament record and advanced to his fifth China Open final with a 6-3, 6-4 victory against Andy Murray on Saturday.

The 27-year-old top seeded Serb took an hour and 37 minutes to down Murray and improve to a 25-0 record in Beijing.

Murray, fresh from his first victory in more than a year at last week’s Shenzhen Open, put up more resistance in the second set but could not crack Djokovic’s solid defence and smashed his racquet in frustration after being broken in the ninth game.

Djokovic, who meets either Tomas Berdych or Martin Klizan, who stunned world number two Rafa Nadal on Friday, restricted the Scot to only seven winners and denied him four of his five break point chances.

Sixth-seeded Murray has moved up to the ninth place in the race to season-ending ATP Finals in London, which will feature the top eight.

Liverpool striker Sturridge signs new long-term contract

LONDON, 4 OCT — England striker Daniel Sturridge has signed a new long-term contract at Liverpool, the Premier League club said on Friday.

The 25-year-old, who has missed Liverpool’s last six matches due to a thigh injury, has scored 36 goals in 52 appearances for the club since joining from Chelsea in January 2013.

“It’s a big, big day in my life to commit to this club and to give the club my best years, which are ahead of me,” Sturridge told the club’s website (www.liverpoolfc.com).

“I am thankful for the opportunity and that is the reason I committed my future. Everyone has been great with me, from the fans to the staff to the players, so it was an easy decision.

“There are a lot of things I’m happy with how they’ve gone so far, but there is a lot to come. I’ve not shown yet what I can do — what I’m doing is just the start for me.” — Reuters

United’s Van Gaal admits admiration for Everton

MANCHESTER, 4 OCT — Louis van Gaal admires Everton’s style of play and the Manchester United manager will get the chance to watch it closely when the two sides meet in the Premier League at Old Trafford on Sunday.

Under the stewardship of former Everton boss David Moyes, who was criticised by the Old Trafford faithful for adopting the methods he used while in charge at Goodison Park, United lost twice to Roberto Martinez’s side last season.

Van Gaal admitted he is a fan of the passing philosophy instilled by Martinez at Everton and the Dutchman hopes to adopt a similar approach during his time in charge of United.

“I have to say that I like Everton because they want to play football like I want to play football,” Van Gaal told a news conference on Friday. “It shall be a very interesting game. I know we lost to them twice last season so it will be difficult. I hope we can dominate the game but they will want to do that too. They are more likely to play on the counter than us. That’s also the difficulty.”

United’s injury crisis is set to continue against Everton as a number of first-team players are struggling for fitness and Van Gaal will be without captain Wayne Rooney because he is the captain of the team but (Juan) Mata can also play very well.

Young central defender Paddy McNair impressed in United’s victory over West Ham and the 19-year-old will retain his place in the heart of the defence in the absence of the injured Phil Jones.”We still have three central defenders injured so he shall play,” Van Gaal said. “He is the only player who can play in the right-sided (central) defensive position.”

We have eight injuries and one red card so nine players are not available. “I will miss (Wayne Rooney) because he is the captain of the team but (Juan) Mata can also play very well.”

Tabarez picks Suarez and signs new Uruguay deal

MONTevideo, 4 OCT — Luis Suarez is set to make his first Uruguay appearance since the infamous World Cup biting incident after being named on Friday in coach Oscar Tabarez’s 22-man Middle East tour squad.

Tabarez has also signed a new deal to stay in charge until the 2018 World Cup in Russia, extending his time with “La Celeste” to 12 years.

The squad is a mix of World Cup veterans and young newcomers although the coach has rested Paris St Germain striker Edinson Cavani for the friendlies against Saudi Arabia on 10 October and Oman three days later. “We have the chance to have a reunion (with Suarez). He’s a player we don’t want to lose contact with regardless of whether he can play or not,” Tabarez told a news conference at the Uruguay FA’s headquarters.

Barcelona forward Suarez is serving a ban of four months and nine competitive internationals after biting Italy defender Giorgio Chiellini during a World Cup group match in Brazil in June.

He can play in friendlies, however, because he won a Court of Arbitration for Sport (CAS) appeal after being initially suspended from “any football activity” during the four-month ban.

Suarez will miss the defence of Uruguay’s Copa America title in Chile next year and the opening eight South American qualifiers for the 2018 World Cup.

“We’ve got to look on the bright side,” said Tabarez. “At some point in the qualifiers, when the eight matches of suspension are over, we’re going to get a great reinforcement.”
