Tropical cyclone likely to hit southeast coast of India

Yangon, 6 Nov—A tropical cyclone over the central Bay of Bengal is moving in a northwest direction and is likely to cross the southeast coast of India on Saturday evening. U Tun Lwin, the former director-general of the Myanmar Meteorology and Hydrology Department, said.

In a Facebook post, the private weather forecaster said the storm is likely to hit Andra Pradesh State in southeast India on Saturday evening. According to the observations at 14.30 hrs MST on Thursday by the Myanmar Meteorology and Hydrology Department, the depression is centered at about 480 miles southwest of Pathein in Myanmar, 360 miles northwest of Port Blair in India and 310 miles southeast of Vishakhapatnam in India.

It is forecast to further intensify into a cyclonic storm within 24 hours and move in north-northwest direction, the DMH said.

The present stage of depression is coded yellow as it is not moving towards Myanmar’s coasts, according to the DMH. Under the influence of the depression, rain or thunderstorms are likely to be fairly widespread in the Lower Saitung, Mandalay and Magway, Bago, Yangon, Ayeyawady and Tanintharyi regions and Shan, Rakhine, Kayin and Mon states with isolated regional heavy rainfall.

Squalls and rough seas are likely at times off and along the Myanmar coasts and surface windspeeds in squalls may reach 40mph. October and November are the peak months for cyclones over the Bay of Bengal and Arabian Sea, and, on average, five cyclones develop each year.

China seeks progress in building new type of relations with US

BEIJING, 6 Nov — China again expressed willingness to work with the United States to build a new type of relations between major countries, saying it is normal for both sides to have disagreements in their relationship.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Hong Lei told the comment at a regular news briefing when asked to comment on a speech by US Secretary of State John Kerry in a lecture in Washington.

Kerry promoted the importance of enhancing ties with China on Tuesday and expressed concerns about tension in the South China Sea ahead of President Barack Obama’s China visit next week.

“We have noticed Kerry’s speech. The 35-year history of diplomatic relations between China and the United States has fully proved that the two countries share important mutual interests and a wide scope for cooperation,” Hong said.

Both sides should and can cooperate more at the bilateral, regional and global levels to safeguard and contribute to peace, stability and prosperity in the Asia-Pacific region and the world, he said.

Meanwhile, he noted the differences in history and culture, social systems and economic development. “It is normal for both to have some disagreements,” he said, calling on the two sides to resolve them constructively through respect and seeking common ground while putting aside differences.

China is willing to work with the United States to earnestly implement the consensus reached between the two heads of state. “We are willing to promote building a new model of major-country relations featuring non-conflict and non-confrontation, mutual respect and win-win cooperation to benefit the two peoples and the world,” Hong said.

US President Barack Obama will pay a state visit to China and attend the 22nd Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) Economic Leaders’ Meeting in Beijing from 10 to 12 November.

The leaders of the two countries will exchange views on Sino-US ties as well as major international and regional issues of common concern. “We welcome President Obama’s visit and hope for positive results,” the spokesman added.

Indian PM likely to expand cabinet, 10 more ministers inducted

NEW DELHI, 6 Nov — Indian PM Narendra Modi is likely to expand his cabinet on Sunday, sources said here on Thursday.

There are now 45 ministers in the cabinet, and more than six ministers are holding more than one portfolio, including Arun Jaitley, who is charge of both the key ministries of finance and defence.

It is reported that Modi is expected to induct as many as 10 new ministers, and Chief Minister of Goa state Manohar Parrikar could be chosen as the new defence minister.

The swearing-in ceremony of the new ministers is likely to take place on Sunday evening. Amidst talks of a cabinet expansion, Modi took oath along with 45 cabinet ministers on 26 May. With a policy of “minimum government, maximum governance,” Modi had appointed only a comparatively small cabinet in his government.

Indonesian defence minister tours Russian section of arms exhibition in Jakarta

JAKARTA, 6 Nov — Indonesian Defence Minister Ryamizard Ryacudu familiarized himself on Thursday with Russian exhibits at INDO Defence 2014 exhibition, TASS reported from the site.

The minister showed a special interest in means of close combat — sniper rifles, pistols, machine-guns and grenade launchers.

He was also briefed on advantages of Kilo class diesel-electric submarines, in particular the 636 project that has long been of interest for Indonesia. These submarines are designed by Rubin Central Design Bureau in St Petersburg.

All in all, there are 22 national pavilions at the defence exhibition that has been held since 2004. It traditionally presents all kinds of arms and military hardware for land troops and naval forces, aircraft and aircraft weapons, systems and means of air defence, IT technologies, means of unconventional warfare well as systems and means of communications. This year, 525 companies from 45 countries demonstrate their exhibits on a total area of 10,000 square metres. Fourteen companies present the Russian defence sector at this year’s exhibition.

According to Russia’s Rosoboronexport state-owned arms exporter, since 1992 Russia has exported to Indonesia Sa-27 and Sa-30 fighter jets, Mi-17B-5 and Mi-35P helicopters, BTR-80 armored personnel carriers and BMP-3F infantry fighting vehicles among other armaments.

Besides, some Soviet-era military hardware, including amphibious tanks PT-76 is in the inventory of the Indonesian army.—Kyodo

UN praises Filipino resilience a year after Haiyan tragedy

MANILA, 6 Nov — The United Nations chief representative in the Philippines on Thursday praised Filipinos’ resilience in recovering from a super typhoon that devastated the country’s central island’s nearly a year ago.

“We are humbled by the extraordinary resilience of the Filipino people who, despite the unprecedented destruction and tragedy that struck, pushed through individually and collectively, and with generosity of spirit, to this point where recovery is well under way,” Luiza Carvalho, the UN resident and humanitarian coordinator in the Philippines, said in a statement.

Packing winds of up to 235 kilometres per hour and inducing a tsunami-like storm surge, Haiyan, locally known as Yolanda, swept the central Philippines on 8 November last year, causing massive loss of lives and devastation of properties and infrastructure.

Official government data state that 6,300 people died, a little over 1,000 remain missing, and some 4.1 million people were displaced. The estimated cost of damages is 89.6 billion pesos (approximately $2 billion).

Carvalho assured the Philippines of continued UN support in the rehabilitation phase of recovery, which began in August after months of humanitarian-focused efforts.

“We recognize that ‘building back better’ will be a complex and long process, particularly the rehabilitation of human settlements and the restoration of livelihoods,” she said, while noting that the government has “clearly outlined the work that lies ahead.”

Philippine President Benigno Aquino approved the post-Haiyan rehabilitation master plan, which will require almost 170 billion pesos, in late October, and his officials say all projects under it are expected to be completed by 2016, his last year in office.

During the humanitarian phase, the United Nations provided food for some 3.7 million people; feeding counseling for 82,000 mothers; and, prenatal and postnatal care for 23,000 pregnant and lactating women.

It also rehabilitated water systems, benefiting almost 1 million people; provided new or rehabilitated latrines for the benefit of 350,000 people; and provided emergency shelters for 570,000 households.

The international agency also helped 162,000 households get emergency employment, and distributed agricultural seeds and tools to some 100,000 farmers. It built 4,900 temporary learning spaces and distributed learning materials for 545,000 students.

South Korea plans to buy Russian air cushion landing craft

JAKARTA, 6 Nov — Russia and South Korea are expected to shortly sign a contract under which Russia will build several air-cushion amphibious assault landing craft Murena-E for South Korea, an informed source from the Russian delegation to INDO Defence 2014 exhibition told TASS on Thursday.

“South Korea already ordered three boats in 2004 and is very satisfied with their operational capabilities, seeking to buy several more that would be upgraded a bit,” he said, adding that India and Turkey are also viewing the purchase of Murena craft.

The source said all modifications have already been added in a new project. “We expect the contract will be signed shortly. By experience of the first contract that was completed in 2007, the lead ship was built in a year-and-a-half and the others within a year,” the source added.

The trio of South Korea’s Murena craft will soon be repaired with repair work conducted by Russian specialists. It is up to the Korean side to decide where repairs will be made, the source said. “India also shows interest in similar projects. Besides, negotiations are under way with Turkey,” the source said. He said Murena boats could be landed from Mistral helicopter carriers depending on their design and size.

Asian nations set to endorse anti-graft deal

BEIJING, 6 Nov — Countries in the Asia Pacific region are set to endorse a plan for a China-based information-sharing network to combat corruption, The Wall Street Journal reported on Thursday.

The network, known as Act-Net, will be based at the training arm of the ruling Communist Party’s top anti-graft body, which has the power to imprison and investigate party officials without charge, the US newspaper reported.

It did not seem that members of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation grouping plan to challenge China’s bid to host the anti-graft network, whose initial mandate will run through 2015, the Journal said.

China’s President Xi Jinping has sought to widen his far-reaching anti-corruption campaign to suspects who have fled abroad, particularly those who have taken their ill-gotten gains with them.

A draft declaration, seen by the newspaper, says the network will use extradition, mutual legal assistance, and the recovery and return of proceeds of corruption as the means to tackle graft across borders.

Western governments have balked at setting up extradition deals because torture is often used by Chinese legal authorities to extract confessions and capital punishment is widely meted out for crimes, including corruption.

Act-Net will ease the flow of information between law enforcement agencies, but it will not be a regional version of Interpol, people familiar with the matter told the Wall Street Journal.

China has extradition treaties with 38 countries, but not the United States, Canada or Australia — the three most popular destinations for suspected economic criminals, according to state media.—Reuters

Japan sends PM adviser to China over Abe-Xi talks at APEC

Tokyo, 6 Nov — Japan on Thursday sent Prime Minister Shinzo Abe’s foreign policy adviser to Beijing to prepare for a possible meeting between Abe and Chinese President Xi Jinping on the sidelines of a regional summit next week in the Chinese capital, according to government officials.

Shotaro Yachi, head of the National Security Council, plans to hold talks with State Councilor Yang Jiechi, China’s top foreign policy official, they said.

Amid the growing likelihood that Abe and Xi will make brief informal contact during the two-day summit of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum starting Monday, Yachi is expected to convey Abe’s request for an official meeting without attaching preconditions.

While China has insisted it will not hold a summit with Japan unless it recognizes the existence of a “territorial dispute” over the Senkaku Islands, a group of uninhabited islands in the East China Sea administered by Japan but claimed by China and Taiwan, and Abe promises not to visit the war-related Yasukuni Shrine in Tokyo.—Kyodo News

Colombia thanks Germany for aiding its peace process

BOGOTA, 6 Nov — Germany has provided Colombia with 116 million euros over the last two years to help end the latter’s decades-long armed conflict, Foreign Minister Maria Angela Holguin disclosed on Wednesday.

Holguin said although Colombia has a stable economy and does not need such financial assistance, it accepted the aid after considering the importance of advancing the ongoing peace process with the guerrillas of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC), the largest rebel group in Colombia.

The blame game will get us nowhere

By Kyaw Thura

All the people of the world are bound to trade blame in the dynamics of political reform.

This reminds me of a story I read in my teens. One day an anchorite stole into a field of corn and plucked some corncobs. On arrival at his place, he peeled off their sheaves only to see no grain inside. All the corncobs he had gathered were barren. Driven by anger, the anchorite went to the farmer, blaming him for “grainless” corncobs and accusing him of failing to weed the field. The owner of the corn field responded that the fault was with the soil.

On hearing the farmer’s accusation, the guardian of the land put the blame on the faulty rain patterns. But the guardian of the rains retorted angrily that it was the king who would have to take the blame for any inconveniences caused. In his justification, the king failed to follow the royal code of conduct.

Later, the anchorite went to the palace to ask for permission to be present before the king, who as a result asked his subjects to make investiga- tion into the anchorite’s request. After hearing all the reports, the king ordered his men to bring the anchorite before him.

No sooner was he before the king than he filed complaints about the king’s failure to behave well. The king, as he had learned everything from his subjects, pointed out the anchorite’s immoral conduct. The anchorite, after noticing his own unprofessional demeanour, rushed out of the palace.

This story teaches us the importance of the balance between form and function in society. The hardest part is that it is easier to find fault in others than in ourselves. At last, nobody is perfect, but the best part for all of us to do our best for our posterity.

Should Smoking at Public Places be Banned?

Khin Maung Myint

In my opinion most smokers are aware of the adverse effects of tobacco smoking, but are either reluctant to quit or have difficulty quitting. Whatever the reasons are, they should have some etiquette to abstain from smoking at public places. As it is common knowledge, among educated persons, that second-hand smokers are exposed to the hazards of tobacco smoke as much as the smokers themselves, or even worse as the exhaled smoke may contain other toxic gases. If the smokers cannot quit smoking, let them smoke themselves to death, but the non-smokers should be safeguarded against involuntary suicides. Thus, I absolutely agree to the idea of banning smoking at public places. I may sound a bit blunt, but I mean no offence to the smokers. However, I was compelled to use harsh words to send the message through to those stubborn smokers and make them kick the undesirable bad habits. I humbly beg for- givingness from the readers, especially my smok- ers friends, if they should find my article offending. I sincerely hope they would understand my intentions and good will in writing it. However, if this article could persuade someone to quit smoking, I would be much gratified and accept their wrath and condemnations gladly.

A few decades ago, in other countries including some of our neighbours, as the people are getting more and more aware of the adverse consequences of smoking, they started choosing where they go. They’d shun public places where smoking is prohibited, especially restaur- ants and cafes. As this trend became more widespread and started to hit the businesses, some fastsighted restaurant-owners started posting “No Smoking” signs, to lure their customer- s back. Their innovations are quite effective, others followed suit. Later authori- ties officially made it compulsory to prohibit smoking in all public places. To facil- itate the enforcement of that restriction, smoking rooms and areas are designated for those who cannot stay away from smoking, to satisfy their cravings for the “killer nicotine”.

Everywhere you go in Thailand and if you are on the lookout, you are bound to notice that smoking in restaurants and cafes are nowhere to be found. Even in the “No Smoking” signs or logos with a circle with a diagonal line, imposed over the image of a cigarette, which is an international sign, was not in sight. This indicates that the public is aware of the consequences of smoking and voluntarily abstain from smoking. I deemed that a result of the awareness education pro- grams. I believe this to be a familiar sight in other coun- tries in the region, although it is a new experience for me.

Public places like hos- pitals, airports, train sta- tions, bus terminals, river-ine/ocean ferry terminals, some hotels, to mention just a few, in most of our neighbour- bing countries are pro- hibiting smoking. At some of the above mentioned places, provisions are made for smokers to pursue their habits. However, the number of people utilizing those facilities are noticeably de- creasing, indicating that more and more people are quitting smoking.

In conclusion I would like to urge my fellow coun- trymen, who are habitual smokers to quit smoking and warn our youths not to indulge in smoking for fun, thinking they cannot get ad- dicted. I should know best about this fact, as I was ad- dicted to smoking since six-teen and was only able to quit at forty eight, after try- ing many times starting from twenty five. It took me twenty three years to finally succeed. It all started in my first year at the university. I thought smoking cigarette was stylish after observing the senior students smoking and that I have enough self- control to avoid getting ad- dicted, which proved to be wrong. Smoking is not only detrimental to health, but also a very expensive habit that should be shunned. I in- tend to write about the rea- sons why you should quit smoking in my next article.

The Promotion of National Education towards the Emergence of World-class Universities

Khin Maung Myint

Today in the reign of the new government all round development programmes are being carried out at the various levels of every sector and now becoming the third wave.

When reviewing the education reforms carried out for promoting education standard in Myanmar, especially at the higher education level, national education law which has been deliberated and widely debated by all public and academicians, has been enacted by Pyidaungsu Hluttaw in order to carry out the education reform pragmatically in accordance with the law.

This education law is Mother Law or Policy Law which covers the various education systems, from the pre-school education which is concerned with the whole national education and has never been implemented in Myanmar, to university education, education tasks at the respective levels and non-formal education, self study edu- cation and inclusive education, etc in addition to formal education. This law has been enacted in accordance with the law in order to perform the education tasks in compulsary and pragmatically in the education sector, for the enhancement of education quality, quality assurance and increas- ing international recognition in various sectors: Higher Education sector, Basic Education sector, Teacher Education sector, Technical and Vocational Education sector, etc.

As the National Education Law is a law that encompasses all sectors of education, in order to implement it, it is necessary to continue detailed and extensive deliberation and drafting the required by-laws sector-wise and exact them.

While doing so, short-term and long-term projects are being planned and budget is being projected for the re- forms in accordance with the National Education Law and in order to utilize the budget, increasingly allotted every year for investment in education promotion programmes that can gain immediate benefits are identified by making field trips to various universities.

Likewise when we meet local people from different regions, we get their opinions and desires on the education reform which are to be implemented and we are planning to add their desire in the future plans.

In this situation, among the reform of education sector, especially in reform of higher education sector, all the universities under higher education department are under the supervision of ministry of education and other respec- tive ministries. However, according to the new national education law, chances of autonomous teaching and learn- ing situation and autonomous administrations are given to all universities. Moreover, according to the new National Education Law, higher education institutions are granted to use government budget which is being raised annually as well as to use their own fund.

The opportunities to create independent and enthusi- astic education environment, the opportunities to collabo- rate with international universities to be recognized by international universities and intellectual organizations when our tasks to promote the university education standard to develop autonomous university which can carry out research work in practical field, business, industrial and manufacturing fields, to get the chance of joining the university based on the qualities, desires and hobbies of the students, to form social organizations as extra-curriculum activities are being included in detail in the higher educa- tion law.

Private University law is being drafted after enacting basic rules to raise cooperation of private sector in educa- tion law.

As of late, it is important to draft Higher Education Law in order to implement practically because National Education Law has been enacted. Each university must carry out the autonomous performance. Concerning this there must be University Act. In this Act, the responsible person and his task must be clearly stated.

The Promotion of National Education towards . . .

Thus, according to the National Education Law, upgrading the quality of National Education, emergence of world class universities and grasping the opportunities to carry out the autonomous performance must be undertaken.

To sum up, since it is necessary to perform the tasks in practice, inclusive of people’s will and in accordance with the existing law in reforming into new, democratic nation, the rules and laws to be prescribed sector-wise in future must be the main ones which allow these tasks to be carried out.

Therefore, since the national education law already enacted allows for chances of creating independent and active academic surrounding and of upgrading educational qualities, it is the mother law which needs implementing in practice. It is earnestly suggested that all the nationalities must have the same objectives in drawing up the university acts and laws sector-wise and must work collaboratively for the upgrading of national education and emergence of world class universities.
Obama, Republicans sound conciliatory note but battles loom

WASHINGTON, 6 Nov — President Barack Obama and his powerful US Senate adversary struck a conciliatory tone on Wednesday, but Obama’s plans to proceed with new immigration rules foreshadowed a bumpy start to his relationship with a Republican-controlled Congress, Obama and Mitch McConnell, who will become majority leader when Republicans take charge in the Senate in January, signaled they hoped to get past a previously frosty relationship to pass legislation on priorities on which they can both agree.

Republicans swept elections on Tuesday, capturing their biggest majority in the House of Representatives in more than 60 years and gaining a majority in the Senate for the first time since 2006. The election result limits what Obama can achieve without bipartisan support during his final two years in office.

“As president, I have a unique responsibility to try and make this town work,” Obama, a Democrat, said at a White House news conference. “So, to everyone who voted, I want you to know that I hear you.”

Obama lauded McConnell, with whom he said he hoped to share some Kentucky bourbon, and House Speaker John Boehner for expressing the wish to seek common ground after the elections. He spoke to both men earlier in the day.

McConnell said he believed Obama was interested in moving forward with trade agreements and tax reform, two issues at a standoff in Washington because of political differences. “This gridlock and dysfunction can be ended. It can be ended by having a Senate that actually works,” McConnell told reporters in his home state Kentucky. But the words of reconciliation only went so far. Obama said he intended to go ahead with plans to implement executive actions by the end of this year that could remove the threat of deportation from millions of undocumented immigrants.

McConnell said it would be like “waving a red flag in front of a bull” for Obama to take unilateral action on immigration. The Democrat-controlled Senate passed a bill on the issue last year but House Republicans did not support it. “We’re going to take whatever lawf ul actions that I can take that I believe will improve the functioning of our immigration system,” Obama said. “If they want to get a bill done … I’m eager to see what they have to offer. But what I’m not going to do is just wait.”

Obama conceded that Republicans had a good night” on Tuesday but shied away from more descriptive language of the sort he used in 2010, when he described gutting changes to the tax code, Medicare, and Medicaid as a “shellacking.” The president, whose unpopularity made him unwelcome to many Democrats running for office, plans to meet congressional leaders from both parties at the White House on Friday to take stock of the new political landscape.

Despite the Republican gains, the election was not necessarily an endorsement of Republican policies. Initiatives championed by Democrats to raise the minimum wage and legalize possession of small amounts of marijuana succeeded in a handful of states where they were on the ballot.

With the bulk of election results in, the dollar surged to a seven-year high against the yen and the Dow and S&P 500 finished at record closing highs, reflecting optimism about pro-energy and other business policies. Obama said he would like to work with Republican lawmakers on a deal to pay for repairs to roads, bridges, ports and other infrastructure. He said a tax reform package might be one way of paying for the infrastructure projects.

The new power structure will test Obama’s ability to compromise with newly empowered political opponents who have been resisting his legislative agenda since he was first elected in 2008. Americans elected him to a second and final four-year term in 2012. One of the first tests could be a bill to approve the Keystone XL (TRP) crude oil pipeline from Canada, a project about which Obama has voiced reservations.

Republican Senator John Hoeven said in an interview on Wednesday that he has enough votes to pass a bill early in 2015 that would approve TransCanada’s long-languishing $8 billion pipeline project.

Demolition of remaining Syria chemical arms sites to begin soon

UNITED NATIONS, 6 Nov — The demolition of a dozen remaining chemical weapons production facilities in Syria is scheduled to begin later this month while work will continue on the verification of the government’s declarations. Australia’s UN envoy said on Wednesday:

“The four seven hangars and five underground tunnels, which need to be destroyed.” Ambassador Gary Quinlan, president of the UN Security Council this month, told reporters after a closed-door briefing by Sigrid Kaag, a UN special adviser on Syria’s chemical weapons program. “The destruction is scheduled to commence later this month and likely to be completed … around the summer of next year,” he added, citing information from Kaag.

He said she also told the 15-nation council plans to destroy a further facility which was only recently disclosed by the Syrian government. That site, which was revealed in September, was for the production of deadly ricin.

Kaag also spoke of the need to continue verifying the Syrian government’s declarations about the extent of its poison gas ar se nal and production capabilities, Quinlan said. Western intelligence agencies had long suspected that Syria failed to disclose the full extent of its chemical arms program. Damascus agreed last year to eliminate its entire chemical weapons program after a sarin attack on 21 Aug, 2013, killed hundreds of people in Ghouta, a neighbourhood on the outskirts of Damascus.

Under the agreement reached with Washington and Moscow, which averted threatened US military action, the Nobel Peace-prize winning Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons oversaw the destruction of Syria’s arsenal. Damascus agreed to have already destroyed 1,300 tonnes of toxic gas weapons production facilities.  Damascus agreed to begin later this month and likely to be completed ... around the summer of next year,” he added, citing information from Kaag.

All production, filling and mixing equipment was to be destroyed. Damascus agreed to have already destroyed 1,300 tonnes of toxic gas weapons. It also agreed to have already destroyed 1,300 tonnes of toxic gas weapons.

When all that was done, Syria would be out of the chemical weapons program in Syria anymore.”

Rice said that the US government was fully engaged, committed towards continuing cooperation with the OPCW to solve all the remaining technical issues,” he said. “There is no chemical weapons program in Syria anymore.”

Brazil’s Rousseff tries to mend post-election division

RIO DE JANEIRO, 6 Nov — President Dilma Rousseff said on Wednesday she had struck a conciliatory tone following post-election protests by the political opposition.

Meeting with business leaders in the capital of Brasilia, Rousseff pledged to head a government for all political segments, saying “a government has to govern for all voters, regardless of who they voted for.” The president was reelected in a late October runoff by a narrow mar gin of some 4 percentage points.

She also stressed that knowing how to accept defeat was part of the democratic process. In reference to a spate of protests to her reelection and even calls for impeachment on some social networks, Rousseff said “any attempt at retaliation arising from resent ment on the part of those who won or those who lost (the election) represents a major impediment of the democratic process.”

The president reiterated her willingness to dialogoue with the opposition and Congress.

The main forum for dialogue is the Congress, because that’s where all the diversity of the Brazilian nation is expressed. We must value that, because being a diverse society is our main characteristic,” she said.—Xinhua
Britain says will send more army trainers to Iraq to help fight Islamic State

Baghdad, 6 Nov — Britain will boost the number of its army trainers in Iraq in the coming weeks to support the Iraqi armed forces’ battle against Islamic State militants, the British defence secretary said on a visit to Baghdad on Wednesday.

Britain said last month it had deployed a team of trainers to Iraq to help Kurdish peshmerga fighters maintain and use heavy machineguns against the radical militants who have taken over much of Iraq and Syria in a ruthless military onslaught.

British planes have also participated in US-led air strikes against Islamic State, which has beheaded two British aid workers and two US journalists.

Defence Secretary Michael Fallon, who met top Iraqi government officials during his visit to Baghdad, said the details of the mission would be ironed out soon.

“We have a small number of people here. We will be looking now to see how much we can strengthen that, the liaison work we are doing in the ministries and the security agencies here,” Fallon told reporters. “This is fairly urgent. We will be doing this in the course of weeks. That’s what we have been asked to do.”

The United States spent billions training and funding Iraqi security forces during the occupation of the country following Saddam Hussein’s fall in 2003.

The quality of the training was called into question when several hundred Islamic State militants swept through northern Iraq in June, meeting little resistance.

The Iraqi army rapidly collapsed in the face of the onslaught, leaving behind weapons and tanks that the al-Qaeda offshoot has been using in its attempts to expand a self-proclaimed Islamic emirate in Iraq and Syria.

Air strikes against Islamic State targets after the group started beheading Western hostages have slowed the militants’ advance. But Iraq and Western officials believe the group can only be defeated if Iraqi security forces improve their performance, and that will take time.

As well as the additional training, Fallon said Britain was looking to fill gaps in Iraqi military equipment.

“We’ll be making further gifts of supplies: spares for machine guns, binoculars, first aid kits,” he said during a visit to a firing range where British soldiers from the Yorkshire Regiment were training Kurdish peshmerga to use British machine guns.

“We are stepping up our commitment to training and supply of both weapons and ammunition.”

Aside from a poor showing on the battlefield, sectarianism is hampering security forces.

Just outside the heavily fortified Baghdad zone where Fallon was speaking, soldiers openly displayed pins on their uniforms that revealed they were members of Iraq’s Shia majority.

Fallon said Britain would share expertise in roadside bombs and car bombs gained while fighting the Taliban in Afghanistan.

“We have some specialist knowledge to contribute there and we are going to see how we can help train the Iraqi forces directly in that,” he said.

In recent days the insurgents killed more than 300 members of a Sunni tribe in western Anbar Province. The Iraqi government hopes the area will help the army to fight the insurgents and the United States wants both sides to revive an alliance that helped defeat al-Qaeda during the US occupation.

However, mistrust between the Shia-led administration and the Sunni tribes remains. “Any casualties are regrettable. Even that shows you the tribes are taking the fight to IS and they are determined to get IS out of their villages and out of their areas,” he said.

Islamic State militants use chemical weapons in Syria — Syria’s UN envoy

United Nations, 6 Nov — Militants of the Islamic State group have launched a chemical attack on the Syrian city of Kobani, Syrian Ambassador to the United Nations Bashar al-Jaafari told reporters on Wednesday. He urged the UN to pay attention to all cases of the use of chemical agents by the Islamists.

The Islamic State attacked the city with shells filled with an incendiary chemical agent, causing civilian casualties, the diplomat said. He added that he already had sent a letter on behalf of the Syrian government to the UN Security Council committee that deals with issues of the prevention of the spread of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons, as well as their delivery means.

Jaafari expressed indignation over the fact that the countries that have been accusing the Syrian government of using chemical weapons have even not bothered to call for conducting a probe into the alleged use of prohibited ammunition and chemical agents by terrorists.

Russian diplomats have repeatedly told the United States to consider how harmful double standards are in matters related to chemical weapons in the Middle East. In a statement late October the Russian Foreign Ministry compared the Middle East to a testing site for terrorists to practice skills in synthesizing, producing and using chemical warfare agents.

Russia’s Deputy Foreign Minister Gennady Gatilov voiced his concern over chemical weapons in Libya going out of control. He said the country is out of control, and the risk of losing control over chemical weapons remains. “We talked about that long ago, when NATO’s bombardments were still in progress. We kept warning that it was fraught with the proliferation of these weapons about the entire region of North Africa. Now it has happened,” Gatilov recalled. “Some have been moved to Mali to end up in the hands of terrorists, and others were smuggled to Syria.” — Itar-Tass

US-led air strikes hit al-Qaeda affiliate in Syria — monitor

Washington, 6 Nov — Air strikes by a US-led coalition set up to fight Islamic State targeted the al-Qaeda-linked Nusra Front in northwest Syria overnight, an organisation that tracks violence in the Syrian civil war reported on Thursday.

The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said the air strikes targeted an office and a vehicle used by Nusra Front in Idlib Province in northwestern Syria, where last week the al-Qaeda-affiliated group routed Western-backed Syrian rebels.

The Observatory also reported the first air strikes against Ahrar al-Sham, another hardline Islamist insurgent group.

Rami Abdulrahman, head of the Observatory, said it marked the second time the Nusra Front has been hit in the US-led campaign. The first was on 23 September — the first day of the US air strikes in Syria that are part of Washington’s strategy to “degrade and destroy” Islamic State.

The United States said that attack had targeted al-Qaeda veterans which it referred to as the Khorasan group.

Nusra Front last week seized control of areas of Idlib province from Western-backed rebel leader Jamal Maarouf, head of the Syria Revolutionaries’ Front in northern Syria, confiscating its weapons. It also took positions from the Hazm movement, another recipient of Arab and Western support.

It marked a big blow to the non-Islamist opponents of President Bashar al-Assad who have generally struggled against better armed and equipped Islamist groups including Nusra Front and Islamic State.

In the United States is planning to expand military support to what it describes as the moderate opposition to Assad as part of its strategy against Islamic State in Syria. Nusra Front was once seen as the strongest insurgent group in Syria but has been eclipsed this year by Islamic State, which has seized wide areas of northern and eastern Syria.

French police arrest three in nuclear plant drones probe

PARIS, 6 Nov — Police arrested three people found in possession of remote-controlled drones near one of the nuclear plants involved in a series of mystery overflights by the unmanned aircraft, a source close to the investigation said on Wednesday. Two women and a man were apprehended near the Belleville-sur-Loire nuclear plant in central France and two drones were confiscated, the source said. Interior Minister Bernard Cazeneuve said last week that France had launched an investigation after drones were repeatedly sighted over seven of power utility EDF’s atomic plants, raising concerns over nuclear safety.

The drones in question were very small, but police have given no indication of their exact nature. French law bans aircraft of all types from flying within five kilometres of nuclear facilities.—Reuters

China, Russia agree on military cooperation projects

MOSCOW, 6 Nov — Senior Chinese and Russian military officials said on Wednesday that the two countries have reached agreements on a slew of important military cooperation projects during the 17th round of strategic consultation.

Many cooperation projects in critical areas were agreed upon during the current round of consultation, said Chief of the General Staff of the Armed Forces of Russia Valery Gerasimov while meeting with Wang Guangzhong, Deputy Chief of the General Staff of the Chinese People’s Liberation Army.

Gerasimov expressed the hope that the projects could help enhance mutual trust and substantial cooperation between the two militaries as military ties between Russia and China are a crucial part of strategic cooperation between the two countries.

Speaking on the same occasion, Wang said that the two militaries have implemented the consensus reached by the heads of state of the two countries and witnessed fruitful cooperation in various fields through deepened pragmatic exchanges in recent years.

As the year 2015 marks the 70th anniversary of the victory of the world’s anti-Fascist War and will be an important year for the China-Russia military cooperation, China is willing to work with Russia on the implementation of major military cooperation projects to push forward the comprehensive strategic cooperative partnership between the two countries, said Wang.

During the 17th round of strategic consultation, the two sides discussed the current international and regional security situations, regional hot issues as well as the relationship between the two militaries and reached important consensus on major cooperation projects of the next year and the future.—Xinhua

France, US not to tolerate Iran’s nuclear programme to build weapons

PARIS, 6 Nov — France and the United States stood firm in refusing Iran’s nuclear plan to build nuclear weapons, French and US officials said on Wednesday.

“Iran has the right to use civil nuclear power but not to build an atomic bomb,” said French Foreign Affairs Minister Laurent Fabius.

“We have discussed the negotiations with Iran on its nuclear (programme). It is very important that France and the United States have the same position on this issue,” he said when meeting US Secretary of State John Kerry.

Hailing French-US cooperation to face hard challenges, Kerry reiterated the United States’ refusal of Teheran uranium enrichment to build nuclear power before a two-day meeting with Iran’s Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif in Oman by the end of the week for fresh talks to reach a lasting deal on Teheran nuclear plan.

Iran has been a target of UN sanctions due to its alleged attempts to build nuclear weapons. The West accuses Iran of developing nuclear weapons under cover of civilian nuclear programmes, which Iran denied.

In November 2013, Iran accepted, in exchange for limited sanctions relief, to halt enrichment above 5 percent, neutralize its stockpile of near 20 percent uranium by means of dilution or converting and not to install more centrifuges.

However, West powers asked Teheran to close more centrifuges and not to build a nuclear power. During their meeting, Fabius and Kerry also discussed other “difficult issues”, such as the situations in Syria and Iraq.—Xinhua

Man allegedly sold radioactive material to gain from radiation fears

TOKYO, 6 Nov — A 54-year-old man in Fujisawa, Kanagawa Prefecture, sold radioactive substances without a permit in an attempt to cash in on radiation fears stemming from the March 2011 Fukushima nuclear disaster, Tokyo police said on Thursday.

The man has admitted to selling americium-241 to eight people, some of whom used it to test radiation-measuring instruments, said the police, who referred the case to prosecutors.

The police suspect the man sold the substance to the eight people between September 2013 and March this year for 3,500 to 4,500 yen a piece without authorization in violation of the radiation hazards prevention law.

The man told the police he had bought a total of 15 pieces, placed between metal plates, through an overseas website for 1,100 to 1,200 yen each.

The substance was emitting radiation exceeding the allowable limit, the police said.

According to the police, the man said he expected demand for radiation-measuring instruments to increase after the March 2011 disaster at the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant and ahead of the 2020 Tokyo Olympics.

S African rights activist shot

CAPE TOWN, 6 Nov — A renowned South African rights activist was shot and wounded on Wednesday by unknown gunmen, authorities said on Thursday.

Andile Lili, 39-year-old leader of Ses’khona People’s Rights Movement (SPRM), was believed to have been shot in the stomach four times in Khayelitsha, an informal settlement in Cape Town on Wednesday evening, according to police.

“He was shot in front of his house while he was getting into a car. The family heard the shooting. Everyone got out while it was happening. They heard it and those who did it ran away,” said SPRM spokesman person Sthembile Majova.

Majova said they are working with authorities to track down the perpetrators, adding that Lili is in a critical but stable condition in hospital.

No arrests have been made yet.

Lili, also a member of the African National Congress Youth League, has spearheaded protests over poor service delivery in informal settlements in the past.

Russian lawmaker to initiate a bill banning to sell tobacco to persons younger than 21

MOSCOW, 6 Nov — A Russian lawmaker plans to initiate a bill banning to sell tobacco to persons younger than 21, the Ivetria daily writes on Thursday.

The current law prohibits to sell tobacco to persons younger than 18.

Sergei Poddubny, the first deputy chairman of the committee for physical culture, sport and youth affairs of the Russian State Duma lower parliament house, the initiator of the stricter ban, also plans to raise the issue of poor performance of the current anti-tobacco law.

The anti-tobacco law in Russia came into force on 1 June, 2013, immediately after the World No Tobacco Day. Starting from 1 June, 2013, smoking was prohibited in public places, at hospitals, schools, cultural and sports facilities, in administrative buildings, airports, offices and staircases in dwelling houses.

The law banned smoking in public places is actually not working... At a next plenary week starting from 10 November, we will have a meeting of our committee, where I will suggest a roundtable meeting be organized on issues of the implementation of the anti-tobacco law. We will also discuss the initiative to ban tobacco selling to persons younger than 21,” Poddubny said.

Lawmaker Nikolai Valuev, a former professional boxer, voiced support to this initiative. “As a lawmaker, I will support this bill. I think this is a right and useful initiative. But I am afraid it would not be an easy task to see to it that this law is observed,” he told Ivetria.

The idea of raising the age of buying tobacco to 21 was first voiced in late 2013 by Yeghev Bryun, the chief narcologist of the Russian health ministry.

In late October, Vyacheslav Fetisov, a retired professional ice hockey defenseeman and now a member of the Federation Council upper parliament house, came out with an initiative to raise the age of buying alcohol from 18 to 21. Bills banning to sell alcohol and tobacco to persons younger than 21 have been submitted to the State Duma more than once but were turned down each time.

Matthew McConaughey wants to do comic book film

LOS ANGELES, 6 Nov — “Interstellar” star Matthew McConaughey is not averse to playing a comic book superhero.

The actor, who was being eyed to play the lead in Marvel’s “Doctor Strange” before it went to Benedict Cumberbatch, said he would love to take on a superhero role only if he feels he can add something to it, reported Ace Showbiz.

“It’s not an area that I’m saying I wouldn’t like to go. I don’t know, it would have to be a script and a character that I found interesting and one where I can have a personal experience.

“I’m not thinking about a genre like, ‘Oh, I really want to do this or I wouldn’t want to do that.’ If something finds me at the right time, turns me on, and if I can grab a hold of it, see it from the inside and get a feeling that, ‘Oh, I’ve got a way I can do this that can be original’,” he said.—PTI

Jessica Chastain in talks for Marvel film?

LOS ANGELES, 6 Nov — Actress Jessica Chastain says she has been in talks with Marvel studio for a superhero film. Chastain, 37, said nothing was confirmed as she wanted a strong role in the movie, reported Vanity Fair.

“We’ve talked about aligning our forces in the future. And here’s the thing with me… If you’re going to be in a superhero movie, you only get one chance.

You’re that character forever. So why do a superhero movie and play the boring civilian?” she said.

“Whatever it is, I want a fight scene. I could be an incredible villain. I could be a hero. I want a cool outfit, and I want to kick ass,” she added. Chastain said Marvel approached her to play a character that had “a possibility in the future of becoming” something extraordinary.—PTI

Tomita says unknown man placed camera in his bag

Tokyo, 6 Nov — Japanese swimmer Naoya Tomita, who was summarily indicted for allegedly stealing a camera at September’s Asian Games in Incheon, South Korea, said on Wednesday that someone else placed the camera in his bag at the Asian Games swimming venue.

The 25-year-old Tomita, who intends to give an explanation of what happened at a press conference in Nagoya on Thursday, is looking into filing an appeal in South Korea.

According to the indictment, Tomita stole a camera left at poolside in the press section by a South Korean reporter on 25 September, where the swimmer came to cheer on teammates in a practice at Munhak Park Tae Hwan Aquatics Centre. Tomita said that while at the venue, an Asian man around 40 years old grabbed his left hand from behind and at that moment placed something strange in his bag. “I thought I might be in some danger, so I took off,” Tomita said, explaining why he did not understand he had a camera in his bag.

When he returned to the athletes’ village, he realized the item in question was a camera. Because it did not have a lens, he thought it might be broken and intended to leave it in the athletes’ village when he returned to Japan. Asked why he admitted to stealing the camera while under questioning by local police, Tomita said he was told “if I admitted it, the punishment would be light and it wouldn’t become a serious matter.”

“If I couldn’t return to Japan with the team the next day, it would cause a lot of trouble for the Japanese Olympic Committee, the Japan Swim Federation and (sports apparel manufacturer) Descent. I would really hate that.”

Tomita was kicked off the national team and fired by his employer, Descente Ltd. On 7 October, the swim federation said it plans to suspend Tomita until 31 March, 2016.

In a confession Tomita reportedly said, “When I saw the camera, I really had to have it.” But the swimmer denies those were his words. “I absolutely never said that,” Tomita said.

Tomita asserted that during the Asian Games, he explained why he had not committed the theft to both Daichi Suzuki, the chairman of the swim federation, and Tsuyoshi Aoki, the head of Japan’s delegation.

Hamilton aims for another first in Brazil

São Paulo, 6 Nov — Lewis Hamilton can set two British Formula One records in Brazil this weekend but it is the world championship he wants and that will have to wait.

No Brin has ever won six grands prix in a row, or celebrated 11 victories in a single season.

The Mercedes driver, who has already overtaken 1992 champion Nigel Mansell as his country’s second most successful in terms of race wins after chalking up his 32nd in Texas last weekend, can do both at Interlagos.

But the novelty — or gimmick — of double points on offer after the last race in Abu Dhabi on 23 November means his second title will remain in doubt even if he takes maximum points on Sunday and teammate Nico Rosberg draws a blank.

Hamilton, who is 24 points clear of the German with 75 still to win, will be doing his best to deliver another psychological hammer blow to his rival all the same on what promises to be a wet weekend.

“I guess I have a buffer for the next race, if something goes wrong you still have an opportunity to be in the fight but that doesn’t really change my mentality or approach,” he told reporters in Austin. “I’ve never won in Brazil, I nearly won in 2012 but was taken out.”

“It is what it is,” he said of the double points.

“There’s no point in getting upset about it. It’s just about being positive. I’ve driven the best I’ve ever driven this year. “If I continue to do what I’ve been doing then there’s no doubt in my mind that I can come up winning.”

Rosberg, who now has the unwanted record for most second places in a season (10) as well as four wins, knows that a mechanical failure for Hamilton and a victory for him would turn everything around.

New York, 6 Nov — Sculptures by Alberto Giacometti and Amedeo Modigliani soared to $101 million and $70.7 million on Sunday and team mate Nico Rosberg, who now has the unwanted record for most second places in a season (10) as well as four wins, knows that a mechanical failure for Hamilton and a victory for him would turn everything around.

Sotheby’s said it was the current boom — long before 1998 — that led to the highest price achieved for a Modigliani et coquelicots” to $61.8 million at a 1911-12 stone work never before auctioned, in excess of $45 million. Estimates do not include commission fees of just over 12 percent.

The record total was driven in part by an increasing global pool of collectors, said Simon Shaw, Sotheby’s co-head of Impressionist and modern art, who noted that with more than 40 countries represented, “we saw the most diverse bidding pool at Sotheby’s since 2000, with ‘terrific activity from Asia.’”

Collectors of increasingly rare trophy works in the Impressionist and modern art arena spent heavily. An Asian buyer drove the price for van Gogh’s “Nature morte aux vases marguerites et coquelicots” to $61.8 million, far more than the pre-sale estimate of about $40 million.

Sotheby’s said it was the highest price achieved by a van Gogh at auction since 1998 — long before the current boom.

London, 6 Nov — Manchester City’s hopes of qualifying for the Champions League knockout stage were dealt a severe blow after Seydou Doumbia’s brace and two red cards subjected them to a humiliating 2-1 defeat by CSKA Moscow at the Etihad Stadium on Wednesday.

Doumbia twice capitalized on woeful defending to score, the first inside two minutes, either side of goalkeeper Joe Hart’s mistake. Hart was later sent off.

Half-time substitute Fernandinho was sent off midway through the second half before Toure followed after lashing out at a CSKA player to complete a dreadful night for City who have taken two points from four Group E games.

Russia’s CSKA, who were banned from selling tickets for the game following repeated bad behaviour from their supporters, have four points, level with AS Roma and eight behind Bayern Munich who beat the Italian side 2-0.

“It is very difficult to understand how we played so bad from the beginning. We were so nervous, we gave away two bad goals. We didn’t play,” City manager Manuel Pellegrini told Sky Sports.

“Is it difficult to know why it was such a low performance from important players. It is a strange moment. It is not just this competition.”

Despite not having won a game in this year’s competition, Pellegrini had told his pre-match Press conference that his expensively-assembled side had targeted winning the Champions League.

But his ambitions were dealt an early blow.

Less than two minutes had elapsed when Doumbia, who scored CSKA’s first goal and won the penalty for the equaliser in last month’s 2-2 draw in Moscow, took advantage of lackadaisical defending to crunch a header past a static Joe Hart.

Toure was at fault for all CSKA’s goals for the opening goal but he more than redeemed himself curling a beautiful free kick into the top corner six minutes later.

With City struggling to play their slick flowing football CSKA fashioned a number of chances on the break and after Doumbia had blazed wide, he added his second.

Chelsea equal record after mighty Maribor scare

Maribor, (Slovenia), 6 Nov — Chelsea stretched their unbeaten start to the season to a club record-equaling 16 games with a 1-1 Champions League draw against Maribor on Wednesday but the 2012 winners were given a mighty scare.

The Slovenian upstarts, destroyed 6-0 by Chelsea at Stamford Bridge two weeks ago, took the lead in the 50th minute when Macedonia winger Agim Ibraimi curled in a spectacular left-foot shot from the edge of the box.

Maribor, buoyed by a noisy crowd, swarmed all over Jose Mourinho’s side and had a great chance to make it 2-0 on the hour when unmarked teenager Luka Zahovic blazed the ball over the bar from six metres with an open goal at his mercy.

Chelsea then upped the tempo and Nemanja Matic equalised with a tap-in at the far post after captain John Terry had headed on a right-wing corner from Cesc Fabregas in the 73rd minute. The Londoners spurned an excellent opportunity to grab all three points when Eden Hazard was tripped in the box with four minutes to go. The Belgian picked himself up to take the penalty but his effort was saved by Jasmin Handanovic. Group G leaders

Chelsea still look well placed to qualify for the knockout stages with eight points from four games.

Schalke 04 have five points after losing 4-2 at Sporting Lisbon (four) on Wednesday and Maribor (three) are also in with a chance. A grim-faced Mourinho, who brought on Diego Costa and Oscar for Andre Schurrle and Willian at half-time and also replaced Filipe Luis with Ramires 11 minutes into the second half, was clearly unhappy with his side.

“We didn’t play well in the first half ... and when you don’t play well for 90 minutes you take a risk,” the Portuguese told Sky Sports television.

“In the last 30 minutes we started to play really well with intensity and desire and we had a lot of chances but their keeper was magnificent.”

Chelsea’s first goal was a slick passing move with Hazard breaking and after Doumbia twice capitalized on the scores against them, Pellegrini had told his pre-match Press conference that his expensively-assembled side

Liverpool target Chelsea after midweek tinkering

London, 6 Nov — All eyes will be on Liverpool manager Brendan Rodgers’s team selection when they attempt to end Chelsea’s unbeaten start to the Premier League season on Saturday.

Rodgers appeared content to sacrifice Tuesday’s Champions League clash with Manchester United for the likes of Raheem Sterling and Steven Gerrard on the bench as his side lost 1-0.

Despite playing down the changes, pointing to the bench as his side lost 1-0, Rodgers was targeting the home clash with Chelsea and the chance to get Liverpool’s domestic title challenge back on track.

Last weekend’s disappoint ing 1-0 defeat at Newcast le United left Liverpool in seventh place, 12 points behind Chelsea who have won eight and drawn two of their games so far.

While that represents a chasm that already looks too big to close, Liverpool have an attractive game in fourth-placed Arsenal and the ambition to finish in the Champions League qualification spots is the main priority.

“Regardless of the Chelsea game, we picked the team to try to get a result tonight,” Rodgers said after the defeat in Madrid that leaves Liverpool’s hopes of reaching the last 16 hanging in the balance.

“All those that weren’t playing tonight, it doesn’t necessarily mean they’re not going to play against Chelsea.”

Chelsea manager Jose Mourinho had his own targets on Rodgers’s decision.

“Normally, against the most difficult opponents, I will try to go with my best players,” said Mourinho before his side’s 1-1 draw with Maribor on Wednesday that stretched their unbeaten start to the season to a club record-equalling 16 games.

“But who knows? Liverpool may play a fantastic match and win and rest players and the players are in great condition to play against Chelsea.”

Messi equals Raul’s Champions League scoring record

Amsterdam, 6 Nov — Barcelona forward Lionel Messi equalled the Champions League scoring record of 71 goals when he struck for the second time in the 76th minute of Wednesday’s Group F match at Ajax Amsterdam.

The Argentina forward matched the record set by former Real Madrid and Schalke 04 striker Raul.

Messi moved within one of the record of the goal when he headed home Marc Bartra’s hooked cross after 36 minutes in the Amsterdam Arena to draw level on 70 goals with Real Madrid forward Cristiano Ronaldo.

He matched Raul with 14 minutes remaining, tapping home after exchanging passes on the break with Pedro. “Is Messi the best player of all time? Absolutely,” Barcelona coach Luis Enrique told reporters.

“He is the best player I have ever seen as a player or as a coach.”

Messi’s feat was also enjoyed by Manchester City manager Manuel Pellegrini.

“I’m happy for Leo because of the work he does for the team and because he is number one. The best,” Barca midfielder Xavi said. “Leo has a free role along with the others up front, but they also have some important defensive work to do. At this club we all work and when we all work the team functions.”
