State-run The New Light of Myanmar to become joint venture in September

Yangon, 26 July — The State-run The New Light of Myanmar daily in English will become the Global New Light of Myanmar as of 1st September, 2014, marking the start of a joint venture.

The News and Periodicals Enterprise of the Ministry of Information owns a 51-percent share of the joint-venture business and the Global Direct Link company 49 percent, said U Aung Kyi, Union Minister for Information, at the opening ceremony of the printing factory of the joint venture on Saturday.

Converting the state-run newspaper into a daily run by a joint-venture is the first such experience for the government and can be considered as a profound change in essence during the period of transition to democracy, said Union Minister U Aung Kyi at the dinner to mark the opening of the printing factory on Friday.

The move is aimed at transforming the state-run English language paper into a free and public-centered media as part of efforts to reform the media landscape, the union minister said at the opening ceremony of the printing factory.

He continued to say that the change is part of media pluralism, while stressing the need to improve the skills of the current human resources with the assistance of the Japanese Kyodo News Agency. The joint venture-owned printing press is worth US$ 3.45 million and the Mitsubishi Lithopia 4 Hi Tower 3 Units Offset has a printing capacity of 70,000 copies per hour of a 48-page tabloid paper and 24-page broadsheet paper.—NLM (Photo gallery on page 9)

Smartphones to outnumber basic mobiles

By Kyaw The-thin

NAY PYI TAW, 26 July — In 2016, the number of smartphone subscriptions will exceed those for ba-sic phones and by 2019 the number of smartphone subscriptions is expected to reach 3.6 billion, said an official of Ericsson My-anmar at a recent briefing to share the findings of its latest Mobility Report.

He added that in Eu-rope, the number of smart-phone subscriptions will reach about 765 million in 2019 and thereby exceed the population number. 65 percent of all phones sold in the first quarter of 2014 were smartphones. Com-pared to today, a smartphone user in 2019 is ex-pected to consume almost four times the amount of mobile data per month. This contributes to the 10-fold growth prediction in mobile data traffic be-tween 2013 and 2019.

He said that the growth and the revolution in M2M and the 10-fold growth in mobile data traf-fic strengthen the emphasis on network performance, handling complexity and maximizing user expe-rience. This in turn puts even higher requirements across the network and the operations and business support systems of the fu-ture.

Ericsson believes in the potential of telecom-munications technology to create positive impact on Myanmar’s economy and society.

Cambodia’s election council recognizes opposition chief as MP-elect

PHNOM PENH, 26 July
— Cambodia’s National Election Committee
(NEC) on Friday officially recognized Sam Rainsy, president of the opposition
Cambodia National Rescue Party (CNRP), as a Member of Parliament (MP)-elect, according to its statement.

The recognition came after Sam Rainsy on Thursday applied documents to become a MP-elect instead of CNRP’s lawmaker-elect Kouy Bunroeun, who has stood down.

“The NEC decided to endorse Sam Rainsy as a CNRP’s lawmaker-elect
for Kampong Cham Province,” NEC’s Secretary General Tep Niytha said in the statement.

NEC barred Sam Rainsy from standing as a parliamentary candidate for the national election in July last year, citing his absence from the country’s voter list due to criminal convictions.

Sam Rainsy, who spent nearly four years in self-imposed exile to avoid an 11-year jail term on charges of disinformation and destruction of public property, received a par-doctrine from King Norodom Sihamoni and returned to Cambodia just two weeks before the national election on 28 July last year.

In October, he was allowed to register as a voter so that he is eligible to replace another lawmaker on the CNRP’s list.

The National Assembly will hold its plenary session on Monday, 28July to confirm the validity of Sam Rainsy as a lawmaker, said a National Assembly’s statement on Friday.

Indian foreign minister arrives in Nepal for 3-day visit

KATHMANDU, 26 July
— Indian External Affairs Minister Sushma Swaraj arrived in Kathmandu on a three-day official visit on Friday to lay the groundwork for Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi’s Nepal visit scheduled for 3 August, and to initiate dialogue for cooperation in harnessing Nepal’s massive hydropower potential, among other things.

Swaraj, who is leading a high-level official delegation that will discuss with Nepali officials a range of bilateral issues, faces the challenge of addressing sensitivities heightened in Nepal by a controversial Indian proposal that seeks to reserve for energy-hungry India exclusive investment rights on Nepal’s rivers. Nepal has a hydropower potential of 84,000 megawatts of which half is technically feasible and economically viable. Nepal currently generates only around 600 MW of electricity and faces up to 18
hours of power cuts a day in winter, a legacy of 18 years of political instability that started with an armed Maoist insurgency in 1996.

Despite the chronic power crisis and Nepal’s inability to fund hydropower projects on its own, the Indian proposal has not gone down well with Nepalis. Some critics have equated it with the “unequal” 1950 Nepal-India

taty that requires Nepal

Israel, Gaza militants agree to a 12-hour truce

Gaza/Israel, 26 July — A 12-hour humanitarian truce went into effect on Saturday after Israel and Palestinian militant groups in the Gaza Strip agreed to a UN request for a pause in fighting, and efforts to secure a long-term ceasefire moved ahead.

Israel's military said it would hold fire starting at 8 am (1 am EDT) but would pursue its search for tunnels used by militants. A spokesman for the Islamist group Hamas, which is dominant in the Gaza Strip, said all Palestinian factions would abide by the brief truce. Fighting had continued overnight as US Secretary of State John Kerry, on a visit to the region, spearheaded international efforts to end 19 days of conflict.

Gaza officials said five people were killed in Israeli air strikes, bringing the Palestinian death toll to 865, most of them civilians. Earlier, militants fired a barrage of rockets out of Gaza, hitting targets across much of southern and central Israel. No injuries were reported, with the Iron Dome intercept system knocking out many of the missiles.

Israel said that two more of its soldiers were killed in Gaza, bringing the army death toll to 37, as troops battled militants in the north, east and south of Gaza - a tiny Mediterranean enclave that is home to 1.8 million Palestinians.

It also announced that a soldier unaccounted for after an ambush in Gaza six days ago was definitely dead, although his body had not been recovered. Hamas said on Sunday it had captured the man but did not release a photograph of him.

Three civilians have also been killed in Israel by rockets from Gaza - the kind of attack that surged last month amid Hamas's anger at a crackdown on its activists in the West Bank, prompting the 8 July launch of the Israeli offensive. Israel on Friday rejected international proposals for a more permanent ceasefire, a government source said, but Kerry, speaking in Cairo, said no formal proposals had yet been put forward.

The top US diplomat said there were still disagreements on the terminology, but he was confident there was a framework that would ultimately succeed and that “serious progress” had been made, although there was more work to do.

Efforts to secure a truce will be pursued in Paris on Saturday, with France hosting diplomats from the United States, Britain, Germany, Italy, the European Union, Turkey and Qatar, a French diplomatic source said.

Hamas wants an end to an Israeli-Egyptian blockade of Gaza before agreeing to halt hostilities. Israeli officials said any ceasefire must allow the military to carry on hunting down Hamas's tunnel network that crosses the Gaza border. The Gaza tunnel network has stoked tensions in the occupied West Bank, where Hamas-backed Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas governs in uneasy co-operation with Israel. Medics said eight Palestinians were killed in incidents near the cities of Nablus and Hebron on Friday, including one shooting that witnesses blamed on an apparent Jewish settler.

EU edges to economic sanctions on Russia but narrows scope

Brussels, 26 July — The European Union reached an urgent, one-sided agreement on Friday to impose the first economic sanctions on Russia over its behaviour in Ukraine, despite a call from Moscow to focus on their scope to exclude technology for the crucial gas sector.

The EU also imposed travel bans and asset freezes on the chiefs of Russia’s FSB security service and foreign intelligence service and a number of top Russian officials, saying they had helped shape Russian government policy that threatened Ukraine's sovereignty and national integrity.

FSB director Alexander Bortnikov and Mikhail Fradkov, a former prime minister who now heads the foreign intelligence service, were among 15 Russians or Ukrainians and 18 companies and other organizations named in the EU’s latest sanctions list.

Also sanctioned were the secretary of Russia’s Security Council, Nikolai Patrushev, Chechen leader Ramzan Kadyrov, who the EU said had made statements supporting Russia’s annexation of the Crimea region and the insurgency in eastern Ukraine, and several Ukrainian separatist leaders.

After months of hesitation, the EU is set to go beyond asset freezes by imposing sanctions on sectors of the Russian economy. The 28-nation EU toughened its stance towards Moscow following last week’s downing of a Malaysian airliner, killing 298 people, in an area of eastern Ukraine held by Russia-backed separatists.

EU ambassadors reached a preliminary agreement on Friday. European Council President Herman Van Rompuy wrote to EU leaders asking them to authorize their ambassadors to complete an agreement by Tuesday. That would avoid the need for leaders to hold a special summit to approve the sanctions.

Van Rompuy said the proposed sanctions package “strikes the right balance” in terms of costs and benefits to the EU and in its flexibility to ramp up sanctions or reverse them over time.

“It should have a strong impact on Russia’s economy while keeping a moderate effect on European economies,” he wrote in the letter, seen by Reuters. But Van Rompuy said the sanctions on access to capital markets, arms and hi-tech goods were likely to apply only to future contracts, leaving France free to go ahead with the controversial delivery of Mistral helicopter carriers being built for Russia.

The narrowing of the proposed measures highlighted the difficulty of agreeing to tough sanctions among countries which have widely different economic interests and rely to varying degrees on Russian gas.

European Commission President Jose Manuel Barroso said late on Friday that following the ambassador’s discussions the commission had adopted a draft legal text for the Russia sanctions package.

“The final decision now lies with the EU’s member states, but I believe that this is an effective, well-targeted and balanced package providing the flexibility to adjust our reaction to changes on the ground. I hope that member states will agree on this package of restrictive measures next week,” he said in a statement.

The measures are not an end in themselves, “but a means to achieve a negotiated and political solution to the crisis... I call on Russia to take decisive steps to stop the violence and genuinely engage in peace plan discussions,” he said.

EU ambassadors will try to reach a final deal at a meeting on Tuesday.

Key measures include closing EU capital markets to state-owned Russian banks, an embargo on arms sales to Moscow and restrictions on the supply of dual-use and energy technologies. They would not affect current supplies of oil, gas and other commodities from Russia.

But Van Rompuy said there was an “emerging consensus” among EU governments that “the measures in the field of sensitive technologies will only affect the oil sector in view of the need to preserve EU energy security.”

The commission had proposed restricting equipment for deep-sea drilling, shale oil and Arctic energy exploration.

Iraq's most influential Shi'ite cleric urged political leaders on Friday to refrain from clashing over the post of Prime Minister. Maliki, who has defied demands that he step aside.

Speaking through an aide who delivered a sermon after Friday prayers in the holy city of Kerbala, Grand Ayatollah Ali al-Sistani said leaders should show flexibility so that political deadlocks could be broken and Iraq could confront an insurgency.

Maliki has come under mounting pressure since Sunni militants led by the hardline Islamic State swept across northern Iraq last month and seized vast swathes of territory, posing the biggest challenge to Maliki’s Shi'ite-led government since US forces withdrew in 2011.

Critics say Maliki is a divisive figure whose alienation of Sunnis has fueled sectarian hatred and played into the hands of the insurgents, who have reached out to 70 km (45 miles) of the capital Baghdad.

Sistani said it is time for politicians to think of Iraq’s interests, not their own.

“The sensitivity of this phase necessitates that all the parties concerned should have a spirit of national mission that requires the practice of the principle of sacrifice and self-denial and not to cling to positions and posts.”

Maliki, a Shi'ite, has ruled since an election in April in a caretaker capacity, dismissing demands from the Sunnis and Kurds that he step aside for a less polarizing figure. Even some Shi'ites oppose his bid for a third term.

Despite pressure from the United States, the United Nations, Iran and Iraq’s own Shi’ite clergy, politicians have been unable to quickly come up with an inclusive government to hold the fragmenting country together.

Iraq’s parliament took a step toward forming a new government on Thursday, when lawmakers elected a former presidential candidate as prime minister.

Sistani’s call for flexibility could hasten his departure. He is seen as a voice of reason in the deeply divided country, and has almost mythical stature to millions of followers, members of Iraq’s Shi’ite majority.
Russia transfer of rocket system to Ukraine rebels imminent

WASHINGTON, 26 July — The Pentagon said on Friday the transfer of heavy-caliber multiple-launch rocket system from Russia to Ukrainian separatists appeared to be imminent with the arms close enough to the border they could be handed over “potentially today.”

“We have indications that the Russians intend to supply heavier and more sophisticated multiple-launch rocket systems in the very near future,” said Army Colonel Steve Warren, a Pentagon spokesman, adding that the weapons were in the over-200mm range.

Warren indicated the weapons had been seen getting closer to the border and the Pentagon believed a transfer was imminent and could happen “potentially today.” “We believe that they are able to transfer this equipment at any time, at any moment,” he said.

Warren said it was unclear whether Russian operators of the rocket launchers might cross the border as well but he said there were indications of Russian operators of other systems going over.

A multiple-launch rocket system is a wheeled or tracked vehicle mounted with multiple tubes capable of firing a half dozen or more guided or unguided rockets in quick succession at targets scores of miles (km) away. The rockets are generally 100mm to 300mm, with those over 200mm in the heavier-caliber category.

“We’re very concerned with the quantity and the capability of weapons flowing from Russia into the Ukrainian separatists’ hands,” Warren said.

“There has been a continuous flow over the last several weeks of weapons and equipment from Russia to Ukraine,” he said, noting that the “most egregious example” was a column of more than 100 vehicles crossing the border.

The Pentagon’s assessment that a transfer of heavy weaponry was imminent came as Russian authorities accused Ukraine of firing a volley of mortar rounds across the frontier into Russia on Friday while a group of investigators was in the area assessing reports of cross-border shooting.

A Russian security official said up to 40 mortar bombs fired by Ukrainian forces fell in the Russian province of Rostov near the border where Ukrainian government forces are fighting pro-Russian separatists. There were no reports of injuries.

Warren also said the United States continued to see Russian artillery on Russian soil firing on Ukrainian military positions inside Ukraine, a practice that has been going on for several days now.

He said he had no information about Ukrainians firing across the border into Russia.

Thousands take to NY streets to protest Israeli offensive in Gaza

NEW YORK, 26 July — Thousands of people took to the streets of New York City on Friday evening to protest Israel’s offensive in the Gaza Strip and demand an end to the violence that has already killed nearly 850 Palestinians.

Police scrambled to corral the demonstrators, which officers estimated numbered between 2,000 and 3,000, as they flooded into the busy streets around Times Square.

Waving Palestinian flags and signs condemning Israel for the offensive, many called for an end to US aid to the country.

“We’re trying to break the siege and end the killing in Palestine. We just want them to live like human beings,” said Ramsey Jamal, 37, a Palestinian-American from Montgomery, New York.

On his shoulders sat his 8-year-old son, Moses, who carried a placard reading: “Israel I’m just a kid. Please don’t kill me,” alongside marks resembling a child’s bloody handprints.

Israel began its offensive earlier this month, citing a surge in rocket attacks launched from Hamas militants in Gaza.

The Palestinian death toll in the Gaza Strip on Friday climbed to 844, most of them civilians. Thirty-five Israeli soldiers and three civilians have also died.

On Friday, both sides agreed to a 12-hour humanitarian ceasefire set to begin on Saturday morning.

In New York City, the crowd marched through the bustling evening streets of Midtown Manhattan chanting “Free, free Palestine!” and “1,2,3,4, stop the killing, stop the war!”

It was unclear who organized the protest, which drew demonstrators to the city from miles away.

Raya Karzoun, a 21-year-old Palestinian-American nursing student, traveled from Milford, Connecticut, to join in.

She said her parents fled the Gaza Strip decades ago after similar Israeli attacks, and that she was heartbroken when she heard of the most recent offensive.

“We’re protesting to free Gaza,” Karzoun said, wearing a Palestinian flag like a shawl. “Even though I don’t live in that country, the country lives in me.”

Arms export ban to Russia “sensible”: Austrian president

VIENNA, 26 July — Austrian President Heinz Fischer said on Friday he considers an arms export ban to Russia to be a sensible proposition, in an interview with local Austrian media.

At the same time, he said talks should continue with Moscow in order to find a solution to the Ukraine crisis and to remind Ukraine of its promise of constitutional reform and a federalization.

“I still give negotiated solutions preference over purely military solutions,” he said.

Fischer also defended his government’s decision to invite Russian President Vladimir Putin to Austria in June, saying the decision was deliberated over at length, that some positives came out of it, and called it “irrational” to judge the decision in light of the Malaysia Airlines MH17 crash in Ukraine that took place the following month.

Regarding the MH17 crash a week ago, Fischer said the wreckage must be examined carefully and objectively, and those responsible must be “sharply called to account.”

Lufthansa, Air Berlin to resume flights to Tel Aviv

Frankfurt, 26 July — German airlines Lufthansa (LHAG.DE) and Air Berlin (AB1.DE) said they will resume flights to Israel on 26 July, lifting a ban imposed in response to fears that rockets being fired from the Gaza strip could pose a threat to aircraft.

“The basis of the most up-to-date information we have available and our own assessment of the local security situation, the airlines of the Lufthansa Group will resume their flights from and to Ben Gurion International Airport,” the airline said on Friday.

Lufthansa Group also operates German wings, Austrian Airlines and Swiss.

In a separate statement on Friday, rival German airline Air Berlin (AB1.DE) said that they would resume flights to and from Israel from midday on 26 July onward.

Earlier this week the US Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) lifted a ban on flights by US airlines to Ben Gurion, Israel’s main hub.

Israel had criticized the FAA decision, saying the airport was safe.

The FAA had imposed the ban in response to a Palestinian rocket that struck a building 2 km (1 mile) from the airport. Israel said the damage was debris from a mid-air rocket interception by its Iron Dome missile defence system.

Palestinian militants have fired hundreds of rockets into Israel’s heartland during two weeks of conflict, but Israeli authorities have emphasised the success of the Iron Dome in protecting Ben Gurion Airport, as well as a precautionary narrowing of air corridors.— Reuters

A few days ago, I ran into a young medical doctor from my native town at a social gathering. As he is a young man of progressive idea, he writes some articles and poems while he is running a private clinic. And being a bookworm, he reads a lot. He told me that the New Light of Myanmar was changing both in form and substance and the daily came to give priority to reader’s satisfaction.

“Besides the veteran writers and scholars, new writers turn up and their efforts will not come to fruition as long as younger generation fail to deep slumber. Whenever I ask (some) young graduates including those who majored in English, ‘Do you take a subscription to an English paper or do you read English periodicals?’ Their answer is the question is the only word—‘NO’.

The mindset of (some) youths today is quite different from that of our past time. Indeed. Due to the education system of the past, only when we were in the fifth standard, did we begin to learn English, reciting A B C D etc. (According to the present education system, our children have a golden opportunity to learn English when they are in the kindergarten. What difference?!) Though we had to read only the Chevening Readers I, II, II  I and Composition without Problems and Brighter Grammar, in middle school days, our teachers inspired us to read English. As our native town is in the countryside, English publications were out of our reach. That was how if we wanted to read English paper, we had to go to the then Information Reading Room (now Information and Public Relations Department Library). And so, we came to be familiar with the dailies—The Working People’s Daily, The Guardian (both daily and monthly magazine) the Forward, even the OM (Open Mind) though we could not read them well. We did so because we were inspired.

When I passed the matriculation examination, I joined the Posts and Telecommunications Department (now Myanmar Posts and Telecommunications: MPT). In the department where I was working as a junior clerk, almost all of my fellow clerks were not graduates. However, more than half of them were subscribers to the Working People’s Daily or the Guardian Daily.

While I was reading at the Worker’s College, I noticed that most of the students never failed to read English publications including dailies, periodicals such as the Guardian magazine, Time, Newsweek, Reader’s Digest and so on. Thanks to the reasonable prices of the English publications, even an office boy or a peon could afford to buy them.

As we gained momentum in reading English publications, we started reading OM: The Open Mind and Spectrum, the journals of selective international writings which were published monthly by the Directorate of Information (now IPRD) under the Ministry of Information. By spending two kyats only, we gained vocabulary development and knowledge on public administration, agriculture and so on.

Torrential rainfall has caused floods and wiped out many nursery paddy fields in many lower parts of Myanmar during the monsoon period. Inundation can also have other negative impacts, including soil water logging and effects on plant growth. On many occasions, flood is followed by erosion and soil degradation.

Many farmers in lower Myanmar have to plant their nursery paddy fields again after the paddy fields were flooded, causing losses in their business. Therefore, Myanmar farmers need more agricultural subsidies in some years.

A greenhouse effect is projected to lead to an increase in intense rainfall and global warming. Sea-level rise is an inevitable consequence of a warming climate. Many major river deltas provide important agricultural land owing to the fertility of fluvial soils. A rise in sea level threatens to inundate agricultural lands and to cause groundwater to be saline.

Most of an estimated 70 percent population in rural areas is engaged in agricultural activities. Their livelihoods are being affected by flood, drought or landslides. These situations are pushing them into poverty and preventing them from liberating from the cycle of poverty. Therefore, the Myanmar agricultural sector needs the support of advanced technologies from planting to producing quality products for both domestic and international markets.

Aspirations for Future

By Maung Hlaing

A s climate change and agriculture are interrelated processes on a global scale, floods also contribute to the devastation of the agricultural sector in Myanmar. The factors of global warming, including temperature, carbon dioxide, glacial run-off, precipitation and the interaction of these elements, have some significant impacts on agriculture.

Keep abreast of the world, no progress can be seen as long as we fail to change their mindset and bring their attention to English periodicals and papers.

One may say that there are so many youths who are well-versed in English and there are those who pass the matriculation examination with flying colours. I do not mean such a handful of able ones. We need not blame others but we need to cultivate our new generation to learn more English.

Objectively, it is heart—breaking to hear that there are no English publications except a bilingual children’s Journal Shwe Thway published by the government sector while those concerned are guessing on teaching and learning English today.

Before I conclude my article, may I refer to your perspectives “Future of Myanmar is relying on new generation” by (Ko) Aung Khin on 22 July, 2014. May I quote his conclusion wordly. “Despite political or socio-economic challenges in the country, the youths themselves should focus on building their capacities for their readiness in making right decisions for their country through a common sense.” I agree with you but to my opinion, they may not face fully these challenges of the world where more people use English than any other language in communicating with each other.

It is very encouraging to see more contributors but we still need to launch a campaign to organize younger readers. If there is a will, there will be a way.

Amazon’s far-reaching ambitions, lack of profits, unnerve investors

San Francisco, 26 July — Amazon.com Inc’s message to investors has always been clear: trust in founder and CEO Jeff Bezos. But after more than a year of mostly disappointing quarterly results, that faith is being tested. Some on Wall Street wonder if Amazon may have bitten off more than it can chew. After an unusually busy first half of the year that saw the online retailer spend on developing everything from mobile phones and Hollywood-style production to grocery deliveries, investors are ready to see if curtail its ambitions and start delivering sustainable profits.

Or at least offer evidence that Bezos’ ever-increasing investments are going to pay off, rather than peeling returns for its main online retailing business.

“It does get frustrating when they continue to spend quarter after quarter and they don’t let the revenue flow through,” said Michelle Scanlon, who manages $3.5 billion at Manulife Asset Management and holds shares of Amazon. “I’m definitely ready for profits.”

Others argue that even when they continue to spend quarter after quarter and they don’t let the revenue flow through, said William Scanlon, who manages $3.5 billion at Manulife Asset Management and holds shares of Amazon. “I’m definitely ready for profits.”

“There has been steady improvement on the job front. Domestic jobless claims in the latest week fell to their lowest since early 2006, while monthly jobs gains have jumped by more than 200,000 in each of past five months, a level of strength last seen in the late 1990s,” said study author Matthew Aalsma, of Indiana University School of Medicine in Indianapolis.

“Teens speak more openly with doctors in private

New York, 26 July — Teens are more likely to discuss topics like sexual health and drug use with their doctors if their parents are out of the room for at least part of their check-up, a new study shows.

Researchers found the greatest number of health-related topics were discussed when parents were present for some of the visit but outside the room for the rest.

“The study shows that parents are important. It’s really important for them to be there to foster conversations with a doctor,” said study author Matthew Aalsma, of Indiana University School of Medicine in Indianapolis.

Bayer says Nexavar fails in breast cancer study

Frankfurt, 26 July — German drugmaker Bayer said a Phase III trial of cancer drug Nexavar in patients with advanced breast cancer did not meet its primary endpoint of delaying the progression of the disease.

The study, called Resilience, evaluated Nexavar in combination with chemotherapeutic agent capecitabine, in women with HER2-negative breast cancer.

Oral drug Nexavar, which Bayer is developing jointly with Agena, is approved for use against certain types of liver, kidney and thyroid cancer.

Study details are expected to be presented at an upcoming scientific conference.

New York, 26 July — Even if data next week shows a mediocre rebound in US economic growth, that might be enough to keep the stock market aloft at record highs and the Federal Reserve steadfast in its winding down of stimulus through bond purchases.

US gross domestic product for the second quarter, due to be released on Wednesday, is forecast to have grown 3.2 percent. Growth halved to 2.9 percent in the first quarter due to a harsh winter and spending cuts tied to the federal Affordable Care Act.

Still, some lackluster recent data on housing and capital spending, plus a mixed bag of second-quarter earnings, have raised the risk that even a moderate GDP bounce may fall short of expectations.

Indeed, Friday’s disappointing report on durable goods orders in June spurred J P Morgan and Goldman Sachs to shave their second-quarter outlook by 0.1 percentage point to 2.6 percent and 3.0 percent growth, respectively.

While recent anxiety over conflict in Ukraine and Middle East has somewhat kept a lid on stock prices, it has not spooked investors enough to prompt them to dump equities for bonds and cash.

“The market has been resilient to these setbacks. They have taken bad news in stride,” said Steve Weitling, global chief investment strategist at Citi Private Bank in New York.

The Standard & Poor’s 500 index fell 0.4 percent on Friday after closing at a record high of 1879.98 on Thursday, while benchmark 10-year Treasuries yield was little changed on the week at 2.48 percent.

There has been steady improvement on the job front. Domestic jobless claims in the latest week fell to their lowest since early 2006, while monthly jobs gains have jumped by more than 200,000 in each of past five months, a level of strength last seen in the late 1990s.

While more Americans have returned to work, Federal Reserve Chair Janet Yellen told two Congressional panels earlier this month she remained worried about stagnant wage growth and a low inflation rate that is below the Fed’s 2 percent target.

Those concerns have supported a notion that the Fed is in no hurry to move away from its near-zero interest rate policy.

On Friday, US short-term interest rate futures implied that traders priced in a 53 percent chance of a Fed rate hike in June 2015 and a 75 percent chance of such a move a month later.

“We expect very little new information from the Fed next week. We have been given a clear map going into October," Wieting said.

The Federal Open Market Committee, the Fed’s policy-setting group, is scheduled to announce its decision on whether to further pare its bond purchases — currently at $35 billion a month — at 2:00 pm (1600 GMT) on Wednesday. Reuters
Japanese comic exhibition opens in S Korea after court order

Initially scheduled to start on 12 July, the show was put on hold when the War Memorial cancelled a contract renting exhibition space to the organizers, citing a drawing in the original comic series resembling Japan’s Rising Sun flag, which arouses anti-Japanese sentiment in the country due to its history as a military flag. A Seoul district court on 18 July ordered the War Memorial to uphold the contract after the organizers complained. No such flag is displayed in the exhibition itself, the organizers had said.

One fan of Japanese animation who attended the exhibition with friends, 34-year-old Yun Un Hui, expressed relief that the event is going ahead, adding she had worried the War Memorial might not have been the best choice of venue.

“If culture gets tied up in politics and diplomatic issues, it’s hard on people like me who like (Japanese) culture,” Yun said.

According to the organizers, the show took the top spot in online ticket bookings for exhibitions nationwide as of Saturday.

The Rising Sun flag’s history as a military flag makes it a point of tension in South Korea, where anti-Japanese sentiment still runs high due to Japan’s colonial rule of the Korean Peninsula from 1910 to 1945.

54 French passengers die in Air Algerie plane crash: French FM

France, 27 July — French Foreign Minister Laurent Fabius on Friday revised upwards the number of French victims killed in Air Algerie plane crash to 54 including three with dual nationality. “The death toll is terrible: 118 passengers were on board, including 54 French, among them three with dual nationality,” Fabius said during a Press briefing with the Defence Minister Jean-Yves Le Drian and the Minister of Transport, Frederic Cuviller.

“Everything must be done to shed light as soon as possible (on the crash),” he added, stressing “it is still premature to determine with certainty the cause of this drama.” Fabius also pledged full mobilization to identify victims before sending them home despite “difficult material condition this zone is subject to a relative uncertainty due to the presence of certain terrorist groups,” he added.

Operated by Air Algerie, the Spanish MD-83 reported missing 50 minutes after it took off from Ouagadougou, capital of Burkina Faso, en route to Algiers on Thursday.

The wreckage of the Spanish MD-83 aircraft was found in the site and was transferred to Gao in northern Mali to be rapidly analysed and help to determine the crash, French President Francois Hollande said earlier in the day, adding he did not excluding any theory of the crash.

About 200 military officials including 120 French, 40 Dutch and 40 Malians have been deployed in the site “to secure the area, which is not one that risks immediate conflicts, and to prepare the ground for the arrival of investigators,” Defence Minister Jean-Yves Le Drian said at a joint press meeting. “Despite the lack of immediate danger, this zone is subject to a relative uncertainty due to the presence of certain terrorist groups,” he added.

French day care centres lack 120,000 educators

Berlin, 26 July — German day care centres need 120,000 additional educators for a good early childhood education, according to a study of the Bertelsmann Foundation published on Friday. That would cost Germany 5 billion euros (6.7 billion US dollars) yearly and the personnel expenses in the area would increase by one-third, as the Bertelsmann Foundation has calculated.

The analysis also showed clear east-west disparity concerning the staffing ratio inside Germany. Therefore, Joerg Draeger from the foundation’s Management Board required quality standards that apply throughout the country in the German federal law on daycare centres. According to the analysis, an educator must take care of 6.3 children in East Germany statistically, while an educator needs to face 3.8 children on average in West Germany.

In Bremen and Baden-Wuerttemberg, an educator is responsible for an average of three children, in Saxony-Anhalt, however, for more than six children. In practice, the supervisory relationship is even more unfavourable, as it said in the study.

In fact, educators could only spend 75 percent of their time for the kids, with the rest attributable to team talks, training and vacation, so an educator supervises in East Germany at least eight children and in West Germany five children.

For a child-friendly and educationally meaningful service, the foundation required that an educator is responsible for a maximum of three children when it comes to children under three years old, and the staffing ratio should be no worse than 1 to 7.3 for the age group of three years and above.

“Policies and practices should agree on nationwide child-friendly standards, so that all children in day-care center in Germany can have good educational opportunities,” Draeger said.

The Judge”, with Duvall and Downey, to open Toronto Film Festival

TORONTO, 26 July — “The Judge”, starring Robert Duvall and Robert Downey Jr, will open the annual Toronto International Film Festival on 4 September, the festival said on Friday.

The film, by “Wedding Crashers” director David Dobkin, follows a lawyer who returns to his childhood home where his estranged father, who is also a judge, is suspected of murder.

It was one of about 60 films unveiled by the festival on Tuesday when it announced just under a fifth of the slate for its 39th edition, but organizers at the time said they had yet to decide on an opening night film.

The Toronto festival ranks with Cannes and Sundance as one of the most influential in the world and also acts as a showcase for films hoping to compete for Oscars.—Reuters

Charlize Theron sparks engagement rumours with new ring

LOS ANGELES, 26 July — Charlize Theron was photographed wearing a flashy piece of jewelry on her left ring finger while strolling through the Los Angeles International Airport.

The glimpse of the new ring came just days after reports that the 38-year-old actress was planning to wed Sean Penn emerged, reported Ace Showbiz.

In the photograph, the actress, who was wearing minimal make up, was trying to cover her face with a white jacket. A diamond ring could be seen as she lifted her left hand. Theron and her boyfriend are reportedly set to tie the knot in her native South Africa later this summer. The couple is currently filming new movie “The Last Face” in South Africa, in which she is starring and Penn is directing. Theron and Penn had been friends for 18 years before they started dating each other. This will be the first marriage for Theron and third for Penn, who previously married Madonna and Robin Wright.

Bare burger burglars caught on security camera in Florida

ORLANDO, (Florida ), 26 July — Three bare burglar burglars of only in Florida is that not a tongue twister but the latest true crime. The break-in occurred at Doc’s Beach House in Bonita Springs in the middle of the night on Sunday, according to Lee County sheriff spokesman Tony Schall.

The three young men are seen on video roaming around the kitchen in their underwear and taking a case of hamburgers and some red bell peppers from the refrigerator, according to the report. Then they stripped off their underwear and walked around the kitchen nude awhile longer before leaving. Although photos from the security camera are being posted widely on the Internet, only two tips have come in, Schall said, with no one apparently recognizing the faces.

Investigators might never uncover the culprits, Schall said. Schall said officers suspect the three might have been tourists.

Pennsylvania parents locked son in car trunk to cure fear of dark

PITTSBURGH, (Pennsylvania), 26 July — A western Pennsylvania couple, accused of luring their five-year-old son into the trunk of their car with candy to resolve his fear of the dark, was granted probation this week, according to court officials on Friday.

Jeffrey and Danielle Lenhart were charged with felony child endangerment and reckless endangerment for locking their five-year-old son in the trunk of the car during three trips to the Idlewild amusement park in Lingonier, Pennsylvania, in July 2013, court records showed. They gave him a flashlight and told him to look for sweets before locking the trunk at the park, about 9.5-miles (15 km) from their home in Latrobe, court officials said.

They were accepted into the Accelerated Rehabilitation Disposition programme on Thursday in a deal approved by Westmoreland County Judge Richard McCormick Jr, according to Danielle Lenhart’s lawyer, Deborah Jackson.

“She recognizes the serious nature of what has happened and I don’t think we will see her in court again,” Jackson said of her client. The incidents came to light when one of the couple’s children was interviewed by child welfare officials for undisclosed reasons, according to the Pittsburgh Tribune Review.

The boy and another sibling, who is 4, have been staying with relatives following the charges, but will be returned to the home, court officials said. A younger sibling, 1, has already been reunited with the parents.

Upon completion of two years probation, charges against the Lenharts will be dismissed and records expunged, Jackson said.

A previous judge in the case did not want to allow the Lenharts to enter the rehabilitative program, but Jackson said she was pleased with McCormick’s decision.

New Zealander wins women’s division of Mt Fuji run

KOFU, (Japan), 26 July — Ruth Charlotte Croft of New Zealand won the women’s division of the 21-kilometre Mt Fuji running race on Friday, an event that drew 2,340 competitors this year.

The 25-year-old athlete scored her first victory and clocked 3 hours, 11 minutes, 44 seconds. Dai Matsumoto, 30, of Nagano Prefecture, won the men’s race, marking 2:47:45. It was his second consecutive victory.

Participants started at the Fujiyoshida city hall in Yamanashi Prefecture and ran a trail to the summit of Japan’s highest peak, which stands 3,776 metres. The race requires overcoming an elevation gain of around 3,000 metres.

About half — 1,020 — completed the run within the designated 4 hours and 30 minutes this year, which marked the 67th run, city officials said.

California woman ‘embarrassed’ by fallout from doll giving

SAN CLEMENTE, (California), 26 July — A California woman who spooked her small community by anonymously leaving porcelain dolls on the doorsteps of fellow churchgoers that eerily resembled their daughters told police she is embarrassed by the incidents, authorities said on Friday.

The dolls, some wearing fuzzy slippers or frilly gowns, turned up at more than a half-dozen homes in San Clemente last week, according to Orange County Sheriff’s Lieutenant Jeff Hallock.

Interviews with families that received the dolls led authorities to the local woman, who then admitted her involvement, he said. She has not been publicly identified.

The woman, who attended church with most of the girls’ families, said she did not mean to scare anyone, he said.

“She felt like some of the girls would enjoy the dolls,” Hallock said. She has daughters of her own who are too old to play with dolls, he said.

The woman said she wanted the dolls to resemble the children who received them and matched their hair and eye colour, Hallock said.

After delivering a few of the dolls, the woman noticed on social media that some families were frightened, he said. She stopped leaving the dolls when some parents called for a criminal investigation. “She felt really embarrassed,” Hallock said.

No charges were filed, and the sheriff’s department has closed its investigation, chalking it up to an act of good will gone wrong, Hallock said. — Reuters

London, 26 July — Didier Drogba completed a remarkable return to Chelsea on Friday, signing a one-year deal to rejoin the club where he wrote his name into the record books and spearheaded the most successful period in their history.

Two years after leaving Stamford Bridge on a high after his heroics helped them win the Champions League, the emotional pull of reuniting with manager Jose Mourinho proved too great a draw for the Ivory Coast striker.

“It was an easy decision — I couldn’t turn down the opportunity to work with Jose again,” the 36-year-old told the club website (www.chelseafc.com).

“Everyone knows the special relationship I have with this club and it has always felt like home to me.”

Drogba’s last appearance for Chelsea came in the 2012 Champions League final against Bayern Munich, where he almost single-handedly clinched the trophy for the London club, scoring the winning penalty in the shootout after powering home a header to force extra time. It seemed a fitting way to end his eight-year spell at Stamford Bridge where his dynamic game, combining power and pace, almost reinvented the traditional target-man role.

Drogba joined the Blues from Olympique Marseille for 24 million pounds ($40.8 million) in 2004, at the start of Mourinho’s first spell in charge, and scored 157 goals in 342 appearances, hoovering up silverware along the way.

He won three Premier League titles, four FA Cups, two League Cups as well as the Champions League before leaving in 2012. While Chelsea’s billionaire owner Roman Abramovich seemed determined to bring more glamorous centre forwards to the club, with Andriy Shevchenko and Fernando Torres all arriving with lofty reputations, the Ivorian proved immovable.

He remains their record scorer in European competition with 34 goals while his nine strikes in nine cup finals is also a record.

When he left Stamford Bridge two years ago to play for Shanghai Shenhua in China, many thought his career was on the wane with his performances in that final season fluctuating between brilliant and largely ineffective.

Mourinho has decided to bring him back, however, after a successful year in Turkey playing for Galatasaray that showed he still had something to offer at the highest level.

The Portuguese predicted in March, when Galatasaray played Chelsea in the Champions League, that Drogba would one day return to the Chelsea family and said on Friday that there was no emotion or sentiment involved in the decision.

“He’s coming because he’s one of the best strikers in Europe,” Mourinho said.

“I know his personality very well and I know if he comes back he’s not protected by history or what he’s done for this club previously. He is coming with the mentality to make more history.”

Liverpool new boy Lallana to miss start of season

LONDON, 26 July — Liverpool’s new signing Adam Lallana will miss the start of the season after suffering a knee injury in training, the club said on Friday.

Lallana, who left Southampton earlier this month for a fee of around 25 million pounds, was hurt on the pre-season tour of the United States.

The England midfielder, yet to feature in a pre-season match for Liverpool, does not require surgery but will not be fit in time for their opening Premier League game against Southampton on 17 August.

“No specific time frame has been placed on a return to fitness but injuries of this nature can result in a spell of anywhere up to six weeks on the sidelines,” the club said on their website (www.liverpoolfc.com).

The 26-year-old Lallana, a member of England’s World Cup squad in Brazil last month, is also likely to miss away league games against Manchester City and Tottenham Hotspur.

Ancellotti aims to end Real Madrid goalkeeper debate

MADRID, 26 July — Real Madrid coach Carlo Ancelotti said on Friday that he was looking to avoid the debate over who should be first team goalkeeper which affected the club last season.

Real Madrid count on two fine goalkeepers in their squad: Spanish international Iker Casillas and Diego Lopez, last season Ancelotti avoided the debate over who should be first choice by playing Lopez in the BBVA Primera Liga and Casillas in the Copa del Rey and the Champions League.

Whilst the strategy appeared to maintain both keepers happy, Casillas’ inactivity on a week by week basis did seem to affect him as he was poor in the final of the Champions League (which Real Madrid won despite his errors) and way below his best as Spain crashed out of the first stage of the World Cup finals.

Now the club appears to be close to signing Costa Rica international Keylor Navas from Levante, something which will complicate matters still further with either Casillas or Lopez likely to look to change club in search of more regular football.

“Navas is not a Real Madrid player,” said Ancelotti from the club’s training camp in Los Angeles. “At the moment we have the same keepers we had last year and Iker has just returned to training. We don’t have a problem with the goalkeeper and although there were a lot of debates about the issue last season, there never was with me.”

“I am going to decide at the start of the coming season who is going to be first choice keeper with this team,” said the Real Madrid coach, who is looking forward to the new campaign where his side will defend their Copa del Rey and Champions League titles.

“The club is doing a good job and the two players we have signed (Tony Kroos and James Rodriguez) are going to strengthen the squad. We have a good and competitive squad,” he said.

The Champions League title Real Madrid won last season was the tenth of their history and the coach believes that after reaching that historic milestone a lot of pressure will be lifted from the players this campaign.

“It is the start of a cycle that began last season. We have to continue winning titles and that is why the squad is more competitive,” said Ancelotti.

Manchester United sold misfit Bebe to Benfica

LISBON, 26 July — Benfica have signed Bebe from Manchester United in a deal worth up to three million euros ($4.03 million), the Premier League club said on Friday as the forward ended a difficult four-year spell in England.

Bebe was bought for 7.4 million pounds from Vitoria de Guimaraes in August 2010 by then-manager Alex Ferguson who later said he had not seen the player in action either live or on video before completing the deal.

He failed to impress at United and quickly became known as one of Ferguson’s biggest mistakes in the transfer market, making just two substitute appearances in the league.

Bebe was loaned out to Besiktas and Rio Ave before rebuilding his reputation in a third loan spell at Portuguese side Pacos de Ferreira.

The 24-year-old joins a Benfica side who won the domestic treble last season but need attacking reinforcements after selling Serbian winger Lazar Markovic to Liverpool.

“Everybody at United would like to wish Bebe the best of luck for the future,” United said on the club website (www.manutd.com). —Reuters
