President urges ministries and media to build relations based on ethics and mutual respect

NAY PYI TAW, 1 Aug—Government bodies and the media are required to build good relations based on ethics and mutual respect, President U Thein Sein told the Myanmar Interim Press Council in Nay Pyi Taw on Friday.

They exchanged views on cooperation between the administrative branch and the media, dubbed the “fourth pillar,” for the promotion of press freedom and journalism, strengthening of the process of handling ethical problems by the Myanmar Interim Press Council, measures for effective release of information by government ministries, ways to solve ethical problems of journalists through the press council instead of legal action, holding workshops for building trust between government ministries and journalists and enhancing the ethical standards of journalists.

President U Thein Sein said at the meeting that the government has recognized the importance of the “fourth pillar” in the nation-building endeavours and of press freedom in implementing a democratic system.

However, journalists are required to stand out as “respectable” media by preventing the abuse of press freedom and exercising it with responsibility, accountability and duty during this delicate transition period, the president said.

Press freedom should be exercised “harmoniously” taking into consideration stability and security requirements of the nation, the president added. As peace and stability of the society is maintained by the law, everyone including the media is required to abide by the law, the president continued.

The president admitted that there are weaknesses in releasing information of government ministries and promised to cooperate with the Interim Press Council to solve ethical problems of journalists through government ministries, release of information by the government and journalists, and the need to take the country’s security situation into account during coverage.—MNA

Myanmar Armed Forces discharge minors from military service, take concrete step towards ensuring zero underage recruitment and full discharge of child soldiers

By Ye Myint

YANGON, 1 Aug—Myanmar’s Tatmadaw, the Armed Forces, released 91 children and young people from the military service through a ceremony marking the handover of discharged minors to parents or guardians on Friday, signifying its commitment to ensure zero underage recruitment and full discharge of those under the age of 18 years in the armed forces.

The discharge of the group numbering 91 was the second mass return to civilian life after 96 children and young people were rehabilitated in January this year. It was the sixth time the Myanmar military released those who were recruited into the armed forces as minors.

The latest releases mean that a total of 364 children and young people had been discharged from the military since the signing of the Action Plan to prevent and end the recruitment and use of children between the Myanmar government and the United Nations country task force on monitoring and reporting grave violations against children (UNCTFMR) in June, 2012.

The action plan was renewed for the next six months in December 2013, said Brig-Gen Taik Tun, joint secretary of the committee for prevention of military recruitment of underage children, in his address at the ceremony held in Yangon.

He continued to say that Tatmadaw is committed to continue making sure all underage soldiers are released from military service and the armed forces are child-free. Actions had been taken against 40 officers and 229 other ranks for breaking recruitment rules, he voiced.

“Today’s release of 91 children and young people demonstrates an important step in ending the recruitment and use of children in the Myanmar Armed Forces”, said Ms. Shalini Bashahagama, deputy UNICEF representative in Myanmar. (See page 3)
We must all strive to keep this spirit alive, and unite and cooperate in implementation of peace process and democratic process

NAY PYI TAW, 2 Aug—The following is the full text of the monthly radio message delivered by President U Thein Sein.

My fellow citizens,

In this radio speech, I would like to give you the monthly update on the work of my government, and the developments that have taken place in our country.

We welcome the July meetings of the armed ethnic groups in Laziza, Kachin State to discuss the nationwide ceasefire agreement. Our government provided necessary assistance for these meetings. The Union Peace Working Committee, program committees, and all the citizens are expecting positive results from these meetings will lead to agreements to ensure the signing of the nationwide ceasefire agreement and holding of inclusive political dialogue will produce enduring internal peace.

Currently, we face many difficulties and challenges to sustain the reform process. The one area where there is general consensus among different political groups is for the continued sustainability of the reform process and the nurturing of a democratic system. It is undeniable that since my government took office we have resolutely implemented reforms. It is also true that during the three plus years since my government took office, we have faced criticism and encountered constraints. I speak with conviction that I have tried to find solutions to these difficulties with good intentions and with the desires of the people in mind. Every transition from an old system to a new one will encounter constraints and challenges.

I am facing my criticisms not with the ideas of the old system but striving to find constructive answers that are in line with the current political climate.

If we look at where our nation wants to be in the future, we are still behind in many measures. Addressing the weaknesses requires the efforts of not just an individual or group but of the whole society.

I have already spoken of my government taking stern action against anyone threatening the nation’s stability. In this regard, we are taking action against those who took advantage of fabricated stories to incite the recent violence in Mandalay. On behalf of the entire nation, I would like to convey my appreciation to everyone who vigilantly and dutifully maintained peace in Mandalay.

I had a very cordial meeting with members of dance, music, and motion picture associations on July 12. On the basis of the feedbacks I received from them, the government will provide both immediate and long term assistance to these associations in promoting the performing arts sector. Artists are jewel of the country. I would like thank them for the contribution they have made to the development and nation-building activities.

July 19th of this year was the 67th Martyrs’ Day. This nation has commemorated in remembrance of the assassinations of the Father of Independence Bogyoke Aung San and other martyrs. In addition to showing our sorrows, we can repay their sacrifices by following their example. The Martyrs’ Day ceremonies give us an opportunity to honor the nine martyrs and to salute their selfless sacrifice. If we look at the martyrs’ backgrounds, we see that they held different political persuasions, and were of different ethnicities, and religions. However, despite their differences they all shared a common grief of selflessness for the benefit of the nation and its people. We must all strive to keep this spirit alive, and unite and cooperate in the implementation of the peace process and democratic process.

In July, we drafted the Action Plan for Comprehensive Strategy for Stability and Development of Rakhine State in consultation with civil organizations, government departments, and development organizations. The Action Plan will be finalized soon. I believe the successful implementation of the Action Plan will improve the livelihoods of the people of Rakhine State. But the Action Plan will only succeed with the cooperation of the government, civil organizations, community leaders, and international organizations. The government will provide necessary assistance to all the groups involved with the implementation of the Action Plan, and I urge people of Rakhine State to act with foresight for the stability and development of the state.

Currently, we are encountering challenges developing the 3-branches system of government, that is, judicial branch, executive branch, and legislative branch based on the principles of separation of powers and checks and balances. During this process, it is essential we act to transition to a judicial system that protects civil liberties, transition to people-based democratic governance, and developing legislatures. Although every civil servant involved in this process is trying his or her best, it is undeniable that there are delays and weaknesses. On this point, I would like to stress the need for civil servants to complete their tasks efficiently without negligible forfending reasons to delay. I also urge citizens to consider these efforts a national duty and give their cooperation.

The current situation is by no means perfect. However, this is the time for all of us to join efforts to ensure the reform process that all of us have nurtured and value stays on course.

In conclusion, I would like to inform you that I continue to strive for achieving internal peace, improving livelihoods, and ensuring a brighter future for our children.

I wish you all good health.

Religious books on high demand in Mandalay literary market

 Mandalay, 1 Aug — Demand of books in knowledge and aesthetic genres is down in the literary market in Mandalay but the books on religious genre is on high demand, said responsible persons of the literary publishing houses from Mandalay.

“In the past, the demand of these genres declined in the examination period of schools. Now, the market is declining day by day. However, the sale of books on religious affairs is still higher. Both new and old books on religious affairs are on high demand. Especially, the biography books on significant persons can be sold on high demand in the market,” said U Tun Oo of Tun Oo Literary House.

At present, over 150 weekly journals and eight daily newspapers are being published in Mandalay. Publishing of weekly journals is on the regular trend but delivery of daily newspapers is gaining momentum.

Five daily newspapers are increasing circulation in Mandalay. The reader people recognize the presentations on hot news and knowledgeable articles of the dailies. In the future, the circulations of these newspapers may be higher and higher, he added.

Novels, cartoons and magazines that had target publishing for the book shops are also low demand. As a result, the publishers face difficulties in publishing industry.

“Nowadays, most of the youths who had read books in the past spend their spare times at Facebook and Internet. They have not much time to read. Due to declining numbers of readers, the book shops cannot stand for a long time. That is why the regular circulation of books suspended,” said a responsible person from Nyo literary house.

In Mandalay, Tun Oo and Naga literary houses distribute various subjects of books and publications to over 300 persons who deliver books and publications to the residences through door-to-door system and send the books to major cities of the central Myanmar.

Gas explosions in southern Taiwan kill 25

Taipei, 1 Aug — A series of powerful gas explosions ripped through a port city in southern Taiwan midnight on Thursday, killing at least 25 people and injuring 267 others, Taiwan’s National Fire Agency said on Friday. Firefighters and emergency personnel continue to remove debris, twisted metal, bricks and dirt, seeking survivors and possible evidence of what caused the blast. The military has mobilized troops and provided equipment and vehicles to assist with relief efforts.

Describing the disaster as the most devastating in the city’s history, Kaohsiung Mayor Chen Chu said investigation of the cause of the disaster is ongoing. Kaohsiung City officials said they suspect the explosions were caused by leaks from oil or gas pipelines that exploded and then caught fire.

The city’s fire bureau said Kaohsiung has asked local oil and gas companies — Chinese Petroleum Corp (Taiwan) and Hsin-Kao Gas Co — to cut off supplies to the Cianjhen District within 2 kilometers of roads, motor vehicles and homes were destroyed. Earlier Friday, Minister of Economic Affairs Chang Chia-yu suggested the explosions might have been caused by propylene gas. Kaohsiung Deputy Mayor Wu Hong-mo later said they discovered pressure in a propylene pipeline showed an abnormal drop late Thursday night, but he emphasized further investigation is needed to determine the cause of the blasts.

Meanwhile, both the ruling Nationalist Party and main opposition Democratic Progressive Party announced on Friday they will temporarily suspend campaign activities. Taiwanese voters will elect more than 11,000 local officials 29 November, including the mayors of Taipei and five other special municipalities.

Southern Taiwan has been a traditional stronghold of the DPP. The Public Security Bureau had said flights could still be affected until mid-August. Xinhua said military drills will continue in coastal areas in the southeast even after the air control restrictions are lifted.

Hundreds of flights have been delayed or cancelled since 20 July due to the air controls. In one of the most serious disruptions, authorities issued a red alert on Tuesday, resulting in a near shut down of 20 airports in eastern China for much of the afternoon. The military exercises, which political analysts say are larger in scope and duration than in years past, come as tensions with Japan and other Asian nations increase, although the government has called them annual and routine. Defence Ministry spokesman Geng Yansheng said the exercises are not targeted at any other country.

“We hope parties concerned do not to make groundless links. It is one’s own problem if he is suspicious of China’s military drills and takes it personally,” the official Xinhua news agency quoted Geng as telling a monthly news briefing on Thursday.

He added the drills are annual routine events aimed at strengthening real-combat training and military preparation, and improving the capability of countering various security threats.

Singapore risks business creed with foreign labour restrictions

Singapore, 1 Aug — Singapore risks tarnishing its business-friendly reputation by implementing new labour laws that require companies to prioritize hiring locals over foreigners for middle income jobs, analysts say.

From Friday, large and medium-sized companies looking to hire workers with a monthly salary below S$12,000 (US$5,696) must advertise the positions on a government-run online job database that only Singapore citizens and permanent residents can apply through. The job must stay open to locals for two weeks before the company is allowed to seek foreign candidates.

Many multinational corporations, from Google and Microsoft to Procter & Gamble and BP, use Singapore as their regional headquarters, attracted by the city state’s political and economic stability, low taxes and ability to attract talent from across Asia and the world.

Foreigners make up around 38 percent of Singapore’s 3.4 million strong workforce and the new rules are the latest in a series of government measures aimed at easing locals’ worries about the growing presence of foreigners on the tiny island.

Concerns about jobs were one of the most prominent issues raised by voters at the 2011 general election, which was the most contested since Singapore’s independence. The ruling People’s Action Party share of the vote also slipped to around 60 percent from 67 percent in the previous election. Economists said the foreign labour restrictions could tarnish the city-state’s reputation as an open and free economy.

“There is a risk that Singapore might slide down the scale in terms of how open it is,” said Chua Hak Bin, head of emerging Asia economics at Bank of America Merrill Lynch in Singapore.

Ten of 12 recruitment agencies polled by Reuters said filling vacancies has become tougher in the past year, a trend set to continue.

“Singapore’s very strict policy when it comes to hiring foreigners will further exacerbate the skills shortage in Singapore,” said Chris Mead, regional director at recruitment agency Hays.

China lifts air control measures caused by military drills

Shanghai, 1 Aug — China will on Friday lift air traffic control measures imposed to allow military drills and which have caused major delays and cancellations of flights, raising concerns over air-line earnings.

Flights in the country’s eastern, central and southern regions will return to normal once the restrictions are lifted. The Civil Aviation Administration of China said a statement posted on its website late on Thursday.

The Public Security Bureau had said flights could still be affected until mid-August. Xinhua said military drills will continue in coastal areas in the southeast even after the air control restrictions are lifted.

Hundreds of flights have been delayed or cancelled since 20 July due to the air controls. In one of the most serious disruptions, authorities issued a red alert on Tuesday, resulting in a near shut down of 20 airports in east China for much of the afternoon. He added the drills are annual routine events aimed at strengthening real-combat training and military preparation, and improving the capability of countering various security threats.
Israel, Palestinian militant groups begin three-day Gaza truce

GAZA / JERUSALEM, 1 Aug — A three-day ceasefire between Israel and Palestinian militant groups in the Gaza Strip went into effect on Friday, and negotiators were due to travel to Cairo to discuss a longer-term solution.

The 72-hour break, the most ambitious attempt so far to end more than three weeks of fighting, began at 8 am (0600 London time). The truce was announced in a joint statement released by US Secretary of State John Kerry and UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon.

An official in Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu’s office said Israel had accepted the US/UN proposal. A spokesman for Hamas, the Islamist group dominant in Gaza, said all Palestinian factions would abide by the truce.

“We urge all parties to act with restraint until this humanitarian ceasefire begins, and to fully abide by their commitments during the ceasefire,” Kerry and Ban said. “This ceasefire is critical to giving innocent civilians a much-needed reprieve from violence.”

Hours before the ceasefire was announced, Netanyahu, facing international alarm over a rising civilian death toll in Gaza, said he would not accept any truce that stopped Israel from completing the destruction of militants’ infiltration tunnels.

According to the Kerry and Ban statement, forces on the ground would remain in place during the ceasefire.

Israel and Palestinian delegations in the meantime will travel to Cairo for separate negotiations to reach a more durable ceasefire, the statement said. The Palestinian delegation will be comprised of Hamas, Western-backed Fatah, the Islamic Jihad militant group and a number of smaller factions, Palestinian officials said.

A senior US State Department official said talks could start as early as Friday, depending on how long it takes the parties to reach Cairo. Representatives from Israel and the United States will not sit across the table from Hamas, the official added.

The United States, European Union and Israel consider Hamas a terrorist group.

Egypt’s Foreign Ministry said it “stresses the importance the two sides respect their obligations resulting from their announcement of ceasefire so that negotiation can be held in suitable condition and achieve the desired results.”

Just over an hour before the ceasefire was due to take effect militants fired 11 rockets into Israel, one of which was intercepted by the Iron Dome defence system over the centre of the country, a military spokesman said.

Israeli strikes killed 14 people in Gaza, including eight from one family, hospital officials said. Earlier, Hamas rockets set off sirens in the Tel Aviv area and one was intercepted.

Israeli’s military said five of its soldiers were killed late on Thursday by a mortar bomb. Previous international attempts to broker a humanitarian truce were less successful, securing shorter periods of calm, with some collapsing immediately after being announced.

Death toll rises to 41, over 100 still missing in landslide in India

MUMBAI, 1 Aug — At least 41 people were killed and over 100 remained missing in Wednesday’s landslide which crashed on a village near Pune in the Indian state of Maharashtra, local media reported on Friday.

The officials have pegged the figure of dead at 41 with over 100 others being trapped under the debris. The landslide hit some 40 homes in the village, leaving only mud, slush and debris, when people were sleeping on Wednesday.

Some media reports said that part of a mountain had come down the village.

Heavy rain and strong winds slowed down the efforts to reach the engulfed thatch huts and brick houses in Malin village, about 80 km north of Pune, even though rescue teams worked through the night with floodlights and earth-moving machines.

“They are trying our best, but with every passing moment the situation is taking a turn for the worse,” said National Disaster Response Force (NDRF) commander Alok Awasthi.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi on Wednesday termed as “saddening” the loss of lives in a landslide in Pune, and said Home Minister Rajnath Singh would be visiting the spot to take stock of the situation.

Landslides are common in many parts of India during the monsoon from June to September.

Russia bans Ukraine’s soy, mulls ban on Greek fruit, US poultry

MOSCOW / ATHENS, 1 Aug — Russia has banned soy imports from Ukraine and may impose restrictions on Greek fruits and US poultry next week, Russian news agencies reported on Thursday, in what could be responses to new Western sanctions. Russia has already announced several bans on food imports following Western sanctions over Moscow’s support of rebels in Ukraine.

It has decided to suspend Ukrainian soy, tallow and canned imports starting from 1 August due to a breach of phytosanitary requirements, Interfax reported, citing the Veterinary and Phytosanitary Surveillance Service (VPSS).

Ukraine exported 1.2 million tonnes of soy in 2013, of which 141,000 tonnes went to Russia, according to Ukragroconsult consultancy data. Russia had previously banned Ukrainian dairy and juice supplies from 29 July. VPSS also may restrict fruit imports from Greece next week, RIA news agency reported, citing the watchdog agency.

VPSS has found signs of certain quarantine-linked pests such as moths in Greek nectarines, and US poultry imports may be suspended due to signs certain antibiotics were used, according to the reports.

Russia’s VPSS could not immediately be reached for comment.

Greek nectarines, imported US chicken meat worth 571 million euros in January through April, Interfax said.

The United States and the UN Security Council have urged both sides to halt fighting in Gaza to allow in humanitarian relief.

Israel has ordered its ground forces to focus on locating and destroying a warren of tunnels through which Hamas has menced its southern towns and army bases.

“Our understanding is that the Israelis will make clear to the UN where their lines are, roughly, and they will continue to do operations to destroy tunnels that pose a threat to Israeli territory that lead from the Gaza Strip into Israeli prop- erty as long as those tunnels exist on the Israeli side of their lines,” said the State Department official.

With Israeli forces remaining on the ground to pursue that mission, it could open the way for Is- rael to declare it achieved the main goal of its ground offensive and to pull troops out of the Gaza Strip.

Kerry, speaking to reporters during a trip to New Delhi, said the parties need to find a way to address Israel’s security concerns and to ensure that the people of Gaza can live in safety and dignity.

“All the people involved in this have strong demands and strong visions on what the future should look like. Israel has to be able to live in peace and security, without terror at- tacks and rockets and tunnels and sirens going off in the day,” Kerry said.

UN political affairs chief Jeffrey Feltman said it took a massive diplomatic push to achieve the ceasefire.

“The Egyptians played an important role, the Qataris played an essential role in helping bring the parties on board, the Turks were in touch with all sides. This was a collective effort,” Feltman told CNN.

Israel launched its offensive in Gaza on 8 July in response to a surge of cross-border rocket attacks.

Gaza officials say at least 1,441 Palestinians, most of them civilians, have been killed in the bat- tered territory and nearly 7,000 wounded. Sixty-one Israeli soldiers have been killed, and the fighting has claimed more than 400 wounded.

Three civilians have been killed by Palestinian shell- ing in Israel.

Italian weekly “Corriere della Sera Economia” on 24 July reported about business opportunities in Myanmar for the companies of the northern part of Lombardia, the so-called Alto Milanese area. A meeting was held on the topic in the town hall of Legnano with representatives of local institutions and entrepreneurs, associations, Myanmar Ambassador U Tint Swe and Embassy Counselor U Than Sain attending. The Myanmar economy is reported to be in strong expansion due to the reforms introduced in the last few years.

The 16 July issue of The Financial Times (Europe) featured an in-depth report about Rocket Internet, a German start-up that is led by three brothers. While Oliver Samwer is the public face of Rocket, he works closely with his brothers. They sold their first joint company Alando (the German answer to eBay) to the US equivalent in 1999, after a stint in Silicon Valley. Many people say you need to be complementary to be a great team, but actually we are all the beauty of Italy, he says. “The beauty of Italy is that you have an unlimited level of trust. While one is building in India, another can handle Russia, while the third might focus on Myanmar,” he said.

As reported by the Italian daily “Italia Oggi” on 16 July, the Italian Ministry of Agriculture and the Italian Ministry of Economic Development are preparing a technical document on the impact of zero-duty rice imports from countries such as Cambodia and Myanmar. The documents will then be filed with the European Commission. Italian farmers’ association Coldiretti demanded stricter controls on non-European rice. Italian Minister for Agriculture, Maurizio Martina, declared to be ready to cooperate with the Italian rice industry, which is currently protesting in many Italian towns.

Aviation fuel sent to Singapore for laboratory analysis after alleged fungus growth

NAY PYI TAW, 1 Aug—Following a media report that some foreign airlines had stopped buying aviation fuel from the Ministry of Energy on the pretext of microbial contamination and fungal growth in fuel, the ministry got the fuel tested in Singapore for laboratory analysis.

Fuels tests by Jetstar AirWAYS have said now that there is nothing serious to worry about the fuel.

The MyanMA PetroliUM Products Enterprise under the Ministry of Energy is responsible for distribution and sale of aviation fuel at eleven local airports, including the Yangon International Airport, with a monthly sale of 2.75 million gallons of high quality jet fuel to internal and external airlines, sources said.

The Myanmar PetroliUM Enterprise is determined to possess to be trusted with anything. As Abraham Lincoln stated, “you can fool all the people some of the time and some of the people all the time, but you cannot fool all the people all the time.”

The fault lies with us if we fail to take heed to the phase “Once bitten, twice shy”.

Myanmar and China to decide borderline in accordance with border treaty and protocols: Foreign Minister

NAV PYI TAW, 1 Aug— As the borderlines between China and Myanmar remain unchanged, although water courses of rivers and creeks in the border area tend to change, borderlines on the territorial map were decided out in the field after a joint-team from Myanmar and China inspected the locations of border posts by checking them with their original coordinates and information stated in the border agreements, Union Minister for Foreign Affairs U Winna Maung Lwin told the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw on Friday.

The minister was responding to a letter sent to the speaker of Pyidaungsu Hluttaw by Muse Town-ship Lower House Representative U Sai Bo Aung in protest of erecting wooden posts in Myanmar territory near Muse and Namkhiam Townships after the inspection of the joint team.

The joint-team inspected the alluvial land between border post S 61-1 and S 63 near Namkhiam and it was discovered that the Ruili River which flowed along the borderline previously, has changed its course. The stretch of alluvial land was 1,750 metres long, with 33 wooden posts erected there and the coordinates recorded, the minister said.

It was also discovered that a total of 19 farmers from Saikun and Kunsu villages in Myanmar were growing 42 acres of sugar cane on Chinese territory. The joint-team explained the location of the borderline in accordance with the maps and agreements, according to the minister.

Another disputed area between border post S 78-1 and S 79 on an alluvial land near Muse town also resulted ed from the changed course of the Ruili River. A total of 29 wooden posts was erected on the 1,790-metre long stretch of alluvial land and their coordinates were recorded, the minister said. According to the minister, a jetty, an electric power post and a building from China were on Myanmar territory, and a building, a house and 3.5 acres of sugarcane field of Myanmar were on Chinese territory.

The Union Minister said it is stated in the border agreements between the two countries that borderline shall remain unchanged although watercourses in rivers and creeks change and that the current borderline is in accordance with the 1960 border agreement.

The borderline lies between the two posts on the ground and the location of the posts were checked with their coordinates. It is discovered that the posts were erected at their original coordinates, according to the minister.

After a joint-team from the two countries inspected the locations of the posts, the territorial line was implemented on the ground, said the minister.

The map and border treaty and the protocol cited by the minister were signed by Prime Ministers U Nu of Myanmar and Zhou En-lai of China in Beijing on 1 and 13 October 1960 and the protocol signed by the Deputy Minister for Foreign Affairs of Myanmar U Nyunt Swe and Tan Jiaxuan of China in 1995.

The minister said that the joint-team just inspected the location of border posts and did not redelegate the borderline, but if the borderline is to be redelegate, the government will seek the approval of the parliament, the minister told the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw. —MANA

Japan, Chile agree to enhance cooperation in resources development

SANTIAGO, 1 Aug — Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and Chilean President Michelle Bachelet agreed during their meeting on Thursday to cooperate on resources development and confirmed expanding cooperation in disaster mitigation efforts between the two quake-prone countries.

“Chile is an important partner who shares basic values such as freedom, democracy, human rights and rule of law,” Abe told a joint Press conference after the talks. “We will strengthen exchanges in the areas of disaster reduction, science and technology, not just in economic affairs.”

The Japanese leader said he and Bachelet have also reached an agreement on collaborating in disarmament issues and seeking an early conclusion of the Trans-Pacific Partnership free trade negotiations.

Strengthening ties with Santiago is part of Tokyo’s efforts at securing a stable supply of natural resources. Chile accounts for around 48 percent of Japan’s copper imports.

Abe reiterated Japan’s plan to strengthen cooperation with the Pacific Alliance, an economic grouping comprising four Latin American countries — Chile, Colombia, Mexico and Peru. Abe said he received Bachelet’s backing for his government’s recent decision to reinterpret Japan’s pacifist Constitution to enable Japan to exercise the right of collective self-defence, as well as his idea of “proactive” contribution to peace.

Abe expressed his appreciation for Chile’s support as Japan plans to seek a nonpermanent seat in the 2015 United Nations Security Council elections.

The prime minister is on a five-nation trip aimed at bolstering strategic ties with Latin America. He has already visited Mexico, Trinidad and Tobago, and Colombia. His next destination is Brazil. Kyodo News

Sierra Leone declares emergency as Ebola death toll hits 729

FREETOWN, 1 Aug — Sierra Leone has declared a state of emergency called in troops to quarantine Ebola victims, joining neighbouring Liberia in imposing controls as the death toll from the outbreak of the disease topped 1,300.

The WHO on Thursday reported 57 new deaths in the four days to 27 July in Guinea, Liberia, Sierra Leone and Nigeria, raising the death toll to 729. It said the number of Ebola cases had topped 1,300.

“The scale of the Ebola outbreak, and the persistent threat it poses, requires WHO and Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone to take the response to a new level, and this will require increased resources,” WHO Director General Margaret Chan said.

Sierra Leone’s president, Ernest Bai Koroma, announced a series of emergency measures, to initially last 60 to 90 days, in a speech on Wednesday night. “Sierra Leone is in a great fight. Failure is not an option,” he said.

Disappointment, uncertainty after India blocks WTO trade deal

SYDNEY/GENEVA, 1 Aug — Several member states of the World Trade Organization voiced frustration after India’s demands for concessions on agricultural stockpiling led to the collapse of the first major global trade reform pact in two decades.

WTO ministers had already agreed the global reform of customs procedures known as “trade facilitation” in Bali, Indonesia, last December, but were unable to overcome last minute Indian objections to get it into the WTO rule book by the 31 July deadline.

“We have not been able to find a solution that would allow us to bridge that gap,” WTO Director-General Roberto Azevedo told trade diplomats in Geneva, just two hours before the final deadline for a deal lapsed at midnight (2300 London time on Thursday).

Most diplomats had expected the pact to be rubber-stamped this week, marking a unique success in the WTO’s 19-year history which according to some estimates would add $1 trillion and 21 million jobs to the world economy.

They were shocked when India unveiled its veto and the eleventh-hour failure drew strong criticism, as well as rumblings about the future of the organization and the multi-lateral system it underpins.

“Australia is deeply disappointed that it has not been possible to meet the deadline. This failure is a great blow to the confidence in Bali that the WTO can deliver negotiated outcomes,” Australian Trade Minister Andrew Robb said on Friday.

“There are no winners from this outcome — least of all those in developing countries which would see the biggest gains.”

But the momentum on trade facilitation reforms means it may be hard to stop and some nations have already discussed a plan to continue India from the agreement and push ahead regardless.

An Australian trade official involved in the talks, who requested anonymity to speak more candidly, said officials were exhausted with the process and that there was already discussion about major reforms at the WTO and the Doha Round of trade negotiations, which began in 2001.

“Some see it as a final trigger for ending Doha and pressing ahead with plurilateral reform, leave behind those that don’t want to come along,” he said.

India had insisted that, in exchange for signing the trade facilitation agreement, it must see more progress on a parallel pact giving it more freedom to subsidise and stockpile food grains than is allowed by WTO rules.

India’s new nationalist government has insisted that a permanent agreement on its subsidised food stockpiling must be in place at the same time as the trade facilitation deal, well ahead of a 2017 target set last December in Bali. —Reuters

Russia’s top general says Moscow committed to nuclear missile treaty

MOSCOW, 1 Aug — Russia’s top general, Valery Gerasimov, told the chairman of the US Joint Chiefs of Staff on Thursday that Moscow was committed to adhering to the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Treaty after Washington accused Russia of violating the agreement.

The accusations from Washington have heightened tension between Russia and the United States at a time when ties between the two former Cold War foes have plunged relations to their lowest level since the 1991 fall of the Soviet Union.

“Gerasimov reaffirmed Russia’s commitment to fulfilling the provisions of the treaty on intermediate-range rockets,” Russian state news agency RIA reported the general as telling General Martin Dempsey in a telephone call.

Washington says Russia has violated the treaty, ratified in 1988, which was designed to eliminate ground-launched cruise missiles with ranges of 500 to 5,500 km (310 to 3,400 miles). The United States has called for serious-level talks to discuss Russia’s compliance.

It was unclear whether General Gerasimov’s conversation with General Dempsey was part of those talks. Russia’s Foreign Ministry denied the US accusations as “unfounded” and said it had its own complaints against the United States over the treaty.

NASA unveils seven instruments for Mars 2020 rover

WASHINGTON, 1 Aug — US space agency NASA said on Thursday its Mars 2020 rover will carry seven instruments to conduct “unprecedented science and exploration technology investigations on the Red Planet, including one that will be able to make oxygen for humans to breathe someday.”

The instruments were chosen by NASA from 58 proposals it received in January from researchers and engineers worldwide, the space agency said, adding that the seven if chose will cost about 130 million US dollars to develop. “Proposals received were twice the usual number submitted for instrument competitions in the recent past,” NASA said in a statement. “This is an indicator of the extraordinary interest by the science community in the exploration of the Mars.” Among the most exciting is the Mars Oxygen ISRU Experiment (MOXIE), which will be able to produce oxygen from Martian atmospheric carbon dioxide. The technology “will help advance our knowledge of how future human explorers could use natural resources available on the surface of the Red Planet,” NASA said.

Another instrument on the rover is Mars Environmental Dynamics Analyzer (MEDA), a set of sensors that will provide measurements of temperature, wind speed and direction, pressure, relative humidity and dust size and shape.

The rover will also be equipped with Mastcam-Z, a camera system with panoramic and stereoscopic imaging capability with the ability to zoom. The instrument also will determine mineralogy of the Martian surface and assist with rover operations. In addition to Mastcam-Z, an instrument called SuperCam will be able to provide imaging, chemical composition analysis and mineralogy. The instrument also will be able to detect the presence of organic compounds in rocks and regolith from a distance. Meanwhile, an X-ray fluorescence spectrometer known as Planetary Instrument for X-ray Lithochemistry (PIXL) will be able to identify chemical elements in target spots as small as a grain of table salt.

Another spectrometer on the rover, Scanning Habitable Environments with Raman & Luminescence for Organics and Chemicals (SHERLOC), will provide fine-scale imaging and uses an ultraviolet (UV) laser to determine fine-scale mineralogy and detect organic compounds.

Smartphone management flaws puts users at risk, researchers say

VIENNA, 1 Aug — Security researchers have revealed two separate threats this week they say could put up to 90 percent of the world’s 2 billion plus smartphones at risk of password theft, stolen data and in some cases let hackers take full control of devices.

One vulnerability involves flaws in the way scores of manufacturers of Apple, Google and BlackBerry devices, among others, have implemented an obscure industry standard that controls how everything from network connections to user identities are managed. The threat could enable attackers to remotely wipe devices, install malicious software, access data and run applications on smartphones, Matthew Solnik, a mobile researcher with Denver-based cyber security firm Accuvant, said in a phone interview. A separate threat specifically affects up to three-quarters of devices running older Android software has been unearthed by researchers at Bluebox Security of San Francisco. Dubbed “Fake ID”, the vulnerability allows malicious applications to trick trusted software from Adobe, Google and others on Android devices without any user notification, the company said on Wednesday. “Essentially anything that relies on verified signature chains of an Android application is undermined by this vulnerability,” Bluebox said in a statement referring to devices built before Google updated its core software last year.— Reuters

Fly Fido to the moon in space send off for deceased pets

HOUSTON, 1 Aug — A Texas company is offering a unique send off for beloved pets by placing a portion of their cremated remains in a capsule and blasting them off into space.

Celestis Inc, which has provided memorial space flights for human remains since 1997, will launch its first commercial pet memorial spacecraft in October 2014 with the remains of a blue merle Australian shepherd, named Apollo, the company said.

The pet services, such as one dubbed Earth Rise, start at $995 and include having the pet’s remains flown into space on a commercial flight and returned to the owner.

The space send-off options go up to $12,500, which allows the pet’s remains to be launched into deep space or to visit the moon.

Memorial service are available before blast off and families can witness most of the launches, depending on location, the company said. “Our pet service flights are an idea that’s been a long time coming,” Celestis Chief Executive Charles Chafer said. — Reuters

BlackBerry opens up BBM to Windows phone users

TORONTO, 1 Aug — BlackBerry Ltd said on Thursday its popular messaging system BBM, or BlackBerry Messenger, would now be open to those using the Windows phone platform, a move that potentially makes the messaging service more appealing to its enterprise clients.

BlackBerry, which is seeking to reinvent itself as a more software and services driven company as its smartphone market share has dwindled, has been lately touting new BBM features in a bid to make it a more viable messaging tool for clients such as corporations and government agencies that are on the lookout for a secure messaging service.

The company, last year, opened the service to phones powered by Googles Inc’s wildly popular Android operating system and Apple’s iOS platform. The rollout to the Windows phone platform means the service is now available on all major smartphone platforms, making it a more viable option for those clients that are considering using it as a communication tool.

BBM was a pioneering mobile-messaging service, but its user base has failed to keep pace with those of WhatsApp and other rivals, in part because BlackBerry had long refused to open up to those other platforms.

While the messaging service still has over 85 million active users, BlackBerry in a bid to boost its relevance and cater to the needs of its core enterprise audience is now marketing it as a secure communications tool for government agencies and regulated sectors, such as financial services.

Last month, BlackBerry began to roll out BBM Protected, a secure messaging service tailored specifically to the needs of companies in regulated sectors.

The move is part of a broader push that has seen BlackBerry widen its device management capabilities to include devices that are powered by the Android, iOS, and Windows platforms.— Reuters
Australia gives Pacific Island nations over 3 bln AUD in patrol boats and aid

SYDNEY, 1 Aug — Australia will launch a new 2 billion Australian dollars (1.86 billion US dollars) Pacific Patrol Boat Programme that will provide new vessels to 12 Pacific nations to help them protect their ocean resources, Australian Deputy Prime Minister Warren Truss announced on Friday.

Truss was representing Australia at the 45th Pacific Islands Forum in Palau and said the new patrol boat program is in addition to Australia’s commitment of 1.1 billion Australian dollars in development assistance to the Pacific in 2014-15.

He said the substantial funding reaffirmed Australia’s standing as the region’s primary development partner.

“Australia is taking concrete steps to help protect the ocean resources of the Pacific island countries by extending the Pacific Patrol Boat Programme,” Truss said in a statement.

“At an estimated cost of 2 billion Australian dollars, the first new vessels are due to come on-line from 2018 and will enable participating nations to continue patrolling and managing their exclusive economic zones.”

Pacific leaders told the forum this week that illegal fishing was costing their nations more than 1.5 billion US dollars of lost revenue each year.

Truss also announced two complementary initiatives directed towards strengthening Pacific island countries’ maritime security capacity — a programme of contracted aerial ocean surveillance and the secondment of regional personnel to the Forum Fisheries Agency.

Snowden awaits extended asylum in Russia

MOSCOW, 1 Aug — Fugitive former US intelligence contractor Edward Snowden has formally requested to extend his asylum status in Russia for another year, but the country’s official decision is as yet unknown, a lawyer for Snowden said on Thursday.

“Edward still remains in Russia, and we have prepared and submitted a package of documents for the permission of the temporary political asylum for him,” Anatoly Kucherena told a local TV channel.

The Russian Federal Migration Service (FMS) must abide by “particular procedures,” Interfax news agency quoted the lawyer as saying, who added, “We hope that the issue will be resolved today or tomorrow.”

The FMS granted Snowden, a former US National Security Agency contractor wanted by Washington for intelligence leaks, permission for one-year asylum in Russia on 1 Aug, 2013.

Last month, Snowden said he had requested asylum from the Brazilian government, but the country’s Foreign Ministry later denied receiving his request.

The FMS has not yet commented on the potential extension of Snowden’s status, as FMS chief Konstantin Romodanovsky earlier called the issue “confidential.”

Snowden faces three felony charges including espionage after he unveiled a highly classified US intelligence project code-named “PRISM.” He has traded fire with Washington over the latter’s tapping of other countries ever after he arrived in Russia, where he has reportedly found a website maintenance job.

The United States and Russia have been at odds over Snowden’s extradition, with Moscow repeatedly denying the case, citing absence of relevant bilateral agreements.

One dead, one injured in office building shooting incident in downtown Chicago

CHICAGO, 1 Aug — A disgruntled employee shot and wounded his boss before fatally shooting himself on the 17th floor of the Bank of America office building in downtown Chicago on Thursday morning, police said.

The gunman, reported-ly a 59-year-old man, shot Arrowhead CEO, Steven LeVone, 54, in the head and torso and critically wounded him.

The victim was removed from the scene by Emergency medical technicians, and sent to Northwestern Memorial Hospital for treatment, a Xinhua reporter said.

According to local media reports, the company was downsizing and the shooter was not happy for being demoted.

Stefano Fredo, who was on the 12th floor when the incident happened, told Xinhua, “We received an announcement in the building, but we didn’t receive much details. They just told us not to leave the building, not to use the elevators, not to use the bathrooms, and that was about it.”

International experts reach plane crash site in east Ukraine — OSCE

KIEV, 1 Aug — The OSCE security and rights organization said its monitors, accompanied by Dutch and Australian experts, reached the crash site of a Malaysian airliner in eastern Ukraine on Thursday, two weeks after the plane came down.

Fighting between pro-Russian rebels and Ukrainian forces in the wider area has frustrated international experts’ efforts to get to the site to recover remains of the victims and investigate the crash.

“OSCE... monitors reach MH17 crash site for first time in almost week, accompanied by four Dutch, Australian experts. Used new route to access,” the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe said on Twitter.

The small reconnais-

ance team would make initial reconnaissance, so that they can start searching as soon as possible during a later visit,” it said. — Reuters

23 drown at Karachi beaches, 20 bodies recovered

ISLAMABAD, 1 Aug — Pakistani rescue workers have recovered the bodies of 20 people who drowned at beaches along the Karachi coastline over the last couple of days, a senior government official said on Thursday.

Shoaib Siddiqui, commissioner of Pakistan’s largest city, told reporters that at least 23 people are believed to be dead, and naval personnel and lifeguards of the city government had recovered 20 bodies as of noon Thursday.

Among them were the occupants of a vehicle that was washed away on Wednesday by high waves at Hawks Bay.

Several bodies were brought from the sea by navy divers on a rescue helicopter.

Those who drowned had gone to the beach at the end of holy month of Ramadan, escaping from the heat. Karachi has a long coastline and it is customary for people to throng the beaches during festival holidays.

Oil boat ran aground in southern China

NANJING, 1 Aug — An oil tanker ran aground in the Yangtze River, south of Nanjing, capital of eastern Jiangsu province, on Thursday.

The oil spill, which started at 6 am, has not yet been determined, but environmental authorities are working to contain it.

On his visit to the scene of the accident, a spokesman for the Ministry of Environmental Protection said that efforts were ongoing to prevent ecological damage.

The Yangtze River is one of China’s major rivers, and the oil spill serves as a reminder of the need for more responsible oil transportation practices.

According to the ministry, the oil spill has not yet spread beyond the area in front of the ship, which is still stuck in the river.

Aerial photos taken by a drone showed the extent of the spillage, which has covered a large area near the ship.

Mexico, US California agree to build new border crossing

Mexico City, 1 Aug — Mexico and US state of California agreed on Thursday to build a new vehicle border crossing to help boost trade, Mexico’s Communications and Transportation Ministry said.

Vice Minister Raul Murrietta Cummings and the secretary of the California Transportation Agency, Brian Kelly, signed a memorandum of understanding to build and put into operation the Otay II–Otay Mesa Eastern Border Crossing, the ministry said in a statement.

The objective is to “spur trade exchange between Mexico and the state of California,” the ministry said.

Otay II, which forms part of Mexico’s 2014-2018 National Infrastructure Plan, “is conceived as a high-tech border crossing for light and cargo vehicles, which will reduce wait times in the area, as well as have important environmental and health benefits,” the ministry said.

Some 2 billion pesos (about 153 million US dollars) will be earmarked for the 35-lane crossing — 27 lanes going north and eight going south — “which could begin operating by the end of 2017,” the ministry said. “As strategic partners, Mexico and California understand the great importance of generating more and better border infrastructure, the engine of development and competitiveness in the North American region,” the ministry said.

A binational group is to be formed to oversee the project for the Tijuana-San Diego border area.—Xinhua

Two new parties launched after split of Japan Restoration Party

Tokyo, 1 Aug — Two new parties were officially launched on Friday as the opposition Japan Restoration Party co-headed by former Tokyo Gov Shintaro Ishihara and Osaka Mayor Toru Hashimoto dissolved over a proposed merger with the smaller opposition Liberal Democratic Party.

A group of 22 lawmakers in both houses of the Diet formed the Party for Future Generations, and filed the report of the establishment of the new party with Internal Affairs and Communications Minister Yoshitaka Shindo.

Takedo Hirazuma, a former trade minister, heads the new party, while House of Representatives member Hiroshi Yamada is the new party’s secretary general. Ishihara, a lower house member, is expected to serve as the top adviser of the new party headquartered in Tokyo.

Another group of 38 Diet members also set up a new party which inherited the name of the Japan Restoration Party and filed the report of the party’s establishment with the government.

The Japan Restoration Party based in Osaka and led by Hashimoto is expected to merge with the 14-member Yuinotoh party led by lower house member Kenji Eda, in early September. Eda, former secretary general of Your Party, launched the Yuinotoh party last December following internal strife with Your Party founder and leader Yoshimi Watanabe.

Ishihara’s group, whose members are conservative, was opposed to the merger with Yuinotoh.

Chris Pratt wants to be role model to kids

London, 1 Aug — ‘Guardians of Galaxy’ star Chris Pratt says he would be happiest if he could be a role model to children.

Pratt, 35, who has a two-year-old son, said if his character from the superhero film inspires kids, it will give him more happiness than any success, reported Contactmusic.

“Right now, it means high profile, cool jobs coming up, big Press tour, and all the excitement of it all. But none of that really means anything.

The coolest things would be that my son can one day see this, and that maybe I can go affect some kids in a positive way be a good role model for them,” he said. — PTI

New York, 1 Aug — ‘Basic Instinct’ star Sharon Stone, who was rushed to hospital back in 2001 with such a severe pain in her head, said she felt like she’d been shot.

The 56-year-old actress has spoken out about her brain aneurysm and her fear as she arrived at hospital, reported Huffington Post.

“I called my mom and I said I’m calling you from the emergency room. I said, ‘I’m having a brain haemorrhage’. And she said, ‘I’m on my way, I love you.’ Click,” Stone said.

“Then I woke up and I had to learn to walk, hear, write, talk, remember and everything all over again. I thought I was dying for a long time, even after I came home.” Just three years later Stone found herself in a dark place, with her marriage to husband Phil Bronstein breaking down.

“My career was basically over, my marriage was over — I got divorced — my child was taken away. My identity too. I thought. I got down, down to it. And when I got down to it, it was like being a phoenix — I was burned to the ground,” she added. — PTI

creates feeding frenzy on Twitter, record audience for Syfy

Los Angeles, 1 Aug — Flying sharks chomping through New York City drew a record audience for Syfy’s “Sharknado 2: The Second One,” and became the most tweet-ed-about TV movie on social media, the US cable network said on Thursday.

“Sharknado 2,” which aired on Wednesday and reunited leading stars Tara Reid and Ian Ziering from last year’s campy hit “Sharknado,” drew 3.9 million viewers to become Syfy’s most-watched original movie.

The network added that the film also attracted 1.6 million viewers in the 18-49 demographic that advertisers covet.

On Twitter, Syfy, a unit of Comcast Corp’s NBCUniversal, said “Sharknado 2” garnered 1 billion impressions across conversations on the micro-blogging site, and was also among the top trending topics of Wednesday evening. In the movie, an aerial shark attack causes large scale destruction across Manhattan. It features numerous cameos including “Today” show hosts Matt Lauer and Al Roker and country music singer Billy Ray Cyrus.

Last year’s “Sharknado” became a surprise hit for US cable channel Syfy after attracting a cult audience drawn to the film’s low-budget special effects about a hurricane that unleashes hungry sharks on Los Angeles. — Reuters
Spring Airlines starts Japan flight services after 2 delays

CHIBA, (Japan), 1 Aug — The Japanese unit of Chinese budget carrier Spring Airlines Co commenced three domestic routes on Friday after twice postponing the launch originally planned for May. The routes will connect Narita Airport, serving the Tokyo metropolis, with Takamatsu, Hiroshima and Saga airports with one daily round-trip flight for Takamatsu and two for the others.

The postponements were due to delays in the training of crew members and other preparations, according to Spring Airlines Japan Co based in Narita, Chiba Prefecture. “The long-awaited flight services kicked off. I hope to obtain customers’ trust through safe operations and warm services,” Spring Airlines Japan President Hiroshi Ugai said at an opening ceremony attended by 50 officials at Narita Airport, east of Tokyo.

The carrier aims for 70 to 80 percent seat occupancy.

Muhammad Ali’s ‘Fight of the Century’ gloves sell for nearly $400,000

Reuters

DALLAS, 1 Aug — The gloves that boxing great Muhammad Ali wore in his legendary 1971 fight against Joe Frazier in what became known as the Fight of the Century sold at auction on Thursday for almost $400,000 (£237,040).

An anonymous bidder bought the gloves for $388,375 at the auction run by Texas-based Heritage Auctions at the National Sports Collectors Convention in Cleveland. Heritage previously auctioned a set of gloves Ali wore to claim his first World Championship in 1964 for $836,500.

The Fight of the Century, in New York’s Madison Square Garden, was the first of three fights between Ali and Frazier during the 1970s.

In 1971, Frazier officially held the title of Heavyweight Champion of the World. Ali had been stripped of the title he had held since the 1964 bout against Sonny Liston because of his refusal to participate in the Vietnam War-era draft.

The 8 March fight against Frazier was Ali’s second after returning to the ring following a 3½-year absence. Ali’s conviction had just been overturned earlier in 1971 by the US Supreme Court and his boxing license was reinstated.

“It was a controversial fight at a controversial time in America and the bout took on distinctly political and cultural overtones,” Chris Ivy, director of sports auctions for Heritage, said in a statement.

Frazier and Ali were each guaranteed $2.5 million, a record purse for the time. “The fight sold out a month before the event with ringside seats commanding a record $150, with even Frank Sinatra unable to get his hands on one,” Ivy said. Sinatra received a Press credential and shot ringside photos for Life Magazine.

Ali lost to Frazier but prevailed in a re-match at Madison Square Garden in 1974 and a third match-up known as “The Thrilla in Manila” in 1975. — Reuters

Soseki Natsume’s novel “Kokoro” tops 7 million paperback sales

Tokyo, 1 Aug — “Kokoro,” one of the best known works by Japanese novelist Soseki Natsume, has sold more than 7 million copies, the most among 3,000 titles in Shinchosha Publishing Co’s paperback series, the publisher said on Thursday.

Shinchosha first published the novel whose title means “Heart” in its paperback format in 1952. The work gained renewed interest in April when it marked its centennial since Natsume (1867-1916) released it as serialized installments in a newspaper. Shinchosha printed 100,000 copies of the novel in the past three months.

Novelist Osamu Dazai’s “No Longer Human” came second with about 6.7 million copies. Kokoro depicts the loneliness of Meiji era intellectuals through a story in which a man betrays his best friend to obtain a lover, and then feels guilty for the friend’s subsequent suicide.

Expect Chelsea fight for first-choice keeper spot — Mourinho

LONDON, 1 Aug — Petr Cech is ready to take up the challenge of competing with Thibaut Courtois for the position of Chelsea’s number one goalkeeper, manager Jose Mourinho said on Thursday.

Belgian international Courtois, 22, has returned to his parent club following a long-term loan spell with La Liga champions Atletico Madrid and will battle with the Czech keeper for the starting role at Stamford Bridge.

Cech, 32, who has been Chelsea’s number one for the past decade, is back from the dislocated shoulder he suffered in May and has featured in the pre-season games.

“Petr is working hard, he recovered in almost record time from his surgery and he’s ready to fight for his position,” Mourinho told Sky Sports television.

“Thibaut has just arrived...as the best young goalkeeper in the world, and they will fight. For me this is a good problem and I’ve never been afraid of making a decision.

“I prefer to be in this position than not to have good goalkeepers for Chelsea. To have Petr and Thibaut together in the same squad is a good problem for me,” said Mourinho.

“This is a club that wants to be strong and have real possibilities to compete for trophies so we need competition in every place.”

Courtois has been working with his team mates for the first time this week, having been given extra time off after the World Cup in Brazil.

“I just have to work hard and prove myself in training,” said the Belgian.

“We have to train hard and work hard together as one team.

“All I can do is play well and then hope the manager chooses me. It’s the same for everyone.

“I think I’m an all-round goalkeeper but I know I can improve at everything,” added Courtois.

Nigerian Okagbare blessed after romping to 200 metres gold

GLASGOW, 1 Aug — Blessing by name, blessed by nature, Nigerian sprinter Blessing Okagbare hailed a remarkable sprint double after racing to victory in the women’s 200 metres at the Commonwealth Games on Thursday.

The 25-year-old was in complete control of the final as her blistering speed took her away from the rest of the field and ensured she finished in a time of 22.25 seconds to win her second gold medal in Glasgow.

“It’s amazing,” Okagbare, who set a Commonwealth record of 10.85 to win the 100 metres gold on Monday, told reporters. “I feel extremely blessed, it’s not easy to get a medal so it is something to celebrate.”

Despite being full of smiles after romping to victory on a damp Hampden Park track, the blonde Nigerian was frustrated that she did not run quicker to join the likes of American Olympic champion Allyson Felix in the sub-22 second club.

“I wanted to run faster, honestly,” she said. “I went out in the final and I did not celebrate like I did in the 100 because I saw the time and it was a little disappointed.

“I had to balance the weather and two runs in the 200 is just really, really hard. I don’t know why they did that schedule.

“If we had another extra day of 24 hours rest and came back then I would have been able to run faster because I think I’m actually ready to do under 22 seconds.”

Okagbare, also an Olympic long jump bronze medalist, has the chance to cap her first Commonwealth Games with a third gold medal when Nigeria compete in the 4x100 relay.

“I am looking forward to it as long as we get to the final after the first run, Okagbar added. “I will come in for the final and if we get there then I will give my best for the nation.”

Egyptian sumo wrestler storms his way into ancient sport

IOZAWA, (Japan), 1 Aug — Sumo wrestler Osunaarashi was a large, muscular Egyptian teenager with a passion for body building when a friend recommended he try the ancient Japanese sport of sumo. But it was a hard sell.

“This sport is about two elephants pushing each other,” he recalls thinking. “I’m a body builder, man. It’s so ugly for me, I will never do it.”

Now Osunaarashi, 22, is the first Egyptian, first African, first Arab and first Muslim to muscle his way into sumo’s professional ranks, so proud of his heritage that he observed the Ramadan fast during a four-year spell in Nagoya.

This meant neither eating nor drinking from 3 am to 7 pm despite grappling with wrestlers whose weight averaged 150 kg (330 lbs) in temperatures up to 33 C (91 F).

“The food was not a problem, but water was. It was the hardest part,” Osunaarashi told Reuters in an extremely rare interview at his lonely sumo “stable”, as the wrestlers’ gym and residence is called, just outside the central city of Nagoya.

“Without Ramadan, I just have a small headache after the fight. But in Ramadan, in this tournament, every day I have a really strong headache that I never had before.”

Bulkling up is one of the principles of sumo, which pits two giant, glowing wrestlers, clad in loincloths, against each other. Both take place on a raised sand ring and the first wrestler forced out loses, with the outcome decided in seconds. Slapping is permitted, punching and hair-pulling are not.

Sumo tournaments are broadcast daily, but fight for audience with sports like soccer. It has trouble attracting new wrestlers within Japan as the rigours of daily life scare off enthusiasts. —Reuters
