ASEAN stands at a critical juncture of Community Building: President U Thein Sein

NAY PYI TAW, 6 Aug — The ceremony to commemorate the 47th Anniversary of the establishment of ASEAN which falls on 8 August was already held on Wednesday at the Myanmar International Convention Centre with an address by President of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar U Thein Sein.

In his address the president said, “Looking back at the past 47 years, we see that unity and cooperation have been the main strength of ASEAN’s significant progress in bringing peace, stability and prosperity to the region. It is the uniqueness of ASEAN that unity has been built through its vast diversities. I believe that this important spirit is the attribute of the community. ASEAN values and principles. It has guided ASEAN to overcome the challenges and obstacles during hard times.”

The president said that the Asia-Pacific region is seen as a strategic region of importance, with the unity of ASEAN having become more prominent over the decades. ASEAN Community building, he stressed, is based on the achievement of unity.

In this regard, Myanmar, as the Chair of ASEAN for 2014, has set the theme of “Moving forward in unity and cooperation to a peaceful and prosperous Community.”

“Today,” ASEAN stands at a critical juncture of Community Building. ASEAN is now transforming itself to become a comprehensively integrated regional organization, sharing the same values and norms with the common goals of establishing a community, comprising the Political and Security Community, Economic Community and Socio-Cultural Community.

Nowadays, we see changes throughout the region. We see the increasing awareness of people on democracy and good governance. We see countries in the region becoming more interdependent. And we see the information and communication technologies becoming affordable to people. These changes made positive impacts on people’s daily lives. I am confident that the ASEAN community building process is capable of enhancing such improvements and will make them sustainable."

For Myanmar as the current chair of ASEAN for 2014, we are “trying our best to establish the ASEAN community in the targeted time,” President U Thein Sein said.

“Myanmar strongly supports the people-oriented Community Building process to address poverty and economic disparity among the ASEAN member countries. This is also in line with Myanmar’s national policies which focus on eliminating poverty throughout the country, and with the United Nation’s Millennium Development Goals.

The Political and Security Community will lead to a peaceful, stable and prosperous region. The Political and Security Blue Print is a strong foundation for fostering cooperation on promoting peace and security in the region. It has also led to a broader participation of various dialogue partners for a comprehensive partnership in combating non-traditional security matters and transnational crimes, including human trafficking, money laundering, communicable disease, drugs, law enforcement and managing natural disasters and also in promoting the rule of law. ASEAN stands at a critical...

To realize the ASEAN Economic Community by 2015, we aim to create this region to become a single market and single production base. The ASEAN Economic Community will effectively contribute to ASEAN’s long term vision of narrowing the development gap and enhancing the equitable economic development among the ASEAN member states.

I believe that ASEAN’s on-going efforts on the Master Plan on ASEAN Connectivity and the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership will effectively contribute to this end. The Socio-Cultural Community Blueprint formulates increasing cooperation among ASEAN member states in improving the ASEAN region through its cooperation measures on disaster management and humanitarian assistance, environment conservation, protecting and promoting the rights of women, children and migrant workers, addressing communicable diseases and promotion of education.

ASEAN’s aspiration on the Community Building is targeted to be completed at the end of 2015. ASEAN is expediting efforts to reach this target in time. I believe that ASEAN will surely overcome any obstacle with its unity in spite of its diversity.

The people ASEAN faced profound sadness over the two tragic incidents which occurred recently. The loss of innocent lives with the downing of MH-17 and the typhoons Ramusun and Haiyan that caused a high death toll and loss of properties in the Philippines and Vietnam have been most tragic incidents. The Government and people of Myanmar offer profound condolences and heartfelt sympathies to the families of the victims of the two tragic events.

To prevent such tragic incidents in the future, we must work together to enhance cooperation and mutual understanding.

We have come half way through Myanmar’s chairmanship of ASEAN in 2014. Since the beginning of this year, we have been undertaking duties and responsibilities laid down by ASEAN. We have hosted Ministerial and Senior Officials Meetings. The 24th ASEAN Summit in May ended with success. The 47th ASEAN Ministerial Meeting and related meetings will be convened in a couple of days in Nay Pyi Taw. The upcoming Ministerial Meetings involve broad participation from ASEAN’s Dialogue Partners and I am confident that with the support of our fellow ASEAN member countries these meetings will be productive.

Let me reiterate once again Myanmar’s commitment to undertake the obligations of ASEAN and uphold the value of ASEAN Centrality as a responsible ASEAN member state. With this note, I would like to express Myanmar’s aspiration to move forward in unity with fellow members to realize our goal of establishing a peaceful and prosperous ASEAN Community.”

Indonesian court opens hearing on presidential election dispute

Jakarta, 6 Aug — Indonesia’s Constitutional Court on Wednesday opened a hearing on a dispute over the results of the 9 July presidential election challenged by former army general Prabowo Subianto, who lost to President-elect Joko “Jokowi” Widodo.

Prabowo filed a judicial review last month over alleged “structural, systematic and massive” electoral fraud. During the hearing, Prabowo’s legal team said the results “contain mistakes,” alleging the General Election Commission as the organizer of the election stood on Jokowi’s side.

They claim that Jokowi’s vote tally was inflated by 1.5 million, while Prabowo lost by 1.2 million votes due to the fraud.

“I feel hurt by the fraud practices, dishonesty and unfairness committed by the election’s organizer,” Prabowo, who showed up during the court proceeding, told the hearing. “If we are given a chance, we can present tens of thousands of witnesses to testify,” he added.

Prabowo also claimed that “foreign intervention” had a hand in determining the results of the election, but did not name any countries.

On 22 July, the General Election Commission declared Jokowi the victor of the presidential election, dubbing the most transparent one in the country’s 69-year history. According to the commission, Jokowi received 70,997,833 valid votes, or 53.15 percent of the total, and Prabowo 62,576,444 votes, or 46.85 percent. — Kyodo News

Philippine peace deal in jeopardy as Muslim rebels cry foul

Manila, 6 Aug — An historic peace settlement in the southern Philippines is at risk of breaking down as Muslim rebels accuse the government of going back on its word over a proposed law to create a self-rule for the war-torn region. The two sides, who signed the deal in March to end nearly five decades of conflict, are holding urgent talks this week to try to iron out the unexpected obstacles to what had been seen as one of President Benigno Aquino’s landmark successes.

A breakdown would risk a return to violence and a blow to hopes for an economic revival for resource-rich Mindanao island as potential investors in sectors such as agriculture and nursing wait on the sidelines for the peace deal to be implemented.

Large companies such as food processor Del Monte Pacific Limited, which has a pineapple plantation in Mindanao, and a food processor Del Monte Pacific Limited, which has a pineapple plantation in Mindanao, had said they were considering expanding operations after the deal. But most major foreign companies have held back pending evidence of a lasting settlement.

Under the pact, the main rebel group — the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) — agreed to disband its guerrilla force and rebuild communities in exchange for wider powers to control the region’s economy and society. A joint government-MILF panel agreed details of the region’s powers and relations with the central government this year, submitting a draft law for approval by Congress.

But the hitherto smooth progress has stalled after Aquino’s legal team made surprise, sweeping changes to the draft law which the MILF says contravenes the earlier agreement and would place unacceptable limits on their autonomy.

“We cannot accept this proposed law as it is,” Mohagher Iqbal, the MILF’s chief negotiator, told Reuters. “We will lose face if we agree to this. Their version clearly departed from the letter and spirit of the peace agreement, which was the basis in crafting the proposed law.”

Iqbal’s comments to Reuters are the first public indication that the agreement is close to collapse. Iqbal said about 70 percent of the nearly 100-page draft “Bangsamoro” law was either deleted or revised by Aquino’s lawyers, who reviewed the document for two months after it was submitted in late April for vetting.

A copy of the revised legislation seen by Reuters showed entire sections of articles on territory, sources, and government structure had been deleted or revised.

The peace deal — including provisions on revenue-sharing between the new region and the national government — was the product of more than 17 years of negotiations, brokered by Malaysia since 2001.

Analysts say the law appears to have fallen victim to recent legal and political setbacks suffered by Aquino, whose approval ratings have dropped after his flagship economic stimulus fund was declared illegal by the Supreme Court last month. He faces three impeachment complaints in Congress. — Reuters
Hiroshima marks 69th A-bomb day amid worries over Japan security role

Hiroshima, 6 Aug — Hiroshima marked the 69th anniversary of the US atomic bombing on Wednesday amid growing concern over the Japanese government’s move to expand the country’s defense capabilities, with survivors, peace activists and dignitaries brave rain to attend an annual ceremony to remember the attack and those who perished.

In his Peace Declaration at the ceremony, Hiroshima Mayor Kazumi Matsui stopped short of directly addressing the issue of enabling Japan to exercise the right to collective self-defense. He said instead, “We must continue as a nation of peace in both word and deed,” as Prime Minister Shinzo Abe sat listening.

At a later meeting with local atomic-bomb survivors’ groups, Abe was asked to repeal his Cabinet’s decision last month to allow Japan’s Self-Defense Forces to come to the aid of allies under attack byreinterpretating the pacifist Constitution, a move which was made despite polls showing wide disapproval among Japanese people. The premier said he will “make further efforts to gain public understanding” on the issue.

With the first rain in 43 years falling on the ceremony at Peace Memorial Park, just a few hundred metres from the hypocentre of the bombing, Matsui said, “Our government should accept the full weight of the fact that we have avoided war for 69 years thanks to the noble pacifism of the Japanese Constitution.”

Referring to several accounts of atomic-bomb survivors who were children at the time, the mayor called nuclear arms an “absolute evil that robbed children of loving families and dreams for the future.”

“Military force just gives rise to new cycles of hatred. To eliminate the evil, we must transcend nationality, race, religion, and other differences, value person-to-person relationships, and build a world that allows forward-looking dialogue,” he said.

Matsui also called on Abe’s government to bridge the gap between nuclear weapons states and the rest of the world ahead of next year’s review of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, the cornerstone of the international nuclear disarmament regime.

Matsui vowed that Mayors for Peace, an international antinuclear initiative with more than 6,200 members which he heads, will work with nongovernment organizations and the United Nations to stress the humanitarian impact of nuclear weapons and seek to outlaw them. The group aims for total abolition of such arms by 2020 through negotiations on a convention to ban them.

In his own speech, Abe pledged to “spare no efforts in working towards the total abolition of nuclear weapons and the realization of eternal world peace” ahead of the 70th anniversary of the bombings and the NPT review conference next year so that the horrors seen in the attacks on Hiroshima and Nagasaki are not repeated.

“As the only country in human history to have experienced the horror of nuclear devastation in war, Japan bears a responsibility to bring about a world free of nuclear weapons’ without fail. We have a duty to continue to convey to the next generation, and indeed to the world, the inhumanity of nuclear weapons,” the premier said. A moment of silent prayer was observed at 8:15 am, when on 6 Aug, 1945 the atomic bomb “Little Boy” detonated at an altitude of about 600 meters, killing an estimated 140,000 by the end of that year. — Kyodo News

Argentina rights activist to meet kidnapped grandson after 36 years

Buenos Aires, 6 Aug — A leading human rights activist in Argentina will finally meet the grandson torn from her family 36 years ago when he was kidnapped by agents of the country’s right-wing dictatorship.

Guido was born in 1978 to an imprisoned mother who was executed shortly afterwards by the junta that ruled the South American country from 1976 to 1983, in a case that has come to symbolize the struggle of families riven by the US-backed dictatorship.

The junta ordered that hundreds of children of assassinated leftist be handed over to families more sympathetic to the dictatorship. One of them was the grandson of Estela de Carlotto, president of Abuelas de Plaza de Mayo, a group that works to reunite families.

The empty seat is no longer empty,” said de Carlotto, one of Argentina’s best-known rights activists. “We still don’t know the whole story,” she said. “But he’s a good guy. An artist. And it was he who looked for me!”

The kidnap victim’s mother, Laura Carlotto, was murdered by government agents two months after giving birth to her son in a makeshift government jail. She intended to name him after her brother Guido. “It’s a positive match. We’ve found my nephew,” said Guido Carlotto. Guido, now a 36-year-old musician, approached the Abuelas organization asking for a DNA test due to persistent questions about his true identity, the group said. His adoptive name and other details of his current life have not yet been released.

The white-haired de Carlotto, beaming before the television cameras, spoke of “enormous joy”.

“No I have all my 14 grandchildren with me. The empty seat is no longer empty,” said de Carlotto, one of Argentina’s best-known rights activists. “We still don’t know the whole story,” she said. “But he’s a good guy. An artist. And it was he who looked for me!”

China’s police chief vows tough anti-terrorist measures

Beijing, 6 Aug — China’s minister of public security has pledged severe punishment and tough measures to crack down on terrorism.

Guo Shengkun, also a state councilor, made the remarks during an inspection tour between 1-4 August of northwest China’s Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region following a rash of deadly terrorist attacks there. He called for improved intelligence collection, integrated prevention and control measures, and better early-warning and emergency response capabilities so as to leave no loopholes for terrorists to exploit.

Guo visited local police and residents in Shache County, where 37 civilians were killed and another 13 injured in a terrorist attack on 28 July. Police gunned down 59 terrorists and arrested 215 others.

The minister urged officials to keep a clear mind on the grave, complicated and pressing nature of the current fight against terrorism.

He asked local authorities to rely on people in the grassroots, and to ensure that preventive and control measures are carried out in every household in every village.

US general dead, German general wounded in Afghan attack

KABUL, 6 Aug — A US general was killed and more than a dozen people were wounded on Tuesday, including a German soldier, US, German and Afghan officials said.

The US Army said late on Tuesday the slain general was Major General Harold Greene, a senior officer with the international military command ISAF. He was the most senior US military official killed in action overseas since the war in Vietnam, military officials said.

"These soldiers were professionals, committed to the mission," US Army Chief of Staff Ray Odierno said in a statement, referring to the soldier killed and wounded in the attack. Pentagon spokesman Rear Admiral John Kirby told reporters that "many were seriously wounded" and the gunman was killed in the attack, which took place on Tuesday at the Marshal Fahim National Defence University, a training centre in Kabul.

The attack raised fresh questions about the ability of NATO soldiers to train and advise Afghan security forces as western nations gradually withdraw. The US and German generals were on a routine visit, the Pentagon said.

A US official said the gunman fired on the foreign soldiers using a light machine gun. Afghanistan’s Defence Ministry described him as a "terrorist in army uniform." The German military said its general was one of 14 coalition troops wounded in Tuesday’s attack, adding that his life was not in danger. Seven Americans and five British troops were among the wounded, an Afghan official said.

HARARE, 6 Aug — A military spokesman said an Afghan soldier, US, was killed and wounded in an attack by a man believed to be in recess, though he said three Ukrainian soldiers had been killed and 46 wounded in action against the separatists in the past 24 hours.

Government troops have been battling the rebels since April in a war in the Russian-speaking east in the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights says the killing of all 298 people on board — an act the West said was too soon to say whether the high-ranking officers had been specifically targeted by the shooter.

Putin to chair high-level Russian talks in Crimea, defying West

MOSCOW, 6 Aug — President Vladimir Putin, senior government officials and many lawmakers will visit Crimea next week, two sources told Reuters, in a defiant show of support for Russia’s annexation of the Black Sea region despite tough new Western economic sanctions.

A source from the pro-Kremlin United Russia party said most of the 450 lawmakers from the State Duma lower house of parliament were expected to join Putin and Prime Minister Dmitry Medvedev in Crimea for talks on 14 August. A Kremlin source confirmed plans for the visit but would not elaborate, while a Kremlin spokesman declined comment. A government spokesman also declined to comment when asked whether Medvedev would join Putin in Crimea.

"The main message (of the trip) is political, to show that Crimea is an integral part of Russia and that there’s no turning back despite the sanctions," the United Russia source said, adding that all 450 Duma deputies were unlikely to make the trip since the parliament will be in recess. — Reuters

Ukraine keeps up anti-rebel offensive with nervous eye on Russia

KIEV, 6 Aug — Ukrainian government forces, backed by warplanes, kept up a military offensive to claw back lost territory from pro-Russian separatists on Tuesday while casting a nervous eye at Russian military exercises over the border.

Kiev’s military said government forces had clashed 26 times with separatists in the Russian-speaking east in the 24 hours up to Tuesday morning, while fighter jets had struck at rebel positions and concentrations of military equipment.

But it acknowledged that separatist forces had pushed it out of Yasnyuvata, a railway junction near the main rebel-controlled city of Donetsk that it seized from separatists on Sunday.

Tension rose further with Ukraine denouncing Russian war games near the joint border as a "provocation" and alleging violations of Ukrainian airspace by Russian warplanes and drones, as well as cross-border shellings from Russia. Defence officials said separatists also had opened fire on unarmed Ukrainian soldiers on Tuesday as they crossed back into Ukraine from Russia, where they had taken shelter from fighting.

Ukraine acknowledged on Monday that 311 soldiers and border guards had been forced by fighting with separatists to cross into Russia. It said they had destroyed their weapons before crossing the border, but the rebels said they had left them behind, enabling separatists to seize them. A military spokesman said there had been no casualties from the attack, though they hold. — Reuters

The United States and the European Union have imposed sanctions on Russia. Fighting has intensified since the shooting down of a Malaysian airliner last month, killing all 298 people on board — an act the West said at the door of the rebels. Russia and the rebels blame the disaster on Kiev’s military offensive. Ukrainian forces say they have been making steady gains and have virtually encircled the separatists’ second-largest stronghold of Luhansk, while rebels have declared a “state of siege” in Donetsk, the largest city they hold. — Reuters

Visionary Leadership and Cultivating A Strategic Mindset

- What are the biggest challenges facing the organization?
- What are the biggest opportunities my organization can exploit?
- What can I do to help my organization overcome the challenges and exploit the opportunities?

Ref : A Question of Leadership: What Does the Organization Need Me to Do? (The AMA Handbook of LEADERSHIP) by M.Goldsmith, J.Baldone, Sara McArthur

Characteristics of Transformational Leadership

- Builds on man’s need for meaning
- Is preoccupied with purposes and values, morals, and ethics
- Transcends daily affairs

Many successful business organisations have strategic planning and well-adopted policies which are appropriate with any political situation and changing trends. Times are changing. A far-sighted company management can create a policy that will work in the long run even without the same managers. Moreover, policies should be adopted by experts and those with professional expertise in the respective sector. If successive management changes policies one after another, it will be very difficult to acquire a stable implementation. Instead it is better for the new management to implement the long-term plan adopted by experts.

At the state-level, the policy of a country can be recognized as a political system of that country. A country with strong policies or a political system will not easily deviate from its path as the policy or system has been formed on common ground.

Therefore, every organisation, institution or country needs capable leaders who can sustain the momentum of development in their country under any circumstances. It is not about individuals — egos should stay behind to ensure policy for sustainable development.

“Two thumbs up for Myanmar Railway”

For the last 6 months, I’ve been talking to about 100 tourists at Mahabandula Garden and also on the streets. Mostly Europeans, Americans and Japa- nese. They all don’t mind to pay admission fees to go to places like, Shwedagon, Bagan, Inay, and public parks. Everybody has to pay some kind of fees to go to places like Empire State building in New York, Eiffel Tower in Paris and Taj Mahal in India. What they do mind is that, they have to pay higher charges to take Expresses (long distant buses), ferries, trains, boats and flights. No other country in the world charges extra to tourists for taking public transportations. In those transportations, they do not get special treatments, yet they are over charged as much as 7600 kts on one trip to Bagan. (10400 kts for locals and 18000 kts for tourists).

Bangkok, Thailand has reached 16 millions tourists in 2014 despite of political unrest. Myanmar is anticipation to reach 3 million by the end of this year. Can you imagine that one tourist would spend $1000 while he/she is here? It would be 3 billion dollars foreign income for our country in 2014, spreading from guest houses, hotels, to street vendors, gift shops, restau- rants and taxi drivers.

Some tourists asked me about who are benefit- ed those extra charges? Private bus company owners? Or the government? These are the facts I learned from tourists. 1. Myanmar is much cleaner and safer than India. 2. Myanmar people are kind, helpful, friendly and respectful. 3. They all want to come back again or recommend their friends to visit Myanmar.

Myanmar Railway (MR) took the first step and charges the same fare to locals or tourists on any trips. I am so proud of you Myanmar Railway for doing the right thing. And now the question is...When will the rest of those follow the suit? After all we need to make these tourists keep on coming in order to get foreign income, don’t we? Thank you Myanmar Railway. Let’s do what we can to boost the economy.

Amarapura reached the height of its glory and greatness under the rule of its founder Bodawpaya [Bawden Min] who lived longest—75 years and reigned longest, 37 years among the kings of both early and late Konbaung dynasties. Having established his capital city [Naypyidaw], built his palace city and residing palace itself much to his full satisfaction, Bodawpaya turned to full absolute monarchy standard.

But he was under the guidance of his mentors-tutor Amatkya U Paw U whom he raised to the rank of Mingyi Thetthaw Shwe [royal tutor]. But inspite of many awards, rewards, titles and properties and munificences, the king showered upon him for his wisdom, prudence in diplomacy, statescraft and to rule like settling difficult and delicate affairs of the state, U Paw U never failed to point out any mistake or wrong doing when his pupil king committed knowingly or unknowingly.

A collected supplications of U Paw U to King Bodawpaya regarding the other matters were recorded and compiled in book form entitled “U Paw U Shout Htone” or “The Young King, Myitzyu Kyan” by Mingyi Minhla Maha Uzana. We can gain a clear picture of “Amarapura” of that time by reading this book.

To illustrate Bodawpaya’s attempt to maintain an absolute monarch according to his whims and fancy, and Amatkya U Paw U’s guide to control the king and steer him on the right path, we may cite four cases from this article:

The first case was that when the king issued his order to use 8 lakhs of silver from Thathameda Revenue for making an emerald studded gold craddle for his grandson baby Prince Nyankawkhan, U Paw U strongly protested. His royal master was very much angry and so he dismissed U Paw U and exiled him to Theinppi and kept him under detention. U Paw U did not lose his heart. He composed six stanzas of rato poems in which he expressed different kinds of revenue and their proper uses. Thathameda revenue should not be used for personal matters. He quoted the Law Book “Raja Kama Atumghani”. After reading U Paw U’s six stanzas of rato supplication King Bodawpaya realized his mistake and returned the 8 lakhs of silver to Thathameda revenue. He admired U Paw U’s honesty and faithful service and of his life, dared to point out his royal master’s mistake. U Paw U was recalled and reinstated.

The second case was when U Paw U summoned King Bodawpaya to appear in the Law Court for a lawsuit in a land demarcation dispute in which the king was indirectly involved. In the district of Ratantarheikha [Shwebo] some land owners U Paw U mistakenly included commoners’ lands in the list of royal lands, and when land demarcations were carried out, commoners’ lands were confiscated. Some peasants and farmers who were displeased with the actions of King Bodawpaya came to the Naypyitaw and lodged a complaint to the court. No judge dared take up this complaint because royal surveyors represented the king and thus the king himself was involved. At this juncture, U Paw U stepped in. He is- tigated the case very carefully. He directed the court to examine the complaints and demand the royal court to settle it appropriately.

U Paw U received the Chinese delegation at the court and accorded them with due diplomatic treatment. After hearing their complaint and demand he told them that the Chinese delegation put the demand for compensation for the fire-destroyed two palace buildings, and capture and surrender of Shwe Kyi, on the principle of friendship, reciprocity and self-help Myanmar relation.

The fourth case proved for more skilful and correct timing of U Paw U’s diplomacy and tells us the court custom of Amarapura of Bodawpaya’s time. One day in mid-monsoon season, a sudden gust of wind blew down the two white umbrellas in the Sihasana Throne Room. The king gave the umbrellas to the king on his behalf.

“Oh, Amatkya U Paw U, your report lasted nearly an hour with your eloquent story-telling. It is already past midnight. Your report is not a sleeping pill. If the white umbrella fell down, just put them up. I announce this royal audience is close.”

“Time, place and circumstances well chosen by yourself. You went to the king such a serious les majeste case, without harm and trouble was indeed a diplomatic tour de force.”

We can sketch the daily course of Amarapura capital city by reading this book. The “Shout Htone” of U Paw U’s accounts of his royal duties were drawn up with complete confidence and accuracy. He presented his observations of the situations and settlements and his wise prompt responses to the situations were recorded by court dispatchers and chroniclers. After serving three royal masters free of Amarapura under five full reigns at the ripe age of 79 years.

As instructed by him, his surviving family members put his dead body in a coffin with two holes through which his two open hands were stretched out. His last royal master King Shwebo Min, who came to pay his last respect to his dead body, thought that the court jester U Paw U remains a jester in death. But Sasanabang Sayadaw Head Monk explained to the king that “Amatkya U Paw U was giving us a dhamma lesson.” “When we die, we can take noth- ing with us. We can see U Paw U’s tomb in Amarapura. There is a middle size pagoda known as “U Paw U Phaya” near Tantze town near Shwebo. It is not guilt but copper which only U Paw U’s “Shout Htone” depicted the court life of Amarapura, but also in the contemporaneous writings of Myanmar poets and chronicles Amarapura and Paukphaw Myanmar.

At one late evening royal audience, many state affairs were reported to the king. The king himself was long lasting since an- imal horde rule in the whole court turned to him in urgent tone saying that he had one very important matter to report to His Majesty. The king and the whole court turned to him with tense attention.

The third case was U Paw U’s honesty and faithful service and of his life, dared to point out his royal master’s mistake. U Paw U remains a jester in death. Ceasefire agreed in Lebanese border town battle

BEIRUT, 6 Aug — The Lebanese army and Islamist militants agreed a 24-hour ceasefire on Tuesday after four days of fighting triggered by the rebels’ seizure of a border town, in the most serious spillover of Syria’s three-year civil war into Lebanon.

A security source said the ceasefire would allow time for a mediator to investigate the fate of 22 soldiers missing since the militants seized the town of Arsal on Saturday and to help evacuate civilians, including those wounded in the conflict. “It is like a humanitarian ceasefire,” he told Reuters. The ceasefire, which came into force at 7 pm (12.00 pm EDT), was broken briefly late in the evening when an army position came under fire but calm quickly returned, the source added.

“Clashes erupted but now they have ended. The ceasefire is still on, it did not collapse. What happened was to be expected due to differences between the fighters,” he said.

The source said the militants had suffered big losses in the fighting, adding he expected them to leave Arsal before the ceasefire ended.

The militants have been identified by officials as members of the Nusra Front, al-Qaeda’s branch in Syria, and of the Islamic State, which has seized large areas of Iraq and Syria.

Rebel sources told Reuters several members of the Islamic State had been killed in the Arsal fighting, including senior leader Abu Hassan al-Homsy, who had been in charge of setting up booby traps and explosions. Another leader of Jordanian origin was also killed in the fighting, the rebel sources said.

At least 17 Lebanese soldiers have been killed in the last few days of violence in and around Arsal, though there has been no sign of the conflict spreading to other border towns. It is unclear how many militants and civilians have been killed, though death tolls given by security officials and a doctor indicate it is in the dozens.

Asia shares worn away by Wall St, oil near nine-month low

SYDNEY, 6 Aug — Asian stocks fell broadly on Wednesday while the US dollar held firm after a slump on Wall Street and tensions over Ukraine smothered markets with a mood of risk aversion.

Geopolitical concerns overshadowed upbeat US economic data which included a spike in service-sector activity to a nine-year peak and a surprisingly large increase in factory orders.

Yet there was potentially positive news for the global economic outlook as oil prices continued their slide, with Brent crude hitting its lowest in nine months. Higher energy prices essentially act as a tax on consumers and businesses, so the drop should give a fillip to spending power and demand.

For now, the drag from Wall Street was too much for regional markets and MSCI’s broadest index of Asia-Pacific shares outside Japan slipped 0.4 percent.

Europe also looked like opening down, with spreadbets predicting losses of between 0.7 percent and 1 percent for the FTSE 100, DAX and CAC 40.

German industrial orders posted their biggest monthly fall since September 2011 in June as geopolitical developments and risks made companies more cautious about taking out contracts, data from the Economy Ministry showed on Wednesday. In China, the CSI300 of the leading Shanghai and Shenzhen A-share pared its biggest early losses to be down 0.2 percent.

Japanese Topix gave up 0.97 percent, while the Nikkei fell 1 percent. Index heavyweight SoftBank shed 3.6 percent on reports its US subsidiary Sprint had dropped a bid to acquire No 4 US carrier T-Mobile because of regulatory hurdles.

Sprint’s shares slid 11 percent after hours, while T-Mobile Inc lost 8 percent. In another failed bid, Twenty-First Century Fox, the media company controlled by Rupert Murdoch, said it had withdrawn its offer to buy Time Warner Inc.

Shares of Fox jumped, gaining 8.6 percent in after-hours trading, while Time Warner shares fell over 11 percent.

The Dow had already dropped 0.84 percent on Tuesday, while the S&P 500 lost 0.97 percent and the Nasdaq 0.71 percent. All 10 S&P 500 sectors ended lower, led by a 2.1 percent drop in energy stocks. — Reuters

Second Ebola patient wheeled into Atlanta hospital for treatment

ATLANTA, 6 Aug — An American missionary stricken with Ebola in West Africa wore a protective white suit on Tuesday as she was wheeled on a stretcher into the Atlanta hospital where doctors will try to save her and a fellow aid worker from the deadly virus. Nancy Writebol, 59, arrived in the United States after being flown overnight from Liberia and will be treated by infectious disease specialists at Emory University Hospital, according to Christian missionary group SIM USA.

She will be in the same isolation ward as Kent Brantly, 33, an Ebola-infected American doctor who was able to walk into the hospital when he arrived by ambulance on Saturday.

The pair, who served on a joint team in Monrovia run by Christian aid groups SIM USA and Samaritan’s Purse, are believed to be the first Ebola patients treated in the United States.

“We are tremendously relieved that our mother is back in the US,” Jeremy Writebol, one of the missionary’s two sons, said in a statement.

Health officials have said the virus does not pose a significant threat to the American public.

There is no proven cure for the contagious hemorrhagic disease, which has killed nearly 900 people in Africa since February in the worst Ebola outbreak on record. The death rate in the current epidemic is about 60 percent, experts say.— Reuters

Midlife high blood pressure tied to later-life mental decline

NEW YORK, 6 Aug — People with high blood pressure in middle age are more likely to experience cognitive decline — a common precursor of dementia — in their 70s and 80s, according to new research.

The US study spanning 20 years found steeper mental decline at the end of that period among people who started out with hypertension or even slightly elevated blood pressure — so-called prehypertension — in their 50s and 60s.

These new results strengthen a link experts already knew about, lead author Dr Rebecca F Gottes-

man told Reuters Health.

High blood pressure has been tied to an increased risk of stroke and dementia in other studies.

“Basically the amount of decline we see associated with hypertension is pretty modest, but this amount is equivalent to being 2.7 years older at the start compared to not having it,” noted Gottesman, from the neurology department at Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in Baltimore, Maryland.

“Even having prehypertension, which often isn’t treated, was associated with some cognitive decline,” Gottesman said.

She and her team used blood pressure and mental performance data from the early 1990s for over 13,000 adults between ages 48 and 67 years old. More than 5,000 remained alive and available for more testing between 2011 and 2013.

After the first round of mental tests and blood pressure readings in 1990-

92, the verbal, memory and math tests were administered two more times, in 1996-1998 and in 2011-

2013.

Researchers divided the participants into three groups. Those with a reading of less than 120 milliumbers of mercury (mm Hg) systolic and 80 mm Hg diastolic during the early assessments were considered to have normal blood pressure. Those with blood pressure up to 129/89 mm Hg were considered to have prehypertension. Anyone above that reading and those with a prescription for antihypertensive medication were considered to have high blood pressure.— Reuters

UK shop prices fall in July at fastest rate since 2006

LONDON, 6 Aug — Prices in British shops fell last month at the fastest rate since records began seven-and-a-half years ago, the British Retail Consortium said on Wednesday, marking 15 months of sinking prices.

The BRC said retail prices in July were 1.9 percent lower than a year earlier, marking the largest decline in shop prices since the series started in December 2006. Prices had fallen by 1.8 percent in June.

Food prices rose just 0.3 percent, also the smallest rise on record, compared with 0.6 percent in the previous month. The BRC said there were deep and widespread discounting across grocery stores.

Prices for furniture, electrical goods and gardening tools fell at a faster rate in July, the BRC said.

“Against a backdrop of stable commodity markets, the stronger sterling making imports cheaper and wavering retail spending, current levels of deflation are expected to continue,”

said Helen Dickinson, the BRC’s director general.

Official data last month showed consumer price inflation (CPI) increased to 1.9 percent in June, just below the Bank of England’s 2 percent target, although economists said the rise was driven by one-off factors.

CPI measures a wider basket of goods and services that comprises the bulk of Britain’s economy.

The BRC said recent announcements from major supermarkets suggested shop price inflation would stay weak for the coming months.

Britain’s four biggest grocers — Tesco, Sains-bury’s, Morrisons and

Wal-Mart’s Asda — have been trying to win back market share that they have lost to discounters like Aldi and Lidl.— Reuters
Japan’s nuclear restart may be delayed until 2015

Tokyo, 6 Aug — The long-awaited restart of Japan’s nuclear power plants is facing yet another setback and may be delayed until 2015, Japanese media said on Wednesday, piling pressure on struggling utilities to push for fresh price hikes.

Kyushu Electric Power’s two-reactor Sendai plant, located about 1,000 km (600 miles) southwest of Tokyo, is likely to be the first nuclear plant to be allowed to restart under tough new safety regulations after the 2011 Fukushima crisis.

The Sendai plant cleared the Nuclear Regulation Authority’s (NRA) initial safety hurdle last month, but the utility was supposed to hand in additional, detailed paperwork on specific safety features at the site and how they planned to construct them.

Japan’s public broadcaster NHK and other media said that Kyushu Electric said documentation issues meant final deliberations on the restart would be pushed back by the regulator, delaying the restart until after winter.

A Kyushu Electric spokeswoman said that the company does not have a timeline for starting up the reactors and confirmed comments by an executive that submission of additional documents may be delayed until late September or even October.

“We have been saying that we cannot say when the (restart) will be,” the spokesman said.

The utility has said that restarting the two Sendai reactors would cut its fossil fuel purchases by 200 billion yen over a year. Even after final approval by the nuclear regulator, Japan has said it will defer any final decision on restarting reactors to the local prefecture and host community where the plants are based.

Struggling utilities have sought to shore up finances by raising electricity prices and a delay in restarting Kyushu’s Sendai plant may force the utility to also seek price hikes.

Hokkaido Electric Power, which also received a government bailout earlier this year, has requested government approval to raise household electricity rates by at least 17 percent from October.

Shares in Kyushu Electric were down 3 percent to 1,127 yen during morning trade, compared to the 0.8 percent slip in Tokyo’s Nikkei benchmark index.—Reuters

US-Africa summit garners over $17 billion in investment pledges

WASHINGTON, 6 Aug — African leaders on Tuesday called for a deeper economic relationship with the United States, hailing investment pledges totalling more than $17 billion ($13.47 billion) at a Washington summit as a fresh step in the right direction.

“The United States is determined to be a partner in Africa’s success,” President Barack Obama said in a speech at the forum. “A good partner, an equal partner, and a partner for the long term.”

The US president also urged African officials to create conditions to support foreign investment and growth.

“Capital is one thing, development programmes and projects are one thing, but rule of law, regulatory reforms, good governance, those things matter even more,” he said.

African leaders said they were optimistic of becoming full partners in a relationship worth an estimated $85 billion a year in trade flows, as US business leaders eyed opportunities in the region, home to six of the world’s 10 fastest-growing economies — even if they might be late to the party.

“We gave it to the Europeans first and to the Chinese later, but today it’s wide open for us,” said the chief executive of General Electric Co, Jeff Immelt, who on Monday announced $2 billion to boost infrastructure, worker skills and access to energy.

Tanzanian President Jakaya Kikwete said Africa wanted to move away from a relationship of “aid donor and aid recipient” to one of investment and trade.

Kikwete told the forum that with Obama and senior officials encouraging the business community “to take Africa seriously, I think this time we will make it.”

More than 90 US companies participated in the forum, part of a three-day summit which has brought almost 50 African leaders to the US capital, including Chevron Corp <CVX.N, Citigroup Inc, Ford Motor Co, Lockheed Martin Corp, Marriott International Inc and Morgan Stanley. Many already have a foothold in the region, which is expected to have a larger work force than China or India by 2040 and boasts the world’s fastest-growing middle class, supporting demand for consumable goods.

Moscow may force European airlines to fly around Russia

Moscow, 6 Aug — Russian Prime Minister Dmitry Medvedev threatened on Tuesday to retaliate for the grounding of a subsidiary of national airline Aeroflot because of EU sanctions, with one newspaper reporting that European flights to Asia over Siberia could be banned.

Low-cost carrier Dobrolyot, operated by Aeroflot, suspended all flights last week after its airline leasing agreement was cancelled under European Union sanctions because it flies to Crimea, a region Russia annexed from Ukraine in March.

“We should discuss possible retaliation,” Medvedev said at a meeting with the Russian transport minister and a deputy chief executive of Aeroflot.

The business daily Vedomosti reported that Russia may restrict or ban European airlines from flying over Siberia on Asian routes, a move that would impose costs on European carriers by making flights take longer and require more fuel.

Vedomosti quoted unnamed sources as saying the foreign and transport ministries were discussing the action, which would put European carriers at a disadvantage to Asian rivals but would also cost Russia money it collects in overflight fees.

Taylor Swift sings for young cancer patient

Los Angeles, 6 Aug — Country singer Taylor Swift surprised a young cancer patient by meeting him and singing her popular break-up song ‘We are never ever getting back together’. Jordon Lee Nickerson, 6, who suffers from the rare Williams Syndrome, was diagnosed with leukemia last month, reported People magazine.

Swift stopped by the Boston Children’s Hospital to cheer up her little fan, serenading him with her song and later sharing a game of air hockey. “I know you always sing songs for people,” a wide-eyed Jordan told Swift at the beginning of her visit. “I do, I love singing songs for people, but I want to sing a song for you more than all the other people,” she responded. “Thank you!” he said, laughing. “Let’s do it!” — PTI

Jessica Alba feels confident in her shape

Los Angeles, 6 Aug — Actress Jessica Alba says she finally feels comfortable with her body and does not shy away from doning a bold avatar on screen. The ‘Sin City: A Dame to Kill For’ star, who has two children with husband Cash Warren, said she never used to feel at ease starring in raunchy film roles, but is now confident about herself, reported E! Online. “I just have an ownership of my body and of myself as a woman that I didn’t really have before. I was such a tomboy, and I would always kind of try and do role-playing to try and do these sexy things, but now I’m very much woman.”

“I know who I am, I’m confident in my sexuality and now it’s not so much of a departure from myself when I have to do photo shoots or play a character,” the 33-year-old actress said.— PTI

Rani Mukerji bats for martial arts training for girls in school

Mumbai, 6 Aug — Actress Rani Mukerji, who is playing a tough cop in her upcoming film ‘Mardaani’, feels martial arts training to girls in schools should be made compulsory.

The newly married actress said it will help them to protect their honour.

“There is a need for women power to come forward in all the fields…. Girl students, who are symbolic of shakti, should be given martial arts training besides their regular studies so that they can protect their pride and honour”, Rani said while promoting the film here.

Rani, 36, believes that all the women in the country should have a reflection of Rani Lakshmibai, who was the queen of Jhansi, so that they can strongly face each and every problem coming their way.

In ‘Mardaani’, which will hit theatres on 22 August, her character of strong police officer wants every individual to think that his wife, daughter and sister should also be like her.

She also visited the historical Jhansi fort, ISKON temple, which was set up on the property donated by her family, besides meeting her relatives before leaving for Mumbai.— PTI

Johnny Depp to feature on new Bob Dylan album

London, 6 Aug — Superstar Johnny Depp will appear on a new album based on Bob Dylan’s ‘lost’ lyrics, ‘Lost On The River: The New Basement Tapes’ is the result of Dylan handing a collection of unused songs over to producer T-Bone Burnett to find a use for, reported Digital Spy.

Marcus Mumford of Mumford & Sons, Elvis Costello, Jim James of My Morning Jacket, Rhiannon Giddens of the Carolina Chocolate Drops and Taylor Goldsmith of Dawes will all feature on the album. Depp, 51, will appear on the record, playing guitar on the track ‘Kansas City’ — something which occurred when Costello was unable to make a recording session due to a show.

Last month, Depp made a cameo appearance in Paul McCartney’s music video for ‘Early Days’. — PTI
Nike has most Europe football deals, Adidas the most lucrative

BERLIN, 6 Aug — US sportswear group Nike will supply shirts to more teams in the top five European football leagues this season than Adidas, but the German firm has cornered the most lucrative clubs, a study showed on Wednesday.

Sports marketing research group Repucom said Nike had outpaced Adidas in Europe for the first time since the 2009/10 season to supply 26 of the region’s top clubs, up five compared with last year. Adidas is supplying 18, down four from last year.

“Whilst Nike looks to maximise the number of teams it supplies, Adidas is going for the most popular, most followed and ultimately biggest selling clubs in the world,” Repucom football expert Andrew Walsh said.

Nike has signed more top teams in Spain, Germany, France and Italy, a total of 23, compared with 13 for Adidas and five for Puma. Repucom said 3 million Spanish club shirts were sold last season, compared with 2.3 million for the Bundesliga and about 1.2 million in each of the top leagues in France and Italy.

“Adidas and Nike, with Puma in third place, have managed to keep a good headlock on the market,” Walsh said, noting that US brand Under Armour had not managed to sign another top side after English Premier club Tottenham Hotspur.

Adidas last month struck a record $1.3 billion (£770.21 million) shirt deal with Manchester United to oust Nike from the former English champions from the 2015/16 season, and it will also replace Nike at Italian champions Juventus next year.

Adidas expects record football sales of $2.7 billion in 2014, topping the $2.3 billion Nike reported for its financial year to end-May. While the periods are not directly comparable, Nike has suggested the US company could exceed the Adidas figure for 2014 in its 2014/15 financial year.

Puma, the world’s no. 3 sportswear firm, has replaced Nike as the kit supplier at Arsenal from this season as part of a strategy to restore a reputation for performance gear after it shifted too far into fashion.

New Scrabble dictionary picks up the language of the millennials

LONDON, 6 Aug — Young players of the classic word game Scrabble, perhaps disenfranchised by its decade-old lexicon, can “chillax” now that this multi-generational favourite is being updated to speak the language of the millennials.

The fifth edition of the Official Scrabble Players Dictionary, published by Merriam-Webster, goes on sale Wednesday and includes 5,000 new words that editors say will help the 66-year-old game stay relevant.

Some older players and Scrabble purists might find the inclusion of words like “romance” and “selfie” to be a “buzzkill” because some of the additions seem so fresh.

But most of the additions are likely to be long studied and time-tested, with obvious staying power, said Grant Barrett, a San Diego dictionary editor and co-host of the national-wide public radio show “A Way with Words.”

“The list is, to me, a great step forward,” Barrett said. “I think you’ve got to add the new words. Otherwise you risk turning into an archaic game that nobody wants to play because the daily language isn’t accepted there. It’s got to keep up.”

The publishing house this week released a sample of the new words, which add 30 pages to the dictionary last updated 10 years ago.

In addition to “bro-mance,” “chillax,” “selfie” and “buzzkill,” the list includes terms like “hash-tag,” commonly used with Twitter “dubstep,” an electronic dance music that has gained popularity in the past few years; “texter,” referring to one who texts; and “mech,” an expression of ambivalence used on social media and in text messaging.

The trial is temporarily suspended until you’ve honored your commitments and then it’ll be permanently discontinued,” Noll said. “If you don’t honor your commitments, we’ll continue the trial. I assume we’ll only see each other again on TV.” Ecclestone, 83, replied in English: “Thank you very much. I will honor my commitment.”

Ecclestone was on trial in April over allegations he paid a $44 million bribe to a former German banker to facilitate the sale of a major stake in his $5.4 billion business eight years ago.

Ecclestone, a former used car salesman who became a billionaire by building the sport into a global money spinner over the past four decades, denied any wrongdoing. — Reuters
Mata says United believe in the Van Gaal way

United wrapped up their US tour with a 3-1 win over rivals Liverpool in the International Champions Cup final in Miami on Monday and after defeating Real Madrid on Saturday the mood among Van Gaal’s squad is buoyant ahead of their 16 August Premier League opener against Swansea.

“It was a good tour for us, a good two or three weeks trying to get ready physically and mentally while trying to adapt to the new system,” Mata told ManUtd.com. “Obviously, we didn’t lose a game which is good for the confidence but the most important thing is that we believe in what we are doing.

United played in front of huge crowds in the United States with 86,000 watching them beat LA Galaxy in California and a massive 109,000 in Michigan for a 3-1 win over Real Madrid as the club proved once again their global popularity.

“We take home a lot of love from the supporters. It was amazing from the first day until the last — in every stadium, in every training camp and in every hotel. I think (the highlights were) the support and obviously the new ideas that the manager has brought,” said Mata.

Van Gaal’s 3-5-2 formation has seen Mata, who scored a well-taken goal against Liverpool, employed in an advanced playmaker role and that appears to suit him well.

“I feel good and I feel comfortable in this position. I have to do what the manager wants me to do, both offensively and defensively, and I am trying to do that. It can be a good position for me to try to perform to my best,” he said.

After a disappointing seventh place finish in the Premier League last year under David Moyes, United will be expected to be back in the title hunt and, at the very least, ensure a return to the Champions League with a top four finish.

“We are all excited to start the new season,” said Mata. “Everybody wants to do better, we want to fight for the trophies and this club deserves that. We will try our best.” — Reuters

Neymar back injury healing ‘satisfactorily’

BARCELONA, 6 Aug — Neymar’s injured back is healing “satisfactorily” although there is no specific date for the Brazil forward to return to training, his club Barcelona said on Tuesday.

Neymar fractured a bone in his back following a challenge from Colombia defender Juan Zuniga in last month’s World Cup quarter-final and was ruled out of the rest of the tournament.

The 22-year-old, who has targeted a return to action in a friendly on 18 August, had tests on his injury after his post-August, had tests on his reaction in a friendly on 18 August, and was ruled out for the rest of the tournament.

“The player will follow a specific recovery programme,” Barca said on their website (www.fcb.cat). “The progress of the injury will determine when he returns to training,” they added.

Barca play a friendly against Italian Serie A side Napoli in Geneva on Wednesday and said midfielder Xavi and defender Jeremy Mathieu, a new signing from Valencia, are unavailable due to minor muscle problems.

Argentina pair Lionel Messi and Javier Mascherano and Brazil full back Daniel Alves, who only returned to training on Tuesday, were not included in the squad for the trip to Switzerland.

Barca begin their La Liga campaign at home to Elche on 24 August.

Tests show Nadal recovery from wrist injury on track

MADRID, 6 Aug — Rafa Nadal’s recovery from a wrist injury ruled him out of two US Open tune-up events is on track, the Spanish tennis federation (RFET) said on Tuesday after the world number two underwent tests.

Nadal sustained the injury during practice late last month and the 28-year-old Majorcan left-hander has been training with a cast on his right wrist.

He was forced to withdraw from this week’s Rogers Cup in Toronto and next week’s Cincinnati Open, putting in doubt his title defence at the year’s final grand slam at Flushing Meadows in New York starting at the end of this month.

“Following a scan and clinical evaluation, his progress is on track, although he will still have tests from time to time,” the RFET said on their website (www.rfet.es).

Eugenie Bouchard of Canada

Scoreboards down, Bouchard out in Montreal

MONTREAL, 6 Aug — The Rogers Cup lost power both figuratively and literally on Tuesday with hometown favourite Eugenie Bouchard suffering a second round defeat to American qualifier Shelby Rogers.

The 20-year-old Bouchard, playing for the first time since losing in the Wimbledon final to Petra Kvitova last month, faltered badly in front of her native Montreal crowd.

Her 6-0, 2-6, 0-6 loss came after the event suffered a seven-hour power outage that shut down scoreboards and umpires’ microphones. “I was feeling the pressure on the court and I was feeling kind of match rusty,” Bouchard told reporters.

“But I knew this coming into the match, so I can’t use that as excuses. I knew it would be kind of a difficult situation.”

Bouchard suffered her own issues from the outset as she struggled with her serve and failed to claim a game in the opener.

She rebounded to dominate the second set but fell away badly in the decider, ending home fans’ hopes of an anticipated quarter-final showdown against top-ranked Serena Williams.

The in-form Bouchard is the only player to have reached the semi-finals of the first three grand slams of the season while defending champion Serena has won this tournament three times. Serena had the day off but her older sister Venus fought her way to a three-set victory against Anastasia Pavlyuchenkova 6-1, 3-6, 6-2 despite the electrical issues.

“It was like going back to the southern California juniors’,” Venus told reporters of the power outages.

“But I tried to think of it as positive. It felt good to win the match and hopefully gain some momentum.”

In other matches, Caroline Wozniacki made easy work of Daniel Hantuchova in a 6-1, 6-1 triumph, while third-seed Agnieszka Radwanska defeated Barbora Zahlavova-Strycova 6-4, 6-4 and ninth-seed Ana Ivanovic routed Timea Babos 6-1, 6-2.

Spain’s 14th seed Carla Suarez-Navarro and 16th seed Elena Vesnina also advanced to the second round after respective victories over Bojana Jovanovski and Camila Giorgi.
