Cambodia’s parliament leadership reshuffled, opposition holds 1st vice-president post

PHNOM PENH, 26 Aug — All but one of the 123 lawmakers from the ruling and opposition parties voted for their new leadership on Tuesday following the leaders of the two parties agreed to an unprecedented power-sharing deal in the legislative body last month.

Heng Samrin, honorary president of the ruling Cambodian People’s Party (CPP), remained the president of the National Assembly as the current first vice-president, Nguon Nhel relinquished that post to the opposition Cambodia National Rescue Party (CNRP) and became second vice-president.

CNRP’s vice-president Kem Sokha was elected as the first vice-president of the National Assembly by a confidential vote. Of the 122 lawmakers who were present at the parliamentary session, 116 voted in favor of Kem Sokha, 4 voted against and 2 abstained.

The lawmakers have also voted for the chairpersons of the legislative body’s ten commissions, in which five commissions are chaired by the CPP and the other five commissions are controlled by the CNRP based on their agreement last month.

The five commissions under the CPP’s chairmanship are commission on economics, finance, banking and auditing; commission on interior, defence, and public functions; commission on foreign affairs and information; commission on legislation and justice; and commission on transport, telecom, industry, commerce, land management, and construction.

The CNRP-controlled five commissions include commission on human rights, complaints, and investigation; commission on investment, agriculture, rural development, environment, and water resources; commission on education, youth, sports, religions, culture and tourism; commission on health, social affairs, labor, vocational training and women’s affairs; and commission on investigation and anti-corruption.

The reshuffle came after CPP’s Prime Minister Hun Sen and CNRP’s president Sam Rainsy struck an agreement on 22 July that saw the CNRP end its nearly yearlong boycott of the National Assembly over last year’s election that resulted in the CPP winning 68 seats against 55 seats for the CNRP.

Under the deal, the CNRP possesses the post of the first vice-president of the National Assembly and chairs five of the 10 commissions.

In addition, it will control four of nine seats on the would-be National Election Committee.

Speaking to reporters after the session, newly-elected first vice-president of the National Assembly Kem Sokha vowed to promote the culture of dialogues between the opposition party and the ruling party for the sake of the country and people.

“I will propose the leaders of the opposition CNRP and the ruling CPP to meet regularly, possibly every three months, because we want to create the culture of dialogues to deal with all issues,” he said.

CNRP’s president and lawmaker Sam Rainsy, who does not take any leadership role in the National Assembly, said, “The political crisis has come to an end, and the lawmakers from the two parties will work together to better serve the nation and people.”

During the post-election crisis from July last year to July this year, the opposition had staged many street demonstrations — some of them had turned violent, leaving people dead and injured.

Prime Minister Shinzo Abe will reshuffle his Cabinet on 3 September, he said on Tuesday in a meeting of Liberal Democratic Party executives. “I would like to make fresh changes as we enter the second chapter of Japan’s recovery featuring (work on) national security and regional economics,” said Abe, also president of the LDP.

French PM to unveil pro-reform cabinet after rebel ministers’ eviction

PARIS, 26 Aug—France’s prime minister will scramble to put together a new pro-reform government on Tuesday, a day after the surprise eviction of rebel ministers who had opposed budgetary rigor.

Manuel Valls will seek as wide a basis as possible for his second cabinet in five months ahead of tough negotiations at home and with EU peers on France’s 2015 budget and he is expected to try to poach politicians from other parties.

Valls handed in his government’s resignation on Monday after President Francois Hollande decided firebrand Economy Minister Arnaud Montebourg had gone one step too far by attacking his economic policies and Germany’s “obsession” with austerity.

Two of France’s leading newspapers, the conservative Le Figaro and left-wing Liberation, summed up the mood on Tuesday with the exact same headline: “Regime crisis.”

Asylum seekers file lawsuit against Australian government

SYDNEY, 26 Aug—Asylum seekers held on remote Christmas Island are suing the Australian government for failing to provide adequate health care, piling more pressure on Canberra over its controversial policy of detaining children.

Lawyers acting for the asylum seekers filed a claim in the Victorian Supreme Court on Tuesday, using a 6-year-old girl as the lead plaintiff in the class action lawsuit.

Immigration Minister Scott Morrison last week announced plans to release some children from detention after human rights groups said that holding minors was detrimental to their mental and physical health.

However, under tough laws designed to discourage refugees arriving by boat, only 150 of the 876 children currently in detention — and only those held in mainland detention centers — will be eligible for release.

Jacob Varghese, a lawyer with legal firm Blackburn, said the girl spearheading the class action, known only as AS, had been in detention for a year and has been diagnosed with post-traumatic stress disorder, She has ongoing dental infections, allergies, separation anxiety, bed wetting and is refusing food, he said.

“The government is robbing far too many kids of their childhoods,” Varghese told reporters.

Too many asylum-seekers’ health are being significantly compromised by being in detention. Doctors who have first-hand experience of what it is like there say services fall far short of standards the Australian community expects.”

The class action alleges that the government and Morrison, as the legal guardian of the children, have breached their duty of care to protect the health and wellbeing of asylum seekers.

It covers people who have been held on Australia’s Indian Ocean territory of Christmas Island at some point over the past three years, meaning there are thousands of potential claimants.

The law firm is seeking compensation and an order that the 334 people currently detained on the island, including 148 children, be placed in community detention on the mainland instead.

Conservative Prime Minister Tony Abbott won an election last September after campaigning heavily on tough immigration policies, which have been criticized internationally but which polls show remain popular with voters.

Morrison says they are needed to stop dangerous people-smuggling ventures.

About 16,000 asylum seekers came to Australia on 220 boats in the first seven months of 2013, but the government says there has been just one “illegal” boat arrival since December.

Hundreds of asylum seekers have drowned when rickety boats, mostly from Indonesia, have sunk on route to recent years.

Remote, gas-rich islands on Indonesia’s South China Sea frontline

RANAI, (Indonesia), 26 Aug—The word “sleepy” could have been invented for Ranai, the largest town in Indonesia’s remote and sparsely populated Natuna archipelago.

It has few cars and only two sets of traffic lights. The cloud-wreathed mountain looming over it resembles a slumbering volcano.

Nearby beaches lie pristine and empty, with not a soul in sight — a scattering of 157 mostly uninhabited islands off the northwest coast of Borneo — as a future flashpoint in the escalating dispute over ownership of the South China Sea, one of the world’s busiest waterways.

But that’s precisely what many people here fear.

They know Natuna is quite a prize. Its fish-rich waters are routinely plundered by foreign trawlers. Lying just inside its 200-nautical-mile exclusive economic zone is the East Natuna gas field, one of the world’s largest untapped reserves.

And any quarrel over it could have been invented by being in detention. Doctors who have first-hand experience of what it is like there say services fall well short of standards the Australian community expects.”

The class action alleges that the government and Morrison, as the legal guardian of the children, have breached their duty of care to protect the health and wellbeing of asylum seekers.

It covers people who have been held on Australia’s Indian Ocean territory of Christmas Island at some point over the past three years, meaning there are thousands of potential claimants.

The law firm is seeking compensation and an order that the 334 people currently detained on the island, including 148 children, be placed in community detention on the mainland instead.

Conservative Prime Minister Tony Abbott won an election last September after campaigning heavily on tough immigration policies, which have been criticized internationally but which polls show remain popular with voters.

Morrison says they are needed to stop dangerous people-smuggling ventures.

About 16,000 asylum seekers came to Australia on 220 boats in the first seven months of 2013, but the government says there has been just one “illegal” boat arrival since December.

Hundreds of asylum seekers have drowned when rickety boats, mostly from Indonesia, have sunk on route to recent years.

Remote, gas-rich islands on Indonesia’s South China Sea frontline

RANAI, (Indonesia), 26 Aug—The word “sleepy” could have been invented for Ranai, the largest town in Indonesia’s remote and sparsely populated Natuna archipelago.

It has few cars and only two sets of traffic lights. The cloud-wreathed mountain looming over it resembles a slumbering volcano.

Nearby beaches lie pristine and empty, waiting for tourists.

From Ranai, it takes an imaginative leap to see Natuna a scattering of 157 mostly uninhabited islands off the northwest coast of Borneo — as a future flashpoint in the escalating dispute over ownership of the South China Sea, one of the world’s busiest waterways.

But that’s precisely what many people here fear.

They know Natuna is quite a prize. Its fish-rich waters are routinely plundered by foreign trawlers. Lying just inside its 200-nautical-mile exclusive economic zone is the East Natuna gas field, one of the world’s largest untapped reserves.

And any quarrel over Natuna would also upset a delicate strategic balance, undermining Indonesia’s role as a self-appointed honest broker in the myriad territorial disputes between its Southeast Asian neighbors and regional giant China.

Jakarta’s foreign ministry insists there is no problem with China over the status of Natuna, but the Indonesian military has in recent months struck a more assertive tone.

In April, Indonesian armed forces chief Moredak accused China of including parts of Natuna within its so-called “Nine-Dash Line,” the vague boundary used on Chinese maps to lay claim to about 90 percent of the South China Sea.—Reuters letter to the editor

Dear Sir,

A recent letter to these pages by the Ambassador of the Russian Federation called into question the New Light of Myanmar’s coverage of the situation in Ukraine. The EU intends to respect the independence of your editorial line and prefers not to resort to the same type of rhetoric used by the Russian Federation, which we hoped belonged to past times. In response to this letter I would simply like to recall some facts.

The EU has been deeply engaged in seeking a solution to the crisis in Ukraine, which developed following months of peaceful protests on the central Maidan in Kyiv. These began on 21 November with the sudden decision to suspend preparations for the signature of the EU-Ukraine Association Agreement. The EU – having taken note of the demonstrations of public support for closer association and integration with Europe – condemned unequivocally the violence that has cost so many innocent lives.

Recent actions by the Russian Federation in violation of Ukraine’s sovereignty, territorial integrity, stability and security are unacceptable and have been condemned by the international community. The restrictive measures taken by the EU are directly linked to Russia’s violation of international law with the illegal annexation of Crimea and the destabilisation of Ukraine. They are intended to dissuade from further actions against Ukraine’s interests and to help bring about a negotiated solution. At the same time, the EU continues to encourage all possible forms of dialogue with the Russian Federation.

There was no government “overthrow” in Kyiv but a democratic vote in parliament in a crisis situation: the government was approved by an overwhelming majority in the Ukrainian Parliament, showing its inclusive character. Following his flight from Ukraine, effectively refusing to perform his duties, then President Yanukovych was dismissed by a constitutional majority and the void left by his departure filled to restore normal functioning of the state.

In accordance with this agreement, violence in the capital ceased and protesters withdrew from public buildings; a Law reinstating the 2004 constitution was adopted; a comprehensive constitutional reform envisaged along with new electoral laws and a balanced Central Electoral Commission; a democratic and inclusive Presidential election has taken place.

The EU strongly supported the holding of free and fair Presidential elections on 25 May, as they would help overcome the crisis and allow the Ukrainian people to choose their own future. The elections were characterised by a high turnout and the clear resolve of the Ukrainian authorities to hold a genuine democratic exercise in line with international commitments and respecting fundamental freedoms, despite a hostile security environment in two eastern regions.

Stressing the need to agree on a genuine and sustainable cease-fire by all parties to create the necessary conditions for the implementation of President Poroshenko’s peace plan, the EU has condemned the continuation of illegal activities by armed militants in eastern Ukraine, including hostage-taking and armed attacks on Ukrainian law enforcers and border guards. The EU continues to urge the Russian Federation to actively use its influence over the illegally armed groups and to stop the flow of weapons and militants across the border.

The EU and its Member States expressed their shock and concern as deepest condolences after the downing of the Malaysian Airlines Flight MH17 in Donetsk and the tragic loss of so many innocent lives. Citizens from many nationalities including many from the European Union were killed. The EU welcomed the unanimous adoption of the UN Security Council Resolution of 21 July 2014 and looks forward to its full implementation, calling on the separatist groups in the area to ensure full, safe and secure access to the site and surrounding area in order to proceed with identification of the victims, to recover their remains and possessions and to provide for their swift, professional and dignified repatriation.

The need to find a political, sustainable solution to this crisis has become a matter of urgency. The EU has called on the Russian Federation, Ukraine, the United States and the OSCE to join it in this pursuit and will actively support multilateral initiatives and any meeting format conducive to creating new political impetus towards this goal.

Yours sincerely,
Roland Kobia
EU Ambassador to Myanmar

WHO project for people with epilepsy chooses three sub-urban townships in Yangon, Nay Pyi Taw to access treatment

Yangon, 26 Aug — The World Health Organization (WHO) and the Ministry of Health have extended their four-year project for patients with epilepsy in Thanlyin and Kawhmu townships in Yangon and Lewe in Nay Pyi Taw, Prof Dr Win Min Thit, Project Manager of Myanmar Epilepsy Initiative, said on Tuesday at the workshop in Yangon.

At the workshop on information, education and community (IEC) materials development, U Aye Ko, Director of Yangon Region Health Department, said that the project is aimed at providing medical treatment to epilepsy patients who cannot access treatment, enhancing the capacity of health staff and correcting the public’s misunderstanding on the disease.

The workshop focused on designing pamphlets and posters as well as making public service announcements that play a vital role in accomplishing the mission.

“Epilepsy can be defeated. The WHO programme on reducing the epilepsy treatment gap over the next four years,” said Prof Dr Pe Thet Hloon, public health coordinator.

He also gave messages that epilepsy can easily and affordably be treated with inexpensive daily medicines and the majority of people with epilepsy can lead a normal life when they get treatment.

Prof Dr Win Min Thit said it was successfully implemented at the previous project for people with epilepsy in Hmauwy and Hlegu townships in Yangon in 2013, adding that officials of the projects arranged to conduct refresher course to health care providers.

They also arrange to import Phenobarbital drug for epilepsy patients from the WHO.

Epilepsy is a non-contagious, chronic disorder of the brain which can affect anyone: it is the most common serious brain disorder worldwide.

According to the WHO survey, around 50 million people worldwide have epilepsy and most of them live in resource-poor regions; every year, 2.4 million people are with epilepsy while it is estimated that there are about 500,000 people with epilepsy in Myanmar.

Many people with epilepsy in less-developed countries are not getting treatment because of lack of well-trained health service providers, problems accessing medicines or because epilepsy is highly stigmatized.

About 70 to 80 per cent of those people will lead a normal life with the use of inexpensive medications prescribed at a primary health care level.—NLM
US approval of Merck cancer immunotherapy expected soon

LOS ANGELES, 26 Aug — US regulators are likely to approve Merck & Co’s highly anticipated immuno-oncology drug, pembrolizumab, as a treatment for melanoma well ahead of a late October deadline, according to three sources familiar with the situation.

If approved by the Food and Drug Administration, the drug would be the first in a promising new class designed to help the body’s own immune system fend off cancer by blocking a protein known as Programmed Death receptor (PD-1), or a related target known as PD-L1, used by tumors to evade disease-fighting cells.

Companies including Bristol-Myers Squibb, Roche Holding AG and AstraZeneca Plc are racing to develop similar treatments for a variety of cancers. Some analysts expect the new class could generate more than $30 billion in annual sales worldwide by 2025.

The FDA is slated to decide on New Jersey-based Merck’s application no later than 28 October, but sources said the agency could give its approval within coming weeks. The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss the FDA’s plans, also acknowledged that the early approval was not guaranteed.

A spokeswoman for the FDA said the agency cannot discuss the status of applications. Merck is first seeking to sell its PD-1 drug for patients whose skin cancer does not respond to treatment with Yervoy, a Bristol-Myers immunotherapy that targets a different part of the immune system.

Studies have shown that pembrolizumab shrinks tumors in about a third of patients with late-stage melanoma, a disease that kills around 10,000 Americans each year.

“My hope is that over the next five to 10 years, we will be curing over half of melanoma patients,” said Dr Steven O’Day, director of the Los Angeles Skin Cancer Institute.

Dr Antoni Ribas, professor of hematologic oncology at the University of California, Los Angeles, and a pembrolizumab trial lead investigator, said having the drug on the market will be “a big deal” for patients who currently have few options.

E-cigarettes may be tempting non-smoking youths to smoke

CHICAGO, 26 Aug — Electronic cigarettes may be more tempting to non-smoking youths than conventional cigarettes, and once young people have tried e-cigarettes they are more inclined to give regular cigarettes a try, US researchers said on Monday.

A report, released by a team at the US Centres for Disease Control and Prevention, lends evidence to the argument that electronic cigarettes encourage young smoking.

The study, based on nationally representative youth surveys, found that more than a quarter-million adolescents and teens who had never smoked used an electronic cigarette in 2013, a threefold increase from 2011.

Youths who had tried e-cigarettes were nearly twice as likely to say they would try a conventional cigarette in the next year compared with those who had never tried an e-cigarette, according to the study in the journal Nicotine and Tobacco Research.

E-cigarettes are slim, reusable, metal-tube devices containing nicotine-laced liquids that come in exotic flavors. When users puff, the nicotine is heated and released as a vapor containing no tar, unlike conventional cigarette smoke.

Health experts have raised concerns that the burgeoning $2 billion e-cigarette industry, which has been virtually unregulated, would reverse gains in the decades-long effort to curb youth smoking in the United States. Just 15.7 percent of US teenagers reported smoking in 2013, the lowest rate on record.

In April, the US Food and Drug Administration proposed rules that would ban the sale of e-cigarettes to anyone under 18 but would not restrict flavored products, online sales or advertising, which public health advocates say attract children.

Asian shares firm, euro languishes on ECB easing hopes

Tokyo, 26 Aug — Asian shares inched higher on Tuesday as investors increasingly expect the European Central Bank to expand liquidity as soon as next week to boost the sagging euro zone economy — just as the US Federal Reserve plans to end its bond-buying drive.

The euro slipped to a one-year low against the dollar as comments from ECB chief Mario Draghi late last week that the central bank was prepared to respond with all its “available” tools resonated in the market.

“Draghi’s speech marked a turning point in ECB rhetoric. He also confirmed that beyond liquidity injections through the targeted longer-term refinancing operations (TLTRO) and outright asset-backed securities (ABS) purchases, the ECB was ready to do more if necessary,” Philippe Gudin, an economist at Barclays, said in report.

MSCI’s dollar-denominated index of Asia-Pacific shares outside Japan .MIAPJ0000PU5 ticked up 0.1 percent, led by 0.3 percent gains in South Korean shares. Japan’s Nikkei average .N225 bucked the trend, shedding 0.4 percent on profit-taking.

The mood in the market was buttressed by the S&P 500 .SPX, which briefly topped the 2,000 mark for the first time in history on Monday, and closed up 0.48 percent at 1,997.92.

European stocks led the rally in global equities overnight, with many country and regional indexes climbing more than 1 percent, as investors grew convinced that the ECB could adopt quantitative easing as soon as next week.

On Wall Street, the biggest winners were financial shares, seen as the main beneficiary of any cheap money from the ECB at a time the US Federal Reserve is preparing the ground to exit zero interest rates. — Reuters

Rare blue lobster trapped by Maine father-daughter team

MANCHESTER, 26 Aug—A Maine teenager and her father have landed a one-in-two-million catch—a blue lobster.

Meghan LaPlante, 14, said she and her father pulled up the vivid blue crustacean from one of their traps on Saturday. “We definitely stood out,” LaPlante said on Monday. “We were really surprised. I’ve never caught anything like it.”

LaPlante helps her father run the family’s Miss Meghan’s Lobster Catch business in Old Orchard Beach, Maine.

“The blue colour is the result of a rare genetic mutation that causes the lobster to produce an excessive amount of a particular protein,” said LaPlante. “Most lobsters are dark bluish green to brown. Scientists estimate the blue coloring occurs in only one out of 2 million lobsters.”

LaPlante and her father have agreed to donate the lobster to the Maine State Aquarium.

LaPlante said she named the lobster “Skyler” for its blue colour, and because it’s one of her favourite names.

Digital Ally shares surge on interest in wearable cameras

NEW YORK, 26 Aug— Shares of Digital Ally Inc, a company that produces wearable cameras, rose as much as 80 percent to $14.25 on Monday as outrage over the fatal police shooting of 18-year-old Michael Brown in Ferguson, Missouri, has led a growing number of investors to sign a White House petition calling for police to be required to wear cameras on the job.

It has also sparked increased interest in Digital Ally shares. At least 7.4 million shares changed hands in each of the last four sessions, but between August 2009 and June 2014, the stock’s average daily volume was only about 13,000 shares.

Digital Ally Chief Executive Stanton Ross told Reuters on Monday that the company had been receiving offers “all the time”, but said he wouldn’t divulge any more details until a commitment letter had been signed. Digital Ally’s video cameras sell for $795 and are compact enough to be pinned to shirts, belts or eyeglasses.

“We have had a lot more enquiries because of the civil unrest that is going on over in Ferguson,” Ross told Reuters last week.

Taser International Inc CEO Rick Smith told Reuters the estimated market for wearable video in North America is about $500 million, citing a Cambridge University study using Taser equipment.

Although wearable cameras only accounted for 9 percent of Digital Ally’s total sales in the June quarter, sales could surge as pressure mounts to find ways to hold law enforcement officials accountable.

In a Cambridge University study, complaints against a California police department were found to fall drastically after officers began wearing cameras on the job. Both suspects and officers were strongly deterred from violating rules when they were videotaped, the study found.

Still, up until this week, the recent gains in the stock had led many investors to bet against the stock’s rise. Heavy demand drove 68 percent of shares available to borrow being lent for short bets, according to data provider Markit, which watches short-selling activity. —Reuters

Satellite error sets back EU’s ambitious satnav programme

BRUSSELS, 26 Aug— The European Commission said on Monday it still had confidence in its plans to build a rival to the US satellite navigation system despite a problem with the latest launch of satellites for the network.

Space transport company Arianespace launched two satellites for Europe’s Galileo system aboard a Russian Soyuz rocket from French Guiana on Friday but were put into the wrong orbit, calling into question their usefulness for the Galileo system.

It is the latest setback to Galileo, which has been beset by delays, financing problems and questions over whether Europe really needs its own Global Positioning System.

The EU has approved a 7 billion-euro budget for Galileo and another navigation project between 2014 and 2020. It says Galileo will strengthen Europe’s position in a satellite-navigation market expected to be worth 237 billion euros in 2020. The European Commission said on Monday it had asked Arianespace and the European Space Agency (ESA) for details of the incident along with a schedule and a plan to rectify the problem.

Early information from Arianespace indicated the problem involved the upper stage of the launcher, it said.

“The European Commission will participate in an inquiry with ESA to understand the causes of the incident...” European Industry Commissioner Ferdinando Nelli Feroci said in a statement. “I remain convinced of the strategic importance of Galileo and I am confident that the deployment of the constellation of satellites will continue as planned.”

Marketing software provider HubSpot files for IPO

NEW YORK, 26 Aug— Marketing software provider HubSpot Inc filed with US regulators on Monday for an initial public offering of common stock.

The Cambridge, Massachusetts-based company listed Morgan Stanley, UBS and JP Morgan among the underwriters to the IPO. HubSpot, which runs software that helps local businesses with online advertising and marketing, had more than 11,000 customers as of 30 June.

The company counts funds affiliated with Sequoia Capital, Charles River Ventures and General Catalyst Partners among its stockholders. The filing included a nominal fundraising target of about $100 million, but did not reveal how many shares HubSpot planned to sell. The company intends to list its common stock on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol “HUBS”.

HubSpot’s revenue more than doubled to $77.6 million from 2011 to 2013, while its net loss attributable to common stockholders grew to $34.3 million from $25.5 million.

Marketing software company Youdil Inc. backed by investors such as Draper Fisher Jurvetson, Bessemer Venture Partners and Jafco Technology Partners, also filed for an IPO in July.

Other recent public offerings in the sector include Tremor Video Inc, YuMe Inc, Rocket Fuel Inc and Criteo SA. HubSpot intends to use the proceeds from the IPO for research and development, acquisitions and general corporate purposes.

The amount of money a company says it plans to raise in its first IPO filings is used to calculate registration fees. The final size of the IPO could be different.—Reuters

California to require anti-theft ‘kill switches’ on smartphones

SAN FRANCISCO, 26 Aug—Smartphones in California will be required to come with a “kill switch” to render them useless if lost or stolen under a bill signed Monday by Governor Jerry Brown, the latest effort to stem an epidemic of phone theft in the most populous US state.

The bill would be the strongest attempt yet by a US state to fight smartphone theft, which accounts for more than half of crimes in several of the state’s large cities.

“Our efforts will effectively wipe out the incentive to steal smartphones and curb this crime of convenience, which is fueling street crime and violence within our communities,” said Democratic state Senator Mark Leno, the bill’s author.

Under the new law all smartphones sold in the state after July 2015 will come pre-equipped with technology allowing them to be shut down remotely in the event of theft.

The bill received wide support from California prosecutors and law enforcement agencies that hoped it could help reduce smartphone thefts.

According to the National Consumers League, handheld devices were stolen from 1.6 million Americans in 2012.

In California, smartphone theft accounts for more than half of all crimes in San Francisco, Oakland and other cities.

Other states experiencing a rash of smartphone thefts have considered similar measures, and Minnesota passed a theft-prevention law in May. California’s new law, though, will go further, requiring manufacturers to notify consumers if the technology is available on their phones, hopefully prompting consumers to enable the kill switch.

The wireless industry removed its opposition to the bill after Leno agreed to postpone its effective date until July of 2015, the senator said.
Scotland’s pro-independence leader steamrolls final TV debate before vote

Glasgow, 26 Aug — Scotland’s pro-independence leader Alex Salmond won a final TV debate on Monday just over three weeks before a historic breakaway referendum, but it wasn’t clear if his combative performance would help him catch up in the polls.

In a bruising debate before the 18 September referendum, Salmond repeatedly talked over and at Alistair Darling, the leader of the “Better Together” anti-independence movement, and it was sometimes hard to hear what was being said.

With the campaign to break up the United Kingdom and sever Scotland’s 307-year union consisting of trailing in opinion polls by an average of up to 14 percentage points, Salmond’s supporters were looking for a game-changing performance after he failed to sparkle in the first such encounter.

Salmond, 59, did much better this time.

In a snap Guardian/ICM poll released soon afterwards, 71 percent of over 500 respondents judged that Salmond had won, against 29 percent who said they thought Darling had triumphed.

Professor John Curtice of Strathclyde University, a polling expert, also deemed Salmond had won. But he questioned whether the nationalist leader’s rhetorical victory would translate into a win at the ballot box.

“A debate doesn’t necessarily win you votes,” said Curtice, saying it had been a draw for its lack of proper discussion about wider economic questions.

“My glance at the flash poll is that while Salmond was the obvious winner, it doesn’t seem to have moved votes at this stage,” he said. Salmond got more cheers in Glasgow, Scotland’s biggest city, than Darling, 60, who attracted the odd groan.

But Salmond didn’t advance new arguments or land a knock out blow. Instead, over the course of a scrappy hour-and-a-half, he repeatedly interrupted Darling and asked him the same few questions time and time again, a tactic which unsettled the former British foreign secretary who at times audibly struggled to find a riposte.

“The eyes of the world are indeed focused on Scotland,” Salmond told the audience in an emotional opening statement, urging Scots to vote for full independence. “This is our time, our moment. Let us do it now.”

Scotland’s health service would be better off under independence, he argued, questioning whether the British government would give Scotland more devolved powers in the event that Scots reject independence.

Scotland already has its own parliament with control over policy areas such as education and health.

Michael Brown remembered in Missouri with calls for peace, justice

ST LOUIS, 26 Aug — Family and supporters of Michael Brown on Monday celebrated the life of the black teenager killed by a white police officer in Ferguson, Missouri, in a music-filled funeral service.

The teenager’s coffin was surrounded by photos of him as a child, graduating from school and smiling in his baseball cap.

Spirited gospel music — by a choir and horn players filled the sanctuary, and mourners clapped their hands and danced in the aisles.

Readings from the Bible were met with cheers in the audience, crying for justice.

“Michael Brown was not about to be remembered for riots,” Sharpton said. “Michael Brown did not want to be remembered as the one that made America deal with how we’re going to police in the United States.”

He also called on the black community to end the kind of street violence and looting that cast Ferguson in a negative light.

“We have to be outraged for our disrespect for each other,” he said. “Some of us act like the definition of blackness is how low you can go. “Blackness has never been about being a gangster or a thug. Blackness was no matter how low we went, we rose up anyhow,” he said.

Family and friends rose to speak as well, recalling Brown’s nicknames of “Gentle Giant,” and “Big Mike.”

Pastor Charles Ewing, Brown’s uncle, recalled Brown once telling him: “One day the whole world will know my name.”

Massive shelter forests to improve Beijing’s water supply

BEIJING, 26 Aug — Beijing and neighbouring Hebei Province will jointly plant 100,000 mu (66.7 square km) of forest in 2015, in a step to guarantee the capital city’s water security and improve local eco-systems, authorities said on Monday.

According to the programme, the forests will cover areas along Beijing’s Miyun Reservoir, the city’s major source of drinking water, and the upper reaches of Guanting Reservoir on the Beijing-Hebei border.

The project, initiated in 2009, will also cover eight counties under Hebei’s Zhangjiakou and Chengde, Beijing’s main barrier against sandstorms from northwestern China and an important water source, said Yuan Shibao, an official with Beijing Municipal Bureau of Landscape and Forestry.

The joint project is expected to realize 500 million mu of forests by the end of 2014, with further plans to reach one million mu.

In differing accounts of Brown’s shooting, police have said he struggled with Officer Darren Wilson, who shot and killed him. But some witnesses say Brown held up his hands and was surrendering when he was shot multiple times in the head and chest.

After the funeral, people came in small groups to the impromptu memorial at the site of his death, among them Tameka Bryant, 28, a marketing executive at a radio station.

Authorities had braced for a possible flare-up, although clashes between protesters and police have waned significantly in recent days.

The crowd repeated the new slogan “Hands up, don’t shoot,” which protesters have chanted in the streets of Ferguson.

Bangladesh opposition’s 147 leaders, activists indicted on terror charges

DHAKA, 26 Aug — 147 leaders and activists of ex-Prime Minister Zia’s opposition alliance have been indicted by a court in Bangladesh capital Dhaka on charges of creating anarchic situation in 2013.

After framing charges on Monday, Dhaka Metropolitan Sadar Trial Tribunal’s Judge Tareque Moinul Islam Bhuiyan set 23 September for the next hearing against the opposition men, most of whom are leaders and activists of Khaleda Zia’s Bangladesh Nationalist Party (BNP).

Defence counsel Masud Ahmed Talukder said police pressed charges against 148 people but the name of the accused was dropped as he had already died.

The accused included about a dozen BNP high-ups like Ziaur Rahman, Khaleda Zia’s son Abdul Moneim, Rizvi Ahmed and Amanullah Aman, joint secretaries general, and Shafiquel Alam Prodhon, chief of Jatiya Ganatantrik Party, an ally in BNP-led 18-party alliance (now 20-party alliance).

Police sued the leaders and activists of the opposition alliance on charges of attacking law enforcers and blasting bombs during a BNP rally in front of its headquarters in Dhaka’s downtown Newmarket on 11 March, 2013.

Police raided (BNP) headquarters less than an hour after the blasts.

During the raid on BNP headquarters for nearly three hours, police arrested about 200 opposition leaders, including Mirza Fakhrul Islam Alamgir, BNP acting secretary general, who was later released.

Ninety nine opposition leaders and activists pleaded not guilty and demanded justice after Magistrate Bhuiyan read out charges to them on Monday.

The court cancelled bail petitions of 48 other accused and issued arrest warrants against them as they were not present at the court.

A BNP spokesman who did not want to be named termed the charges against the opposition leaders and activists as “totally false and fake.”—Xinhua

Egypt, UAE carried out Tripoli air strikes — US officials

WASHINGTON, 26 Aug — Egypt and the United Arab Emirates were responsible for carrying out two series of air strikes in the past week on armed Islamist factions in Tripoli, Libya, US officials said on Monday.

The officials said the two Arab countries used aircraft based in Egypt.

Earlier the New York Times reported that the two US allies acted without consulting Washington, and that Egyptian officials told US diplomats that Cairo was not involved. Egypt has denied conducting air strikes or other military operations in Libya.

Over the weekend, Tripoli residents said unidentified war planes attacked targets in the capital, as Libya is riven by the worst fighting since the overthrow of Muammar Gaddafi in 2011.

There were also strikes on Islamist-held positions last Monday.—Reuters

Old Emmy favourites
‘Breaking Bad,’ ‘Modern Family’ top newcomers

LOS ANGELES, 26 Aug — AMC’s gritty drug drama “Breaking Bad” was honored at the Primetime Emmy Awards on Monday as the top drama series for the second consecutive year, and picked up three top acting awards.

The series about schoolteacher Walter White, who begins making and selling methamphetamine to care for his family after a terminal cancer diagnosis, concluded last year after five seasons. “Holy cow!” exclaimed “Breaking Bad” creator Vince Gilligan when accepting the Emmy statuette, US television’s highest honour.

“This is indeed a wonderful time to be working in television ... we’re all lucky to be working now,” added Gilligan, whose show picked up five Emmys for cable network AMC.

“Breaking Bad” held off upset “True Detective,” Netflix’s online political thriller “House of Cards,” HBO medieval fantasy “Game of Thrones,” PBS British period series “Downton Abbey” and AMC ad world portrait “Mad Men.”

The annual Emmys, which are handed out by the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, pitted Old Emmy favourites over cable and network heavyweights, with the Academy picking old favorites over cable and Internet upstarts. In comedy, ABC’s “Modern Family” about unconventional families won best series for the fifth consecutive year, tying 1990s NBC sitcom “Frasier” for the most comedy victories. — Reuters

ORLANDO, Fla., 26 Aug — Walt Disney Co has filed for three drone-related patents that it says could lead to an era of aerial movie screens and larger-than-life puppets flying through the sky.

The company’s Disney Enterprises Inc subsidiary suggests its proposed drone-powered air shows could serve as an alternative to spectacles such as fireworks and large-scale light shows, according to its patent applications.

In filing for the patents, Disney joins a list of companies pressing for the US government to allow commercial use of small unmanned flight systems long associated with military and government surveillance.

The Federal Aviation Administration is in the process of drafting rules for the commercial use of drones for everything from TV news coverage to package delivery to crop monitoring.

Disney Enterprises Inc published the three patent applications on 21 August for what it called aerial display systems with floating pixels, floating projection screens and marionettes held aloft and animated by drones.

The drones would be pre-programmed and controlled from the ground and would monitor each other to remain synchronized and prevent aerial collisions in the event of wind gusts, the company said.

In the case of marionettes, a drone could carry a blimp-sized character through the sky to simulate flight depicted in passages from books and films, according to the patent application.

Other marionettes could be animated by a flock of drones manipulating different limbs.

“This is a significant improvement over prior flying characters, which typically were provided in the form of parade or other blimps/balloons filled with hot air or other gases and that had little and/or awkward articulation of any movable parts,” the company said in its patent application. — Reuters

Jennifer Aniston dropping weight before her wedding?

LOS ANGELES, 26 Aug — Jennifer Aniston is reportedly planning to shed some extra weight before her wedding to fiancé Justin Theroux.

Aniston, 45, had earlier confessed that like any bride-to-be she would lose some weight before her marriage, reported OK! magazine.

“She doesn’t think she’s overweight by any means. But she’s always said that she feels most confident when she looks a certain way. And there’s no doubt she’ll want to have that same feeling on her wedding day,” a source said. After meeting Theroux, the “Friends” star has allegedly put on some weight as the couple are often involved in dancing.

“His idea of fun is going out to great restaurants and trying out amazing food with her. And if that leads to her gaining a little weight, he’s not going to complain. Justin loves Jen looks absolutely perfect the way she is. He likes her curvier, with a little meat on her,” the source added. The longtime couple are planning to tie the knot in the end of the year. — PTI

Australia’s Qantas, Virgin allow smartphones throughout flights

Sydney, 26 Aug —

Australian airlines Qantas Airways Ltd and Virgin Australia Holdings Ltd said passengers can use smartphones and tablets throughout flights from Tuesday after a regulator relaxed a ban on electronic devices on planes.

The airlines said they would start letting passengers use personal electronic devices for the duration of their flight after Australia’s Civil Aviation Safety Authority followed a similar ruling from the US Federal Aviation Administration in 2013.

The Australian airlines will hope giving customers almost continuous access to personal devices will increase their appeal as they engage in a price war with each other and other market participants. Currently, passengers are forced to switch off devices until the plane reaches cruising altitude.

The two domestic rivals are expected to post annual net losses later this week.

“We’re delighted to give Qantas customers the freedom and flexibility to use their personal electronic devices from the moment they board the plane until they disembark,” Qantas Domestic chief executive officer Lyell Strambi said in a statement.

Virgin Australia chief customer officer Mark Hassell said the high number of passengers who travel with a smartphone or tablet shows “how valuable gate-to-gate access is to their overall travel experience”.

ManU agree to record British transfer for Di Maria — media

London, 26 Aug —

Manchester United have agreed a British record transfer fee of 59.7 million pounds ($99 million) to secure Angel di Maria from Real Madrid and are set to announce his transfer officially on Tuesday, British media reported.

The Argentina winger arrived in Manchester on Monday and would have a medical test later on Tuesday, British newspapers said.

The transfer fee outstrips the 50 million pounds English Premier League rivals Chelsea paid Liverpool for Spain striker Fernando Torres in 2011.

United declined comment.

Di Maria cost Real 20 million pounds from Benfica in 2010 and he was a key part of the team that won the club’s 10th European Cup last term but he was omitted from the squad for the Spanish Super Cup last week.

The 26-year-old turned down a new deal at the Bernabeu and Real coach Carlo Ancelotti said on Sunday he had bade farewell to players and staff.

Di Maria’s signing would provide a boost for Louis van Gaal-coached United, who have taken only one point from their opening two games of the Premier League season.

Tears of joy as Australian Doll Hospital restores childhood memories

Sydney, 26 Aug —

Making customers cry may not be most shopkeeper’s goal, but at Sydney’s 101-year-old Doll Hospital workers take tears as a sign of a job well done.

In an age of mass-produced plastic dolls, few doll hospitals around the world have survived, the owners said.

“We’re one of the last ones that does everything, when it comes to dolls, there’s very few that are capable of that sort of work,” said Geoff Chapman, 67 and “surgeon-in-chief” at the family-run business his father started more than a century ago.

Since then, the Doll Hospital has restored more than three million dolls, teddy bears, rocking horses and wheeled toys for Australian and New Zealand children.

“We’ve had clowns as big as a person, and a 12-foot (4m) crocodile - plush - not real,” Chapman joked, noting that “the most common problem usually is the hair and the eyes”.

One of the pleasures of working at the hospital is seeing customers’ reactions when they collect their prized possession.

“It’s both men and women, obviously more women are getting dolls and teddies repaired, but there’s quite a few men attached to teddy bears too,” Chapman said.

“We’ve had customers who’ve burst into tears” when they saw the treasured doll or teddy as good as new, he said.

Located behind a toy shop on a busy suburban street in south Sydney, workers fix fingers, toes and heads, and repair broken eye sockets in dolls - victims of childhood tantrums, dog attacks or sibling rivalry, sometimes as long as decades ago.

“A lot of our tools are like surgeons’, operating on human patients,” said Kerry Stuart, who has worked there for 25 years.

Like a real hospital too, work depends on the availability and schedule of a specialist, as well as the backlog.

Manchester City onerous after cruising past Liverpool

LONDON, 26 Aug — A Stevan Jovetic double and a third to Sergio Aguero helped Manchester City send out an ominous warning to those with designs on their Premier League crown, routing Liverpool 3-1 in the first heavyweight clash of the new season on Monday.

With new signing Mario Balotelli watching from the stands, last season’s runaway winners Liverpool looked lively in miserable conditions at Eithad Stadium, but an error from debutant Alberto Moreno allowed the Montenegro international to smash the ball home on 41 minutes.

He doubled the score just 10 minutes after the restart, putting away Samir Nasri’s low cross, while Aguero scored 23 seconds after coming on as a substitute as Manuel Pellegrini’s side put down an early-season statement of intent.

After going agonisingly close to winning their first league title in 24 years last season, Liverpool are desperate to mount another credible challenge, but despite nine new arrivals, they are still looking to adjust to life without Luis Suarez.

The Merseysiders failed to seriously trouble Joe Hart despite having plenty of ball and earned a consolation through a Pablo Zabolata own goal when the result was already sealed.

“Every game we play at home against the big four teams it’s like six points and you have to make a statement,” midfielder Nasri told Sky Sports.

“It’s important. Last year Jovetic was injured and we saw in pre-season he was on fire and today was a big start for him for this season.”

The pre-match interest surrounded the return of controversial Balotelli to the Premier League after a season and a half at AC Milan, having previous quit City after falling out with then manager Roberto Mancini.

On the pitch both sides looked dangerous on the break, with 19-year-old Raheem Sterling particularly lively on Liverpool’s right and giving Giel Chichy plenty of defensive work.—Reuters

Champions Atletico held by Rayo and Real beat Cordoba

MADRID, 26 Aug — Champions Atletico Madrid made a sluggish start to the defence of their La Liga title with a draw against Rayo Vallecano while a header from Karim Benzema and a late Cristian Ronaldo strike helped Real Madrid beat promoted Cordoba 2-0.

Mario Mandzukic missed two clear chances in the first half as Rayo wasted their Spanish Super Cup victory last Friday over Real appeared to take its toll as the players looked fatigued in the second half.

“The team played very well, they could have scored in the first half and later what happened is normal. We played on Tuesday and Friday last week and put in all that effort.” Atletico coach Diego Simeone told a news conference.

“We were better in the first half and had three clear chances. Rayo improved in the second half and caused us problems.”

Simeone was absent from the touchline due to a ban from last season and he has been given a further eight-match sanction on Monday for his dismissal and angry reaction in the Super Cup.

Atletico were missing in-form Raul Garcia in attack through suspension and was replaced by Raul Jimenez while midfielder Arda Turan was still injured. Rayo had a number of new faces but they continued the same possession-based style from last season and also looked more comfortable in the back.

Mandzukic first failed to hit the target as he stretched for a cross with the goal gaping and then he shot tamely at the keeper Cristian Alvarez, but for most of the game Rayo held their own.

In the second half Rayo began to dominate with Javier Aquino in particular a threat but if Atletico were lacking their usual attacking menace they were typically secure at the back and did not give Rayo many scoring opportunities.

It was a more attacking Real lineup with James Rodriguez starting ahead of Xabi Alonso in midfield and they failed to link up well in a scrappy opening spell. Real began to raise the tempo with Ronaldo and Toni Kroos having shots from the edge of the area which Cordoba keeper Juan Carlos Martin dealt with comfortably and the pressure told with Benzema’s goal after 30 minutes — his second goal in 15 games.—Reuters

Murray, Venus grind out wins at steamy US Open

NEW YORK, 26 Aug — Some busy bees made life difficult for two grizzled veterans and a pair of favourites were forced to work extra hard on a steamy opening day at the US Open on Monday.

Eighth-seeded 2012 champion Andy Murray fought off cramps to beat Dutchman Robin Haase in four painful sets, while women’s second seed Serena Halep lost a first-set tiebreak to US debutante Danielle Collins before claiming victory.

And in a fascinating match-up between 19th seed Venus Williams and Kimiko Date-Krumm of Japan, the oldest players in the women’s draw, some pesky bees joined in and refused to leave them alone.

Murray looked on his way to an easy victory before he fell victim to cramps that left him stretching and straining to get comfortable before clinching a 6-3, 7-6 (6), 1-6, 7-5 victory over Haase.

“I felt extremely good before the third and I did train very, very hard to get ready for the tournament,” said Murray, one of the finest players at the ATP Tour.

“My quads were cramping, then it started to get into my legs, then my forearms.”

“I just tried to hang around and at the end I was trying to play without moving my legs much and managed to get through.”
