Land prices in Yangon new town area skyrocketed

By Aye Min Soe

YANGON, 2 Sept — Land prices in the new Yangon town area have skyrocketed after the Yangon Region Government unveiled the plan located in western part of Yangon on 22 August.

The field flanking the road namely Hline-Thaya-Twantay Road which passes through near the area of the new town project has attracted buyers these days and they have offered unexpected price for the land in the area, according to local people.

A 20 ft x 40 ft area priced at around K1.5 million five years ago has reached over K30 million while an acre of land priced at over K15 million has reached over K1 billion, according to local people.

Yangon Mayor U Hla Myint unveiled the plan at the Yangon Region Hlut-taw on 22 August, saying that the Yangon new town plan will be implemented on 30,000 acres of land in western part of Yangon.

The new Yangon town will be established in the area between the Panhlaing River and the Twantay Canal and between the Hline River and Hlaing-thaya-Twantay Road.

It is targeted that 70 per cent of the project will be completed within three years, and K 7,000 billion and US$ 8 billion will be invested in the project.

The project includes affordable housing complexes with 20,000 apartments, a school with a seating capacity of 2,000, a home for the aged which can give shelter to about 2,000 aged people and five six-lane river crossing bridges.

Yangon Region Government is planning to invite tenders from private developers near future for the new Yangon town plan, according to the announcement of the Yangon Region Government.

With the aim of development of the private sector, the project would not be financed by the government, and is designed for creating opportunities for private developers and investors.

The announcement said the tender will ensure transparency and Yangon Region Government will invite tenders from the private developers soon.

In his monthly speech, Myanmar’s President U Thein Sein has stressed the need to expand the country’s current affordable housing projects not only in Yangon and Mandalay but also in other larger cities in conjunction with urban and rural development projects.—NLM

Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi meets with Japanese emperor in Tokyo

TOKYO, 2 Sept—Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi had an audience with Japanese Emperor Akihito at the Imperial Palace in Tokyo on Tuesday, as part of his five-day trip to Japan to strengthen bilateral ties.

The emperor told Modi that the most memorable moment of his trip to India last year with Empress Michiko was when he saw students learning Japanese at Jawaharlal Nehru University holding a debate in the language, according to the Imperial Household Agency.

Modi was quoted as saying by the agency that he hopes to enhance Japanese language education in his country.

The emperor and empress visited India from late November to early December at the invitation of the Indian government to commemorate the 60th anniversary of the treaty.

On Tuesday, Japanese ruling and opposition party lawmakers paid courtesy calls on Modi, who is on his first bilateral trip outside South Asia until Wednesday. Natsuo Yamaguchi, leader of the New Komeito party, the junior ruling coalition partner of Prime Minister Shinzo Abe’s Liberal Democratic Party, agreed with the Indian prime minister to promote exchanges among lawmakers from both countries.

Afghan turmoil threatens NATO’s ‘mission accomplished’ plans

BRUSSELS/KABUL, 2 Sept—NATO will declare “mission accomplished” this week as it winds down more than a decade of operations in Afghanistan but departing combat troops look likely to leave behind political turmoil and an emboldened insurgency.

The embattled country is also suffering a sharp economic slowdown.

NATO had hoped its summit in Wales on Thursdays and Friday would herald a smooth handover of security at the end of this year from the NATO-led International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) to Afghan forces. It then plans to cut back its role to a smaller mission to train and advise Afghan troops.

The 28-nation alliance had also hoped to celebrate Afghanistan’s first democratic transfer of power by inviting a new president to share the spotlight with US President Barack Obama and the other 27 allied leaders.

Instead, NATO diplomats privately admit that the backdrop to the summit is the “worst case scenario”.

A dispute over a presidential election marred by alleged fraud has created a political vacuum which has sown doubts over whether NATO will have a legal basis for leaving any troops in Afghanistan at all after this year.

NATO diplomats were left guessing for weeks about who would represent Afghanistan at the summit.

In the absence of a new president, outgoing President Hamid Karzai is standing away, leaving Defense Minister Bismullah Khan Mohammadi to represent Afghanistan.

Sending a lower-level representative rather than a new president will undermine Afghanistan’s ability to argue for future Western financial assistance, a US official said.

NATO Secretary-General Anders Fogh Rasmussen put a brave face on the situation at a Brussels news conference on Monday, declaring NATO had achieved its goals in Afghanistan.

“We have done what we set out to do. We have denied safe haven to international terrorists. We have built up capable Afghan forces of 350,000 troops and police. So our nations are safer, and Afghanistan is stronger,” he said.

But despite suffering heavy casualties and spending vast sums in Afghanistan, NATO has failed in its key goal of bringing security to the country, some analysts say.

On NATO’s watch, there has been “a marked and measurable deterioration of security”, said Graeme Smith, senior analyst at the International Crisis Group (ICG) think tank in Kabul.—Reuters

Australia to step up formal partnership with NATO at summit

SYDNEY, 2 Sept—Australia is set to step up its partnership with NATO, its foreign minister said on Tuesday, as the country pursues a bigger role in global crises from Iraq and Syria to Ukraine.

Prime Minister Tony Abbott, who is due to host Russian President Vladimir Putin and other world leaders at a G20 summit in November, has used a number of recent speeches to signal a more muscular approach to foreign policy.

Although Australia is not a NATO member, its troops fought alongside the coalition in Iraq and Afghanistan, which Foreign Minister Julie Bishop has called the basis for an expanded partnership in current and future conflicts.

“Terrorism, the defence minister and I will travel to Wales to attend the NATO summit and I can confirm that Australia will be accepting a formal invitation to become what is called an enhanced partner,” Bishop told parliament.

Membership in the Enhanced Partnership Program is designed to give non-member states earlier access to the planning of military operations and a presence in NATO’s governing bodies.

Australia on Monday unveiled fresh sanctions against Russia over what Abbott called its “bullying” of neighbouring Ukraine, where the Kremlin is accused of backing pro-Russian insurgent groups battling the government in Kiev.

Australia has also joined a multinational relief effort, dropping military equipment and aid to Kurdish forces fighting Islamic State militants in northern Iraq.

NZ police to probe building collapse that killed 115 including 28 Japanese

SYDNEY, 2 Sept—New Zealand police said Tuesday they will launch a criminal investigation into the collapse of a building that claimed the lives of 115 people including 28 Japanese students during a magnitude 6.3 earthquake in Christchurch three and a half years ago.

The decision to probe the collapse of the six-story Canterbury Television Building follows an 18-month-long assessment and evaluation of information.

“Based on this information, we now believe there is sufficient evidence to warrant further criminal investigation into the collapse of the CTV building in February 2012,” Superintendent Peter Read said in a statement. Engineering consultancy firm Beca has been assisting police with their inquiries, providing expert opinion on the collapse of the building and whether accepted standards were adhered to by the designers and those who constructed the building.

While no time frame for how long the investigation will take has been set, Read said, “We will continue to keep all parties informed as we work through the process.”

Families of victims have also been advised of the decision by police.

Most of the 185 people who died in the earthquake that hit Christchurch on 22 February, 2011 at 12:51 pm were in the CTV Building which collapsed and then burned. Among the 115 fatalities there, 71 were foreigners studying at King’s Education School for English Language, which was housed in the upper part of the building.

A government Royal Commission report on the Christchurch earthquake released in June 2012 found that the building did not meet construction standards when it was built in the 1980s and would not have been granted a permit.

It also found the engineer who designed the building did not have experience designing multi-story buildings and did not have adequate support from his boss, who took a hands-off approach.

Opportunities to identify the building’s shortcomings were also missed through the design phase and a subsequent period when the building had strengthening work done.

Shortly after the release of the report, police began assessing and evaluating information to determine whether a criminal investigation would ensue.—Kyodo News

Record 4.1 million in Syria got food aid in August, UN says

Geneva, 2 Sept—A record 4.1 million people in Syria received food rations in August due to more convoys being able to cross front lines and borders from Turkey and Jordan, the UN’s World Food Programme (WFP) said on Tuesday. “We are reaching more people every day with urgently needed food assistance — many of them have been going hungry for months,” Muhammad Hadi, WFP’s regional emergency coordinator for the Syria crisis, said in a statement. Over the past six weeks, WFP and partner agencies have crossed front lines to reach more than 580,000 people, over four times the 137,000 reached in the preceding six weeks, it said.

The UN Security Council authorized the movement of UN aid through four border crossings in July. That ended more than a year of aid paralysis caused by Damascus denying permission for UN staff to cross borders into rebel-held areas. Although Syrian forces did not control those areas, the UN said it could not infringe Syrian sovereignty. “Since 25 July, a total of five cross-border convoys, via the Bab al Salam crossing from Turkey and Al Ramtha from Jordan, carried food rations including rice, lentils, oil, pasta, bulgur, canned food, wheat flour, beans, salt and sugar for 69,500 people in the hard-to-reach areas of Aleppo, Idlib, Quneitra and Deraa governorates,” the WFP statement said.

The improved access for humanitarian aid helped boost the number getting food rations from 3.7 million in July. However, WFP has never yet managed to reach its monthly target for feeding Syrians, which was 4.25 million in August, about a fifth of the pre-war population of the country.

WFP says it needs to raise $35 million per week to meet the food needs of Syrians affected by the conflict, including the 3 million refugees in neighboring countries.—Reuters

Iran’s Zarif ‘quite optimistic’ of Iran nuclear agreement

Brussels, 2 Sept—Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif voiced optimism after talks with European Union foreign policy chief Catherine Ashton on Monday that a dispute over Teheran’s nuclear programme can be resolved by a 24 November deadline.

“I am quite optimistic after discussions with Lady Ashton that we can in fact resolve this issue in time,” Zarif said after what he described as “good” talks with Ashton.

“I hope with the readiness and political will that I see in all parties to this discussion to have a resolution within the next three months,” he told a news conference following separate talks with Belgian Foreign Minister Didier Reynders.

However, he cautioned that reaching an agreement “requires political will, it requires full awareness of the need to address the issues rather than simply domestic considerations.”

Iran and global powers are working to strike a comprehensive agreement by the 24 November deadline, under which Iran would curb its nuclear activities in exchange for an easing of economic sanctions that have crippled its economy. An earlier deadline of 20 July was missed.

Western countries suspect Iran’s programme is aimed at seeking the capability to build a nuclear bomb, while Teheran insists it is peaceful.

Ashton coordinates the position of the six powers negotiating with Iran — the United States, Britain, Russia, China, France and Germany.

The next round of talks between the six powers and Iran is scheduled to be held on the sidelines of the United Nations General Assembly in New York later in September.

The United States on Friday penalised a number of Iranian and other foreign companies, banks and airlines for violating sanctions against Teheran largely tied to the decade-old dispute about its nuclear programme.

Iranian President Hassan Rouhani said on Saturday the new US sanctions were against the spirit of Teheran’s nuclear negotiations with world powers.

Zarif described the new sanctions as “impediments to progress” in the nuclear talks.

“Behaviour that has been exhibited by some countries, including the United States, in imposing new sanctions, has been certainly a less than positive indication for progress.”

“But we are nevertheless committed to making progress and with Lady Ashton today we discussed both the time frames as well as the issues that are involved,” he said.

The EU issued no statement on Zarif’s talks with Ashton.

New Zealand to ratify global Arms Trade Treaty

Wellington, 2 Sept — New Zealand is to ratify the Arms Trade Treaty (ATT), the first global agreement aimed at regulating and controlling the trade in conventional arms, Prime Minister John Key told visiting United Nations Secretary General Ban Ki-moon on Tuesday.

“The Arms Trade Treaty is a major step forward in global efforts to reduce the harm caused by the illicit arms trade,” Foreign Minister Murray McCully said in a statement following the announcement.

“New Zealand has supported the treaty from its inception. We have also developed a model law to assist Pacific states, and small states in other regions, to implement the treaty,” said McCully.

New Zealand would be among the first 50 states to ratify, the threshold for bringing the ATT into effect.—Xinhua

Market-style reforms widen racial divide in Cuba

Havana, 2 Sept—Cuba’s experiment with free-market reforms has unintentionally widened the communist-led island’s racial divide and allowed white Cubans to regain some of the economic advantages built up over centuries.

Under President Raul Castro, who took over from his brother Fidel Castro in 2008, Cuba has expanded its non-state workforce, loosened travel restrictions and promoted private cooperatives and small businesses.

As the communist government renews its once near-total control of the economy, inequality has widened, undoing some of the progress seen since the 1959 revolution.

Much of the funding for new businesses such as restaurants, transportation services and bed-and-breakfasts — targeted at tourists, diplomats and dollar-earners — comes from family members who emigrated to the United States over the last 50 years, especially Miami.

They sent almost $3 billion to relatives back in Cuba last year and, as they are mainly white, their investments put black and mixed-race Cubans at a disadvantage as they try to set up their own businesses.

Walter Echevarria, a 60-year-old black man, owns a humble cafeteria run out of a ground-floor Havana apartment belonging to one of his partners.

There is no seating, and the clients are mostly state workers who order pork sandwiches and juice or a coffee for about $1.50.

“It’s usually the whites who have family abroad and send them money, and they can set up bigger businesses,” Echevarria said while customers lined up at the take-out window during the busy lunch hour.

With the additional economic freedom under Raul Castro’s reforms, there is also greater discrimination.

Iraq violence killed at least 1,420 in August

BAGHDAD, 2 Sept — At least 1,420 people were killed in Iraq in August as sectarian violence raged in the country’s centre and north, the United Nations said on Monday. A further 1,370 Iraqis were wounded and 600,000 people forced to flee as Islamic State militants, who have grabbed large areas of territory since June, pushed into land controlled by Kurdish troops and targeted religious minorities.

“Thousands continue to be targeted and killed by ISIL (Islamic State) and associat- ed armed groups simply on account of their ethnic or religious background. The true cost of this human tragedy is staggering.” UN representative in Iraq, Nickolay Mladenov, said.

The UN said the casualty figures could be far higher but it could not get independent verification of reports of hundreds of incidents in areas under Islamic State’s control. Violence killed 1,737 people, mostly civilians, in Iraq in July, and 2,400 in June, the UN data showed.

The fighting carried on Monday as 18 people were killed and more than 50 wounded when two parked car bombs went off in two mainly Shi’ite districts of Baghdad, police and medical officials said. Both Islamist fighters and Iraqi government forces have committed atrocities in the three months of fighting, senior UN officials said in Geneva during an emergency debate on the conflict on Monday.

IRAN IANS play role in breaking IS siege of Iraqi town

AMERLI, (Iraq), 2 Sept — Kurdish peshmerga fighters and Shi’ite militiamen paraded through Amerli on Monday, a day after breaking the two-month siege of the northern town by Sunni Islamist militants.

The scenes in Amerli and the surrounding area of Suleiman Beg offered a window into the teamwork among Kurdish fighters, the Iraqi army and Shi’ite militias and into Iran’s role in directly assisting their campaign against Islamic State (IS) forces.

An Iranian adviser to Iraqi police was spotted on the road near Amerli and Kurdish officials spoke of Iranians advising Iraqi fighters on targeting the Islamists.

The swift end to the Islamic State’s encirclement of the Shi’ite Turkmen town of 15,000 came on Sunday amid a push by Kurdish peshmerga, Shi’ite militias and Iraqi troops, after US air strikes late Saturday hit IS positions.

Shi’ite militias, who battled US troops during their occupation of Iraq, played a song in Amerli on Monday that taunted the extremist Islamic State with the line: “The Americans couldn’t beat us and you think you can?”

The town was filled with Kurdish peshmerga and fighters from the largest Shi’ite militias – the Badr Organization, Asaib Ahl al-Haq, Kata’ib Hezbollah and cleric Muqtada Sadr’s followers.

Military fighters spoke of a new alliance with the Kurds, who had been shaken by the Islamic State’s offensive on Kurdish-controlled territories last month. They were then helped by US air strikes that forced IS to retreat.

“I’m totally confident that the failure of the peshmerga to stop the Islamic State’s advance towards areas around Arbil forced the Kurds to review their wrong policy of refusing to cooperate with us,” said a fighter from Asaib Ahl al-Haq.

“Without our help, it will be difficult for them to stop Islamic State fighters alone.”

Military and Kurdish fighters on Monday entered the nearby community of Suleiman Beg, an Islamic State stronghold since earlier this year.

Peshmerga planted their flag on top of a building and Asaib Ahl Haq fighters chanted “Ya Hussein”, the name of a revered Shi’ite religious figure. The militiamen skirted around the buildings and lobbed dynamite into houses to clear them of any explosives left by the Islamic State.

Reinventing ourselves as a man of reputation

By Kyaw Thura

I t is axiomatic that promises are easier to make than to keep. That is why many people are pretty casual about making promises. People are by nature prone to indulge themselves with promises which are frequently made but hardly kept. It goes without saying that such throwaway promises do have ill consequences. It is therefore imperative to pay greater heed to promises no matter how small they seem to be.

It stands to reason that it just takes a little broken promise to harm a relationship, which once torn tarnishes reputation too. People with bad reputation are no more than a living death. A promise is a promise after all.

Another thing that makes reputation indis- pensable is that good reputation open doors to wonderful opportunities. Honest people enjoy ad- vantage for the simple reason that they have a clear conscience of their physical, verbal and mental actions. This does not necessarily mean that honest people always keep their promises. They do break their promises, but always with sound justifications rather than with excuses. On the other hand, it is safe to assume that bad reputa- tion is the same as a shadow. Bad reputation, like the shadow, follows us for life wherever we go. Nobody in their right mind will put trust in anyone who refuses to eat their words.

It is natural that there are times we have found ourselves keeping and breaking our prom- ise. To quote Alexander Pope as saying, ‘To err is human’, Making mistakes is as normal as breaking promises. What is important is to be frank with our transgressions.

Reputation has come to the fore, especial- ly in this age of information, solely because news travels faster than ever before! Not only what we do but also how others perceive us is what counts most. All in all, we should learn to accept responsibility for our own actions, for our reputation is our possession.

Working for Universal Adult Literacy

By Myo Myint

O nce again, we celebrate International Literacy Day on 8 September, an event of great significance to many people in the world, created by UNESCO. The observa- tion of this day throughout the world helps to highlight the need for sustained ef- forts to realize the literacy goal of halving illiteracy in the world by 2015 set in 1990 in Jomtien, Thailand and restated at the World Education Forum in Dakar, Senegal in 2000; the problems caused to society by illiteracy and the necessity for all sections of the community to join hands to pro- mote literacy.

It has been repeatedly stressed that literacy not only assists individuals to improve themselves socially and economically and allow them to realize their full potential, but it also helps whole communities to achieve multi-dimensional development goals. Litera- cy alone can provide access to much of the accumulated knowledge of mankind and eradicate ignorance, mis- trust, prejudice, misunderstanding, egotism and lack of interaction which togeth- er cause a lot of tensions and unhappiness in many regions of the world. Only literacy can help de- velop thinking skills which is one of the goals of 21st century education. Literacy can also have much impact on our daily lives as it cre- ates access to information on life skills and social and economic development such as, nutrition, diseases, healthy living, social skills, reasoning ability, better management of family in- come, principles of democ- racy, social obligations, one’s rights and how to de- fend them, tolerance of di- verse cultures, conservation of the environment, better ag- ricultural practices, and in- come generation based on resources in one’s sur- rounding, etc. Moreover, a literate person is more like- ly to value education and there is more probability of sending his/her offspring to school.

For an educated per- son, it might be hard to im- agine the stigma and hard- ships imposed by illiteracy, the extent to which literacy can transform the life of an illiterate person and how poverty alleviation can be achieved by promoting lit- eracy in both rural and ur- ban areas. But transform it does, as testified by the lives of many in both rural and urban areas who have had the opportunity to learn to read and write. At the na- tional level too, the preva- lence of a high level of literate population helps the national economy by draw- ing foreign investment as it is easier to promote the skills of literate persons.

Myanmar has striven to eradicate adult illiteracy and its efforts have received international recognition, having been conferred with two prizes, the Mohammed Reza Pahlavi Prize in 1971 and, the Noma Prize in 1983. Successive literacy campaigns in Myanmar have achieved success due to the efforts of the volun- teers drawn from among university and college stu- dents and teachers from both basic and higher edu- cation.

There is no doubt that illiteracy is declining in Myanmar, just as in many parts of the world. Howev- er, as many ill of the world can be traced to illiteracy, it is important that sustained campaigns are carried out to achieve universal adult lit- eracy as soon as possible. In addition, it is also vital to ensure that neo-literate do not relapse to illiteracy. Community participation is much needed in these two areas. We need to encour- age more university stu- dents and teachers to take part in the literacy campa- gins, and education au- thorities should create ap- propriate incentives and academic credits for volun- teers. We also need to solic- it wealthy members of the community not only to make more financial contri- butions to literacy campa- gins but also for the de- velopment and distribution of graded reading materials for neo-literate and the running of community learning centres that will sustain literacy skills as well as other community development activities.

With greater participation, enthusiasm and commit- ment from the community, it is hoped that Myanmar will be able to gain further progress in its effort to bring universal literacy and academic literacy to its citizens.

Ebola health workers should get danger money, expert says

DARAK, 2 Sept — Doctors and nurses fighting the world’s biggest outbreak of the Ebola virus in West Africa should get incentives including better pay, insurance and access to the new Ebola drug ZMapp, an international health expert said.

The hemorrhagic fever, spread through the blood, sweat and vomit of the sick, has killed more than 1,550 people since March, including more than 120 health workers. Many work long hours with no access to proper protective equipment.

Johan von Schreeb, who has travelled to the region to advise on how to manage the deadly epidemic, said if health workers were not protected and remunerated for their dangerous work, they could not be expected to report for duty.

“There has to be reciprocity for those that are taking a risk in getting involved in this epidemic and are working to control it. If you take risks, you should be paid,” said von Schreeb, head of research on healthcare in disasters at the Karolinska Institute in Stockholm.

“Modern mobile phone technology can be used to track who is coming to work as well as transferring money directly so they can be paid on a performance-based system on top of their normal salaries,” he told Thomson Reuters Foundation from Sierra Leone, where he is providing technical support for the outbreak.

The government of Sierra Leone has come under fire for its handling of the Ebola outbreak. On Saturday, health workers went on strike over pay and poor working conditions at a major state-run Ebola treatment center in Kenema in the country’s east.

As well as holding formal walkouts, some health workers elsewhere in Sierra Leone, as well as others in Ebola-hit Liberia and Guinea, have simply not reported for work.

In Liberia, where infection rates are highest, President Ellen Johnson Sirleaf has issued orders threatening state officials with dismissal for failing to report for work or for fleeing the country.

Ismail Mehemoh, chief supervisor at Sierra Leone’s Kenema clinic in Sierra Leone, said that “gloves, aprons and boots are either not available at some times or are insufficient”. He said the clinic’s burial team had only “one broken stretcher” to transport corpses which posed a health hazard.

In a further sign of strained resources, nurses and members of the burial team at Kenema told Reuters the government had stopped paying their wages of $50 a week.

Von Schreeb said advanced treatment centers specifically for infected caregivers as well as insurance packages could help to encourage health care workers to continue their essential work.

“There are negotiations with the UK government to set up an advanced 12-bed facility in Freetown specifically for health care workers. I sincerely hope the new drug ZMapp will be made available for these courageous people,” said von Schreeb, noting there had not yet been a response from donors on the proposal.

“There needs to be some sort of insurance scheme too, so if you die, your family are supported so that they can survive despite the loss of income,” he added.

Jorge Castilla-Echeneiz from the European Commission’s humanitarian arm (ECHO), said pay incentives and insurance were good ideas and that ECHO would be willing to fund them.

But he had reservations about the concept of favorable treatment for health workers.

“You’d have to be very cold-blooded given the lack of drugs. Lab technicians would get priority, followed by international health workers, followed by locals health workers and so on,” said Castilla-Echeneiz, who has just visited Sierra Leone and Liberia.

Sheik Umar Khan, a leading doctor in Sierra Leone, was infected with Ebola but did not receive the scarce ZMapp drug, nor was he flown abroad for advanced care. He died on 29 July.

“Early on in the outbreak, two American health workers who contracted the virus at a clinic in Liberia were flown back to the United States, treated with ZMapp and both recovered.”

A week ago, British nurse William Pooley was flown to England after contracting Ebola in Kenema, where some 25 health workers have died. He is being treated in London.

Twenty years on, Schaeuble pleads again for core Europe

PARIS, 2 Sept — German Finance Minister Wolfgang Schaeuble renewed a call for a core group of European Union countries to move ahead faster with economic and political integration, 20 years after his groundbreaking proposal.

In an article published in the Financial Times on Monday, Schaeuble proposed creating an EU commission with the power to reject national budgets that breach the bloc’s fiscal rules, and establishing an inner-core parliament for the euro zone.

“In order to make progress in all of these areas, we should keep using the approach that proved its mettle back in 1994: to establish core of co-operation within the EU that enabled smaller, willing groups of member states to forge ahead,” Schaeuble wrote in the article, co-authored by fellow German Christian Democrat Karl Lamers.

The centre-right pro-European members of Chancellor Angela Merkel’s party said the EU had already taken that direction with the launch of the euro currency.

They acknowledged that many EU countries remain reticent about closer political union that would involve transferring more sovereignty to Europe.

Countries such as Britain should put forward proposals for returning some competences to national governments, they said, while the EU should focus mainly on the internal market, trade, currency and financial markets, climate, environment and energy; and foreign and security policy.

The authors voiced sympathy for British demands for EU action to crack down on alleged “benefit tourism” and what they called a wave of poverty-driven immigration within the 28-nation bloc.

The Government of Sierra Leone was infected with Ebola but did not receive the scarce ZMapp drug, nor was he flown abroad for advanced care. He died on 29 July.

China gives Microsoft 20 days to provide explanation in anti-trust probe

BEIJING, 2 Sept — A Chinese anti-trust regulator said on Monday it has given Microsoft Corp (MSFT.O) 20 days to reply to queries on the compatibility of its Windows operating system and Office software suite amid a probe into the world's largest software company.

The State Administration for Industry and Commerce (SAIC) questioned Microsoft Vice President David Chen and gave the company a deadline to make an explanation, the agency said in a short statement on its website.

Microsoft is one of at least 30 foreign companies that have come under scrutiny by China's anti-monopoly regulators as the government seeks to enforce its six-year old antitrust law. Critics say the law is being used to unfairly target overseas businesses, a charge that the regulators deny.

According to a state media report on Monday, Microsoft's use of verification codes to spur complaints from Chinese companies. Their use “may have violated China’s an-timonopoly law,” the official Xinhua news agency said on Monday.

Verification codes are typically used by software companies as an anti-piracy mechanism. They are provided with legitimate copies of software and can be en-third to entitle customers to updates and support from the manufacturer.

Microsoft has long suffered from piracy of its software within China. Former

Chief Executive Steve Ball-

mer told employees in Bejing that the company made less revenue in China than it did in the Netherlands.

Complaints about verification codes potentially violating anti-monopoly laws are Katka-esque, said Duncan Clark, chairman of Beijing-based tech consultancy BDA.

crosoft can argue their case,” Clark. “How does an anti-pir-racy measure constitute mo-

noplastic behavior if other suppliers don’t use the same technique?”

SAIC also repeated that it suspected the company has not fully disclosed issues relating to the compatibility of the software and the operating system.

“(A) special investigation team conducted an anti-monopoly investigation inquiry with Microsoft Vice President Chen Shi (David Chen), and required that Microsoft make a written explanation within 20 days,” the SAIC said in a statement on its website.

New York, 2 Sept — Belying their reputation as the dumb cousins of early modern humans, Neanderthals created cave art, an activity regarded as a major cognitive step in the evolution of Homo sapiens, scientists reported on Monday in a paper describing the first discovery of artwork by this extinct species.

The discovery is “a major contribution to the redefinition of our perception of Neanderthal culture,” said prehistor-ian William Rendu of the French National Centre for Scientific Research, who was not involved in the work.

“It is a new and even stronger evidence of the Neanderthal capacity for developing complex symbolic thought” and “abstract expression,” abilities long believed exclusive to early modern humans.

In recent years researchers have discovered that Neanderthals buried their dead, adorned themselves with black and red pigments, wore shell and feather jewelry and cared for the elderly and ill, all evidence of complex thought. But unambiguously Neanderthal art was ever found.

The new study, published in Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, could change that.

Researchers from 11 European institutions reported that deep in Gorham’s Cave in Gibraltar, overlooking the Mediterranean Sea, they found carvings that resemble nothing so much as a recoo Twitter hashtag: eight partially crosscross-ing lines with three shorter lines on the right and two on the left, incised on a shelf of bedrock jutting out from the wall about 16 inches (40 cm) above the cave floor.

The engraving is covered by undisturbed sediment that contains 294 previously discovered stone tools. They are in a style long known as the signature of Neanderthals, who had reached Europe from Africa some 300,000 years ago.

Standard techniques had dated the tools at 39,000 years old, about when Neanderthals went extinct, meaning the art below it must be older.

Modern humans, who painted the famous caves at Lascaux in France and Altamira in Spain, by then had not reached the region where Gorham’s Cave is located.

The researchers ruled out the possibility that the engravings were accidental or from cutting meat or animal skins.

Instead, they were made by repeatedly and intentionally using a sharp stone tool to etch the rock, reflecting persistence and determination: one line required at least 54 strokes and the entire pattern as many as 317.

This engraving represents a deliberate design conceived to be seen by its Neanderthal maker and, considering its size and location, by others in the cave as well,” anthropologist Clive Finlayson, director of the Gibraltar Museum, and his colleagues wrote. “It follows that the ability for abstract thought was not exclusive” to modern humans.

Another hint that Neanderthals created art came in 2012, when archeologists dated simple wall paintings (mostly red dots and hand stencils) in Spain’s El Castillo Cave to 41,000 years old. That made them the world’s oldest prehistoric art and old enough for it to have been made by Neanderthals.

But because no art-facts were found, it was not possible to definitively rule out modern humans as the artists.

Mosquito traps out in Yoyogi Park as dengue fever numbers rise

Tokyo, 2 Sept — In the face of Japan’s first cases of domestic dengue fever infection since 1945, the Tokyo metropolitan government on Tuesday began trapping mosquitoes in hotspot Yoyogi Park to gauge how many of them are harboring the virus.

Set up in 10 different locations in the park, the traps use light and carbon dioxide-releasing dry ice to attract mosquitoes into nets. The trapped mosquitoes will be collected Wednesday, and this process will be repeated once a week for the time being, Tokyo officials said.

Local officials had trapped 35 mosquitoes on the evening of 26 August and the following morning, but none were found to carry the dengue fever virus.

Since the first sufferers of dengue fever were confirmed last week, the total has risen to 22, all of whom recently spent time in Yoyogi Park or nearby. All are in a stable condition.

Dengue fever, an illness found in tropical and subtropical areas in Asia, Latin America and Africa, is transmitted by tiger and dengue mosquitoes, but cannot spread directly from person to person.

Sufferers are struck with a sudden fever around three to seven days after transmission, accompanied by head and muscle pains and a rash. Most sufferers have mild symptoms, but some may develop significant bleeding which can be life-threatening.

Tokyo officials have put up warning signs around the usually busy park, warning people to wear long sleeves and trousers and avoid exposing their feet in sandals.

The health ministry has called on anyone experiencing a high fever three to seven days after suffering a mosquito bite, whether in Yoyogi Park or elsewhere, to seek medical attention, but noted that serious complications of dengue fever are rare.

At a news conference on Tuesday, Health, Labour and Welfare Minister Norihisa Tamura said he does not foresee infections spreading rapidly, but noted dengue fever “may become active in people in which it has been latent until now.”

“The virus is present at a certain level in the world, and Japan’s situation in this respect has not changed dramatically.”

“Rather than explosively spreading, (infections) will come and go, and I ask that people remain calm,” Tamura said.

According to the ministry, only between 10 percent and 50 percent of people bitten by a mosquito carrying the virus will experience dengue fever symptoms, and of those, serious complications are limited to between 1 percent and 5 percent.

Tiger mosquitoes do not transmit the virus between each other during their lifespan of between 30 and 40 days.

Japan’s situation in this respect has not changed dramatically.”

Workers remove water from a spray pond at Yoyogi Park in Tokyo on 1 Sept, 2014, to curb mosquito emergence with the total number of dengue fever patients in Tokyo exceeding 20 as the first domestic infection in Japan since 1945.—Kyodo News

Battle lines drawn in struggle for influence over Turkish judiciary

Ankara / Istanbul, 2 Sept — One of Turkey’s most senior judges warned against government interference in the judiciary on Monday, signalling a looming struggle for influence over the courts as President Tayyip Erdogan pursues a drive against his political foes.

Sworn in as head of state last week, Erdogan has vowed to press a struggle against US-based Islamic cleric Fethullah Gulen, an ally-turned-arch-enemy whom he blames on Gulen. His government faced accusations of interfering with the judiciary and police to try to seize the levers of state power.

The power struggle dogged Erdogan’s final months as prime minister and saw him purge thousands of police and hundreds of judges and prosecutors, steps that raised concern among Western allies and investors about judicial independence in Turkey.

Western powers are eager to see continued political stability in NATO ally Ankara, even if some are wary of what they regard as increasing authoritarian tendencies in Erdogan. Bordering on Iraq and Syria, Turkey plays a central part in intelligence calculations as tensions over rising Islamist militancy in those countries.

The purges continued on Monday, with dozens more police detained, according to local media reports.

“A judiciary which is under the influence of the executive cannot be expected to implement real supervision of acts and activities which are arbitrary and illegal,” Ali Alkan, chairman of Turkey’s top appeals court, told a ceremony in Ankara to mark the opening of the legal year.

“Neither Erdogan nor new Prime Minister Ahmet Davutoglu attended the ceremony, contrary to past practise. Erdogan stormed out of a similar ceremony in May after the head of the bar association criticised his government.”

Erdogan and Davutoglu, who were appointed prime minister last week, have both made clear that their efforts to curb Gulen’s influence will continue in their new roles.

Erdogan accuses Gulen’s followers of seeking to establish a “parallel state” and of orchestrating a corruption probe against his inner circle, which began last December with the arrest of sons of several ministers and businessmen close to him.

“All judicial institutions and members must be extremely sensitive, careful and courageous in the face of political, ideological and interest groups which try to affect, influence and virtually cow into submission the judiciary.” Erdogan said in a written statement on Monday.

In the final months of his decade as prime minister, he and his government faced accusations of interfering with the judiciary to quash the graft probe he blamed on Gulen.

Parliament in February approved a law boosting government influence over the High Council of Judges and Prosecutors (HSYK), which makes judicial appointments. In April, the constitutional court cancelled some articles of that law in a victory for the opposition.

Shootings reported near New York’s holiday parade route
NEW YORK, 2 Sept—Multiple shootings, one of them deadly, were reportedly early on Monday near the route for one of the city’s biggest outdoor events, the West Indian Day Parade, police said.
A 55-year-old man was shot to death in Brooklyn’s Crown Heights, and a suspect was in custody, with charges pending, local media quoted police as saying. The police said it was one of several shootings reported in the vicinity before the parade started, adding that they are still gathering details on the others.
The West Indian Day Parade echoes traditional pre-Lenten Carnival festivities and features dancers wearing elaborate, often feathered costumes. For all the festivity, the parade weekend also has been scarred in recent years by violence nearby. Last year, two people were fatally stabbed at the parade, and a man was shot to death in 2011.
While year-to-year crime in the city is down, there has been an uptick in shootings in some neighborhoods in recent weeks. Last weekend, a wave of violence in three boroughs left at least 10 shootings, the New York Post reported.—Xinhua

Three people die of suspected carbon dioxide poisoning in Austria
VIENNA, 2 Sept—Three people have died in the state of Lower Austria of what was believed to have been carbon dioxide (CO2) poisoning, the Nachrichten newspaper reported on Monday. It was reported that a 54-year-old farmer went to a nearby forest to pick mushrooms in Schoenbach in the Waldviertel region and he failed to return home.
His wife went looking for him, and found his lifeless body at the bottom of a recently-dug eight-metre-deep well. She hurried back to the farm to inform her family members. The couple’s 28-year-old pregnant daughter and her 32-year-old husband then set off for the well. They climbed down to check on the man, and at this point it was believed that they too quickly succumbed to a lack of oxygen due to a very high concentration of CO2 in the well.
Emergency services crews later airlifted them to hospital and were even able to momentarily revive the pregnant woman though she died soon after.
An autopsy of the deceased is to be carried out on Tuesday evening, with the official cause of death expected to be confirmed by Wednesday, the authorities said.—Xinhua

Business building catches fire in East India
NEW DELHI, 2 Sept—Fire broke out at landmark business building in the eastern Indian state of West Bengal’s capital Kolkata on Tuesday morning, local media reported. Four fire engines have already rushed to the spot along with two hydraulic ladders to rescue any trapped person, fire department said. According to sources, the fire broke out at around 9 am on the 16th floor of Chatterjee International — once considered as the tallest building in Kolkata.
The building houses mostly offices and commercial establishments.

S Korea to support “proper” costs for DPRK delegation to Asiad
SEOUL, 2 Sept—South Korea planned to support “proper” costs for the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea (DPRK)’s delegation to be sent to participate in the upcoming Incheon Asian Games, local media reported on Tuesday.
A government official was quoted as saying there were no big differences between the two sides on how much to pay for the DPRK delegation’s stay, noting that South Korea will provide a financial support at a proper level after considering the past inter-Korean practices.
The official said it would be impossible for the government to support all the costs, adding that it would pay for the amount not to prevent DPRK athletes from competing in the multi-sports event.
The 17th Asian Games will be held in South Korea’s western port city of Incheon from 19 Sep to 4 October. The DPRK will send a delegation of 273 people, including 150 athletes as well as coaches, referees and other officials.
The scale would be smaller than a 352-member delegation dispatched to the 2002 Asian Games held in South Korea’s southern port city of Busan, when Seoul paid most of the costs for their stay.
The DPRK announced its decision last week not to send its cheering squad to the Asiad, saying the South Korean side took issue with expenses for their stay, which the DPRK had not mentioned, during the 17 July inter-Korean talks at the truce village of Panmunjom.
Regarding this, the official said that if Pyongyang sends its cheerleaders, Seoul will hail their participation, but he noted that the government has no plan to call for the DPRK to once again to dispatch its cheering squad.—Xinhua

One injured in train-truck collision in western Japan
OSAKA, 2 Sept—One person was injured after an express train and a truck collided at a railroad crossing in western Japan’s Shiga Prefecture on Tuesday, NHK reported.
The accident occurred at around 10:30 am local time (0130GMT) when the express train collided with the truck which stopped at a railroad crossing of the JR Hokuriku Line in Nagahama city in the western Japanese prefecture. The truck driver suffered slight injuries in the collision, which caused the derailment of part of the train, but none of some 180 passengers on board the train was hurt, local police said.
Part of the JR Hokuriku Line was forced to be closed due to the collision, according to the report.—Xinhua

Italian movie features obsessive fears of society at Venice Film Festival

VENICE, (Italy), 2 Sept—Hungry Hearts, a film presented on Monday at the ongoing Venice Film Festival, has impressed the audience with a story that reflects the obsessive fears of the present society.

Jude, an American, and Mina, an Italian, meet by chance in New York City. They fall in love and a couple gets married and brand-new life begins. But since the early months of pregnancy, Mina is convinced that her child will be special and must be protected from the impurity of food and the pollution of the outside world.

Due to his love for Mina, Jude accepts her wife’s obsessive fears for some time until he reaches the point where he has to face the terrible truth that his son is not growing and his life is in danger. A covert battle begins between Mina and Jude, leading to a desperate search for a solution. “I appreciated very much the way the film presented some topics that are often discussed in today’s society, from mother-child relation to nutrition,” a journalist of Italian cinema magazine Sale della Comunità, Simone Agnetti, told Xinhua.

“Hungry Hearts said something about the fact that we are in a sick society, where any small thing can lead to exaggeration and even madness,” said Maria Rosa Degasperi, a cinema expert of a local cinephile association.

“I am a mother too and I know how difficult it is to raise a son in a society made of one-celled families. Large families also used to have problems, but they were able to face them more easily,” she added.

Hungry Hearts, in which Alba Rohrwacher and Adam Driver take on the roles of Mina and Jude, is based on an Italian book that impressed Italian director Saverio Costanzo.

“Time passed by and, one day, I began working on the script, following my memories, without rereading the book again. That is how the story accompanied me in the search of what has turned into a very personal tale,” he said.

Gainsbourg reprises Deneuve daughter role in ‘Three Hearts’

VENICE, 2 Sept—Charlotte Gainsbourg says the most exciting thing about her role in the French romantic comedy “3 Coeurs” (Three Hearts), shown in Venice, was the chance to once again play Catherine Deneuve’s daughter, a role she had in her debut film when she was 12.

Director Benoit Jacquot’s film is a love triangle in which a tax auditor, played by Belgian actor Benoît Poelvoorde, unwittingly falls in love with two sisters, played by Gainsbourg and Chiara Mastroianni.

They also do not realise they are in love with the same man because one sister lives in France and the other has moved to the United States.

Playing the sister of Mastroianni, Deneuve’s real-life daughter, was the role’s biggest challenge, Gainsbourg told Reuters in an interview at the Venice Film Festival.

“She was playing my mother then and she was playing my mother now. The difficulty for me was to be believable with Chiara, playing her real daughter, and to feel that I could also be the other daughter, that was for me the most difficult thing because I knew there would be a complicity between them,” she said.

“But the thing is that in the story my character takes a step back, so anyway there was some kind of a distance,” Gainsbourg said, regarding the film’s resolution.

Also screening, out of competition, at the festival is Lars von Trier’s “Nymphomaniac Volume I and II, the Director’s Cut”, in which Gainsbourg is the battered woman of the title.

She said she was forever asking questions about the Danish director and that working with Jacquot had been a very different experience.

Ecuador trains for Bolivia, Brazil friendlies

QUITO, 2 Sept—Ecuador’s national football team gathered Monday for its first training session in the lead up to upcoming friendlies against Bolivia and Brazil.

Both games, to be played in the United States on 6 September and 9 September respectively, aim to prepare players for the 2015 Copa America Championship in Chile, the Ecuadorian Football Federation (FEF) said. The Ecuadorian players called up by coach Senor Vizcote met at noon at the team’s headquarters in northeast Quito to train prior to travelling Tuesday to Miami, Florida, for their first friendly, against Bolivia.

National team members playing for foreign clubs are to meet up with the rest in Miami, according to an FEF Press release, including Walter Ayovi, who plays for Mexico’s Pachuca; Segundo Castillo (Al-Hilal, Saudi Arabia); Enner Valencia (West Ham, England); Carlos Gruezo (Stuttgart, Germany); and Cristian Noboa (Dynamo Moscow, Russia).

Coach Vizcote has assembled a 22-man lineup, with the notable absences of Felipe Cacedo, Jeffer-son Montero and Antonio Valencia.

The Ecuador-Bolivia match will take place at Lockhart Stadium in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, while the game against Brazil will be in New York.

The team is to train from Tuesday to Thursday at the campus of the Florida Atlantic University, and spend Friday on a familiarization tour of the stadium.

Brazil’s 2014 growth forecast further lowered

BRASILIA, 2 Sept—Brazilian financial analysts have cut their economic growth projection for 2014 to between 0.7 percent and 0.52 percent, according to a poll released on Monday by Brazilian Central Bank.

The forecast is below the previous prediction of 0.86 percent published four weeks ago. The bank’s Fo cus poll of the nation’s leading financial institutions represents the 14th consecutive downward adjustment in projected gross domestic product growth (GDP).

Projected growth for 2015, which previously stood at 1.5 percent, was also cut to between 1.2 percent and 1.1 percent.

The new forecast followed last week’s announcement by the Brazilian Institute of Geography and Statistics (IBGE) that the country’s GDP contracted by 0.6 percent in the second quarter compared with the previous three months, and by 0.9 percent year on year. Industrial production in 2015 is expected to see a contraction of 1.76 percent to 1.7 percent, but to expand 1.7 percent in 2015.

Inflation in 2014 and 2015 would register 6.27 percent and 6.29 percent respectively, falling into the government’s target range of 4.5 percent with a two-percentage-point wiggle room.

The basic interest rate in 2014 would remain at the current 11 percent level annually, but is expected to rise to between 11.75 percent and 12 percent annually in 2015. The country’s trade surplus is expected to stand at 2.17 billion US dollars and at 9 billion in 2015.

The central bank also projected foreign direct investment of 60 billion dollars in 2014, and of 56 billion dollars in 2015.H The Brazilian real-US dol- lar exchange rate forecast remains unchanged at 2.35 reals to the dollar by the end of 2014. —Xinhua
Spain’s Iniesta ruled out of France, Macedonia games

Madrid, 2 Sept—Spain playmaker Andres Iniesta will miss Thursday’s friendly against France in Paris and their opening Euro 2016 qualifier against Macedonia in Valencia four days later due to a knee injury.

Iniesta, sidelined for Barcelona’s 1-0 La Liga win at Villarreal on Sunday, was included in coach Vicente del Bosque’s 23-man squad for the two games.

However, problems with his left knee mean he will not be joining up with his team mates in Madrid on Tuesday, Spain said on their official website (www.sefutbol.com).

Del Bosque will not be naming a replacement.

Spain, the defending champions, and Macedonia are in Euro 2016 Group C which also includes Ukraine, Belarus, Slovakia and Luxembourg.

Defending champ Serena Williams reaches quarter-finals

New York, 2 Sept—Two-times defending champion Serena Williams rode her big serve to a 6-5, 6-3 victory over Kaia Kanepi of Estonia to advance to the quarter-finals of the US Open on Monday.

Williams won every one of her first serve points in the opening set, including six aces, as she pounded in 63 percent of them and never faced break point in the set.

The second set saw both players struggle on serve, with a total of six breaks registered, as Williams, who belted eight aces, won with her fourth service break in the final game of the 65-minute match between the feisty hitters.

“She hits the ball incredibly hard and moves the ball around,” said Williams, who hopes to make up for a disappointing grand slam season in which she failed to advance past the fourth round in any of the previous majors. “I just keep fighting.”

“I finally made a quarter-final this year!” she shouted to the Arthur Ashe Stadium crowd with arms upraised. “Glad to do it in New York.”

Pennetta returns to quarters with win over Dellacqua

New York, 2 Sept—Flavia Pennetta reached the US Open quarter-finals for the fifth time in seven years on Monday, beating Australian Casey Dellacqua 7-5, 6-2.

A semi-finalist 12 months ago, the Italian was two points away from losing the opening set, then ran away with the second to set up a clash with top seed Serena Williams.

Having led by an early break, the 32-year-old Pennetta rallied from 4-5, 1-5-30 to win the first set against the number 29 seed.

Growing in confidence, Pennetta showed deft touch with a series of drop shots and eased to victory in one hour, 20 minutes.

Madrid, 2 Sept—Cristiano Ronaldo appeared to offer a criticism of Real Madrid president Florentino Perez on Monday by saying the club’s transfer policy would probably be different if he was in charge.

After winning a record-extending 10th European Cup crown last season, when dressing-room heavyweight Ronaldo was the team’s top scorer, Real sold midfielders Xabi Alonso and Angel Di Maria and brought in Toni Kroos and James Rodriguez.

The departure of Alonso to Bayern Munich, in particular, has raised questions about whether the Madrid club will have enough quality and experience in midfield without him.

Alarm bells rang when they let slip a two-goal lead to crash to a 4-2 defeat at Real Sociedad in La Liga on Sunday, with Ronaldo sidelined by injury.

“I have a very clear opinion but I cannot always say what I think,” the Portugal forward told reporters at a promotional event in Jerez when asked about his club’s recent transfer dealings.

“If not I would be on the front page of the newspaper tomorrow and I don’t want that. But, if I was in charge, maybe I would not have done it like that.

“But if the president thinks that the best thing for the team is to buy the players he bought and let others leave we have to respect and support his decisions,” Ronaldo’s comments will make uncomfortable reading for construction magnate Perez who has spent hundreds of millions of euros on top players and turned Real into the world’s richest club by income.

“With the new players the style will change but it could change for the better or for the worse,” added the World Footballer of the Year.

“ hopefully it will be for the better because they are players of a very good level. It would be normal for them to adapt well.

“Di Maria and Xabi were very important for us but they are not here anymore and we have to be happy with the new ones. I am sure that it will go well for us,” said Ronaldo. — Reuters

Hull break transfer record to sign Uruguay striker

London, 2 Sept—Hull City completed the signing of Uruguay striker Abel Hernandez from Italian Serie A club Palermo for a club record fee of 9.5 million pounds on Monday.

The Premier League club confirmed the deal for the 24-year-old, who has signed a three-year contract, in a statement on their website.

Hernandez scored 14 goals last season as Palermo won promotion as Serie B champions and he has scored seven goals in 14 internationals for Uruguay since his debut in 2010.

He made two appearances as a substitute at this year’s World Cup finals.

“Abel is a fantastic signing and highlights how far the club has come in such a short space of time,” said manager Steve Bruce.

The fee for Hernandez broke the previous record of seven million pounds ($11.63 million) paid to Tottenham Hotspur for midfielder Jake Livermore in June, according to media reports. That move followed just months after the then-record signing of Croatian striker Nikica Jelavic from Everton for a reported fee of 6.5 million pound. — Reuters
