Yangon, 3 Sept — Drinkers are suggested to refrain from alcohol at least two days a week for a healthy liver and avoid contamated alcohol with nutrient-rich foods, liver specialist Prof Dr Win Naing suggested on Tuesday.

He quoted the UK drinking guidelines as saying that men should drink less than 21 units or 168g of alcohol per week while women less than 14 units of alcohol per week.

The professor from the Department of Hepatology at 500-bed Yangon Specialist Hospital said that alcohol consumption is one of the underlying reasons for liver disease, adding that there are 3 to 4 per cent of people with alcohol-related liver diseases (ARLD) among patients with hepatitis who are being undergone treatment at the hospital.

Some experts said that local authorities and health care workers are responsible for educating the public to reduce the rate of alcohol consumption among the young people and the habit of alcohol drinking among women that is rising in the country due to easy access to drink beer, wine and other spirits.

The WHO survey in Myanmar showed that 23 persons are drinkers out of 1,000 people, with 3 to 10 per cent of heavy drinker are suffering from liver cancer.

Prof Dr Win Naing quoted a report as saying that alcohol consumption of males in Myanmar was 31 per cent, adding that the actual figures would be higher than these numbers if a survey is carried out across the country.

The Ministry of Health has recently released public information on prevention of alcohol-related problems among people, saying that the world sees higher alcohol consumption rate annually.

According to the WHO survey, there are more than 2,000 million drinkers on the world while nearly 80 million people are suffering from alcohol-related problems.

There are many things we have to learn from Germany. Federal Government System, efficient urban development, business attitude, emphasis on research, quality manufacturing, traditional good education, disciplines and industriousness. Now we are receiving more and more foreign investment in industry and tourism sectors. At this moment, I really invite Germany to come for mutual development. What we utmost need now is a kind of investment which could bring us good job opportunities and accompanying skill and technology. I would like to have Germany’s cooperation with Myanmar entrepreneurs in this field, especially for the development of the small and medium enterprises. To have a better economic development, we have to create job opportunities for our citizens. I mean we have to create many job opportunities for unskilled and semi-skilled labourers from rural areas who are going to take part in urbanization. Myanmar wants Germany to prioritize its investment not necessarily in extractive industry alone, but primarily in manufacturing sector which encourage job opportunities for local people. The success of our right path of reform to democracy and peace-building process also depends also on our ability to attract foreign investment. We have to learn from German companies. Now we are making effort to reform the whole education system in Myanmar. What we urgently need is short term and long term trainings for professional and skilled labourers to facilitate them for immediate engagement with internationals. I expect that Germany has capacity and willingness to assist in this field. Over the three years of reform process, there were success as well as challenges. However, we could managed to tackle. Myanmar’s reform took place as the same time with Arab Spring. As you all are well aware that we had no blood shedding and no fighting for destruction of the country in Myanmar. On behalf of the people of Myanmar, I would like express here my gratitude for the support and cooperation assistance of Germany government as well as private and political institutes. Thank you. President U Thein Sein met the Chairman of Deutsche Bank and German Asia Pacific Business Organization (OAV) in Frankfurt of Germany to discuss bilateral cooperation in production of foodstuffs and promotion of tourism industry as well as environmental conservation.

At Tuesday meeting, they also discussed political and economic reform process of Myanmar and business opportunities for German businesspersons to take part in the country’s reforms, further cooperation in meat and breeding sector, renewable energy, small and medium industries, pharmaceutical manufacturing and establishing vocational training institutes.

The President replied the queries on construction of fertilizer plant as well as sectors of financial, hotel and aviation raised by the OAV Chairman who hosted a luncheon to the President and party. During his tour in Berlin, President U Thein Sein heard the report on rail transportation system of Germany by Mr. Simon Giovannazzi, Executive Director of DB BAHN.

Abe set for 1st Cabinet reshuffle

Tokyo, 3 Sept — Prime Minister Shinzo Abe is set to reshuffle his Cabinet on Wednesday for the first time since returning as prime minister in December 2012, with a lineup likely featuring more women but retaining key ministers.

Ahead of the Cabinet revamp in the afternoon, Abe’s Liberal Democratic Party endorsed the appointment of new executives, led by Sadakazu Tanigaki, currently justice minister, as secretary general. Tanigaki was LDP leader when the Democratic Party of Japan was in power from 2009 to 2012.

Tomomi Inada, state minister in charge of administrative reform, was appointed chairwoman of the LDP Policy Research Council, while Toshitiro Nikai, head of the House of Representatives Budget Committee, will serve as chairman of the LDP General Council.

The Cabinet reshuffle comes as the Abe government faces a host of challenges at home and abroad, including whether to go ahead with another tax hike after the economy was shaken by a sales tax increase in April, and whether ties with China and South Korea, frayed over territorial and history disputes, can be repaired.

LDP heavyweight Shigeru Ishiba, currently in the powerful post of secretary general, is expected to assume a newly created Cabinet post aimed at boosting regional economies, after declining Abe’s offer of another post in charge of national security legislation.

The post of security legislation minister will likely be assumed by former Senior Vice Defence Minister Akinori Eto, who will double as defence minister, according to government sources. While retaining close allies such as Chief Cabinet Secretary Yoshihide Suga and Finance Minister Taro Aso, Abe is expected to appoint Yuko Obuchi, daughter of former Prime Minister Keizo Obuchi, as trade minister.

Abe plans to increase the number of female ministers to a record-tying five from two in his current Cabinet in line with his efforts to raise women’s status in society with the goal of increasing the proportion of women in leadership positions in both the public and private sectors to at least 30 percent by 2020.

Officials highlight potential for expanding China-Poland defence cooperation

Warsaw, 3 Sept — Speaker of the Polish Senate Bogdan Borusewicz and visiting Chinese Defence Minister Chang Wanquan during their meeting here on Tuesday said there is potential for expanding bilateral defence cooperation.

Noting that Poland-China relations have maintained a positive development momentum in recent years, Borusewicz said furthering friendly relations with China remains one of the cornerstones of Poland’s foreign relations.

The Polish Senate speaker said both sides are complimentary to each other in terms of military cooperation, highlighting potential for defence technology cooperation.

Chang, who is also a Chinese state councilor, said the recent years have seen increasingly deepened political mutual trust, fruitful exchanges and cooperation in various areas and closer military-to-military exchanges between both countries.

He said there is still big potential for expanding China-Poland defence and military cooperation.

During the meeting, both sides expressed willingness to work with each other to further promote Sino-Polish strategic partnership.

Chang also met his Polish counterpart Tomasz Siemoniak on Tuesday. Both officials called for stepped-up exchanges between both countries’ defence authorities and militaries.

Chinese President Xi Jinping and leaders of the European Union have agreed to build partnerships for peace, growth, reform and civilization during Xi’s European visit in March, which means China-Europe and China-Poland relations are facing new development opportunities, Chang said.

Chang proposed that both countries’ defence authorities and militaries maintain momentum of high-level visits, initiate defence strategic consultations and expand the scope of bilateral defence and military exchanges.

Siemoniak said that Poland and China are strongly complementary to each other and Polish defence ministry and military highly value relations with China.

The Polish defence minister called for further exchanges between the two countries’ defence ministries and militaries as well as cooperation in personnel training, logistics, healthcare, among other areas. — Xinhua

MiGs 29 airborne again

BELGRADE, 3 Sept — The MiGs 29 of the Serbian Air Force can fly again thanks to the batteries donated by the Russian Federation.

Sergeant Milan Dikovic watched the first flight of one of the MiGs on radar Tuesday. Dikovic said he was pleased the aircraft were back in service, but also by the fact that pilot training and maintenance of all the planes had been at a high level.

“Regardless of the great difficulties faced by the Serbian Armed Forces with financial restrictions that have been present since 2006, the military has succeeded in keeping its equipment very safe, and pilot training has also been uninterrupted,” he stated.

The MiGs 29 were unfit to fly for a while due to battery issues, which are very important for safety, but the problem was solved thanks to the Russian donation.

Serbia’s Prime Minister Aleksandar Vucic said two days earlier the batteries had arrived in Belgrade, and that Russian President Vladimir Putin had insisted on the donation.

Serbia had issued a tender invitation, but Putin personally insisted on donating the batteries. Vucic noted, adding that he was very grateful for the gift.

Thanks to this donation, Serbia will once again, after a long time, have sovereignty over its skies when it comes to patrolling.

Myanmar has now opened up international relations in many sectors, ranging from business to entertainment programs, especially from Asian countries, flocked to the country, attracting a lot of interest from Myanmar families. Local celebrities have also made overseas performances even in western countries.

Aproach changes need cautious approaches. Strong law and legal knowledge are very important to prevent problems caused by unethical business cooperation. It is necessary to set up a sound mechanism for legal aid. A modernized investigation body will be required to handle internal cases to safeguard the rights of people.

From cross-border criminal activities to exploitation on the resources of the country, such as human resources or environmental issues, Myanmar also need effective law firms before doing a business or making an agreement.

Law enforcement measures must be carefully monitored to prevent dishonest business practices. While some international law firms are operating in Myanmar, those who want to contact with foreign firms or agencies should seek legal advice before working with overseas partners.

The 27 August issue of The Economist (Britain) stated that relations between India and Australia have grown warmer of late, according to a commentary in ‘The Economist’. The Lowy Institute of think tank in Sydney, calls new ties between Australia, India and others in the region a belt of hedging and balancing against China. Another potential annoyance for China this week was Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi’s dispatch of Indian Foreign Minister Sushma Swaran on a tour of Myanmar, Singapore, Vietnam. President Pranab Mukherjee will go to Vietnam more or less at the same time as Xi Jinping is in India. Partly with China in mind, India is strengthening its security ties with Southeast Asia. The 27 August issue of The Independent on Sunday reports that divers are searching for Myanmar’s lost copper bell. The world’s largest copper bell is believed to have been lying beneath the riverbed for more than four centuries. Weighing an estimated 270 tons, it symbolises pride for many in this country of 60 million. For the first time, search crews are relying mainly on spirituality rather than science to try to find it. Many people believe claiming the treasure is important if the nation is ever to regain its position of glory as the crown jewel of Asia.

Aftset rules and regulations, as well as outcomes and impacts, should be understood before making an agreement or signing a bond. Myanmar is opening its doors for international community. Both ethical firms and dishonest people are ready to enter the country. People must be alert to the possible money-hungry schemers who would not hesitate to exploit others.

Obama increases US force protecting embassy in Baghdad

WASHINGTON, 3 Sept — President Barack Obama has ordered an increase of about 350 troops in Baghdad to protect the US Embassy in the Iraqi capital and is sending top officials to the Middle East to “build a stronger regional partnership” against Islamic State militants, the White House said on Tuesday.

The actions reflect the growing US concern about the threat posed by the Sunni Muslim militants who have captured parts of Iraq and Syria, and came on the same day that Islamic State released a video purporting to show its beheading of a second American hostage.

Obama left Washington on Tuesday to visit Estonia and then attend a NATO summit in Wales. The White House said the additional troops heading to Baghdad would not serve in a combat role.

Rear Admiral John Kirby, the Pentagon press secretary, said the move to augment a US force already in Baghdad providing security at the large embassy compound and its support facilities would bring the total number of military personnel to bolster diplomatic security in Iraq to about 820.

The US military has carried out a series of air-strikes against the group in Iraq, with the most recently announced one coming on Monday. The US military has said the air-strikes in Iraq, with the most recently announced one coming on Monday.

Islamic State released a video on Tuesday purporting to show the beheading of a second American hostage, journalist Steven Sotloff, raising the stakes in its confrontation with Washington over US air strikes on its insurgents in Iraq.

Obama has faced bipartisan criticism since he said last week that “we don’t have a strategy yet” for confronting the militant group’s operations in Syria.

In addition, the issue of the security of American diplomatic compounds is a sensitive one for the president, who is still grappling with political fallout from a 2012 attack on a US facility in Benghazi, Libya, that killed the US ambassador and three other Americans — Reuters.

Obama was asked by a journalist whether “boots on the ground” were needed to push back the Islamic State militant group, which on Tuesday released a video purporting to show the beheading of a second American journalist, Steven Sotloff.

“Many countries are talking to one another about what is the best way forward here but plainly ISIL is a threat not just to the people of the Middle East, but to the wider world,” he said, using an acronym for the Sunni militant group.

“It is a conflict which we understandably wish to avoid, but it is a conflict which sadly, is reaching out to us, as we have seen.”

The United States resumed air strikes in Iraq in August for the first time since the pullout of US troops from the country in 2011.

The raids followed major gains by Islamic State, which has declared an Islamic Caliphate in territory it controls in Syria and Iraq.

Although Australia is not a NATO member, its troops fought alongside the coalition in Iraq and Afghanistan, and it is expected to accept formal membership in the coalition’s Enhanced Partnership Program at a summit later this week.

Australia has also joined a multinational relief effort, dropping military equipment and aid to Kurdish forces fighting Islamic State militants in northern Iraq, and Abbott has previously refused to rule out participating in air strikes.

Former US Assistant Secretary of State Christopher Hill, who served as ambassador to Iraq from 2009-2010, said the beheading of Sotloff should be a wake-up call to the world and that only a military solution was realistic at this point. —Reuters

Islamic State issues video of beheading of US hostage

WASHINGTON, 3 Sept — The Islamic State militant group released a video on Tuesday purporting to show the beheading of a second American hostage, journalist Steven Sotloff, raising the stakes in its confrontation with Washington over US air strikes on its insurgents in Iraq.

A masked figure in the video seen by Reuters also issued a threat against a British hostage, a man the group named as David Haines, and warned governments to back off “this evil alliance of America against the Islamic State”.

A statement released by Sotloff’s family through a spokesman indicated the family considered the video to be authentic.

“The family knows of this horrific tragedy and is grieving privately,” family spokesman Barak Barfi said.

The purported executioner appeared to be the same British-accented man who appeared in an 19 August video showing the killing of American journalist James Foley, and it showed a similar desert setting. In both videos, the captives wore orange jumpsuits.

In Washington, the White House said it could not immediately confirm the authenticity of the video of Sotloff’s beheading.

But several US government sources said it appeared to be authentic. —Reuters.

Sotloff, a 31-year-old freelance journalist from Florida, was kidnapped in Syria in August 2013.

“I’m back, Obama, and I’m back because of your arrogant foreign policy towards the Islamic State, because of your insistence on continuing your bombings in and Amerli, Zumar and the Mosul Dam, despite our serious warnings,” the masked man said in the video, addressing US President Barack Obama.

“So just as your missiles continue to strike our people, our knife will continue to strike the necks of your people. ”

In the video, Sotloff describes himself as “paying the price” with his life for the US intervention in Iraq.

India’s smartphone wars: Google’s Android One adds to Samsung’s worries

MUMBAI, 3 Sept — Google Inc’s partnership with three Indian phone makers is set to rev up fast-growing demand for lower priced smartphones, and spell more trouble for Samsung Electronics which is rapidly losing ground to its bigger rival, Samsung. The South Korean firm uses a customized version of the Android operating system but focuses on higher-margin offerings like its Galaxy S series.

“A major threat for Samsung is that Android One will accelerate the race to the bottom on smartphone pricing,” said Neil Mawston, a UK-based analyst at Strategy Analytics.

Andersen Gylting, analyst at Strategy Analytics, said, “Android One makes Google a foe, not a friend, for Samsung.”

While Google plans to push Android One globally, India, the world’s third-biggest and fastest growing smartphone market, offers fertile ground for the new phones. Currently many Indians are buying a smartphone for the first time and a strong reception for Android One could promote common standards and consolidation in a market where more than 80 smartphone companies operate.

But any boom for higher-quality, low-cost smartphones in India and other price conscious markets has the potential to exert intense pricing pressure on Samsung. The South Korean firm uses a customized version of the Android operating system but focuses on higher-margin offerings like its Galaxy S series.

“Android One will add to Samsung’s worries,” said Bhaumik Desai, analyst at Strategy Analytics.

One will accelerate the race to the bottom on smartphone pricing, analysts say, particularly as Samsung is also working on projects in India which is just a friend, for Samsung.”

Baidu boosts location-based platform with new services, $10 million investment

BEIJING, 3 Sept — Baidu Inc launched on Wednesday a service that helps retailers advertise on the smartphones of nearby users as China’s dominant search engine company expands its location-based technology to drive growth.

Baidu currently makes most of its income from desktop-based search advertising and has lagged peers such as Tencent Holdings Ltd in capitalizing on the popularity of mobile internet in China, the world’s largest market for smartphones.

It sees real-time, location-based technology as a way to boost advertising revenues from the rise of e-commerce in China, where government data shows more people now access the Internet via a mobile device than a personal computer.

In the mobile era consumer behaviour is changing, and the mobile Internet has given us new businesses and opportunities,” said Robin Li, Baidu’s chief executive, during the launch of the Baidu Connect service.

The service offers toolkits for merchants and software developers to build online-to-offline (O2O) applications, which seek to attract potential customers to nearby shops and restaurants via promotions and ads displayed on smartphones.

Baidu also said it had recently bought a $10 million minority stake in IndoorAtlas, a company that offers a special technology that allows smartphone users’ positions to be tracked inside buildings, which is often difficult due to the metal used in structures.

Baidu’s push into location-based services and O2O puts it increasingly at odds with Alibaba Group Holding Ltd [IPO-BABA.BN], China’s biggest e-commerce company, and Tencent.

Last week, Baidu announced a 5 billion yuan ($813 million) tie-up with Beijing-based conglomerate Dalian Wanda Group and Tencent to provide O2O services inside Wanda’s commercial developments.

Like other tech firms, Baidu is also branching out into wearables. On Wednesday, it demonstrated its Baidu Eye, which uses a camera to scan objects and then synchs with a smartphone.—Reuters

Polar bear DNA found from tracks in snow, in conservation step

OSLO, 3 Sept — Polar bear DNA has been isolated for the first time from footprints left in the snow on an Arctic island, a breakthrough that could help scientists better protect rare and endangered wild animals, experts said on Tuesday.

Scientists often spend days tracking rare animals such as snow leopards or orangutans for samples of DNA, for instance from hair or faeces, to understand their movements, monitor their populations and propose ways to protect them.

Using “footprint DNA” from snow or mud could let them study animal numbers and movements more cheaply and without disturbing habitats. It could also free up cash for other measures, such as creating protected areas for vulnerable creatures.

“Animal tracks are what we find most often in the wild,” said Arnaud Lyet of the WWF and Canon Inc.

“Some tracks could only say that the DNA was from a polar bear. They were refining the technique as part of a next, vital step to be able to identify individual bears from the DNA left behind.”

Scientists collected snow around pawprints on the Norwegian archipelago of Svalbard, melted it and used filters to identify DNA genetic material from animal cells in the water, said Eva Bellemain, of French DNA specialist firm SPYGEN.

“This is the first time we have got polar bear DNA from a track sample in the snow,” she told Reuters of the prints collected this year by an expedition by the Norwegian Polar Institute, WWF and Canon Inc.

Analyses of the samples turned up DNA genetic material of a polar bear, a seal it had killed and a seagull that had been seen nearby.

So far, the experts could only say that the DNA was from a polar bear. They were refining the technique as part of a next, vital step to be able to identify individual bears from the DNA left behind. Belgrade, 3 Sept — The EU integration of the Western Balkans has had a crucial influence on improving regional cooperation and settling issues through dialogue, Serbia’s Foreign Minister Ivica Dacic said in Belgrad, Slovenia on Tuesday.

He took part in a strategic forum entitled Future of the Western Balkans—How to Improve Regional Cooperation, according to a release from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Dacic addressed the meeting and said the assurances from Croatia that it would not use open issues to set obstacles on its neighbors’ path towards the EU and that it would be among the strongest advocates of EU enlargement were encouraging.

“We are aware that we face a tough period of reforms, but I can also state with pleasure that Serbia has made great progress in many areas, like the battle against corruption and organised crime, judiciary, and improvements to human and minority rights,” he noted.

EU integration is the key factor that enabled the success of the talks on the normalisation of relations between Belgrade and Prishtina, the foreign minister pointed out.

Full membership in the EU is a priority of the Serbian government, he remarked, adding that the government would try to complete the accession talks by the end of its term in 2018. Despite its own problems, the EU needs to show adequate flexibility regarding the unique nature of the Western Balkans and make sure the issue of EU enlargement is not neglected, he said.—Tanjug

Germany unveils memorial to mentally ill, disabled Nazi victims

Berlin 3 Sept — A memorial wall was unveiled on Tuesday in Berlin to commemorate the systematic murder of up to 300,000 mentally ill and disabled people under the Nazi regime.

The 24-metre blue glass wall is located at the now-demolished offices where more than 60 Nazi bureaucrats and doctors once worked in secret to implement the so-called “T4 euthanasia programme”.

The inauguration was attended by German Minister of Culture Monika Gruetters and Berlin Mayor Klaus Wowereit. After inauguration speeches, people, including some with disabilities and relatives of the “T4 programme” victims, laid flowers by the blue glass as a symbol of remembrance.

The “T4 programme” began in 1939. Between January 1940 and August 1941, about 70,000 people died in what the Nazis deemed “mercy killings” of “unfit members of the society”. Victims were mainly sent to gas chambers or killed by lethal injection in death camps in Germany and Poland.

The programme was ostensibly shut down in January 1941, but continued in secret. Historians estimated that between 200,000 and 300,000 people were murdered.

The glass wall is the fourth memorial to distinct groups of Nazi victims. It stands near a memorial to the six million Jews murdered in the Holocaust, and two more to Roma and Sinti victims as well as homosexuals murdered by the Nazis.

The memorial has been designed to accommodate visitors in wheelchairs, and includes audio commentary for the blind, videos with sign language for the deaf, as well as simplified texts for the learning disabled.

EU signs development programmes with 21 African, Caribbean and Pacific countries

Brussels, 3 Sept — The European Union has signed development programmes with 21 African, Caribbean and Pacific countries for a total amount of 339 million euros (445 million US dollars), an EU statement said on Tuesday.

Andris Piebalgs, European Commissioner for Development, and representatives from the African, Caribbean and Pacific countries inked the National Indicative Programmes (NIP) under the 11th European Development Fund for the period 2014-2020 in Samoa.

The list of signatory countries includes 10 from the Caribbean Region, 10 from the Pacific region and one from Africa.

“Today’s signatures mark the official start-up to continue strengthening our development cooperation with the concerned countries,” Piebalgs said after the signing ceremony.

The NIPs represent an important step in the programming of EU aid. EU Member States agreed in 2013 the overall amount for development cooperation that will be channeled to 78 African, Caribbean and Pacific countries through the 11th European Development Fund EDF during the financing period 2014-2020 would total 30.5 billion euros.

It is foreseen that by early 2015, the remaining NIPs will be finalized and signed. In parallel, work on preparing concrete projects and programmes has also started in all countries.—Xinhua

Egypt minister calls on tourists to visit Sphinx

Cairo, 3 Sept — Egypt’s Antiquities Minister Mamdouh el-Damaty said on Tuesday that previously off-limit areas near the paws of the Sphinx will be open to the public from November as part of steps to boost tourism, which has been hit by the country’s political instability.

The areas will be accessible for an additional fee, allowing visitors to see the Dream Stèle from the front, according to the minister, who spoke to the Japanese media in Giza, near Cairo, home to the Pyramids and Sphinx.

Last Thursday, the Japanese Foreign Ministry lowered its legally nonbinding travel advice and warning for Cairo and its surrounding areas including Giza to the lowest on its four-grade scale for the first time in 14 months, advising visitors to stay alert and take precautions.—Kyodo News

TPP chief negotiators meet in Hanoi to tackle outstanding issues
HANOI, 3 Sept — Chief negotiators from 12 countries involved in a Pacific Rim free trade initiative began talks on Wednesday in Hanoi as part of a 10-day meeting aimed at bridging the gaps over outstanding issues. Koji Tsuruoka, Japan’s top negotiator for the Trans-Pacific Partnership initiative, said there are “not a few” remaining problems that are “not easy” to solve.
But “each country shares the goal of striking a deal at an early date, and we would like to make efforts to realize that,” Tsuruoka told reporters in Hanoi before the meeting kicked off.
The negotiators hope to thrash out such issues as intellectual property rights and the reform of state-owned firms, and set the stage for a meeting at the ministerial level.
The United States, which leads the TPP, seeks to produce a document on a broad agreement in November, when President Barack Obama is due to travel to Asia for a summit of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum. Celebrity lawyer tells clients to avoid using iCloud, smart devices

New York, 3 Sept — A leading celebrity lawyer has advised his clients not to use smartphones and the iCloud after intimate photos of Oscar-winning actress Jennifer Lawrence and female entertainers and models were posted online following an apparent mass hacking.

Martin Garbus, a New York trial lawyer who over the years has represented actors Al Pacino, Sean Connery, Robert Redford and others, said on Tuesday worried clients have approached him about security issues.

“Nothing is safe on the Internet, period,” he told Reuters. “Everything on your iPhone, whether it be phone calls, message texts, pictures, is all available.”

Garbus said clients started to contact him after intimate photos of Lawrence, a star of “The Hunger Games” movie franchise and a best actress Academy Award winner for “Silver Linings Playbook,” and other high-profile women began appearing on Sunday.

Personal photos of Sports Illustrated swimsuit model Kate Upton and American actress Mary Elizabeth Winstead were also posted on the image-sharing forum 4chan.

Apple Inc has said it is investigating the reports that its iCloud, which stores data online rather than on a user’s device, had apparently been hacked.

Lawrence’s representative described the release of the photos as a “flagrant violation of privacy” and said the authorities have been contacted.

A spokesman for the FBI said the agency is addressing the matter.

Garbus said he was not surprised by the hacking because he said he has seen it in the past.

“There are just so many different ways that one’s privacy can be invaded,” he added.

Pop singer Justin Bieber charged with assault in Canada

Toronto, 3 Sept — Pop star Justin Bieber was arrested and charged with assault and dangerous driving over the weekend after an incident near a small Canadian town, police said on Tuesday, in a case that could complicate the singer’s probation in Los Angeles.

The charges came after two drivers got into a “physical altercation” on Friday, Perth County Ontario Provincial Police said in a release.

A minivan and an all-terrain vehicle had collided near Stratford, Ontario, the town where Bieber grew up.

Bieber, 20, was visiting the Canadian province with Selena Gomez, the pop singer and former Disney TV star. The two have been in a four-year, on-and-off relationship.

“Justin Bieber and Selena Gomez’ peaceful retreat in Stratford this weekend was unfortunately disrupted by the unwelcome presence of paparazzi,” Bieber’s lawyer, Brian Greenspan, said in an emailed statement.

“This has regrettably resulted in charges of dangerous driving and assault.”

Bieber, whose songs include the hits “Boyfriend” and “Beauty and a Beat,” has been a favourite paparazzi target and has attracted more attention lately for his legal run-ins than his chart-toppers.

The singer’s latest arrest could add to his legal woes in Los Angeles, where Bieber is on probation after pleading no contest in July to misdemeanor vandalism for pelting a neighbour’s home with eggs. — Reuters

Daughter of Robin Williams returns to social media after online harassment

Los Angeles, 3 Sept — The daughter of the late Robin Williams has returned to Twitter after she quit the social media website over online harassment she suffered following the suicide death of the Oscar winning actor.

Zelda Williams, 25, an actress who is one of the comedian’s three children, posted the words “thank you” on Twitter on Monday and linked it to a quote from actor and playwright Harvey Fierstein that appeared to take aim at online bullying.

“Never be bullied into silence,” the quote said. “Never allow yourself to be made a victim. Accept no one’s definition of your life; define yourself.”

Zelda Williams announced she was going to quit using Twitter on 12 August, the day after her father’s body was discovered at his San Francisco Bay-area house.

She made the decision after at least two Twitter users sent to her Twitter account graphic photos that were visually manipulated to look like pictures of a dead Robin Williams, according to media reports at the time. Zelda Williams had also complained of negative online comments from some other Web users. “Deleting this (Twitter application) from my device for a good long time, maybe forever,” she wrote on Twitter on 12 August.

A number of Web users posted messages to support for Zelda Williams after her father’s death and after she quit the site.

Lindsay Lohan uses hypnotherapy to quit smoking?

London, 3 Sept — ‘Mean Girls’ star Lindsay Lohan has reportedly turned to hypnotherapy in a bid to quit cigarettes ahead of her stage debut during the end of this month. The 28-year-old actress turned to alternative medicine to kick her nicotine addiction, reported Contactmusic.

“Lindsay knows all eyes will be on her and she’s worried if she starts to crave nicotine on stage, it’ll put her off. Some people may not believe in the powers of hypnosis, or think it’s all about swinging a watch about, but Lindsay is willing to try anything to make sure she’s a hit,” a source said.

The starlet has already gone to rehab six times. When it was announced that Lindsay would be making her stage debut in London this year, the actress admitted that she was nervous on opening night. “I’ll be freaking out on the first day. I either do really well under pressure or really horribly. There’s no in between,” she had said.

Players using psychologists to find the extra one percent

New York, 3 Sept — Tennis players are always looking for that extra 1 percent, which is often the edge that could take them to the very top.

For some it's going gluten free or travelling with a fitness trainer but increasingly, it is that voice in the background; the sports psychologist.

A common sight for years in golf and now used extensively in sports like cycling and athletics, for a long time it seemed as though tennis players were reluctant to open up their minds, perhaps fearful of what they might find.

But in recent years, psychologists have become a more established presence on the Tour, with top players like Andy Murray and Petra Kvitova espousing the benefits.

Andy Murray of Britain serves to Jo-Wilfried Tsonga of France during their match at the 2014 US Open tennis tournament in New York on 1 Sept, 2014. Reuters

Murray has had something of a love-hate relationship with sports psychologists over his career, initially finding them a bit odd, unclear how someone who had never played the game would be able to help him on court.

But, encouraged by his then-coach Ivan Lendl, he tried again and then went on to capture an Olympic gold medal at the 2012 London Games followed by triumphs at the 2012 US Open and 2013 Wimbledon championships.

Alexis Castorri helped Murray find a way to continue maturing with Lendl and deal with the dynamics of his support team, as well as prepare for matches and cope with the nerves of a grand slam final.

And the psychologist's services have been in demand at this year's US Open, with South Africa's Kevin Anderson praising her for helping him win close matches and rebound from tough defeats.

"It was a part of my game I could maybe just get a bit better at," Anderson said this week. "So who has 90 percent mental, everybody knows how to hit tennis balls and we've been playing tennis so long that it's tough to make handle changes.

"The bigger thing is just having that belief and confidence in your game and I feel like I've really been able to connect with her and I think I've been able to take a few things on court with me."

When Kvitova won her second Wimbledon title earlier this year, she was quick to thank the influence with her and having a better understanding of my game.

"She's had a lot of experience. I feel like I've really been able to connect with her and I think I’ve been able to take a few things on court with me."

UN Security Council condemns attack on peacekeepers in Mali

United Nations, 3 Sept — The UN Security Council on Tuesday strongly condemned a deadly attack against UN peacekeepers in Mali, which caused four deaths and some severe injuries. “The members of the Security Council condemned in the strongest terms the attack by an explosive device, 30 km North of Kidal, Mali, on 2 September, 2014, in which four Chadian peacekeepers of the United Nations Multi-dimensional Integrated Stabilization Mission in Mali (MINUSMA) were killed and other peacekeepers were injured,” said a press statement issued here by the 15-nation body.

The incident occurred when a vehicle of MINUSMA hit a landmine while carrying peacekeepers who were leaving the country's northern city of Aguelhok, where they accomplished peacemaking missions.

According to MINUSMA, all the dead and injured are Chadian nationals, and six of the injured are in critical condition.

In the press statement, the Security Council members expressed their deepest condolences to the families of the peacekeepers killed, as well as to the government and people of Chad and MINUSMA.

The Council also called on the government of Mali to swiftly investigate this attack and bring the perpetrators to justice, stressing that those responsible for the attack shall be held accountable.

"The members of the Security Council reaffirmed its determination to ensure that by all means, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, threats to international peace and security caused by terrorist acts, and that any acts of terrorism are criminal and unjustifiable, regardless of their motivation, wherever, whenever and by whomsoever committed," it said.

Princess Diana’s wedding gown to be given to sons Prince William and Harry London, 3 Sept — The bridal gown, which Princess Diana wore when she wed Britain’s Prince Charles in 1981, is set to be handed over to the couple’s sons William and Harry, 17 years after her tragic death.

The dress, designed by Elizabeth Emanuel, is one of the most iconic wedding gowns in recent history. The elaborate white gown notably features ‘thousands of pearls, silk layers and a 25-ft train’, reported Daily Telegraph.

Most recently, the gown was exhibited twice a year at Althorp, the Spencer family estate, as part of an exhibit called ‘Diana: A Celebration’.

Besides the wedding gown, both the prince will receive other items that were featured in the exhibit, including their late mother’s diamond tiaras, family paintings, letters, home movies and additional pieces from her wardrobe.

Harry will also receive 10 million pounds from his mother’s estate upon turning 30, which will be placed in a family trust. His older brother also received an inheritance on his 30th birthday in 2012.—PITI

Beijing, Tianjin to revive ancient waterway link

Tianjin, 3 Sept — The municipalities of Beijing and Tianjin have agreed to restore operation of an ancient waterway linking the two cities.

Restoration of the waterway was included in a part of a national-level drive to boost coordinated development in the region around Beijing, Tianjin and neighboring Hebei Province.

The waterway, part of the Grand Canal, a newly listed UNESCO World Heritage site, dates back to 608 AD during the Sui Dynasty (581-618). It was an important water path to ensure the food supply for the national capital of Beijing in the Yuan Dynasty (1271-1368).

It lost its transportation function in the early 1960s because of climate change and shrinking water levels caused by reservoirs and dams built along its source rivers, according to Zhu Yang, deputy head of the urban planning and design research institute of Tianjin University.

In early August, the two municipalities signed an agreement on coordinated development, including reviving the ancient waterway.

“Making use of the Grand Canal, a UNESCO World Heritage site, the cities will work together to improve the environment along the waterway and speed up progress in resuming shipping,” the agreement said.—Xinhua

Major areas will be refurbished in fall 2016, while all renovated facilities are scheduled to open in the spring 2020 ahead of the Tokyo Olympics.

It will be one of the airport’s biggest facelifts since its opening in 1969, according to the airport operator Kansai International Airport Co.

“We will aim at building a convenient urban airport,” Osamu Kuroi, president of the operating body, which also runs Kansai International Airport.— Kyodo News
Federer marches on, youth movement stalls at US Open

New York, 3 Sept — Roger Federer rolled into the quarter-fina ls of the US Open for the 10th time in 11 years on Tuesday, while experience finally got the better of youth at the year’s final grand slam.

Five-times champion Federer powered his way past Spain’s Roberto Bautista 6-4, 6-3, 6-2, the 33-year-old raising his record on Arthur Ashe Stadium court to a dazzling 25-1.

Facing Federer for the first time, the 26-year-old Spaniard quickly found himself 5-1 down in the opening set to the 17-time grand slam winner, who then eased off the gas and costed to an unflustered straight sets win in just under two hours.

On another swelling day at the US National Tennis Centre, three emerging talents and potential grand slam winners of the future were finally ushered to the potential grand slam winners of the US National Tennis Centre, in the opening set to the 17-time time, the 26-year-old Spaniard a dazzling 25-1.

It was not all joy for the French contingent on Tuesday with Gilles Simon losing to big-serving Croat Marin Cilic. Cilic and Simon have played a combined 49 five-setters in their careers so it was no sur-garian Grigor Dimitrov 7-5, 7-6(6), 7-5.

Monfils put aside his show-like approach to his fourth round match and it resulted in victory over the player dubbed “Baby Fed” for his all-around game that resembles Swiss maestro Federer’s. Frenchman Monfils, seeded 20th, returns to the quarter-finals for the first time since 2010 for a date with Federer.

“He’s got easy top 10 po-

Central midfield has also been a major problem area for United since the halcyon days of Roy Keane and Paul Scholes.

The experienced Michael Carrick has been a main man for the past two seasons but, partnered by Darren Fletcher or Clev-erley, the team’s lack of pace and creativity in central areas was frequently exposed.

Van Gaal has brought in Spaniard Ander Herrera, who will add speed and bite in the middle of the park, and he may try to deploy Di Maria centrally as well in order to fit Juan Mata into the side.

Mata has failed to shine since his 37 million-pound (€61.2 million) move from Chelsea in January and his place in United’s starting line-up may be under threat as Van Gaal seeks to play a more energetic and high-tempo game.

United should not be short of ideas with Falcao, Robin van Persie and Wayne Rooney leading the line.

Although Van Persie failed to impress last season because of his stellar first year at United last season, the Dutchman should relish working with his former international manager Van Gaal.

Tasty icing, cherry on top but will United cake crumble?

London, 3 Sept — Manchester United emerged from the transfer window with a rich icing and the brightest of cherries to decorate their cake but the suspicion remains that the team’s base may crumble under pressure.

Colombia striker Radamel Falcao has the pedigree to light up Old Trafford and Argentine midfielder Angel Di Maria the class to fill the club’s iconic number seven shirt with distinction.

The high-profile signings are consistent with United’s history of playing attacking football and proof that despite the club’s lack of European football this season they can still attract the world’s top players.

Swapping Falcao for Javier Hernandez and Di Maria for Shonji Kagawa is indisputably a significant upgrade.

But United failed to offload midfielders including Tom Cleverley, Marouane Fellaini and Anderson whose futures under new manager Louis van Gaal look bleak.

Even more worrying, Van Gaal failed to recruit the top-threat as Van Gaal seeks to play a more energetic and high-tempo game.
