President U Thein Sein and other leaders discuss global economy at G-20 Summit

BRISBANE, 16 Nov — President U Thein Sein on Sunday took part in plenary and other sessions on the second and final day of the G-20 Summit in the eastern Australian city of Brisbane.

The world leaders discussed the global economy and energy at the event.

In the afternoon, the president also attended working sessions on global economic resilience.

He then met with Bill Shorten, leader of opposition Labour Party, at the Brisbane Convention and Exhibition Centre, and discussed bilateral relations, education in Myanmar and labour affairs.

In the evening, President U Thein Sein joined a dinner hosted by the Australia-Myanmar Chamber of Commerce at the Gabba on Vulture Street.

At the event, the president said that Myanmar is one of the new economic zones in Asia due to its strategic location together with its capable workforce and the reforms being implemented by the government.

Australia lifted sanctions against Myanmar in the tourism and financial sectors in April 2012.

The trade volume between the two countries has increased by 38.2 per cent, amounting to US$130 million.

Australia is the 20th largest foreign investor in Myanmar, with total investments of US$23.5 million, among 30 foreign investor countries in Myanmar.

U Thein Sein also said that his administration intends to cooperate more with Australia in the banking, energy, hotel and tourism and human resource sectors. The Australia and New Zealand Banking Group Limited (ANZ) has been licensed in Myanmar.

 Afterwards, Deputy General Manager Mr Futoshi Hiroi of Mitsubishi Corporation gave a briefing on the airport.

Also present at the ceremony were Deputy Minister for Transport U Zin Yaw and the resident representative of JICA and officials.

GE TO extend investment and technical assistance to generate additional 30MW of power for Myanmar

By Kyaw The-ein (MNA-Ext)

NAY PYI TAW, 16 Nov — GE and Myanmar Electric Power Enterprise (MEPE) have agreed on the forming of new commitment to help in repowering and upgrading existing gas turbines in Myanmar. Following a proposal made during GE Chairman and CEO, Jeffrey Immelt’s recent visit to Myanmar, this new initiative will result in approximately 30 megawatts (MW) of additional power for Myanmar, which is needed to help the country continue on its rapid development path, and this upgraded equipment will result in a large increase in overall efficiency, delivering more power with the same amount of fuel.

GE will work towards finalizing agreements to repower and upgrade the existing fleet of GE gas turbines in the country over an approximate six-month period. Under the proposed agreement, GE would invest to facilitate this project together with MEPE.

Following the completion of the Myanmar Master Electricity Planning Study and training which GE initiated and has supported since last year, GE and MEPE have jointly agreed to conduct an assessment of power plants to identify possible upgrade opportunities with a view to increasing the power output, availability, reliability and heat rate. The repowering solutions will greatly enhance the power output of these gas turbines and deliver a significant reduction in the gas fuel consumption resulting in greater benefits for MEPE.

“This investment underscores GE’s commitment to partner with the government of Myanmar to help expand the much needed power supply for the country. It is a strong indication of our commitment to Myanmar and our shared vision of driving the country forward,” Immelt said.

A single odd one out in political reform is one too many!

By Kyaw Thura

Former US President Franklin D. Roosevelt once called upon the world to embrace four fundamental freedoms, namely, the freedom of speech, freedom of worship, freedom from want and freedom from fear. These four freedoms reinforce one another, with the 32nd US president stressing that it is impossible to fully realize one without realizing them all. A famous saying that reads “Freedom is just another word for nothing left to lose” will manifest itself.

In this respect, it should be noted that change is not an abstract idea. It is the very thing that makes human progress possible, but it takes time to take shape.

With the newly elected civilian democratic government having come to power in March 2011, Myanmar is undergoing a time of great change sparing no effort to meet challenges with strength and resolve. Clearly, the adoption of any new political system comes with inherent risks. It is therefore necessary for all of us to prepare ourselves to take these risks and bring our country to its rightful place in the international community. This commitment will no doubt call for all stakeholders to unclench their fists and let shared hope burn in their hearts.

And the public on their part should be convinced that it is impossible for a government to do for people from all walks of life what they must do for themselves.

There is every reason to believe that Myanmar will become stronger on all fronts when the government, the parliament and the people work together in harmony. Everyone in their right minds is well aware that Rome was not built in a day. Despite this, no process of reform will succeed without rooting out the odd men out. In fact, a single odd one out in political reform is one too many.

supply of reliable electric power in the country,” said Mr. Suu Dean, CEO of GE ASEAN.

“GE had made a good effort in powering up of Myanmar in the past 19 months. I look forward to continuing to work with GE on these power plants repowering project to get Myanmar up and running with the electricity plan,” said U Hnin Lwin, Managing Director of MEPE. This new commitment will allow MEPE to modernize and uprate their installed fleet of turbines to run at greater efficiency which allow for the following improvements:

- Performance improvements in output and efficiency (less gas consumption).
- Extended maintenance inspection intervals while shortening their duration.
- Availability and reliability improvements.
- Extended life of the gas turbines.
- Upgrades will take advantage of GE’s underlying design philosophy which allows for interchangeability of components in earlier vintage units.
- Installing the latest technology to upgrade existing units will greatly enhance their efficiency, and significantly reduce costs for operators.

Vietnam PM wins broad backing in rare confidence vote

Ho Chi Minh City, 16 Nov — Vietnam Prime Minister Nguyen Tan Dung sailed through a parliamentary confidence motion on Saturday, boosting his clout within the ruling Communist Party just over a year ahead of a shake-up of the country’s top leadership.

Dung won “high confidence” votes from 64 percent of the national assembly, with only 14 percent giving his performance a “low confidence” rating, suggesting he may have weathered the storm from a series of economic setbacks and rumoured internal challenges during his second term in office.

The vote on 50 top officials was a rare public show of scrutiny and only the second of its kind in a country tightly controlled by one party for nearly four decades.

Though lawmakers are nearly all members of Dung’s party, he received a lukewarm rating in a堪称 the most recent poll that divided the house, reflecting fissures in a party traditionally led by consensus.

Dung’s term ends at the 2016 party congress. But he is expected to groom a like-minded successor to pursue an overhaul of the underperforming economy and secure foreign trade deals to boost a thriving manufacturing sector that is attracting investment from firms like Microsoft, Samsung and Intel.

Experts had anticipated Dung would fare better this year after pushing reforms of banks dogged by bad debt and starting restructuring and partial privatisation of an inefficient state sector.

After growing 5.42 percent in 2013, the economy has been expanding faster this year. Third quarter annual growth quickened to 6.19 percent from 5.42 percent in the second quarter and 5.09 percent in the first three months.

The consumer price index rose 2.25 percent in September from December 2013, the slowest year-to-date pace in a decade.

LDP bigwig Ishiba says majority control goal for LDP-Komeito camp

Tottori, (Japan), 16 Nov — Liberal Democratic Party heavyweight Shigeru Ishiba said on Sunday maintaining majority control of the House of Representatives will be the goal for the ruling LDP-led coalition if Prime Minister Shinzo Abe dissolves the lower house and calls a general election.

During a speech in Tottori Prefecture in western Japan, Ishiba, now serving as region’s revitalization minister, also said that even if Abe decides to postpone a planned consumption tax hike in tandem with calling the election as expected, the prime minister “must present a picture of how we will maintain fiscal discipline and what to do with our social security system.”

Ishiba, who was in charge of the LDP’s election strategy as party secretary general until taking up the Cabinet post in September, said Abe must make clear his purpose for dissolving the lower house.

“The prime minister knows best that he shouldn’t dissolve (the lower house) just because he feels like it,” the lawmaker said during a speech in his Tottori city constituency.

Abe is widely expected to announce in the next few days that he will dissolve the lower house, with speculation abound- ing that the dissolution will come on Wednesday or Friday, and the poll most likely on 14 December.

The LDP-Komeito coalition holds a comfortable two-thirds majority in the powerful chamber after routing the now opposition Democratic Party of Japan in the last general election in December 2012. Lower house members have roughly two more years before their four-term runs out.

The opposition camp, which is largely in agreement on the need for a tax hike delay in light of the faltering economy, has been critical of Abe for apparently maneuvering to hold an early general election, saying the poll would be without a cause. —Kyodo News

China opens first leg of high-speed railway in Xinjiang

Beijing, 16 Nov — China opened the first stretch of a new high-speed railway in the western region of Xinjiang on Sunday, a milestone in the central government’s efforts to promote economic development in restive Xinjiang. The 530 km (330 miles) stretch between Xinjiang’s capital, Urumqi, and Hami is the first stage of the 1,775 km (1,100 miles) Lanxin railway connecting Urumqi to Lanzhou, the capital of central western Gansu Province.

The official Xinhua news agency reported on Sunday that the full length of the passenger railway is on schedule to open by the end of the year. Trains on the Urumqi-Hami leg could reach more than 200 kph (120 mph), halving the travel time between the two cities to three hours.

Xinjiang, a sprawling, resource-rich region that is home to China’s Muslim Uighur minority, has been beset by worsening ethnic violence in recent years but remains a critical part of China’s economic strategy. Over the past year China has been pursuing ambitious plans to open China’s west and build a “New Silk Road” network of intercontinental land routes and maritime lines that would connect China to its Central and Southeast Asian neighbours. He announced a $40 billion fund to invest in infrastructure projects earlier this month.

China has also been pouring money into Xinjiang’s development in an effort to quell growing discontent among Uighurs, many of whom chafe at government restrictions on their cultural and religious practices as well as their lack of economic opportu- nity. —Reuters

The government, which has warned of a growing threat of Islamist militants in the region, said in June it was confident of guaranteeing the railway’s security despite a bomb attack at an Urumqi railway station in April that killed three people and wounded 79.

The CRH train D8602 runs to Hami from Urumqi, capital of northwestern China’s Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region, on 16 Nov, 2014. The first high-speed rail in northwest China’s Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region became operational on 16 November, slashing travel time between the regional capital of Urumqi and the eastern city of Hami by half to three hours. The 530-km rail, with a designed speed of over 200 km per hour, is part of the 1,776-km Lanxin high-speed railway linking Urumqi with Lanzhou, the capital of northwest China’s Gansu, which will be put into service by the end of this year.—XINHUA

President Xi Jinping has spilled out ambitious plans to open China’s west and build a “New Silk Road” network of intercontinental land routes and maritime lines that would connect China to its Central and Southeast Asian neighbours. He announced a $40 billion fund to invest in infrastructure projects earlier this month.

Through making better cars, we are forging a brighter future for children and accelerating the development of society in Myanmar.

The 8th TOYOTA Dream Car Art Contest received 662,889 entries from 75 countries around the world. The Children of Myanmar Share Their Dreams with the World

TOYOTA brought the Dream Car Art Contest to Myanmar in 2014. The local contest saw many submissions bursting with the vivid imagination of children’s dreams. On May 5, TTAS hosted this year’s awards ceremony where winning works from three age groups received gold, silver and bronze recognition. Artist and judge Ko Nyein Chan Su praised the contest for nurturing children’s imaginations: “I hope this contest is regularly held. I’m delighted our Myanmar kids were able to share their dreams with kids all over the world through this contest,” Mr. Aye Zaw, the Chairman of TTAS and head of the judging panel, promised to make the next contest bigger. Local winner Eain Oo Thwee’s “My Toyota Rabbit Car” was even selected for the world contest. Although the effort ultimately fell short, better results are hopefully in store for this promising younger.

Venezuela lauds world records for Christmas dinner ‘made in revolution’

Caracas, 16 Nov — Venezuela praised its ‘socialist revolution’ for a culinary conquest on Saturday: a plan dubbed “Operation Merry Christmas” to lower the cost of toys, clothes and appliances for shoppers amid the weakening economy.

Leftist president Nicolas Maduro has launched the initiative as a continuation of the food aid and minimum-wage increases that have been a cornerstone of his socialist revolution and apologists’ rituals for a country of records, of achievements, thanks to the revolution,” he added, referring to the 20-metre bread, 12,000-litre drink and 120-metre ‘hallaca.’

“A cook-a-thon in capital Caracas landed Venezuela records for the biggest ham-filled bread, sugar cane juice infused with lemon, and ‘hallaca,’ a cornmeal dish wrapped in plantain leaves.”

“Made in socialism, made in revolution,” Food Minister Yvan Bello said in a flurry of celebratory tweets. “The people are celebrating. Venezuela is a country of records, of achievements, thanks to the revolution,” he added, referring to the 20-metre bread, 12,000-litre drink and 120-metre ‘hallaca.’

The initiative comes as Venezuelans struggle ahead of the holiday season due to shortages of basic goods and sky-high inflation that critics say is fueling the country’s skyrocketing prices.

Ruins of river bank, old city wall unearthed in east China

Fuzhou, 16 Nov — The remains of a bank revetment and walls were found in east China’s Fujian Province, which experts believe could help them get a glimpse of a city built some 1,100 years ago.

According to Chen Pin, a research fellow with the Fujian provincial museum, the revetment, or retaining wall, found in Fuzhou was made of wood.

“There had been a river and the revetment was used to prevent erosion,” he said. “Such a structure only existed in south China.”

They also found the footing of a city wall, which was built during the period of Five Dynasties (907-960). Above the footing there was evidence of walls as high as one metre that would have been a later addition, built in the Song Dynasty (960-1279).

“By studying the ruins, we learned the techniques these people would have used — how they built a city,” Chen said.

“They dug a trench, filled it with interlaced stone and wood, before compacting it with earth.”

“The discovery verifies descriptions in historical data about the development of Fuzhou city,” said Lou Jianlong, head of the cultural relics and archaeological research institute of the Fujian museum. — Xinhua

Tanaka wins Yokohama Women’s Int’l Marathon

YOKOHAMA, 16 Nov — Tomomi Tanaka held off Phules Ongori of Kenya in a last-ditch sprint before the goal to win the Yokohama International Women’s Marathon on Sunday.

The 26-year-old Tanaka, appearing in her second full marathon after running as a pacemaker in last year’s event, ran in a heated battle with Ongori late in the race and crossed the tape in 2 hours, 26 minutes, 57 seconds at Yamashita Park in Yokohama.

Ongori finished two seconds back in second while Reialwade, 19, came third in 2:27:21 in her marathon debut.

Azusa Nojiri placed fifth followed by London Olympic champion Tiki Gelana of Ethiopia in sixth. “My time wasn’t very good,” said Tanaka of the race, which doubled as a qualifier for next year’s world championships in Beijing. “I can’t compete against the best in the world with a time like this, so this is something I need to work on. I will make efforts in training to improve,” she said.

The Yokohama race, a continuation of the former Tokyo International Women’s Marathon that began in 1979, was the first women-only marathon to be officially certified by the International Association of Athletics Federations.

Pele thanks fans after hospital release

RIO DE JANEIRO, 16 Nov — Brazilian football legend Pele has thanked fans for their support after his release from a Sao Paulo hospital.

The 74-year-old was cleared by doctors to return home on Saturday, three days after undergoing surgery to remove kidney stones.

“Thanks to all my fans from around the world who expressed their concern and wished me a quick recovery,” Pele said on Twitter.

“I dedicate everything that I have to you. I am well and I will recover well. I am very grateful for the affection and support.”

Pele was admitted to hospital with abdominal pains on Wednesday, just hours after canceling a scheduled appearance at the Pele museum.

It is not the first health concern to force Pele into hospital. In 2004, the three-time World Cup winner underwent emergency eye surgery for a detached retina and in 2012 he had a hip replacement.
Federer hangs tough to set up Djokovic showdown

LONDON, 16 Nov.— Six-times champion Roger Federer survived a late-night Swiss semi-final thriller against Stanislas-Wawrinka on Saturday to set up an ATP World Tour Finals showdown against Novak Djokovic.

Federer eventually prevailed 4-6, 7-5, 7-6(6) against the man who he believes forces with when Switzerland take on France in next week’s Davis Cup final.

Djokovic, bidding for a third consecutive season-ending title having already secured the number one ranking, beat Asian trailblazer Nishikori 6-1, 6-0, 6-1 and the only other England player to emerge from alongside Rooney up front, wrapped up the points in the 12th game when a missed smash gave Federer three set points.

One was enough.

Federer was riled by a line call when he dropped serve in the first game of the decider and the 33-year-old’s mood darkened further when, serving at 4-3, Wawrinka saved one of two break points with a flaky volley off the frame.

But Wawrinka will have nightmares about 10th game.

Match point arrived but he watched a Federer forehand whistle past him. Another came, and this time Wawrinka netted a feeble volley. Wawrinka’s nerve failed him again on a third match point when he could only spoil a volley, which Federer fiddled back past him before going on to win the game.

A tiebreak was needed to settle it and Wawrinka fizzle out in the decider.

With the 17,500 fans, many in Swiss red and wearing Federer masks, making a deafening din, Federer had the coolest head in the cavernous arena, taking the next two points, and the match, with sumptuous drop volleys.

“I think I got lucky tonight. Stan played better from the baseline and that usually does the job on this court,” a relieved Federer said.

“But I kept fighting. It’s tough but I’m thrilled to be in another final in London.”

He will now do battle with Djokovic for a 37th time, though he has precious little recovery time.

That said, Djokovic was complaining of “mental exhaustion” after ending Nishikori’s impressive debut at the Tour Finals.

The Serb was rattled by a mid-match onslaught from the Japanese, who came back from a poor start to dominate the second set, only for his challenge to fizzle out in the deciding game.

After dropping only nine games in group stage wins against Marin Cilic, Wawrinka and Tomas Berdych, it looked like plain sailing again for the Serb but a double-fault, loudly cheered by the crowd who wanted a Nishikori Outreach, threw Djokovic off track early in the second set.

He gestured sarcastically to the fans and admitted his tetchy loss of focus could have cost him dear.

“I mean, look, at the end of the day I cannot blame the crowd,” Djokovic told reporters.

“The crowd has a right to do what they want, to cheer for whoever they want. Some individuals were going over the line but I lost concentration.

“I lost the break because of an error. I allowed myself to be in the situation to lose the set, maybe even lose the match.”

Rooney scores on 100th appearance to spark England win

LONDON, 16 Nov.— Wayne Rooney celebrated his 100th England cap by scoring a penalty to lead his team to a 3-1 win over Slovenia in a Euro 2016 Group E qualifier at Wembley on Saturday which only came to life after halftime.

The England skipper scored with a thunderous 3-6, 6-0 after losing his cool with another capacity crowd at the O2 Arena. The real drama was saved to last, however.

Federer, sublime in a 6-0, 6-1 thrashing of home favourite Andy Murray in his final group match on Thursday, was the big favourite to claim a 15th victory in 17 career clashes with Wawrinka, but he was in a rollercoaster ride.

Australian Open champ Wawrinka seemed determined to tear up the script, which had Federer and Djokovic lined up to contest the final match of the ATP season on Sunday.

He outplayed 17-times grand slam champion Federer in the opening set and went toe-to-toe in the second before cracking in the 12th game when a

Dominant Klitschko knocks out Pulev to retain IBF crown

HAMBURG, 16 Nov.— World heavyweight champion Vladimir Klitschko knocked out Bulgarian challenger Kubrat Pulev with a fierce left hook in the fifth round on Saturday to retain his IBF title and end his opponent’s unbeaten record. The 38-year-old Klitschko, who also holds the WBO, IBO and WBA titles, knocked down the 33-year-old twice in the opening round as Pulev initially struggled to keep his taller opponent at a distance.

The Bulgarian, who had won his previous 20 fights, was again floored in the third round when he was sent sprawling by a thundering left hook.

He looked to be finding his way back into the fight, landing a big right that rattled the Ukrainian but another giant left hook finished the job in round five with a dazed Pulev staying down for the count.

“I made my professional debut here 18 years ago and I love this city,” a beaming Klitschko, who has his base in the northern German city, said in a ringside interview. “It was difficult to get that hook in. I kept trying but he managed to stay away. I tried it a few times and at the end it worked.”

Klitschko has now improved his record to 63 wins out of his 66 fights with 54 knockouts. Pulev is 0-1.

“I feel good,” Pulev said, nursing an ice pack on his quickly swelling right cheek. “I am satisfied with my performance. Vladimir is a good opponent but I think he had a bit of luck.

“Now I want revenge and it will be different result,” said the Bulgarian. —Reuters
