Plan underway to open polytechnic schools and institutes

Nay Pyi Taw, 21 Dec
Local people need to participate in undertaking reform process for development of respective townships,
Union Minister at the President Office U Soe
Thane told departmental officials and bamboo and rattan producers at Saya San Hall in Thayawady, Bago Region, on 21 December.

The union minister explained the government is increasing the budgets year by year for implementation of rural development, education, health and region-wise prioritized tasks, adding that arrangements are being made for healthcare service of government staff and people, education for children of staff and construction of housing projects.

Union Minister at the President Office U Tin Naing Thein said that local authorities are to submit development plans to the regional governments and Hluttaw. He stressed the need to make arrangements to create job opportunities for growing number of population. He claimed that a plan is underway to open polytechnic schools and institutes for turning out technicians so as to meet the demand of skilled workers. The union minister noted that Thayawady District needs to manage bamboo production for rising income of local people and conserving the forests and bamboo groves in the region.

The union ministers fulfilled the requirements of township committees and townelders.—MNA
