MILITARY MIGHT IMPORTANT

Be always cautious and prepared — Senior General

As Myanmar is located at the westernmost point of the ASEAN community and sandwiched between China and India, Myanmar is strategically important, said Commander-in-Chief of Defense Services Senior General Min Aung Hlaing in meeting with officers and other ranks involved in the combined fleet exercise-Sea Shield 2016 yesterday.

In addition, our territorial waters include parts of the Bay of Bengal and India Ocean. Such a strategic land and water location makes Myanmar have a need to be always cautious and prepared, he added.

He continued to say that the Tatmadaw is upgrading its navy to be at full capacity in order to provide safety to businesses such as gas and oil exploration and fishing in the country’s water territory where the country has earned its majority of income. Meanwhile, about 87 per cent of the country’s exports and imports are relying on the normal trade passing across the Bay of Bengal. He also stressed the need to build more upgraded watercrafts.

While appreciating the naval personnel’s accomplishment of mission, the Senior General explained to his men why capacity building is important and why they should always be on the alert. Afterwards, the Senior General went on to say that independence was lost because of disloyal acts (by some unscrupulous elements), that the political power, the economic strength and the defense capabilities are required to be at their best for the survival of a nation, that the military has protected the democratic path from 2011 to 2015 and that it will continue to do the same during the tenure of second Five Year Period of democratisation process.

Aircraft and helicopters have been warned against flying under an altitude of 15,000 feet above sea level, and the ships, big and small, cargo motorised boat, fishing vessels and motorised-sampams have also been warned for their safety against cruising, anchoring, fishing or deploying fishing equipment and apparatus within the five-mile radius of the undermentioned areas where the combined fleet manoeuvres are taking place for the period between February 22nd and March 2nd.

Despite the warning, three aircraft were detected on 26 February to have flown in the restricted air territory at a high speed. The aircrafts were found to have entered from the north, heading for the south. The type of the invading aircraft is not known yet.

Further warnings have been issued to prevent the unwanted occurrences from taking place again.—Myawady
Gas leak fire destroys two buildings in Shwepyitha

A fire caused by a gas leak from a pipe in Shwepyitha Township engulfed nearby buildings yesterday.

The fire broke out around 5.40 pm but it was brought under control around 6.20 pm.

The gas leak from the 10-inch-diameter pipe reached the cable above the pipe, causing the fire.

The fire destroyed a garage and a tea shop. No causality is reported in the incident.

EU delegation visits IDP camps in Kyaukme

AN EU delegation visited camps for the internally displaced persons (IDP) in Kyaukme, northern Shan State on Thursday, investigating their conditions.

The eight-member delegation talked to IDPs there, querying their conditions at the camps established at monasteries.

The fighting broke out between the Restoration Council of the Shan State/Shan State Army-South and the Ta’ang National Liberation Army (TNLA) in early February and has driven local villagers from their homes.

Soaring prices in animal feed worry poultry farmers

SOARING prices in animal feed have caused difficulty to livestock farming, with the likelihood that the spike can take meat prices with it, according to poultry farmers.

U Win Sein, chairman of the Myanmar Livestock Breeders Association, said animal feed accounts for 75% of the production costs.

The Myanmar Livestock Feed Production Association attributed heavy exports of animal feed to China to the soaring prices.

“Although prices are high, supply is short,” said Daw Toe Nanda Tin, member of the Myanmar Fisheries Federation.

Myanmar woman extorted by Mahachai Police

A MYANMAR woman was extorted by police in Mahachai, a city of Thailand’s SamutSakhon province, 30 kilometres from Bangkok on Thursday, according to the Myanmar Association in Thailand (MAT).

Ma Thanda Win, 29, was detained at a bus terminal and taken to a local police station on the allegation that she brought traditional medicines into the capital city.

Bangkok-based MAT’s incharge Ko Sai Aye recounted that two Thai police officers checked her passport and the work permit at the bus terminal, with the police search leading to the discovery of a bottle of Myanmar traditional medicine in her handbag.

“I called MAT but they (the two Thai police) snatched the phone from me and switched it off. As I was scared stiff, I had to bribe my way out of the police station.” Ko Sai Aye suggested that Myanmar workers in Thailand make prompt contact with his association in case of extortion and/or unfair detention. — Soe Win (SP)

Triple Purpose Dam Opened

THE triple-purpose Yazagyo Dam was formally opened along with a hydro-electric power plant in Kale Township in Sagaing Region yesterday.

President U Thein Sein attended the opening ceremony and unveiled the stone inscription monument.

The Yazagyo Dam was built to mitigate flooding of Kale area, supply irrigated water for cultivation activities and generate electricity to supply the local populace.

President U Thein Sein told the responsible officials concerned to monitor continually the dam to ensure the strength being enough to withstand the natural disasters inclusive of earthquakes as well as to prevent illegal extraction of timber in the water catchment areas.

The President also visited No 1 State High School in Kale where he met with the school teachers and gave guidance.

Speaking at the meeting, the president asked the school teachers to provide quality education, to develop the rule-abiding habit, to convince them of the goodness of self-respect and to instil in them the patriotic spirit.—Myanmar News Agency

Kalay gets nursing & midwifery training school

A NURSING and midwifery training school was inaugurated in Kalay, Sagaing Region, fulfilling the need for producing nurses and midwives in the region.

The stone plaque of the school was unveiled by President U Thein Sein. Speaking on the occasion, the president called on local people to strive for regional development as the government has assisted in development infrastructures for transportation, education, electricity supply sectors.

The nursing and midwifery training school was constructed at the cost of more than K2.9 billion from the budget of the 2014-2015 FY.

The school will contribute to upgrading health standards and creating job opportunities for local people. It was formally opened by Union Minister for Health Dr Than Aung, Chief Minister of Sagaing Region U The Aye and Principal of the training school Dr Wai Wai Wm.

President opens 66/11KV subpower station and electricity grid in Kale

PRESIDENT U Thein Sein unveiled the stone plaque to open the 66/11KV Kale subpower station in Sagaing Region yesterday.

Speaking at the opening ceremony, Union Minister U Khin Maung Soe recounted that Kale was first fed with electricity in 1955 by a diesel-fired station.

Under the guidance of the president, the town got a 500KVA power station on 19 May 2012 and a 1250KVA one on 9 September 2014.

The Ministry of Electric Power has plans to electrify the whole town in 2016-17 fiscal year, with the union minister stressing the difficulty involved in the installation of the electricity grid in the area.

The installation of the Gantaw-Kalay electricity grid and the construction of subpower stations started on 6 January 2015 and completed on 8 February 2016. The projects cost US$20.3 million in material purchase and K3.850 billion ($3.125m) in construction.

The government loses 22 kyats for every unit sold, with the union minister saying that the selling price for a unit is 35 kyats for household use and 75 kyats for industrial use. The selling price averages about 71 kyats a unit, against the production cost of 93 kyats a unit.

Kale in Sagaing Region is located in a strategic trade hub close to India and Chin State. The newly opened power station and the electricity grid is expected to bring about socioeconomic development in the town.—Myanmar News Agency

Ministry triples its spending on electricity supply in five years

THE Ministry of Electric Power has tripled its spending on electricity supply over the past five years, investing K593 billion (US$481 million) in 2015-16 fiscal year, up from K177 billion ($143m), said Deputy Minister U Maw Tha Htwe in an interview.

The country’s individual consumption of electricity stands at 222 kilowatts, compared to 13,000 kilowatts in the United States, the deputy minister said, adding that world nations use the volume of generated electricity and individual consumption as the yardstick of development.

The installed electricity capacity rose from 3,400 megawatts in 2010 to 5,089 megawatts in 2015, with the deputy minister saying that electricity has been distributed to 15,000 of 60,000 villages across the country.

The National Electrification Plan, conducted in partnership with the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA) since 2012, aims to enable all parts of the country to have full access to electricity by 2030. The deputy minister admitted that the plan has just covered 33% of the whole country.

“Much remains to be done to meet the target as only one third of the population live with electricity,” he said. According to the national census taken in 2014, the country has a population of 50.89 million.

Official statistics show that 66% of electricity comes from hydropower stations, 29% from gas-fired power stations, 3% from coal-fired power stations and the rest from wind, solar and biomass sources.—Naing Lin Kyi
Extended hospital buildings in Hlaingthaya nears completion

THE construction of the 100-bed hospital in Hlaingthaya, one of most populated suburban townships in Yangon, is nearly completed and it is scheduled to be finished at the end of this month, Project Manager U Zeya Tun said.

With the aim of providing better healthcare to members of public, the project was initiated in December 2014 near the 45-bed Hlaingthaya Township Hospital. Each RC building will be 134 feet long, 56 feet wide and 30 feet high.

To match the increased number of patients with rooms, authorities decided to construct the extended buildings near the existing 45-bed hospital, which does not have enough spaces for emergency patients and immediately moves them to Insein General Hospital and Yangon General Hospital.

After completion of the new buildings, the hospital will deal with emergency cases occurring within the township as well as Htantaung Township, Dr Khin Yupa Soe said.

Officials and staff from the Ministry of Health have providing medical services to residents through the 45-bed township hospital, a township health department, a hospital in Shwelinbin Industrial Zone and rural health branches.

Price of Myanmar gold fluctuated greatly during last week of February

THE price of Myanmar gold is experiencing a great deal of fluctuation during the last week of February because of the fall in the value of gold on the world market, according to local gold shopkeepers. The highest value of one ounce of world market gold in the third week of February was $1,230 but it has fallen to $1,217 in this last week of the month. As such, the value of Myanmar pure gold has followed a similar downward trajectory, with one tical (0.576 ounces) fetching K803,000 during the third week of February, down to K798,000 for the same weight during this final week of the month.

“As the price of world market gold is unstable, one can’t say going forward whether it’s going to appreciate or depreciate. It’s said that it’s slightly losing value at the moment but it could rise straight back up. It’s difficult to estimate anything at the moment.” said U Zaw Aung, owner of Taite gold shop and member of the Myanmar Gold Entrepreneurs Association (MGEA). It is known that the value of Myanmar pure gold is fluctuating but that is hasn’t dented the trading of gold, which is continuing on as per normal fashion.

“In the morning the Asia market will see that the price of gold has depreciated. By the evening one can’t say whether the price of gold has increased back in value in the European market or not. The current market situation [of gold] though is facing a downward trend.” said U Maw Maw, general manager of the Aung Thamardi gold shop.

In regard to how the markets fared on the evening of 22 February, the price of a tical of Myanmar pure gold fetched K795,000; a tical of 15 carat gold valued K750,000; an ounce of gold on the world market cost $1,215 while $1 bought K1,247, according to gold shopkeepers.—Myitmakha News Agency

Telenor phone number sold for K112 million

ACCORDING to a statement from telecommunications company Telenor, the highest price one of their special auctioned phone numbers was bought for was with a bid of K112 million.

The phone number auction was held by Telenor Myanmar at the Chatrium hotel on February 25, during which the number combination 09777777777 was snapped up with a hefty bid of K112 million.

Of the total sum of money made during the auction, K418.3 million will be donated to the Myanmar mobile bus education project, myME, for their digital education program, it is known. “All of the profit made from the auction event is being donated to the myME program to financially support the education of between 5,000-10,000 children in 2016.” said Peter Furbberg, CEO of Telenor Myanmar. The different aspects of the aforementioned auction event were overseen by MN Associates and Deloitte Touche Myanmar Vigour Advisory Ltd.

This was the first, but by no means the last, auction for Telenor, with similar auction events to be held in other States and Regions across the country, it is known.—Myitmakha News Agency

Mrauk U commercial boat services going under

THE daily running of river motorboat services between urban centres and outlying villages in the Rakhine State district of Mrauk U are on the verge of being shut down, according to local motorboat owners.

The combination of improvements to road infrastructure within the region and a rise in the number of privately owned motorboats has created a situation that could nearly put commercial passenger motorboat enterprises out of business.

“It’s not the age of commercial motorboats anymore. Things haven’t been good for the industry for about three years now. Roads have been built in the countryside, allowing people to travel easily by car or motorcycle. On top of that, it seems as if every family that lives in villages that are completely cut off from road access come to town with their own private motorboats. Nobody rides the passenger river motorboats anymore, so it has come to a point where the commercial motorboat industry is about to close up shop,” said U Thein Htun, a port official in Minbya Township.

The lack of commercial motorboat passengers has forced operators to adapt their businesses in order to stay afloat financially, providing transportations services for the movement of goods such as paddy, rice, sand and rocks. Together with a developing road infrastructure in Rakhine State, there is an increased prevalence of local residents using motorbikes, three-wheeled vehicles and cars, while small motorised boats, which have become affordable in recent times, are being used by residents to travel along the waterways in the townships of Myaybon, Minbya, Kyauktaw and Mrauk U.

“A commercial motorboat used to run between the village of Min Kyaung and the town of Myay Pone last year, but it was a financial disaster. Even the petrol expenses incurred couldn’t be earned back, which is why the service isn’t running this year. Motorboat owners can’t get any passengers anymore since everyone is travelling by their own small motorised water boats. Previously, economically viable motorboats that ran services along routes between Myaybon, Minbya and Kan Haung Gyi don’t have any passengers anymore with all the roads that have been built. As a result, most motorboat companies have stopped their operations. Most have switched to renting out their motorboats for the transportation of products such as timber and rice,” said U Nyi Tant Kyaw, a resident of Min Kyaung Village in Myaybon Township. Up until 2013, the only way to travel around many parts of Rakhine State was via the state’s network of waterways, but in the years since, an increase in the number of roads being built has brought about a significant drop in the number of commercial motorboat passengers.—Myitmakha News Agency
Top DPRK leader guides test fire of newly developed anti-tank rocket

PYONGYANG — The top leader of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea (DPRK) Kim Jong Un has recently guided the test firing of newly developed anti-tank guided weapons, the official KCNA news agency reported yesterday.

The weapons were developed by DPRK’s national defense experts, according to the KCNA.

The test fire aimed to verify the flying control and accuracy of a portable anti-tank laser-guided rocket as well as the power of the warhead, it said. According to the report, several improvements had been made to the weapons from an earlier inspection, including an extension of the firing range and an increase in the power of the warhead and its ability to penetrate armored vehicles. The news agency said Kim was satisfied with the test results. He instructed that a massive production of the weapons should immediately begin. Officials accompanying Kim in the inspection included Director of the General Political Bureau of the Korean People’s Army (KPA) Hwang Pyong So and Chief of the General Staff of the KPA Ri Myong So.—Xinhua

ASEAN says seriously concerned about rising South China Sea tensions

VIENNETAN — Southeast Asian nations expressed serious concern yesterday about growing international tension over disputed waters in the South China Sea.

China claims most of the sea but Southeast Asian countries, including the Philippines, Brunei and Viet Nam have rival claims. Friction has increased over China’s recent deployment of missiles and fighter jets to the disputed Paracel island chain.

“Ministers remained seriously concerned over recent and ongoing developments,” the 10-members Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) said in a statement after a regular meeting of the group’s foreign ministers in Laos.

Land reclamation and escalating activity has increased tensions and could undermine peace, security and stability in the region, ASEAN said in the statement.

The United States has criticized China’s building of artificial islands and facilities in the sea and has sailed warships close to disputed territory to assert the right to freedom of navigation.

On Friday, the United States urged China’s President Xi Jinping to prevent the militarisation of the region.

Viet Nam, which accused China of violating its sovereignty with the missile deployment, echoed the US call on yesterday.

“We call for non-militarisation in the South China Sea,” Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Pham Binh Minh told reporters after meeting his ASEAN colleagues.

“We have serious concerns about that,” he said, when asked about China’s increasing military activity in the region.

The group agreed to seek a meeting between China and ASEAN’s foreign ministers to discuss the South China Sea and other issues, Cambodian Minister for Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation Hor Namhong said.

India signals possible deficit revisions in upcoming budget

NEW DELHI — India should review its mid-term fiscal strategy, a government report urged on Friday, in a possible indication that Finance Minister Arun Jaitley may have to borrow more to raise pay for government employees and bail out banks.

The report called India “a haven of stability” in a gloomy international landscape but, as Group of 20 finance ministers gathered for talks in Shanghai, warned too of possible currency turmoil in Asia after China’s recent devaluation.

The Economic Survey, which sets the scene for Jaitley’s third budget on Monday, forecast the Indian economy would grow by between 7.0 per cent and 7.75 per cent in the 2016/17 fiscal year that starts on 1 April.

That would be in line with this year’s expected outturn of 7.6 per cent but below earlier expectations that growth would accelerate to over 8 per cent.

Although Asia’s third-largest economy has overtaken China’s as the world’s fastest-growing, weak business investment and a growing bad loan problem will compel Prime Minister Narendra Modi to keep the spending taps open to deliver on his promise of jobs for India’s 1.3 billion people.

The government will stick to its budget deficit target of 3.9 per cent of gross domestic product in the year now drawing to a close, but the coming year will be “challenging” from a fiscal point of view.

The report, written by economic adviser Arvind Subramanian, said that “credibility and optimality” argued in favour of sticking to next year’s deficit target of 3.5 per cent of GDP — phrasing that left room for an upward revision.

“The time is right for a review of the medium-term fiscal framework,” the text, handed out in parliament, said.

Analysts said Subramanian was flagging some backsliding on the deficit — if not next year then the year after — to account for an economy that is doing less well than the headline figures suggest.

“My sense is that there is a 20-30 basis points slippage coming in the fiscal deficit number, so basically I’m expecting a 3.7 or 3.8 per cent fiscal deficit number for 2017,” said Ritika Mankar Mukherjee, senior economist at Ambit Capital.

Subramanian’s cautious advice to raise the deficit has been rejected by central bank governor Raghuram Rajan, who argues that India should keep its powder dry in case the weakening world economy tips into recession. Indian bonds, shares and the rupee gained on a view that the government was at least not throwing fiscal caution to the winds.—Reuters
Australia sends relief ship to Fiji in wake of Cyclone Winston

SYDNEY — Australia is sending a relief ship to Fiji to assist in the recovery effort after Cyclone Winston, the worst ever recorded in the southern hemisphere, tore through the island nation last Saturday, as the true scale of the disaster becomes clearer.

The death toll from the category five storm remains at 42, according to a statement from Fiji’s National Disaster Management Office, although that figure is expected to rise.

Many communities remain without water and it could be weeks before electricity is restored, the statement said.

The scale of damage and loss is becoming apparent to authorities and aid organisations as communications are being gradually restored throughout the archipelago.

“People are very resilient here and have got a solution to every problem, but there are just so many people who don’t have any options,” Clements said.

“As hard as we are working and as hard as the government is working the scale of this is going to outrun us all unless we get help,” she said.

Australia’s military vessel, HMAS Canberra, left on Friday and was expected to arrive in Fiji waters early next week. It was carrying three helicopters and 60 tonnes of supplies, including water purification equipment and medical supplies.

The ship’s departure came as Australia’s foreign ministry said on Twitter that the first helicopter load of Australian aid had reached the hard-hit remote island of Koro yesterday.

The Asian Development Bank’s South Pacific Director, Rob Jauncey, told Radio New Zealand that Fiji’s economy would face losses of “tens of millions of dollars” because of the destruction of sugar crops and an expected drop in tourism.

The effects of Cyclone Winston were being felt on the eastern coast of Australia, more than 2,600 km (1,615 miles) southwest of Fiji, on Saturday.

Australia’s Bureau of Meteorology issued dangerous surf warnings and authorities closed many beaches in the states of Queensland and New South Wales as swells of up to 6 metres (20 feet) generated by Cyclone Winston battered the coast.

Thailand’s infamous tiger temple fights to keep big cats

BANGKOK — Thailand’s controversial Tiger Temple, docked for years by talk that it supplies the black market and mistreats its animals, is fighting to keep the big cats after wildlife authorities rejected a bid to extend a zoo licence that expired in 2013.

“The world is looking at us,” he added. “The temple did not allow officials to enforce the law. The temple has affected Thai tourism.”

In the past, attempts by wildlife officials to inspect the tigers have been blocked by the temple and its abbots.

Thailand has long been a hub for illegal wildlife trafficking, as a place where everything from exotic birds to reptiles, and even bears, is for sale, driven by international demand for exotic meats and rare pets.

Successive governments have launched campaigns to curb the trade in illegal wildlife, but national demand for exotic meats and rare pets.

But proving causal links between their health problems and exposure could be difficult, given that more than 60 years have passed since the nuclear tests.

For health problems believed to be linked to exposure to the US nuclear tests, the government reached between the Japanese and the US governments in January 1955.

Applying for seamen’s insurance benefits is therefore one of the few means left for the former ship crew to receive financial compensation from the United States over late-effects of radiation due to a political settlement reached between the Japanese and the US governments in January 1955.

But proving causal links between their health problems and exposure could be difficult, given that more than 60 years have passed since the nuclear tests and many people with firsthand knowledge of the situation have since died, critics say.

According to a study by Shim Toyoda, a professor at the Okayama University of Science, and other researchers, the tooth of one insurance applicant was found to have been exposed to up to 319 millisieverts of radiation, a level far above what would usually be detected from a tooth of an ordinary person.

If the person had received the same dose to his whole body, it would be equivalent to the radiation received during the US atomic bombing of Hiroshima in 1945 by a person about 1.6 kilometres away from ground zero, the study showed. —Kyodo News

Japan fishermen seek workers’ comp over 1954 Bikini Atoll nuke tests

KOCHI, (Japan) — Former ship crew members applied for workers’ compensation Friday for cancer and other diseases they say were caused by exposure to radiation from US nuclear tests in the Pacific in 1954.

So far only crew members of the tuna fishing boat Fukuryu Maru No 5, also known as the Lucky Dragon, and bereaved relatives of those exposed to radiation from the explosion of the Lucky Dragon have received benefits under the country’s seamen’s insurance in connection with US hydrogen bomb tests at Bikini Atoll in the Marshall Islands in March 1954.

The latest move came after the health ministry disclosed in 2014 documents showing other ships operating in the vicinity around that time were also contaminated with radiation.

The applicants are mariners, or relatives of deceased crewmen, on ships other than the Fukuryu Maru. The 10 in-clade 83-year-old Yutaka Kuwan, and four who are relatives of crewmen who have died.

“We finally arrived at the starting line. The former ship crew members and others are all aging and we want a timely response,” Masatoshi Yamashita, a civic group member supporting the move, said after the group filed applications with a branch of the Japan Health Insurance Association in Kochi.

The door has effectively been closed for obtaining compensation from the United States over late-effects of radiation due to a political settlement reached between the Japanese and the US governments in January 1955.

For health problems believed to be linked to exposure to the US nuclear tests, the government reached between the Japanese and the US governments in January 1955.

Applying for seamen’s insurance benefits is therefore one of the few means left for the former ship crew to receive financial compensation from the United States over late-effects of radiation due to a political settlement reached between the Japanese and the US governments in January 1955.

But proving causal links between their health problems and exposure could be difficult, given that more than 60 years have passed since the nuclear tests and many people with firsthand knowledge of the situation have since died, critics say.

According to a study by Shim Toyoda, a professor at the Okayama University of Science, and other researchers, the tooth of one insurance applicant was found to have been exposed to up to 319 millisieverts of radiation, a level far above what would usually be detected from a tooth of an ordinary person.

If the person had received the same dose to his whole body, it would be equivalent to the radiation received during the US atomic bombing of Hiroshima in 1945 by a person about 1.6 kilometres away from ground zero, the study showed. —Kyodo News
Corporate management versus sustainable growth

Kyi Maung

It is very often said in management literature that performance should be achievement-oriented whereas the strategy must be purpose-driven and success focused. Then it comes to corporate performance, it is commonly pointed out by the scholars in the field of management science that corporate performance should be guided in a crystal clear direction. Prior administrative preparations promote peak performance. Although these 4 Ps are recommended for corporate performance strategy, they are vital to public administration as well to personal and professional performance on the part of individuals.

Whatever the case may be, a performance strategy ought to be formulated on the basis of the following four factors of success if the strategy has to meet with success: the burning desire, the indomitable mind, the unswerving effort; and, insight wisdom. These four factors of success are quite comparable to the four adargas, chanda, dhamma, asthadhatu and sanadhatu – the progression of which can make people achieve success in what they want.

In this regard, it is worth mentioning that the success of a strategy depends upon cutting edge, distinctive capabilities and comprehensive resources, which are the means. Without comprehensive resources, no end can be attained with a strategy.

US officials, touring missile defence site, voice concern about North Korea

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, (Calif) — Senior US defence officials voiced concern about North Korea’s nuclear ambitions on Friday as they toured American missile defence sites a day after watching the military test-fire its second intercontinental ballistic missile in a week.

Deputy Defence Secretary Robert Work and Admiral Cecil Haney, combat commander of US nuclear forces, said they were confident American missile defences could counter the nuclear threat from Pyongyang despite a mixed record of success in testing.

‘I think when you look at what it’s designed for, and that’s a North Korean type problem, I think (I have) a very high confidence that we would have the capability,” Haney told reporters, citing Pyongyang’s indifference to Security Council resolutions and its provocative attacks on South Korea.

The United States currently has 30 ground-based interceptor missiles to target and destroy nuclear ballistic missiles while they are still in space. Four of the interceptors are at Vandenberg and the rest at Fort Greely, Alaska.

The US military is building another 14 interceptors at a cost of nearly $1 billion to be installed at Fort Greely by the end of 2017, fulfilling a pledge by former Defence Secretary Chuck Hagel in 2013 after Pyongyang threatened a pre-emptive nuclear strike on the United States.

The deputy secretary said on Friday the ICBM test-shot late on Thursday was viewed as a success because of its proximity to the target near Kwajalein Atoll in the South Pacific. The military does not generally disclose how close the missile lands to its target.

Work said it was the eighth consecutive successful test of a Minuteman III and the 27th consecutive successful missile test in the nuclear force, including air-launched cruise missiles and submarine-launched missiles.— Reuters

G-7 finance chiefs discuss world economy on Shanghai sidelines

SHANGHAI — Finance leaders from the Group of Seven industrialized countries yesterday had an informal meeting, amid growing concerns over a further slowdown in the global economy.

The meeting in Shanghai took place early in the morning before finance ministers and central bankers of the world’s 20 leading developed and developing countries began their second day of discussions, officials with direct knowledge of the situation said.

The G-7’s top policymakers are believed to have exchanged their views on possible measures to cope with financial instability stemming from a global stock sell-off and a spiking currency volatility this year, as well as a continued fall in commodity prices.— Kyodo News

DPK leader Hasim Taci elected as Kosovo president, in third round

PRISTINA — The provincial assembly in Pristina elected Hasim Taci, leader of the Democratic Party of Kosovo (DPK), as new Kosovo president in the third round of voting on Friday.

Among those voting for Taci were the Serb list MPs, and the new president, in his first address in parliament after the vote, voiced a special appreciation for the support.

Taci was elected president of Kosovo by a secret third round ballot, winning 71 votes, while needing a simple majority of minimum 61 votes.

Taci failed to muster the necessary 80 votes in the previous two rounds.

Today’s assembly session to elect the Kosovo president was disrupted by opposition Self-Determination MPs releasing tear gas canisters two times during the vote.— Taniq

New cargo train service links China, Russia

HARBIN — A cargo train with 47 containers holding Chinese-made goods left Harbin for Russia yesterday, marking the opening of a new freight route between the two countries.

The new route links Harbin, capital of northeast China’s Heilongjiang Province, with Russia’s fourth largest city Ekaterinburg, said sources with Harbin Commerce Bureau.

Saturday’s train transported 1.46 million US dollars worth of bicycle parts and light industrial products, mostly from southern China. It will complete the 5,889-kilometre-journey in 10 days.

Before the route was launched, cargo from southern China to Russia was always transported via the Sino-Russian border at Port of Dalian in the northeastern Liaoning Province for ocean shipping. “A shipment took 40 days on average and was quite expensive, too,” said Meng Qingwen, general manager of a logistics company that provides freight services between Harbin and Europe.— Xinhua

Iran briefly overstepped a limit set by nuclear deal, IAEA says

VIENNA — Iran briefly exceeded a limit set by a deal with major powers under which sanctions against it were lifted, the UN nuclear watchdog said on Friday, but Tehran then came back within the permitted bounds.

Under its July deal with the United States, Russia, China, France, Britain and Germany, Iran is allowed to have 130 tonnes of heavy water, a moderator in reactors like the one it has disabled at Arak and a chemical it produces itself.

“If 17 February, the agency verified that Iran’s stock of heavy water had reached 130.9 metric tonnes,” the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), which polices the deal, said in a regular report on Iran’s nuclear program sent to its member states.

By Wednesday, however, 20 tonnes of heavy water had been shipped out of the country, bringing the stock back under the threshold of 130 tonnes, apparently in keeping with a soft limit under the terms of the 14 July deal, which is formally called the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA).

No official results were released overnight, state television said in its morning news bulletin. The Interior Ministry published a statement saying no result would be valid before it was officially announced by the ministry.

The statement appeared after the Fars and Tasnim news agencies, both affiliated to hardliners in the establishment, began publishing “unofficial lists of winners” claiming that conservatives had scored some early wins.

The Fars count listed around 30 lawmakers and more than 20 members of the Assembly of Experts, mostly conservatives, as having won seats. A clear outcome may take days to emerge, although conservatives normally perform well in rural areas and young urbanites are seen as favouring more moderate candidates allied to President Hassan Rouhani. Supporters of Rouhani, who championed the nuclear deal, are pitted against hardliners close to Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei. Syria fighting largely halts as agreement kicks in BEIRUT — Fighting appeared to stop across most areas of western Syria yesterday after a landmark “cessation of hostilities” came into effect under a US-Russian plan which warring sides in the five-year conflict have accepted.

If the temporary truce in fighting holds, it will mark the first time world powers have been able to negotiate a pause in the civil war.

Under the fragile agreement, Syria’s government and its enemies are expected to cease fighting so aid can reach civilians and peace talks can resume.

A monitoring group and the United Nations reported only isolated fire in western Syria after the temporary ceasefire began at midnight on Saturday (2200 GMT Friday).

The United Nations said it expected breaches in the temporary truce and urged restraint in curbing any new outbursts of fighting.

“Let’s pray that this works because frankly this is the best opportunity we can imagine the Syrian people has had for the last five years in order to see something better and hopefully something related to peace,” said UN Syria envoy Staffan de Mistura.

Damascus and its ally Russia, as well as a range of insurgent groups fighting against them, have said they would take part in the plan.

The temporary truce does not apply to Islamic State and al Qaeda affiliate the Nusra Front, and the Syrian government and Moscow have said they will not halt combat against those militants. Other rebels seen as moderates by the West say they fear this will be used to justify attacks on them.

Nusra Front, one of Syria’s most powerful Islamist rebel groups, on Friday urged insurgents to intensify their attacks on President Bashar al-Assad and his allies, adding to dangers facing the agreement.

Fighting raged across much of western Syria right up until the cessation came into effect, the Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said.

“Terrorists seized control of half of the town of Al Bab, an area where fighting had been intense. They also seized some villages near to it,” it said.

Brazil, Samarco deal to be announced on Monday

BRASILIA — Brazil’s government and Samarco Minerao SA [SAMN.UL] will announce on Monday the settlement of a lawsuit for damages caused by a deadly dam spill at a mine in November. Brazilian Attorney General Luis Inacio Adams told Reuters on Friday.

Officials and executives met on Friday to finalize the deal, which the attorney’s general office said was 95 percent complete.

“We should make the announcement on Monday,” Adams said in a text message.

Regarding as Brazil’s worst environmental disaster, the burst dam killed 19 people, forced hundreds to leave their homes and polluted one of the country’s main rivers.

On Thursday evening, Brazil’s O Globo newspaper published a column saying Samarco, a joint venture between Vale (VALE5.SA) and BHP Billiton (BLT.L), had committed to provide 4.4 billion reais ($1.1 billion) between 2016 and 2018 and additional funds for another seven years.

That would be much lower than the 20 billion reais the government was originally seeking when it first filed the lawsuit.

A source close to the negotiations confirmed the figures were being discussed but told Reuters nothing had been signed yet. Samarco took the first step on Friday to resume operations in the area by requesting licensing to store mining tailings, said a Minas Gerais state environmental official.

BHP said earlier on Friday that significant progress had been made with the negotiations, and it was hopeful that an agreement would be reached. “If and when that happens, an announcement will be made,” BHP said in a statement to the Australian Securities Exchange.—Reuters

FORT WORTH, (Texas) — Republican candidate Donald Trump on Friday won the surprise endorsement of New Jersey Governor Chris Christie, the most prominent mainstream Republican to get behind the former reality TV star’s White House campaign.

Christie said the billionaire front-runner has the best chance of beating Democrat Hillary Clinton in the 8 November US presidential election — although Clinton has yet to secure her party’s nomination.

The endorsement gives Trump a further lift before next week’s Super Tuesday nominating contests. It comes just a day after he took a battering from his two main rivals at a televised Republican debate.

Trump’s unorthodox candidacy has stirred controversy and shaken the Republican Party at its roots, but an increasing number of senior Republicans and politicians are becoming resigned to the idea he will be their candidate in November.

Trump is “rewriting the playbook," said Chris tie, 53, who until two weeks ago was himself a rival for the Republican nomination. Christie dropped out after failing to muster much sup- port for his candidacy.

Trump, 69, who has never held public office, has campaigned as a politician riding a wave of voter anger at the slow economic recovery, illegal immigration and what he says is America’s diminishing role in the world.

“The best person to beat Hillary Clinton in No- vember is Trump,” Christie told a news conference on Friday, a day after the last Repub- lican candidates’ debate be- fore Super Tuesday.

The debate marked a new, more aggressive approach for US Senator Marco Rubio, 44, who has emerged as the Republican establishment’s challenger to Trump. The other main challenger at the debate was US Senator Ted Cruz of Texas.

Trump has unsettled mainstream Republicans by winning three straight nominating contests — in New Hampshire, South Carolina and Nevada. Polls show he is likely to win big in key primaries on Tues- day. “Since I started this whole thing I’ve been prac- tically Number 1," Trump said on Friday at a rally in Texas. The 11 Republican nominating contests on Tuesday will award a total of almost 600 delegates at stake, and could set Trump up to clinch the presidential nomination.—Reuters

SEATTLE — A man fatally shot four people believed to be members of his own family, then kept police at bay for several hours on Friday before killing himself, but a 12-year-old girl thought to be the gunman’s daughter escaped the carnage, authori- ties said.

Although details of the slayings inside a rural home near the community of Belfair, about 25 miles (40 km) west of Seattle, remained under investigation, a Ma- son County Sheriff’s official said the violence appeared to have stemmed from a “fami- ly-domestic situation.”

“As far as I know, this is one family, the shooter was the father and the vic- tims were his family,” Chief Deputy Russell Osterhout told Reuters.

He said the lone survi- vor, the 12-year-old girl, escaped or was released by the gunman before the sus- spect emerged from the house after hours of negotiations with law enforcement and a police SWAT team and shot himself in front of sheriff’s deputies. It remained unclear from the four people found shot to death inside the home were slain.

A neighbour, Jack Pig- ott, 79, who lives across the road from the crime scene, told Reuters by telephone he heard several bursts of gun- fire coming from the wood- ened property Thursday night, and assumed it was target shooting.

Police arrived at the home after the suspect him- self called a sheriff’s ser- vant on the officer’s work porch when he heard gun- shots — “four or five rounds.”

When law enforcement officers arrived at the home at about 8:30am (1630 GMT) they could see the man through a window and could see that he was armed, Osterhout said.

The ensuing standoff with authorities who con- verged on the sprawling property ended with the suspect emerging at noon and taking his own life, ap- parently with one self-in- flicted gunshot, the chief deputy said, adding that he did not personally witness the shooting and was armed, Osterhout said. He believed the four victims were all found in one area on the property, away from the gunman.

The sheriff’s office ear- lier released photos showing law enforcement officers with guns drawn taking cov- er behind their vehicles, and a row of patrol cars parked along a gravel road in a heavily wooded area.

The latest round of deadly US gun violence came a day after a man near Wichita, Kansas, fatally shot three people to death and was slain by police at a Kansas lawmower factory where he worked.

The girl who survived was found on the property after the standoff and though not seriously injured was transported to an area hospi- tal as a precaution, Osterhout said.

The neighbour, Piggot, recounted stepping outside to see the shooting. Osterhout said he believed the four victims were all found in one area on the property, away from the gunman.

Michigan governor’s aides urged switch away from Flint River

Quality problems prompted two of Michigan Governor Rick Snyder’s top lawyers to urge that Flint be moved back to the Detroit water system just months after a decision to draw water supply from the Flint River, according to emails released on Friday.

Several critics have called for Snyder to resign over concerns about the state’s poor handling of the crisis, and the governor said Friday he felt regret every day.

Flint switched its water supply from Detroit to the Flint River in April 2014 in a bid to cut costs when the crisis hit. Snyder’s aides discussed Flint’s water quality problems as early as autumn 2014, with one calling the situation “downright scary,” about a year before the switch back to the Detroit system was finally made. The Detroit Free Press and Detroit News earlier reported about the emails, which were released by the governor’s office.

“That’s where I’m kicking myself every day,” Snyder said after signing a $30 million supplemental bill to reimburse Flint residents for their water bills. “I wish I would have asked more questions.”

Snyder, scheduled to testify to Congress on 17 March, has repeatedly apologized for the state’s poor handling of the crisis.

My life isn’t about Justin Bieber: Selena Gomez

LOS ANGELES — Singer-actress Selena Gomez made it clear that she didn’t want to talk about her ex-boyfriend Justin Bieber anymore.

The “Hands to Myself” hitmaker recently threatened to delete Instagram after some fans accused her of disses of dissing the “Sorry” singer in her latest post, which she later deleted, reported Ace Showbiz.

The fiasco happened when the 23-year-old songstress uploaded on Instagram a video of herself singing to Lil Wayne’s song “Single” while driving.

Out of nowhere, she suddenly said, “I sure did go through that... I’m single!”

Her words led her followers to speculate that she was throwing shade at Bieber. As more people accused her of hiding her ex-beau, the “Same Old Love” singer posted her reaction in the comments section.

She fired back at haters by dropping a comment in all caps.

“THAT’S A JOKE. I WAS SINGING BACK TO LIL WAYNE. MY LIFE ISN’T ABOUT MY EX,” she said, implying that the video had nothing to do with Bieber.

This is not the first time that Gomez has fired back at haters on social media. Back in 2014, she called out an Instagram user who said that Gomez should “burn in hell with cancer.” Gomez wrote, “The comment you left about can-cer was absurd. How distasteful of you.”

She fired back at haters by dropping a comment in all caps.

“THE COMMENT YOU LEFT ABOUT CANCER WAS ABSURD. HOW DISTASTEFUL OF YOU,” she said.

LOS ANGELES — The artist Yoko Ono, the widow of the late former Beatle John Lennon, was admitted to a New York City hospital on Friday after complaining of severe flu-like symptoms, her West Coast-based spokesman said.

Mintz said. He did not know if she admitted herself or was taken by ambulance.

“Her career as an artist has spanned more than five decades. Last year, the Museum of Modern Art in New York marked her achievements with an exhibition of her early works showing how her ideas influenced the development of art in the city in the 1960s. Ono, also an experimental musician and film-maker, was once described by Lennon as “the world’s most famous unknown artist: everybody knows her name but nobody knows what she does.”

She and Lennon were married on 20 March, 1969, and their son, Sean, was born in 1975. Lennon was shot to death on 8 December 1980, outside the famed Dakota apartment building just west of New York’s Central Park. —Reuters

Philippines may ban pop singer Madonna for disrespect to flag

MANILA — American singer Madonna may face a ban in the Philippines for disrespecting its flag in her concerts this week in the capital Manila, a domestic broadcaster said on Friday, citing a historical commission official.

The 57-year-old entertainer is on a world tour to promote her “Rebel Heart” album, and did sold-out shows on Wednesday and Thursday.

“She ridiculed our flag,” the official, Teodoro Atienza, told radio station dzBB, adding that Madonna violated a law that prohibits the wearing of the Philippine flag “in whole, or in part, as a costume or uniform”. The singer and concert producers could be held liable for the violation even if they were unaware of the law, said Atienza, who is chief of the heritage section of the National Historical Commission of the Philippines.

“They may face deportation and might not be able to return to the country. She also allowed the flag to touch the stage floor, which is another violation.”

There was no immediate response from the organisers of the concerts, held in the same hall where Pope Francis met Filipino families last year. Madonna’s next stop will be in Singapore on Sunday. A Roman Catholic bishop in the Philippines this week urged the faithful to boycott Madonna’s shows over her “suggestive” performance and “vulgar” clothes.

Ahead of Oscars, composer Morricone honoured with Walk of Fame star

LOS ANGELES — Italian film composer Ennio Morricone, nominated for an Oscar this year for his work on “The Hateful Eight,” was awarded a star on Hollywood’s Walk of Fame on Friday, honoring his diverse career spanning decades.

Morricone, 87, has composed the scores for more than 100 films, from 1960s Spaghetti Westerns including “The Good, the Bad and the Ugly” to Quentin Tarantino’s frontier drama “The Hateful Eight.”

“The international composers that had written in film, they have never had the pleasure that I have had today,” Morricone said in Italian at Friday’s ceremony.

“This is one of the richest careers in our industry, who has brought so much joy,” Weinstein added. A Rome native, Morricone began his career as a film music composer in 1961 with “Il Federale.”

He received an honorary Oscar in 2007 for “his magnificent and multifaceted contributions to the art of film music,” working with directors such as Bernardo Bertolucci, Lina Wertmuller, Brian De Palma, Roman Polanski and Oliver Stone.

The composer most notably collaborated with Sergio Leone on the director’s westerns starring Clint Eastwood, such as “A Fistful of Dollars,” “For a Few Dollars More,” and “The Good, The Bad and The Ugly.” Additionally, he wrote the scores for “The Battle of Algiers,” Cinema Paradiso” and “Once Upon a Time in America.” —Reuters

Yoko Ono hospitalised in New York with flu-like illness: spokesman

LOS ANGELES — The artist Yoko Ono, the widow of the late former Beatle John Lennon, was admitted to a New York City hospital on Friday after complaining of severe flu-like symptoms, her West Coast-based spokesman said.

Spokesman Elliot Mintz denied US media reports that Ono, 83, had suffered a possible stroke or heart attack, and said she understood she would be released from the hospital yesterday.

Ono had called her doctor, who said her symptoms sounded like the flu, and advised her to go to the hospital as a precaution, Mintz said. He did not know if she admitted herself or was taken by ambulance.

New pop at Emporio Armani, practical wardrobe from Etro in Milan

MILAN — The digital age was at the forefront of the Emporio Armani fashion show in Milan on Friday with Italian designer Giorgio Armani dotting his womenswear fall line with bold colourful shapes.

In a mainly black collection with flashes of bright colour, the 81-year old Armani softened day suits with looser silhouettes and plenty of sequins. The autumn/winter 2016/2017 line, called “New Pop”, blended “classic style and digital designs”, according to show notes.

Armani presented short skirts in shiny patent black and floaty short jumpsuits that looked like skirts for “high-tech heroines”.

Small shapes — circles, squares and triangles — in pink, yellow, blue and green dotted the black, and a few white, coats, tops, skirts, shorts, dresses and trousers.

The veteran designer, nicknamed “King Giorgio” in Italy, turned to sparkles for the evening, putting shiny black as well as coloured sequins on elegant dresses, jackets and coats.

He paired some outfits with bold yellow and pink sturdy round heels. Armani will show his main line, Giorgio Armani, on Monday. At her fashion show, Veronica Etro returned to a youth in London for an energetic collection for brand Etro, presenting lots of vibrant patterns and embroidery that decorated leather jackets, coats and long dresses.

Etro, whose brand is known for its famed Paisley print, added plaid this time — in red and black — as well as flower, kimono, tiger and dragon prints for her fall outfits.

The designer sought to mix formal and informal in her clothes, with show notes describing the line as a “highly functional seasonal wardrobe ready for both day as (well as) night, for the speedy street as well as glittering evenings”.

Modeled were reversible outerwear: plaid wool coats that turned into embroidered jacquard pieces, canvas military-style parkas with brocade inside and quilted embroidered velvet jackets with silky interiors — all ready for day and evening.

There were also ribbed turtlenecks, oversized jumpers, silky pyjama trousers, long printed chiffon dresses as well as lace ones, in mainly rich dark colours. The looks were accessorized with colourfullon scarfes and large beanie hats. Milan Fashion Week runs until Monday — Reuters

Monarch butterflies rebounding but population still well off highs

AUSTIN, (Texas) — North America’s monarch butterflies are on a rebound and the number of the plucky orange and black creatures, which gather in Mexico before flying north to Canada, could soon stand at around 150 million, a new survey showed on Friday.

The survey from a scientist at Natural Resources Defence Council (NRDC) is the second this month to show the numbers on the mend, but the population is still well below a high in the 1 billion range two decades ago.

The monarch’s recent comeback is due to favourable weather and the planting of more milkweed, an important plant to keep numbers up on its migration route, the NRDC survey said.

“Today’s news provides a hopeful indication that we are helping them head in the right direction and curbing the loss of this magnificent butterfly. But we must be careful not to declare victory too soon,” said Sylvia Fallon, a senior NRDC scientist.

She based her findings in large part on studies showing areas where the butterflies congregate when they spend the winter in Mexico’s Oyamel forest. They have suffered mightily over the years from the expansion of farmland, sprawling housing developments and the clear-cutting of natural landscapes along their migration path, experts say.

Monarchs lay eggs only on milkweed plants, which grow wild throughout the United States. But the milkweed, on which their larvae feed, can cause stomach problems for cattle that eat it, so ranchers and farmers destroy it, NRDC researchers said.

The butterflies congregate in Mexico and then go through several generations as they fly north on their long migration to Canada.

Their plight has become an international issue. In February 2014, the United States, Mexico and Canada agreed to set up a joint task force to protect the butterflies.

While an estimated 1 billion monarchs migrated in 1996, only about 35 million made the trip in 2013, according to Marcus Kronforst, a professor of ecology and evolution at the University of Chicago who has studied monarchs.— Reuters

Europe’s Infantino chosen to lead FIFA into new era

ZURICH — Gianni Infantino vowed on Friday to lead FIFA out of years of corruption and scandal after the former UEFA general secretary was elected to succeed his Swiss compatriot Sepp Blatter as president of football’s world governing body.

“We will restore the image of FIFA and the respect of FIFA, and everyone in the world will be proud of us,” the 45-year-old law graduate, who for the last seven years has been the leading administrator for Europe’s governing body, told an extraordinary FIFA Congress in Zurich.

“I feel a lot of emotion and have not realised yet what has happened today.”

After a first round of voting in which he narrowly beat Asian Football Confederation President Sheikh Salman bin Ebrahim Al Khalifa of Bahrain, Infantino appeared to gather up almost all the votes that had been cast for the two trailing candidates, Prince Ali and Jerome Champagne.

He won 115 of the 207 votes in the second round, giving him a simple majority ensuring a European again holds the top job until 2019 and frustrating the hopes of those looking for a swing to Asia.

Infantino owned his candidacy to the fact that Europe’s preferred candidate, his former boss and UEFA president Michel Platini, was banned from football last year along with Blatter for ethics violations.

“I thank Michel Platini for everything that he has taught me and given me and the work we have done together,” Infantino said. “I have strong, dear thoughts for Mr Michel Platini right now.”

Only the ninth president in FIFA’s 112-year history, he inherits a very different job from that enjoyed by Blatter, who toured the world for 17 years like a head of state, dispensing development funds to his global support base.

Before the election, the Congress had overwhelmingly passed a set of reforms intended to make FIFA more transparent, professional and accountable.

That package should mean the new president faces much closer scrutiny than Blatter did — his salary will be published for the first time — and have less influence over the day-to-day management of the organisation’s business affairs. — Reuters

PGA Tour player Bohn has mild heart attack at Honda Classic

PALM BEACH GARDENS (Florida) — American golf professional Jason Bohn suffered a mild heart attack after the second round of the Honda Classic at Palm Beach Gardens in Florida on Friday, according to PGA Tour officials.

The 42-year-old Bohn, a double winner on the PGA Tour, complained of chest pains after shooting a two-over 72 at PGA National and was immediately checked by medical staff on site.

He was then taken to a local hospital where tests disclosed that he had suffered a mild heart attack, officials said.

Bohn was reported to be in a stable condition and will undergo further tests yesterday.

Fellow PGA Tour player Tom Gillis tweeted: “Thoughts and prayers go out to Jason Bohn who had a heart attack this afternoon. Hang tough buddy.”

Bohn, whose most recent PGA Tour win came at the 2010 New Orleans Classic, missed the cut at the Honda Classic after carding scores of 71 and 72. — Reuters

Manchester City are beatable in League Cup: Klopp

LONDON — Liverpool can beat the “best team in the Premier League” when they take on Manchester City in the League Cup final at Wembley on Sunday, according to boss Jurgen Klopp.

The Reds are intent on landing their first trophy since winning the last of their record eight League Cups in 2012, and are full of confidence after a 4-1 victory over title contenders Man City at the Etihad Stadium in November.

“Maybe from the squad side this (Man City) is the best team in the Premier League,” German Klopp, 48, told the BBC.

“Maybe another team will win the league but Man City is really high quality. But you can beat them,” he added.

“We have a good chance to make more problems for them than they can imagine in this moment.”

Liverpool, who are eighth in the Premier League, are also through to the last 16 of the Europa Cup — where they will face Manchester United — after beating Augsburg 1-0 at Anfield on Thursday. Former Borussia Dortmund boss Klopp, who took over from Brendan Rodgers in October, is adamant his side will be fresh and motivated for their 12th League Cup final appearance.

“This job, in professional football, we do it only to win things — titles, cups, whatever,” Klopp told reporters.

“A lot of players, managers have to work their whole life, and they can be really successful, but never have the chance to win something.”

“After a very short time we have the chance. I am sure you will see in the game that we really want to win this.”

Klopp said selecting his side for Sunday was proving difficult with so many players available.

“We have had a few (injury) problems since I’ve been here, but never the problem that we had too many players,” he said.

“Making a squad this time is two things — the best thing I could ever do and the most difficult I had to do until now, because a few players will be disappointed with our decisions, for sure.” — Reuters

Federer plans tour return in April

ZURICH — World number three Roger Federer has delayed his ATP World Tour return by a month and plans to make his comeback from knee surgery at the Monte Carlo Masters in April.

The 17-times grand slam champion had initially intended to return in March at the elite Indian Wells Masters in California where he has won the title four times.

In a Facebook post on Friday, the 34-year-old Federer said: “I have now had a lot of great practices on the court and in the gym. As it is a long year, I don’t want to push it too hard and come back too soon.”

“I will unfortunately not be able to make it back in time for the great event in Indian Wells but I do plan on playing in the desert next year.”

“After consultation with my team, I have decided to enter the Monte Carlo Rolex Masters. Thanks for the support and I will see you back on tour soon,” the Swiss added.

Federer had arthroscopic knee surgery in Switzerland earlier this month to repair a torn meniscus, having suffered the injury away from a tennis court the day after his Australian Open run ended in the semi-finals.

He withdrew from the ABN AMRO World Tennis Tournament in Rotterdam and the Dubai Duty Free Tennis Championships with the intention of returning for the 10-20 March BNP Paribas Open at Indian Wells in California. However, Federer has now set his sights on the clay surface of Monte Carlo for the 10-17 April ATP World Tour Masters. — Reuters
