Vice President Dr. Sai Mauk Kham delivers speech at Special Refresher Course for Senior Officials

Nay Pyi Taw, 9 March — Vice President Dr Sai Mauk Kham delivered an address at the opening of Special Refresher Course No. (2) for Senior Officials at the President Office Ministry in Nay Pyi Taw on Monday.

In his speech, the vice president said that senior government officials are to realize the goal of the government elected through democratic process in accordance with the law since they are people who steer the government mechanism.

He added that it is necessary for a country to possess competent government mechanisms and human resources staff, who are one of the important parts of government mechanism, are required to be competent.

Then, the vice president pointed out that the competence of senior government officials are more important as they are to adjust and monitor the activities of other staff.

The purpose of conducting the course is to enable heads of government departments to take their responsibilities of the changing times and administrative system, according to the vice president.

It is necessary for heads of government departments to understand not just the situation in his or her organization but also local and international situations comprehensively.

There will be differences in memorizing subjects, discussions and PowerPoints among the trainees depending on their memorization power, effort, interest and experience, but the course will benefit the trainees as much as they can learn, the vice president explained.

The trainees who can learn from the course should be prased as they have only a little time to study so many subjects, discussion and Power Points amidst their various responsibilities, the vice president said.

There are achievements as well as challenges in the government’s ongoing efforts for clean government and good governance, raising the socioeconomic status of the entire people, rural development and poverty reduction, combat against corruption, internal peace and national security.

Nay Pyi Taw, 9 March — Known for its long sandy beaches, the Ayeyawady Delta has become one of Myanmar’s major tourist destinations.

In addition to its traditional Pathein umbrella and clay pot painting workshops, the region lining the Bay of Bengal is also renowned for the quality of its rice.

Ngwehsaung (Silver Beach), the newest beach resort of Myanmar, is located nearly 48 kilometres west of Pathein, the capital city of the region. Beautiful sunsets over the Bay of Bengal can be viewed from Lover’s Island, accessible by walking along the 4.5-mile beach.

Government and private sector development along Ngwehsaung beach has been aimed at attracting more local and foreign visitors, while also generating income for local people.

Among the recreational activities on the beach, visitors can take a ride on a horse or on a bullock cart, while local seafood is also readily available.

Visitors can also ride elephants at an elephant camp in the forest to the east of the beach. Unspoiled beach, underwater creatures and Padaung Village make Ngwehsaung a unique destination with huge potential for tourism development.

Japanese firm wins gas turbine deal for Thilawa SEZ

Yangon, 9 March — Sumitomo Corporation has won a 5 billion yen (US$41 million) contract to build two thermal power generation facilities in Thilawa Special Economic Zone, about 23 kilometres south-east of Yangon.

A combined output of highly efficient H-25 each gas turbine with 50 megawatts (25 megawatts each) will help reduce fuel consumption significantly and decrease carbon dioxide emissions, according to the corporation.

Mitsubishi Hitachi Power Systems Ltd. (MHPS) also said that it will deliver a gas turbine and a generator to each of the two facilities through Sumitomo, which is also in charge of procuring the equipment. The contract has been awarded by state-owned power provider Myanmar Electric Power Enterprise.

The No.1 facility is scheduled to start operation in March 2016 and No.2 in July the same year to supply electricity to the economic zone and to the business hub of Yangon. Experts estimate demand for electricity in Myanmar will quintuple by 2030 due to the country’s rapid economic development.

Thilawa Special Economic Zone is a joint venture between Myanmar and Japan aimed at attracting direct overseas investment and creating local employment opportunities.

Myanmar to sign ASW legal framework

NAI PYI TAW, 9 March—Pyidaungsu Hluttaw has decided Monday that Myanmar will sign the legal framework establishing the technical architecture of the ASEAN Single Window.

Union Minister for Finance U Win Shein said that the Legal Framework Agreement (LFA), once adopted, will set a common legal framework in ASEAN to strengthen the co-ordination and partnership among ASEAN Customs Administrations and relevant line ministries and agencies, and economic operators (importers, exporters, transport operators, express industries, customs brokers, forwarders, commercial banking entities and financial institutions, insurers, and those relevant to the international supply chain) to effectively and efficiently implement the ASEAN Single Window.

As a concrete step towards the establishment and implementation of the ASEAN Single Window, the ASEAN Economic Ministers have signed the Agreement to Establish and Implement the ASEAN Single Window on 9 December 2005 in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

The ASW Agreement mandated Member Countries, by means of a protocol, to adopt relevant internationally accepted standards, procedures, documents, technical details and formalities for the effective implementation of the ASEAN Single Window.

Later, Deputy Minister for Home Affairs Brig- Gen Kyaw Zan Myint told Pyidaungsu Hluttaw to allow Yuan 246 million loan from Exim Bank of China for procurement of vehicles for Myanmar Police Force to ensure rule of law, drug-trafficking control measures and security of public.

Pyidaungsu Hluttaw has invited parliamentarians for discussion this issue.

Fierce fighting continues near strategic hills in Kokang SAZ

NAY PYI TAW, 9 March — Tatmadaw columns have been coming back to their marching route from Letpadan, Bago region, to the former capital as main efforts are taken to halt their marching from 9 March to 3 April. Tatmadaw columns were able to capture strategic hills after launching air and artillery strikes but fierce fighting continued until 8 March in the area. One officer and seven other ranks sacrificed their lives during the fighting and 51 others were injured.

Kokang insurgents take foothold in the hills between Point 1753 hill and border post 141 and often attack local travelers and Tatmadaw convoys. In February, Kokang insurgents attacked vehicles flying the Red Cross Flag, vehicles of the media and departmental staff on the route. —Myawady

Paved roads improve access for 10,000 in Dawei Township

Dawei, 9 March — Two new asphalt roads recently opened to traffic in Dawei Township, Taninthayi Region, improving access to the Shwethalyaung reclining Buddha image in Kutoh Village and Yaungmaw Village.

The ceremony marked the opening of the thoroughfares, with Chief Minister of the region U Myat Ko and region minister U Than Aung in attendance.

The region government assigned local entrepreneur U Win Kyi to construct a 1-mile long entrance road to Kutoh Village, an allotment of over K70 million, while U Nay Win Soe of Kyaw Nay Soe Company was hired to build a separate 2.5-mile long entrance road with K217.5 million.

Both roads will benefit more than 10,000 people from 1,666 houses in surrounding rural areas, providing smoother access to the Shwethalyaung reclining Buddha image.

In 2014-15 fiscal year, Dawei Township authorities have spent K976 million on construction of roads in total length of 10 miles and one 100-foot long wooden bridge, K130 million on sinking tube-wells and water supply tasks, K97 million on installation of solar panels for supply of electricity and K48 million on construction of 17 rural residential buildings.

Thai PM says security must come first to boost foreign confidence

SYDNEY, 9 March — A low pressure system off northeastern Australia holds up to a 50 percent chance of intensifying to cyclone strength over the next two days and slamming into a region devastated two weeks ago by Cyclone Marcia, according to meteorologists.

“This low is expected to deepen during the next few days and has a moderate potential to develop into a tropical cyclone on Tuesday or Wednesday,” Australia’s Bureau of Meteorology said on Monday.

‘Moderate’ is the second-highest classification for a cyclone threat, meaning the chances range from 20 to 50 percent. So far no cyclone activity has been issued by the bureau in the projected track of the low heading towards Queensland state, where Marcia flooded homes and businesses and knocked out power lines on Feb. 20.

Insurance Australia Group is facing 3,500 claims totalling up to A$90 million ($70 million) from damage caused by Marcia.

Queensland’s A$25 billion mining and agricultural sectors suffered little damage as the cyclone lost much of its power shortly after making landfall.

Cambodia releases details of new draft election law

PHnom Penh, 9 March — Cambodia’s ruling and opposition parties on Monday announced details of a draft election law, along with a draft law on the formation of a National Election Committee (NEC), before they are sent to the National Assembly for approval.

The two draft laws have been made by experts of the ruling Cambodian People’s Party (CPP) and the opposition Cambodia National Rescue Party (CNRP) following a July agreement struck between Prime Minister Hun Sen and CNRP President Sam Rainsy that ended the opposition’s 10-month boycott of parliament.

“Draft laws are aimed at ensuring fair and free elections and preventing post-election deadlock in the future,” CNRP’s senior official Eng Chhay Eang told seminaries that in the next elections in 2018, the number of parliamentary seats will be increased to 125 from 123.

The electoral campaign will be reduced from 30 days to 21 days, he said, adding that civil society groups and foreigners are now allowed to conduct campaigns for any political parties.

Prime Minister Hun Sen said the NEC will comprise of 21 seats, including 12 members appointed by the National Election Committee (NEC), and nine non-National Assembly members from the opposition CNRP and the CPP.

Kuala Lumpur/Sydney, 9 March — Malaysia Airlines said on Monday that an expired battery in the underwater locator beacon of the “black box” flight data recorder on missing MH370 would have made no difference in the search for the plane. Lawyers acting for some of the families of those on board said earlier that the fact the battery had not been replaced - revealed in a weekend report on the anniversary ofMH370’s disappearance — could be key in any legal action against the airline.

MH370 vanished shortly after taking off from Kuala Lumpur, bound for Beijing, early on March 8 last year, becoming one of the greatest mysteries in aviation history.

A 584-page interim report into the disappearance of the Boeing 777-200ER (BAN), released on Sunday, said the beacon battery for the flight data recorder had expired in December 2012 and was not replaced. The beacon is designed to send a signal if a crash occurs in water. Malaysia Airlines (MAS) said in a statement on Monday that a similar beacon was also installed with the solid state cockpit voice recorder (SSCVR) and its battery life was still good.

“The SSCVR battery would have been transmitting for 30 days upon activation when immersed in water,” MAS said in the statement. US law firm Kreindler & Kreindler LP, which is representing around 20 families, had said the expired battery was “potentially very significant” in determining compensation if it had hurt the search for the missing plane. The oversight was blamed on Malaysia Airline’s Department of Civil Aviation said in Sunday’s report. “This airline, which allowed their crew and plane to fly with expired batteries on critical equipment, continues to reject offering any kind of meaningful settlement to the families without them first proving the losses they suffered, without any actual evidence of a crash,” Kreindler & Kreindler LP aviation attorney Justin Green said in an email to Reuters.

“The airline ... even more clearly now may be responsible for the unsuccessful search for this plane.”

In January, Malaysia Airlines officially declared the disappearance ofMH370 an accident, clearing the way for the airline to pay compensation to victims’ relatives while the search for the plane goes on. Investigators believe the plane, carrying 227 passengers and 12 crew, was flown thousands of miles and eventually crashed into the ocean off Australia. The search along a rugged 60,000 sq km patch of sea floor some 1,500 km (1,000 miles) west of the Australian city of Perth has found nothing so far.

The search in this area, which experts believe is the plane’s most likely resting place, could be wound up in May after Australia’s deputy prime minister said last week discussions were under way between Australia, China and Malaysia on whether to call it off soon.

However, Malaysian Prime Minister Najib Razak and the Chinese government said they remained committed to the search. Most of the passengers were from China.

The interim report offered no definitive cause for the plane’s disappearance, adding there was nothing to show it had been in the financial, medical or personal histories of the pilots or crew. “The disappearance ofMH370 is without precedent, and so too is the search - by far the most complex and technically challenging in aviation history,” Najib said in a statement.—Reuters

Malaysia Airlines says expired battery on MH370 did not hinder search

Criminal Court. No one on Saturday night outside Prime Minister Prayuth Chan-ocha in Bangkok's Ratchaprasong Criminal Court. No one was hurt in the attack. “We ask the public to be the eyes and ears of security authorities because security must come first. We must rebuild confidence for foreigners,” the prime minister told reporters. “I will not want to do this but in order to support my family I offered to be the driver.”

Political gatherings are forbidden under martial law, but that has not stopped some university students from staging public protests against the ruling junta, known as the National Council for Peace and Order (NCPO).

“The NCPO has justified martial law by saying security in Thailand is unstable, citing certain groups’ opposition to military rule.”

Merkel in Japan, to meet Abe over Ukraine, anti-terror steps

Tokyo, 9 March — Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and German Chancellor Angela Merkel are set to hold talks on Monday, during which they are expected to affirm cooperation on the crisis in Ukraine, the fight against terrorism and reform of the UN Security Council.

Abe and Merkel, who is visiting Japan for the first time in a decade, are also planning to discuss economic policies, and the two leaders are also expected to conclude this year, the situation in East Asia, as well as bilateral issues, according to Japanese officials.

Merkel is on a two-day official visit to Tokyo through Tuesday as part of bilateral talks with her Group of Seven counterparts ahead of a G-7 summit she will host in June.

Merkel is likely to call for increased investment in the renewable energy sector, as she suggested in a weekly online address on Saturday.

“Germany has taken a number of far-reaching actions, namely to phase out nuclear energy faster,” Merkel was quoted as saying by the German Press Agency. “We now have great hopes for renewable energy. And I think Japan should go down this path, too.”

Referring to Merkel’s visit, Chief Cabinet Secretary Yoshihide Suga said on Monday, “The government would like to make it an opportunity to send a message to the world that Japan and Germany as partners sharing basic values, will proactively contribute to peace and prosperity of the region and the world.”

Merkel, who is to have an audience with Emperor Akihito before talks with Abe, is “one of the most important leaders in the European Union and the international community,” the top government spokesman said.

With Germany and Japan hosting G-7 summits this year and next year, respectively, it is important that the two governments promote cooperation, Suga said.

After arriving in Tokyo on Monday morning, the German leader toured the National Museum of Emerging Science and Innovation and was greeted by Prime Minister Shinzo Abe’s ASIMO humanoid robot.

Merkel last visited Japan in 2008 for a Group of Eight summit in Hokkaido. The G-7 — Britain, Canada, France, Germany, Italy, Japan and the United States — is a G-8 minus Russia.

Brasil’s Rousseff says austerity drive to last as long as needed

Brasilia, 9 March — President Dilma Rousseff appealed to Brazilians on Sunday to buck fiscal austerity policies, while saying that the belt-tightening will last as long as needed.

The economy has been slow to pick up after a nine-day trip to the Middle East. The move is seen as an effort to maximize the fallout of the nuclear crisis.

Rousseff’s plans to cut unemployment and social credit, she said, are expected to work with the IAEA as part of its efforts to end the country’s decade-long nuclear stand-off with the West.

The negotiations are aimed at persuading Iran to curb its nuclear programme in exchange for relief of sanctions which have badly damaged its economy.

Iran denies any intention of seeking atomic weapons, saying its nuclear energy programme is solely for peaceful purposes.

THE IMPPOSED SANCTIONS ON IRAN ARE CRUEL AND ILLEGAL ... LIFTING ALL THE SANCTIONS WILL TAKE PLACE IN THE NEXT YEARS. IN THE MEANTIME, WE ARE FOCUSED ON MEETING THE NEEDS OF OUR PEOPLE. — IRAN’S AMBASSADOR TO THE INTERNATIONAL ATOMIC ENERGY AGENCY (IAEA)

Rousseff’s agenda.

Rousseff told Brazilians that temporary sacrifices would be needed to restore the government’s overdrawn accounts, saying, “We are doing some corrections and adjustments to the economy.”

She blamed a prolonged international economic slowdown and a severe drought for Brazil’s current woes. There was no admission of mistakes in the economic policies of her first term that undermined investor confidence and helped push the world’s seventh economy toward recession.

In an attempt to spur investment, Rousseff said her government plans to grant new concessions to build roads, railways, ports and airports this year and enter into new partnerships with the private sector.

Ankara, 9 March — Iran and the UN nuclear watchdog hold talks in Teheran on Monday, the Iranian Students News Agency (ISNA) reported, ahead of a March deadline for a framework agreement on Iran’s nuclear programme between Teheran and six major powers.

“Officials from the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) will discuss remaining issues like explosions and neutron calculations,” ISNA said, without giving a source.

“All issues alleged by the IAEA, related to the framework agreement, will be discussed during their one day visit.”

The IAEA says Iran has still not addressed specific issues that could feed suspicions it may have re- searched an atomic bomb, including questions on alleged research activities into explosives testing and neutron calculations.

Iran has rejected the accusations as baseless, but has promised to work with the IAEA as part of its efforts to end the country’s decade-long nuclear standoff with the West.

US Secretary of State John Kerry and his Iranian counterpart Mohammad Javad Zarif will meet on 15 March in Switzerland, an Iranian official told Reuters.

Then there will be bilateral and trilateral meetings with other members of the P5+1 countries ... followed by meetings between the seven countries,” said the official, adding that “most probably the venue is (the Swiss city of) Lausanne”.

Park visits US envoy Lippert at Seoul hospital

Seoul, 9 March — South Korea’s President Park Geun Hye on Monday visited US Ambassador to South Korea Mark Lippert at a Seoul hospital where he is recovering after being slashed in his face and hand last Thursday, according to the South Korean presidential office.

Park made the visit immediately after returning from a nine-day trip to the Middle East. The move is widely seen as an effort to compensate for a knife attack to South Korea’s alliance with the United States.

The assailant, identified by police as 55-year-old Kim Ki Jong, is believed to be a pro-Pyongyang South Korean civic activist who visited North Korea seven times between 1999 and 2007.

Kim has told the police that he attacked Lippert to protest the South Korea-US joint military exercises that began on 2 March, saying they hinder the mood for inter-Korean reconciliation, according to the police.

Lippert had an 11-cm-long, 3-cm-deep cut on the right side of his face and wounds on his left arm and fingers and received about 80 stitches at the hospital after being assaulted with a 25-cm fruit knife shortly after arriving at a lecture hall in downtown Seoul to give a speech.

Kim was formally arrested last Friday on charges of attempted murder, violence against a foreign envoy and obstruction of official business, according to the police.

Park made the visit immediately after returning from a nine-day trip to the Middle East. The move is widely seen as an effort to compensate for a knife attack to South Korea’s alliance with the United States.

The assailant, identified by police as 55-year-old Kim Ki Jong, is believed to be a pro-Pyongyang South Korean civic activist who visited North Korea seven times between 1999 and 2007.

Kim has told the police that he attacked Lippert to protest the South Korea-US joint military exercises that began on 2 March, saying they hinder the mood for inter-Korean reconciliation, according to the police.

Park visits US envoy Lippert at Seoul hospital

Seoul, 9 March — South Korea’s President Park Geun Hye on Monday visited US Ambassador to South Korea Mark Lippert at a Seoul hospital where he is recovering after being slashed in his face and hand last Thursday, according to the South Korean presidential office.

Park made the visit immediately after returning from a nine-day trip to the Middle East. The move is widely seen as an effort to compensate for a knife attack to South Korea’s alliance with the United States.

Netanyahu denies report he’s backed off two-state solution

Jerusalem, 9 March — Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu’s office denied on Sunday he had backed away from a 2009 commitment to seek a two-state peaceful solution with the Palestinians.

A statement by Netanyahu’s right-wing Likud party widely reported by Israeli media said he had said that a speech he gave six years ago agreeing for the first time to Palestinian statehood as a solution to decades of conflict was now “irrelevant.”

Netanyahu “never said such a thing,” his office said in a statement responding to the reports.

Likud had apparently issued the remarks to debunk earlier Israeli media reports suggesting Netanyahu had in a previous term of office negotiated a break from land Israel captured in a 1967 war. The party’s statement, apparently issued by hardliners, said Netanyahu had also suggested “there would be no withdrawals or concessions, that this is simply irrelevant,” referring to swapping any occupied land for peace.

Netanyahu’s office denied this, too, saying he has long adhered to a policy that “under current conditions in the Middle East any land that is handed over would be grabbed by Islamist extremists.”

The Israeli leader had repeatedly said he would not hand over land at risk of falling into the hands of Islamist extremists since the collapse of peace talks in April and after fighting a July-August war with Hamas militants in Gaza. The media accusations against Netanyahu over the Palestinian conflict come as part of a bitter fight for a campaign between a 13 March election. Polls show Netanyahu running neck and neck with leading rival Isaac Herzog of the left-of-center Zionist Union, which says it would seek a resumption of regional peace talks.

Early Greek election, referendum possible if EU rejects debt plan — Varoufakis

ROME, 9 March — Greece could call a referendum or have early elections should its euro zone partners reject its debt and growth plans, Greek Finance Minister Yanis Varoufakis said in a newspaper interview on Sunday.

The new Greek government’s main priority is to negotiate a bailout with the International Monetary Fund and its European Union partners that requires strict budget discipline and sweeping economic reforms.

The government reached a temporarily deal with its lenders last month and Athens has until the end of April to specify how reforms will make it in exchange for further aid. Euro zone finance ministers are meeting on Monday to discuss a letter of pledged reforms sent by Athens last week.

Should Brussels ultimately reject Greece’s proposals, Varoufakis told Italian daily Corriere della Sera: “There could be problems. But, as my prime minister has said, we are not yet glued to our chairs. We can return to elections, call a referendum.”

In a statement released later on Sunday, the Greek Finance Ministry said that Varoufakis was responding to a hypothetical question and that any referendum would “obviously regard the content of reforms and fiscal policy” and not whether to stay in the euro, as Corriere della Sera had suggested. Most Greeks want the country to keep the euro, but two-thirds also continue to back the government’s tough stance to renegotiate the bailout package.

A referendum over a deal with lenders that keeps the country in the euro zone but falls short of Tsipras’s promises could give the government cover to accept a deal even though it was elected with a different mandate. But even floating the idea of a referendum is politically risky.

In 2011, then-prime minister George Papandreou suggested calling a referendum over the bailout and was later forced to make way for a unity coalition led by a former central banker.

With the Tsipras government’s popularity level above 40 percent, Varoufakis said “people understand” that the government is fighting the “establishment” that said it was saving Greece while it put everything on the backs of the poor.

Former prime minister Antonis Samaras, who is now head of the main opposition party, said a referendum would be “a very bad development” and allow the government to shrug off its responsibilities.

The now much-diminished Greek Socialist PASOK party, also in the opposition to Tsipras’ radical left, also said in a statement that Varoufakis’s statement was “irresponsible, thoughtless and contradictory.”

In the interview, Varoufakis said that the response so far by euro zone partners to his proposals to replace the current bailout with bonds linked to nominal growth is “silence.” “I’d like for Europe to understand that this would be a way of paying back more money, not less,” Varoufakis said of the growth-linked bonds.

In 2011, Greece tipped the eurozone debt crisis until it accepted the bailout. Now the concern is that the failure of Greece to reach a new deal with its lenders this time could mean the euro region back where it was.

There has been growing uncertainty over Greece’s cash needs. It faces a decline in tax revenues, while aid from EU/IMF lenders remains on hold until Athens completes promised reforms.

Two charged with Nemtsov killing include former Chechen policeman

MOSCOW, 9 March — Russian authorities said Sunday they had charged two men over the killing of Kremlin critic Boris Nemtsov and said one of them was a former senior policeman from the mainly Muslim region of Chechnya who had confessed to involvement in the crime.

The two were among five men, all ethnic Chechens,frogquartered into a Moscow courtroom on Sunday, forced by masked security officers gripping their bound arms to walk doubled over, a Reuters reporter at the court said.

The men stood in metal cages as television crews were ushered in to film them.

Nemtsov was shot dead on the night of 27 February within sight of the Kremlin walls, in the most high-profile killing of an opposition figure in the 15 years that President Vladimir Putin has been in power.

Judge Natalia Mushnikova ordered that all five men should remain in custody.

Chechen leader Ramzan Kadyrov, a Putin ally, said the former policeman, Zaur Dadayev, was a pious Muslim who had been angered by cartoons of the Prophet Mohammed in the French satirical newspaper Charlie Hebdo.

Nemtsov, a liberal, had defended the cartoons after Islamist gunmen killed 12 people at the Charlie Hebdo office in Paris in January. Russian investigators said last week they were looking into the possibility that Islamic militants had killed Nemtsov.

“All who know Zaur confirm that he is a deep believer and also that he hates all Muslims, was shocked by the activities of Charlie and comments in support of printing the cartoons,” Kadyrov wrote on his Instagram account.

Kadyrov described Dadayev as “a true patriot of Russia” who had received several medals for bravery but had subsequently resigned from his interior ministry position for reasons the Chechen leader said were unclear.

There have been cases in the past where employees of Russian law enforcement agencies have been prosecuted after moonlighting for organized crime groups.

“Dadayev’s involvement in committing this crime is confirmed by, apart from his own confession, the totality of evidence gathered as part of this criminal case,” Mushnikova told Sunday’s court hearing.

The other man charged is Anzor Gubashev. The three other suspects are his brother Shagit Gubashev, Ramzan Bakhayev and Tamerlan Eskerkhanov. Previously, investigators said they only had two suspects.

Separately, Russia’s Investigative news agency, quoting a Chechen law enforcement source, said a man killed in a standoff with police in the Chechen capital Grozny late on Saturday had also been wanted by police in connection with Nemtsov’s killing.

When police arrived at an apartment block, the man threw one grenade at officers and then blew himself up with a second. An Interfax source.

Some associates of Nemtsov, a 55-year-old former deputy prime minister who became a Putin critic, say the Kremlin stands to gain from his death. Russian officials deny involvement and Putin has condemned the killing.

The court hearings on Sunday were given extensive coverage on state-controlled media, and presented as proof the authorities were conducting a thorough investigation — not the cover-up some of Nemtsov’s friends say they anticipate.

But associates of Nemtsov say they will not be satisfied unless prosecutors track down whoever orchestrated the killing, rather than just the people who pulled the trigger.

There was no word from investigators on who the suspects were alleged to have been working for.

Several other high-profile killings in Russia, including the 2006 shooting of journalist Anna Politkovskaya, have been attributed to gunmen from Chechnya and other parts of the North Caucasus region, while those who ordered the crimes were never firmly identified.

Chechnya has seen violent separatist insurgencies over the past two decades but is now firmly under the control of Kadyrov, a former rebel who changed sides and pledges loyalty to Putin.

Two different meanings of force

By Myint Win Thein

Force and strength may be synonymous, but a display of force is not always a sign of strength. On the contrary, it can often indicate weakness. Those whose claims are legitimate and recognised as such do not need to use force.

For instance, most people nowadays do not need to use force to prove they are the equal beings, but it was not always the case. Centuries ago, many people fought to gain recognition as equal beings, having been held as slaves before revolting against their masters. They used force to stake a claim whose legitimacy could never rightfully be questioned. However, when used selectively, it can help to undermine the actor and indicate their weakness.

Slave owners who fought to maintain their status over other human beings were ultimately unsuccessful. The more force they used to hold their position, the weaker they ultimately appeared in the eyes of history.

TEACHER PUJA, TEACHER CULTURE

By Ba Than

The end of monsoon in the tail-end of October ushers in a flurry of activities and festivities in our exotic land of glittering pagodas, vast stretch of lush paddy fields, and interesting habitat of multi-ethnic peoples of the hills and the plains. It is commonly known as the “open season” when the sky is bright and sunny, with only remnants of lingering post-monsoon showers and most pleasant chilly weather to tingle the cheeks of countrymen and stir their itch to travel. Many festivities: religious, social and pujas abound in the entire country, a real time for tour and pilgrimage. Mandalay, the seat of the last reigning Myanmar king of the Konbaung dynasty and centre of the cosmopolitan metropolis, with Shan races, who visit Mandalay as holy pilgrimage from all over the country and the hills especially the north-western part of Shan state. Mandalay is the second capital and seat of Myanmar sovereignty and rule. At the end of World War II a nationalist movement was born. The English Department held a special puja ceremony in 1947 at the Faculty of Arts and Science. Principal U Ko Lay gave first appointments as tutors and demonstrators in the respective faculties of their choice. Some branch out to various departments, business and professions. The author served as English tutor for the 2 academic years (1951-53) and opted for the career of the BCS administrative service.

Time passed swiftly when new generation of highly qualified academics took over as old generation faded away into retirement and oblivion. Intrinsically Myanmar professor Htay Aung Buddhist, coached in the revered teachings of Lord Buddha the Self-Enlightened Omniscient One since a thousand years ago beginning from the first Bagan Empire of King Anawratha. Somewhere among the teachings was the dictum to pay respects to the teachers (acariya) in their old age and infirmity. Thus began the tradition of acariya Puja ceremonies, all over the country especially in the open season months from October to March of the ensuing years.

The students of the respective high schools and universities have become effluent, and thus were generous enough to pay respects to these teachers. Such meetings also help to regenerate camaraderie spirit to meet old friends and talk over the olden days of freedom joy and hilarity. Our alma mater also followed the revered trend of paying respects to the retired teachers: the main ceremony involving all faculties pooling their resources, and held once in three years. The 11th puja ceremony was held on 27th December 2014. Where 438 teachers about 68 years were most respectfully honoured among whom only 298 could attend in person. The author attended as the faculty staff of the English Department. Many elder invites slowly entered the Convocation hall. Only a very few came unattended. Many had to be assisted to their alloted chairs, aging and feeble. A surge of deep emotion welled up my heart, a mixed feeling of sadness and joy, joy at meeting my old colleagues, where only very few remain alive, and sadness at the toll over them, progressive aging and senility. But all seemed to enjoy every moment, meeting friends again, the precious moments to treasure. The ceremony began with the serving Rector delivering the keynote speech followed by other speakers who had contributed their share of puja most voluntarily. Then all students clasped their hands in prayer and presents were offered. Fellow teachers including my colleague, Shan Scholar Dr Sai Aung Tun delivered speech of thanks. Finally the main puja ceremony was over as all dispersed. A few lingered in the Hall as they talked about the lively years of the past.

The English Department held a special puja ceremony on 28th in the Dhammayone, Prayer Hall. A small number of retired teachers attended as the present Professor, teaching staffs and students paid their respects and presents. On behalf of the retired English teachers, I gave a brief talk recounting the joy of the pioneer student of 1947, and tutor of 1951 with fond memories. Only a very few of us remained alive, particularly our Myanmar society. Thus ‘Teacher Culture’ holds a predominant place in our society. Therefore a special ceremony to pay respects to the venerable teachers are held every year in the open season. Such puja can only be preserved in societies of future generations.
Merits shared for late royal families of Konbaung Dynasty

Mandalay, 9 March — The Ministry of Culture held a ceremony Sunday to offer meals to members of the Sangha, or monastic community, at Myanma Sankyaw golden palace in Royal Mandalay City, Aungmyethazan Township, in memory of the late King Mindon and his relatives.

The ceremony was attended by Deputy Minister for Culture U Than Swe, Mandalay Region Minister for Finance Dr Myint Kyu, Region Advocate-General U Ye Aung Myint, departmental officials and relatives of royal families. After offering meals to venerable senior monks, officials shared merits dedicated to the royal family members.

The merit-sharing ceremony for relatives and royal families of the Konbaung Dynasty in Mandalay was the first in six decades, and was attended by relatives of King Thibaw, the last emperor of Myanmar. Thitha Ko Ko (Mandalay)

Training course improves capacity of police officers in Mandalay Region

Mandalay, 9 March — Mandalay Region Police Force officers undertook a professional development course Monday organized by the Ministry of Home Affairs.

On behalf of the commander, deputy commander of Region Police Force Police Col Thet Naing instructed the trainees to improve their policing abilities by implementing new knowledge obtained through the course.

Senior police officers gave training on investigation and surveillance to 21 police officers who were transferred from security police branches to the Mandalay Region Police Force.

Rural people get electricity on self-reliant basis

Toungoo, 9 March — As a gesture of hailing the 70th Anniversary of Armed Forces Day, a self-reliant supply of electricity was launched for local residents in Letpankhyun Village, Ottwin Township, Bago Region, recently.

Commander of Southern Command Maj-Gen Aung Kyaw Zaw unveiled the stone plaque in commemoration of switching on the supply of electricity.

An official of the power supply committee briefed all attendees on processes of electrifying the village.

Regiments and units in Ottwin station and the Southern Command headquarters assisted in installation of power lines for the village. Local people fundraised K61 million for undertaking the power supply tasks.

With BMWs common in Gangnam, Koreans splurge on Bentleys, Maseratis

SEOUL, 9 March — Flashy Maseratis and Bentleys are fast becoming the cars of choice for young, ambitious South Koreans, eclipsing German luxury brands now so commonplace that some in Seoul’s upscale Gangnam district jokingly refer to a BMW 5-series as a Hyundai Sonata.

Driving the sales of six-figure plus cars is a growing acceptance of conspicuous consumption in the conservative home of Hyundai Motor Co (005380.KS), where more young, affluent Koreans are turning their backs on their parents’ frugal ways.

“We have saved a lot in the past, younger people nowadays spend only what they can enjoy,” said chef-restaurateur Song Ji-hoon, who last year sold his Mercedes-Benz CLS to buy a Maserati Ghibli.

“The street is now flooded with German cars. My car is not something one can see often,” Song, 34, told Reuters. Last year, the Seoul dealership of Volkswagen (QVW.G.DE) unit Bentley Motors was the top global seller of Flying Spur sedans, which start at just under quarter of a million dollars. The outlet, in Gangnam, ranked second in overall sales behind one in Dubai.

South Korea is also the seventh-largest market for Fiat Chrysler’s (FCAH.N) Maserati, which saw sales increase five-fold last year to a record 723 cars after the brand introduced its Ghibli sports sedan, which starts at around $90,000.

“We have not seen this before. Young people buy attractively priced family models for the first time,” said Park Keun-woo, head of sales and marketing at Maserati South Korea.

Imported luxury vehicles were relatively scarce in Seoul in 2012. By the end of 2014, they included 48 percent of total car sales, and that for high-risk leukemia patients reached 49 percent, both higher than the world average.

Our strategy of preventing relapse rate with the help of advanced monitoring methods.

Chung, head of the Institute of Hematology at Peking University, was invited to give a special lecture at the 37th Annual Meeting of the Japanese Society for Hematopoietic Stem Transplantation, held in the Kobe International Conference Centre from Thursday to Saturday.

Chung presented the audience a novel immunomodulatory strategy used by his team, which uses G-CSF-mobilized peripheral blood progenitor cells instead of static lymphocytes to treat patients, supplemented with six to eight weeks’ short-term immunodyamping drugs.

This new strategy, according to Chung, could largely improve the survival rate of patients with recurrent malignant blood diseases, and reduce the relapse rate with the help of advanced monitoring methods.

The strategy has been systematically used since 2012. By the end of 2014, three-year disease-free survival rate for standard-risk leukemia patients in Chung’s institute reached 68 percent, and that for high-risk leukemia patients reached 49 percent, both higher than world-renowned transplant centers such as MD Anderson and Johns Hopkins University.

“Our strategy of preventing and treating relapse of malignant blood diseases is advanced in the world. Our next goal is to find out the cytological mechanism of the immunomodulatory strategy, and by doing that, we could not only cure malignant blood diseases better, but also make progress in immunological studies and contribute to human welfare,” said Chung.

Tokyo, 9 March — The US dollar traded in the upper 120 yen zone for most of Monday in Tokyo, holding on to gains from Friday’s strong US monthly jobs data, amid expectations the US Federal Reserve is gearing up for an interest rate hike that would further underscore dollar demand against the Japanese currency.

At 5 pm, the dollar fetched 120.87-89 yen compared with 120.79-89 yen in New York and 120.10-12 yen in Tokyo at 5 pm Friday. It moved between 120.62 and 121.14 yen during the day, changing hands mostly frequenting 121.03 yen.

The euro was quoted at $1.0864-0865 and 131.32-36 yen against $1.0841-0851 and 130.92-131.02 yen in New York and $1.024-1026 and 132.40-44 yen in Tokyo late Friday afternoon.

The US currency remained in the upper 120 yen zone for most of the day, rising just above the 121 yen line at times in the afternoon, after gaining ground on Friday’s US monthly jobs data that surprised the market with its strength.

Tokyo

The US dollar briefly jumped to a nearly three-month high of 121.29 yen immediately following the jobs data release and rose above the 121 yen line again briefly in Tokyo, but it is unlikely to find a firm footing above that line until solid US inflation numbers are seen in addition to labor market recovery, Kadota said.

The dollar-yen pair will likely trade narrowly in the run-up to the FOMC meeting, with Fed policymakers expected to stress that some weak points remain amid the US economic recovery, said Masayuki Hoshina, chief economist at Okasan Securities Co.

“The labour situation is less than clear-cut when we look at marginally employed people in the unemployment rate, and hourly wages are still lagging, so (Fed chair Janet) Yellen is likely to retain an air of caution in her statement,” Hoshina said.

The euro remained subdued against the dollar and yen in Tokyo, having sunk in early morning Oceania trading below Friday’s New York low of $1.0841 to levels not seen since September 2003.

“The situation in the eurozone is contributing to a sustained trend of weakness in the euro, and we expect it to hit parity with the dollar by the end of the year,” Barclays’ Kadota said.

Traders will be looking to the outcome of a meeting of eurozone finance ministers later in the day for hints on how the currency bloc intends to deal with Greece’s bailout.

At long last, Dow gets a taste for Apple

NEW YORK, 9 March — Apple Inc (AAPL.O), the largest US company by market value, will join the Dow Jones industrial average (DJI) replacing AT&T Inc (T.N), in a change that reflects the dominant position of the iPhone maker in the US consumer economy.

The decision to nudge aside AT&T, which has been part of the Dow for the better part of a century, is a recognition of how communications and technology have evolved. It's also a marker of Apple's transformation, from a struggling company with a small, fervent following two decades ago, into the nation's predominant consumer technology company.

"This is a sign of the times, and it might get everyone to look at the Dow more than they have before," said Richard Sichel, who oversees $2 billion as chief investment officer at Philadelphia Trust Co. "It would be difficult to pick any 30 companies that would cover the entire economy, especially compared with the S&P 500, but it does give the Dow more credibility."

The action, by S&P Dow Jones Indices, had been widely expected since Apple split its shares seven-for-one in June of last year.

AT&T declined to comment on its removal from the average, of which it has been a member for most of the last 100 years.

The stock was added to the Dow in 1916, the year after the first-ever transcontinental telephone call. It was removed in 2004, but after the SBC Communications renamed itself AT&T following a 2005 merger, it was reinstated.

"It was a new way of life: telephones, backed up 100 years ago, these talking machines," said Howard Silverblatt, index analyst at S&P Dow Jones Indices. "Back then, AT&T was it, end of story."

After Apple's stock split, many investors felt it was only a matter of time before the company, whose high stock price had previously made it unsuitable for the price-weighted index, would join it.

The Dow industrials is the oldest US stock average, first published in 1886. Its compact size — just 30 names — and its mission to reflect the US economy means that many retail investors are more familiar with it than other indexes covering a broader cross-section of the market.

Even though professional managers generally benchmark against the S&P 500, additions and removals from the Dow are still a big event on Wall Street. It was last altered in September 2013 when Goldman Sachs Group Inc (GS.N), Visa Inc (V.N) and Nike Inc (NKE.N) were added.

Apple did not respond to requests for comment. The company has a market capitalisation of $727 billion, making it twice the size of the second-largest Dow component, Exelon Corp (EXC.N) and Nike Inc (NKE.N) were added.

The service module of the unmanned lunar orbiter currently in space to trial such techniques entered a target lunar orbit after breaking maneuvers, and flew to a suitable position for orbital docking between Tuesday and Saturday, said the State Administration of Science, Technology and Industry for National Defense (SASTIND) on Sunday.

Liu Zhijong, deputy chief commander of the SASTIND’s lunar probe project, said that the service module has proven the reliability of key technologies needed for the docking of two spacecraft in the Chang’e-5 mission.

The Chang’e-5 probe, expected to launch in 2017, will be tasked with landing on the moon, collecting samples and returning to Earth. The current lunar orbiter was launched on 24 October, 2014. A capsule designed to separate and return to Earth did so as planned in November, while the service module continues its lunar flight to carry out preset scientific tasks.

The service module is operating smoothly and will carry out further tests on capturing lunar images, and may conduct tests assessing lunar gravity depending on the mission progresses.

Liu told Xinhua that the SASTIND expects to test launching Chang’e-5 with a Long March-5 carrier rocket in south China’s Hainan Province this year.

"In the tests of the service module, we have simulated three key procedures needed for landing on the Chang’e-5 re-entry [to the moon’s orbit] at high speed, adjustment of lunar orbit and docking in lunar orbit, laying a solid foundation for China’s three-step lunar program orbiting, landing and returning," said Liu.

Rare seal twins born in NE China

DALIAN, 9 March — A rare pair of harbor seals were born at a marine park in the northeast province of Liaoning, China.

The first male pup was delivered at 1:40 am on Wednesday, the other arrived about an hour later, according to SunAsia Ocean World, Dalian City.

Dalian is believed to be China’s first harbor seal twins born in captivity, said a statement on the marine park’s website. The park plays a major role in the seal breeding programme.

Harbor seals are under state-level protection.

First-round-the-world solar flight takes off from UAE

The Solar Impulse 2 takes off at Al Bateen airport in Abu Dhabi, at the start of an attempt to fly around the world in the solar-powered plane on 9 March, 2015.—Reuters

DUBAI, 9 March — Two pilots attempting the first flight around the world in a solar-powered plane began the maiden leg of their voyage on Monday, the mission’s official website said.

Solar Impulse 2 took off from Abu Dhabi in the favours of technologies that will allow decreased dependence on fossil fuels, and induce positive emotions about renewable energies," said the mission website, which maps out the plane’s location and broadcasts audio from the cockpit in real time.

The plane is only as heavy as a car. Its five passengers are as wide as the largest passenger airliner. Its journey will span approximately 35 flights days broken up into 25-hour speeds between 50 and 100 km (30 to 60 miles) per hour. Studies, design and construction took 12 years and a first version of the craft rolled out in 2009. The current model has travelled 1,400 km (800 miles) in the last 12 months and is currently in space to trial such techniques entered a target lunar orbit after breaking maneuvers, and flew to a suitable position for orbital docking between Tuesday and Saturday, said the State Administration of Science, Technology and Industry for National Defense (SASTIND) on Sunday.

The service module is operating smoothly and will carry out further tests on capturing lunar images, and may conduct tests assessing lunar gravity depending on the mission progresses.

Liu told Xinhua that the SASTIND expects to test launching Chang’e-5 with a Long March-5 carrier rocket in south China’s Hainan Province this year.

"In the tests of the service module, we have simulated three key procedures needed for landing on the Chang’e-5 re-entry [to the moon’s orbit] at high speed, adjustment of lunar orbit and docking in lunar orbit, laying a solid foundation for China’s three-step lunar program orbiting, landing and returning," said Liu.

China’s test spacecraft simulates orbital docking

BEIJING, 9 March — China has run tests close to the moon simulating an unmanned docking procedure needed in the country’s next lunar mission.

The service module of the unmanned lunar orbiter currently in space to trial such techniques entered a target lunar orbit after breaking maneuvers, and flew to a suitable position for orbital docking between Tuesday and Saturday, said the State Administration of Science, Technology and Industry for National Defense (SASTIND) on Sunday.

Liu Zhijong, deputy chief commander of the SASTIND’s lunar probe project, said that the service module has proven the reliability of key technologies needed for the docking of two spacecraft in the Chang’e-5 mission.

The Chang’e-5 probe, expected to launch in 2017, will be tasked with landing on the moon, collecting samples and returning to Earth. The current lunar orbiter was launched on 24 October, 2014. A capsule designed to separate and return to Earth did so as planned in November, while the service module continues its lunar flight to carry out preset scientific tasks.

The service module is operating smoothly and will carry out further tests on capturing lunar images, and may conduct tests assessing lunar gravity depending on the mission progresses.

UN Secretary General Ban to attend disaster conference in Sendai

TOKYO, 9 March — UN Secretary General Ban Ki moon and UN General Assembly President Sam Kutesa will attend the upcoming UN World Conference on Disaster Risk Reduction in the northeastern Japanese city of Sendai starting later this week, the Foreign Ministry said on Monday.

Ban will be in Japan for five days from Friday and meet with survivors of the March 2011 quake and tsunami that hit northeastern Japan, the ministry said. Kutesa is visiting from Wednesday to Sunday and is scheduled to visit a disaster-hit area. Arrangements are also being made for Kutesa to hold talks with Foreign Minister Fumio Kishida on the sidelines of the 14-18 March conference, ministry officials said.—Kyodo News

UK plans airline laws to stop Britons from joining Islamic State

LONDON, 9 March — Britain will introduce new laws on Tuesday to try to stop airlines carrying passengers who may be traveling to join Islamic State militants in Syria and Iraq, a junior minister said on Sunday.

Security services estimate some 500 Britons have gone to Syria or Iraq to join militant groups, including the man known as “Jihadi John” who has appeared in Islamic State beheading videos.

Under the proposed new laws, Home Secretary Theresa May would be able to prevent airlines from carrying passengers, including children, believed to be traveling to take part in “terrorism-related activity” on known routes, such as those into Syria, according to a Home Office statement.

“This important legislation will disrupt the ability of people to travel abroad to fight and then return,” James Brokenshire, a junior minister for security in May’s department, said in the statement.

“It will also enhance our ability to monitor and control the actions of those who pose a threat,” he added.

The rules would require airlines to seek permission to carry such passengers. An automatic system based on passenger lists provided by airlines would flag high-risk travelers and stop them boarding an aircraft.

The new powers are part of Britain’s efforts to stop foreign fighters from entering Syria via commercial flights and come weeks after three London schoolgirls fled Britain to join up with Islamic State through Turkey.

Turkish Airlines has previously said it was helping a government investigation into the case but that it was only responsible for checking visas.

Prime Minister David Cameron has also urged internet firms to do more to tackle online extremism after it was revealed the three girls had used Twitter to contact other women involved with Islamic State.

Speaking in an online chatroom on Sunday, Britain’s Senior National Coordinator for Counter Terrorism, Helen Ball, said that at least 22 families in Britain had reported young women and girls as missing in the past year, believing that they had travelled to Syria.—Reuters

S Korea seeks UN punishment of N Korea over firing missiles: Yonhap

SEOUL, 9 March — South Korea is seeking punitive action by the United Nations against North Korea over Pyongyang’s recent test-launch of short-range missiles, Yonhap News Agency reported on Monday, citing a South Korean government source.

The South Korean government “has sent a letter (to the United Nations) stating that the North’s firing of two ballistic missiles on the starting day of the joint South Korea-US Key Resolve exercise is a clear violation of a UN Security Council resolution and a counteraction is needed,” the source was quoted as saying.

On 2 March, North Korea fired two short-range missiles between 6:32 am and 6:41 am as the United States and South Korea began their annual military exercise, which runs through this coming Friday.

Air travel ‘safer’ in 2014 despite Malaysian disasters: IATA

The other high-profile event of 2014, the disappearance of Malaysia Airlines Flight MH370 on a flight from Kuala Lumpur to Beijing on 8 March, 2014, with 239 passengers and crew, has become one of the biggest mysteries in the history of aviation.

An extensive search in the southern Indian Ocean, where satellite data showed that the Boeing 777-200ER ended up after being diverted from its original flight path, has not found any sign of the plane. An investigation report that was released on Sunday did not reveal anything new.

The International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO), a United Nations body that regulates global aviation, proposed after MH370 that commercial aircraft report their position every 15 minutes instead of the current norm of 30-40 minutes.

This will improve the ability to track commercial aircraft globally and find remote crash sites much faster.

That translated into an accident rate, measured in “hull losses” per 1 million flights, of 0.23, or the equivalent of one for every 4.4 million flights. The 2013 rate was 0.41 and the five-year average rate 0.58 per million flights.

IATA’s 2014 statistics did not include the loss of Malaysia Airlines Flight MH17, which was shot down by a surface-to-air anti-aircraft missile in Ukraine last June and so not classified as an accident.

Children’s book author Matsutani dies at 89

She was 89. Among her works were “Tatsunoko Taro” (Taro the Dragon Boy), a fairy tale published in 1960 and later made into an animation film and adapted for the stage, and the “Chisai Mono-chan” (Little Momo) series based on her parenting experience, which was first published in 1964 and became a best seller with sales of 6 million copies.

Matsutani began writing fairy tales after graduating from the predecessor of Toyososhi Senior High School, studying literature under novelist Joji Tobo-ta (1890-1980), whom she met in Nagano Prefecture when she evacuated there from Tokyo to escape air raids during World War II. Kodansha Ltd, one of the major publishers in Japan, gave her an award for new writers of children’s literature for “Tatsunoko Taro.” Matsutani was known as a collector of Japanese folk legends.

Norwegian Air cancels Monday flights as strike drags on

OSLO, 9 March — Norwegian Air Shuttle, Europe’s third biggest budget airline, cancelled dozens of flights scheduled for Monday as talks with striking pilots failed to yield a compromise, it said on Sunday.

Norwegian said it would cancel all domestic flights in Norway and Sweden, some flights within Denmark, and most flights between the three Scandinavian capitals, as the strike enters its tenth day. About 25,000 passengers will be affected.

However, it plans to operate its long-haul routes and most flights originating or arriving in cities outside Scandinavia, it said in a statement.

The main point of contention is that the airline’s 650 Scandinavian pilots want a collective agreement with the parent group instead of the current deal with its Norwegian Air Norway subsidiary.

They argue that the deal is needed to stop the airline from giving jobs to lower paid pilots from Asia and Spain, thereby “importing” lower wages to Scandinavia, a region with some of the world’s highest salaries.

The firm has rejected these demands as well as accusations of social dumping, and has instead offered to employ pilots through separate local subsidiaries in Norway, Sweden and Denmark.

The sides have not come closer to a deal, despite intervention from state mediator, but said they would continue to negotiate through Sunday night.

Man arrested after stabbing frenzy leaves 5 dead in Hyogo

Kobe, 9 March — A 40-year-old man was arrested on Monday morning after a stabbing frenzy at two separate houses in Hyogo Prefecture, western Japan, left five people dead.

The man, identified as Tatsuhiko Hirano, allegedly attacked the five people with a knife at around 7 am at the houses in the city of Sumoto on Awaji Island.

The suspect, who lives nearby, admitted to police he stabbed the people but said he would not speak until he has a lawyer, according to the Hyogo prefectural police.

The assaults occurred in a small town where people from other areas rarely move in and the residents know each other well, local people said.

Hirano was arrested after he was found near the site wearing clothes stained with blood.—Kyodo News

Toyama Pref ordered to pay damages to man acquitted of rape

TOYAMA, (Japan), 9 March — The Toyama District Court ordered the Toyama prefectural government on Monday to pay some 19.66 million yen (about $163,000) in damages to a man who was cleared of rape charges, citing irregularities in the police investigation.

The plaintiff, Hiroshi Yanagihara, 47, had sought some 104 million yen in damages from both the central and prefectural governments.

A three-judge panel headed by Judge Asako Ata found inadequacies in aspects of the police investigation, including coercing Yanagihara into making a false confession.

But it rejected the demand for damages from the central government, saying there was no illegality in prosecutors’ filing of criminal charges against Yanagihara. The prosecutors could not be held responsible for failing to recognize at the time that the case against Yanagihara resulted from a false confession, according to the ruling.

Yanagihara, then a taxi driver, was sentenced in April 2002 on suspicion of attempted rape and rearrested the following month on suspicion of raping a different girl. He was sentenced to three years’ imprisonment, but freed in January 2005 after serving almost two years following the arrest in 2006 of a man who confessed to the rapes. Yanagihara was then acquitted in a retrial.

During the damages suit trial, Yanagihara complained of having suffered from posttraumatic stress disorder.—Kyodo News

Actress Emma Watson urges more men to fight for gender equality

Los Angeles, 9 March — British actress Emma Watson urged more men and boys on Sunday to take a stand for women’s rights and be proud to be feminists in a bid to add momentum to a global campaign to unite men and women for gender equality. Watson, 24, a goodwill ambassador for UN Women, used International Women’s Day to add impetus to the HeForShe campaign that was launched in September last year and encourages men and boys to join the fight for equal rights.

So far around 240,000 men have pledged their commitment online, according to the HeForShe website, including US President Barack Obama and actor Matt Damon, but there is a target to mobilise one billion men and boys by July this year. “There has been a ground swell of support but we need more men to take a stand for gender equality,” Watson told a discussion on gender equality at Facebook’s London headquarters. “Men often think that feminism is a women’s word ... but if you stand for gender equality, you are a feminist.”

Watson, who rose to fame as Hermione Granger in the Harry Potter films, said the campaign was not about men saving women and also called upon women to support the campaign. “It’s uncomfortable and awkward for women to acknowledge there is a problem, but we need to understand we are complicit,” she said. The actress said she was pleased with the response to the IMPACT 10X10X10 initiative, a one-year pilot project launched in January seeking commitments from governments, companies and universities on women’s empowerment and gender equality.

Several countries, including Sweden, the Netherlands and Sierra Leone, have backed the campaign, Watson said. When asked about gender equality on a global scale, Watson praised the power of social media to allow girls and women to interact with others who can provide advice and support.

Audience members chosen by UN Women to attend the event submitted their stories online of what they had done to advance gender equality.

Jacob Anderson, 24, a Swedish designer, said he was an active supporter of women’s rights in online forums and social media. “Gender equality should be talked about far more than it currently is ... it doesn’t make sense that women and men don’t have equal rights,” Anderson told the Thomson Reuters Foundation at the event in London.—Reuters

Will Smith imparts driving lessons to son Jaden

Los Angeles, 9 March — Will Smith’s son Jaden has revealed his father is teaching him how to drive. The ‘Focus’ star’s 14-year-old son Jaden has recently got his learner’s permit and has revealed his ‘awesome’ father is teaching him ‘a lot’ about driving, reported Billboard magazine. “My dad is awesome. I wouldn’t be where I am right now if it wasn’t for all of the things he’s taught me. He’s taught me a lot about driving and just about life. And I love his songs, I go back and re-listen to those songs and the newer songs he’s made in the studio too,” Jaden said.

While Jaden takes musical inspiration from his father, his 14-year-old sister Willow revealed she takes inspiration from her mother Jada Pinkett Smith. “When I was younger, my brother and I toured with my mom’s band, Wicked Wisdom, so heavy metal was one of the first types of music I heard a lot and I’m still really inspired by it. ‘I’m into Lollawolf, Tune-Yards, the Runaways, Pink Floyd, and I freaking love Bikini Kill! My mom listens to my playlists on Hype Machine all the time and I listen to hers — that’s how I found out about Radiohead and Lamb of God.’”—PTI

Lady Gaga wants family wedding

Los Angeles, 9 March — Pop star Lady Gaga reportedly wants her wedding to be a family celebration.

The 28-year-old ‘Bad Romance’ hitmaker got engaged to actor Taylor Kinney on Valentine’s Day after four years of dating. Gaga plans to serve her guests food from her parents’ Italian restaurant in New York City, Joanne Trattoria, and wants her relatives to take key roles in her big day, reported Us Weekly.

“She’s just coming up with ideas now. She’s asked her sister Natalia to be the maid of honour, and her dad can’t wait to walk her down the aisle. They want it to be a family celebration,” a source said.

The singer, who is said to be eager to tie the knot at her USD 23 million mansion in Malibu, California later this year, has also started making her guest-list and plans to invite her good friend Elton John, 67, to the event, as well as Tony Bennett.

The singer, whose real name is Stefani Germanotta, released an album of duets, ‘Cheek to Cheek,’ with Tony last year and is said to have asked him to perform the title track at her reception.—PTI

Switzerland’s Davis Cup reign ends swiftly

LONDON, 9 March — Switzerland’s Davis Cup reign ended swiftly when they paid the inevitable price for holding a second-string team and lost 3-2 to Belgium in the first round in Liege on Sunday.

Just over three months since Roger Federer and Stan Wawrinka drove them to an historic title in Lille, it was a different story without their big two as the Swiss became the first team in 10 years to fall at the first hurdle. Federer and Wawrinka had stood aside after achieving their ambitions and the stand-ins were not able to upset the odds against much higher-ranked players despite a heroic effort from 22-year-old Henri Laaksonen.

The world number 344, who previously played for Finland, levelled the tie 2-2 with a 6-3, 5-6, 3-6, 7-6 (5), 6-1 win over Steve Darcis, a player ranked 242 places higher. For the second time in three days, the remarkable Laaksonen fought back to prevail in a five-setter.

Switzerland’s hopes, though, were extinguished in the deciding rubber when David Goffin, the world number 21 who was rested on Friday because of concerns over a back injury, proved too good for number 321 Adrien Mannarino.

In the quarter-finals they face a home tie against France who previously played for Britain number two James Ward on Friday, had three set points in the opener but could not convert and despite some fierce resistance in the third set he could not keep the 32-time champions alive. Italy, who beat Britain in the quarter-finals last year, went down to Kazakhstan in Astana where Aleksandr Nedovyesov, ranked 130 in the world, stunned number 22 Fabio Fognini in five sets to seal victory.

Kazakhstan next travel to former Davis Cup heavyweights Australia who enjoyed a 3-1 victory over 2012 and 2013 winners Czech Republic in Ostrava, Bernard Tomic clinching the win with a 7-6 (4), 6-3, 7-6 (5) triumph over Lukas Rosol.

Australia are through to the last eight for the first time since 2006.

World number one Novak Djokovic’s Serbia crushed Croatia 5-0 and next take on Argentina or Brazil.

Leonardo Mayer kept Argentina in the tie against Brazil in Buenos Aires with a five-set win over Joao Souza in a match that set a competitiveness singles record by lasting 66 hours and 42 minutes.

With the tie at 2-2, Argentina go into a fourth day on Monday with Federico Delbonis leading Thomaz Bellucci 6-3 in the deciding rubber after bad light ended play.—Reuters

McIlroy disappointed with form ahead of Masters

MIAMI, 9 March — With one tournament left to prepare for his biennial challenge to complete a career grand slam at next month’s Masters, Rory McIlroy says he is disappointed with his form and his ‘tentative’ approach to shots.

“McIlroy disappointed with form ahead of Masters”

The game’s just not quite there, I’ve got a week off now to try and work on it a little bit,” said McIlroy, who missed the cut at last week’s Honda Classic.

“I am pretty disappointed with how I played overall. It felt like a bit better again today for the most part but a bit of a disappointing finish. But it’s just not quite 100 percent.”

McIlroy will visit Augusta National next week for a friendly round with his father and Super Bowl winning-quarterback Tom Brady of the New England Patriots before heading to Bay Hill, Orlando, for the 19-22 March Arnold Palmer Invitational, his last scheduled event before the Masters.

Asked whether he had any alarm bells ringing ahead of the 9-12 April Masters, McIlroy was frank: “My inability to hit the ball right-to-left isn’t something that you want going into Augusta. It is something I want to try and work on a little bit.

“Statistically, I hit the ball better. Still it’s just not quite as comfortable as I would like.

“I’ve got a week off now to try to work on the game a bit and get a little sharper for Bay Hill.”

Having been in such consistently good form in the build-up to the Honda Classic, McIlroy is having to adjust to his ball-striking being off and says some fear has crept into his game.

“I’ve got a week off now to try to work on the game a bit and get a little sharper for Bay Hill.”

Liverpool forced to replay by dogged Blackburn

LONDON, 9 March — Liverpool were left frustrated by Championship side Blackburn Rovers who defended heroically to draw 0-0 at Anfield on Sunday and force a replay in their FA Cup quarter-final. Kolo Toure headed against a post, while Daniel Sturridge, Philippe Coutinho and Raheem Sterling failed to break down their second tier visitors despite relentless pressure.

Aston Villa — who beat West Bromwich Albion 2-0 on Saturday — are the only side to seal a semi-final spot so far while Manchester United host holders Arsenal on Monday.

Giant-killers Bradford City travel to Reading on 16 March for a replay after their 0-0 draw. “It’s been difficult here against Championship teams, Blackburn deserve credit,” Liverpool manager Brendan Rodgers told BT Sport. “But my players also deserve credit, they were missing sharpness but they kept going and tried to create chances.”

While third tier Bradford had captured the imagination with their march to the quarter-finals, Blackburn had gone about their business quietly in dumping out Premier League Swansea and Stoke before they arrived at Anfield.

Pre-match renditions of “You’ll never Walk Alone” had barely ended when Liverpool lost their defensive rock Martin Skrtel. The Slovakia defender contested a header against Blackburn’s Rudy Gestede but fell heavily on his neck and, after an eight-minute delay, was carried off on a stretcher. Liverpool had lost just one of their previous 21 matches in all competitions but Blackburn coped comfortably in the opening stages and led by the powerful Gestede were carving out opportunities of their own.

Craig Conway spurned the best chance of the opening period, blazing high and wide from close-range. Sturridge’s rasping shot in first half stoppage time drew a smart stop from Blackburn keeper Simon Eastwood. Immediately after the break the hosts were indebted to goalkeeper Simon Mignolet who produced a wonderful save to palm away Alex Baptiste’s header but thereafter Liverpool were dominant. Toure hit the post and Sturridge became increasingly influential though he was thwarted by Blackburn’s determined rearguard. Liverpool laid siege to Blackburn’s goal in the closing stages but failed to force Eastwood into many meaningful saves.

“It was 90 minutes of concentration because they had a lot of the ball and they had some great players out there,” said Blackburn captain Matthew Kilgallon. “It was just about concentration and working for each other.”

Messi breaks Spanish hat-trick record as Barca go top

BARCELONA, 9 March — Lionel Messi broke a Spanish hat-trick record and Luis Suarez struck twice as a rampant Barcelona took over top spot in La Liga with a 6-1 hammering of Rayo Vallecano on Saturday. Messi came alive after halftime at the Nou Camp to net his 32nd treble for Barca in all competitions in the space of just 12 minutes. It meant he eclipsed the record of the most hat-tricks ever recorded in Spanish football that he had shared with Athletic Bilbao striker Telmo Zarra.

The Argentine’s second and third goals came in the space of just five minutes.

Nishikori slips to world No 5 in ATP rankings

NEW YORK, 9 March — Japan’s Kei Nishikori dropped back from a career-high world No 4 to No 5 with the release of the ATP Tour world rankings on Monday.

Andy Murray, who had two wins against the United States in Britain’s first-round Davis Cup tie, took over world No 4. Nishikori had two wins but earned no points in Japan’s tie against Canada and trails Murray by 10.

Novak Djokovic, Roger Federer, and Rafael Nadal remained at first, second and third, respectively.
