MPs set to vote on constitutional amendment bill

By Aye Min Soe

NAY PYI TAW, 24 June — After three days of debate, the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw will vote Thursday on an amendment bill for the 2008 Constitution that proposes altering eligibility requirements for the presidency and removing the military’s effective veto over constitutional reforms.

During the second day of parliamentary debate Wednesday, 17 lawmakers discussed key changes to the procedures for amending the constitution, as well as current restrictions on eligibility for the presidency.

The constitutional amendment bill deals with Section 436 (a) which currently stipulates that amendments of some key provisions must be agreed upon by more than 75 percent of MPs in addition to more than 50 percent of eligible voters in a referendum.

The amendment bill proposes a change to at least 70 percent of MPs at Pyidaungsu Hluttaw and over 50 percent of eligible voters in a referendum respectively.

Article 436 of the constitution guarantees the military a quarter of the seats in parliament through appointment, giving them an effective veto over proposed charter reforms.

Other sensitive sections such as 59(f), 59(d) and 60(c) dealing with eligibility to become president and requirement for running the presidency, will also be put to the vote on the same day.

Brig-Gen Tin Soe, a military MP in the parliament, argued against amending Section 59 (f) which bars non-citizens from becoming president or vice-president, as well as anyone with a spouse, “legitimate child,” or child’s spouse who holds foreign citizenship.

If family members of the head of a country are loyal to a foreign power, the country could fall into servitude of that foreign country, Brig-Gen Tin Soe said.

Meanwhile, two MPs from the National League for Democracy party said they and other parties share a desire to amend the constitution, although their specific position on the amendments may differ somewhat.

During the debate, NLD MP U Aung Kyi Nyunt said an amendment to Section 59 (f) proposed by the ruling USDP that excludes just “one of the legitimate children or their spouses” from the section could be deceptive.

He continued to say that the Section 436 (a), which states that the constitution shall be amended with approval of more than 75 percent of all MPs of the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw, means nothing can be done without the consent of military MPs and called for its amendment. U Jay Yaw Wu of the National Unity Party said the section should not be amended.

Some MPs from the ruling Union Solidarity and Development Party supported the amendment to the Section 60 (c) dealing with the eligibility for the presidency, stating that the president shall be selected from elected MPs.

Two MPs from the National Democratic Force party objected to the amendment of Section 60 (c) and the Section 436 (a).

Cargo ships resume transport as Chindwin River rises

MONYWA, 24 June — Cargo ships have resumed using the Chindwin River as a transport route following rains that have raised the water level of the parched tributary.

The 750-mile-long river originates at Patkoi and Kumon hills near the India-Myanmar border and flows into the Ayeyawady River upstream of Pakokku.

Water levels remained too low for cargo ships until later than in previous years, an official of a shipping company said.

“The river usually rises in mid-May,” the official said. “Last summer, cargo ships suspended their runs due to difficulties traveling upstream on the river area and its tributary Uru Creek.”

He added, “Speed boat ferries still ran along the river despite the declining water level, but merchants transported their goods on land in summer.”

Following the rains, cargo ships have resumed transporting commodities and foodstuffs from Monywa to upstream regions.

The official said, “A total of 432 cargo ships and 134 speed boats are running along the river for smooth transport of commodities and passengers.”

Australia to become founding member of China-led AIIB

SYDNEY, 24 June — Australia will join the China-led Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank as one of its founding members, Treasurer Joe Hockey said on Wednesday.

Hockey said in a joint statement with Foreign Minister Julie Bishop that Australia will contribute about A$930 million (about $718 million) over five years, becoming the sixth biggest shareholder in the infrastructure development bank with 57 prospective founding members. The Australian treasurer is scheduled to travel to Beijing to attend the signing ceremony for the AIIB articles of agreement, scheduled at the Great Hall of the People on Monday.

"Joining the AIIB presents Australia with great opportunities to work with our neighbours and largest trading partner to drive economic growth and jobs," Hockey said.

"The AIIB will work closely with the private sector, paving the way for Australian businesses to take advantage of the growth in infrastructure in the region," he added.

On concerns about the bank’s governance, which has been raised by countries such as the United States and Japan, Hockey said it will be "based on best practice, ensuring that all members will be directly involved in the direction and decision making of the bank in an open and transparent manner."

The new investment bank with an initial capital of $100 billion is expected to be set up by the end of this year in a bid to address the infrastructure financing gap in the Asian region.—Kyodo News

Indonesia considers tax amnesty for financial crimes — tax office head

JAKARTA, 24 June — Indonesia’s tax office is considering a tax amnesty for financial crimes, in a move that could bring back at least 100 trillion rupiah ($7.5 billion) to the state coffers, the director-general of taxes said on Wednesday.

Southeast Asia’s biggest economy is grappling with the weakest economic growth in six years and a huge budget deficit, while its tax collection rate is one of the lowest in the region as a proportion of gross domestic product.

Under the tax office’s proposal, the perpetrators of financial crimes including corruption and money laundering can pay a 10-15 percent tax on the assets they bring back to Indonesia, in return for a pardon from criminal prosecution, Sigit Priadi Pramudito told reporters.

The plan would need parliamentary approval.

“Our priority is to pull back overseas funds. If we don’t do anything, who benefits? It’s Singapore,” Pramudito said.

“There’s no other way to take back those funds. The money has been stored in Singapore for decades.”

A bill on the tax amnesty is expected to be deliberated as soon as this year, Finance Minister Bambang Brodjonegoro told The Jakarta Post in Sunday.—Reuters

Ex-Thai police official arrested for gun possession

CHIANG MAI, 24 June — A former senior Thai police official has been arrested at Nairita airport for possessing a loaded gun, Japanese police said on Wednesday.

Kamronwit said he came to Japan to visit a waste incineration plant, and the police believe he entered Japan on Friday as part of a group of about 80 people, they said.

The gun and bullets were found by an X-ray inspection of baggage to be checked in, the police said.

Pakistan’s financial capital of Karachi is wilting in a four-day heat wave that has killed more than 780 people, a health charity said on Wednesday, as the government declared a holiday in the city to encourage people to stay home and cool off.

The heat wave has coincided with severe electricity cuts and the holy month of Ramadan, when most Muslims do not eat or drink during daylight hours. Many of the deaths, among the elderly and poor in the southern city, were caused by dehydration.

“The heat wave death toll has reached close to the 800 mark in the last four days,” Anwar Kazmi, a senior official of the private charity, the Edhi Foundation, told Reuters.

“People are being advised to stay home and cool off,” Kazmi said. “A heat wave is also expected on Thursday.”

Karachi, June 24 — Pakistan’s financial capital of Karachi is wilting in a four-day heat wave that has killed more than 780 people, a health charity said on Wednesday, as the government declared a holiday in the city to encourage people to stay home and cool off.

The heat wave has coincided with severe electricity cuts and the holy month of Ramadan, when most Muslims do not eat or drink during daylight hours. Many of the deaths, among the elderly and poor in the southern city, were caused by dehydration.

“The heat wave death toll has reached close to the 800 mark in the last four days,” Anwar Kazmi, a senior official of the private charity, the Edhi Foundation, told Reuters.

“We are planning to expand the Edhi morgue to cope with a situation like this in future.”

The charity runs a network of ambulances, clinics and morgues to bridge the gaps in an overburdened and poorly funded public health system in the city of 20 million people, home to Pakistan’s main stock market, central bank and biggest port.

Government health officials did not return calls seeking comment. Many of Karachi’s wealthy have generators to run air conditioners or are gathering in upscale, air-conditioned malls to beat the heat, which reached 44 degrees Celsius (111 Fahrenheit) over the weekend.

A sea breeze slightly cooled parts of the city on Wednesday but rains predicted by weather officials did not arrive.

Many residents are furious with the civilian government over the electricity cuts and the poor state of the public hospitals treating many of those who have fainted from the heat.

Public services in Pakistan, a nuclear-armed nation of 190 million people, are starved of resources because almost all its wealthy evade taxes. Fewer than 0.5 percent of citizens pay income tax; many legislators are among the tax dodgers.

The military, which receives the lion’s share of the budget, has set up 22 health centres, where it also hands out water and rehydration salts.

S Korea, Japan to boost defence ties this year

Seoul, June 24 — South Korea and Japan plan to boost their defence relations this year by increasing exchanges and cooperation in defense fields, Yonhap News Agency reported on Wednesday.

“The recent amiable mood is expected to allow us to work closer with Japan, facing growing nuclear and missile threats posed by North Korea,” an unnamed South Korean defence ministry official was quoted as saying.

In signs of improvement in strained bilateral relations, Japan and South Korea marked the 60th anniversary of the normalisation of diplomatic relations on Monday, with the leaders of the two neighbours calling for building a future-oriented relationship in the next half century.

“Working-level talks for policy coordination between officials of the defence ministries are planned this fall,” another ministry official was quoted as saying. “The planned meeting is meant to assess security threats posed by North Korea and how to boost defence cooperation for next year,” the official said.

In October, the two countries also plan to hold joint naval search-and-rescue exercise in Yokosuka, southwest of Tokyo, according to yet another ministry official.

The biennial Search and Rescue Exercise, known as SAREX, has been held since 1999, with the previous one having taken place in July 2013. It is aimed at boosting cooperation in humanitarian missions. — Kyodo News

French President Francois Hollande (L) and former French President Jacques Chirac

NSA spied on French presidents: WikiLeaks

The revelations were first reported in French daily Liberation and on news website Mediapart, which said the NSA spied on the presidents during a period of at least 2006 until May 2012, the month Hollande took over from Sarkozy.

WikiLeaks said the documents derived from directly targeted NSA surveillance of the communications of Hollande (2012–present), Sarkozy (2007–2012) and Chirac (1995–2007), as well as French cabinet ministers and the French ambassador to the US. According to the documents, Sarkozy is said to have considered restarting talks without US involvement and Hollande feared a Greek euro zone exit back in 2012.

These latest revelations regarding spying among allied Western countries came after it emerged that the NSA had spied on Germany and Germany’s own BND intelligence agency had cooperated with the NSA to spy on officials and companies elsewhere in Europe.

“The French people have a right to know that their elected government is subject to hostile surveillance from a supposed ally,” WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange said in the statement, adding that more “important revelations” would soon follow.

The documents include summaries of conversations between French government officials on the global financial crisis, the future of the European Union, the relationship between Hollande’s administration and Merkel’s government, French efforts to determine the make-up of the executive staff of the United Nations, and a dispute between the French and US governments over US spying on France.

The documents also contained the cell phone numbers of numerous officials in the Elysee presidential palace including the direct cell phone of the president, WikiLeaks said.

Last week, WikiLeaks published more than 60,000 diplomatic cables from Saudi Arabia and said on its website it would release half a million more in the coming weeks.

Former NSA employee Edward Snowden created an uproar in Germany after he revealed that Washington had carried out large-scale electronic espionage in Germany and claimed the NSA had bugged Merkels’ phone.

“While the German disclosures focused on the isolated fact that senior officials were targeted by US intelligence, WikiLeaks' publication today provides much greater insight into US spying on its allies,” WikiLeaks said.

This includes “the actual content of intelligence products deriving from the intercepts, showing how the US spies on the phone calls of French leaders and ministers for political, economic and diplomatic intelligence”.

Greek minister says two or three issues remaining in debt talks

Athens, 24 June — Greek economy minister George Stathakis said on Wednesday “two or three” items remained to settle with international lenders on a package of proposals put forward by Greece to break a deadlock in negotiations a cash-for-reforms deal.

“There are two or three very specific issues, and you appreciate it’s the last part, three out of the fifty measures that have been agreed,” he told Greece’s Mega TV.

He said those issues included long term debt relief and VAT exemptions in the Greek islands, a very sensitive issue for the right-wing Independent Greeks party that supports Prime Minister Alexis Tsipras’ coalition government.

However he said he was confident a deal would be reached at a European Union summit on Thursday and that it would be supported by Tsipras’ left-wing Syriza party, despite objections expressed by some in the party.

“I think this balanced deal is defensible to Syriza, and in Greek society too,” he said.

Strike halts Channel Tunnel traffic, migrants try to board vehicles

Earlier, French strike police were deployed to remove protesters blocking motorway access to the tunnel, which had created a 10-km (six-mile) tailback. A spokeswoman for Eurotunnel said it understood the concerns of the port workers.

“We hope that there will be suitable job proposals tomorrow,” she said, referring to a meeting planned for Wednesday.

A spokeswoman for British Prime Minister David Cameron said Britain was in close contact with French authorities. Britain issued travel advice that said migrants were using the disruption to try to board queueing vehicles.

“There are large numbers of illegal migrants in and around Calais who may seek to enter the UK illegally. Although local police patrols have been reinforced, you should keep vehicle doors locked in slow-moving traffic and secure your vehicle when it is left unattended,” the Foreign Office said.

“The usual phenomenon - some migrants are trying to climb into lorries stopped in traffic jams on the motorway leading to the tunnel,” the police press office in Arras said. “They’re trying to hide in lorries in particular.”

“The incident is the latest flare-up involving migrants who have amassed around Calais port, hoping to get into Britain.”

That is part of a wider migration crisis facing Europe, the target of tens of thousands of would-be refugees fleeing conflict in the Middle East and Africa or of others trying to escape poverty in their home countries.

The issue is due to be discussed at a summit of European leaders in Brussels from Thursday.

Facts about Greece’s debt talks

Greek government spokesmen were due to end at 7 pm local time (06:00 pm BST) but Eurostar said it had been informed by Eurotunnel that the tunnel would remain closed all day. “We expect normal service to be resumed tomorrow,” it said in a statement.

The French government spokesmen summed up the US ambassador to the Elysee Palace offices later on Wednesday.

“We find it hard to understand or imagine what motivates an ally to spy on allies who are often in strategic positions in world affairs,” French government spokesman Stephane Le Foll told i>TELE television.

“I would immediately state a statement from the US National Security Council saying it was not targeting and will not target any of the French’s communications. The statement did not deny spying had taken place in the past.”

Claude Guentert, Sarkozy’s former chief of staff and one of the report targets of the NSA, told RTL radio: “Considering the very close relationship we have with the United States, considering the fact we are extremely loyal allies, I feel like trust has been broken.”

“These are scary revelations which require explanations from the United States and guarantees that it won’t happen again,” Paris Mayor Anne Hidalgo said on France 2 television.

There are two or three very specific issues, and you appreciate it’s the last part, three out of the fifty measures that have been agreed,” he told Greece’s Mega TV.

He said those issues included long term debt relief and VAT exemptions in the Greek islands, a very sensitive issue for the right-wing Independent Greeks party that supports Prime Minister Alexis Tsipras’ coalition government.

The Power of FM Radio Stations

By Myo Myint

One of the delights of retirement is being the boss of one’s time, and one of its adversities is having to think of how to put to use all the extra time one owns after devoting some of it to prayer, meditation, and religious studies. With so many TV channels now available, the easiest way to keep occupied is to watch TV, but having to use one’s eyes and ears both at the same time, and to remain immobile for long stretches of time can become quite taxing for an aged person. A better alternative I found is listening to the radio. It requires only one sense - one’s hearing, and if one wishes, one can ignore the sound and can do something else, or let one’s mind wander. Moreover, unlike a TV set, with the emergence of better quality and smaller sized transistors that provide high fidelity sound, one can take it along like a book to wherever one moves to, or goes to - from the sitting room to the bedroom, or to the garden, and in the countryside, even take it to the paddy fields and plantations. The radio broadcasting service also rivals TV stations in the offer of a wide choice of programmes and stations. In addition to Myanmar Radio with its four services, Yangon Service, National Service, and Distance Learning, there is a wide choice of Myanmar FM radio stations to choose from, if you are living in Nay Pyi Taw or Yangon.

FM broadcasting was patented in 1933 and the first commercial FM broadcasting began in the late 1930s in the United States. The BBC began FM broadcasting in the United Kingdom about two decades later in 1955. Today, nearly every country has FM stations, but most stations tend to focus on certain regions as their outreach can be limited. In Myanmar, the first FM radio station, City FM, was established in 2001. It was followed by Mandalay FM in 2008 and Pyinwaddy FM in 2009. Today, according to the information available on the Internet, there are altogether eight stations in the country with each focusing on certain regions or states. For instance, Mandalay FM covers such areas as Nay Pyi Taw, Mandalay, Yangon, Toungoo, and Magway; Cherry FM covers such places as Nay Pyi Taw, Taunggyi, Pyinmana, Tachileik, Yangon, and Loikaw, and Padamya FM covers such towns and cities as Bago, Bhamo, Kantbalu, Katha, Mandalay, Monywa, Myitkyina, Nammar, Popa, Pyay, and Yangon. While the national broadcasting station is more formal in its presentations, even though it may not have its own sound, the public may want to tune in to see what quality radio may sound like. However, there are also some stations that offer innovative programmes. One FM station provides traffic news during rush hours through their program called Traffic Hot line to which taxi drivers and others phone to provide reports on traffic conditions voluntarily. Another station provides information on job vacancies. Still another gives knowledge on improving business management skills. One programme I thought most useful is the lost and found programme which brings together finders and people who have lost things. Some FM stations also have programmes devoted to literature such as poetry recitation, and book introduction by authors. Some stations include programmes of discussions of controversial or topical interests such as, “Living together”, “How parents should have few children of their children”, “Use and abuse of Facebook”, etc. by two, or three regular discussants or invited guests, some of which are moderated by one of the programme hosts. Programmes of interviews, either conducted at the studio, or by phone, are made more attractive by not just interviewing celebrities like film stars, directors, writers, and artists but also ordinary people with unusual careers like taxi drivers. Presenters try to make their programmes more interesting by interspersing their programmes with tidbits of international film, the local music scene, information on music festivals, events, etc. In addition, with the intention to draw a larger audience, some stations have programmes in national language, some are collaborating with foreign radio stations and accepting programmes from them. One station even has a DJ presenter of international music who regularly sends programmes of songs that have reached the top of the chart presented in English and sent from abroad. Programmes of most TV stations are interrupted by advertisements which no doubt generate much needed income for the radio station concerned but can sometimes be an annoyance for those listeners to whom the ads have no relevance. True to their mission, Myanmar FM stations entertain, inform, educate, engage with audience, promote product sales and provide companionship to lonely listeners. But in order to do so, they should not just be focusing on the latest COUNTRY, HIP-HOP, ROCK, R&B, etc. music, the singers and the song writers to sell their programmes. They need to re- alize that in a country where about 70 percent of the population live in rural areas, they, as regional stations, know the need of their regional and can cater to local needs. Therefore, they play a vital role in society in reaching out to regional audiences and disseminating knowledge, information and skills they need, especially, at an important time when the nation is trying to narrow development gaps among different regions and striving to catch up with fast-paced developments taking place in its neighbouring countries. They need to broaden audience appeal by taking into account the interest of other age groups in addition to young people. There are so much knowledge and information that need to be delivered to the people. They need to think of not just what their listeners want, but also what their listeners really need for them to become more competitive and successful in this world. They need to provide the kind of social knowledge that will make them more responsible and less self-centred citizens who are capable of taking care of their environment. All citizens, both young and old, need to vastly improve their health knowledge, from simple matter of keeping their surroundings clean to more complex one of improving the quality of life of their family. They need to contribute to build a more united, harmonious, peaceful and inclusive nation. They need to think of their listeners about the many developments taking place in other parts of the world so that they will want to work harder. On the other hand, farmers need better knowledge about modern agricultural practices and what facilities are available to them. Managers need to be informed about better management practices. Teachers need to be updated with new teaching techniques. People need to be reminded about the need to take pride in their rich cultural heritage and also individually and collectively work to preserve it. Special attention need to be paid to the next generation. Young people need to be constantly reminded that life is not just fun, frolic and falling in and falling out of love. Young people need to be awakened to become more ambitious and dynamic and be provided with information on what needs to be improved and how they can be improve. They need to be reminded that they are the future leaders, protectors, movers, changers and innovators of the country. I believe that only when the Myanmar FM stations also fulfil such responsibilities in addition to entertaining people with music, will they reach the goal of becoming truly the media of the people, about the people and that is working on behalf of the people.

US response to Kurdish advances in Syria tempered by caution

WASHINGTON, 24 June — The Obama administration on Tuesday touted Kurdish-led advances against Islamic State in Syria as a potential offset to US-backed effort to retake territory from the jihadist group, but US officials cautioned that the insurgents remained resilient and could strike back.

By highlighting battlefield gains in northern Syria by a reliable partner on the ground, the White House sought to further justify President Barack Obama’s policy of limiting US military involvement in the fight to reverse Islamic State’s conquests there and in neighboring Iraq.

But it was also a stark reminder of Washington’s stumbling bid to turn moderate Syrian Arab rebels into a viable fighting force, as well as a pointed message to the Iraqi government, which is struggling to rebuild its fragile military.

Kurdish YPG-led fighters captured a town held by Islamic State on Tuesday, inching closer to Raqqa, the hardcore Islamic State group’s de facto capital of a self-declared “caliphate.”

The apparent blow to Islamic State’s momentum there was achieved with the aid of stepped-up US air strikes and intelligence sharing, US officials said.

The US military had air-dropped weapons to YPG fighters inside Syria during an earlier campaign on the Turkish border.

“If this is true, the apparent knock-down blow to Islamic State’s momentum in Syria is the result of a well-organized military effort,” said Colonel Steve Warren, a Pentagon spokesman, said the Kurdish fighters’ seizure of a north-south highway between Raqqa and the Turkish border would make it harder for Islamic State to keep up the flow of arms and foreign fighters into the heart of the territory it holds.

But another US official acknowledged that Islamic State had other routes and was not at immediate risk of being cut off.

In the capture of Ain Issa on Tuesday brought Kurdish forces and their allies within 50 km (30 miles) of Raqqa, a US official said an attack of this magnitude did not occur there was not currently “in our agenda.”

When asked whether Raqqa might be the next target, Warren told reporters in Washington: “We’re not going to say specifically what our immediate plans are. Obviously our ultimate objective is to expel ISIL completely.”

Obama has ruled out sending advisers or trainers into Syria, where Washington has tapped its President Bashar al-Assad. But he has deployed a nearly 3,500-strong contingent in Iraq, where Islamic State controls an estimated one-third of that country.

While Kurds have united against Islamic State, the US has been caught between a formidable challenge in Iraq of melding rival Shi’ite and Sunni Arabs into a fighting force.

Int’l aid delivered to Yemen to cope with health crisis

UNITED NATIONS, 24 June — The UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) reported that health kits, IV fluids and other essential medicines have been delivered to health facilities in four governorates in Yemen in the past weeks for the treatment of more than 438,000 people, including treatment of patients with dengue fever, UN spokesman Stephane Dujarric told reporters here Tuesday.

A new analysis released by OCHA showed that in the first three weeks of June, only 11 percent of the estimated total monthly fuel requirements for Yemen have been delivered, Dujarric said at a daily news briefing. “This compares to 18 percent for May, 1 percent for April, and 23 percent for March.”

“Commercial shipping is slowing significantly, but remains constrained by port congestion, uncertainty over coalition searches, and high fees related to the time spent by ships waiting to dock,” he said. “This is contributing to massive food insecurity.”

The UN Humanitarian Air Service (UNHAS) is flying regularly from Djibouti to Sana’a every Sunday, Tuesday and Thursday, he noted.

Thousands of suspected cases of the mosquito-borne viral infection Dengue fever have been reported in conflict-affected Yemen, where a major health crisis is unfolding, the United Nations World Health Organization (WHO) announced on Tuesday.

WHO said that more than 3,000 suspected cases of Dengue had been reported in Yemen since 20 March with some non-governmental organizations flagging more than 6,000 cases. The latest development comes just days after WHO said Yemen’s health system is on the verge of breakdown. Hospitals have been destroyed, health workers killed, and critical shortages of food, medical supplies and fuel are causing large-scale suffering.

Dengue fever is a severe, flu-like illness that affects infants, young children and adults, but sel-dom causes death, according to a WHO fact sheet, which also says there is no specific treatment for dengue fever but early detection and access to proper medical care lowers fatality rates below 1 percent.

Islamic State suicide bombers attack Hasaka, 10 killed

AMMAN, 24 June — Islamic State suicide bombers killed at least ten people and injured dozens in two attacks in Syria on Tuesday in the heart of the northeastern Syrian city of Hasaka, a monitor and a resident said.

The Islamic State’s Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said at least three bombers targeted a key Syrian army security compound in the heart of the government-held portion of the city while a bomber blew himself up in the Kurdish portion of the city at a police station run by the Kurdish Peoples Protection Units (YPG).

The ethnically-mixed city is divided into separate zones run by the government of Syrian President Bashar al-Assad and a Kurdish administration with a well-organized military.

The Observatory, which tracks violence across the war-torn country, said both the Kurds and the Syrian authorities were keeping a tight lid on the numbers of casualties.

A resident of Hasaka contacted by Reuters said the Kurds and Syrian forces cordoned off the main arteries within the city after the explosions.

Syria’s state news agency SANA confirmed that two explosive-laden cars were detonated in twin bombings near a main roundabout in the city and close to a children’s hospital, but gave no details. Earlier this month, the hardline-Islandic Islamic State militants were expelled by the Syrian army after they made lightning advances south of the strategically located city by conducting around a dozen suicide attacks using explosives-filled trucks at military checkpoints there.—Reuters

Israel arrests Druze suspects in Syria ambulances attacks

JERUSALEM, 24 June — Israel has carried out a “wave of arrests” of Druze Arabs suspected of two attacks, one of them fatal, on ambulances bringing casualties from Syria’s civil war to Israel, police said on Wednesday.

Four of the attacks in northern Israel and the Israeli-annexed Golan Heights drew strong censure from Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, whose government is trying to prevent a spillover of sectarianism from Syria while offering limited humanitarian aid.

Inflamed by media reports suggesting some of the hundreds of wounded Syrians admitted to Israel for medical care belong to jihadist rebel groups fighting the Druze in Syria, the crowds of Druze blocked two army ambulances bringing casualties from Syria’s civil war to Israeli hospitals, police said on Wednesday.

Tokyo, 24 June — The Nikkei index closed at an 18-year, six-month high on Wednesday amid improved investor sentiment drawing from perceptions that Greece is likely to seal a deal with its creditors to avert a default and an exit from the eurozone.

The 225-issue Nikkei Stock Average ended up 58.61 points, or 0.28 percent, from Tuesday at 20,868.03, a closing level last seen 5 December, 1996. The broader Topix index of all First Section issues on the Tokyo Stock Exchange finished 3.49 points, or 0.21 percent, higher at 1,679.89.

Stocks opened higher, underpinned by optimism over Greece’s debt negotiations and broad gains in European and US stocks overnight. The Nasdaq index closed at a record high in New York on Tuesday.

Earlier concerns that talks between Greece and its international creditors were heading south, raising the specter of a Greek default, had ebbed amid speculation the eurozone member will make compromises on fiscal reform in time to be able to repay its debts, said Tsutomu Yamada, market analyst at kabu.com Securities Co.

"With fears of a Greek default clearing, there are plenty of incentives for investors to buy Tokyo stocks, including central bank policy, demand from Japanese institutions and expectations for strong performances by listed firms," Yamada said.

A revised US trade bill seen as crucial to the outcome of the 12-party Trans-Pacific Partnership free trade negotiations cleared the US Senate on Tuesday and was hoped to pass Congress on Wednesday, spurring expectations for the TPP’s eventual success.

The Nikkei and Topix zigzagged in the afternoon amid a sense of temporary overheating, but with the yen stable against the US dollar there is every reason to expect the Nikkei will top the 21,000 line in the near future, said Yutaka Miura, senior technical analyst at Mizuho Securities Co.

On the First Section, advancing issues outnumbered declining issues by 1,048 to 682, while 156 ended the day unchanged.

Major gainers included shipping, led by Kawasaki Kisen, which rose 7 yen, or 2.5 percent, to 290 yen. Securities, glass and ceramics, and warehousing issues followed as major gainers. Warehousing firms were seen as likely to benefit from enhanced trade under a successful TPP agreement, brokers said, with Nissin up 17 yen, or 4.7 percent, at 382 yen.

Furukawa Electric gained 5 yen, or 2.2 percent, to 236 yen after the Nikkei business daily reported late Tuesday the firm will set up a communications cable factory in Morocco to meet African demand.

Tochu went up 45.00 yen, or 2.7 percent, to 1,715.50 yen as investors received positively reports that the trading house has pulled out of its struggling US shale gas business.

Trading volume on the main section fell to 2,629.45 million shares from Tuesday’s 2,831.27 million shares.

Singapore, 24 June — Gold slid to a one-week low on Wednesday, down for a fourth consecutive session as the dollar strengthened and global stock markets continued to rally on expectations of a Greek debt deal.

Asian shares were near eking out a sixth session of gains on Wednesday as investors strove to stay optimistic on the chance of a Greek debt deal, while the dollar held firm as the prospect of US rate rises swung back into view.

"Investors reacted to enhanced hopes of a Greek debt deal by liquidating or shorting gold," HSBC analyst James Steel said in a research note.

"Gold has absorbed a lot of "bad" news recently and we wonder just how much lower the market is likely to go. Physical EM (demand in emerging markets) still appears sluggish, not only negatively in India, an important gold-consuming country. This opens the way for lower prices but we think declines may be modest."

Spot gold fell 0.2 per cent to $1,176 an ounce by 0715 GMT, after losing 0.6 percent on Tuesday. It hit a session low of $1,174.7, the weakest since 17 June.

The precious metal, often seen as an alternative investment during times of financial and economic uncertainties, has come under pressure after Greece’s left-wing government expressed confidence that parliament would approve a debt deal with lenders.

Gold is vulnerable to pressure from other factors such as the prospect of the first US interest rate rise from the Federal Reserve in nearly a decade. That would boost the opportunity cost of holding non-yielding bullion.

Fed Governor Jerome Powell said on Tuesday he was prepared to raise interest rates this year, once in September and once in December, as long as the economy performs as expected.

Later in the day, the Atlanta Fed’s GDPNow forecast model showed the US economy is on track to grow 2 percent in the second quarter.

Strength in the dollar, which is benefiting from upbeat US data, further dragged on gold, which is priced in the greenback and tends to gain when the currency is weak.

Physical demand in top consuming region Asia has been sluggish as monsoon concerns weighed on demand in India and a better-yielding stock market kept buyers away in China.

In other news, China is expected to receive approval from its central bank for a yuan-denominated international bond scheme to be set up by China in a bid to attract foreign capital into the economy.

Tokyo, 24 June — Nissan Motor Co (7201.T) President Akio Toyoda earned 352 million yen ($2.84 million/E1.8 million) in total compensation last year after his bonus doubled to about $2 million, the Japanese company said in a regulatory filing on Wednesday.

Toyoda, head of the world’s best-selling automaker, received a bonus of 249 million yen in the year ended March, up from 127 million yen in the previous year. His base salary was unchanged.

Toyoda’s compensation is roughly a third of what Nissan Motor Co (7201.T) paid Chief Executive Carlos Ghosn in the same period. Ghosn told shareholders on Tuesday he splits his time equally between Nissan and French alliance partner Renault SA (RENA.PA), which he also heads.

Fiat Chrysler Automobiles NV (FCHA.MI) CEO Sergio Marchionne was the top-paid automotive executive in 2014, making about 31.3 million euros ($35 million).

Toyota in May reported a 19 percent rise in net profit to 2.17 trillion yen for the business year through March, and forecast a third consecutive year of record profit.

New York, 24 June — Tiny plugs inserted into the tear duct may safely curb the annoying and damaging effects of dry eyes, according to a new analysis of previous research. “Plugs are generally well tolerated,” said Dr. Marcus Marquet, an ophthalmologist at the University of Hong Kong and the study’s first author. “Overall the extent of relief depends on both the type of dry eye and the type of plug.” Patients with dry eyes who might benefit from plugs are those who have already tried eye drops and gels but still have itchy, red, painful eyes, blurred vision and the sensation of a foreign body in the eye, Marquet and his team note in the journal Ophthalmology.

About 20 to 30 million people in the US suffer mild dry eyes and 9 million have moderate to severe dry eyes, Marquet notes. “Studies have shown that dry eye significantly impacts patients’ quality of life,” he told Reuters Health in an email. “If untreated, more severe cases of dry eye can result in vision loss due to corneal scarring.”

His team’s review, sponsored by the American Academy of Ophthalmology, looked at data on tiny semi-permanent punctal plugs (which are placed in the tear duct) and intracanalicular plugs (inserted deeper into the eye duct channel), and dissolvable plugs.

Punctal plugs are usually made from silicone or acrylic polymer, while dissolvable plugs are made from collagen or synthetic material.

Both types of semi-permanent plugs offered long-term help for dry eyes, though a higher percentage of people in studies with intracanalicular plugs had more infections near the inner corner of the eyelid than did the people in punctal or dissolvable plug studies.—Reuters
Japan to boost medical preparedness for nuclear disasters

Tokyo, 24 June — Learning lessons from the 2011 Fukushima meltdowns, Japan’s regulator decided on Tuesday to boost medical preparedness for nuclear disasters. The Nuclear Regulation Authority plans to oblige local municipalities hosting nuclear plants to designate up to three hospitals as medical centers for providing emergency treatment for radiation exposure.

The 2011 Fukushima Daichi nuclear accident, which led to the massive leakage of radioactive materials, exposed the vulnerability of hospitals and medical networks in the event of a nuclear emergency, with many evacuees not given proper treatment.

The NRA said it also plans to set up facilities for treatment of people exposed to high levels of radiation and learning advanced education on radiation treatment. It will also call on universities and corporations to take part in enhancing medical preparedness for nuclear accidents.

The regulator said it will revise a guideline on measures against nuclear emergency by the end of August, after soliciting opinions from the public for one month.

At present, all of Japan’s commercial nuclear reactors remain offline pending the regulator’s safety screening.

Kyushu Electric Power Co’s Sendai nuclear plant, located in southwestern Japan, is expected to go back online possibly in August, becoming the first nuclear facility to be reactivated under a set of new safety requirements adopted following the Fukushima crisis. — Kyodo News

For Kerry, Iran deal would be a legacy hit after many misses

WASHINGTON, 24 June — HI US Secretary of State John Kerry pulls off a nuclear deal with Iran, it will be a singular achievement in a long career in which the grand prize has eluded him.

His 2004 presidential election loss, lack of legislative monuments despite 28 years in the Senate, and failure, like many before, to bring peace to Israel and Palestinians have contributed to a view that he struggles to seal major successes.

The 71-year-old has expended remarkable energy in pursuit of what would be an historic agreement with Iran, flying tens of thousands of miles and holding dozens of meetings with his Iranian counterpart. He plans to attend the final, last stage of the nuclear talks in Vienna ahead of a 30 June deadline, despite breaking his leg late last month.

Kerry’s negotiating style with Iran is a cocktail of boundless energy, tactical flexibility and occasional hardball, according to officials involved in the talks.

Still, critics say he has broken some classic rules of negotiation, overshadowing the principal US negotiator Wendy Sherman; meeting Iranians regularly rather than holding himself in reserve; and exuding an air of eagerness for a deal.

Supporters say no one will work harder for an accord and that his unsuccessful efforts to end Syria’s civil war or the Israeli-Palestinian conflict shows he is willing to risk failure while tackling the hardest problems.

Kerry’s determination to headline the talks is obvious from his travel schedule. In the last six months, he has met his Iranian counterpart, Mohammad Jawad Zarif, everywhere from Geneva, Paris, Dubai, Lausanne, Montreux and Munich to New York City.

Veteran negotiators say Kerry’s willingness to meet the Iranians so often makes it look like he is chasing a deal, rather than intervening only when the toughest issues remain.

“Being secretary of state by odometer is a very false measure,” said Richard Armitage, a deputy secretary of state under Republican President George W Bush. “The administration is too easier,” added Armitage. “Iranians can smell this. And if the secretary of state is willing to armal himself in at the 11th and half a hour every time, what incentive is it for the Iranians to give you their bottom line?”

Armitage reserved judgment on the nuclear deal, stressing the need for short-notice inspections of Iranian facilities to ensure Teheran is not cheating.

Under a deal, Iran would curb its nuclear work in return for sanctions relief. Crucial of differences remain between six major powers and Iran, even after a framework deal was agreed on 2 April.

Senior US officials disputed that Kerry has under mined Sherman, saying the two work extremely well together and that some issues can only be resolved at the highest levels.

New UN goals lack focus, global health experts warn

WASHINGTON, 24 June — Shaking aid dollars threaten the major advances made over the past decade in fighting disease and preventable deaths, a task that will grow even more difficult under new United Nations’ development goals, experts in global health said.

Child mortality has plunged since the UN set a development goal of reducing under-five deaths worldwide by two-thirds, and the spread of HIV/AIDS infections have fallen 44 percent in the last decade.

These achievements reflect the $200 billion invested over the last 15 years in improving health in lower income countries after the UN Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) set global health targets.

But the new set of Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) that the UN is expected to adopt in September are more diverse, and lack the clarity and focus brought by the MDGs, experts say.

“Health is one piece of a much more crowded space that will compete for attention and finances, when we still haven’t finished the job,” Jer Nurses, Kaiser Family Foundation director of global health and HIV policy, said at a Center for Strategic and International Studies forum on Tuesday.

Development finance for health swelled to $36 billion globally in 2014 from $7 billion in 1990, as the United States invested heavily to control the spread of HIV/AIDS and the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation embraced global health issues.

But global health stagnated between 2010 and 2014, and could decline in the years ahead, presenting new challenges for the health agenda, the experts at the CSIS forum said.

“You don’t hear a lot of discussion today about people increasing their spending,” said Charles Murray, director of the Institute for Health Metrics and Evaluation at the University of Washington, who presented an interactive tool to monitor shifts in development assistance for health.

That means health dollars must be wisely spent where they have the greatest impact, or achievements to date could slide.

For example, maternal mortality has declined by 45 percent since 1990, but remains far short of its MDG target of falling by three-quarters by 2015, and universal access to reproductive healthcare remains out of grasp.

The Ebola outbreak in West Africa, which has killed more than 11,000 people, also highlighted how controlling infectious diseases remains a challenge, despite major gains made on other diseases such as malaria, tuberculosis and HIV/AIDS, Gates said.

In the wake of the Ebola crisis, development officials are discussing investing more money in clinics, hospitals and research centers, which could siphon funds from disease-specific projects.

“There is competition for the health dollar,” said Howard Bauchner, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Murray said there are some glimmers of hope on the health funding front. As more countries graduate from the ranks of the poorest, it will free up World Bank loans that can be invested in healthcare, a priority for its president Jim Yong Kim.

Australian Air Force drone flies in civilian airspace for first time

SYDNEY, 24 June — Australia’s air force has remotely piloted a military-grade drone in Australia’s civilian airspace for the first time as part of preparations for the joint Australia-United States Talisman Sabre military exercises in July.

Australia currently has two of Israeli-built unmanned aircraft systems, called Heron, which have completed more than 27,000 mission hours in southern Afghanistan, providing real-time surveillance capabilities for Australia’s military and the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF), Australia’s national broadcaster reported on Wednesday.

Royal Australian Air Force (RAAF) Wing Commander Jonathan McMurran said it was a historic week as it was the first time an unmanned aircraft had flown in Australia’s civilian airspace without interrupting civilian aircraft.

“Our intent is to integrate, not accommodate... and that allows us to expand our operations outside of defence restricted airspace in Australia and allows us to participate more fully in ADF exercises,” McMurran said. “What it will do is allow the army commanders to integrate the heron system into the battlefield to provide enhanced battlefield awareness.”

S Korean court orders Japan firm to pay Korean women for forced labour

Gwangju, (South Korea), 24 June — A South Korean high court on Wednesday upheld a lower court ruling that the first ever ordered Mitsubishi Heavy Industries Ltd to pay compensation to four Korean women who were forcibly conscripted as labourers during World War II when Japan ruled the Korean Peninsula.

The Gwangju High Court told the Japanese company to pay three of them 120 million won (about $108,000) each and the other 100 million won in compensation.

The court in the southwestern city of Gwangju also ordered Mitsubishi Heavy to pay about 102 million won to a fifth plaintiff whose two deceased family members, both of them women, were forcibly conscripted into labour for the Japanese.

In the lower court ruling in November 2013, the company was ordered to pay four plaintiffs 150 million won each and the fifth one 80 million won.

The plaintiffs, including 84-year-old Yang Gum Dok, sought compensation for being forced to work at Mitsubishi Heavy’s factories in places such as Nagoya, central Japan from 1944 when they were aged 13 to 15.

They had earlier sued Mitsubishi Heavy and the Japanese government in a Japanese court, but the Supreme Court in Japan eventually threw out their case in 2008, saying the time limit for seeking personal compensation had expired.

In a landmark decision in May 2012 that reversed previous court decisions, the South Korean Supreme Court ruled that the right of former forced workers and their families to seek withheld wages and compensation was not invalidated by the 1965 treaty that normalized bilateral ties, prompting the plaintiffs to seek damages in South Korea.

Japan maintains that all individual compensation claims were settled with that treaty, and Mitsubishi Heavy argued during the trial in South Korea that the plaintiffs’ claim should be rejected based on this idea.

The South Korean top court ruling resulted in a string of lower court rulings that ordered Japanese companies to pay compensation to those forced into labour for the Japanese. Wednesday’s ruling was the third such decision by a South Korean high court.

English teen Tom Holland is Marvel’s new ‘Spider-Man’

New York, 24 June — Little-known English actor Tom Holland has been picked to play the web-slinging superhero in the next “Spider-Man” film, which is due for release in July 2017. Sony Pictures and Marvel Studios said on Tuesday.

Holland, 19, will play Spider-Man’s teenage alter ego Peter Parker as a high-school age student in the upcoming, yet-to-be titled film.

He follows in the footsteps of Tobey Maguire and Andrew Garfield, who have portrayed the book’s Peter Parker at older stages of his life in the five previous movies.

Holland played Naomi Watt’s son in the 2012 tsunami drama “The Impossible” and recently appeared in the British television miniseries “Wolf Hall.” He was selected after a worldwide casting search to appear in the film that will be directed by Jon Watts.

“We saw many terrific young actors, but Tom’s screen tests were special,” Tom Rothman, the chairman of Sony Pictures Motion Pictures Group, said in a statement.

News of Holland’s selection may disappoint some fans who had said they wanted a black actor to play Spider-Man for the upcoming film.

Walt Disney Co’s Marvel Studios will co-produce the film with Sony. Under the agreement announced in February, Spider-Man will appear in the Marvel film, and Marvel characters, such as Iron Man, Thor, and Captain America, can appear in later Spider-Man films.

Holland is expected to make his first appearance as Spider-Man in “Captain America: Civil War,” which is due for release in summer 2016.

Sony Pictures Entertainment, a division of Sony Corp, will continue to own the cinematic rights to Spider-Man.

Writer Stan Lee and writer/artist Steve Ditko created the fictional superhero character, who first appeared in comics in 1962. The Spider-Man franchise has earned more than $4 billion at the box office worldwide, making it the most successful franchise in the history of Sony Pictures.—Reuters

Actress Geena Davis takes fight for women in film worldwide

London, 24 June — Actress Geena Davis called on Tuesday for greater efforts to stop the use of negative stereotypes of women and girls in film and the media as she unveiled details of a new global drive to address gender imbalance in the movie world.

Davis, who founded the Geena Davis Institute on Gender in Media 11 years ago, has joined forces with the BFI London Film Festival to hold the first global symposium on gender in film outside the United States in London in October.

The Oscar-winning actress, who has held conferences promoting women in creative media in the United States since 2008, expressed concerns that films are reinforcing negative gender stereotypes with movie audiences of all ages.

“Media images have a huge impact on our perceptions and on our social and cultural beliefs and behaviours,” Davis said in a statement.

Davis, 59, who won a best supporting actress Oscar for her role in 1988 film “The Accidental Tourist,” joins a chorus of actresses who have recently condemned gender inequality in the movie industry.

Stars such as Meryl Streep and Kristen Stewart have been vocal about sexism as well as age biases in the movie industry, with Stewart saying in one recent interview that women had “to work a little bit harder to be heard”.

The London global symposium, which will be followed by similar events in India and Brazil in 2016, will bring together politicians and key figures within the entertainment industry for two panel discussions about female characters in film. The first discussion will be chaired by British Film Institute Chief Executive Amanda Nevill and the second by Elizabeth Karlson, chairwoman of industry group Women in Film & Television.

“The collaboration with the BFI, who have a clear mandate to promote gender equality and the Geena Davis Institute ... provides a much needed platform from which to incite change,” Karlson said in a statement.—Reuters

Blatter to attend World Cup draw in Russia on 25 July

MOSCOW, 24 June — FIFA president Sepp Blatter will attend the 2018 World Cup qualifying draw in St Petersburg on 25 July, Russian Sports Minister Vitaly Mutko said on Tuesday.

"Of course, he (Blatter) will attend the draw," Mutko told the TASS news agency.

"The whole of the (FIFA) executive committee will be there, as well as all 209 national federations. Preparations are going as planned," the minister added. The Russian Football Union (RFU) also said Blatter would attend the draw.

"As a person who knows a few things about Blatter, I am in no doubt that he will attend the draw," RFU general secretary Anatoly Vorobyov told Reuters in a telephone interview.

"Blatter has come to Russia 23 years in a row to attend the Commonwealth Cup. However, now there is a very important event in the sporting and social-political calendar. Of course the president of FIFA should attend these events."

"I am sure that if nothing unexpected happens, Blatter will visit St Petersburg on 25 July," Vorobyov added.

The Commonwealth Cup began in 1993 as a tournament for the champions of the former Soviet Union republics.

Blatter, 79, said on 2 June he would step down from his post after US and Swiss authorities widened their investigations into bribery and corruption at world soccer’s governing body.

Blatter has not been charged with any wrongdoing. Swiss authorities are also investigating the awarding of the 2018 and 2022 World Cups to Russia and Qatar respectively.

Paris enters race to host 2024 Olympic Games

PARIS, 24 June — Paris on Tuesday officially announced its bid to host the 2024 Olympic and Paralympic Games and bring the global sports event back to the French capital for the first time in a century.

Paris, which narrowly missed hosting the 2012 Olympics, now begins a two-year selection process in which the world’s most visited city will face off against the likes of Boston, Hamburg and Rome, which lost out to Paris in 2024.

"Paris 2024 promises a feasible and flexible Games concept," French National Olympic Committee (CNOSF) head Denis Massoglia, said. His team and others had flagged a Parisian bid for months.

The International Olympic Committee (IOC) will announce the candidate cities that made it to the shortlist in 2016, before voting for a winner in the summer of 2017.

President François Hollande welcomed the move.

"The state will make every effort to support this candidacy which will be exemplary on the environmental, economic and civic front," he said in a statement.

"It is a unique moment in a century."

President Francois Hollande said Paris is a cosmopolitan city, which about the cost but endorsed infrastructures should help limit outlays, putting the plan on track.

Panama tops US falls in well-being ranking: Gallup

WASHINGTON, 24 June — Residents of Panama topped an annual ranking of well-being released on Wednesday, while Afghanistan ranked last and the United States took a tumble.

The United States ranked 23rd of 145 countries, territories and areas tracked by the Gallup-Healthways Global Well-Being Index, down from 12th place a year earlier. The decline reflected fewer people reporting they were satisfied with their feelings of community, including safety, as well as reporting less positive social ties, said Dan Witters, who compiled the report.

The addition of 11 more countries and areas in 2014’s index also contributed to the United States’ lower ranking, Witters said.

Panama led the world in overall well-being for the second year straight, Gallup said, with 53 percent of residents thriving in three or more areas of well-being, measures that include a person’s sense of purpose, financial well-being and physical health.

"People in Panama will report a lot of daily happiness, a lot of daily smiling, and a lot of daily enjoyment without a lot of stress and worry," Witters said.

Afghanistan ranked the lowest in overall well-being in 2014, with zero percent of residents considered thriving in well-being areas.

The index was based on interviews with more than 146,000 people aged 15 and older, in 145 countries, territories and areas in 2014. Puerto Rico and Northern Cyprus are among the territories and areas that are not countries that were included in the index.

Residents of the Americas region were the most likely to be thriving in well-being and residents in sub-Saharan Africa were the least likely, the index found.

Latin American countries topped the list, making up seven of the top 10 countries. Europe led the world in financial well-being, Gallup said. — Reuters

Murray seeded third in pursuit of second Wimbledon crown

LONDON, 24 June — Britain’s Andy Murray, seeking to win the Wimbledon title for the second time in three years, has been named as third seed for the competition which starts next Monday.

Murray, 28, who became the first Briton to win the men’s title for 77 years when he triumphed in 2013, was in sublime form when he won the Queen’s Club tournament for the fourth time on Sunday and has been heavily backed to follow that up with another Wimbledon success.

Copa America prize money not in doubt

ASUNCION, 24 June — South American football’s governing body, CONMEBOL, has enough prize money to get through the Copa America but might struggle to meet its commitments for future tournaments, the head of Paraguay’s AFP said on Tuesday.

Alejandro Dominguez was responding to media reports suggesting CONMEBOL, which runs football at a continental level, did not have the money to pay the winners of the tournament taking place in Chile.

The prize money comes principally from sponsors and media companies that buy the rights to broadcast the tournament.

The reports said some of those companies would not be able to pay if their accounts were frozen as part of a US-led investigation into corruption surrounding the sport’s world governing body FIFA. “As far as I understand, neither the Copa America nor the Libertadores Cup are at risk,” Dominguez told Paraguayan journalists in the Chilean city of La Serena, where Paraguay have been based during the tournament.

Liverpool agree to sign Brazil forward Firmino

BRUNO, 24 June — Liverpool have agreed to sign Brazil international Roberto Firmino pending a medical that will take place after his participation at the Copa America, the Premier League club confirmed on Wednesday.

The gifted 23-year-old attacking midfielder is moving to Anfield from Germany’s Hoffenheim, where he played since 2010, scoring 47 goals in 151 appearances.

No details were given regarding the transfer fee or length of contract, although the deal was reported to cost Liverpool around 28 million pounds.

Firmino has been outstanding at Hoffenheim, maturing from an exuberant teenager to team leader despite his young age and attracting the interest of several top European clubs in the process.

Japan beat Netherlands to reach Women’s World Cup q’finals

VANCOUVER, 24 June — Holders Nadeshiko Japan reached the quarter-finals of the Women’s World Cup on Tuesday with a 2-1 win over tournament debutants the Netherlands.

Saori Ariyoshi opened the scoring with her first goal of the tournament in the 10th minute and Misu- ho Sakaguchi grabbed a late second to take Norio Sasaki’s side a step closer to defending their title.

The Dutch pulled one back in injury time after Japan goalkeeper Ayumi Kaihori fluffed a header from Kirsten Van de Ven.

Japan will face Australia in the quarterfinals in Edmonton on Saturday.

“As always, we kept everyone on the edge of their seats. Sorry about that,” Japan manager Norio Sasaki said. “But we’re picking it up, game by game.”

Miyama of the Matildas. “I’m expecting it to be a good, tough game.”

“We still need to sort out our defence and we had to survive a few scares along the way. It probably would have been better if we didn’t concede at the end, but we’ll take it as a lesson and learn from it.”

The Netherlands, who finished third in Group A, made a promising start and Sherida Spitse fired over before Manon Melis squandered a great chance when she lost her footing and failed to connect with a a fabulous through ball from Lieke Martens.

That miss was punished by the Japanese, who took the lead in the 32nd minute. Yuki Ogimi headed Miyama’s cross as the bar, and Merel Van Dongen could only half-clear the loose ball, which Ariyoshi snatched up to drill into the right-hand corner.

The Dutch nearly hit back seconds later, with Martens inches away from getting on the end of Melis’ cross. Japan enjoyed further chances and Shinobu Ono will feel she might have done better with a free header she steered wide with the last play of the first half.
