Fishery exports continue to fall despite dollar’s strength: MFF

By Ye Myint
Yangon, 14 July —
The recent strength of the U.S. dollar has brought little relief to Myanmar’s fishery sectors, with exports continuing to fall, a senior official of the Myanmar Fisheries Federation said Tuesday.

“The strengthening U.S. dollar has brought no joy to the sector,” MFF senior vice chairman U Hnin Oo told The Global New Light of Myanmar at the federation’s regular meeting.

The vice-chairman estimated the value of this year’s marine exports to be $250 million below the peak year.

According to the MFF, the country’s fishery exports earned only $420 million in the past fiscal year, down roughly $100 million from the preceding 12 months.

Fishery exports continue to fall despite...

Fishery producers and exporters want exchange rate stability, MFF general secretary U Win Kyaing said.

He recounted a situation in which the dollar decreased from K1200 to K680 a few months before November 2010, when the previous general election was held. The sector saw significant losses as its production costs had been based on the stronger dollar.

“At present, the different situation with the stronger dollar is being seen before the election which is set for November 2015,” he said.

A repeat of the 2010 turmoil needs to be avoided, added the general secretary, calling for an exchange rate that benefits both producers and exporters.

A stronger dollar benefits the fishery export sector only in the short term, as inputs such as raw materials and fuel are paid in dollars, said U Tun Heim, chairman of the Myanmar Fishery Products Processors and Exporters Association.

Following the reference foreign exchange rate of K1.200 to a dollar by the Central Bank of Myanmar on Monday, the dollar was trading from 1245 to 1260 in the market on Tuesday.

TACHILEK, 14 July — Officials from Myanmar and Thailand reached an agreement Monday on sharing of water from the Mae Sai Creek, which forms a border between the two countries.

The agreement followed a protest by 200 Thai farmers that temporarily shut down the Friendship Bridge spanning the creek, which separates Tachilek in Myanmar from Mae Sai in Thailand.

The farmers sought the suspension of dredging works at the creek, supervised by officials of both countries, that they believed would reduce their access to water for agriculture.

The farmers lifted their protests at 10:20 a.m. after officials from both countries agreed to suspend the dredging until 23 July.

Ruling, opposition camps clash over planned vote on security bills

Tokyo, 14 July — Japan’s ruling and opposition camps clashed on Tuesday over a ruling coalition plan to put controversial security bills to a vote at a House of Representatives panel on Wednesday.

The main opposition Democratic Party of Japan and the Japanese Communist Party boycotted a Tuesday morning session of the lower house special committee on the bills in protest to the planned vote, which would pave the way for passage at the lower house as early as Thursday.

Goshi Hosono, chairman of the Policy Research Committee of the DPJ, criticized the ruling camp’s move. “We will never allow a vote on the 15th. We will never let the government-sponsored bills pass (the Diet),” Hosono told reporters.

But the opposition camp did not appear to take a united front against the ruling coalition with the Japan Innovation Party attending the Tuesday morning session for deliberations of the bills that would expand the scope of overseas operations by the Self-Defense Forces.

After consulting with the Japan Innovation Party over its counterproposals to the bills on Tuesday afternoon, the Liberal Democratic Party and its coalition partner Komeito party plan to make a Wednesday-day vote to the opposition camp on Tuesday evening, according to ruling party lawmakers.

Deputy Prime Minister Taro Asō indicated the ruling and opposition camps have undergone sufficient deliberations before putting the bills to a vote.

The special committee “has spent more than 100 hours on the bills. Opposition parties have now asked more or less the same questions,” Asō, who doubles as the finance minister, said at a news conference.

But in a comment taken as suggesting his reservation about a Wednesday vote, former Defense Minister Shin'ichi Ishiba, who now serves as minister for regional revitalization, said he “does not have much confidence to say that the public understanding (of the bills) has been promoted,” citing recent opinion polls by news organizations.

If passed, the new legislation will put into effect a landmark Cabinet decision in July last year that reinterpret the Constitution to allow Japan to exercise the right to collective self-defense, or coming to the aid of the United States and other friendly nations under armed attack even if Japan itself is not attacked.

The move is in line with Prime Minister Shinzo Abe’s policy of making proactive contributions based on the principles of international cooperation.

Speaking at a meeting of lawmakers on Tuesday, Secretary General Sadakazu Tanigaki reiterated the party wants to hold a concluding question-and-answer session on Wednesday.

Earlier in the day, senior LDP lawmakers in charge of Diet affairs affirmed a plan to put the bills to a vote at the special committee on Wednesday.

The LDP and Komeito hope that after sending the bills to the House of Councillors for further deliberations, they will be passed by the upper chamber and enacted into law by the end of the ordinary Diet session that has been extended to 27 September.

However, opposition lawmakers and constituents have criticized the bills and said the envisaged security policy shift — which could allow Japanese troops to fight abroad for the first time since the World War II — would violate the nation’s war-renouncing Constitution.

Successive governments have interpreted the Constitution to mean that Japan possesses the right to collective self-defense but cannot use it.

The government submitted the bills to the Diet on 15 May amid a changing security situation in the Asia-Pacific region propelled by China’s muscle-flexing in asserting territorial claims in the East and South China seas, as well as North Korea’s missile and nuclear weapons development.

The legislation consists of a new permanent bill that would allow the SDF to provide logistical support to foreign military in international peacekeeping activities, and another comprising revisions to 10 existing security-related laws.

Joko Widodo

Jakarta, 14 July — Indonesian President Joko “Jokowi” Widodo wants the construction of a high-speed rail system connecting Jakarta and the West Java provincial capital of Bandung to start next month, a Cabinet minister said on Monday.

“The president wants the groundbreaking to take place in August,” Coordinating Minister for Economic Affairs Sofyan Djalil told reporters after attending a Cabinet meeting on a high-speed rail system for Indonesia.

Earlier, Djalil said that so far only Japan, with its shinkansen bullet train technology, and China, with its own high-speed railway system, have made detailed, comprehensive feasibility studies for building such a network, incubating a “sales war” between themselves.

Djalil refused to go into detail on what China and Indonesia have proposed to Indonesia.

A source close to the discussion on the issue, however, said late Monday that both countries have submitted proposals containing similar offers. The two have offered loans to be paid back in 40 years with a 10-year grace period.

“The interest rate of the Japanese side will be 0.1 percent, while the Chinese one will be a bit higher,” the source said.

According to the source, the Jakarta-Bandung route proposed by Japan will start from Manggarai, where a train station exists, in Central Jakarta with one stop between the two cities. Meanwhile, the one proposed by China will start from Halim in East Jakarta and run non-stop to Bandung.

For the route’s starting point, however, Jokowi preferred the Japanese one, the source said, “because for the China proposal, we have to acquire a 570-hectare piece of land belonging to the air force.”

The trains proposed by both countries would link the two cities 150 kilometres apart in 36 minutes with a ticket price of 200,000 rupiah one-way.

To decide on which to choose, Djalil said, the government will hold a “beauty contest” and hire an independent, reliable consultant from a third country that has no conflict of interest with the countries to be involved in the process.

“We will hire a consultant from Germany or France,” the source said.

The consultant will determine who will be a better fit to build the high-speed railway system by objectively considering various factors, Djalil said.

“Train is a mode of transportation which is efficient, reliable and cheap. That’s why its development must be prioritized,” Jokowi told his ministers when opening the Cabinet meeting in Jakarta last Monday.

“And for that, the development of an intercity high-speed railway system must start immediately.”

Cambodian property tycoon apologizes for beating ex-TV presenter

Phnom Penh, 14 July — Cambodian property tycoon Sok Bun apologized for beating ex-TV presenter Sasa after the victim said he has been injured for denouncing the tycoon’s alleged conflict of interest.

Sok Bun, 45, beat former TV presenter Ms Sasa to death on 2 July, according to a Phnom Penh restaurant on 2 July, according to his statement released by his lawyer.

The magnate is believed to have fled Cambodia for Singapore on 8 July after leaked security camera footage showing his attack on Cambodian Television Network ex-host Ek Socheata, better known as Sasa, has been widely circulated on the internet and publicized on local television channels.

The video showed Sok Bun engage in an argument with Sasa before dragging her to the floor and repeatedly punching and kicking her in the face and head, as his bodyguard pointed a pistol at Sasa’s face.

Sasa got up to her right eye during the fight.

In a public statement, Sok Bun said, “I like to make a public apology for this mistake and promise not to make such a mistake again in this life.”

He also announced to resign as the president of the Cambodian Valuers and Estate Agents Association and the director of joint ventures between his company and Singaporean partner TEHO-SBG International, which planned to invest 500 million US dollars in a real estate development project.

Despite the apology and compensation to the victim, in a meeting on Tuesday, Deputy Prime Minister and Interior Minister Sar Kheng ordered the authorities to hunt for Sok Bun for legal punishment.

Iran, big powers clinch landmark nuclear deal

VIENNA, 14 July — Iran and six major world powers reached a nuclear deal on Tuesday, capping more than a decade of on-off negotiations with an agreement that could potentially transform the Middle East.

Under the deal, sanctions imposed by the United States, European Union and United Nations would be lifted in return for Iran agreeing long-term curbs on a nuclear programme that the West has suspected was aimed at creating a nuclear bomb.

The deal is a major policy victory for both US President Barack Obama and Iran’s President Hassan Rouhani, a pragmatist elected two years ago on a vow to reduce Iran’s diplomatic isolation.

Both men face scepticism from powerful hardliners at home after decades of enmity between countries that referred to each other as “the Great Satan” and a member of the “axis of evil”.

Final talks in Vienna involved nearly three weeks of intense round-the-clock negotiations between US Secretary of State John Kerry and Iran’s Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif.

Western diplomats said under the final agreement, Iran had accepted a “snapback” mechanism, under which some sanctions could be reinstated in 65 days if it violated the deal. A UN weapons embargo would remain in place for five years and a ban on buying missile technology would remain for eight years.

“All the hard work has paid off and we sealed a deal. God bless our people,” one Iranian diplomat told Reuters on condition of anonymity.

But hostility to the agreement from Washington’s closest ally in the Middle East was immediate.

“This is a historic surrender by the West to the axis of evil headed by Iran,” Israeli Deputy Foreign Minister Tzipi Hotovely said in a message on Twitter. “Israel will act with all means to try and stop the agreement being ratified.”

The implementation of Iran and the six powers will meet at 0830 GMT at the United Nations centre in Vienna and a news conference will follow, a spokeswoman for the European Union said on Tuesday.

Iran’s Foreign Minister, Mohammad Javad Zarif, and EU’s Foreign Policy Chief Federica Mogherini are expected to read a joint statement, diplomats said.

A deal will still face scrutiny by the US Congress, controlled by opposition Republicans who are sceptical of the Obama administration’s overtures to a country that has been an enemy since Iranian revolutionaries stormed the US embassy in Teheran in 1979.

US allies in the region, particularly Israel and Saudi Arabia, are also worried about an agreement that would benefit Iran.

“Teheran does not recognize Israel and supports its enemies. Arab states believe Iran supports their foes in wars in Syria, Yemen and elsewhere.”

But there is also strong reason for the United States to improve its relations with Iran, as the two countries face a common foe in Islamic State, the Sunni Muslim militant group that has seized swathes of Syria and Iraq. For Iran, the end of sanctions could bring a rapid economic boom by lifting restrictions that have drastically cut its oil exports and hurt its imports.

The prospect of a deal has helped push down global oil prices because of the possibility that Iranian supply could return to the market.

Israel’s Netanyahu calls Iran nuclear deal “historic” mistake

JERUSALEM, 14 July— Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu described the agreement reached on Tuesday by Iran and major world powers on Teheran’s nuclear programme as a historic mistake and said he would do what he could to block Iran’s nuclear ambitions.

“Israel is going to receive a sure path to nuclear weapons. Many of the restrictions that were supposed to prevent it from getting there will be lifted,” Netanyahu said at the start of a meeting with Dutch Foreign Minister Bert Koenders in Jerusalem.

“Iran will get a jackpot, a cash bonanza of hundreds of billions of dollars, which will enable it to continue to pursue its aggression and terror in the region and in the world. This is a bad mistake of historic proportions.” —Reuters

BEIJING, 14 July — North Korea has decided to grant amnesty to convicts in August on the occasion of the 70th anniversary of Korea’s liberation from Japan’s 1910-45 colonial rule, official media said on Tuesday.

The amnesty, which will take place from 1 August, will be the first since 2012, when North Korea marked the 100th birthday of its late founder Kim Il-sung and the 70th birthday of its late leader Kim Jong Il, father of the country’s current leader Kim Jong Un.

The Presidium of the Supreme People’s Assembly promulgated last Thursday a decree for the release of those “who had been convicted of the crimes against the country and its people,” the Korean Central News Agency said.

The state-run media said the country will “take practical measures to help the released people settle down in their works and living,” without saying how many will be granted amnesty.

The Korean Peninsula was liberated from Japanese rule under a 15 August 1945, KCNA said the amnesty will be carried out as this year also marks the 70th anniversary of the founding of the ruling Workers’ Party of Korea, which falls on 10 October. —Kyodo News

N Korea sends back two N Korean fishermen rescued in S Korean waters

SEOUL, 14 July — South Korea on Tuesday sent back two of the five North Korean fishermen rescued in South Korean waters earlier this month to their country, according to the South Korean Unification Ministry. The repatriation was made at the truce village of Panmunjom at around 11 am, said an official from the ministry, which handles the South’s relations with North Korea. The event was made possible after North Korea withdrew its earlier demand that the South send back all five fishermen, while the South has insisted that the three who have expressed their wish to defect to the South and that they will be allowed to do so. Household electricity bills surged 25% after 2011 nuclear disaster

TOKYO, 14 July — Japan’s household electricity bills surged 25.2 percent over the four years through fiscal 2014 amid higher imported fuel costs for thermal power generation following the nuclear crisis triggered by the March 2011 earthquake and tsunami, the government’s annual energy report said on Tuesday.

Electricity rates for factories and companies increased 38.2 percent over the same period through March this year, the report said.

The burden on citizens regarding electricity bills is increasing by year,” it said.

The crisis that broke out at Tokyo Electric Power Co’s Fukushima Daiichi nuclear plant eventually resulted in the shutting down of all of Japan’s commercial nuclear reactors amid safety concerns. Power companies are desperate to bring their nuclear plants back online but the outlook for most of the facilities remains unclear.

Monthly household electricity bills in the area served by Tokyo Electric rose to an average of 8,452 yen in fiscal 2014 from 6,309 yen in fiscal 2010, an increase of 34 percent, according to the report.

The government also noted in the report that Japan’s energy security has been faltering due to a lower energy self-sufficiency ratio and higher reliance on the Middle East for crude oil imports since the nuclear crisis.

To achieve more a stable energy supply, “it is important to secure supply of shale gas and liquefied natural gas from the United States” where production of LNG is expanding thanks to the “shale revolution,” it added. —Kyodo News
Review clears UK spies of illegal surveillance, says laws need overhaul

LONDON, 14 July — Britain’s spies are not carry- ing out illegal mass mon- itoring of the citizens but laws governing their powers to intercept the public’s commu- nications need a massive overhaul, an independent assessment concluded on Tuesday.

The Independent Sur- veillance Review (ISR) was commissioned by Nick Clegg, former deputy prime minister and current Lib Dem leader, to exam- ine allegations by former US security agency contrac- tor Edward Snowden that British firms were secretly conducting vast monitoring programmes.

“We have seen no evi- dence that the British gov- ernment knowingly acts illegally in intercepting pri- vate communications or that the ability to collect data in bulk is used by the govern- ment to provide it with a permanent window into the private lives of British cit- izens,” the ISR concluded.

“The other hand, we have seen evidence that the present legal framework au- thorizing the interception of communications is unclear, has not kept pace with de- velopments in commu- nication technology, and does not serve either the gov- ernment or members of the public satisfactorily,”

The ISR, whose mem- bers included former heads of Britain’s three spy agen- cies MI5, MI6 and GCHQ, is the third major UK in- vestigation into the surveil- lance work of the security services since Snowden’s 2013 revelations.

All have cleared the spys of any wrongdoing, but equally all said the laws governing their surveillance work needed to be made clearer. Last month, Brit- ain’s independent lawyer of anti-terrorism laws called the current framework frag- mented, undemocratic and “in the long run intoler- able”.

Prime Minister David Cameron’s government has promised to tighten up the legis- lation to extend the powers of police and security agencies to monitor Britons’ commu- nications and web activi- ties in what opponents have dubbed a “snoopers’ char- ter,” arguing technological changes had diminished their capabilities.—Reuters

Guzman escape turns up heat on Mexican president over corruption

MEXICO CITY, 14 July — The dramatic escape on Saturday of the world’s most notorious drug lord, Joaquin “El Chapo” Guzman, from the maximum security Almoloya prison on the western outskirts of Mexico City has cast doubt on the security of the country’s prisons.

Allegations of extra-ju- dicial killings by the army, and of collusion between police and a drug cartel in the massacre of 43 trainee teachers last year sparked mass protests.

Since then, the pres- ident has sought to convince Mexicans that he was turning the corner, with a series of judicial and anti-corruption reforms.

El Chapo’s escape has seriously undermined that claim.

So far, 31 prison offi- cers, including the facility’s head, have been sus- pected of being complicit in the escape.

The escape came af- ter a difficult 12 months in which Pena Nieto’s approval ratings had already fallen to multi-year lows.

If the escape of the country’s third jailbreak had failed, Ahmed would have been staring into an econom- ically ruinous future with the brink of collapse and the prospect of having to print a parallel currency and exit the euro.

Instead it won condi- tional agreement to receive a possible 86 billion eu- ros ($85 billion) over three years, provided its European partners are satisfied that the conditions are met.

The agreement was la- bourious, but it has been con- cluded. There is no “Greeks,” European Commission Presi- dent Jean-Claude Juncker told a news conference after 17 hours of bargaining.

He dismissed sugges- tions that Tsipras had been humiliated even though the summit members insisted repeatedly that Greece must now subject much of its pub- lic policy to prior agreement by bailout monitors. “In this compromise, there are no winners and no losers,” Juncker said. “I don’t think the Greek people have been humiliated, but that the other Europeans have lost face. It is a typical European arrangement.”

Euro zone finance min- isters told officials to prepare options for bridge financing arrangements during talks on a bailout and a decision is expected by Wednesday.

Athens must meet a tight timetable for enacting unpopular reforms of value added tax, pensions, budget cuts, bankruptcy rules and an EU banking law that could be used to make big deposi- tor bail-ins.

German Chancellor An- gela Merkel said she could recommend “with full con- fidence” that the Bundestag authorise the opening of loan negotiations once the Greek parliament has approved the entire programme and passed the first laws.

The Bundestag is to vote on Greece on Friday. Merkel’s allies defend- ed the deal, with her chief of staff, Peter Altmaier, saying Europe had won and Germa- ny “was part of the solution — from the beginning until the end.”

But in Greece, relief was mixed with anger at German- “It is only the beginning of the pyrrhic victory because the measures are very strict,” said Maraziti.

Asked whether the terms imposed on Greece were similar to the 1919 Versailles treaty that forced crushing reparations on defeated Germany af- ter World War One, Merkel said: “I won’t take part in historical comparisons, es- pecially on a weekend when I didn’t make them myself.”

The deterioration of the Greek economy since Tsipras won office in Janu- ary, and particularly in the last two weeks, has led to a much higher financing need, she said.

One senior EU official put the cost to Greece of the last two weeks of turmoil at 25 to 30 billion euros. A euro zone diplomat said it might be closer to 50 billion euros.

Malia’s Prime Minister Joseph Muscat said Greek had been “humiliated”, mostly as a result of its re- fusal to take an offer made to it two weeks ago, and he said the talks had been brutal.

“It was not pretty to watch,” he said.—Reuters

Union must be built on trust, friendship

By Aung Khin

Neither peace nor federalism can be assured if stakeholders allow racism to persist. Despite different features and characteristics among ethnic people, all need to develop a common ideology for peace. Intimacy among ethnic people creates more opportunities for lasting peace. Without close relations, mutual trust cannot be built. Mountains and rivers should not be fences and hurdles between our people. The greater the friendship among our national brethren, the more hope for peace we will have.

Unity must come first for peace, and economic development will definitely follow. More relations among ethnic people can reduce racism and mistrust which are the underlying causes of decades-long civil war in ethnic areas.

All our national races must develop goodwill to ensure a genuine federal union. Clarity of thought and an understanding of the obligations of governance are required by all political stakeholders to achieve unanimitity.

Mistaken ideas must be abandoned. Dialogue should be established without discrimination on the grounds of race, colour, sex and religion. Talking about a ceasefire is better than not talking about it. As Winston Churchill said, “To jaw-jaw is always better than war-war.”

All stakeholders in peace-making efforts must not practice to deceive. The rights of national races need to be upheld by taking lessons from the past to ensure a genuine federal union and lasting peace.

GOOD GOVERNANCE

(Goodness!)

NEW & BETTER WAYS OF DOING THINGS

Without creativity and innovativeness, good governance cannot thrive. In today’s world, good governance means having the capability to compete advantageously. To survive in today’s world, you need to sharpen the strategy of CIPG—Creativity, Innovativeness, Productivity and Growth. Formerly it was usually said: “Don’t fix if it ain’t broke.” Now, it is usually said: “Fix it even if it ain’t broke”. It means practicing the Total Quality Management which means Continuous Quality Improvement.

CLEAN COMMITMENT

For good governance, clean commitment is required. Everybody in the organization must be totally committed to “Clean, Green & Team Policy.” For good governance, clean mental attitude must prevail in the whole length and breadth of the organization. It means the organization must avoid and eradicate the unclean culture of Arrogance, Greed, Complacency, Inconsistency, Myopia, Apathy, Inertia and Ignorance.

EMPOWERMENT & DELEGATION

For good governance, people must be fully empowered with proper delegation of duty. People must be fully equipped with authority, skills, and knowledge to ASK, in short. Without proper and adequate ASK, on the part of the people, there can be no dynamic, good governance. The focus should be on developing people in ASK.

CONCLUSION

Make the right things happen; and get the right things done in a clean, green and team spirit.
Iraq launches offensive to drive Islamic State from biggest province

Baghdad, 14 July — Iraqi troops and Shi'ite Muslim militia forces launched an offensive against Islamic State fighters on several fronts on Monday in Anbar, the country's largest province, at the start of what is likely to be a long and fiercely contested offensive.

A spokesman for the joint operations command said the campaign, which began at dawn, brought together the army, mainly Shi'ite Hashid Shaabi militias, special forces, police and local Sunni Muslim tribal fighters.

"At 5 o'clock this morning operations to liberate Anbar were launched," the spokesman said.

Military sources in Anbar said they met heavy resistance from the insurgents, who deployed five suicide car bombs and fired rockets to repel their advance on the city of Falluja, some 30 km (30 miles) west of Baghdad.

Iraqi forces also pushed towards the provincial capital, Ramadi, from the west and the south, police sources in the province said. Iraqi State supporters said those advances were repelled by the militants.

The sprawling Sunni Muslim province extends hundreds of kilometres west of Baghdad. Many of the towns and cities that link the banks of the Euphrates, snaking down from the Syrian border, are Islamic State strongholds. Islamic State's capture of Ramadi two months ago marked the biggest defeat for the Baghdad government since the militants swept through the north of the country last June and declared a caliphate in parts of Syria and Iraq straddling the border.

Until Ramadi's fall, Iraqi troops and Hashid Shaabi forces, backed by US-led air strikes, had been pushing Islamic State back, recapturing the eastern province of Diyala and former leader Saddam Hussein's home town of Tikrit, with the ultimate target of retaking the northern city of Mosul.

Prime Minister Haider al-Abadi, angered at the army's withdrawal from Ramadi, which was the first city in Iraq to fall under militant control 18 months ago.

"I am on Tuesday (2300 GMT on Monday), while security men were taking measures to apprehend a security fugitive, accompanied by the man's father, he left his house and fired an automatic weapon, killing his father and wounding two security men," it said.

The security forces fired back, killing the man, according to the statement, which said that the authorities were investigating the incident but gave no further details. The conservative Islamic kingdom is facing a wave of militancy, officials there say, from some hardline Sunni Muslims who have sworn allegiance to Islamic State, the group waging wars in Iraq and Syria.

This year a Saudi militant cell affiliated with Islamic State carried out two bombings of Shi'ite mosques, killing 25, and sympathisers also shot dead three policemen and wounded another in a series of attacks in Riyadh. Sabq.org, a news website affiliated with the Saudi government, said the incident took place in the southern city of Khamis Mushait.

The Saudi authorities have detained hundreds of suspected militants over the past year, including people who planned attacks inside the country and others who sought to travel to Iraq, Syria, Yemen or Afghanistan to fight.—Reuters

Some 15,000 civilians killed in armed conflict in Iraq since January 2014: UN

United Nations, 14 July — About 15,000 civilians were killed and many more wounded in the armed conflict in Iraq since January 2014, the UN said on Monday.

The report, jointly compiled by UNAMI and the Office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, noted that more than 2.8 million civilians had become internally displaced in Iraq, including an estimated 1.3 million children.

The report also pointed out that the situation of civilians in areas under the control of the Islamic State (IS) remains dire. It said as many as 3,000 to 3,500 men, women and children from Yazidi community and other ethnic and religious communities remain in IS captivity enduring physical and sexual violence.

"Civilians continued to be murdered, often in grim public spectacles," said the report. "Those affiliated with or perceived to be affiliated with the Iraqi Government or security forces have been systematically killed by the group, and many have been kidnapped and subjected to other forms of ill-treatment."

The security situation in Iraq has drastically deteriorated since June 2014 when bloody clashes broke out between security forces and IS militants. The report found that from 1 December to the end of April 2015, a minimum of 10,768 civilian casualties resulted from the ongoing violence.

The IS militants took control of the country's northern city of Mosul and later seized swathes of territories after Iraqi security forces abandoned their posts in Nineveh and other predominantly Sunni provinces.

The Iraqi security forces on Monday started a major offensive to recapture key cities and towns held by IS militants in the western province of Anbar. They have allied with Hashid Shaabi paramilitary militias and have been fighting for months to retake key cities and towns in Anbar. IS militants had seized most of the province and tried to advance towards Baghdad, the Iraqi capital, but several counter attacks by security forces and Shi'ite militias have pushed them back.—Xinhua

Two Islamic State leaders killed in Syria air strike — Observatory

Beirut, 14 July — Two senior Islamic State leaders were killed in an air strike in northeastern Syria on Monday, the Syrian Observatory for Human Rights reported.

The Observatory, which gathers its information from an activist network on the ground, identified the leaders as an Iraqi, Abu Osama al-Iraqi, and a Syrian named Amer al-Rafdan.

The Observatory said the air strike was believed to have been carried out by the US-led coalition that is targeting Islamic State in Syria and Iraq, though Rami Abdurrahman, who runs the Observatory, said he could not be sure.

The Syrian army and militia fighting alongside it are mounting a separate campaign against Islamic State in the region that borders Turkey to the north and Iraq to the east.

The ultra-hardline Islamic State is fighting in Hasaka Province, which has repeatedly been under attack by US-led air strikes against both pro-government forces and Syrian Kurdish fighters who have received air support from the US-led coalition.

US President Barack Obama said last week the coalition was intensifying its campaign in northern Syria. The Kurdish YPG militia have made a series of advances against Islamic State in the north, including the capture of the town of Tel Abyad at the Turkish border.

Abdurrahman said al-Iraqi had the title of “governor” of the province Islamic State had declared in northeastern Syria. Rafdan had previously served as Islamic State’s governor of Deir al-Zor province, he said.

Islamic State last year declared a cross-border “caliphate” claiming to rule over all Muslims. The US-led alliance has ruled out the idea of cooperation with Syrian President Bashar al-Assad, seeing him as part of the problem.

Nokia confirms may re-enter mobile phone market through licensing

HELSINKI, 14 July — Finnish telecoms network maker Nokia confirmed late on Monday that it may start designing and licensing mobile phone handsets under its brand name in 2016. Nokia said it was looking for a partner who would take on the manufacturing, sales, marketing and customer support for the products. The company said a Nokia mobile phone would not reach the market before the fourth quarter of 2016 when Nokia’s agreement with partner Microsoft allows it to use the brand name again.

Nokia sold its phone business to Microsoft in 2014 after years of declining sales.

Laurel, 14 July — Mysterious Pluto looks large and turns out to be larger than expected as NASA’s New Horizons spacecraft wraps up a nearly decade-long journey, with a close flyby on track for Tuesday, scientists said on Monday.

The nuclear-powered probe was in position to pass dead centre of a 60-by-90-mile (97-by-145 km) target zone between the orbits of Pluto and its primary moon, Charon, at 7:49 am EDT on Tuesday, said managers at New Horizons mission control centre, located at the Johns Hopkins University Applied Physics Laboratory outside of Baltimore.

After a journey of 3 billion miles (4.8 billion km), threading that needle is like golfing in New York hitting a hole-in-one in Los Angeles, project manager Glen Fountain told reporters.

During the 30-minute dash past Pluto and its entourage of five moons, New Horizons will perform a carefully choreographed series of maneuvers to position its cameras and science instruments for hundreds of observations. Already, scientists have learned that Pluto, once considered the ninth and outermost planet of the solar system, is bigger than thought, with a diameter of about 1,473 miles (2,370 km), some 50 miles (80 km) wider than previous predictions.

It is now officially bigger than Eris, one of hundreds of thousands of mini-planets and comet-like objects circling beyond Neptune in a region called the Kuiper Belt. The discovery of this region in 1992 prompted the official reclassification of Pluto from planet to “dwarf planet.”

Size matters, even for dwarf planets. The notch up in girth means that Pluto consists of slightly more ice and a little less rock than predicted, an important detail for scientists piecing together the story of how it and the rest of the solar system formed.

New Horizons as it nears Pluto system. Flight controllers expect to receive data from controllers on Tuesday that it survived a critical engine test.

“Size” is one of the big questions of our solar system,” said NASA chief scientist John Grunsfeld. “We’re going to learn more about that.”

Pluto’s diameter also affects the size of its atmosphere, which New Horizons has learned is bleeding off into space at a faster rate than expected.

Most of New Horizons’ data will be stored on the spacecraft and transmitted back to Earth after the probe passes beyond the Pluto system. Flight controllers expect to receive just a short message from New Horizons around 9 pm on Tuesday that it survived the Pluto encounter.

Lead scientist Alan Stern said there was a one-in-10,000 chance that a debris storm could destroy New Horizons as it nears Pluto.

“We’re flying into the unknown,” Stern said. “I don’t lose sleep over this, but fact is, tomorrow evening is going to be a little bit of drama.”

China’s Tianhe-2 tops world supercomputers, again

CHANGSHA, 14 July — China’s Tianhe-2 supercomputer was named the world’s fastest supercomputer at the International Supercomputing Conference in Frankfurt, Germany, on Monday.

It was the fifth time in a row that Tianhe-2 has been topped the world’s fastest supercomputer list since June 2013, when it was unveiled. The supercomputer was designed and made by Changsha-based National University of Defence Technology.

“After a journey of 3 billion miles (4.8 billion km), threading that needle is like golfing in New York hitting a hole-in-one in Los Angeles, project manager Glen Fountain told reporters.”

The slowdown may be too much for all but the largest handset makers, much less a plethora of me-too’s, some analysts say.

In a crowded market plagued by price wars, entrants will have to convince buyers to abandon established brands with phones that surpass even premium models, US research firm Gartner said.

“It’s not that easy to go bankrupt making phones, but it’s also not easy to be profitable,” said Taiwan-based Gartner analyst CK Lu, who covers the mainland smartphone market. “If you don’t have good differentiation, you’re putting yourself in a saturated market.”

China had 155 smartphone brands selling over half of which are Chinese.

But small players continue to last without mass sales, like Xiaomi, or other businesses to support money-losing smartphone divisions, like Lenovo. Their common chance is to link handsets to new sectors such as wearable devices and smart home appliances, analysts say.

But new hopefuls are lured to the market by the fairy tale success of Xiaomi.

Hong Kong / BEIJING, 14 July — The call of the world’s biggest smartphone market is proving irresistible for entrepreneurs in China, where even purveyors of concrete mixers, refrigerators and rock music are mimicking local trailblazers Xiaomi Inc (XTC.UL) with their own handsets.

But the market shrank in early 2015 for the first time in six years and sales have fallen at one-time leader Xiaomi. That sudden about-turn raises questions over whether there is any chance for the likes of construction machinery maker SANY Group Co Ltd [SANYG.UL], Gree Electric Appliances Inc of Zhuhai and veteran rock star Cui Jian.

Cabinet approves bill banning drone flights over crowded areas

Tokyo, 14 July — Prime Minister Shinzo Abe’s Cabinet on Tuesday approved a bill to ban drones being flown over crowded residential areas and airports as well as the use of the unmanned aircraft at night. The government is seeking to pass the bill to revise the Civil Aeronautics Law during the current Diet session as the discovery of a drone with a minuscule amount of radiation on the roof of the prime minister’s office building in April stoked fears that drones could be used for terrorist attacks.

The bill is the second round of legislative change to regulate the use of drones following another bill that passed the lower house last week banning them from being flown over designated important facilities, such as the prime minister’s office, the Diet building and the Imperial Palace, and nearby areas.

“We want to secure security. At the same time, we don’t want to obstruct the development of related technologies and the utilization of unmanned aircraft,” transport minister Akihiro Ota said at a Press conference after the Cabinet meeting.

Under the latest bill, operators will only be allowed to use the unmanned aircraft from sunrise to sunset.

They will also be prohibited from flying drones in areas attracting large crowds, such as festivals and exhibitions, and the transportation of explosives with drones will also be banned.

Fines of up to 500,000 yen will be imposed on people who violate the rules.

NYU student held in N Korea says he is healthy, calls for mercy

P YONGYANG, 14 July — A New York University student who has been detained in North Korea for almost three months said on Tuesday that he is healthy and expressed hope of receiving generous treatment from the country.

“I fully acknowledge that I broke the law by illegally entering” North Korea, Joo Won Moon, a South Korean citizen who has permanent residency in the United States, said in a meeting with foreign media, including KYODO News, at a Pyongyang hotel. “I sincerely apologize but I hope to be treated generously.”

Joo, who has been detained in North Korea since April, said, “I would like to tell my family I’m healthy. I hope to be home soon and to tell them...not to worry too much.”

The North’s state-run Korean Central News Agency reported in early May that he was arrested after “illegally” crossing into the country from China’s northeastern border city Dandong on 22 April.

The meeting was requested by the 21-year-old, who also said, “Although I am a criminal awaiting judgment, I would like to be allowed to see the Democracy People’s Republic of Korea, the North’s official name.

Joo, who was in his third year in the university, said he wants to exchange views with North Korean students and “step in the shoes” of Pyongyang’s ordinary citizens by riding the subway and using other public transportation with them.

“I hope to prove whether the things I heard about the DPRK in the US is really in fact true or false,” he said.

South Korea has asked North Korea to release him and three other South Korean men who have been detained in the country.

Last month, North Korea’s top court sentenced two of them who were captured as “spies” in 2014 to hard labor for life, saying they had tried to topple its regime.

Joo’s appearance came as South Korea on Tuesday sent back two of five North Korean fishermen rescued in South Korean waters earlier this month to their country.

3,058 taken to hospitals in Japan in week amid summer heat

Tokyo, 14 July — A total of 3,058 people were taken to hospitals across Japan due to suspected heatstroke or heat exhaustion in the week of 6 to 12 July, according to a preliminary report released on Tuesday by the Fire and Disaster Management Agency.

The figure was up 6.5 times from 471 people in the previous week and included four individuals who died on the way to hospital, according to the agency.

Of the total, 32 people required hospitalization for more than three weeks and 945 others were hospitalized for shorter periods. Nearly half of the total number were aged 65 or older.

By prefecture, Saitama required hospitalization for four individuals who died in the country on Tuesday with the Japan Meteorological Agency warning people to take measures to prevent heat exhaustion.

The hot weather is likely to peak on Tuesday as clouds surrounding Typhoon Nangka, which is in the Pacific south of Japan, are expected to partially cover the Japanese archipelago on Wednesday, according to the weather agency.

Two-wheeled revolution — Pyongyang installs bike lanes

Seoul, 14 July — North Korea has installed cycle lanes on major thoroughfares running through Pyongyang in an apparent bid to cut down on pedestrian accidents as more people have the cash to spend on bicycles to get around.

Bicycles are an expensive but popular mode of transport for many in an impoverished and reclusive country where private car ownership is still rare.

They are often used by women to transport goods to semi-tolerated markets, where one of the most common services sold for profit is bicycle repair.

Concrete paving stones on some long stretches of cycle lanes on major thoroughfares running through Pyongyang in an apparent bid to cut down on pedestrian accidents as more people have the cash to spend on bicycles to get around.

A cycle path in central Pyongyang appears to have increased by roughly 50 percent in the past few years, although the thought of riding a bike might be unsophisticated for many image-conscious Pyongyang residents.

“They are not the most common form of transport for the average Pyongyang, and many people I have spoken to about bikes there — mostly men — have scoffed at the idea that they would ride a bike,” said Cockerell, whose company offers bicycle tours of North Korea.

A cycle path is seen as the 105-storey Ryugyong Hotel is seen in the background in central Pyongyang on 4 July, 2015.

I was terrified of turning 50: Salma Hayek

Actress Salma Hayek said she feared getting old and was worried about hitting 50. The “Everyly” actress, who is turning 49 soon, said somebody told her career would not last past the age of 35, reported Daily Mirror.

“In the past, when I tried to imagine what I’d look like and what my life would be like at this age, I was terrified. I imagined myself looking old, but instead I think I still look OK, and I’m fine with my appearance. For so many generations, women have suffered from this terrible lie that 50 is like falling off a cliff. Women have believed for so long we’d act and feel as if we were finished, and we surrendered to that myth,” she said.

The “Tale of Tales” star — who had her first child Valentina aged 41 — went on to add that she no longer worries about turning 50, as it’s an age where women can be “productive”.

“Fortunately, we’ve stopped believing that. Fifty is a great age where we can be very productive and happy and not feel limited by anything. I’ve realised I can still be beautiful and attractive as I approach 50. I feel very good about my life.” —PTI

Blues legend BB King found to have died from natural causes

Los Angeles, 14 July — Veteran blues musician BB King died of natural causes primarily stemming from Alzheimer’s disease, Nevada officials said on Monday, putting to rest accusations by his two daughters that he was murdered.

King’s death at age 89 in May was also attributed to coronary artery disease, diabetes, heart failure, high blood pressure and brain damage from low blood flow, the Clark County Coroner’s office said in a Press release.

Coroners said they determined King’s cause of death after conducting an autopsy, toxicology tests and consulting a neuropathologist.

The examination also concluded that while King had suffered strokes, they did not kill him.

Officials had said a homicide investigation would be conducted at the time of King’s death after two of his children, Karen Williams and Patty King, alleged that the musician was poisoned by longtime associates. An attorney for King’s estate said the allegations were unfounded.

“At this point we can say with confidence that Mr King died of natural causes,” John Fudenberg, the Clark County coroner, said.

Invoices go out to the family and many friends of Mr King, and we hope this determination brings them some measure of closure.

King, a prolific and celebrated musician who was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, was placed in hospice care after being hospitalized in April this year from complications related to diabetes.

He died shortly after, on 14 May.

Hundreds of mourners gathered for his funeral in Memphis, Tennessee, bidding him a musical farewell.

Taking place 50 years in the future, Old Man Logan is an older version of Wolverine, who is trying to live a regular life with his family away from being a superhero, when he is called to begin a final mission.

Although Jackman will no more play the beloved character, “X-Men” director Bryan Singer revealed that he will most likely be making a cameo appearance in “Apocalypse.”

The third Wolverine film is slated to be released on 3 March, 2017.

LONDON, 14 July — Tottenham Hotspur’s France international goalkeeper Hugo Lloris is doubtful for the start of the Premier League season after fracturing his wrist.

The north London club said on Monday that the 28-year-old player “will continue to work alongside the first team squad to build up his fitness in a bid to be ready for the start of the season.”

“Our medical team will continue to monitor his rehabilitation and progress during pre-season,” they added on the club’s official website (www.tottenhamhotspur.com).

Lloris joined Spurs from French side Lyon in 2012 and has since made 122 appearances for the London side.

The 67-cap France captain was one of Spurs’ most consistent performers as they finished fifth in the Premier League last season.

Tottenham’s first match of the season is against Manchester United at Old Trafford on 8 August.

Russia expects no ‘kick up backside’ moment over World Cup

MOSCOW / YEKTARINBURG, (Russia), 14 July — Despite a faltering economy, international tension over Ukraine, and an investigation into its World Cup bid, Russia is confident everything will be ready by the time the soccer extravaganza kicks off on 14 June, 2018.

“The dream will come true,” Vladimir Leonov, sports minister for Russia’s Tatarstan republic, told reporters in the regional capital Kazan. "The World Cup is coming and we are lucky to experience it in our lifetime.”

FIFA Secretary General Jerome Valcke famously caused a diplomatic row when he told the Brazilian government prior to the 2014 finals that it needed “a kick up the backside” over preparations as delays piled up. Russian organizers say their tournament will be delivered as planned.

Of the 12 stadiums being built or updated, from the exclude of Kaliningrad on the Baltic Sea to Yekaterinburg on the border where Europe meets Asia, three are already complete and work has begun at eight more. Builders are due to break ground at the last one, in Kaliningrad, at the end of this month.

With powerful backers, it is no surprise that preparations for the championship are largely on track.

President Vladimir Putin sees the World Cup as an opportunity to showcase Russia as a global power and boost his own image before a presidential election due in 2018, just before the finals.

Russia won the right to host the finals in 2010 with a bid promising to build state-of-the-art sports facilities and put regional cities on the map. Since then, several potential party-spoilers have emerged.

Russia’s economy is battling against a collapse in global oil prices and Western sanctions imposed on Moscow after it annexed the Black Sea peninsula of Crimea from Ukraine last year. US federal authorities are also investigating the bidding process as part of their probe into corruption and bribery involving FIFA.

There have been calls for the venue to be changed, although that is unlikely to happen. Nonetheless, Russia expects to spend more than 630 billion rubles (7.2 billion pounds) on preparations including an overhaul of the transport system and building hotels, training grounds and health facilities.—Reuters

Gold is the new brown as drought-hit California drops lawn fines

LOS ANGELES, 14 July — California residents who let their green lawns turn brown and brittle will no longer face the possibility of fines for an unprompted green grass to go brown even as drought-hit California is in the grip of a catastrophic drought.

The measure, signed on Monday by California Governor Jerry Brown, prohibits a city or county from imposing a fine on a homeowner for the failure to water a lawn or for having a brown lawn during the drought emergency.

As a s e m b l ywoman Cheryl Brown, who sponsored the measure, said she knew of a number of cities and towns that had been leveling fines on homeowners for allowing their grass to go brown even as state officials have asked the public to “severely limit” outdoor water use this summer.

Part of the state “Save Our Water” campaign urges Californians to let lawns “fade to gold for the summer.”

California is in the fourth year of a catastrophic drought that has led the state to issue a series of steps to reduce water consumption, including the first-ever mandatory cutbacks in urban water use.

Starting this week, California parks will no longer offer showers for people to wash and salt from their bodies at the beach.—Reuters

Chicago-area zoo investigates deaths of 54 stingrays

CHICAGO, 14 July — The Brookfield Zoo near Chicago is investigating what caused all 54 of its stingrays to die, a zoo spokeswoman said on Monday.

Four southern stingrays and 50 cownose rays died on Friday after the oxygen level dropped in the exhibit habitat, the zoo said in a statement.

“We are devastated by the tragic loss of these animals,” Bill Zeigler, senior vice president of animal programs for the Chicago Zoological Society, which operates the zoo in Brookfield, Illinois, said in the statement. “Our staff did everything possible to try and save the animals, but the situation could not be reversed.”

Veterinary and animal care staff responded immediately to help the stingrays, but efforts to get oxygen levels back to normal were unsuccessful, the statement said. “Zoo staff members are analyzing the habitat’s life-support system to determine what caused the malfunction.”

“Stingray Bay,” the zoo’s summer-long exhibit that has operated since 2007, will be closed for the remainder of the season, the zoo said on its website and in the statement.

The stingrays were all born in captivity and were kept in a 16,000-gallon saltwater pool measuring about 25 feet by 55 feet. Zoo spokeswoman Sondra Katzen said. The pool allowed zoo visitors to touch and feed the stingrays.—Reuters
Us draw with Panama in Gold Cup, Haiti through to quarters

Kansas City, 14 July — The United States recovered from a poor first half and earned a 1-1 draw against Panama on Monday that kept the Central Americans from clinching an automatic spot in the CONCACAF Gold Cup quarter-finals.

In a physical, testy, battle at Sporting Park in Kansas City, the Americans overcame a 1-0 halftime deficit when Michael Bradley scored from a free kick to force the score close range in the 54th minute.

The unbeaten Americans had already clinched their spot in the quarter-finals from Group A before the match.

Haiti, meanwhile, advanced to the knockout phase by beating Honduras 1-0 courtesy of a 34th-minute goal.

Panama, who drew all three of their games at the tournament to finish on three points, will now have to wait to see if they can qualify as one of the two best third-placed teams.

The Central Americans came out inspired on Monday, looking for their first win and Luis Tejada appeared to have given them the lead in the 10th minute only for the goal to be ruled out for offside.

Panama did finally strike in the 34th minute when Blas Perez finished off a pass from Tejada.

The US struck back early in the second half as Alejandro Bedoya played a great ball into the box to Bradley who finished.

The match had several testy moments with three Panamanians receiving yellow cards.

“It’s always tricky when you have one team that has advanced and another team playing for everything,” Bradley said.

“T he end of the day we’ll take our points and move on.”

Geneva, 14 July — A US Senate panel invited FIFA President Sepp Blatter to answer questions at a hearing this Wednesday about the corruption scandal that has badly tarnished football’s global governing body but FIFA declined on his behalf, a congressional official said.

Sen. Moran’s office reached out to FIFA to explore the possibility of having Mr Blatter testify but the organisation declined,” said Garrett Turner, spokesman for Sen. Jerry Moran, the Republican chairman of the consumer protection sub-committee, which is holding the hearing.

FIFA did not immediately respond to a request for comment and Blatter’s legal representative in the US declined to comment.

Blatter said last week in an interview with German newspaper Welt am Sonntag that he “won’t take any travel risks until everything has been cleared up”.

The 79-year-old Swiss national did not attend the final of FIFA’s Women’s World Cup in Vancouver earlier this month but says he intends to be in Russia in late July for the draw for qualifying games for the 2018 World Cup.

Also missing from the hearing will be US soccer Federations (USSF) top elected official, President Sunil Gulati, who is a member of FIFA’s executive committee representing the North America region. He has been USSF president since 2006.

The USSF will be represented instead by CEO and Secretary General Dan Flynn.

Sen. Moran’s office said that Flynn was “the highest ranking official US Soccer was willing to send” to testify at the hearing.

The USSF did not respond to a question from Reuters about why Flynn and not Gulati was appearing.

The three other witnesses are Michael Hershman, a private investigator who served on FIFA’s independent governance committee from 2011 to 2013, Sunjeev Bery, an official of Amnesty International, and Andrew Jennings, a British investigative journalist who led efforts to expose corruption in FIFA.

Senators will ask what if anything, current American football executives knew about alleged corruption in the sport’s governing bodies, congressional aides said. Former US football official Chuck Blazer, who was a FIFA executive committee member for 17 years, has been at the centre of the corruption scandal.

He has pleaded guilty to a series of offences related to bribery and is cooperating with authorities.

Gatlin ineligible for annual award, IAAF says

New York, 14 July — American sprinter Justin Gatlin could win world championships and go undefeated for a second consecutive season but he would still not be ineligible for the sport’s athlete of the year award, the IAAF said.

A change in selection criteria makes any athlete who has been sanctioned for a serious doping offence ineligible to be shortlisted for the honour, effective this year, the International Association of Athletics Federations (IAAF) spokesman Nick Davies told Reuters in an email.

Gatlin, the fastest man over 100 and 200 metres in 2015, was banned for four years after a 2006 positive test for testosterone.

He has returned to the sport and is favourite to dethrone Jamaican world record holder Usain Bolt in both sprints at the world championships in Beijing in August.

Davies said the IAAF Council approved the change at a meeting last November on the recommendation of the IAAF Athletes Commission. It came after uproar over Gatlin’s inclusion on the top 10 male athletes of the year list for 2014 under existing rules.

The American was not among the three finalists for the honour which was won by French pole vaulter Renaud Lavillenie.

“Several Council Members expressed concern that the IAAF could encounter legal challenges if the Athletes’ Commission’s recommendation that no athlete who has been sanctioned for a serious doping offence should be shortlisted for the Athlete of the Year award was approved,” minutes from the meeting recorded.

“However, the majority of Council Members who took the floor supported this recommendation because it enhanced the credibility of the sport, it protected the rights of clean athletes and it assisted in further establishing inappropriate behaviour in the sport that would not be honoured by the IAAF in the future.” Britain’s Sebastian Coe, running for the IAAF presidency along with fellow vice president Sergey Bubka, was among those unhappy about Gatlin’s inclusion. — Reuters
