Yangon, 17 July—The Health Ministry warned of a rise in dengue fever cases Friday, urging the public to help prevent the spread of the mosquito-borne disease.

A total of 506 dengue fever cases were reported country-wide Thursday, including four fatalities, the ministry said. It also urged parents not to delay sending children suspected of being infected to hospital.

From 1 January to the first week of July, more than 16,400 dengue fever cases were reported, more than 60 of them fatal, according to an official of the ministry.

Ayeawady Region had the highest number of reported infections at 3,397, but its 11 deaths were second to Yangon Region, which recorded 13 deaths from 1,935 reported cases. Mon State had the second highest number of cases at 2,887, including three deaths.

Infection rates usually spike in the rainy season, especially in July and August.

However, infections are found year-round in Myanmar, necessitating year-round monitoring, said Dr Soe Lwin Nyein, Director-General of the Public Health Department. Community participation is crucial to controlling mosquito larvae breeding, said Dr Ngwe San, Head of the Health Department of Yangon City Development Committee.

Food containers and bottles improperly thrown away can fill with rain water and provide breeding grounds for mosquitoes, he said. The number of infections is higher but the death rate is lower than a decade ago, he added.

As part of the Health Ministry’s campaign, the YCDC has also conducted community-based programmes in 33 townships in Yangon’s municipal area, fumigating schools and treating tanks, drains and mosquito nets with insecticides. —GNLM

Yangon, 17 July—Myanmar has attracted $2.4 billion in foreign direct investment in the period surrounding the 8 November general election could make it difficult to reach the target.

During the first quarter of the fiscal year, the Myanmar Investment Commission approved projects involving 46 domestic and overseas firms in sectors including manufacturing, construction, real estate and hospitality.

Yangon, 17 July—Myanmar has exceeded its FDI targets in the past three years, and has set this year’s target at $6 billion. Some observers, however, believe a potential lull in investment activity in the period surrounding the 8 November general election could make it difficult to reach the target.

Japan pledges support for road building in Kachin, Chin states

By Ko Moe

YANGON, 17 July — The Japan International Cooperation Agency will donate heavy equipment for road construction in remote areas of Kachin and Chin states, JICA official Mr Yoshihiro Kawasaki said Friday.

Work can start soon after the arrival of equipment, estimated to be in early 2017, Mr Kawasaki, from JICA’s Planning and Coordination Division, said at a safety management seminar in Yangon.

Daw Mya Win, Director of the Department of Highways under the Ministry of Construction, said the Japanese agency is also providing similar assistance for road projects in Rakhine and Kayin states.

“The project in Kayin started last fiscal year, and equipment for projects in Rakhine State will arrive in Myanmar this September,” Daw Mya Win said.

JICA’s technical and equipment assistance programmes have targeted regions where transportation infrastructure is undeveloped. At the seminar Friday, Japanese experts shared their experience and knowledge on safety management in construction with over 100 government staff including engineers, foremen and machine operators.

JICA plans to offer more seminars for both private and public sectors, Mr Kawasaki said.

The Japanese agency has recently held such seminars in the capital Nay Pyi Taw and Mandalay, with the aim of introducing safety management systems and equipment used in Japan, as well as encouraging safety consciousness on construction sites in Myanmar.—GNLM

New bridge crossing Thanlwin River in Kayah State opens to traffic

LOIKAW, 17 July — A new bridge across the Thanlwin River was inaugurated Friday in Pasawng, in southeast Myanmar’s Kayah State.

The opening of the Thanlwin Bridge (Pasawng), the eighth across the river, was attended by Union Minister for Livestock, Fisheries and Rural Development U Ohn Myint, on behalf of Chairman of the Rural Development and Poverty Alleviation Central Committee President U Thein Sein, government officials and local residents.

The 1,260-foot long bridge, located on Pasawng-Meisei-Nantman Road, accommodates a 24-foot-wide motorway.

In his address, the minister said the Union and state governments are committed to improving infrastructure in Kayah, one of the least-developed states.

The new bridge will allow local people to travel from Pasawng to Loikaw within three or four hours, he added.

Kayah state will be able to turn the Meisei-Pasawng-Bawlakhe-Loikaw Road into a major trade route given its connection to the soon-to-open Myanmar-Thailand border trade in Meisei Township, the minister said.

Two Koreas end talks on joint industrial zone without results

SEUL, 17 July — North and South Korea on Thursday finished talks on issues regarding the operation of their joint industrial park in the North’s border city of Kaesong without producing any results.

The joint committee that met in Kaesong, with five members from each side taking part, had not held talks in about a year. The two sides did not set a new meeting, according to South Korea’s Ministry of Unification.

Among major topics on the agenda was a dispute over a wage increase for North Korean employees hired by South Korean firms at the industrial park.

In February, North Korea unilaterally gave notification on raising the minimum wage for its workers by 5.18 percent to $74 per month, but South Korea rejected the move, saying that an earlier bilateral agreement calls for the two sides to set wages through consultations.

In May, North Korea accepted South Korea’s tentative offer to pay wages at the current level of $70.35 for the time being while the two sides discuss the matter.

That would affect about 120 South Korean companies employing about 55,000 North Korean workers in the industrial zone.

The industrial zone, opened in 2004, combines South Korea’s capital and technology with North Korea’s low-cost labour.

In February, North Korea offered to kick-start hundreds of projects, but after failing to secure the consent of 80 percent of landowners for some proposals, it has not given up on making it work.

Both sides have joined forces to portray the proposed changes permanent.

Senior BPJ leader Shrikant Sharma told Reuters the government would continue to work with opposition parties to pass the law, but if that failed, it would work with individual states to implement their own versions of the legislation.

The opposition can’t stop our agenda, it can only delay it,” he said, in comments echoed by a senior cabinet minister. Eight states where the BPJ is the largest party could press ahead with passing their own laws, but that would risk creating a patchwork of regulations that could further hold up stalled infrastructure projects worth $300 billion.

Opposition parties have joined forces to portray the proposed changes to the land act, including exemption from getting consent of 80 percent of landowners for some projects, as anti-farmer, a damaging charge in a mostly rural country.

For weeks, Modi has been trying to rile opponents further over allegations of corruption, and does not want to rule opponents further over the land law. Land reform is critical for Modi’s drive to build new roads, homes and factories and, if stalled, would blight his vision of 100 new ‘smart’ cities across India linked by industrial corridors and high-speed rail routes criss-crossing the country.

In the last seven months, Modi has had to struggle with the task of getting the bill placed in the upper house before a joint parliamentary committee to pass the law, and their report will now be delayed by two weeks, according to a member of the panel.

Iran: Nuclear deal is new chance for regional cooperation

DUBAI, 17 July — Iran, embarking on a diplomatic offensive in the wake of its nuclear deal with world powers, told fellow Muslim countries on Friday it hoped the historic accord could pave the way for more cooperation in the Middle East and internationally.

Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif made the comment in a message to Islamic countries in the Arab region on the occasion of the Eid al-Fitr holiday at the end of the Muslim holy month of Ramadan, the ministry’s website said.

“By solving the artificial crisis about its nuclear programme diplomatcially, a new opportunity for both regional and international cooperation has emerged,” Zarif said.

Zarif would travel to Gulf countries at some point after the Eid holiday, Foreign Ministry Spokeswoman Marzieh Afkham told state news agency IRNA late on Thursday.

She said Iran was seriously determined to further expand ties with regional states and its neighbours, some of which include Sunni Muslim Gulf Arab states that accuse Shi’ite power Teheran of interfering in the Arab world.

Iran and six major world powers reached a nuclear agreement on Wednesday, capping more than a decade of negotiations with an agreement that could transform the Middle East.

The country’s pragmatic President Hassan Rouhani is seeking to end Iran’s long international isolation by settling its nuclear dispute and bringing about a lifting of sanctions.

In a telephone conversation with British Prime Minister David Cameron on Thursday evening, Rouhani said he would like to have bilateral relations based on mutual respect.

Rouhani said the two sides also discussed the reopening of their embassies, the overnight fearing as “a new chance for regional cooperation.”

Regarding China’s rapid advance into nearby seas to lay territorial claims, Kawano said Japan has “big concerns” because the South China Sea, where China has conducted mass-ive reclamation work, is “our important sea lane.”

The admiral said patrol activities by the SDF in the area are “an issue to be considered in the future.”

Speaking with Japanese media last month, Adm. Harry Harris, the commander of the US Pacific Command, said he would “welcome” SDF patrols in the South China Sea, which he said the United States sees as “international water, not territorial water of any country.”

Also Thursday, Kawano met with Gen Martin Dempsey, chairman of the US Joint Chiefs of Staff, and agreed to accelerate cooperation between the SDF and the US military to strengthen the deterrence provided by the alliance, a joint statement said.

The admiral met with Vice President Joe Biden at the White House on Wednesday in the first such meeting between the chief of the SDF’s Joint Staff and the US vice president.

The Japanese government has demanded that especially the rise of Islamic State in Iraq and Syria, IRNA reported. It quoted him as saying: “We know that this is very dangerous for the entire region and this should be confronted.”

In London, Cameron’s spokesman said Cameron told Rouhani that the nuclear deal marked a fresh start in relations and that he was committed to re-opening the British embassy in Teheran.

Rouhani also had a telephone conversation with his Turkish counterpart Tayyip Erdogan and underlined that importance of the Vienna agreement for Teheran-Ankara relations.

Under the nuclear deal, sanctions will be gradually removed in return for Iran accepting long-term curbs on a nuclear programme that the West has suspect-ed was aimed at creating a nuclear bomb. Iran says its nuclear work is for civilian purposes.—Reuters
German parliament set to back talks on new Greek bailout

BERLIN, 17 July — German lawmakers are expected to give the government their clear backing on Friday to start negotiations on a third bailout programme for Greece, despite Finance Minister Wolfgang Schaeuble questioning whether it will succeed.

Lawmakers from Chancellor Angela Merkel’s conservative CSU-agreement coalition partners, the Social Democrats, already voted overwhelmingly in favour of the euro zone opening talks with Athens in test ballots held on Thursday.

These results indicate that Merkel is likely to get the mandate she needs from the Bundestag lower house of parliament, with some opposition parties also expected to vote ‘Yes’ at the end of the debate, which began shortly after 10 am. (0800 GMT).

The positive soundings from lawmakers came despite popular misgivings in Germany about funneling more aid to a country备受deepening debt. Schaeuble suggesting the better option for Greece may be to take a “time-out” from the euro zone.

“Seven reasons why the Bundestag should vote ‘No’ today,” ran a headline in the mass-selling Bild daily, listing “Greece is the better solution” and “our grandchildren will pay” among its reasons.

The Greek parliament approved the new bailout offer in the early hours of Thursday and later in the day the European Central Bank increased emergency funding to keep the country’s banks from collapse.

European Union finance ministers also approved 7 billion euros in bridge loans to Greece, allowing it to avoid defaulting on a bond payment to the ECB next Monday and clearing the way to avoid the threat of a euro zone exit. According to the terms it had pressed for. Nevertheless, Schaeuble repeated on Thursday the suggestion he made in the weekend negotiations that Greece might be better off temporarily leaving the euro zone - a view that resonates with some of his fellow conservatives.

Conservative law-maker Mark Helfrich told Deutschlandfunk radio he would vote ‘No’, adding: “This is about ruined trust.”

In a sign of frustration with Athens, 48 conservatives in Thursday’s test vote opposed new negotiations, according to preliminary results.

During a five-hour debate, many critics expressed doubt about the Greek government’s willingness to implement reforms. In February, 29 conservatives voted against an extension of Greece’s second bailout.

Both Merkel and Schaeuble urged conserv-atives to back the deal that was reached in Brussels, a source said, with the chancel-ler stressing that Germany had left its mark on the agreement and it included strict exit conditions and supervision of how Greece runs its economy.

Anton Hofreiter, a leader of the opposition Greens, said he expected a majority of his party to abstain. “I won’t vote ‘no’ because I think Greece depli-cates itself, and we need to keep Greece in the euro zone,” he said.

“But I, and a large majority of the fraction, do not have confidence in the German government to act in a way that will prevent a Grexit,” he added.

First Iranian ship storing oil sails for Asia after nuclear deal

LONDON, 17 July — An Iranian supertanker with two million barrels of oil is heading to Asia after sitting in Iranian waters for months, the first vessel storing crude offshore to sail after a nuclear deal this week, data showed on Thursday.

Iran and six major world powers reached a landmark nuclear deal on Tuesday, clearing the way for an easing of international sanctions on Tehran and higher oil exports.

While oil analysts do not expect Iran to make a major return to the market until next year, it has been parking millions of barrels of oil on tankers for months.

The wholly laden Starla, operated by Iran’s top tanker group NITC, had been used for floating storage since 12 December, a tanker tracking service said.

“This is the first tanker to come off floating storage,” the source said. “One of the scenarios is it could do an STS operation, although nothing is known at the moment,” the source said, referring to short-load-to-ships transfers of oil between two vessels, usually at sea.

Thomson Reuters Eikon shipping data showed the vessel sailing through the Gulf of Oman with a Singapore port destination. Earlier this week the Starla was idling offshore the United Arab Emirates in an area known as Khor Fakkan, often used for STS.

It is unclear whether the estimated 2 million-barrel cargo had been sold, or if so whether the deal occurred after this week’s agreement. But it is a milestone following a months-long build-up of idling crude tankers holding up to 50 million barrels of oil, equal to over a month’s worth of Iran’s exports. Iran is “likely assuming that either a small increase in exports will not undermine the historic accord reached, or, that no one would notice,” an analyst said.

Iran’s compliance with the terms of the deal, and sanctions are slowly removed.

Oil Minister Bijan Zanganeh said last month the country was aiming to add 500,000 barrels per day (bpd) to production within two months of Western sanctions being eased, and as much as 1 million bpd in six to seven months.

The sanctions have halved Iran’s shipments to as little as 1 million bpd.

Years of under investment mean Iran may struggle to get its oil industry anywhere near full potential, analysts say. It will also take time to raise output while nuclear inspectors verify Iran’s compliance with the terms of the deal, and sanctions are slowly removed.

Mexico probing delivery of prison plans for drug lord escape

MEXICO CITY, 17 July — Mexico is investigating who could have given plans of a maximum security prison to associates of kingpin Joaquin “El Chapo” Guzman in his second jail break, a senior government minister said on Thursday.

Guzman sparked a massive manhunt after escaping from a prison on Saturday night in a mile-long tunnel that led from his cell into a deserted building, dealing a bitter blow to President Enrique Pena Nieto.

“Regarding the plans it’s part of the investigation that we’re doing – who participated and who was involved, that’s over, when they got them,” Interior Minister Miguel Angel Osorio Chong said at a news conference. Guzman’s escape tunnel ran from a seemingly abandoned property near the town outside Altiplano prison in the State of Mexico to right underneath the road in his cell. The government has already fired the prison director. In video footage released by the government, he is seen minutes before his getaway pacing the cell, changing his shoes and then disappearing behind a wall partly covering the shower fitting. Behind it was a 50-cm (20 inch) by 50-cm escape hatch.

“They weren’t off by a millimetre. It was incredibly exact,” a government official close to the investigation said under condition of anonymity.

Guzman’s departure was his second from a high security lockup in less than 15 years. In 2001 Guzman bribed guards to help him escape from a prison near the city of Guadalajara after a drugs trial, and reappeared in north-western Mexico in February 2015.

“Our objectives are clear, recapture this criminal and punish each of his accomplices,” Osorio Chong said. “It won’t be easy.”

Investigators seek motive behind Tennessee shooting rampage

CHAUTAUQUA, Tenn., 17 July — Investigators on Friday sought to determine what led a 24-year-old gun- man to open fire at two mil- itary offices in Chatauqua, Tennessee, killing four Ma- rines in an attack officials said could be an act of domes- tic terrorism.

Mohamed Youssef Abdulazeez, identified as the shooter by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was shot to death in the rampage that also injured three peo- ple, including a sailor who was critically wounded.

The attack comes at a time when US military and law enforcement authori- ties are increasingly con- cerned about the threat “ lone wolves” pose to domestic targets. The suspect, seen driving an open-top Ford Mustang, first went to a joint military recruiting centre in a strip mall and sprayed it with gunfire, riddling the glass facade with bullet holes.

“Everybody was at a standstill and as soon as he pulled away everyone scrambled, trying to make sure everyone was OK,” said Erica Wright, who works two doors down from the centre.

The gunman then drove off to a Naval Reserve Cen- tre about 6 miles (10 km) away, fatally shooting the four Marines before being shot and killed in a firefight with police. Three others were wounded in the attacks, including a police officer re- ported to be in stable condi- tion in a hospital.

The shootings began around 10:45 am (1445 GMT) and ended about 30 minutes later. NBC News reported that Abdulazeez was a naturalized American who was born in Kuwait. US law enforcement officials said they were investigating whether he was inspired by Islamic State or a similar group.

Islamic State had threat- ened to step up violence in the holy fasting month of Ramadan, which ends on Friday evening.
Beyond the three traditional basic needs
By Kyaw Thura

Traditionally, the three basic needs are considered to be food, clothing and shelter. The hustle and bustle of a world witnessing rapid growth may have prompted us to ask for more.

In this age, people tend to dream of having the right to a standard of living that can guarantee the health and wellbeing of themselves and their families. In addition to the three traditional immediate basic needs, we have all noticed the importance of medical care and sustainable employment.

It is therefore essential for people from different social strata to become actively involved in promoting and protecting good health across the country.

Health institutions should give communities technical support and disburse knowledge on prevention and treatment of common diseases. In this respect, local authorities should coordinate and support those efforts and frame policies that can meet the specific needs of their regions.

Fresh encouragement should be given to humanitarian agencies to identify disease outbreaks and prevent them from further spreading. Special attention should also be paid to prevention of chronic diseases.

There is a general misunderstanding that the entire work of health care services should rest with the central government. In fact, all able people are required to play their part in this critical task.

Contrary to our expectations, a majority of people are now starting to feel “no money, no health.”

Its background history reveals the events of the important period of old Bagan in its heydays, which had far-reaching impact on later Myanmar history.

Commander Kyanzittha was one of the five outstanding knights errant, commanding the armed forces of King Anawrahta – (1) the Elephantry (2) the Cavalry (Horses) (3) the Chariotry and (4) the Infantry. His peers were (1) Nga Htwe Yu (2) Nga Lone Let Phe (3) Nyaung U Hpe and (4) Byatta. Kyanzittha fell under royal anger, as he was suspected of a secret love affair with a princess who was presented as a tribute to King Anawrahta. So Kyanzittha had to run for his life, changing his hidings. At one monastery where he was hiding for some times, he fell in love with the niece of King Anawrahta – Abbott. She was Thumbula. When he was to move to another hiding place, he left his ruby ring with his pregnant wife Thumbula telling her that if a son was born, she should sell the ruby ring to buy land, slave and cattle to live a comfortable life.

Prince Saw Lu succeeded his father Anawrahta, but he being a bad king who was having a rival Nga Mankan who was also put to death. The court gave the throne to Kyanzittha. Kyanzittha was crowned with chief queens in accordance with the tradition and rites of coronation. None of the chief queens bore male child. But one of their daughters got a son, who became the only male issue in Kyanzittha’s family. Kyanzittha was so overjoyed that he issued royal order appointing his only grandson [who later became King Alaungsithu] a regent king to succeed him.

Many years later, Thumbula and her grownup son arrived at the court with the ruby ring. King Kyanzittha was overjoyed but very repeated for having chosen (See page 9)

Among many “memories of the world” across the country, Myanmar, either in stone inscriptions, ink writings on ceilings and walls, on folding papers, or inscriptions on palm leaf or any metal plates, Yaza Ku Ma Stone Inscription at ancient Bagan deserves priority for many reasons – archaeological, historical, epigraphical, philological, religious and socio-cultural.

Residents consume potable water from creek in Taninthayi

Taninthayi, 17 July — A K22-million project is under way to supply residents of Chaunggyi and Chaungnge wards in Taninthayi Township with fresh water from Dathway Creek. Residents of the wards have limited access to potable water, as nearly underground water is unsuitable for drinking.

The region government is installing 50,000-gallon and 10,000-gallon water tanks to store water from Dathway Creek, and laying more than 30,000 feet of pipes to carry it to residents.

The association plans to provide the awards to 25 people aged between 15 and 24 from the Asia-Pacific region, as well as an equal number from the host country, with the aim of fostering youth leadership in line with the principles of the conference, Dr Daw May Malar, Programme Manager of 8th APCRSHR Secretariat said.

The MMCAW has a plan to extend its scholarship programme when the host organization receives more funds,” Dr Daw May Malar said.

The scholarship will cover travel, lodging, board and other related expenses.

Candidates for the programme should have made a significant contribution to youth programmes or relevant RSHR activities in their respective countries.

Execute the order of Maha Thera monks, and great religious works dedicated to the parents is one of the filial duties of the children to the parents, which the Buddha had prescribed.

Yaza Kumar Stone Inscription...

Yaza Kumar made a gold Buddha Image in honour of his royal father. It was enshrined in the pagoda with three villages of slaves (farm workers) his father gave him, dedicated to that pagoda.

These stone inscription bear (1) archaeological (2) historical (3) religious (4) epigraphical (5) philological and (6) socio-cultural values of world standard. First, their archaeological value lies in the fact that they are the earliest stone inscriptions so far discovered on ground across the country.

Their historical value lies in the contents of the four-language inscriptions. They described the important events of the period of ancient Bagan in its heyday.

Asaungru, Saw Lu, Kyanzittha, Yaza Kumar and Alaungsithu. As the dates of their successions, the duration of their reigns, and the date of their deaths were mentioned in the inscriptions, historians can refer to and counter-check with these dates in the inscriptions, in their research. Dr E Forchammer said he was able to decipher some words in Pyu inscription with the help of those counterparts in Pali, Mon and Myanmar inscriptions. (Epigrapha Birmanica, 6 volumes, Indian Archaeological Survey, Epigraphic Office, Burma Branch). Hence, the historical value of these inscriptions is beyond measure.

As to its epigraphical value, scholars can comparatively study alphabets, script writings, grammar, composition and punctuation of four languages on the pillars. They differ in alphabets, writing and grammar and composition. But they are short sentences, direct in meaning, no simile, metaphor or idiom were used.

In the National Museum, on Pyaz Road, Yangon, on the ground floor, there is a room in which history of epigraphs of Myanmar is displayed. There you can study a replica of Yaza Kumar Stone Inscription and other epigraphs.

Pali was the sacred language of Buddhism and it was the lingua franca of Bagan of those days, all literate people understood Pali. That implied that Theravada Buddhism was well established and widespread.

Pyus, Mons, Myanmars and all other literate ethnic groups professed Buddhism. Pariyatti, monastic schools taught three Rs education and moral religious instructions to young generations of all ethnic groups, regardless of race, religion and status with free tuition, messing and lodging by monk teachers. Therefore, Pali was understood by literate people of Bagan, judging by the Pali inscription of Yaza Kumar stone pillar.

Besides, going back to the height of its glory.

As such Buddhism prescribes rights and duties between the ruler and the ruled, the master and the subordinates, the teacher and the pupil, the parents and the children, the husband and the wife, between siblings and relatives and friends. As Syrian Kurds advance against Islamic State, other ethnic groups flee

AOKAKALE, (Turkey), 17 July — Cemal Dede fled his home in a remote Turkmen village in Syria after reports from the US-led coalition against Islamic State bombarded the house next door. He had no idea he wouldn’t be coming back.

Dede says the Kurdish YPG militia did not let his family of seven return to Dedeler near the Turkish border, telling him it was now Kurdish territory and Turkmen like him had no place there.

“When Islamic State was there, they persecuted people. Now there is YPG and they are no different,” the 43-year old told Reuters in an impromptu settlement of refugee tents at a disused truck depot near Turkey’s Akcakale border gate.

“We don’t support any group, but still we are stripped of our right to live in our own land.”

The Kurds, who have emerged as the US-led coalition’s most capable partner in Syria against Islamic State on the ground, strongly deny having forced people of other ethnic groups out of territory they have seized. They say those who left did so to escape fighting and are welcome to return with guarantees of their safety.

“When you come inside Tel Abyad, you’ll see that the Arabs, Muslims, Turkmen, the Armenian people, all of them — they are living together,” said Idris Nasan, an official in the Kurdish administration for the Kobani canton, which includes Tel Abyad.

“It is multi-cultural, multi-national, multi-sectarian. The protectors of this administration are the YPG, the People’s Protection Units. That refers to all people. We are not just for the Kurdish people,” he told Reuters by telephone.

But accusations that non-Kurds have been forced to flee, described as “ethnic cleansing” by neighbouring Turkey, have tarnished the Kurds’ reputation even as their success against Islamic State on the ground has raised their stature.

Backed by US air strikes, the YPG and smaller Syrian rebel groups captured the border town of Tel Abyad from Islamic State on 15 June, prompting more than 26,000 people to flee to Turkey. With nearly half the length of Syria’s border with Turkey now in Kurdish hands, Ankara fears the creation of an autonomous Kurdish region in northern Syria which could inflame separatist sentiment among its own Kurdish population. It accuses Kurdish fighters in Syria of links to the PKK militant group, which has waged an insurgency against the Turkish state for three decades.

Some Kurds say fear among refugees is being whipped up by Turks to discredit them.

“This is a psychological war waged against Kurds,” said Deniz Mir Mehmet Firat, a member of the Turkish parliament from the pro-Kurdish opposition HDP.

But new father Yasin Saeed, who fled Suluk, a Syrian Arab village around 20 km (12 miles) east of Tel Abyad as Kurdish forces entered a month ago, said he was afraid to return.

“If you are not a Kurd but an Arab who has been living under Islamic State rule, they automatically see you as someone who supports and aids the group,” he said, sat in a tent, as his wife played with their 8-month-old daughter.

Yemen’s exiled government says Aden ‘liberated’ as clashes continue

ADEN, 17 July — The vice president of Yemen’s exiled government in Riyadh declared on Friday that the southern port city of Aden was now under the control of Saudi-backed fighters after days of battles with the country’s dominant Houthi militia.

Residents and locals fighters said low-level clashes were continuing in the Tawahi District in the west of the city to sweep the Houthis from one of their last redoubts.

“We congratulate the people of Aden and the Republic of Yemen as whole for what has been achieved in the last two days ... The government announces the liberation of Aden province,” Khaled Bahah said on his official Facebook page.

Aden has been a focus of fighting since the Houthis first laid siege to it in March when it was home to the government which subsequently fled to Saudi Arabia.

Once one of the world’s busiest ports, Aden sits near the Bab al-Mandab shipping lane, a major energy gateway for Europe, Asia and the United States via the Red Sea and the Suez Canal. The Shi’ite Muslim Houthis seized the capital, Sanaa, in September and pushed into Yemen’s south and east in March and April in what they say is a revolution against a corrupt government and hardline Sunni Muslim militants.

More than three months of air strikes by the Saudi-led Arab coalition and a civil war has killed at least 3,500 people and rendered more than 20 million of its 25 million residents in need of some form of humanitarian aid.

Ali Al-Ahmedi, spokesman for the local fighters in Aden, told Reuters that dozens of Houthis fighters had surrendered themselves to the militiamen as they lost ground. The advances began on Tuesday when local fighters seized the city’s international airport, followed by the main sea port the next day, then one district after another. Fighters said they were advancing towards the Anad air base 60 km (40 miles) north of Aden with backing from air strikes.

Nevertheless, on the Muslim fasting holiday of Eid, food and basic supplies were being blocked at Houthis checkpoints on the city’s outskirts, residents said.

UK adds extra spy plane to fight against Islamic State

LONDON, 17 July — Britain will send an extra spy plane to Iraq and Syria in the coming weeks to help provide surveillance in the fight against Islamic State militants, Defence Secretary Michael Fallon said on Thursday.

Britain’s Royal Air Force (RAF) carries out regular air strikes in Iraq but has so far limited its Syrian involvement to flying surveillance missions to gather intelligence. Earlier this month, Prime Minister David Cameron asked lawmakers to consider whether Britain should also join US-led air strikes in Syria.

Britain is buying three Airseeker Rivet Joint surveillance aircraft from the United States, the first of which is already operating with the Middle East’s international, multi-national forces.

Fallon said the RAF also plans to deploy a small number of its jets to the United Arab Emirates, which is also involved in the coalition against Islamic State (ISIL, Islamic State). The UK also supplies intelligence and training to the US-led coalition.

Fallon likened the fight against Islamic State militants to the Battle of Britain, the 1940 air conflict between the RAF and the German Luftwaffe whose 75th anniversary he commemorated this year. “I believe we’re fighting a new Battle of Britain. Once again, against a fascist enemy, an enemy prepared to kill its enemies and civilians alike,” he said.

High blood pressure danger equal for slim and obese alike

The researches analyzed data on these participants from a long-term study of about twice as many people, begun in 2000.

Unlike many studies that group people by weight only, or by body mass index (BMI), a measure of weight relative to height, the current study also included waist circumference.

Waist size indicates the degree of fat around the torso, which is linked with heart disease risk.

The researchers divided their subjects into seven groups based on BMI (underweight, healthy, overweight, obese and very obese) and waist circumference, using ethnicity-specific parameters in both cases.

For example, a healthy or “optimal” waist circumference is less than 102 centimetres (40.16 inches) in men and less than 88 cm (34.6 in) in women for white, black and Hispanic ethnicity, and for Chinese ethnicity, less than 90 cm (35.4 in) in men and less than 80 cm (31.5 inches) in women, according to the authors.

Trained technicians collected height, weight, waist circumference and blood pressure measures at the start of the study, and called to check in about any hospital admission, procedures, cardiovascular diagnoses or deaths every nine to 12 months for an average of 10 years for each participant.

At the start of the study, 1,054 people fell in the healthy BMI range, 1,568 were overweight and 1,172 were obese or very obese.

Most people with a healthy weight also had a waist circumference within the optimal range, whereas almost all obese people had a nonoptimal waist circumference.

Almost 350 of those with a healthy weight had high blood pressure, compared to more than 550 of those in the obese category.

In total, there were 273 cardiovascular disease events during the study, and for every weight category, those with high blood pressure were more likely to suffer one than those without high blood pressure, the study team reports in Hypertension.

Healthy-weight people with no high blood pressure had the lowest risk for cardiovascular events like heart attack or stroke. Obese people without high blood pressure had a higher risk, and healthy-weight and obese people with high blood pressure had equally high risks, the researchers found.

Previous studies, which found greater risk for leaner people with high blood pressure, had included smokers, people with diabetes and cancer, Colangelo noted.

Smokers tend to be leaner but also have more cardiovascular events, which may have affected the results, so they excluded smokers from the new analysis, she said.

“The results in this case still showed normal weight people with hypertension have similarly high absolute risk as obese people,” she said.

Getting high blood pressure under control is important for reducing the risk of cardiovascular disease events, Colangelo said.

“First, by adopting a healthy lifestyle — which includes losing weight if overweight or obese, reducing sodium in the diet, not smoking and increasing physical activity,” she said. “And second, by adhering to the treatment and medication management prescribed by one’s physician.”

World Bank chief says China’s economic fundamentals sound

Beijing, 17 July — World Bank Group (WBG) President Jim Yong Kim said on Friday that China’s economic fundamentals are sound despite the recent equity market volatility.

“China has built the world’s second largest economy and it has undertaken significant reforms aimed at providing all of its citizens an opportunity to move up the ranks,” he said. “We believe the country is moving forward resolutely on its ambitious programme of economic and social reforms aimed at transforming China’s growth model toward more efficient, equitable, and environmentally sustainable growth, he added.

China’s growth slowed to 7.4 percent last year and the WBG predicted about 7-percent economic growth for 2015, which is “still the envy of the world,” he said.

Despite recent stock market fluctuations, “China’s economy is strong and its fundamentals are sound,” he said. Chinese leaders are moving forward resolutely on their ambitious program of economic and social reforms aimed at transforming China’s growth model toward “more efficient, equitable, and environmentally sustainable” growth, he added.

South Korea hospital at centre of MERS outbreak to resume normal operation

Seoul, 17 July — A South Korean hospital at the centre of an outbreak of Middle East Respiratory Syndrome (MERS) will resume normal operations on Monday, the health ministry said, as a health scare that rattled the economy wound with new cases reported since 4 July.

South Korea’s MERS outbreak was the largest outside Saudi Arabia, with 36 deaths and 186 people infected. It was traced to a South Korean man who returned from a business trip to the Middle East in May. The Samsung Medical Centre, a prominent Seoul hospital, had suspended most services and taken new patients for more than a month, to focus on stopping MERS, after nearly half of the cases were traced to it. Long emergency room waits at the hospital, one of Seoul’s top medical centres, helped fuel the spread of the virus, tarnishing its image.

The outbreak forced the closure of thousands of schools, while customers avoided movie theaters and tourists cancelled visits, dealing a blow to an already weakened economy. It also exposed shortcomings in health care in South Korea, where a culture of lengthy group visits to sick relatives was among the factors blamed for worsening the spread of the virus. South Korea’s health ministry has said it was discussing with the World Health Organisation (WHO) when to declare the end of the outbreak.

No MERS patient in the country has died for six days, with only 16 still in hospital, and just 150 people remaining in quarantine for possible infection, down from 6,700, health ministry data shows.

Japan to set budget deficit estimate at around Y6.4 trillion in FY2020

Tokyo, 17 July — The Japanese government is set to estimate that the nation’s primary budget deficit will be around Y6.4 trillion yen (33 billion pounds) in the fiscal year to March 2021, down from a projection five months ago of Y9.4 trillion yen, sources said.

The new estimate is based partly on an expected rise in tax revenue on the back of improved corporate earnings, they said.

The Cabinet Office is scheduled to submit the new estimate to the government’s top economic council next week. Japan’s new fiscal guidelines approved last month maintained an earlier target of returning to a primary budget surplus in fiscal 2020 and then lowering the debt-to-GDP ratio, which is the worst in the industrialized world at more than twice the size of the economy.

India opens railway station modernization project to private investors

NEW DELHI, 17 July — Indian government has approved investment by private persons or entities in modernizing some 400 railway stations across the country, said local media on Friday.

The government also cleared a plan to expand a highway in northern India from Haryana to Uttar Pradesh states outside Delhi which could ease air pollution in Delhi by enabling trucks and other vehicles passing through the region to bypass the capital.

The revamped railway stations will feature business centres, shopping outlets, restaurants and Wi-Fi-enabled waiting lounges, said local daily The Times of India.

Reburshed stations will also have luxury hotels, multilevel parking, separate entry and exit levels, it said.

Announcing the plan on Thursday in Delhi, Indian Finance minister Arun Jaitley said the railway stations will be “redeveloped using the Swiss Challenge method,” under which open bids are invited from interested parties allowing fair and transparent competition based on values of ideas in their proposals.

Australia holds memorial service for MH17 crash victims

SYDNEY, 17 July — A memorial service for victims of Malaysia Airlines Flight MH17 was held in Australia on Friday, one year after the plane was shot down over the Ukraine.

Among the 298 people on board the flight from Amsterdam to Kuala Lumpur, 38 were Australian citizens and permanent residents. All aboard were killed when the plane was shot down in an area where there was heavy fighting between Ukrainian forces and Russia-supported separatists.

“We owe it to the living to work for a more just and humane world, a world where people can turn their faces to the sun with the shadows behind them, like the sunflowers blooming again in the fields where MH17 came down,” Prime Minister Tony Abbott said during a service held in Canberra.

Earlier, Abbott also unveiled a plaque with the names of the Australian victims.

“The names of the Australians killed in the MH17 atrocity a year ago today are etched on this plaque just as they are etched in our hearts,” Abbott said.

The plaque sits on top of soil taken from the Ukrainian town of Rozypne, the area where the plane went down.

Australia, Belgium, Malaysia, the Netherlands and Ukraine have asked the United Nations Security Council to establish an international criminal tribunal to try those responsible for crimes connected with the downing of the flight.

Most of the victims onboard the Boeing 777 flight were Dutch, and Malaysian victims accounted for 43 including the crew members.

Ukraine claims the plane was downed by separatists supplied by Russia with missiles, while Russia blames the Ukrainian side.

Hillary Clinton proposes tax cuts for profit-sharing firms

DOVER, 17 July — Democratic US presidential candidate Hillary Clinton announced a new plan to give businesses two-year tax credits for sharing profits with workers at a New Hampshire campaign stop on Thursday.

Clinton detailed the first component of her economic platform aimed at raising middle-class incomes at a town hall meeting in Dover, citing local examples of businesses that share profits with employees.

“If you treat somebody like they have a stake in your business, they’re going to stand up a little straighter, they’re going to work a little harder,” said Clinton, the front-runner for the Democratic nomination ahead of the presidential election in November 2016.

Under Clinton’s plan, firms would receive a two-year tax credit equal to 15 percent of the profits distributed to workers, capped at a value of 10 percent of employees’ wages.

The tax credit would be available only to firms that share profits widely with employees, would phase out credits available for profits shared with high-income workers and end after two years when businesses that benefited from the credits would no longer need them, Clinton’s campaign said.

If a firm provided a $5,000 profit-sharing payment to a worker earning $50,000 per year, for example, it would receive a $750 tax credit under the proposal. The tax benefit available to any single firm in a given year would be capped to “prevent an excessive credit for very large corporations,” the campaign said, emphasizing Clinton’s focus on supporting small business.

Clinton’s campaign estimated the cost of her “Growing Incomes, Sharing Prosperity” tax credit would be between $10 billion to $20 billion over 10 years and could be paid for by closing tax loopholes that she will detail in coming weeks.

Roughly 40 percent of US workers participate in profit-sharing plans and it has a meaningful impact on their wealth, according to economic research cited by Clinton’s campaign. “When companies share profits, not only do workers benefit, but the companies themselves see higher productivity,” said Alan Blinder, a Princeton University economics professor who is advising Clinton’s campaign.

The profit-sharing proposal is the first piece of Clinton’s economic agenda outlined in a Monday speech. She said that over the course of the summer she would explain how she would raise the hourly minimum wage, support collective bargaining, fight employer wage theft, encourage long-term investing and regulate Wall Street.
Chinese toddler recovering after "brain-shrinking" surgery

CHANGSHA, 17 July — A three-year-old girl with her head weighing 20 kg due to hydrocephalus, is recovering steadily after a 3D-printed titanium alloy skull was implanted, doctors said.

The girl, nicknamed Han Han, underwent the surgery for more than 17 hours on Wednesday morning at the No 2 People's Hospital of central China's Hunan Province and is under observation, said neurosurgeon Kuang Weiping, who is in charge of her treatment.

Born with hydrocephalus, Han Han was admitted to the hospital more than a year ago. Since September 2014, she has become bedridden as her head grew four times the normal size, taking up more than half of her total weight.

Due to the heavy weight, parts of her brain suffered serious infections and she lost sight because her optic nerve was affected.

Kuang said they believed her skull was likely to rupture as infected parts became thinner and only the "brain-shrinking" operation could save her life.

During the process, neurosurgeons peeled her scalp and skull, then drained the fluid in her head. After the swollen structures in her brain returned to the normal size, they implanted the donated artificial skull and covered it with her scalp.

"We were very, very careful, because brain tissue without a skull is like a peeled egg. Fortunately, it went smoothly," Kuang said.

Cambodia grants work cards to 25,000 foreigners in six months

PHnom PeNH, 17 July — Cambodia's Ministry of Labour granted about 25,000 work permits to foreigners in the first six months of 2015, about 5,000 more than the total of last year, a local newspaper reported on Friday.

Labour Minister Ith Samheng partly credited the jump to a partnership with the Ministry of Interior.

"We have more people applying for employment cards," the Phnom Penh Post quoted him as saying. "This is the result of cooperation between the Ministry of Labour and the Ministry of Interior."

From January to June, 1,600 foreigners were deported due to documentation issues, 98 percent of whom were Vietnamese, Sok Phal said.

"Foreigners and investors do not have the right to work here without employment cards," Sok Phal said.

"If they do not have employment cards, they will be fined 125 US dollars, and if they still do not obtain a card, they will be jailed for three months and then expelled."
Comedian Matayoshi bags Akutagawa literary award

Tokyo, 17 July — Comedian Naoki Matayoshi on Thursday won the prestigious Akutagawa Prize for up-and-coming authors, after his nomination grabbed attention as it is rare for a popular entertainer to be recommended for the literature award.

In his prize-winning work “Hibana” (Spark), Matayoshi, 35, who is also known as a gling young comedian and senior comedian, the book has already become a best seller with 640,000 copies sold.

The 153rd Akutagawa Prize was also awarded to Keisuke Hada for “Scrap and Build,” while the Naoki Prize for popular fiction went to Akira Higashiyama for “Ryu” (Flow).

Matayoshi, born in Osaka Prefecture, has performed on stage as part of a comic duo Peace. With his trademark long wavy hair, he has also earned a reputation as a recommender of interesting books.

“I was really surprised. I’m just happy,” Matayoshi told a Press conference in Tokyo, looking nervous.

The story by Hada, a 29-year-old native of Tokyo, concerns a youth without stable employment who takes care of his grandfather. The novel by Higashiyama, a 46-year-old writer born in Taipei, depicts a teenager investigating the mystery of his grandfather’s death in the Taiwan capital in 1975.

The awards will be presented at a ceremony in Tokyo in late August, with each author receiving 1 million yen ($8,060) in prize money.

The Akutagawa Prize was founded in 1935 in memory of renowned Japanese novelist Ryunosuke Akutagawa, while the Naoki award, also created in 1935, is named after popular writer Sanjugo Naoki.

Robbie Williams turns auctioneer, raises $226,000 for charity

LONDON, 17 July — Pop singer Robbie Williams has turned auctioneer at a charity sale of his belongings and raised some $226,000 for a British children’s hospice.

The “Let Me Entertain You” singer appeared at London’s Bonhams auction house on Wednesday for the “Doing it for the Kids” sale, held to raise money for the Donna Louise Children’s Hospice, of which he is a patron.

The auction, where fans bid online, by phone and in the room, saw more than 150 lots go under the hammer — including belongings from when Williams was part of boy band Take That — raising 145,000 pounds ($226,475), the hospice said in a statement.

To loud cheers, the singer took over as auctioneer to sell his handwritten “Kids” — Robbie Williams featuring Kylie Minogue, the singer told the room as he set off bidding.

Popular lots included handwritten lyrics for Williams’ 2013 single “Go Gentle”, which sold for 31,250 pounds, and a Take That MTV Movie Award, which went for 10,625 pounds.

A cream suit Williams wore in the music video for 2004 single “Radio” sold for 5,250 pounds while a set of handwritten lyrics for “Let Me Entertain You” sold for 2,750 pounds, according to the hospice.

Williams said it was “a privilege” to auction the possessions to raise money for the hospice.

“I want to be accepted as an actress: Cara Delevingne

LOS ANGELES, 17 July — Cara Delevingne has revealed that she wants people to “accept” her as an actress, not just as a supermodel.

The 22-year-old diva put a full stop at the rumours that she is planning to leave modelling and said it will happen, but not very often, reported OK! magazine.

“I have five movies coming out this year (plus the upcoming Suicide Squad in 2016), which is really exciting, so you don’t really have a choice but to accept me as an actress now! I’m going to shove myself down your throat, in the nicest way possible,” Delevingne said ahead of the release of her upcoming movie “Paper Towns”.

However, despite her excitement for the big screen, she will not be giving up modelling.

“I’m going to carry on modelling — it’s just going to happen a lot less. Actresses do modelling jobs, so it’ll be kind of the same thing,” she said.—PTI

Kung fu star Jet Li leads group in $187 million HK ‘shell’ deal

HONG KONG, 17 July — A group led by Chinese movie star Jet Li and his wife Nina Li invested $187 million in a Hong Kong-listed firm, as appetite surged for so-called “shell” companies listed in the city.

The group made a bulk of the investment, agreeing to buy 11.5 billion new shares of Far East Holdings International Ltd at HK$0.10 each, or about HK$1.15 billion ($148.4 million), via a holding company, according to filings with the Hong Kong stock exchange this week. That is equivalent to a 97 percent discount to Far East’s closing price on 26 June, before the stock was halted pending an announcement.

Private companies and individuals are rushing to cash in on a steady flow of Chinese funds that have fueled a rally Hong Kong stocks, by snapping up so-called listed ‘shells’. Typically, such shell companies get a large injection of cash and assets that often change their business.

Demand for shell companies, entities which usually have few material operating assets, has soared in recent months. Such deals are generally considered a quicker and easier way for investors to gain a listing and access to funds than going through an initial public offering.

Li, better known for his acrobatic martial arts films, and his wife bought the stake on 10 July through Regent Pacific Business Ltd, the fil-quest for comment on the investments.

Fast East describes itself as an investment holding company active in the technology, media, manufacturing and financial services sectors, according to its website. The Far East deal involves a similar transaction last month by China’s largest private Social network and online media company Tencent Holdings Ltd and developer Evergrande Real Estate Group to buy a loss-making solar panel maker.—Reuters
No solace for food-deprived polar bears as sea ice wanes

WASHINGTON, 17 July — Polar bears are the kings of the ice surface covering the top of the globe, but the ongoing loss of the Arctic sea ice on which they hunt seals is causing summer food deprivation that threatens these imposing white-furred predators.

Some experts had thought the bears might be able to mitigate the effects of reduced food intake by entering a “walking hibernation” during summers, an energy-conserving state of reduced activity and metabolic rate akin to the winter hibernation other bear species undertake.

A study released on Thursday showed this is not happening. Researchers who monitored the body temperature, activity levels and movements of 30 bears found they limited their summer energy expenditure a bit, but not enough to compensate for the food deprivation they face.

The findings indicate polar bears cannot use reduced metabolic rates to extend their reliance on stored body fat when food becomes scarce. “They are unable to reduce their metabolism to levels similar to hibernation,” University of Wyoming zoology and physiology professor Merav Ben-David said. “To this day, polar bears cannot use reduced metabolic rates to levels similar to hibernation.”

“We found that bears appear to exhibit a typical mammalian response to food limitation in the summer, including slow, moderate declines in body temperature and activity.”

Ben-David said. Universi-ty of Wyoming biologist John Whiteman added: “We found that bears appear to exhibit a typical mammalian response to food limitation in the summer, including slow, moderate declines in body temperature and activity.”

“The loss of sea ice in the Arctic, attributed to rising temperatures amid global climate change, has prompted worry about the future of polar bears. They are specialized sea ice predators, hunting ringed and bearded seals from the surface of sea ice, mostly from April to June. During that time, they accumulate fat reserves that help them survive the summer when the sea ice melts. With rising temperatures, sea ice is melting earlier in the spring. In some areas, this has reduced bears’ hunting opportunities and left them with diminished fat stores. Such a compromised body condition before winter could threaten their survival. The researchers collected data on bears on shore and on the ice in the Arctic Ocean’s Beaufort Sea, north of Alaska and Canada. They surgically implanted tiny devices to record body temperature hourly and placed collars on the bears with satellite tracking technology to monitor activity levels.

“To this day, polar bears are tied to the ice. All bears spend the major-ity of their lives on the ice, perhaps never setting foot on land,” Whiteman said. The research appears in the journal Science.—Reuters

EU tells Thailand more to do on illegal fishing

BANGKOK, 17 July — The European Union has warned Thailand that it is still not doing enough to stamp out illegal fishing practices, the country’s defence minister said on Friday, raising the prospects of a trade ban. Thailand, the world’s third-largest seafood exporter, was given six months by the EU in April to address issues such as ensuring all fishing vessels are registered, having registered equipment and are fitted with a Vessel Monitor- ing System (VMS). “The EU sent a letter saying our actions were still not correct both in terms of administration and legislation,” Defence Minis-ter Pravit Wongswan told reporters on Friday. Pravit said that 3,000 fishing boats nationwide were still unregistered. The Thai government’s efforts to tighten regula- tions last month prompted many of the country’s fishermen to stop work in protest against the new requirements. Thailand’s annual exports to the EU are estimated to be worth between 575 million to 730 million euros ($641 million - $813 million). Overall fish exports were worth around $3 billion in 2014, according to the Thai Frozen Food Association.—Reuters

Magician Messi extols retiring sorcerer Aimar

BUENOS AIRES, 17 July — Lionel Messi assumed one of his idols, Pablo Aimar, the playmaker, who was Aimar’s team mate at the 2006 World Cup in Germany and 2007 Copa America in Venezuela where Argentina reached the final.

Messi has often said that the former River Plate, Valencia, Benfica and Ar-gen-tina midfielder Aimar — who won 52 caps and scored eight goals — was a player he idolised as a child. Aimar announced that he was retiring from football having failed to make Riv-er’s squad for the last two rounds of the Libertadores Cup.

The playmaker, who was nicknamed ‘Payaso’, meaning clown, because he always wore a smile, returned home last year hoping for one last flight at River. He had surgery on a nagging ankle problem in April, which restricted him to a couple of substitute appearances for the club in May.

The 35-year-old, who also played at the 2002 World Cup in South Ko-reao and Japan, complained this month that the pain remained and told coach Marcelo Gallardo, another former team mate, that he was retiring.

River are 90 minutes from a place in their fifth Libertadores final after a 2-0 home win over Guarani of Paraguay in the first leg of their semi-final on Tuesday. They are looking to win South America’s top club prize for the third time.—Reuters
‘Winner’ Ramos needed at Real Madrid, says Benitez

MELBOURNE, 17 July — Spain defender Sergio Ramos is not leaving Real Madrid and is an integral part of the La Liga giants’ plans, according to new coach Rafa Benitez.

Ramos has been linked to a move to Manchester United for a number of weeks, despite having two years left on his contract. According to Spanish media reports, Real have already rejected offers of over 28 million pounds ($43.77 million) from the Premier League club for the 29-year-old Ramos.

Benitez, who replaced sacked Italian Carlo Ancelotti after a trophy-less 2014-15 season, was reluctant to discuss transfer speculation but was forthright about the status of his seasoned central defender.

“In terms of Sergio Ramos, there’s a lot of talk about his situation,” Benitez told reporters in Melbourne on Friday. “For me, he is an enormous professional. In person, he applies himself, he does everything that the team and I ask of him.”

“And for me, the matter (is that) the president has already commented that he is staying with the club.”

“I have spoken to him at length in the summer about his ideas, about his future. I see Sergio as an integral part of our team, he’s a winner and that’s what we need in our team.”

United manager Louis van Gaal is seeking to shore up his club’s defence to help improve on last season’s fourth-place finish in the Premier League.

Benitez, who has been contracted at the world’s richest club for three seasons, has also declared Real must improve their defence after a season in which they surrendered both their Champions League title and domestic King’s Cup crown.

Offensively, Benitez has been grilled over how he intends to deploy Cristiano Ronaldo and Gareth Bale after reports the pair were unhappy about the positions they typically played under Ancelotti.

Benitez has tried a number of different lineups during training in Melbourne ahead of Real’s International Champions Cup opener against AS Roma on Saturday, fuelling speculation the Briton might play a more central role in the Spaniard’s attacking setup.

Managing the million-dollar egos in the dressing room will be one of Benitez’s most demanding tasks and the 55-year-old treaded gently when discussing his plans for the pair.

“Ronaldo, Bale, all of them are so good,” he said.

“All of them have an option... Ronaldo is a key player for us. Bale is a key.”—Reuters

Serena Williams withdraws from Swedish Open with elbow problems

STOCKHOLM, 17 July — Six-time Wimbledon champion Serena Williams pulled out of the Swedish Open on Thursday with an elbow injury.

The US star was due to play in the round of 16 but withdrew from the tournament shortly before the match, public broadcaster SVT reported.

“I am devastated, but I hope to be back some day,” Williams told SVT by the side of the court. Williams said she had to heed her medical team’s advice after a practice session on Thursday morning.

“It hurt when I hit the ball. I’ve had great problems with it so today when it didn’t feel good, the doctors said it would be best not make it worse,” said Williams. The 33-year-old claimed her sixth Wimbledon title at the weekend, leaving only the US Open on her path to a full Grand Slam in 2015. “I had problems with my elbow at Wimbledon and the French Open. Playing many matches makes it worse. But I’m positive I can continue my journey toward a real Grand Slam,” she said.—Xinhua

Everton’s Martinez backs winter World Cup in Qatar

SINGAPORE, 17 July — Everton manager Roberto Martinez has thrown his backing behind a winter World Cup in Qatar, believing the 2022 tournament should be embraced as a chance for the global game to bridge new boundaries.

Earlier this year, soccer’s world governing body FIFA reiterated on previous demands that the tournament would be held in summer, opting instead for a winter-December event to avoid matches kicking off in temperatures higher than 50 degrees Celsius.

“A World Cup in Qatar is an incredible experience for everyone concerned and I think we should embrace it,” the Spaniard told reporters in Singapore on Friday, a day ahead of Everton’s Premier League Asia Trophy final against Arsenal.

“Once that decision is made, it’s not good for us in football to keep going on about the negative aspect of playing it in winter. From my point of view, we need to enjoy it and adapt to whatever changes will come our way because of it.”

Martinez is an advocate of the change to new countries being embraced and the first-hand experience of Everton’s positive reception in Singapore has given him a firm belief that Qatar would be equally as accommodating given the right conditions.

“My thoughts on the World Cup are that you play it everywhere in the world, if the decision is to be given to Qatar then it is clear that the tournament must be played in winter.

“There’s no way you can play it in the summer. We were in Qatar not that long ago and they have all the facilities, so I don’t think it will be a problem to play the World Cup there.

“You could play the games in the summer because of the air conditioning in the stadiums but it would be very tough for the fans to enjoy a World Cup in the summer heat.”

Martinez also believes there is plenty of time for European clubs opposed to moving the tournament from its traditional summer timing to prepare the leagues and players for a winter tournament. “I don’t think it’s even up for debate, it has to be a winter World Cup and as a football manager and a football person you have to adapt towards it and we will do that,” he added.

“We will start making plans for it and get the players prepared to make sure they are ready for what is ahead of them.”

Blatter to attend World Cup draw in Russia, says Mutko

MOSCOW, 17 July — FIFA President Sepp Blatter will attend the 2018 World Cup’s preliminary draw in St Petersburg on 25 July, Russia’s Sports Minister Vitaly Mutko was quoted as saying on Thursday. “Sepp will be coming. He confirmed this to me yesterday. He will also meet with the President of Russia,” Mutko said in an interview with the newspaper Sport Express.

Blatter, 79, said on 2 June he would step down from his post after US and Swiss authorities widened their investigations into bribery and corruption at world soccer’s governing body.

Blatter has not been charged with any wrongdoing, Swiss authorities are also investigating the awarding of the 2018 and 2022 World Cups to Russia and Qatar respectively.—Reuters
