Yangon’s Secretariat opened on Martyrs’ Day, attracting thousands of visitors

By Aye Min Soe

YANGON, 19 July — The Secretariat, the colonial-era building in Yangon where Myanmar’s national hero General Aung San was assassinated in 1947 along with eight others, was opened to the public on Martyrs’ Day on Sunday, attracting thousands of people.

The building, which is more than 100 years old and currently being restored, was opened to visitors for only the second time in decades on the occasion of the anniversary.

The visitors got a rare chance to look inside the very room where gunfire burst in and shot General Aung San dead as he held a meeting with other cabinet ministers on 19 July, 1947. Five minutes before the exact time of the assassination, the dispersed visitors gathered on a lawn facing the western wing of the building where General Aung San and the cabinet ministers were gunned down 68 years ago and paid tribute to the fallen martyrs at 10:37 am. Some stood in silence at the place where they arrived in the Secretariat, bowing their heads, to pay tribute to the fallen leaders. Some shed tears during the one-minute silence, throughout which a siren rang out over the premises as those present paused to remember the nine fallen national heroes.

Afterwards, the visitors broke up into groups and entered the building intent on finding the room where the tragedy occurred.

About 10 minutes later, the corridor outside the room was thronged with visitors. A guard stationed by the company which is carrying out the conservation of the room stated that the corridor outside the room is now a prayer area, with much of the area devoted to a Buddhist shrine. A portrait of uniformed General Aung San is seen on top of a blue-painted cupboard, alongside three small vases of flowers. The floor and walls have been replaced with modern parquet.

“There have the table and chairs gone?” said U Thein Win, 48. “The reason why we want to come here is to see original and final moments of our martyrs.” He had come from the western outskirts of Yangon along with his family, imagining that the table and chairs would still be in the room along with bullet holes in the wall.

Showing a picture of the room complete with tables and chairs before the time of the assassination to visitors outside the room, a middle-age man was explaining to visitors the seating arrangements in the final moments of the meeting 68 years ago.

Some young visitors speculated that the room which everyone was attempting to view had been turned into a shrine and that the room where the assassination actually happened was somewhere else.

Elsewhere, a group of middle-aged people were arguing over the route used by the gunmen to access the meeting room. Meanwhile, the crowd continued to throng to the door to see the room through the glass and to take pictures.

“In the history our country, an event which no one will ever happen in this room. But, how can I clarify to our younger generation that our leaders were assassinated in this room?” said Thet Win.

Taiwan firms eye Myanmar for auto parts, machinery, electronics

By Ye Myint

YANGON, 19 July — Taiwanese companies are preparing for a trade show in Yangon showcasing Myanmar’s market potential for auto parts, machinery and electrical equipment, an organizer of the event said Saturday.

The three-in-one trade show aims to bring together firms from Taiwan, Myanmar and a host of other countries, Ms Rachanchee Su from Taipei World Trade Centre Co., Ltd told The Global New Light of Myanmar.

“Since Myanmar is the growth hub of Asia and tipped to become the factory nation of the world, the country must embrace advanced industry and know-how to get there,” she said.

According to the TWTC, the number of Taiwan companies in Myanmar has doubled in the last three years to 300. Many are building factories here. Ms Rachanchee Su said.

TWTC Chairman Mr Francis Kuo-Hsin Liang said Myanmar-Taiwan trade grew 20 percent last year to reach U.S. $322 million.

“With the opening of Myanmar’s Taipei Trade Office last month, we believe these three exhibitions will further enhance our friendship and trade,” he said.

Ms Rachanchee Su estimated more than $300 million in Taiwanese capital has been invested in Myanmar.

Mr Michael Yeoh, director of the Taiwan Trade Centre Yangon, said one-on-one meetings established via the event were likely to generate more than $24 million in business.

The trade show, encompassing three exhibitions — Auto Expo Myanmar 2015, Myanmar International Machine Tool & Automation Exhibition 2015, and Power Myanmar 2015 — will run for four days at Myanmar Event Park from 22 July.— GNLM

Hospital to get new building to cope with growing number of infants

By Khaing Thanda Lwin

YANGON, 19 July — A two-story building is being constructed within the compound of Yangon’s Central Women’s Hospital with the aim of providing better healthcare to newborns, according to an official of the hospital.

Prof Dr Daw Aye Aye Thein of CWH said, “The Neonatal Intensive-care Unit of the hospital is facing difficulties in receiving newborn infants as it does not have enough space.”

In order to alleviate this problem, a local well-wisher donated funds for construction of the building in a vacant lot in front of the Unit, she told The Global New Light of Myanmar on Sunday.

Construction of the building got underway in June this year and is expected to finish at the end of December, Prof Dr Daw Aye Aye Thein said, adding that the health ministry has pledged to contribute funds for its construction if there is a funding shortfall.

“We normally receive 50-60 infants and sometimes 70-80 babies at the Neonatal Intensive-care Unit, which was established in mid-2014”, she said.

At present, there are around 70 infants and more than 600 mothers at the CWH, which was provided a wide range of medicines free of charge since the government increased its funding two years ago.

Despite assistance from the government and NGOs, the hospital is in need of medical equipment such as ultrasound and cardiotocography (CTG) due to the growing number of hospitalized pregnant women, a hospital official said at a donation ceremony in June.

The hospital is also facing an unbalanced ratio of health care providers to patients, a hospital official said.

Crowds throng General Aung San Museum

By Ko Moe

YANGON, 19 July — The General Aung San Museum in Bahan township here was packed with enthusiasts on Sunday, Martyrs’ Day, which has entered its 68th anniversary. Tens of hundreds of visitors including students and monks went on a study tour at the museum, a place where General Aung San lived with his family before being assassinated.

“I’m a man but today I’m in tears,” said Ko Wunna, a regular visitor to the museum on every anniversary of the celebration of Martyrs’ Day, adding that he also paid tribute to the fallen heroes at Martyrs’ Mausoleum.

On display at the museum are the library, the dining room, the bedroom and the car the national leader used. Daw Dhammatheri, aged 78, a Buddhist nun from a town in Bago Division, said that it was her first tribute ever paid at the mausoleum.

“I’m not feeling well, but I have never been to the mausoleum and so I have always wanted to pay tribute to the martyrs assassinated by treacherous persons at least once.”

The General Aung San Museum is kept open to the public except Monday and national holidays. Similarly, crowds thronged parks with the Statue of General Aung San.

Anti-Abe posters raised across Japan in protest over security bills

TOKYO, 19 July — Posters bearing the message “We will not tolerate Abe’s politics” were raised on Saturday across Japan by a large number of organizations against controversial security bills that were forced through the lower house on Thursday.

Roughly 5,000 people rallied with the posters in front of the Diet building in Tokyo, according to organizers. The nationwide protest activity was launched by writer Hisea Sawachi, journalist Shuntaro Torigoe and other celebrities.

“Many people felt repulsion at the way the premier handled (the bills) but don’t know what to do,” said Torigoe, referring to the bills being rammed through the House of Representatives by the ruling coalition led by Abe’s Liberal Democratic Party.

“We’d like to unite our hearts by this message,” he said. The bills would allow Japan to exercise the right to collective self-defense, or coming to the aid of the United States or other friendly nations under armed attack even if Japan itself is not attacked. If enacted, the legislation would mark a major shift in Japan’s post-World War II exclusively defense-orientated security policy.

At a demonstration in Sapporo on Japan’s northernmost island Hokkaido, the posters were put up on its windows. “I’m afraid (Japan’s) participation in a war will become an accomplished fact while people are not aware of it, and a mood where nobody can raise voices prevails,” said 35-year-old Shizuka Ueda, an employee of the store, which has held study sessions about the security legislation two or three times a week since late May.

Amid a drizzle in Nagoya’s Hashima Prefecture, hit hard by the 2011 earthquake and tsunami, 15 people including survivors of the disaster gathered. “I’ll never forgive politics that will threaten the lives of the Self-Defense Forces members who provided support following the disaster,” said a 27-year-old woman, SMI’s Martini said. “A simple, but the consequence of such a decision might seem simple, but the consequence can be a delay multiplier.”

The posters were also raised in Okinawa, home to the bulk of US military bases in Japan. In front of the US Marine Corps’ Camp Schwab near the coast of Okinawa in Nago, where the Japanese government plans to build a replacement facility for Marines’ Futenma Air Station, Katuko Furugen, a 51-year-old company employee, said Abe’s “high-handed” handling of the security bills is the same as the central government’s stance to force Okinawa to host the bases.

Indonesian infrastructure promises derailed by bureaucrats

JAKARTA, 19 July — Investors hoping for President Joko Widodo to speed work on Indonesia’s infrastructure projects have been disappointed, with a plan for a $2-billion airport railway line in the capital falling apart after the delay of at least two years, according to a report.

The airport railway line, designed to cut the travel time to one of the world’s busiest airports to 30 minutes from as much as three hours, has suffered a delay of at least two years in construction.

Officials have locked horns over its route and how to fund it, but in the absence of significant government support, it hardly offers private investors a worthwhile return.

“The project is indeed proceeding at a slow pace,” said a senior government official. “Unless Hiroshima bombs are dropped, the route must be derailed, most of the building’s bris of the building, located in a village in southern Jakarta, Indonesia on 7 July, 2015 is seen in this photo taken by Antara Foto. —Reuters

Martyrs’ Day lessons: No more stooges

By Kyaw Thura

Leadership is generally defined as an art of inspiring people to realize a particular development goal in an effective and efficient way. This highlights that a good leader is all that matters most to a developing country like Myanmar.

In this competitive world, especially in this age of globalization, our country is in urgent need of good and gifted leaders with the calibre somewhat comparable to that of the murdered martyrs.

On 19 July 68 years ago, the people from all walks of life were saddened and shocked by the news that General Aung San and eight others had been assassinated by a gang of armed thugs. The fateful event has since caused the country to suffer a vicious spiral of unstable politics and sluggish economy.

The motive behind the assassination was allegedly due to the colonialists coveting the country’s great wealth of natural resources and certain stooges wanting to seize power through unscrupulous methods.

Just as a happy ending never follows a negative action, the conspirators had to be under sentence of death. Worse, their dirty acts did shed a shadow of shame on their families for some years.

The important thing for all of us is to discourage such an atrocity from happening again by nipping such a plot in the bud. Yet, the best we can hope for is no more stooges that would deprive our country of good and capable leaders.

Significant terms and their meanings in International Law and Diplomacy

UKHIN MAUNG (A retired diplomat)

Please allow me, first, to present to you the significant terms and their meaning in international law, although international law and diplomacy are closely connected and collaborated. Why? Simply because “diplomatic relations between states are established by friendly contacts of any form between governments”. And when talking about states, states are the political entities which fulfill the essential ingredients to gain recognition as a state by other states. To achieve the status of a state, a state must have the following qualifications:

(a) A permanent population.
(b) A well-defined territory.
(c) Government with sovereignty and independence.
(d) Capacity to perform international obligations.
(e) Capacity to enter into relations with other states.

In essence, to achieve the status of a state, a state must have fulfilled all the essential ingredients, as prescribed by international law so as to become a member in the family of nations or in other words, eligible to become a member in the United Nations Organization. And all states, rich or poor, big or small are equal under international law.

Myanmar, our homeland, is not a big state. And yet, Myanmar has made history by formulating historic principles jointly with the two big neighbours, namely China and India. These principles are the Five Principles of Peaceful Coexistence. If my memory serves me correct, these principles were formulated and propagated by Myanmar, China and India in 1954, when the cold war between the two super-powers, the United States of America representing the capitalist bloc, and Soviet Union representing the communist bloc, was at its height and climax. Our present government celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of proclamation of these five principles of peaceful coexistence in 2014. These “Five Principles of Peaceful Coexistence” are reproduced as follows:

1. Mutual respect for each other’s territorial integrity and sovereignty.
2. Mutual non-aggression.
3. Mutual non-interference in each other’s internal affairs.
4. Equality and mutual benefit.
5. Peaceful co-existence and peaceful settlement of disputes.

(1) Accession is a noun of verb “accede” meaning to agree or consent to enter a treaty or accord. It is the absolute or conditional acceptance by one or several nations of a treaty, already concluded between other sovereign states.

(2) Accord: (n/accord); (n/accordata: (n)
Each term means an amicable agreement between parties, especially between people or nations. Each term also means compact or treaty. “Accord” means a treaty of peace signed between two or more states.

(3) Accredit (v)
Accredite is to supply credentials or authority, authorize. It also means to appoint as an ambassador to a foreign government.

Accredited is a word meaning officially giving the authority to represent a government in another country.

(4) Act of God: (n): force majeure (Fr); (n): Vis major (Lat): (n)
Act of God is a common English phrase used in legal writing, referring usually to the destruction caused by forces of nature – like storm, earthquake, tornado, flood, lightning or a forest fire due to natural causes, or which either the arrival or the force, could not have been foreseen or guarded against.

Force majeure is a French equivalent and means literally “a superior force” denoting an event or effect that can be neither anticipated nor controlled. Vis major is Latin equivalent.

(5) Acquiesce: (n/accusee)
Acquiesce means to consent or comply passively or without protest. It is the indication of agreement or consent by permitting things to be done or claims to be made without objection.

(6) Ad hoc: (Latin): (n)
Ad hoc is a term meaning “for the specific purpose, for the specific case, for the specific situation at hand”: e.g. ad hoc committee to address the issue of salaries; an ad hoc compensation committee.

(7) Ad infinitum: (Latin): (adv & adv)

Water released to prevent damage of reservoirs across the country

NAY PYI TAW, 19 July — Officials from the Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation are releasing water from 12 dams and reservoirs across the country to prevent damage of these irrigation facilities with increasing levels of water caused by torrential rains in recent days.

The officials are monitoring the situation, the locals have been evacuated to safe havens to minimize any risk of life and property.

Due to heavy rains beginning on 15 July, a total of 36,689 acres of summer paddy and 3,147 acres of monsoon paddy have been flooded on Saturday, according to the official figures of the ministry.

Floods caused damage to bridges and roads in Kayin, Kyunhla and Kanbalu townships, Sagaing Region, as of 16 July, but water level began to ebb on 19 July, said a local in Kyunhla Township.

Water level at Minmyin Dam in Kanbalu Township reached 69.30 feet due to 7.83 inches of rainfalls. Therefore, the dam drained out water from the spillway. The release of water from this dam to prevent damage has inundated some nearby areas. On Sunday, the water level at the dam down to 688.60 feet. Chief Minister of Sagaing Region U Tha Aye and officials inspected evacuation tasks of Tatmadawmen and provided foods to them.

Volunteers evacuated flood victims to monasteries and schools. While local authorities and social organizations donated foods and bottles of purified drinking water to the victims, medical teams of Township Public Health Department gave health care services to the victims. Mandalay-Myitkyina trains suspended transportation.

In Shwebo and Katha Districts, local authorities opened relief camps for flood victims and provided foods, clothes and drinking water to them.

Tatmadaw, BGF combs KKO of Kawkareik area

NAY PYI TAW, 19 July — Members of the Tatmadaw and the BGF combed hills on the east and west of Kaungmu village in Kawkareik Township from 15 to 17 July for remnants of KKO groups led by Saw San Aung and Kyaw Thet.

During the two days, members of the Tatmadaw and the BGF encountered the ethnic groups in a fighting, seizing four assorted weapons, 26 bombs, 32 land mines, 3,866 rounds of bullets, 81 magazines, 44 rice bags and ammunition and a motorcycle.

Members of the Tatmadaw also seized four assorted weapons, 32 rounds of bullets, a walkie-talkie and two unlicensed vehicles in a house in Kyunywa (West) Ward in Kayinmaraw on 15 July.

On 18 July, members of the Tatmadaw and the BGF continued combing the areas near Kaungmu village and seized 66 bombs, one communication tower, five solar panels and seven assorted weapons, 31 magazines, 18 land mines, two RPGs, 180 rounds of bullets and 70 rice bags.

Beijing launches app for handling minor traffic accidents

Beijing, 19 July — Starting in August, Beijing will promote the use of an app on smartphones to handle minor traffic accidents in an effort to reduce traffic jams.

The Beijing Insurance Regulatory Commission said on Sunday that 172 traffic accidents were resolved via the trial version of the app, which was put in use on 13 May in some areas of the city, triggering protests across the Self-Defense Forces’ role, and constitutional scholars argue such an operation would violate the Constitution. Diet deliberations on the bills follow a landmark Cabinet decision in July last year that reinterpreted the Constitution to allow Japan to exercise the right to collective self-defence.

LDP deputy chief defends security bills amid falling public support

Tokyo, 19 July — The ruling Liberal Democratic Party’s deputy chief on Sunday defended the government’s recent move to ram controversial security bills through the all-important lower house by the LDP majority, despite a consequent drop in support for the Cabinet of Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and his party, as measured in a recent poll conducted on Thursday by the national broadcaster NHK.

The note released by police, who confirmed the writing, said there was no spying whatsoever against domestic citizens or related to elections. “I believe excessive zeal for work has created this situation,” the agent, whose identity or rank in the intelligence service was not disclosed, said in the note.

The case comes after a rare public admission last week by the agency that it had purchased a spyware from an Italian firm used to eavesdrop mobile phone and computer communications but it was intended for research or for use against foreign targets.

The revelation marks the latest in a series of scandals on the intelligence service that has struggled to shed the image of a political tool of siting presidents and to reform to focus more on counter espionage against North Korea.

A former spy chief under President Park Geun-hye’s predecessor is being tried for trying to influence the election that brought the conservative leader to power. Park denied benefiting from attempts by NIS agents to sway voters but said another scandal at the intelligence agency may suggest that more could be done to reform it. Park’s father, Park Chung-hee, was assassinated in 1979 by the right-wing head of the agency’s precursor at the peak of a power struggle that involved the late president’s close aides.

S Korea spy found dead with note denying agency targeted citizens

Seoul, 19 July — A South Korean intelligence agent found dead in an apparent suicide left a note denying his team had used spyware to tap the mobile phones and computers of private citizens in the latest scandal involving the spy agency.

Police in the suburban district of Yongin south of Seoul said on Sunday that a 46-year-old man found dead in his car on an apparent carbon monoxide poisoning was an employee of the National Intelligence Service (NIS).

The note released by police, who confirmed the writing, said there was no spying whatsoever against domestic citizens or related to elections. “I believe excessive zeal for work has created this situation,” the agent, whose identity or rank in the intelligence service was not disclosed, said in the note.

Train service disruption affects 320,000 passengers in western Japan

Osaka, 19 July — West Japan Railway Co. said on Saturday that it has temporarily suspended services on its 14 train lines after a powerful typhoon brought a more than permissible level of rainfall, affecting 700 train runs and 320,000 passengers in Osaka and other parts of western Japan.

The operations were disrupted on the first day of a three-day weekend and also of summer holidays for many schools in Japan. The typhoon left western Japan early Saturday morning and became a tropical depression after making landfall in the region the previous day. The rain in central Osaka eased off by the morning.

But rain gages showed that the total rainfall from early Friday to Saturday exceeded the maximum allowable level for train operations. JR West said it is not able to resume operations until four hours after the rain stops and after it carries out safety checks according to its safety regulations.

It is rare to halt train services even after a typhoon has passed away. One of the 14 lines resumed service shortly before 9 a.m. on Monday.

“We apologize for causing trouble and would like to rework measures to take after a typhoon has passed,” a JR West official said.

Services at other railway companies operating in the same area were also disrupted on Saturday but operations of only few lines were suspended.

JR West said on Friday that it cancelled a total of 137 limited express train runs and totally or partially suspended local train services on its nine lines, affecting about 200,000 people. Late that night, about 1,600 passengers had been trapped on a JR West train for four hours after the train stopped near a station in Kyoto due to heavy rain.

Many passengers felt sick and some vomited. A total of 19 passengers were taken to hospital.
Greek banks to re-open Monday as Tsipras eyes new start

ATHENS, 19 July — The Greek government ordered banks to open on Monday, three weeks after they were shut down to prevent the system collapsing under a flood of withdrawals, as Prime Minister Alexis Tsipras looked to the start of new bailout talks next week.

The decree to re-open the banks came hours after new ministers were sworn in following a cabinet reshuffle in which Tsipras replaced dissident members of his ruling Syriza party following a revolt over the tough bailout terms.

In a move that marked a split with the main leftist faction in the ruling Syriza party, Tsipras sacked hardline former Energy Minister Panagiotis Lafazanis and two deputy ministers following a party rebellion in which 39 Syriza lawmakers withheld support from the government over the package.

Panos Skourletis, a close Tsipras ally who left the labour ministry to take over the vital energy portfolio, said the reshuffle marked “an adjustment by the government to a new reality”.

The first action of the new cabinet was to sign off on a decree to reopen banks on Monday with slightly more flexible withdrawal limits that allow a maximum of 420 euros a week in place of the strict limit of 60 euros a day currently in place.

But restrictions on transfers abroad and other capital controls remain in place. The move had been widely expected after the European Central Bank agreed to re-open the emergency credit lines which the tottering Greek banking sector needs to survive.

Tsipras now intends to seal the bailout accord with European partners over the next few weeks before like- new elections which Interior Minister Nikos Voutsis said this week could happen in September or October.

“Our aim is to negotiate hard for the terms of the agreement, not just to seal it, but on how it will be implemented. There are many vague terms in the text,” said newly-appointed Labour Minister George Katrougalos.

He said the government, elected in January on an anti-austerity platform, would fight for an agreement that was “socially just” and dismissed suggestions that it would have to take on the powerful labour unions and risk street protests. “The Left is with demonstrations. The Left wants the people on the streets,” he said.

The deal, approved with the support of opposition parties on Thursday after 39 Syriza rebels withdrew their backing, agrees on the decision to spend extra and pension cuts as well as a rollback of collective bargaining agreements.

But the addition, 50 billion euros (32 billion pounds) in public assets are to be placed in a special privatisation fund as collateral for loans of up to 86 billion euros that must be agreed with European partners.

Acceptance of the tough bailout terms marked a turnaround for Tsipras after months of acrimonious talks and a referendum that resoundingly rejected a less stringent deal proposed by the lenders. But opinion polls suggest the prime minister’s popularity remains high.

A poll published on Saturday in the leftwing Efimerida Ton Synedrion newspaper suggested Syriza would get 42.5 percent of the vote if an election were held now, double conservative New Democracy’s 21.5 percent.

In addition, 70 percent said they would prefer to accept the bailout deal if it kept Greece in the euro.

Belgrade, 19 July — Serbian War Crimes Prosecutor Vladimir Vukcevic said on Saturday that important changes were made to the team of prosecutors and judicial officers conducting the probe into the murder of brothers Bitici in July 1999, as persons suspected of leaking information to potential suspects were excluded from the investigation.

Based on our information, some of the team members gave away information to persons of interest, Vukcevic told Tanjug News Agency.

The prosecutor welcomed the decision of Serbian Prime Minister Aleksandar Vucic to abandon the idea of setting up an independent commission to establish the truth about the murder of the Bitici brothers, stressing that the investigation should be left to professionals.

According to Vukcevic, the changes to the prosecution team are also important, considering that certain police officers leaked information to the suspects.

However, the prosecutor warns that the investigation needs to proceed in a professional manner.

Veteran activists urge citizens to think, act for democracy

Tokyo, 19 July — Three veteran grassroots campaigners from Japan’s pacifist movement shared a half-century of experiences with college students recently against a backdrop of protests over the government’s policy of lifting constitutional constraints on Japanese forces.

During a symposium at Keio University in Tokyo, Shinobu Yoshioka, Taketomo Takahashi and Yuko Yamaguchi recounted their involvement in the anti-Vietnam War campaign and other civil movements since the 1960s.

“While Japan was getting excited over the 1964 Tokyo Olympic Games, war was raging in a corner of Asia and the US started bombing North Vietnam in 1965,” Yoshioka, a popular nonfiction writer, said. “As junior and senior high school students at the time, we felt frustrated because we did not have any means to express our views.”

It was after entering Waseda University in Tokyo that Yoshioka joined the Japan “Peace for Vietnam!” Committee, known by its Japanese acronym “Beheiren”.

Involved in Beheiren’s secret operation to provide shelter to US deserters and help them escape from Japan to third countries, Yoshioka said, “It was quite interesting to hang around with US soldiers of my generation and meet with their supporters for more interesting than attending college classes, so I dropped out.”

Countless people all over Japan allowed deserters to stay at their homes or provided them with food, without making their involvement public.

Takahashi took charge of the operation after quitting his post as an associate French literature professor at Rikkyo University in Tokyo.

He learned how to forge passports in Paris with the assistance of underground groups and provided doctored passports to two deserters so they could leave Japan between 1964 and 1971.

“I joined Beheiren as a common man without titles and affiliations,” Takahashi said. “This behavioural principle has been handed down to those involved in current grassroots campaigns. I think it is one of the most historically significant legacies of Beheiren.”

Takahashi now serves as chief of Waseda-ura, an intertwine association which collects and displays mementos left behind by conscripts, mostly college students, who died in battle.

“It is illegal to forge passports to help deserters, but I believe it was the right thing to do as only through acting illegally could we save them (from the military service),” he said.

Beheiren started in April 1965, when around 1,500 people led by the late Makoto Oda, an influential writer, and other young intellectuals staged a street demonstration in downtown Tokyo in protest against the Vietnam War.

When Beheiren was active campaigning against the war, Yamaguchi was studying in the United States after completing a doctorate in physics at the University of Tokyo on the path to becoming a researcher.

After returning to Japan, however, he was involved in campaigns to stop the shipment of tanks from a US military logistics facility near Tokyo to Vietnam and in support of farmers whose lands were to be seized to build Narita International Airport.

As a physicist, he also grappled with a personal dilemma, namely, that it had been physicists who had developed the atomic bomb. “Looking back on my academic career, I was taught the logic of science and technology, but not the ethics.” His experiences as a scientist and civil activist made it difficult for him “to live as a pure expert,” he said. He is now a co-representative of the Citizens’ Nuclear Information Centre, a nonprofit organization that is working to create a society that does not rely on nuclear power.

Emphasizing that the 2011 nuclear disaster at the Fukushima Daiichi complex shows that nuclear power is a technology “that is founded on the sacrifice of ordinary people,” Yamaguchi said, “We need to have the attitude to question government policies and to make satisfactory choices for ourselves. We no longer live in an era where we can rely on experts to make decisions on important issues.”

The symposium was organized by Professor Koichi Takaku-usagi to commemorate Yuichi Yoshikawa, former secretary general of Beheiren, who died of heart failure on 28 May aged 84. Yoshikawa was active in various pacifist movements until his death.

Given the steamingroll through the House of Representatives of controversial security bills that expand the role of the Self-Defence Forces overseas, Takaku-usagi said it is difficult to stop the oppressive politics carried out in parliament by the ruling majority, but that democracy exists outside parliament, too.

“Mr Yoshikawa as well as the three panelists — Mrs Yoshioka, Mr Takahashi and Mrs Yamaguchi — were at the center of the civil movements in the 1960s and 1970s, when people rose up in the belief that they could not leave democratic politics up to parliament,” Takaku-usagi said. “They indicated that it is important that each of us think and act to maintain and enhance democracy.”

Crash victims’ families reject Germanwings compensation offer

FRANKFURT, 19 July — Some of the close relatives of those killed in the Germanwings plane crash in March have rejected the carrier’s offer of 25,000 euros (17,304 pounds) in compensation payments for their pain and suffering.

A lawyer representing some of the German victims, Elmar Giemulla, said on Saturday he had notified Germanwings earlier this week in a letter that the offer was inadequate. He added a low six-digit amount would be adequate compensation.

Germanwings, a unit of Lufthansa (LHAG.DE), was not immediately available to comment outside usual business hours.

Evidence shows co-pilot Andreas Lubitz locked the cockpit of Germanwings flight 4U 9525 from Barcelona to Duesseldorf and deliberately steered the plane into a remote mountainside, killing all 150 onboard.

The 25,000-euro offer is on top of 50,000 euros already paid as immediate financial assistance to relatives. German law does not usually provide for a separate award for pain and suffering, unlike in the United States.

The proposed payout for emotional distress would be made to parents, widowed spouses, partners and children of the victims and does not require proof of damages incurred in order for it to be made, Germanwings said in June.

Relatives living in Germany may also claim an additional 10,000 euros each as compensation for any health problems without needing to offer formal proof, the company said.

Families of the victims still have the right to make further claims for other financial costs, such as burial costs or lost pensions, although this will require proof of damages incurred.

Japanese fishing boat captured by Russian authorities

Kushino, Japan, 19 July — A Japanese salmon and trout fishing boat from Hokkaido was seized by Russian authorities on Friday for breaching the fishing quota, the Hokkaido government said on Saturday.

Masato Ito, the captain of the 29-ton boat Hokkara, and 10 crew members are unimpressed, added. The Japanese Foreign Ministry asked the Russian Embassy in Japan to return the vessel and release the crew members at an early date.

According to a local fisheries cooperative in the town of Toya in Hokkaido, the drift-net fishing boat left a fishing port in Nemuro, eastern Hokkaido, on 6 July for Russia’s exclusive economic zone.

After completing the fishing, the boat was checked by Russian authorities at around 6:50 pm Friday and found to have exceeded the quota by 472 kilograms, the cooperative said.

The boat was originally scheduled to return to Nemuro on Saturday morning.

Rusian authorities may take the boat to Kushashi — one of the Russian-controlled islands claimed by Japan — northeast of Nemuro, the Hokkaido government said.

As Russia is set to ban drift-net fishing in its economic waters from January to conserve natural resources, Japanese salmon and trout fishing through that method is expected to be terminated in the sea area later this month. — Kyodo News

Two high-ranking Bolivian executives arrested for suspected corruption

La Paz, 19 July — Bolivian Football Federation’s (FBF) President Carlos Chavez and the Executive Secretary Alberto Lozada were arrested accused of corruption and in the coming hours both men will be put in front of a court, announced attorney general Ramiro Guerrero on Saturday.

“The decision has been taken to apprehend Carlos Chavez and Alberto Lozada for the existence of sufficient evidence” against the men. They can defend themselves from the cells against charges of aggravated fraud, Guerrero told journalists in the southern Bolivian city of Sucre. The arrests were made as part of an investigation carried out by the State Attorney General into alleged corruption in national soccer. The investigation came across a claim of aggravated fraud involving Chavez during a friendly match against Brazil. This latest accusation was what provoked the FBF president to be jailed alongside Lozada while awaiting a precautionary hearing.

Lozada is also part of CONMEBOL’s (the South American Football Confederation) disciplinary court and Chavez is the football entity’s treasurer.

The two football executives are facing charges of laundering illegal earnings, criminal organization, influence-peddling, fiscal offences and aggravated fraud with multiple victims, among others. “The work has been developed by the commission of attorneys and they are going to continue developing to arrive at the historical and material truth of the facts,” said Guerrero.

Since the investigation began on 1 June, 2015, almost 40 people have given statements including executives, former executives and club presidents. A large quantity of information has been gathered despite the FBF’s lack of cooperation on the matter. — Xinhua

NAGOYA, 19 July — Police on Sunday arrested a 17-year-old high school boy in the central Japan prefecture of Aichi for killing and robbing a man who was found lying in the street with more than 10 stab wounds last week.

The teen living in the city of Nishin admitted to killing Norimichi Kawai, 65, and taking his bag, according to the Aichi prefectural police.

The police believe that the boy and Kawai, who lived in the same city and was serving as the head of a local town association, were not known to each other. The boy emerged as a suspect after the police went over footage from surveillance cameras near a convenience store where the victim stopped shortly before he was found bleeding on the street on the night of 12 July.

The teen, whose name is being withheld because he is minor, is suspected of stabbing Kawamura several times with a knife and stealing his bag containing some 6,000 yen ($48), the police said.

The boy told the police he threw away Kawamura’s bag near the scene of the crime. The police found the bag on Saturday, but the murder weapon has not been found. — Kyodo News

China's single-day box office hits record high of 400 mln yuan

BEIJING, 19 July — China's total box office sales surpassed 400 million yuan (about 64.4 million US dollars) on Saturday, a record for a single day, data from the State Administration of Press, Publication, Radio, Film and Television (SARFT) revealed on Sunday.

The biggest contributor was domestic fantasy-comedy “Monster Hunt,” which brought in 180 million yuan on Saturday. “Jian Bing Man,” a domestic comedy that tells the story of an actor’s experience in the film industry, came in second, grossing 149 million yuan.

“Monkey King: Hero is Back,” the 3D animated adaptation of the classical epic “A Journey to the West,” took in 62 million yuan to be the third biggest contributor on the day.

Total ticket sales on Saturday broke the 383-million-yuan record made on 12 April, when “Fast and Furious 7” opened on Chinese screens. — Xinhua

Bill Cosby testified he was adept at picking up on romantic cues: New York Times

Black Eyed Peas returns with new single

LOS ANGELES, 19 July — American hip hop group Black Eyed Peas has returned with their new single “Yesterday” sans Fergie on the 20th anniversary of their debut.

will.i.am, apl.de.ap and Taboo pay tribute to their hip-hop roots by referencing some old school records including NWA’s “Straight Outta Compton”, Wu-Tang Clan’s “Killa Bees” and Beastie Boys’ “Paul Revere”, reported Ace Showbiz.

The music video features will.i.am, apl.de.ap and Taboo in a record store, promoting the vinyl for sale. As they select some classic hip-hop album covers, they recreate the artwork almost by magic.

“We’re paying homage to the folks that inspired Black Eyed Peas. The video is a visual version of (the song),” will.i.am said.

“Yesterday” is the first new song to be released in five years since their last album The Beginning. Black Eyed Peas will release their new album later this year. — PTI

LONDON, 19 July — Thousands of girls queued to audition in east London on Saturday for a chance to co-star in the planned Harry Potter spin-off movie “Fantastic Beasts and Where to Find Them.”

Some girls queued from as early as 3am (0200 GMT) for the auditions, having travelled from all over Britain to the ExCel exhibition centre in London’s Docklands, in the hope of entering JK Rowling’s world of magic in the eagerly anticipated film.

Movie group Warner Bros and the film makers are looking for a girl aged between eight and 12 to take on the role of Modesty, a character they describe as “a haunted young girl with an inner strength and stillness”.

Modesty also “has an ability to see deep into people and understand them.”

Eleven-year-old Holly said she had taken the audition seriously with a lot of preparation. “I really love Harry Potter, I love the magic and everything. It’s really imaginative.

And I love acting. Yeah, and I just kind of started to consider the character and, I like, almost put myself in her shoes.”

Ariana Grande calls US ‘greatest country in the world’

LOS ANGELES, 19 July — Pop star Ariana Grande declared her love for the US during her Florida concert days after issuing an apology for slamming the country.

She returned to the stage for the first time on Thursday, 16 July at the Amalie Arena in Tampa, Florida for the second-half of her “Honeymoon” tour.

In a video posted on YouTube by a fan, Grande could be heard saying to her fans during the show, “I’m so grateful to be here in Tampa! And I’m so, so grateful to be performing in the USA, the greatest country on the world! I love you guys so much.”

Last week, a video showing the 21-year-old “Problem” hitmaker licking an un-purchased donut and saying “I hate Americans I hate America.”

The ‘Love Me Harder’ singer released a public statement, clarifying that she was, in fact, proud to be an American while also condemning the way Americans eat.

But after that was also criticised, the Nickleodeon alum shared a sincere YouTube video, directly apologizing for her actions.
NASA scientist Claudia Alexander, last Galileo project manager, dies at 56

Los Angeles, 19 July — NASA scientist Claudia Alexander, who was a project manager for the Galileo spacecraft mission to Jupiter and worked on the European Space Agency’s Rosetta comet chaser, has died at age 56.

Alexander died on 11 July after a 10-year battle with breast cancer, NASA said. She left this week. The post did not say where she passed away.

“Claudia brought a rare combination of skills to her work as a space explorer,” Charles Elachi, director of NASA’s Jet Propulsion Lab in Pasadena, California, said in a written statement.

“Of course with a doctorate in plasma physics, her technical credentials were solid,” Elachi said. “But she also had a special understanding of how scientific discovery affects us all, and how our greatest achievements are the result of teamwork, which came easily to her.”

Born in Canada, Alexander moved at a young age with her family to California’s Silicon Valley, where she grew up.

She began working at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in 1986 when she joined the team behind the Galileo spacecraft, three years before it was launched on a mission to study Jupiter and the planet’s moons.

She later became the Galileo mission’s final project manager. In 2003, she oversaw the end of the spacecraft’s odyssey when Rosetta — the first spacecraft to orbit a comet’s nucleus and last year a lander from the Rosetta mothership made the first soft-landing on a comet.

She told the Los Angeles Times in an interview last year that, as an African-American woman in a field largely filled with white males, she was able to effectively act as a bridge between NASA and the European Space Agency. “I’m used to walking between two different cultures,” she told the newspaper. “For me, this is among the purposes of my life — to take us from states of ignorance to states of understanding with bold exploration that you can’t do every day.”—Reuters

LOS ANGELES, 19 July — From his classic 1967 Los Angeles pool scene “A Bigger Splash” to his interpretations of Yorkshire forests, British artist David Hockney has always injected the world around him with a vibrant palette, most recently in a study of perspectives.

“David Hockney: Painting and Photography,” opening this week at the LA Louver gallery in West Hollywood, features acrylic paintings and photographs that play with spatial effects and vanishing points.

“Thirty years ago, I did a Vogue for Paris using these ideas, but it’s only with digital (digital) that you can really take it, and I only just realized that two years ago,” Hockney, 78, told Reuters.

The 28 works in the collection were done by the artist over the past two years since he moved back to Los Angeles.

The paintings echo the photographic collages that were created using software to seamlessly blend hundreds of photos depicting people mingling and socializing in Hockney’s home studio, surrounded by tables, chairs and his artworks.

Technology has always played a key part in Hockney’s works, from his 1986 “Pearblossom Hwy,” a composite shot of a California highway created using hundreds of photographs of the scene, to a collection of iPad sketches of Yorkshire’s forestry, displayed in 2012’s “A Bigger Picture” exhibit in London.

“The technological change is enormous now, and people haven’t quite got it yet,” he said.

The Yorkshire-born artist, who said he mainly confines himself to his Hollywood Hills home due to his poor hearing, said he’s still inspired by Los Angeles, a city he first moved to in the 1960s that has influenced his vibrant colour palettes.

“The light here is marvelous, it’s a lot better than England,” he said. “I don’t go out much but there’s a reasonably sophisticated city down the hill.”

Hockney is one of Britain’s most influential artists, his work is hot commodity in art market. Earlier this year, his “Arranged Felled Trees” sold for 3.4 million pounds in London.

Hockney said he has found himself working more than ever now, painting his Los Angeles garden and portrait people — he has completed 65 works so far.

“They all sit in the same chair, they all just sit down and I let them sit down, and they all sit in different ways,” he said. “I’ve plenty to do working in portraits like this, I could go on for an awful long time.”—Reuters
Arsenal dazzle to Asia Trophy success over Everton

SINGAPORE, 19 July — A fall-strength Arsenal added another piece of silverware to their recent FA Cup success by beating Everton 3-1 in the final of the Premier League’s Asia Trophy on Saturday.

“I’m pleased with the performance. For long periods we played in a very convincing way and the way we want to play, together, good team play and everybody shared the same vision,” the Frenchman told reporters.

“Little bit (surprised) because yesterday we had quite a good strong session and I found the players a bit tired but they were quite sharp today.”

Walcott struck the opener in the 22nd minute, lashing home from outside the box following a neat lofted ball from the impressive Cazorla, who added a second in the 55th after some trademark quick feet and a low finish past Everton goalkeeper Joel Robles.

Arsenal, who beat a Singapore Select XI 4-0 on Wednesday with a youthful line-up, then turned the screws with Cazorla orchestrating a third for Ozil four minutes later as Everton wilted in the hot and humid conditions at Singapore’s National Stadium.

Everton’s best spell came in the first half where they were unfortunate to be denied an equaliser four minutes before halftime when Arouna Kone’s shot deflected off Gareth Barry and into the Arsenal net but was ruled out for offside.

New signing Cech produced a brilliant finger tip save from a Steven Naismith header before Kone smashed home the disallowed effort and also produced a strong save in the second period to deny Luke Garbutt’s long range drive.

The tall Czech’s arrival after 11-trophy laden years at Chelsea has sparked hope among the club’s supporters of a first Premier League title since 2004 and his every touch was loudly cheered by the majority of the 52,107 in attendance.

He looked set for a first clean sheet before Everton substitute Ross Barkley beat him with an emphatic 75th minute consolation.

Manchester City were the last winners of the biennial Asia Trophy in Hong Kong and went on to win the Premier League the following season, a fact which brought a smile when pointed out to Wenger.

“If it was as simple as that everybody would like to play the Asian Trophy every year,” he joked.

“I’m long enough in the job to know that it depends on the quality of our performances but it’s good to increase the level of confidence with performances like that.”

Stoke, beaten by Everton on a penalty shootout on Wednesday, day, beating the hosts 2-0 in Saturday’s third-place playoff.

Murray brothers carry Britain to brink of Davis Cup semi-final

LONDON, 19 July — Brothers Andy and Jamie Murray carried Britain to the brink of a Davis Cup semi-final berth after they beat France in the doubles rubber to take a 2-1 lead ahead of Sunday’s reverse singles.

Andy shrugged off a hip injury following a tumble on the slick grass as the Murray brothers registered a 4-6, 6-3, 7-6(5), 6-1 victory over Jo-Wilfried Tsonga and Nicolas Mahut at a sun-kissed Queen’s Club in west London.

There had been some doubts whether the picturesque venue, renowned for being prim and proper, was the correct choice for hosting a Davis Cup tie.

A nervous tension was off the pace at the opening set and surrendered the early lead but, thereafter, were dominant and completed victory when Jamie smashed past his stranded opponents.

“I thought both of us served well apart from the first game when I was broken I don’t believe they had any break point until Jamie’s last service game,” a fired up Andy told the BBC.

Andy received treatment to his groin and hip following a slip during the third set but the double grand slam champion said he should be fit to compete in Sunday’s singles.

“I’ll get patched up and hopefully put on another good performance. They have such a strong team and I’ll need to play great tennis to win.”

US bumps Canada from top of Pan Am medals table

TORONTO, 19 July — The United States finally nudged Canada from top spot on the Pan American Games medal table on a sweltering on Saturday that saw scorching conditions and sizzling performances.

As temperatures climbed into mid-30s Celsius (95 Fahrenheit) and officials issued a heat alert the red-hot Americans were piling up podiums across the city.

Laura Zeng, 15, won the rhythmic gymnastics all-around, 2012 Olympic champion Kim Rhode struck gold in the women’s skeet, Khattat Lornig hitting the bulls eye in women’s individual archery and Paige Railey sailed away with gold in the women’s laser radar.

But it was American swimmers who made the biggest splash, snatching three of six gold medals on offer on the last day of competition in the pool.

Caitlin Leverenz and Sierra Williams who made the biggest splash, snatching three of six gold medals on offer on the last day of competition in the pool.

Allison Schmitt, winner of gold in the 200m medley and 800m freestyle.

The United States was also on fire on the wrestling mat, getting gold from 2012 Olympic champion Jordan Burroughs in the 75kg weight class, Kyle Snyder in the 97kg division and Zack Rey in the 125kg.

The United States have dominated the Pan Ams, topping the medal standings at every Games since 1955 and winning over 2,000 more medals than the next closest nation Cuba.—Reuters
