Vice president calls for valley authority law

VICE PRESIDENT U Nyan Tun addressed the National Disaster Management Committee at a work co-ordination meeting yesterday in Nay Pyi Taw. The vice president serves as chairman of the committee.

“The Tennessee Valley, previously damaged by frequent floods, has now become a strong stimulus for American economic growth, as the US Congress has promulgated the Tennessee Valley Authority Act. Thanks to this act, an integrated valley development program has come into existence, with 54 dams and embankments supplying both water and electricity, in addition to the protection of hydrological environments,” he said.

He also cited the Yangtze River Water Conservancy as another example of how irrigation networks have contributed to the socio-economic development of a local populace, saying the project has contributed to China’s national development.

The vice president said the income earned from Yangtze Economic Zone constitutes 28 per cent of China’s GDP.

He also brought up the Murray River in Australia, the Rhine River in Germany, the Meuse River in France and the Scheldt River in the Netherlands, saying dams on the rivers have contributed to the prevention of natural disasters and the preservation of local ecosystems.

He stressed the need to promulgate a valley authority law in order to implement integrated water basin management, build flood controlling dams and embankments and strengthen environmental protection measures. — Myanma News Agency

Indonesia prepares rural flood defences to protect crops

JAKARTA — Indonesia is bolstering its rural flood defences to help farmers protect crops from monsoon waters and the La Niña weather pattern, its agriculture minister said yesterday.

Indonesia is a top producer of cocoa, palm oil and coffee, as well as a major importer of rice and raw sugar. It has forecast that the La Niña weather pattern will strengthen from mid-2016.

Any reduction in output of these crops could support global prices or lead to greater imports as domestic supplies dwindle in Southeast Asia’s biggest economy.

La Niña is a cooling of the tropical waters of the Pacific that is a counterpart to the El Niño weather event that is characterized by warmer waters.

Indonesia is repairing irrigation systems and installing water pumps in areas likely to be worst hit, such as East Java, Agriculture Minister Amran Sulaiman told reporters, adding that rice planting was also being accelerated.

“The La Niña (will) possibly occur in October,” Sulaiman added. “We’re preparing early in anticipation, just like last year when we made early preparations to face the drought.”

Sulaiman said discussions with state food procurement agency Bulog were underway over domestic rice buying but declined to comment on imports, adding that harvests may be delayed a little and that Bulog currently had stocks of 1.2 million tonnes.

Rice imports are a contentious issue in the country where President Joko Widodo is faced with fast-rising food prices but is also pursuing self-sufficiency to protect farmers.

Despite the self-sufficiency push, Indonesia expected to have imported 700,000 tonnes of rice from Viet Nam and Thailand by the end of 2015, a government official said last month.— Reuters

India’s paramilitary to deploy women commandos for anti-Naxal operations

NEW DELHI — Indian paramilitary Central Reserve Police Force (CRPF) has decided to deploy women commandos for anti-Naxalite operations.

According to Mishra, several companies from CRPF’s women battalions will be sent for pre-induction training and special tasks before final deployment.

Officials said there were specific reasons and operational benefits for deploying women combatants in Naxalite areas.

While women can interact with the local women folk which not only helps in gathering good intelligence, it also helps in bringing forces closer to the local villagers and captors, officials said.

North Korea says successfully conducts first H-bomb test

SEOUL — North Korea said it successfully tested a miniaturised hydrogen bomb yester- day, claiming a significant advance in the isolated state’s strike capability and setting off alarm bells in South Korea.

The test, the fourth time North Korea has exploded a nuclear device, was ordered by young leader Kim Jong Un, state media said.

“The first H-bomb test was successfully conducted at 10:00 (2030 ET) on Wednesday,” North Korea’s official KCNA news agency said.

Last month, Kim appeared to claim his country had developed a hydrogen bomb, also known as a thermonuclear device, a step up from the less powerful atomic bomb, but the United States and outside experts were sceptical at the time.

South Korean intelligence officials and several analysts questioned whether Wednesday’s explosion was indeed a full-fledged test of a hydrogen device.

The device had a yield of about 6 kilotons, according to the office of a South Korean lawmaker on the parliamentary intelligence committee — roughly the same size as the North’s last test, which was equivalent to 6-7 kilo- tons of TNT.

“Given the scale, it is hard to believe this is a real hydrogen bomb,” said Yang Uk, a senior researcher at the Korea Defence and Security Forum.

“They could have tested some middle stage kind (of device) between an A-bomb and H-bomb, but unless they come up with any clear evidence, it is difficult to trust their claim.”

Joe Cirincione, a nuclear expert who is president of Ploughshares Fund, a global security organisation, said North Korea may have mixed a hydrogen isotope in a normal atomic fission bomb.

“Because it is, in fact, hydro- gen, they could claim it is a hydro- gen bomb,” he said. “But it is not a true fusion bomb capable of the massive multi-megaton yields these bombs produce”.

The United States Geological Survey reported a 5.1 magnitude quake that South Korea said was 49 km (30 miles) from the Pung- gye-ri site where the North has conducted nuclear tests in the past.

North Korea’s last test, of an atomic device in 2013, also registered at 5.1 on the USGS scale.

The test nevertheless may mark an advance of North Korea’s nuclear technology. The claim of miniaturisation, which would allow the device to be adapted as a weapon and placed on a missile, would also pose a new threat to the United States and its regional allies, Japan and South Korea.

UN SECURITY COUNCIL

North Korea has been under UN Security Council sanctions since it first tested a nuclear device in 2006 and could face additional measures. The Security Council will meet later on Wednesday to discuss what steps it can take, diplomats said.

The White House said it could not confirm North Korea’s claims, but added the United States would respond appropriate- ly to provocations and defend its allies.

“North Korea’s nuclear test is a serious threat to our nation’s se- curity and we absolutely cannot tolerate it,” Abe told reporters.

“We strongly denounce it.”

South Korea said it would take “strong steps”, including possible United Nations sanctions, to ensure Pyongyang paid the price after its fourth nuclear test. The government said it would work closely with the international community to ensure that North Korea pays the commensurate price for the latest nuclear test.

President Park Geun-hye said in a statement. “We must respond de- cisively through measures such as strong international sanctions”.

The North’s state news agen- cy said it will not give up its nuclear programme as long as the United States maintains what it called “its stance of aggression”.

It called the device the “H-bomb of justice” and said: “The US is a gang of cruel robbers which has worked hard to bring even a nuclear disaster to the DPRK,” using the official acronym for North Korea.

However, the agency said Pyongyang will act as a responsi- ble nuclear state and vowed not to use its nuclear weapons unless its sovereignty is infringed. It said it will not transfer its nuclear capabil- ities to other parties. While a fourth nuclear test had been long expected, the timing of Wednesday’s explosion came as a sur- prise. The test is bound to ratchet up tensions between the isolated country and its neighbours as well as Washington. China, North Ko- rea’s main ally, has not commented on the test but is likely to be displeased at the increase in tensions in its neighbourhood. Chi- na’s Xinhua state news agency said the test ran counter to the goal of decentralisation and warned that any practice that disrupts sta- bility in northeast Asia is “unde- sirable and unwise” — Reuters
Malaysia Airlines resumes checked baggage on Europe routes

KUALA LUMPUR — Malaysia Airlines resumed normal check-in baggage allowances on all its flights yesterday after banning it temporarily due to strong head winds on the longer routes it was taking for safety reasons.

The airline said it has recently had to operate a longer route to Europe, which combined with strong head winds, limited the airlines’ ability to carry baggage and cargo.

The airline did not elaborate on the safety reasons behind its new flight paths to Europe but one of its airliners was shot down over rebel-held territory in eastern Ukraine in 2014 with the loss of all 298 people on board.

It banned check-in baggage on flights to Amsterdam and Paris operated by its Boeing 777 aircraft.

“Based on its current risk assessment, done on a daily basis, the airline is now able to take a shorter route on European flights,” the airline said in a statement.

All baggage is being shipped to affected customers in Europe, it added.

The airline suffered two disasters in 2014. In March that year, its flight MH370 carrying 239 passengers and crew disappeared while on a flight to China and is believed to have gone down in the Indian Ocean.—Reuters

Bangladesh court upholds death sentence for Islamist leader

DHAKA — Bangladesh’s Supreme Court upheld the death penalty for a top Islamist party leader yesterday for atrocities committed during the country’s war of independence from Pakistan more than four decades ago, a government lawyer said.

Four opposition politicians, including three leaders of the Islamist party, the Jamaat-e-Islami, have been convicted by a war crimes tribunal and executed since late 2013.

The executions have come amidst a rise in Islamist militant violence in Muslim-majority Bangladesh, with militant groups claiming the murder of two foreigners and four secular writers and a publisher last year.

The court rejected an appeal by Motiur Rahman Nizami, head of the Jamaat-e-Islami, who was sentenced to death in 2014 by the tribunal for genocide, rape and orchestrating the massacre of top intellectuals during the 1971 war.

“The court upheld the death sentence. We are happy with the verdict,” state prosecutor Syed Hafizur Rahman told Reuters.

Jamaat-e-Islami, which has said the charges against Nizami to be baseless, called for a nationwide strike on Thursday in protest.

Nizami, a former legislator and minister under opposition leader Khaleda Zia’s last term as prime minister, has been in jail since 2010 when he was charged with war crimes by the tribunal set up by Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina that year.

Islamists have denounced the tribunal as part of a politically motivated campaign aimed at weakening the leadership of Ja-maat-e-Islami, a key ally of the country’s main opposition party.

Nizami could be hanged within months unless the Supreme Court reviews his case again, or he is granted clemency by the president.

“My client will decide whether he will file a review petition,” chief defence prosecutor Khandker Mahbub Hossain told reporters.

The government has blamed the increase in Islamist violence on the Jamaat-e-Islami but the party denies any link to the militant attacks.—Reuters

Indonesia turns to China as ethnic Uighurs join would-be jihadis

JAKARTA — Indonesian authorities are working with their counterparts in China to stem a flow of ethnic Uighur militants seeking to join Islamist jihadists in the world’s most populous Muslim country, Indonesia’s counter-terrorism chief said.

Saud Usman Nasution’s comments come amid mounting concern in Indonesia about possible attacks by sympathisers of the Islamic State group and follows the arrest of 13 men across the island of Java, including a Muslim Uighur with a suicide-bomb vest.

The appearance among Indonesian militant networks of Uighurs, who come from the Xinjiang region in far-western China, is likely to add to Beijing’s concerns that exiles will return to their homeland as experienced and trained jihadis.

China says Islamist militants and separatists operate in energy-rich Xinjiang on the borders of central Asia, where violence has killed hundreds in recent years.

Rights groups say much of the unrest can be traced back to frustration at controls over the Uighurs’ culture and religion, and that most of those who leave are only fleeing repression not seeking to wage jihad. China denies repressing rights.

Nasution, who heads the National Counter-Terrorism Agency, told Reuters in an interview on Tuesday that several Uighurs had responded to a call last year by San-toso, Indonesia’s most high-profile backer of Islamic State, to join its band of fighters.

“We are cooperating with China and investigating evidence such as ATM cards and cell phones,” Nasution said, adding that an Indonesian team went to China to interview members of the man’s family, who would not confirm that they were related to him.

There was no immediate comment from China’s foreign ministry on whether Beijing is collabo-rating with Indonesia.

“As far as China is concerned, these people are running off, some of them taking part in jihad and planning to strike back,” said Pan Zhuping, a terrorism expert at the Xinjiang Academy of Social Sciences.

“Of course we must stop them. I believe, in terms of jointly guarding against extremism, it is necessary that we cooperate.”

Bilveer Singh of the Rajaratnam School of International Stud-ies in Singapore said the direct involvement of Chinese Uighurs in Southeast Asian militias added “an external dimension to the existing home-grown terrorist threat”.

“It could also complicate ties with a rising China, which may want to play a bigger counter-terrorism role in the region,” Singh said in a Eurasia Review article.

Indonesia’s security forces have given Santoso, who styles himself as the commander of the Islamic State army in Indonesia, until 9 January to surrender along with his force of about 40 men on the far-flung island of Sulawesi.

However, security analysts believe a larger threat is emerging across the populous island of Java as networks of support for Islamic State grow.—Reuters

Bee forces flight delay in Indonesia

JAKARTA — An errant bee caused the takeoff of a flight oper-ated by Indonesia’s flag carrier Garuda Indonesia to be delayed, the airline’s spokesman said yesterday.

Benny Butarbutar, the company’s vice president of corpo-rate communications, told Kyodo News that the pilot of Flight GA197 decided to delay the flight for four hours Tuesday after finding some problems in one of the aircraft’s engines.

The plane was scheduled to take off at 10:10am from Kuala-namu international airport in the North Sumatra provincial capital of Medan bound for the capital Jakarta.

“Based on a thorough investigation, the problem in the air-craft’s electronic engine control was caused by a bee entering the aircraft’s pitot tube located on the outer part of the cockpit, delaying the departure,” Butarbutar said.

The pitot tube measures airspeed. The incident, he added, “was beyond Garuda’s control and caused more by the airport’s sit-uation and condition.”

The problem was discovered just as the plane was about to take off, he said.

“Considering safety aspects, Garuda Indonesia decided to delay the flight, and after one hour repair process, the aircraft was declared serviceable and ready to operate,” Butarbutar said, adding that the incident was the first of its kind for Garuda.—Kyodo News

Vietnam approves joint oil exploration project with China

HANOI — Vietnam has approved a joint exploration project in the South China Sea with China to help develop its offshore oil resources, state media reported today.

The plan, drawn up by Vietnamese state-owned oil company Petrolimex and China’s Sinopec, would see the two sides working together to explore the oil and gas-rich Han Long area in the South China Sea, the state news agency reported.

Vietnam has long been wary of China’slarger oil explorations and has called on other claimants to join it in the area.

But Vietnam has a large stake in the South China Sea as it is seen as the country’s economic lifeline, and the country is keen to develop the region’s oil resources.

The Vietnamese government has said it will seek further joint exploration projects with other countries in the region, but plans so far have not come to fruition.

China has refused to allow foreign companies to invest in the South China Sea region, denying Vietnam access to the massive oil and gas resources believed to lie beneath the waters.

Awareness raised on China-Uighurs

Beijing, however, maintains that it has had no involvement in the conflict and that it is committed to maintaining stability in the region.

China has a large Uighur population in its far-western Xinjiang region, where tensions have increased recently as thousands of Han Chinese have moved into the area.

However, Beijing has been accused of repressing the minority and enforcing a strict control on religious practices.

The Chinese government has denied these allegations, saying it has been working to ensure the stability of the region.

Eurasia Review article

The article points out that the Uighur issue is a sensitive one for China, with the government viewing its own policy towards the region as a model for dealing with similar issues elsewhere.

However, some commentators believe China’s approach has not been successful in preventing the rise of Uighur insurgency.

Kuala Lumpur — Malaysia Airlines resumes checked baggage on Europe routes

KUALA LUMPUR — Malaysia Airlines resumed normal check-in baggage allowances on all its flights yesterday after banning it temporarily due to strong head winds on the longer routes it was taking for safety reasons.

The airline said it has recently had to operate a longer route to Europe, which combined with strong head winds, limited the airlines’ ability to carry baggage and cargo.

The airline did not elaborate on the safety reasons behind its new flight paths to Europe but one of its airliners was shot down over rebel-held territory in eastern Ukraine in 2014 with the loss of all 298 people on board.

It banned check-in baggage on flights to Amsterdam and Paris operated by its Boeing 777 aircraft.

“Based on its current risk assessment, done on a daily basis, the airline is now able to take a shorter route on European flights,” the airline said in a statement.

All baggage is being shipped to affected customers in Europe, it added.

The airline suffered two disasters in 2014. In March that year, its flight MH370 carrying 239 passengers and crew disappeared while on a flight to China and is believed to have gone down in the Indian Ocean.—Reuters
A year after ‘Je suis Charlie’, a divided France struggles

PARIS — One year on, an anxious, fragmented France is paying tribute to the victims of the killings at Charlie Hebdo magazine, with old divisions made worse by what President Francois Hollande has called “a terrible year”.

After the Islamist attacks that killed 17 on 7-9 January last year at the satirical weekly and at a Jewish supermarket, the French rallied, marched and lit candles in emotional gatherings celebrated as “the spirit of 11 January”, the day four million took to the streets.

But cracks in that unity soon appeared and, a year later, after an even bloodier assault on Paris by another set of home-grown Islamists in November, politicians are embroiled in a bitter debate over homeland security, and the anti-immigrant National Front (FN) is stronger than ever.

The slogan “Je suis Charlie,” a defiant cry of solidarity that appeared everywhere immediately after the killings, is little seen a year on.

“Events such as the January or November attacks trigger moments of unity, in reaction. But that is not enough to offset deep divisions,” said Brice Teinturier, head of the Ipsos polling organisation in France.

“The divisions are huge. There are several Francs and they are clashing,” he said, describing a France of big cities turned towards the future, a rustbelt France that feels crushed by globalisation, and a France of housing estates that feels forgotten.

Regional elections last month highlighted those divisions.

In the first round, the National Front came first, doing well in rural and small-town France. In the run-off, voters in big cities helped to keep the Front out of power, exposing another deep split, this time between those who look to the far-right for hope and those who reject it.

In a further sign of tension, a Muslim prayer hall was sacked to cries of “Arabs out” during a protest rally in Corsica after firemen were attacked last month on a housing estate with a large migrant population.—Reuters

Parliamentary elections last year revealed that the divisions are huge. There are several Francs and they are clashing. This is especially true in rural and small-town France, where the National Front came first, followed by more moderate parties. In contrast, big cities have seen a surge in support for the Socialist Party, led by President Francois Hollande.

Obama, wiping tears, makes new push to tighten gun rules

WASHINGTON — Wiping back tears as he remembered children killed in a mass shooting, President Barack Obama on Tuesday ordered stricter gun rules that he can impose without Congress and urged American voters to reject pro-gun candidates.

Obama made it clear he does not expect gun laws to change in the months leading up to the election. He has blamed law-breakers for being in the thrall of pro-gun candidates.

Obama said, tears rolling down his cheeks, “That changed me, that day.” He said, after being introduced by Mark Barden, whose 7-year-old son was killed in the shooting, “My hope earnestly has been that it would change the country.”

After that tragedy, the Democratic president failed to persuade Congress to toughen US gun laws. He has blamed lawmakers for being in the thrall of the powerful National Rifle Association gun lobby group.

Obama, comparing the issue to the great civil rights causes of his time, is set to discuss gun violence again during a live televised town hall on CNN on Thursday, and during his State of the Union address next Tuesday.

Vice President Joe Biden is slated to do a series of television interviews on the topic on Wednesday. The US Constitution’s 2nd Amendment gives Americans the right to have arms, a right that is fiercely defended.

Obama laid out executive action he is taking to require more gun sellers to get licenses and more gun buyers to undergo background checks.

Under the changes, the US Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF) is issuing guidelines intended to narrow exceptions to a system that requires sellers to check with the Federal Bureau of Investigation to determine whether buyers have criminal records, are charged with crimes or have mental health conditions that would bar them from owning a gun.

The proposal is “ripe for abuse” by the government, said Chris Cox, an official with the NRA, in a statement, adding that the group will continue to fight to protect Americans’ constitutional rights.—Reuters

25 labourers injured in factory collapse in east Pakistan

ISLAMABAD — At least 25 people were injured when roof of a ceramic factory collapsed in Pakistan’s east Gujranwala district yesterday afternoon.

Urdu TV channel Abb Takk reported that the roof collapsed following the boiler of the factory exploded due to gas leakage at Sheikhupura road area of the Gujranwala district, located in the country’s east Punjab Province.

Over 50 people were working inside the factory when the accident happened, and some of them are still trapped inside, said the report.

Rescue teams arrived at the site and efforts to pull out the stranded people from the debris of the collapsed factory are underway.—Xinhua

More than 2 kg cannabis, other drugs seized in Singapore

SINGAPORE — More than 2 kg cannabis and other drugs estimated to be worth more than 62,122 US dollars were seized by Singapore’s Central Narcotics Bureau (CNB) in a series of operations recently, said CNB in a press release yesterday.

CNB said a 41-year-old male Singaporean was arrested by police officers for suspected drug consumption and possession on Monday. Four Erinnim-5 tablets were recovered from the man and he was referred to CNB.

The authority raided the residence of the 41-year-old male at Kim Tian Road on Tuesday following a swift investigation, and a total of about 997 grams of cannabis was found at his residence.

A follow-up operation was also launched on Tuesday evening to seize the drug associate of the 41-year-old man. CNB officers recovered a total of about 1,025 grammes of cannabis, 125 grammes of ‘Ice’, 16 Erinnim-5 tablets and various improvised drug-smoking apparatus at Segar Road and arrested a 42-year-old male Singaporean.—Xinhua

Cambodia’s famed Angkor earns US$ 60m from foreign visitors in 2015

PHNOM PENH — Revenue from ticket sales to foreign tourists visiting Cambodia’s famed Angkor archaeological park reached 60 million US dollars last year, up 1.2 per cent year-on-year, a spokesperson said yesterday.

The ancient site welcomed 2.1 million foreign visitors last year, up 1.96 per cent compared to a year earlier, said Chau San Karya, spokesperson for the state-run Apsara Authority, which manages the site.

In December alone, the heritage site received 222,981 visitors, generating a revenue of 6.5 million US dollars.

“China, South Korea, Japan and Viet Nam are the largest sources of tourists to the site,” she told Xinhua over telephone.

Well-begun is half done
Khin Maung Aye

THE year 2016 is a very exciting year as the people of Myanmar have placed high expectations on the new government, which received a mandate from the people to shape their destiny. The people of Myanmar have been particularly encouraged by the slew of preparatory measures taken by the incumbent government to ensure a smooth transfer of the duties of the state, as well as those of the presidency. Now, we are keen to see how the incoming government will get through its first year in power.

What is certain is that the year 2016 will definitely bring dramatic changes to the implementation of political reforms, which will foster a more democratic society. The new regime is expected to handle the country’s most sensitive issues, including the peace process, building a federal union and structural reform within the government. These must all be carried out in a tactful manner in order to ensure that those who resist change and those who are not optimist about the prospect of drastic changes are not left out of the reform process.

In this regard, it is worth nothing that the onus is on the entire political parties to be actively involved in the reform activities to be carried out by the new democratic regime; the administration alone cannot build a nation anew. Without the participation of the people, we cannot expect good governance from the new government. Without abandoning dirty tricks, such as work-shirking on the part of civil servants, and dropping the old habits of graft and corruption, the administrative machinery will not be able to contribute to our nation’s development. Only when all levels of government are duty-conscientious, law-abiding, corruption-free and initiative-taking will the nation become prosperous, peaceful and progressive.

These are key tones. Reform on a national scale is extremely difficult; it takes time to change the people’s habits and mindset. Therefore, the new government should also be credited some time to turn the country around. We should, therefore, not place too much hope on the new regime to build a new country overnight. Let us remember that Rome was not built in a day.

What we should expect of the new government is a good start, as the saying goes: “Well begun is half done”.

The Global New Light of Myanmar would, therefore, like to urge Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and her colleagues not to rush, but to focus on securing a good start in the implementation of reforms that will, ultimately, bring the change our people sorely need.

Dear Editor,

As a Consultant Advisor, it has been my privilege to submit this work talking to students, parents, teachers, school administrators and other citizens about what drugs works today. I have found a broad consensus on three basic issues: first of all ensuring that every person in Myanmar is educated to his or her full potential: second, providing access to a quality education for all students regardless of economic status, gender, handicaps or racial and ethnic background and third, holding accountable each participant in the educational process.

The biggest threat that now stands in the way of achieving the kind of educational system we know is needed to be avoid- ance of the wide spread use of illegal drugs by our nation’s young people. I am firmly convinced that the most effective weapon we have in the battle against drug use is prevention as an aid to schools and communities seeking to develop and implement comprehensive drug prevention programs.

Now, I am proud to offer this new message built on research which shows that the most promising approaches to drug prevention are comprehensive programs that involve schools, communities, parents, students and law enforcement and that it offers practical guidance on is- sues such as setting and enforcing policies, teaching about drug prevention and how the law can help.

I believe young people are not only concerned about drugs but are also enthusiastic about getting rid of them. Studies show that attitudes are chang- ing. Young people are getting the message that drugs are dan- gerous and drugs can ruin lives. We as parents, educators and concerned citizens must continue to provide support and guidance for youngsters (14, 15). Siouxhealth and choice. Each of us must play a role in the war against drugs by joining our efforts. We can achieve communities without drugs and finally a drug-free so- ciety.

Drugs cause physical and emotional dependence. Adoles- cents are particularly vulnera- ble to the effect of drugs. Drugs threaten normal development in a number of ways.

Drugs can interfere with memory, sensation and per- ception. They distort ex- periences and cause a loss of self-control that can lead users to harm themselves and others. Drugs can interfere with the brain’s ability to take in, sort and synthesize information received. Drugs can have an insidious effect on perception. Drugs erode the self-discipline and motivation necessary for learning. Drugs use frequent- ly progresses in stages from occasional use to regular use, to multiple use ultimately to total dependency. With each succes- sive stage, drug use intensities become more varied and results in increasingly debilitating ef- fects.

The first temptations to use drug may come in social situa- tions in the form of pressures to ‘act grown up’ by smoking ciga- rettes or using alcohol or mari- juana. Be knowledgeable about drugs and sign of drug use. When symptoms are observed, respond promptly. Yet, the ear- lier a drug problem is detected and faced, the less difficult it is to overcome.

Thanking you,
Dr. Aung Naing Moe.
Iran unveils second underground missile, likely to irk US

DUBAI — Iran unveiled a new underground missile depot on Tuesday with state television showing Emad precision-guided missiles in a robe which the United States says can take a nuclear warhead and violate a 2010 UN Security Council resolution.

The defiant move to publicize Iran’s missile programme seemed certain to irk the United States as it plans to dismantle nearly all sanctions on Iran under a breakthrough nuclear agreement.

Persian Gulf News agency and state television reported the underground facility, situated in mountains and run by Iran’s Revolutionary Guards, was inaugurated by the speaker of parliament, Ali Larijani.

Release of one-minute video followed footage of another underground missile depot last October. The United States says the Emad, which Iran tested in October, would be capable of carrying a nuclear warhead and US officials say Washington will respond to the Emad tests with fresh sanctions against Iranian individuals and businesses linked to the programme.

Iran’s boasting about its missile capabilities are a challenge for US President Barack Obama’s administration as the United States and European Union plan to dismantle nearly all international sanctions against Tehran under the nuclear deal reached in July.

Iran has abided by the main terms of the nuclear deal, which require it to give up material that world powers feared could be used to make an atomic weapon and accept other restrictions on its nuclear programme.

But President Hassan Rouhani ordered his defence minister last week to expand the missile programme.

The Iranian missiles under development boast much improved accuracy over the current generation, which experts say is likely to improve their effectiveness with conventional warheads.

Riyadh — Islamic State threatened to destroy Saudi Arabian prisons holding jihadist after Riyadh’s execution of 47 people including 43 convicts al Qaeda militants.

The militant group, which has claimed responsibility for attacks in the kingdom and stepped up operations in neighbouring Yemen, singled out the al-Ha’ir and Tariyya prisons where many al Qaeda and Islamic State supporters have been detained.

“The Islamic State always seeks to free prisoners, but we calculate that the ending of the issue of prisoners will not happen except with the eradication of the rule of tyrants, and then destroying their prisons and razing them to the ground,” it said in an article posted online on Tuesday.

An Islamic State supporter killed himself in a car bomb at a checkpoint outside Ha’ir prison near Riyadh in July.

While Islamic State and al Qaeda are rivals who have condemned each other on ideological grounds, they are both united in enmity towards Saudi Arabia, which has declared them terrorist groups and locked up thousands of their supporters.

Riyadh’s mass execution on Saturday included four Shi’ite Muslims, among them prominent cleric Nimr al-Nimr, a move that heightened sectarian tensions with Shi’ite power Iran. But analysts say it was mostly meant as a message to militant Sunnis.

Islamic State has claimed responsibility for a series of bombings and shootings in Saudi Arabia since November 2014 that have killed more than 50 people, most of them Shii’ites but also more than 15 members of the security forces. — Reuters

Japan, US seek to resolve Saudi-Iran tensions through dialogue

TOKYO — Japanese Foreign Minister Fumio Kishida and US Secretary of State John Kerry held talks over the phone yesterday, agreeing to seek to resolve tensions between Saudi Arabia and Iran through dialogue.

Kishida told reporters following the 20-minute talks that he and Kerry shared concerns about the deteriorating relationship between Saudi Arabia and Iran and confirmed a plan to urge all parties to exercise restraint for the stability in the Middle East.

Saudi Arabia severed diplomatic ties with Iran this week in protest of a crowd’s storming into its embassy in Tehran after Riyadh said Saturday that it had executed 47 people including prominent Shi’ite cleric Sheikh Nimr al-Nimr for their alleged involvement in terrorism in opposition to the kingdom’s ruling family.

In the telephone talks held at Kerry’s request, the US secretary welcomed a recent agreement between Japan and South Korea to resolve the drawn-out dispute over so-called “comfort women,” who were forced to work in Japan’s wartime military brothels.

In a landmark deal, Japan and South Korea, both US allies, agreed 28 December to end the dispute “finally and irreversibly” in which Japan pledged to provide 1 billion yen ($8.4 million) for a new South Korean foundation aimed at helping aging former comfort women. — Kyodo News

Researchers taking power of locust to new heights

TEL AVIV — A locust-like robot could prove to be an inspired leap into the future of autonomous surveillance and emergency response systems.

Inspired by the locust’s jumping mechanism and elastic energy storage, Tel Aviv University researchers designed a tiny robot made from carbon rods, steel springs and 3D printed plastic pieces. It weighs less than one ounce (23 grammes) and is approximately four inches (10 centimetres) long.

“The locust being a large insect that has wonderful jumping performance had offered itself as wonderful inspiration for this specific idea of a jumping...miniature jumping robot,” lead developer Professor Amir Ayali, of the Department of Zoology at Tel Aviv University’s Faculty of Life Sciences, told Reuters as he inspected a locust grown in his laboratory.

The robot can jump a remarkable 11.5 feet (3.5 metres), said Ayali, due to its structure and energy storage, which along with its motor makes it capable to withstand high accelerations.

“The locust uses mechanical energy in addition to its muscle force in order to generate a jump and this is exactly what we are imitating...We are using a tiny motor that generates, or stores mechanical energy, and this mechanical energy in springs is actually very similar to the locust legs is what propels the robot into the air,” said Ayali.

The bio-inspired robot, dubbed ‘TAUB’ (Tel Aviv University and Ort Braude College) was born out of an interdisciplinary collaboration between engineers and zoologists at the request of the Pears of Wisdom Association for Research and advanced technology development in Israel.

Unlike drones that can be airborne for up to about 30 minutes, the locust robot is powered by a lithium battery. With its energy efficiency it can reach up to 1,000 jumps with only one battery loading.

Ayali said the robot could be easily mass produced since its parts are cheap and it is easy to manufacture, estimating the price of a robot at $100 USD.

From oil spills to rescue and surveillance operations, “what you do with it is whatever is needed whenever you want to engineer any kind of robotic system with no human interference,” he said.

Ayali believes that with sufficient knowledge of locusts’ swarming capabilities, the robots may be capable of implementing the mechanisms of swarming capabilities in robotic systems.

Hungarian-born Doctor Gabor Kosa, of TAU’s Faculty of Engineering, a confessed sci-fi fan, envisages a swarm of robots installed with GPS navigation systems, cameras and solar panels for powering, entering enemy territory to carry out a surveillance operation.

Around $200,000 USD was invested in the project at its early stages. Ayali says the team is seeking more funding to develop it further. Kosa hopes that with proper funding his team can build a robotic system capable of jumping multiple times and possibly even mimicking the locust by spreading its wings and flying.—Reuters

Fewer Americans want to lose weight

BEIJING — Fewer Americans said they would like to lose weight while obesity rate is still increasing, according to the latest Gallup’s annual Health and Healthcare poll.

The poll, conducted in November, 2015, discovers about 49 per cent of Americans would like to lose weight, down from about 60 per cent from 2001 to 2008.

In 25 years, it is the first time that less than half of Americans want to lose weight, according to the poll.

The Gallup poll findings are based on telephone interviews conducted with 1,021 adults, aged 18 and above, living in all 50 US states and the District of Columbia.—Xinhua

Aerojet wins US contract to set standard for 3-D printed rocket engines

WASHINGTON — Aerojet Rocketdyne Holdings Inc on Tuesday said it has won a $6 million contract from the US Air Force to define the standards that will be used to qualify components made using 3-D printing for use in liquid-fueled rocket engine applications.

The award is part of a larger drive by the US military to end its reliance on Russian-built RD-180 rocket engines now used on the Atlas 5 rocket built by United Launch Alliance, a joint venture of Lockheed Martin Corp and Boeing Co.

The Air Force plans to award additional, larger contracts for US-developed propulsion systems later this year.

Aerojet said it would draw upon its extensive experience with 3-D printing, or additive manufacturing, to draw up the standards that would be used to qualify 3-D printed rocket engine components for flight.

Aerojet is developing its AR1 engine as an alternative to the RD-180 engine. New rocket engine designs like the AR1 are increasingly using 3-D printing technology because it reduces the amount of time and money required for the engines.

The use of additive manufacturing technology reduces the cost to produce components, shortens build times and provides flexibility to engineers to design components that were once impossible to build using traditional manufacturing techniques.

The contract calls for Aerojet to define the rigorous engineering and inspection processes to be followed when producing and testing 3-D printed components to ensure they meet the stringent requirements of aerospace systems.

In 2014, Aerojet successfully tested an engine made entirely with additive manufacturing that had a thrust of 5,000 pounds. A year later, it used additive manufacturing to repackage the injector of the gas generator used on the Apollo-era F-1 rocket engine to demonstrate that a proven design can be built at a competitive cost without sacrificing performance.—Reuters

Over 12,000 receive TCM for HIV/AIDS treatment in Yunnan

KUNMING — Around 12,800 people living with HIV/AIDS (PLWHA) in southwest China’s Yunnan Province have benefited from a traditional Chinese medicine (TCM) project over the past decade, the local government said Tuesday.

Jiang Xu, deputy head of the province’s TCM administration, said the pilot project, which was launched in June 2005, includes a combination of TCM and antiviral therapies as well as herbal remedies, which suppress the virus load and help the immune system.

After comparing data collected from 1,131 PLWHA before and after the TCM treatment, Jiang said more than 40 per cent gained weight and 18 per cent reported fewer colds.

“TCM treatment can strengthen the immune system and alleviate symptoms such as fever, cough and diarrhoea,” said He Lisheng, head of Yunnan Academy of Chinese Medicine. There were 575,000 PLWHA in China by the end of October. Of that number, 87,634 were living in Yunnan.—Xinhua

Hong Kong on holiday health alert after China bird flu death

HONG KONG — A woman in the southern Chinese city of Shenzhen has died after being infected with the highly contagious H5N6 bird flu virus, days after she was admitted to hospital, Hong Kong’s Health Department said yesterday.

The 26-year-old woman’s death last week comes ahead of the Chinese New Year holiday in early February when millions of Chinese travel to their home towns to celebrate with their families, with a chicken a popular festive meal.

All border check points between Shenzhen and Hong Kong, and the airport, had already introduced enhanced prevention measures with thermal imaging systems in place, a department spokesman said. The department was also notified by the Guangdong health authority on 1 January that a 40-year-old woman from Zhaoqing city in the same province was infected with H5N6 and was in a critical condition.—Reuters
Fresh sex abuse charges against UN forces in Central Africa

UNITED NATIONS — The UN peacekeeping mission in Central African Republic said on Tuesday it was investigating new allegations of sexual abuse of minors by peacekeepers in the conflict-torn African nation.

Last month, an independent review panel accused the United Nations and its agencies of grossly mishandling allegations of child sexual abuse in 2013 and 2014 by international peacekeepers in the Central African Republic.

While those allegations did not involve UN troops or police wearing blue helmets or berets, charges later emerged of misconduct by UN peacekeepers in Central African Republic (CAR).

The mission in CAR, known as MINUSCA, said in a statement it was “investigating fresh allegations concerning both sexual exploitation and abuse and other misconduct by UN Peacekeepers and international forces in Bangui.”

It said that staff of the UN Children’s Fund based in Bangui have had four visits with four alleged child victims.

The statement said the head of MINUSCA, Parfait Onanga-Anyanga, was discussing with the UN human rights office in Geneva ways of combating sexual abuse, including through the formation of a police brigade that would identify perpetrators and deter such abuse.

It was not clear how many peacekeepers were involved in the alleged abuse or what countries they were from.

“The mission continues to investigate each and every allegation of a misconduct,” MINUSCA said.

A fact finding mission is currently underway in this regard.” New Zealand’s UN ambassador, Gerard van Bohemen, told reporters he was “really sick and tired” that such allegations kept surfacing.

Uruguay’s ambassador, Elbio Rosselli, president of the Security Council this month, said that as a troop contributor, his country expected “zero tolerance” of sexual abuse.—Reuters
Medical charity MSF ends Mediterranean rescues, appeals to EU

LONDON — The medical charity Médecins Sans Frontières (MSF) has ended its sea rescue operation aimed at reducing the number of migrants and asylum seekers killed while trying to cross the Mediterranean from north Africa to Europe, it said on Tuesday.

MSF said its three ships had rescued more than 20,000 people in over 120 search and rescue operations during eight months at sea.

The International Organisation for Migration (IOM) has said 3,771 people died in 2015 while trying to reach Europe by sea, making the year the deadliest on record for those seeking sanctuary from conflict and poverty.

"While we remain absolutely convinced of the importance of dedicated search and rescue in saving lives, we are doctors and search and rescue shouldn’t be our job," Stefano Argenziano, MSF manager of migration operations, said in a statement.

"We very much hope that European resources will be sufficient in 2016 and that our boats will not be required."

The charity said it would remain on standby to intervene if European Union countries failed to help people trying to reach the continent in the coming months.

It also called on EU countries to find safe and legal ways for refugees and migrants to reach Europe instead of risking their lives that they did not have to rely on smugglers and rickety boats to make the journey.

"What will really end deaths at sea, in the central Mediterranean as well as in the Aegean, is the implementation of policies and practices that provide safe and legal channels to the EU and eliminate the need for people to use smugglers and overcrowded rubber and wooden boats to reach the shores of Europe," said Brice de la Vigne, MSF director of operations.—Reuters

Tarantino shuns rain to leave imprint on Hollywood

LOS ANGELES — A torrential downpour did not hamper director Quentin Tarantino as he left imprints of his hands and feet in cement at Hollywood’s historic TCL Chinese Theatre on Tuesday.

Known for his gritty, edgy and often bloodied tales of revenge in films such as “Reservoir Dogs,” “Kill Bill” and his most recent Western, “The Hateful Eight,” Tarantino was bestowed the honour of leaving his mark alongside stars such as Robert De Niro, Sandra Bullock and Meryl Streep.

I wanted to put my hands and footprints in the Grauman’s Chinese courtyard way before I even had a career, so this is something I wanted to do in my whole life,” the director said.

Tarantino, 52, has been a passionate film fan even before he turned to writing and directing movies, and even did a stint as an usher in a movie theatre.

He has won two screen-writting Oscars, for “Pulp Fiction” and “Django Unchained,” and on Tuesday was joined by actor Christoph Waltz, who won two Oscars for his roles in Tarantino’s “Inglourious Basterds” and “Django.”—Reuters
Finland and Estonia ponder undersea railway tunnel

HELSINKI — Finland and Estonia on Tuesday agreed to explore the possibility of constructing an undersea railway tunnel between their capitals.

Tens of thousands of Estonians work in the Helsinki region, many of whom commute over the Baltic Sea weekly, and many Finnish tourists visit Tallinn. “Helsinki and Tallinn together form an economic area of approximately 1.5 million people. To fully utilize the area’s potential, transport between the cities should be faster and flow easier than at present,” the city of Helsinki said in a statement. It added that a tunnel would shorten the travel time between the cities to about 30 minutes, from at least 90 minutes currently by fast ferry. The tunnel would be 65-92 km (40-60 miles) long.

The tunnel would link up with Rail Baltic, a railway connection between Tallinn and Warsaw projected to be completed in 2025. A Helsinki report last year estimated the railway tunnel would cost 9-13 billion euros and could be operational after 2030.

A memorandum of understanding was signed by the two cities and government officials of both countries.

Paul Bley, avant-garde jazz pianist, died at 83

NEW YORK — Canadian jazz pianist Paul Bley, whose career spanned seven decades and myriad forms of the genre, died on Sunday at his home in Florida, according to his record company, ECM Records. He was 83.

His death was announced late on Monday. No other details were available.

Bley began studying music at age 5 and formed his first band in Montreal when he was 13. “He went on to co-found the Montreal Jazz Workshop, studied at the Juilliard School and played and recorded with such jazz greats as Charlie Parker, Charles Mingus, Chet Baker, Jimmy Giuffre, and many others. He was known as a master of improvisation and the jazz trio, and an influence in the free jazz and avant-garde movement of the 1960s and 70s,” ECM Records founder Manfred Eicher, in a statement posted on Tuesday by the company. Bley was named in 2008 as a member of the Order of Canada, which recognizes the merit and contributions of its citizens, for his influence on jazz music and performers.

One of the best at this,” said Bley in a statement distributed by ECM publicist, prior to the first time he played: “An ECM record.” —Reuters

Three Kings have new friends in Madrid

MADRID — The arrival of the Three Kings, Melchor, Gaspar and Baltasar, is perhaps the most exciting time of the holiday season for Spanish children as they come bringing presents and one of the most popular events of the year is the Cavalcade of the Kings, a tradition which goes back nearly 150 years. This procession, which is accompanied by artists, dancers, and all sorts of fun for adults and children alike, is held in nearly every Spanish city, but there is no doubt that the most important is in the capital city of Madrid, where the main road to the city centre is closed off to allow their Majesties to make their way to the town hall.

The 2015 procession in Madrid saw 36 different groups of artists and wagons from many different stores and television stations but this year the Kings had some new friends with a group of Chinese artists, all of whom live in Spain, forming part of the parade. Banging drums and performing a Lion dance, this is the first time any Chinese artists have taken part in the parade.

The presence of these members of the Chang Qing cultural association shows that not only is Madrid becoming an ever-multicultural city, but that the Chinese residents are increasingly integrated into its life and traditions while also integrating a bit of China into Madrid. —Xinhua
Bournemouth lose appeal against Francis’ red card

LONDON — Simon Francis will miss Bournemouth’s FA Cup third round tie against Birmingham City after the Football Association rejected his club’s appeal against his red card in the goalless draw against Leicester City on Saturday.

The FA’s Independent Regulatory Commission upheld referee Andre Mariner’s decision to issue a straight red card to the defender during his team’s Premier League away fixture at Leicester City.

Television replays showed Francis got a touch of the ball before bringing down Leicester’s Jamie Vardy, resulting in a penalty which Bournemouth goalkeeper Artur Boruc saved.

“The defender, who was dismissed for denying an obvious goal scoring opportunity against Leicester, will serve his one-match suspension with immediate effect,” the FA said in a statement.

Currently four points above the relegation zone after 20 matches, Bournemouth will make a trip to Championship side Birmingham City on Saturday as the Cherries seek to progress to the next round of the FA Cup for the third season in a row.

Francis was eligible to feature in next week’s Premier League fixture against an in-form West Ham United at the Vitality Stadium. Manager Eddie Howe will have right-back Adam Smith available for the FA Cup clash at St Andrews.— Reuters

West Brom keeper Foster to return after nine-month absence

LONDON — West Bromwich Albion keeper Ben Foster is on course to return to the first team on Saturday after spending nearly nine months on the sidelines with a knee injury. The 32-year-old has been out of action since damaging his cruciate knee ligaments against Stoke City in March last year, but manager Tony Pulis said he could be involved in Saturday’s FA Cup third-round tie against Bristol City.

The England international played 45 minutes for the club’s under-21 side on Tuesday. “It’s good to have Ben back. He played 45 minutes and then trained with us,” Pulis told the club’s website (www.wba.co.uk). “I will speak with the medical staff but I would like to think he might be involved in Saturday’s FA Cup game.”

Boaz Myhill has replaced Foster as the Baggies’ first-choice keeper this campaign, and the club also signed Anders Lindegaard from Manchester United in the close season. Foster has lost his place as first-choice keeper Joe Hart in the England squad to Manchester City or Everton who play the third-round tie against Bristol City.

Nishikori opens with win at Brisbane International

BRISBANE — Japanese ace Kei Nishikori downed Kazakhstan’s Mikhail Kukushkin in straight sets in his opening match in the second round of the Brisbane International yesterday.

The second-seeded Nishikori, who received a first-round bye, won 6-3, 6-4 in just under 90 minutes at Pat Rafter Arena to book his spot in the quarter-finals.

Kukushkin raced into a 2-0 first-set lead, but could not hold onto it against Nishikori, who registered five aces and capitalised on three of seven break-point chances en route to victory. Nishikori is seeking a fourth straight win in Australia.

The prize on offer is a place in the final against Manchester City or Everton who play the first leg of their semi-final at Goodison Park on Wednesday.

Klopp’s delight at victory was tempered by yet more injury woe as Philippe Coutinho and Dejan Lovren succumbed to hamstring problems in a high-paced first half, while Toure was limping at the finish.

Advantage Liverpool as Ibe downs Stoke in League Cup

LONDON — Jordan Ibe came off the bench to drive home the winner as Liverpool took a big step towards reaching the League Cup final with a 2-0 victory over Stoke City in the first leg of their last-four tie on Tuesday.

Ibe was summoned into the action early and the winger fired home left-footed in the first half as Jurgen Klopp’s side grabbed a narrow but potentially price-less advantage ahead of the return leg on 26 January.

Liverpool’s hopes of a record-extending ninth League Cup title were given a stern examination in the second half as Stoke piled forward in search of an equaliser. However, a make-shift defence featuring Lucas Leiva and Kolo Toure stood firm.

“It’s a strange feeling,” Liverpool’s German coach told Sky Sports. “I’m proud as it was a perfect reaction from the last game (a 2-0 defeat to West Ham United).

“But of course we have two bad injuries and that’s why I’m not lucky tonight.”

The eight-times winners were sharp and incisive as they tore Stoke apart in early stages although they again looked to be lacking a killer instinct in front of goal.

It was substitute Ibe who broke the deadlock for the visitors, putting the finishing touch to a swift counter attack after 37 minutes. Adam Lallana beat the offside trap down the right flank and squared for Joe Allen, whose scuffed shot fell into the path of Ibe who controlled the ball neatly before dispatching his left-footed shot low into the net.

Liverpool’s Roberto Firmino was denied by a last-ditch tackle from Ryan Shawcross, but Stoke did finish the half with their best two chances as Marko Arnautovic headed wide and former Liverpool fullback Glen Johnson drew a good save from Simon Mignolet.— Reuters
