A PROPOSAL has been submitted by Lower House MP U Myint Oo, a member of the National League for Democracy who represents Thanatpin Township, to discuss the deaths of three newborn babies after they were injected with a hepatitis B vaccine at Bago General Hospital.

The findings of a field study conducted by MP U Myint Oo on Bago General Hospital on 19 March will be presented to the Pyithu Hluttaw in a bid to uncover the truth behind the incident.

“I want to know whether the fatal hepatitis B vaccine was registered or not. I would also like to know about what preventive measures are in place [to stop such tragedies from happening in the future]. I don’t believe these fatalities occurred during birth. It is probable they were a direct result of the vaccine. We also didn’t get any samples during inspection on the pharmacy responsible for selling the vaccine. A submission [of field study findings] has been made to the Pyithu Hluttaw Health Committee and to the Hluttaw itself for discussions to be held on the issue,” said U Myint Oo.

An inquiry will be held on whether the hepatitis B vaccine was officially registered; the issuing of financial compensation to aggrieved families; whether there is a regulation on reliable care of hospital patients; and on what kinds of preventive protection are in place.

See page 3 >>
Myanmar, China meet for trade promotion

The meeting for trade promotion between Myanmar and China is held. PHOTO: MNA

VICE PRESIDENT Dr Sai Mauk Kham and Chinese Premier Li Keqiang were both present at a bilateral meeting at Hotel Sheraton in Sanya town, Hainan, China, yesterday. They discussed ways to promote trade between the two countries by encouraging legal border trade. They also discussed the construction of the Kunlun bridge. The meeting drew high-ranking officials from both sides. —Myanmar News Agency

ASEAN Scholarships available for Myanmar students

THE Singapore government is offering 2017 ASEAN Scholarship Awards for Myanmar students to pursue full-time studies in Singapore, according to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. According to an application form sent by the Singapore Embassy in Myanmar to the ministry, Myanmar students who were born during the period from 2000 to 2002, who are in Grade 9 or above, who speak English and who have records of academic excellence are eligible to apply for the scholarships. The selection of students for scholarship awards is scheduled for this July, and results will be released in October after conducting interviews with the selected students in September. Those interested are invited to send their applications to the Singapore Embassy in Yangon not later than 3 June. —Than Oo

Mandalay Mingalar market fire razes more than 300 shops, flats

Aung Thant Khaing

MORE than 300 shops and flats were gutted in a huge fire that engulfed Mandalay market in Chanayetbasan Township, Mandalay Region last Tuesday. The fire caused losses more than K 1 billion, according to the local police force.

Seven firemen and one red cross member have got injuries during the fighting with the fire and are receiving treatment at the hospital. Of 550 spaces, 298 including 19 flats and 43 shops were destroyed by the massive fire that raged for more than four hours according to the Mandalay City Development Committee. The gutted shops include an office, five showrooms and 263 clothing retail stores.

An inspection of the fire-ravaged market will be undertaken to ascertain the extent of the structural damage to the building, said U Tun Kyi, committee member-6, adding that a decision on whether or not the market will need to be demolished will be made after the examination.

“Shop owners are allowed back into the market floor by floor in order to carry out their remaining belongings,” added committee member-6 on his inspection tour of the market yesterday.

Despite the market staying closed temporarily following the fire, shop owners and residents were allowed to remove their possessions yesterday under the close supervision of officials including Tatmadawmen and police officers.

“Most shops including mine had burned. Let me encourage victims not to be plunged into despair as I heard that KBZ Bank is planning to offer loans to the fire victims”, said U Kyaw Min, owner of the Sein & Mya mattress shop. —GNLM

Over 2,000 monkeys descend on Mandalay monastery

Monkeys are seen at Alaygu Monastery in Yetakhun mountain in Mandalay. PHOTO: MYITMAKHA NEWS AGENCY

OVER two thousand red monkeys, which inhabit the mountains of Shan State, have descended en masse to the Alaygu monastery, located on the Yetakhun mountain in Mandalay’s Patheingyi township, according to monastery abbot U Thuriya.

The monastery first received three primate visitors back in 2013, but word must have spread among the monkeys which have come down from surrounding mountains to feed on fruits treated to them by visiting pilgrims and worshippers.

“The monkeys are very clever things, they can eat rice grains by pealing of the skin. They have become very used to humans and pose no danger to them anymore. They know when someone is going to feed them, arriving in groups. One group is made up of about 600 monkeys. Some have been relocated to Yankin mountain because there are so many of them,” said Ko Win Ko, a bamboo cutter from Mandalay City Development Committee member-6 on his inspection tour of the market yesterday.

The arrival of the primates to Alaygu monastery augmented the numbers of visitors who come to feed and take photos of the monkeys. The primates also attract local vendors, Myitmakha News Agency

Buddha Pujaniya Tabauung festival celebrated at pagodas across Yangon

PAGODAS in Yangon such as Shwedagon, Sule, Botataung and Shwe Phone Pwint pagodas were packed with pilgrims celebrating the Buddha Pujaniya Festival on the Full Moon of Tabauung yesterday.

Thousands of devotees thronged Shwedagon Pagoda to celebrate the 2604th Buddha Puja yesterday morning.

During the merit-sharing ceremony of the festival the congregation received nine precepts from State Ovadacariya Sayadaw Agga Maha Pandita Agga Maha Gantavasaka Pandita Bhaddanta Abhidhaja Maha Rattha Guru Bhaddanta Nandobasa and offered provisions to members of Sangha.

Likewise, Botataung Kyai-Thragoh and Botahtaung Kyai-Thragoh monks came to Botataung Pagoda and consultation was conducted with the sect leaders of the monastery’s Sangha. Interestingly, the meeting also included Tatmadawmen and police officers.

Botahtaung Kate Pagoda in Seikphyu Township, Tooth Relic Pagoda in Thingangyun Township, Kyaikkasan Pagoda in Thingangyun Township, Shwe Phone Pwint Pagoda in 2013, but word must have spread among the monkeys which have come down from surrounding mountains to feed on fruits treated to them by visiting pilgrims and worshippers.

“The monkeys are very clever things, they can eat rice grains by pealing of the skin. They have become very used to humans and pose no danger to them anymore. They know when someone is going to feed them, arriving in groups. One group is made up of about 600 monkeys. Some have been relocated to Yankin mountain because there are so many of them,” said Ko Win Ko, a bamboo cutter from Mandalay City Development Committee member-6 on his inspection tour of the market yesterday.

The arrival of the primates to Alaygu monastery augmented the numbers of visitors who come to feed and take photos of the monkeys. The primates also attract local vendors, Myitmakha News Agency

Buddha Pujaniya Tabauung festival celebrated at pagodas across Yangon

During the merit-sharing ceremony of the festival the congregation received nine precepts from State Ovadacariya Sayadaw Agga Maha Pandita Agga Maha Gantavasaka Pandita Bhaddanta Abhidhaja Maha Rattha Guru Bhaddanta Nandobasa and offered provisions to members of Sangha. Likewise, Botataung Kyai-Thragoh and Botahtaung Kyai-Thragoh monks came to Botataung Pagoda and consultation was conducted with the sect leaders of the monastery’s Sangha. Interestingly, the meeting also included Tatmadawmen and police officers.

Botahtaung Kate Pagoda in Seikphyu Township, Tooth Relic Pagoda in Thingangyun Township, Kyaikkasan Pagoda in Thingangyun Township, Shwe Phone Pwint Pagoda in 2013, but word must have spread among the monkeys which have come down from surrounding mountains to feed on fruits treated to them by visiting pilgrims and worshippers.

“The monkeys are very clever things, they can eat rice grains by pealing of the skin. They have become very used to humans and pose no danger to them anymore. They know when someone is going to feed them, arriving in groups. One group is made up of about 600 monkeys. Some have been relocated to Yankin mountain because there are so many of them,” said Ko Win Ko, a bamboo cutter from Mandalay City Development Committee member-6 on his inspection tour of the market yesterday.

The arrival of the primates to Alaygu monastery augmented the numbers of visitors who come to feed and take photos of the monkeys. The primates also attract local vendors, Myitmakha News Agency

Buddha Pujaniya Tabauung festival celebrated at pagodas across Yangon

During the merit-sharing ceremony of the festival the congregation received nine precepts from State Ovadacariya Sayadaw Agga Maha Pandita Agga Maha Gantavasaka Pandita Bhaddanta Abhidhaja Maha Rattha Guru Bhaddanta Nandobasa and offered provisions to members of Sangha. Likewise, Botataung Kyai-Thragoh and Botahtaung Kyai-Thragoh monks came to Botataung Pagoda and consultation was conducted with the sect leaders of the monastery’s Sangha. Interestingly, the meeting also included Tatmadawmen and police officers.

Botahtaung Kate Pagoda in Seikphyu Township, Tooth Relic Pagoda in Thingangyun Township, Kyaikkasan Pagoda in Thingangyun Township, Shwe Phone Pwint Pagoda in 2013, but word must have spread among the monkeys which have come down from surrounding mountains to feed on fruits treated to them by visiting pilgrims and worshippers.

“The monkeys are very clever things, they can eat rice grains by pealing of the skin. They have become very used to humans and pose no danger to them anymore. They know when someone is going to feed them, arriving in groups. One group is made up of about 600 monkeys. Some have been relocated to Yankin mountain because there are so many of them,” said Ko Win Ko, a bamboo cutter from Mandalay City Development Committee member-6 on his inspection tour of the market yesterday.

The arrival of the primates to Alaygu monastery augmented the numbers of visitors who come to feed and take photos of the monkeys. The primates also attract local vendors, Myitmakha News Agency

Buddha Pujaniya Tabauung festival celebrated at pagodas across Yangon

Buddha Pujaniya Tabauung festival celebrated at pagodas across Yangon

Shwedagon Pagoda is crowded with devotees on the Full Moon of Tabauung. PHOTO: MNA

Buddha Pujaniya Tabauung festival celebrated at pagodas across Yangon

Shwedagon Pagoda is crowded with devotees on the Full Moon of Tabauung. PHOTO: MNA

Buddha Pujaniya Tabauung festival celebrated at pagodas across Yangon

Shwedagon Pagoda is crowded with devotees on the Full Moon of Tabauung. PHOTO: MNA

Buddha Pujaniya Tabauung festival celebrated at pagodas across Yangon

Shwedagon Pagoda is crowded with devotees on the Full Moon of Tabauung. PHOTO: MNA

Buddha Pujaniya Tabauung festival celebrated at pagodas across Yangon

Shwedagon Pagoda is crowded with devotees on the Full Moon of Tabauung. PHOTO: MNA
Religious titles conferred on prominent monks, nuns

PRESIDENT U Thein Sein and his wife Daw Khin Khin Win attended a ceremony to confer religious titles and insignia on prominent monks at the Uppatasanti Pagoda in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday afternoon.

State Sangha Maha Nayaka Committee Chairman Bano Sayadaw Dr Bhaddanta Kumarabhivamsa administered the fivefold Buddhist precepts of virtue to the congregation.

President U Thein Sein, Vice President U Nyan Tun, Pyithu Hluttaw Speaker U Win Myint, Union Chief Justice U Tin Aye and high-ranking officials presented religious titles and insignia to members of the Sangha.

Missionary titles and insignia were also conferred on laypersons.

The ceremony was followed by a food-offering event, in which the congregation, led by the president, donated food and monastic offerings to monks and nuns. The religious titles and insignia were conferred on 152 monks and seven nuns, and missionary titles and insignia were conferred on 18 men and 37 women.—Myanmar News Agency

ITC to assist Kayah State in developing tourism

THE International Trade Centre will provide $1.9 million to Kayah State in an effort to implement tourism development, aiming to create a three-year project.

The three year project of Kayah State Tourism Development began in 2014 and will end in 2017.

The project will mainly help to strengthen the sector of cultural practices, traditions of the local ethnic communities, handicraft productions, road transport and communication.

The Myanmar Food Products Association will assist in improving the quality of food products, design, packaging and increase sanitary measures.

These tours will be developed in collaboration with local tourism stakeholders such as communities, producers, local government, tour operators, guides and related enterprises.

The local government and communities in Kayah need to enhance tourism in preparation for the arrival of great numbers of international visitors. Kayah State has been described as having potential for tourism following its winning of the “Diamond Award” at an International Travelling Show.—200

Parliament to discuss . . .

>> From page 1

The Ministry of Health is currently carrying out an investigation into the incident. Five other new-born babies injected with the same vaccine who were transferred to Yangon’s Yankin General Hospital from Bago. The working-class population of this region depends upon Bago General Hospital. We have many patients coming through our doors, which puts a strain on availability of beds and on our staff. The result of this scenario is that sometimes such incidents happen. These are not isolated cases to Bago General Hospital; they are the kinds of problems experienced [in hospitals] far and wide,” said U Ye Myint Aung, an official from the General Hospital Administrative body. “There is a need to provide accommodation to those travelling to Yangon [General Hospital] from Bago. The working-class population of this region depends upon Bago General Hospital. We have many patients coming through our doors, which puts a strain on availability of beds and on our staff. The result of this scenario is that sometimes such incidents happen. These are not isolated cases to Bago General Hospital; they are the kinds of problems experienced [in hospitals] far and wide,” said U Ye Myint Aung, an official from the General Hospital Administrative body.

Vice-President Dr Sai Mauk Kham attends first Mekong-Lancang Cooperation Leaders’ Meeting

Vice-President Dr Sai Mauk Kham attended the first Mekong-Lancang Cooperation Leaders’ Meeting held at the International Convention Centre in Sanya, Hainan Province, China yesterday.

The Summit was also attended by Chinese Premier Li Keqiang and leaders of Mekong River countries. Present were representatives of Thailand, Cambodia, Laos, Myanmar and Vietnam.

The Chinese Premier and Thai Prime Minister Prayuth Chan-ocha, who co-chaired the Summit, extended their greetings to all the participants.

During the summit, those present reviewed the progress in Mekong-Lancang cooperation and discussed further bi-lateral development plans.

Speaking on the occasion, Vice-President Dr Sai Mauk Kham expressed his support to the cooperation machinery of leaders, ministers, high-ranking officials and working groups of the Mekong-Lancang Cooperation Leaders’ Meeting, adding that he also support to “principles” which are based on cooperation, equity, coordination, freedom, sharing profits, the United Nations’ Charter and international laws.

The Vice-President visited an exhibition zone of the Mekong-Lancang Cooperation Summit and attended the opening ceremony of the Summit as well as a joint press conference.—Myanmar News Agency
Demand dwindles for wooden wheelmakers

DEMAND for wooden carriage wheels is gradually declining in Yamethin Township, Mandalay Region, local wheelmakers say.

“It is linked to the declining of use of bullock carts in the region’s transportation and agriculture sectors as people replace them with modern machinery,” said one wheelmaker.

“In the past, we could sell seven sets of new bullock carts per year. The market has fallen into a decline over a few years. We currently receive two to three orders from buyers each year,” the wheelmaker said.

“We normally sell a bullock cart at a price of between K600,000 (US$495) and K700,000 (US$577).”

The wooden wheels are mainly produced in Wayone Village, Yamethin Township. Currently, only four wheelmakers remain in the village.

They usually use teak and Padauk wood in making the traditional farm carts.—Atkalay

Demand dwindles for wooden wheelmakers

A wheelmaker working at the workplace. PHOTO: Atkalay

Crime NEWS

199,600 yaba pills confiscated in Loilem, Phakant and Lashio

A COMBINED team comprising local police and an anti-drug squad in Loilem confiscated approximately 4.8 kilograms of ice and 199,600 yaba pills from a car on Mong Pan-Mong Ton road on Monday.

The combined team initially ordered the vehicle in question to pull over for questioning. However Aik Zai Yar, the driver of the car, and Yar War Po fled to the bank of the Thanlwin River. Police gave pursuit and captured Aik Zai Yar on the bank of the Thanlwin River. Yar War Po dived into the water and made his escape.

On 20 March, local police searched a motorbike being ridden by one Lin Aung and seized 20,000 yaba pills and 2.8 kilograms of solid opium oil in Phakant Township. Similarly, in Lashio Township on Monday, authorities stopped and searched a man named Lauk Phin who was riding a motorcycle. Police seized 3,900 yaba pills from the suspect. Charges have been filed against all suspects under the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Laws.—Myanmar Police Force

Nine wild elephants arrive in Ottarathiri

NINE wild elephants arrived on 20 March and on the move towards the northern part of Htandabin ravine.

The responsible personnel from the forestry department said that the wild elephants are native to the Ngaaik Forest Reserve in the Ngaik Township.—Aung Ko (IPRD)

Two-year old child killed in fire

A FIRE destroyed a house in Moe Gaung township, Kachin State on 20 March. The accident began at approximately 11:35am in the kitchen of a home owned by one U Thein Aung. The blaze quickly got out of control and ultimately consumed the family home. The fire was, however, put out within 12 minutes by firemen with the assistance of neighbours.

A second house was damaged in the blaze.—Township IPRD

Collapse of river bank kills a woman

A WOMAN was killed by the collapse of the bank of Nat Htoo creek on Sunday in Pakokku township, according to police. According to an investigation the police identified the victim as Daw Win Nwe, 51, from Yay Cho village, Pakokku township. According to the police she was fetching water from the creek when the bank collapsed on her.

Daw Win Nwe died on the spot. Local police are yet to make a final ruling on the case.—Kyaw Zinmyaw

Fire destroys home in Dimawhsa

A FIRE destroyed a house in Dawkhalihtlin village, Dimawhsa township, Kayah State on 20 March. The accident began at approximately 11:35am in the kitchen of a home owned by one U Ywe Yu. The blaze quickly got out of control and ultimately consumed the family home. The fire was, however, put out within 12 minutes by firemen with the assistance of neighbours. A second house was damaged in the blaze.—Township IPRD

A FIRE destroyed a house in ward 1, Nyaung Taw village, Moe Gaung township, Kachin State on 20 March. According to an investigation the fire broke out when Myo Kyaw, 14, offered candle lights to Buddha in the home while the house owner U Thein Aung was out. The fire was put out by firemen with the assistance of neighbours.

The fire killed Aung Aung Oo, 2, the son of the house owner. Police have taken action against Myo Kyaw.—200

A WOMAN was killed by the collapse of the bank of Nat Htoo creek on Sunday in Pakokku township, according to police. According to an investigation the police identified the victim as Daw Win Nwe, 51, from Yay Cho village, Pakokku township. According to the police she was fetching water from the creek when the bank collapsed on her.

Daw Win Nwe died on the spot. Local police are yet to make a final ruling on the case.—Kyaw Zinmyaw
Luxury Swiss watches go on sale in Yangon

LUXURY Swiss produced watches, with a price tags ranging between K8-300 million ($7900-260,000), have begun to go on sale in Myanmar’s commercial capital, Yangon.

A sales showroom of Frank Muller Backes & Strauss, the company which produces the high-end watches, officially opened its doors on March 20, located within Yangon’s Sedona Hotel. “Our watches are not just used for the functional purpose of telling the time, they are a status symbol of those who own them,” said Varthkess Kroadjian, CEO of Backes and Strauss. The luxury watches now on sale to the Myanmar public are the result of combined efforts of the Swiss Frank Muller watchmakers company and British Backes and Strauss diamond cutters company.

According to Nicolas Rudaz, CEO of Frank Muller, the company was founded in 1992. The back cover of our watches feature the inscription “Master of Complications”, something of great pride, he said.

The Frank Muller Backes & Strauss Yangon showroom will blend Myanmar culture, while those with an interest in the watches will be taught the industry of watchmakers.—Myanmar News Agency

Foreign imports safeguard bill to be finalised next month

THE Ministry of Commerce will finalise the draft of a new safeguard law on imports of foreign goods in April, according to the Union of Myanmar Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry (UMFCCI).

The law is being drafted by the ministry in cooperation with the UMFCCI. The drafting of the law is aimed at providing legal protection for local small and medium-sized enterprises, a spokesperson of the UMFCCI said. According to the official figures, 80 per cent of total businesses in the country are SMEs. The law will cover 36 sections and nine chapters. It will include clauses on the standardisation of import goods and taxation systems in order to prevent the possible impact of stiff market competition.

Myanmar sees a massive inflow of imported commodities, whose prices are cheaper than those of local products. The foreign trade sector has declined more in the 2015-16 fiscal year than during the same period last fiscal year. Up to the first of March this year, the foreign trade volume has reached US$25.32 billion, which is $769.56 million less than the last fiscal year.

The Ministry of Commerce is also drafting a law on value-added products and an anti-dumping law to create employment opportunities and develop the country’s import sector.—ML/Union Daily

MCDC to lease its land, buildings through tender system

THE Mandalay City Development Committee has decided to lease its land and buildings to private firms through tender system to assist in the city’s development. PHOTO: AUNG THANT KYAING

Asia Plastic conference aims to promote networks among businessmen

MYANMAR will host the Asia Plastic conference next year for the first time, said U Tun, chairman of the Myanmar Plastics Industry Association (MPIA).

The annual ASEAN Summit will also be held in 2017 in Myanmar with a focus on raising collaboration among member countries on finding solutions for the plastic-related problems and challenges as well as environmental pollution. U Tun added.

Organised by the MPIA, the conference aims to promote the country’s plastic industry and protect the livelihoods of local businesspersons. Many entrepreneurs worry about a rise in competition under the ASEAN Economic Community. During the summit, entrepreneurs from around the world will observe the current economic situation of Myanmar.—WWP/Union Daily

Exporters to pursue value-added jade products

JADE, which is one of Myanmar’s key export products to China, has a great future, according to the Ministry of Commerce.

Myanmar’s jade is mainly exported to China and India, with China being the largest buyer. Merchants from China and Hong Kong usually purchase large quantities of jadeite at gems and jewellery emporiums held in Myanmar.

Myanmar generated US$986.64 million from jade exports in the 2014-2015 fiscal year and $1.01 billion in the 2013-2014 fiscal year.

Jade was Myanmar’s second-largest export in both fiscal years. “The industry needs state-of-the-art technologies and modern equipment to create value-added jade products,” said U Tun Hla Aung, secretary of the Myanmar Gems and Jewellery Entrepreneurs Association.

“If we export the value-added products, exports of jade can generate a vast amount of foreign currency in future,” he added.

Currently, Myanmar has only exported raw jade to its trade partners.—PNN/Union Daily

TRADEMARK CAUTION
TAKEUCHI MFG. CO., LTD., a company incorporated in Japan and having its registered office at Oaza, Sakaki, Sakakimachi, Hanishina-gun, Nagano, 3890601, Japan is the owner and proprietor of the following Trademark:

Reg. No. 4/2087/2016 (4.3.2016)
In respect of “Construction machines/apparatus, Earth moving machines, Excavators, Bulldozers, Loaders (machines), Agitators for Industrial use” in International Class 7 and “Rental/leasing of the Construction machines/apparatus, Earth moving machines, Excavators, Bulldozers, Loaders (machines), Cargo handling machines/apparatus, Unloaders (machines), Agitators for Industrial use” in International Class 37.
Fraudulent or unauthorised use or actual or colourable imitation of the Mark shall be dealt with according to law.

Daw La Min May, H.G.P.
For TAKEUCHI MFG. CO., LTD.
Clo Kelvin Chia Yangon Ltd.,
Level 8A, Union Financial Centre (UFC), Corner of Mahabandoola Road & Thein Phyoo Road,
Botahtaung Tsp, Yangon,
The Republic of the Union of Myanmar.
Imtl@mkyangon.com
Dated 24 March 2015
Malaysia’s Mahathir sues PM Najib, alleging abuse of power

KUALA LUMPUR — Former Malaysian premier Mahathir Mohamad filed a suit against scandal-plagued Prime Minister Najib Razak yesterday alleging corruption and abuse of power, his law firm said, the latest salvo in Mahathir’s efforts to remove Najib from office.

But it is unlikely to have any immediate impact as it will take months before any case is heard.

Najib has come under criticism over allegations of corruption linked to the debt-laden state fund 1Malaysia Development Berhad (1MDB) and deposits into his private account worth around $680 million. He has denied any wrongdoing, maintains that he did not use the funds for personal gain and this year he was cleared of any criminal offence or corruption.

Mahathir accused Najib in the lawsuit of the “corrupt practice of carrying out various steps that were actively and deliberately taken in bad faith ... to obstruct, interfere, impede and delay the various investigations and inquiries which were being conducted by various legal enforcement agencies”.

Najib’s office did not immediately reply to requests seeking comment.

Mahathir was joined in the lawsuit by Kharuddin bin Abu Hassan and Anina binti Saadudin, former members of the United Malays National Organisation (UMNO) which Najib heads.

Mahathir on 4 March joined hands with long-standing foes, including the party of the jailed Anwar Ibrahim, to crank up pressure on Najib to quit.

In a dramatic flourish, Mahathir read a statement signed by 58 politicians and anti-corruption activists at a news conference where he was flanked by opposition leaders and some members of the ruling party he now has on board.

The plaintiffs in Wednesday’s suit are seeking exemplary damages from Najib to the government of 2.6 billion ringgit ($650 million) and aggravated damages of 42 million ringgit equal to the amounts that were allegedly deposited into Najib’s bank account.

Mahathir’s lawyer, Haniff Khatri, told Reuters it would take three months for the court to decide if the case would be heard.

“We don’t go with empty hands, (we) have material, witnesses and we are confident of the outcome,” he said. But political analysts weren’t optimistic. “The real impact is very limited in the sense of legal terms,” said Ibrahim Suffian, director of independent opinion poll firm Merdeka Centre. “This is going to be battle that is drawn out for a longer period.” — Reuters

Parliamentarians commemorate Singapore’s founding Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew

SINGAPORE — Singapore’s Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong and Members of the Parliament, both past and present, commemo- rated the country’s founding Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew yesterday at the Arts House, the Old Parliament House.

Lee Kuan Yew, who passed away on March 23, 2015, began his parliamentary career in 1955 and served as MP for Tanjong Pagar for the next 50 years, the longest period for any MP in Singapore.

That’s why MPs, gathered at the Old Parliament House to re-member him, and the values that Lee Kuan Yew and his genera-tion stood for, and the principles they steadfastly upheld in this House. Speaking at the remem-brance ceremony, Singapore’s minister for Culture, Community and Youth, leader of the House Grace Fu said that no history of Singapore’s Parliament would be complete without Lee Kuan Yew.

“My own description of Mr. Lee was that he was always prop-er,” said Abdullah Tarmugi. “This single description encapsu-lates everything the man was. His sense of integrity and of right and wrong, his discipline and stand-ards, his vision. Everything must be done right: nothing was too small to too unimportant.”

Wong Kan Seng quoted many words Lee Kuan Yew made in the Parliament in his speech. He said these words still ring loud in his ears. “Every speech by him was an enriching experience.”

“My legacy lives on in Singapore, in the values, principles and high standards that moved Singapore from third world to first,” said Wong. “I fervently hope that Singaporeans are com-mitted to same purpose as Mr. Lee had dedicated his life towards — and that fighting for a better future for us all.”

The ceremony also featured a video installation by Singapore filmmaker Royston Tan named “A Moment of Unity”, which will also be shown at the National Museum of Singapore from yesterday. Besides, a permanent ex-hibition named “The Parliament in Singapore History” was launched at the Arts House yester-day to commemorate the first anniversary of Lee Kuan Yew’s passing. The exhibition features critical historical milestones in Singapore’s history and high-lights the development of a legis-lature that contribute to Singa-pore’s growth and progress.

Cambodian, Russian ministers to meet next week over bilateral cooperation

PHNOM PENH — Cambodian Foreign Minister Hor Namhong will meet with visiting Russian Minister of Telecom and Mass Communication Nikolay Nikiforov next week to discuss ways to further enhance bilateral ties and cooperation, the foreign ministry said in statement yesterday.

The two ministers are due to co-chair the 9th session of the Cambodian-Russian intergovernmental commission for trade, economic, scientific and technical cooperation on 29 March, said the statement, adding that the protocol of the session will be signed at the end of the meeting. During his stay in Cambodia, Nikiforov is also scheduled to visit the king-dom’s famed Angkor archeologi-cal park in northeastern Siem Reap province, it said.

Cambodia and Russia have been strengthening their ties and cooperation through the exchange of high-level visits.

In November last year, Russian Prime Minister Dmitry Medvedev paid the first visit to Cambodia, where he held talks with Prime Minister Hun Sen and wit-nessed a signing ceremony of 10 bilateral agreements.—Xinhua

Indonesia-China economic relations unaffected by maritime row

JAKARTA — Indonesia’s eco-nomic relations with China are unlikely to be affected by a maritime dispute between them, Indonesia’s finance minister said yesterday.

“I don’t have any issue,” finance minister Bambang Brodjonegoro told reporters.

Indonesia this week protest-ed to China against what it called an infringement of its sovereignty by China’s coastguard.—Reuters
Pyongyang threatens to strike South Korean presidential office

PYONGYANG — The Democratic People’s Republic of Korea (DPRK) yesterday threatened to launch retaliatory strikes at South Korea’s presidential office, in response to the ongoing joint military drills by South Korea and the United States.

The DPRK’s armed forces will be oriented to wage a retaliatory battle to eliminate South Korean President Park Geun-hye’s administration, said a statement issued by the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of Korea and carried by the state-run news agency KCNA.

The strikes may start from the presidential office, Chong-wadae, or nearby locations, it added.

The statement threatened that once the buttons of large-caliber multiple rocket launchers are pushed, the presidential office would be “reduced to a sea in flames and ashes.”

On Monday, DPRK top leader Kim Jong Un guided the test firing of a new-type large-caliber multiple rocket launcher, the second time he has watched the test firing of the newly developed rocket launching system in a month.

When guiding the test firing of the new-type rocket launcher for the first time on 3 March, Kim ordered the military to be prepared to fire the country’s deployed nuclear warheads at any time.

On 7 March, South Korea and the United States kicked off their joint annual war games, dubbed “Key Resolve” and “Foal Eagle.”

The “Key Resolve” command post exercise ended last Friday, but the “Foal Eagle” field training exercises will last until 30 April.

Pyongyang has repeatedly condemned the joint military exercises, claiming that they are “war rehearsals for northward invasion.”

Australia announces A$1 billion clean energy fund, in break with past

SYDNEY — Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Turnbull said yesterday the country would establish a A$1 billion ($761.60 million) clean-energy innovation fund, in a major departure from his predecessor’s much maligned approach to combating climate change.

Conservative former Prime Minister Tony Abbott was criticized by environmental groups for lagging behind other advanced economies when he announced cuts to Australia’s greenhouse gas emissions last year.

Abbott, a climate change skeptic who was ousted in a party coup by Turnbull in September, also faced criticism for his strong support for the coal industry and for scrapping an ambitious carbon tax and emissions trading plan in 2014.

Turnbull said the new fund would focus on investing in high-tech clean energy technologies.

“That is what we’re planning to do is to not only invest on a billion dollars but boot the other opportunities,” he told reporters.

Abbott pledged that the world’s largest exporter of coal and iron ore would cut emissions by 26-28 per cent of 2005 levels by 2030, a target he submitted as part of negotiations on a global climate deal in Paris last year.

Abbott also sought and failed to scrap the country’s Clean Energy Finance Corporation and the Australian Renewable Energy Agency, which Turnbull said yesterday would be retained.

Australia is one of the largest carbon emitters on a per capita basis due to its reliance on coal-fired power plants, and critics say it has done little to match ambitious targets set by the United States and Europe.

Environment Minister Greg Hunt, speaking alongside Turnbull, said the fund would help achieve Australia’s ultimate aim of reducing emissions to zero.

“This will be investing in storage, in new battery technology, in smart grids, in some of the exciting solar visions that people have hoped for and imagined for Australia but which are only now becoming reality,” he said.

Public support for more action on climate change is strong in Australia, according to recent polls. A poll released in August by the Climate Institute showed 63 per cent of Australians wanted more action on climate change, up six percentage points from 2014. Turnbull, who has long held progressive views on climate change, has drawn criticism since coming to power for not moving more swiftly to strengthen Australia’s response to climate change.

Islamic State claims killing of Christian in Bangladesh as ‘lesson to others’

DHAKA — Islamic State claimed responsibility for stabbing a Christian to death in Bangladesh as a “lesson to others”, an online group that monitors extremist activity said, the latest killing declared by the militant group in the Muslim-majority nation. The South Asian country has seen a surge in Islamist violence in which liberal activists, members of minority Muslim sects and other religious groups have been targeted.

The US-based SITE Intelligence Group said Islamic State claimed responsibility for killing Hussein Ali Sarkar in Kurigram, north of Dhaka.

The group reported on Twitter that a “security detachment” killed the “preacher” to be a “lesson to others”.

Police said the 68-year-old victim converted to Christianity from Islam in 1999 but was not a preacher. Kurigram district police chief Tobarak Ullah said three attackers stabbed him while he was having his morning walk.

“They left the scene exploding crude bombs to create panic,” Ullah told Reuters by telephone.

Three men were picked up for questioning, he said.

Over the last few months, Islamic State has claimed responsibility for the killings of two foreigners, attacks on members of minority Muslim sects and other religious groups, but police say domestic militant group Jamaat-ul-Mujahideen was behind the attacks. At least five militants of Jamaat-ul-Mujahideen have been killed in shootouts since November, as security forces have stepped up a crackdown on militants seeking to make the moderate Muslim nation of 160 million a sharia-based state.

Fireworks factory catches fire in India, killing 5

NEW DELHI — At least five people were killed and 12 others suffered burn injuries in a fire incident at a fireworks factory in India’s western state of Rajasthan, officials said yesterday.

The explosion took place late Tuesday evening at Champa village of Kota district, about 253 km south of Jaipur city, the capital of Rajasthan.

“In a fire incident at firecracker factory here last evening, five people were killed and 12 others were injured,” an official said. “The blaze triggered explosions in the fireworks factory.”

India’s state-run broadcaster All India Radio said the injured were admitted in hospital.

The cause of explosion was not immediately known. However, primary investigations have stepped up a crackdown on motorists seeking to make the combustible material inside the factory.

Accidental explosions are common at Indian fireworks factories.

Apart from factories, many households in Indian villages are making firecrackers illegally for local religious festivals, weddings and other ceremonies.

Firecrackers are set off during festivals, weddings and other merrymaking ceremonies across India.

Australia Prime Minister Malcolm Turnbull speaks during a media conference at Parliament House in Canberra, Australia, on 21 March 2016. PHOTO: REUTERS

Here’s the rest of this page: https://www.globalnewlightofmyanmar.com/regional/2016/03/24/
Many shades of corruption

Kyaw Thura

To most people in their workday lives, the notion of ‘corruption’ seems to carry connotations of the dishonest appropriation of state funds by governmental officials for their personal gain. To others, the problem includes both the demand and the supply sides, in the sense that it takes two hands to clap. However, the definition of corruption should not be so narrow.

Much has been written about the correlation between the supply and demand sides, linking the nature of corrupt practices to the systematic, public, private and individual planes. From the Buddhist point of view, there are four corrupt practices, namely, favouritism, anger or hate, delusion or ignorance and fear or intimidation.

In its common sense, the practice of corruption has its roots bypassing red tape in government offices. Nowadays, bribery has become conventional behaviour. This systemic corruption stirs up public anger because people have to grease the palm of officers to get documents signed and permits granted.

Needless to say, many people have the tendency to boast of intimacy with authorities in the hope that such familiarity will breed favouritism. As a direct consequence, the practice of name-dropping is fashionable.

Showing favouritism in the pretext of obedience to seniors in office is a form of corruption. In addition, seniors seem to be under the delusion that asking for favours from juniors, with or without intimidation, to get things done for their relatives or acquaintances is morally justifiable. All things considered, corruption in any form is unethical.

Write for us

We appreciate your feedback and contributions. If you have any comments or would like to submit editorials, analyses or reports please email khinmaungyay@hotmail.com with your name and title.

Due to limitation of space we are only able to publish “Letter to the Editor” that do not exceed 500 words. Should you submit a text longer than 500 words please be aware that your letter will be edited.

WORLD T.B. DAY 2016

Dr. Aung Soe (a) Aung Kyaw Moe
Retired State Medical Superintendent

It sounds alarming that one-third of the entire global population is infected with Tuberculosis, a socio-economical disease. In Myanmar too T.B is a public health problem. To raise awareness among general public, World T.B. Day is held all over the world, including Myanmar on March 24 every year.

In my opinion, people should have some basic knowledge for Tuberculosis such as how it occurs, what the signs and symptoms are, how it spreads. There should also be general knowledge for TB not to be mistaken for some other similar diseases and how it is diagnosed, treated and how one could contribute to the control of the disease.

In my opinion, people should have some basic knowledge for Tuberculosis such as how it occurs, what the signs and symptoms are, how it spreads. There should also be general knowledge for TB not to be mistaken for some other similar diseases and how it is diagnosed, treated and what its possible outcome and clinical course are. Treatment, no doubt, is the task of care-givers such as doctors, nurses, laboratory technicians, assisted by social health workers, DOTS care providers and the family members.

- T.B is Airborne droplet transmission of Mycobacterium tuberculosis bacillus
- Organisms replicate within the alveoli
- The emergence of multidrug-resistant organisms is primarily due to failure to complete the required long courses of therapy
- Some positive PPDs are due to previous inoculation with BCG vaccine
- Most cases of active disease involve reactivation of a previous infection
- As such patient should live a healthy life style with proper rest, nutritious diet, suitable physical exercise, including playing Chinlon, avoidance of tobacco and excess liquor. Tuberculosis should not be mistaken for
  - Bacterial pneumonia
  - Lung cancer
  - Sarcoidosis
  - HIV
  - Congestive Heart Failure
  - Fungal infection
  - Lung abscess
  - Lymphoma
  - Vasculitis
  - One should be alert for such warning signs as
    - Fever
    - Night sweats
    - Weight loss
    - Fatigue
    - Cough
    - Hemoptysis
    - Pleuritic chest pain
    - Dyspnea is uncommon
    - Pleural effusion
  - Extrapulmonary involvement: Lymph nodes, bones, joints, genitourinary, CNS, abdomen, pericardium, pleura; symptoms of organ dysfunction may be present.
  - As mentioned above, one-third of the world’s population is infected; fewer have active disease

Groups who require screening PPDs: HIV, close contacts of active TB cases, IV drug users, DM, silicosis, immunosuppression, cancer cases, ESRD, health care workers, low-income and immigrant groups.

To diagnose TB:
- Chest X-ray
  - Primary TB: Lower lung infiltrates; adenopathy
  - Latent TB: Nodules and fibrosis in upper lung
  - Reactivation TB: Upper lung infiltrates, cavitation

Disseminated TB:
- Miliary TB: Disseminated small nodules
- Ghon complex: Granuloma with bacilli in center plus calcified lymph node
- Sputum (on two samples): Shows acid-fast bacilli
- Tuberculin skin test (PPD): Most common screening test
  - 15 mm of induration is positive if no risk factors
  - 10 mm of induration is positive for patients at risk
  - 5 mm is positive for patients with HIV, recent exposure, or suggestive CXR
- HIV testing should be done in all new TB patients
- Biopsy (node, liver, or bone marrow) to confirm diagnosis in extrapulmonary TB

Regarding Prognosis and Clinical Course:
- Primary TB: Usually asymptomatic or a self-limited; noninfectious; leads to latent TB
- Active TB: Clinical symptoms; positive sputum, or CXR consistent with TB; 65-95% 5-year mortality if untreated; easily curable
- Latent TB infection: Positive PPD but no clinical, CXR, or culture proof of active infection; TB may reactivate when the immune system is weakened
- Disseminated TB: Inadequate host defenses (i.e., HIV) allow systemic spread (diffuse, multiple, small nodes of infection) with multiorgan symptoms
- 90% of cases remain latent; never become active
- Treatment cures more than > 95 per cent

Management includes:
- Report cases to public health authorities
- Respiratory isolation
- There are multipledge lines of treatment with slight differences.
- Active TB: Isoniazid (INH) and rifampicin (Rif) for 6 months plus pyrazinamide (PZA) for 2 months
- Add ethambutol in areas of INH resistance (most of the US) pending culture
  - Multidrug-resistant TB is known
  - Extrapulmonary TB: Same treatment as active TB
  - Latent TB should be treated due to possibility of active transformation—especially in high-risk groups
  - INH for 9 months or Rif for 4 months
  - Rif/PZA for 2 months (caution in liver disease)
  - Treat latent infection unless previously treated
- BCG vaccine is unreliable—disregard previous BCG exposure in evaluation of patients

Although treatment is mainly concerned with National Tuberculosis Program, Ministry of Health, co-operated with INGOs; NGOs, in the form of Public Private Partnership (PPP). Community participation is the key and all community members should be aware of this public health problem and socio-economic hazard.

******

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor

GIBBONS represent different species and sub species of majestic Asian apes like the orangutan and are distributed across SW China, NE India, Bangladesh and SE Asia. All the gibbon species from China across India and SE Asia are severely impacted by anthropogenic pressures and are in urgent need of conservation. One of the highly endangered ape species of Asia and grossly under studied are facing vulnerability of habitat fragmentation and destruction due to illegal encroachments by local human residents and poachers, indiscriminate poaching and illegal capture for the underground pet trade and wildlife markets of China, South and SE Asia, Far East, Middle East and Western nations. Apes are closer to humans in terms of evolution and their behaviors are important in understanding both human and animal behaviors and the intricate evolutionary linkages among them. Although other ape species such as gorillas, chimpanzees, bonobos and orangutans are well studied; however, very little behavioral studies have been conducted on highly intelligent species like gibbons in Asia in their natural habitats. Exploring the intricate life of these highly intelligent, vocal, territorial and arboreal ape species could throw important lights in the evolutionary understanding of their behaviors.

Sincerely yours
Saikat Kumar Basu

Thanking you
JPN grants US$739,262 for four schools, one road construction

Shweku Bridge needs repairs

Mandalay traffic light control centre undergoes testing
Obama challenges Communist-led Cuba with call for democracy

HAVANA — US President Barack Obama challenged Cuba’s Communist government with an unexpected call for democracy and economic reforms on Tuesday, addressing the Cuban people directly in a historic speech broadcast across the island.

Taking the stage at Havana’s Grand Theater with President Raul Castro in attendance, Obama said he was in Cuba to extend a hand of friendship and “bury the last remnant” of the Cold War in the Americas.

But he also pressed hard for economic and political reforms and greater openness in a one-party state where the government stifles dissent. Internet access is low and the media is in state hands.

His speech was the high point of a 48-hour trip made possible by his agreement with Castro in December 2014 to cast aside decades of hostility that began soon after Cuba’s 1959 revolution, and work to normalise relations.

Nonetheless, Obama threw down a very public gauntlet to Castro, saying Cubans cannot realise their full potential if his government does not allow change and relax its grip on Cuban politics and society.

“I believe citizens should be free to speak their minds without fear,” Obama told the audience on the final day of his visit. “Voters should be able to choose their governments in free and democratic elections.”

“Not everybody agrees with me on this, not everybody agrees with the American people on this but I believe those human rights are universal. I believe they’re the rights of the American people, the Cuban people and people around the world,” Obama said.

The hand-picked audience cheered him repeatedly, especially when he criticised the long-standing US economic embargo against Cuba, spoke glowingly of Cubans’ talents and praised the country’s achievements in healthcare and education.

Obama, the son of a Hawaii-born woman and a Kenyan father, was born and raised in Hawaii and has Sudanese ancestry.

The spectacle of the leader of the United States, the superpower to the north for long regarded by Cuba’s government, standing in Havana and urging such changes in a speech broadcast into homes across the island would have been unthinkable before the two countries began their rapprochement 15 months ago.

Since then, Obama has repeatedly used his executive powers to relax trade and travel restrictions, while also pushing Cuba to accelerate cautious market-style reforms introduced by Castro and allow greater political and economic freedom.

Castro has welcomed Obama’s moves while insisting that a new relationship with the old enemy does not mean Cuba plans to change its political system.

The audience of more than 1,000 people at Obama’s speech on Tuesday included officials and business people from both countries, US lawmakers and members of Cuba’s cultural elite.

Castro welcomed Obama’s moves, while insisting that a new relationship with the old enemy does not mean Cuba plans to change its political system.

Cuba has welcomed Obama’s moves, while insisting that a new relationship with the old enemy does not mean Cuba plans to change its political system.

Cuban President Raul Castro, standing in Havana and urging such changes in a speech broadcast across the island, would have been unthinkable before the two countries began their rapprochement 15 months ago.

Obama told the audience on the final day of his visit: “Not everybody agrees with me on this, not everybody agrees with the American people on this but I believe those human rights are universal. I believe they’re the rights of the American people, the Cuban people and people around the world,” Obama said.

The hand-picked audience cheered him repeatedly, especially when he criticised the long-standing US embargo against Cuba, spoke glowingly of Cubans’ talents and praised the country’s achievements in healthcare and education.

Standing at a lectern flanked by US and Cuban flags, he laid out a vision of future relations and told Cubans “it’s up to you” to take steps to change the country.

Obama pointedly stopped short of what some of his critics had demanded — that he echo US President Ronald Reagan’s famous exhortation in a 1987 speech in West Berlin for Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to tear down the Berlin Wall — but he repeated a famous exhortation in a 1987 speech in West Berlin for Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to tear down the Berlin Wall — but he repeated the famous exhortation in a 1987 speech in West Berlin for Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to tear down the Berlin Wall — but he repeated the famous exhortation in a 1987 speech in West Berlin for Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to tear down the Berlin Wall — but he repeated the famous exhortation in a 1987 speech in West Berlin for Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to tear down the Berlin Wall.

The messages were accompanied by packages of infant formula laced with pesticide 1080 and demanded that use of the toxic pesticide be stopped. Kerr’s business sold a competing pesticide.

Police said in October they had arrested a man after an 11-month investigation. A court in Auckland, New Zealand’s largest city, found that Kerr was motivated by financial gain.

“The impact on Fonterra, Federated Farmers and the potential impact on New Zealand’s trade relationships with China and other countries was extremely serious,” said Justice Geoffrey Venning in sentencing Kerr.

China is the biggest buyer of New Zealand dairy products. The head of a New Zealand exporters’ group said last year there had been a fall in Chinese demand after the threat to infant formula, which is prized among China’s middle class.

Zimbabwe to ban foreign firms in breach of local ownership law

HARARE — Zimbabwe will from April cancel licences for foreign firms, including those operating mines and banks, that have not complied with a law to sell majority shares to locals, Empowerment Minister Patrick Zhuwau said yesterday.

“It’s either you comply or you close shop,” Zhuwau said.

Zimbabwe had given foreign-owned firms a March 2016 deadline to submit plans on how to comply with a law requiring them to sell at least 51 percent shares to locals.

Arrested United State sailor admits to Okinawa rape charge

NAHA — A US Navy sailor arrested on suspicion of raping a Japanese woman in Okinawa has admitted to the charge, having initially denied it, investigative sources said yesterday.

Justin Castellanos, 24, a seaman at the US Marines’ Camp Schwab in northern Okinawa, was arrested on March 13 on suspicion of raping the woman in her 40s at a hotel in the prefectural capital of Naha early that morning.

Police allege Castellanos took the woman, a tourist from southwestern Japan’s Fukuoka Prefecture, into his room after finding her asleep in a hotel corridor and raped her there.

The suspect and the woman were both staying at the hotel but were not acquainted, the police said.

The alleged rape has stirred protests by thousands of people in Okinawa, which hosts the bulk of US military facilities in Japan.

Russian transport regulator starts checks on budget airlines — TASS

BRUSSELS — The Brussels airport attacker still at large named as Najim Laachraoui — DH

BRUSSELS — The Brussels airport attacker still at large is Najim Laachraoui, 25, a man already sought by the police since Monday, Belgian newspaper DH said.

Laachraoui’s DNA has been found in houses used by the Paris attackers last year, prosecutors said on Monday, and he had travelled to Hungary in September with Paris attacks prime suspect Salah Abdeslam.

NZ man jailed for 8 years over infant formula contamination threat

WELLINGTON — A businessman was sentenced to eight-and-a-half years in prison yesterday for threatening to contaminate infant formula in New Zealand, the world’s largest dairy exporter.

Jeremy Kerr pleaded guilty to two counts of blackmail after sending threatening letters to New Zealand’s national farmers’ group and dairy giant Fonterra in 2014.

The messages were accompanied by packages of infant formula laced with pesticide 1080 and demanded that use of the toxic pesticide be stopped. Kerr’s business sold a competing pesticide.

Police said in October they had arrested a man after an 11-month investigation. A court in Auckland, New Zealand’s largest city, found that Kerr was motivated by financial gain.

“The impact on Fonterra, Federated Farmers and the potential impact on New Zealand’s trade relationships with China and other countries was extremely serious,” said Justice Geoffrey Venning in sentencing Kerr.

China is the biggest buyer of New Zealand dairy products. The head of a New Zealand exporters’ group said last year there had been a fall in Chinese demand after the threat to infant formula, which is prized among China’s middle class.
Belgium bombings raise security alerts at US airports

NEW YORK — Major US transportation hubs were placed on alert on Tuesday after bomb attacks in Brussels, killing at least 30 people, with police issuing a travel alert for Brussels airports.

The Brussels bombings revealed the onerous security measures being put in place globally to combat terrorism, as police and security officials worldwide have feared has happened.

Many refugees cannot afford the fees for medical care imposed by the Jordanian government in 2014, and some, injured in the Syrian conflict, have died after being turned away at the border, Amnesty said in a statement.

There are 630,000 Syrian refugees in Jordan, and 370,000 in Lebanon, according to UNHCR, the vast majority of them living in poverty outside the refugee camps. The UN refugee agency has contributed to the problem, as only 26 per cent of those requesting asylum have been granted access to the critical care they need.

Refugees who have left the camps unofficially or re-entered Jordan after going back to Syria are not eligible to receive documents required by the Jordanian authorities to obtain public services, including health care, it said.

Failing humanitarian support has contributed to the problem, as only 26 per cent of Jordan’s funding requirements for health had been met at the end of 2015, Amnesty said.

Some refugees with critical injuries have been denied access, despite a provision allowing entry for those with war-related injuries, since Jordan imposed restrictions in 2012 on Syrians trying to cross the border, Amnesty said.

The main reasons for refusal of entry were lack of identity documents (ID) or the injuries not being life-threatening, it said.

In July, 14 injured people, among them five children, were prevented from entering Jordan and four of them died while waiting at the border, Amnesty said.

Over 30 killed in Brussels terror attacks, police hunt suspect

BRUSSELS — Over 30 people were killed and about 230 others were injured as explosions hit the international airport and a subway station in the Belgian capital Brussels on Tuesday. Authorities said, with police issuing a wanted notice for a suspect thought to be involved.

Two of them are thought to have carried out suicide attacks at the airport, killing 14 people, while the third man could be large, according to Belgian federal prosecutor Frederic Van Leeuw.

Another explosion at the Maelbeek subway station near the European Union headquarters in the Belgian capital killed at least 20 people.

Islamic State said in a statement posted online that their attackers carried out the suicide bombings and “black days” will be brought in return for aggression against the group.

The Islamic State-linked Amaq Agency earlier said, “Islamic State fighters carried out a series of bombings with explosive belts and devices on Tuesday, targeting an airport and a central metro station.”

The report implied that the attacks were mounted in Brussels because Belgium is “a country participating in the international coalition against the Islamic State.”

In raids across the country, police found a nail-filled bomb and an Islamic State flag in an apartment in the municipality of Schaerbeek, north of Brussels.

Belgian Prime Minister Charles Michel said at a press conference, “What we have feared has happened. Our country and citizens have been hit by a terrorist attack, in a violent and cowardly way.”

“I would like to stress that in this tragic and dark moment for our country, I call for calm and solidarity. We are facing a difficult time, but we have to face this unified as one.”

—Kyodo News
Zimbabwean ‘wizard’ bewitches a bumper crop amid drought

GAU — Among his neighbours, Philip Tshuma, 67, is considered a wizard who commands the rains with the help of goblins. How else could he grow a bumper crop of ripening maize, sorghum, millet and peanuts in a season when many farmers in Zimbabwe have written off their crops?

In truth, the farmer from Gau, a village in arid Hwange District, about 450 km north of Bulawayo, can’t control the weather. But he can predict it fairly accurately.

Using a well-worn record book, a green plastic rain gauge, and a mobile phone on which he receives climate-related information via SMS, Tshuma makes farming decisions based on the weather patterns in his area, including when to plant, how to till the soil and how much fertiliser to apply.

Tshuma is one of a thousand small-scale farmers in southern Zimbabwe benefiting from a project called Climate Smart Agriculture: Combating the El Niño Phenomenon. Launched in January and in 2013, the project is part of the nation’s plan to manage threats such as droughts by strengthening systems to provide early warnings about risks to agriculture from climate change and related weather problems.

Bringing together the Ministry of Agriculture’s Department of Agricultural Technical and Extension Services (AGRITEM), and local telecommunication services provider ECONET, the project teaches farmers to use weather-monitoring techniques and climate-smart agriculture practices to maintain food security in rain-scarce parts of the country.

Last season, Tshuma and his wife Sinnai harvested 1.5 tonnes of millet, one tonne of sorghum, and a quarter tonne of groundnuts. This season he expects to harvest four tonnes of millet and nearly 2.5 tonnes of sorghum, despite a drought that has slashed neighbours’ maize harvests.

“This year I have done so much better in my fields than some of my neighbours that some people say I am irrigating my crops or I have goblins who work magic. But that is not true,” Tshuma said.

With $30,000 of funding from ICRISAT, the project teaches techniques to help farmers improve their harvests while cutting their costs. Those include mulching fields to save water, planting crops in dug-out basins filled with manure, planting different types of crops together in a field and using fertiliser in small doses just where it is needed.

It also aims to convince farmers to swap their traditional crops for more drought-tolerant ones, no easy feat in a region where maize is a diet staple. “Sorghum and millet are not only climate smart but nutritionally smart. We call them smart foods because they are good for us, for good for the environment and for smallholder farmers to manage climate change, diversify their income and increase their profitability,” said David Bergvinson, ICRISAT’s director general.

Switching to more resilient crops is crucial because “climate change is hitting us hard and fast,” he said.

According to the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organisation, climate-smart agriculture can help farmers produce more and become more resilient to shocks, boosting food security even as climate change-related extreme weather strengthens.

The practices and techniques the project promotes are part of Zimbabwe’s plan to deal with climate change, submitted as part of a new global climate deal agreed in Paris last December.

The current El Niño-induced drought in Zimbabwe is one of the worst the country has seen in a quarter century. More than 3 million Zimbabweans are facing hunger due to a maize shortfall of more than 1 million tonnes, about half of what the country requires each year.

Zimbabwe has been forced to declare a state of national disaster and is appealing for $1.6 billion in food aid.—Reuters

The bow of a derelict boat possibly from the March 2011 tsunami in Japan is seen floating off the coast of Oregon, United States, in this undated photo from the Oregon Parks and Recreation Department. Priya S. Ravula

Wrecked vessel washed ashore in Oregon may be from Japan tsunami

PORTLAND — Algae and an oyster are among the clues Oregon biologists believe may link the vestiges of a sea-ravaged boat that landed on Tuesday morning near Coos Bay, about 5,000 miles (8,000 km) away — more than double the distance from Canada to Mexico, said John Chapman, a biologist from Oregon State University who is testing the samples.

In addition to the oyster and algae, biologists took a barnacle shell and a planes crab for testing.

The biology of the molluscs shows Asian origin, and the wreckage “does look like something that would have come from the tsunami,” Chapman said.

In 2012, a massive, 66-foot-(20-metre-) long dock ripped from its moorings in Japan and floated up 15 months later on a beach north of Portland, Oregon, southwest of Portland. A year ago, remains of a boat filled with live fish native to Japanese waters washed ashore. The 16-foot-(5-metre-) long chunk of boat landed on Tuesday morning near Coos Bay, about 200 miles (320 km) south of Portland, and was expected to be disposed of in a landfill by the end of the day, said Calum Stevenson, ocean shore specialist for the Oregon Parks and Recreation Department.—Reuters

Farmers Sinnai and Philip Tshuma check their sorghum crop in Gau, in Zimbabwe’s drought-stricken Hwange District. PHOTO: REUTERS

The Republic of the Union of Myanmar Ministry of Energy

MYANMAR OIL AND GAS ENTERPRISE (INVITATION FOR OPEN TENDER) (4/2016)

Open tenders are invited for supply of the following respective items in United States Dollars and Myanmar Kyats.

Sr.No Tender No. Description Remark

(1) IFB-091(15-16) Skid Mounted Crude Transfer Pump (300GPM x 5000PSI) with Engine (1) Set US$1
(2) IFB-092(15-16) Skid Mounted Crude Transfer Pump (200GPM x 1500FT HD) with Engine (1) Set US$1
(3) IFB-093(15-16) Spares for NKK Compressor KBJ2 with Waukecha L7042 Gas Engine (24) Items US$2
(4) IFB-094(15-16) Spares for NKK Compressor KB2 with Waukecha HD745 Gas Engine (21) Items US$2
(5) IFB-095(15-16) CNG Filling Dispenser (2) Units US$2
(6) IFB-096(15-16) Spares for P9390GL Waukecha Engine / Cooper MH64 Compressor and Ariel JGK4 Compressor (26) Items US$2
(7) IFB-097(15-16) Spares for Ajax DPC600 Compressor (20) Items US$2
(8) IFB-098(15-16) Spares for Waukecha 12VAT 27GL Engine (4) Items US$2
(9) IFB-099(15-16) Spares for Waukecha L7042 GSE Engine and Ariel JGK4 Compressor (9) Items US$2
(10) IFB-100(15-16) Spares for Waukecha F2895 Engine and Ariel JG22 Compressor (53) Items US$2
(11) IFB-101(15-16) Spares for PLC304 Derrick Shaker Unit (7) Items US$2
(12) IFB-102(15-16) Coalescing Gas Filters (Horizontal Type) (2) Nos US$2
(13) IFB-103(15-16) Maintenance and Inspection Requirements for Ywama Gas Distribution Station (1) Lot US$2
(14) IFB-104(15-16) Maintenance and Inspection Requirements for PLC (Daw Nyein) (1) Lot US$2
(15) DMP/L-018(15-16) HP Au Copier / Plotter and Digital Multi Function Colour Copier (A3) for Geological Use (2) Items US$2
(18) DMP/L-021(15-16) Air Compressor (6 x 4”) Reciprocatong with 12-13HP Diesel Engine) (4) Sets US$2
(19) DMP/L-022(15-16) Water Transfer Pump with Motor and Water Transfer Pump with Engine (2) Items US$2

Tender Closing Date & Time

21st March, 2016 at the Finance Department, Myanma Oil and Gas Enterprise, No(44) Complex, Nay Pyi Taw, Myanmar.

Myanmar Oil and Gas Enterprise

Ph. +95 67 - 411097 / 411206

The Republic of the Union of Myanmar Ministry of Energy

Myanmar Oil and Gas Enterprise (Invitation for Open Tender) (4/2016)
Congratulations!

The Chairman and central executive committee of the Myanmar Gems And Jewellery Entrepreneurs Association (MGJEA) have congratulated U Aung Ko Win, patron of MGJEA and chairman of Kanbawza Bank Limited, on his standing first for four consecutive years out of 1,000 entrepreneurs who pay the highest amount of income tax throughout the country for the 2014-2015 tax assessment year according to the announcement dated 18 March, 2016 released by the Internal Revenue Department, Ministry of Finance, the Republic of the Union of Myanmar, and wished him defending this position for many, many years to come through exertion of increased effort to contribute towards nation-building activities.

Chairman and executive committee, Myanmar Gems and Jewellery Entrepreneurs Association
Director Francis Lawrence looks back on ‘The Hunger Games’ franchise

LOS ANGELES — The final DVD of “The Hunger Games” franchise is released on Tuesday, marking an end to the hugely popular series starring Jennifer Lawrence.

The four films, of which the last hit cinemas last November, were based on the dystopian trilogy by author Suzanne Collins.

And while the cast and crew have bid farewell to the franchise, some have said they would be keen to continue the adventure should Collins write a spin-off.

When asked if he would consider making another “Hunger Games” film, director Francis Lawrence told Reuters: “I would, yeah, well if it was the right idea and the right story, absolutely I would, but it would have to come from Suzanne (Collins).”

“ investors. Bruce Wayne’s technology-savvy butler turned father figure.

“There are so many injustices in the world and in our society, more and more it seems as we watch the refugees, as we watch the gap between the rich and the poor, we’d love to be able to do something about it,” Irons said in an interview.

“And our politicians don’t seem to be facing that, they’re just worrying about things that don’t seem important but catch the headlines. And I think when you go and see a film like this with these superheroes it’s just two hours where you think ‘oh yes, look how things are being changed, blowing up and I feel empowered as an audience member’, in a strange way.”

— Reuters

Anthony Hopkins feted at Royal Television Society Awards

LONDON — Oscar-winning actor Anthony Hopkins was honoured with the top acting prize at Britain’s Royal Television Society Awards.

The 78-year-old actor added another trophy to his collection at the London prizegiving as he was handed the male actor award for his performance in UK TV show “The Dresser”, beating out the likes of Tom Courtenay (Unforgotten) and Adam Long (Don’t Take My Baby), reported Contactmusic.

Former “Coronation Street” star Suranne Jones earned the female actor prize for her new drama “Doctor Foster”, claiming the honour over Wolf Hall’s Claire Foy and Home Fires’ “Claire Rushbrook”.

Harrison Ford ‘excited’ about ‘Indiana Jones 5’

LONDON — Veteran actor Harrison Ford is as excited about returning to “Indiana Jones” as his fans.

The 73-year-old actor said he was “looking forward” to working on the fifth installment of the film with Steven Spielberg, reported Digital Spy.

“I’ll be ready. I’m excited about it. Steven Spielberg (had) this chance to revisit this character which has brought pleasure to so many people...Not to mention me,” Ford said.

“It’s great fun to work with this character. It’s great fun to work with Steven. I’m looking forward to it,” he added. The new installment will be written by “Kingdom of the Crystal Skull” writer.

Indy was introduced to audiences in 1981’s classic “Raiders of the Lost Ark,” and returned in sequels “Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom” (1984) and “Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade” (1989).—PTI

Kesha appeals court decision, likening recording contract to slavery

LOS ANGELES — Pop star Kesha has appealed a court decision that ties her to a recording contract with music producer Dr. Luke, who she has accused of rape, saying the ruling was akin to slavery.

The “Tik Tok” singer, 28, has been seeking to nullify her six-album recording contract with her producer Dr. Luke, his associated record labels, and Sony Music. But a judge in February declined to release her from the contract, prompting a #FreeKesha social media campaign and an outpouring of support from big name singers including Taylor Swift, Kelly Clarkson, Lady Gaga and Miley Cyrus.

Dr. Luke, whose real name is Lukasz Gottwald, has denied allegations of rape and emotional abuse filed in a 2014 lawsuit and is countering. Both of these cases have yet to come to trial.

In court documents filed on Saturday, Kesha’s lawyer appealed the February decision by New York Supreme Court Justice Shirley Kornreich, saying the court erred in finding that Kesha could record without interference from Gottwald.

“Although it (the court) recognised that ‘slavery was done away with a long time ago’ and that ‘(y)ou can’t force someone to work...in a situation in which they don’t want to work,’ the court’s ruling requiring Kesha to work for Gottwald’s companies, purportedly without his involvement, does just that,” Kesha’s attorney Mark Geragos wrote.

Dr. Luke’s attorney, Christine Lepera, has argued that Kesha, who burst onto the music scene in 2009, is already free to record music with other producers under her contract and that she has presented no evidence to support her claims of rape.—Reuters
Pakistan’s first women-only rickshaw service struggles after just a year

LAHORE, (Pakistan) — Pakistan’s first women-only rickshaw service was to provide its staff with a new way of gaining financial independence and its passengers with a chance of a ride without being groped and harassed by male drivers.

But, after just a year in business, the “Pink Rickshaw” in the Punjabi city of Lahore, is struggling. Help has been promised by a Scotland-based charity, run by pop star Annie Lennox, and Pink Rickshaw founder, Zar Aslam, said she hopes to get the money for ten rickshaws by September. Aslam, who herself narrowly escaped kidnaping in a rickshaw when she was a student, told Reuters she had aimed to have 25 of the pink-and-white rickshaws on the road by mid-2016 but the manufacturers have sent only six, and three are too old to use. “There are several women waiting to get the rickshaws,” said Aslam, who also runs the Environment Protection Fund, a Pakistani non-profit agency. The rickshaws cost about $3,000 each, and more if you add tracking and anti-theft systems.

“The first few rickshaws we bought were expensive but now we’re looking at cheaper models,” she said. “The only disappointment is to get the funding for more rickshaws because the demand is out there and it is just a matter of getting all the funds together,” Aslam said. That would help women who, like Parveen Bibi, want to zip around town making a living and making life easier in a country where sexual crime is rife and often goes without being reported or punished. — Reuters

On Alexandria’s Fouad Street, some have a longing for the elegant past

ALEXANDRIA (Egypt) — Along Fouad Street, a Costa coffee shop near old buildings with Italian and French architecture reminds Egyptians that commercial ventures threaten to erase traces of Alexandria’s aristocratic past.

Named after King Fouad I, who died in 1936, the street is a throwback to a time when the arts flourished in a cosmopolitan city that is now overcrowded and dilapidated like many of Egypt’s urban centres.

Some, like architect and urban planning teacher Ahmed Hassan, are pushing to preserve some relics of the bygone era while keeping pace with growing businesses — the goal of his “Save Alex” initiative, launched in 2012.

“We aim to try to find a balance between civil society and profit-driven private sector to protect the heritage buildings from getting demolished,” Hassan told Reuters.

“We want a system where all stakeholders agree on a system to keep the heritage.”

In the past, the city founded by Alexander the Great and once considered the jewel of the Mediterranean, featured a fusion of communities — Greek, Italians, Armenians, Muslims, Christians and Jews.

Fouad Street is the most potent symbol of Alexandria’s grand history, with its elegant villas and antique shops. At a car repair shop once used to service the monarch’s vehicles, for example, mechanics work over cars from the 1930s and 1960s. Sigma, a company with a branch that has been investing in heritage buildings, hopes to keep some of the magic of the past turning a profit at the same time.

CEO Laithy Mekawy was influenced by the three years he spent as an architect in Istanbul, where he observed the restoration of historic buildings.

He turned a television company on the ground floor of the old Société Immobilière building, an 1928 Neo-Renaissance structure, into “I, Passage,” a food and cafes court with well known brands. “I’ve always loved walking on a Friday morning on Fouad street,” Laithy said, describing the weekend day in predominantly Muslim Egypt. — Reuters
Shirt sponsor revenue up 13% in top Eur-leagues

LONDON — Revenue from shirt sponsorship in Europe’s top leagues has risen 13 per cent to €330 million euros (655.9 million pounds) this season, powered by a 35 per cent increase in England’s Premier League, according to a report.

The Repucom European Football Jersey Report said revenue in 2015-16 had gone up from 736 million euros last season.

The document covered shirt sponsorship deals in the Premier League, Germany’s Bundesliga, Spain’s La Liga, Ligue 1 in France, Italy’s Serie A and the Dutch championship.

The biggest rise was in the Premier League with shirt sponsorship revenue reaching 330 million euros, almost 40 per cent of the total for Europe’s top six leagues.

“At its current rate of growth we could see European football shirt sponsorship investment top one billion euros within the next few seasons,” said Repucom UK and Ireland managing director Jon Stainer.

“The Premier League continues to drive this trend with year on year investment growing faster than any other league on the continent. It is an industry that attracts big money from abroad which underlines the appeal European football has internationally.”

The United Arab Emirates is the biggest investor in the top six leagues with 163 million euros spent on shirt sponsorship in 2015-16, an increase of nine per cent on its outlay last season.

Germany (136 million euros) is the second highest followed by the United States (87 million), driven largely by investment from the automobile sector.—Reuters

Manchester United line up pre-season games in China

LONDON — Manchester United look set to play Premier League rivals Manchester City in a ‘derby’ in Beijing in July after announcing on Sunday an eight-day pre-season tour of China.

United, who have said they will play two games in China, did not give details of dates or opponents but the Manchester Evening News reported that a game with City was pencilled in.

City have already confirmed they will play in the International Champions Cup (ICC) China tournament (www.internationalchampionscup.com) and media reports have indicated that Bundesliga side Borussia Dortmund will also be involved.

City will have a new manager by July, with Bayern Munich’s Pep Guardiola joining the club at the end of the season, while Louis van Gaal’s future at United looks increasingly uncertain with media reports linking Jose Mourinho to the job.

A consortium led by China Media Capital (CMC) Holdings and CITIC Capital agreed in December to take a stake of more than 13 per cent in the group that owns Manchester City.

China has more Manchester United fans than any other country, according to the Old Trafford club, with more than 107 million compared to Britain’s population of about 62 million.

“Manchester United has strong historical links with China and we are very proud of our relationship and of our fans throughout the country,” United vice-chairman Ed Woodward said in a statement.

“A total of almost 500,000 supporters have attended previous games during our visits to China and we have always enjoyed exceptional support in the country.”

United have made 10 trips to China, the first in 1975.

United would have a window in late July for the China tour, with the Euro 2016 finals ending on 10 July and a Wayne Rooney testimonial match scheduled for 3 August in Manchester to mark his 12 years at the club.

“The Premier League season starts on the weekend of 13 August.—Reuters

Systematic drug use in Russian swimming: The Times

BERLIN — Russia has undertaken systematic doping in swimming for years, The Times newspaper said yesterday, as the nation battles a drugs problem that could prevent the country’s track and field squad from competing at the Rio de Janeiro Olympics.

The English newspaper said its investigation had uncovered “systemic” drug use in Russia, where more than a dozen Russian swimmers were suspended in the past three years for doping.

Dr Sergey Portogolov, Chief of the Russian Athletics Federation’s Medical Commission, who was said to have provided banned substances to Russian athletes, was also involved in swimming.

Portogolov was named in a World Anti-Doping Agency (WADA) report on systematic doping in Russian athletics a few months ago.

“Calls for Russian swimmers to be excluded from the Games will grow after the investigation revealed that Portogolov, the doctor recommended for a lifetime ban by WADA as a key player at the heart of Russia’s doping scandal, actively encouraged the national swimming team to adopt a systematic doping policy,” the newspaper said.

“Since 2009, when Portugalov first offered to ‘assist’ Russian swimming, 23 swimmers have been handed suspensions for doping and the tally for all aquatics sports exceeds 40 in the past decade.”

Russian Swimming Federation President Vladimir Salnikov, a quadruple Olympic gold medallist, and the authority’s spokeswoman Margarita Balakireva were not immediately available for comment.

The report comes only a day after Russia’s wrestling federation said there were “tens” of positive tests among its athletes could miss out on the Olympics.

Russian sport was thrown into turmoil last year when a report by WADA exposed endemic cheating and corruption in Russian athletics.—Reuters

West Ham sign Lanzini on permanent deal

LONDON — West Ham United have agreed a permanent deal to sign Argentine attacking midfielder Manuel Lanzini from Al Jazira, according to the London club’s co-chairman David Sullivan.

The 23-year-old, who joined West Ham in July after netted five goals in the league and will complete the deal when the transfer window reopens.

Lanzini was brought in on a season-long loan from the UAE club last July, with an option to make the move permanent.

Sullivan confirmed that the club has signed Lanzini on a permanent deal. His son Jack Sullivan also tweeted that the player would sign a four-year contract.

He said: “Lanzini is a WHU player for the next 4 seasons, with a further 2 year option.”

Lanzini has scored six goals in 22 appearances in all competitions for West Ham.

The Buenos Aires-born midfielder made his professional debut for River Plate as a 17-year-old and spent the 2011-12 season with Brazilian club Fluminense before moving to the UAE in 2014.—Reuters