A MILITARY parade was held in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday to commemorate the 71st Armed Forces Day.

Five military parade columns under the command of parade commander Brig-Gen Aung Kyaw Hoe marched from the assembly point to the parade ground. Along the way to the parade ground, families of military personnel and local residents gave an enthusiastic welcome to the parade columns with strings of flowers. Among them were wives of the commander-in-chief of defence services, the deputy commander-in-chief of defence services and commander-in-chief (army), as well as senior military officers.

Addressing the parade, Commander-in-Chief of Defence Services Senior General Min Aung Hlaing said: “On this auspicious occasion of the Union and the Tatmadaw, I would like to emphasise that the historical coexistence of the Union and the Tatmadaw can be observed from the fact that our army was born along with the independence struggle. On account of disunity among our citizens and a lack of unified leadership and modern arms. Since the lost independence could not be regained solely with the patriotic spirit, a group of patriotic youth led by Thakhin Aung San underwent and endured military training in Hainan Island to expel the colonialist intruders,” the commander-in-chief continued.

“General Aung San and members of the Thirty Comrades made a blood-vow to sacrifice their lives for independence and formed the Burma Independence Army (BIA) on 27 December 1941. The colonialists were driven back with the active support and cooperation of people from all walks of life,” he said.

“The revolution was launched on 27 March 1945 through the collaborated efforts of the people and the Tatmadaw to deny the fascist intruders, who offered fake independence and had been suppressing the people. The day was named Revolution Day, but the name was later changed to Armed Forces Day on 27 March 1955. This renaming not only signalled perpetual collaboration between the Tatmadaw and the people but was also codified by the then-public trusted newspapers.”

Commander-in-chief addresses 71st Armed Forces Day parade

"The two main hindrances in democratisation are the lack of abiding by the rule of law, regulations and the presence of armed insurgencies. These could lead to chaotic democracy."

"Only when these two hindrances are properly tackled and overcome will there be advancement on the path to democracy, I would vow that the Tatmadaw will cooperate to bring about the prosperity of the Union and its citizens."

"The Tatmadaw will continue to serve the public interests by adopting our Three Main National Causes in building a multiparty democratic nation by joining hands with the government in order to establish a flourishing democratic society through the political transition. We will have to work with our maximum capacity of intellect and physique accompanying the unity, disciplinary codes, and abiding the law if we love our motherland and have a will to implement firm multiparty democratic system and to develop the country. We must be loyal to the state."

"The Tatmadaw must provide the full security of the state. It has to look after the people. It has to contribute to stability and development tasks of the government. The Tatmadaw, therefore, has been endeavouring for the adoption of peace, stability, unity and development policies."

"We, the military personnel, are the volunteers who join the Tatmadaw in spiritual delight. We already presupposed that we would face hardships and have to sacrifice our lives and sweat. As we are also the ones who ensure the stability of the country at this democratic transition and bring the country to the present situation with firm confidence inspired by the people, the Tatmadaw will never allow any attempt to encroach on our territory and destabilise the harmonious coexistence in the Union. We have the responsibility to take the lead in the national politics in the same way that the Tatmadaw has stood ready in the face of critical situations throughout the history of the country," the commander-in-chief said.

"When we observe the tasks assigned by the constitution to the Tatmadaw, it can be seen that it is to uphold and uplift the national interests."

Senior General Min Aung Hlaing concluded his speech, urging military personnel at all levels to maintain the noble historic traditions of the Tatmadaw at the risk of their lives and to go on working for the country in accordance with the four objectives of the 71st anniversary of the Armed Forces Day.

The four objectives are: to safeguard the Three Main National Causes as national responsibilities according to the constitution; to cooperate hand-in-hand between the Tatmadaw and all nationalities to achieve real peace; to cooperate between the government, the parliament, the military and all nationalities in satisfying the country’s fundamental needs of stability, solidarity and development; and to build up the army to effectively protect the national sovereignty and the motherland.

Rakhine fisheries by-law drafters seeking public input

PUBLIC consultations are due to take place during the end of April for the drawing up of community centres by-laws by the Rakhine Fisheries Partnership and Rakhine State Fisheries Department. The draft legislation is being drawn up with the aim of ensuring the sustainable development and systematic use of natural resources within the Rakhine State fishing sector, while discussions on the drafting of the by-laws are now in their third phase.

“The drawing up of details of these by-laws will permit the formation of community-level fishermen associations. Cooperation with co-management organisations will also create more transparency. The important thing is for them to be permitted to manage their own waters. They’ll be able to issue their own rules and regulations, said U Aung Naing, coalition facilitator of the Rakhine Fisheries Partnership.

On 27 October 2014, Rakhine State Chief Minister U Maung Maung Ohn confirmed the enactment of Section 6 of the Rakhine State Freshwater Fisheries Law, which requires the recognition of community-centred management.

“We requested the suggestions of international experts in the drafting of legislation. We’ve now held three discussion workshops, but the outcomes haven’t yet been shared with the public. That’s the difficulty with this period of a transitional government; we’re not yet able to move forward. For the moment, we’re stuck waiting,” continued U Aung Maung Ohn.

The Rakhine Fisheries Partnership was founded on 7 June 2015 and includes the Rakhine State Department of Fisheries, the Myanmar Fisheries Entrepreneurs Association of Rakhine State, parliamentarians, fishermen, fishing enterprise owners, NGOs, members of the HeT Lan group, the Rakhine Thaharya group, the Network Activities Group and Sittwe University.—Myanmar News Agency

Six million tourists expected to enter Myanmar

AROUND six million tourists are expected to come to Myanmar via three international airports and four border check points this year, said Union Minister for Hotels and Tourism U Htay Aung.

“A total of 4.68 million tourists entered Myanmar in 2015, 1.3 million of whom entered via international airports, while the rest entered through border check points. If the border gates relax their strict rules and regulations, more tourists are expected to come. Some overland visitors spend just a day or two in Myanmar,” he said.

“The infrastructure needs to be developed. International airlines and the travel agencies should hire more qualified human resources to be able to fulfil the needs of the increasing number of tourists,” said one tour agency proprietor.—200

Foreign experts, businesses to enter Myanmar

THE Ministry of Labour, Employment and Social Security will draft a bill related to the employment of foreign manpower so that foreign experts and experienced foreign businesses will enter Myanmar, said U Myo Aung, the permanent secretary of the ministry.

“Legislation will be submitted to next government. Professional qualifications will also be added to the legislation,” he said.

“This bill will be in effect to select foreign experts in business with an aim of bringing fast service [to the country],” said U Aung Maung.

The legislation aims to attract foreign experts and experienced businesses to enter Myanmar’s economy because, at the moment, there are primarily unskilled labourers in the country. Some Myanmar labourers are working abroad due to the lower salary and wages at home. The country is making efforts to cultivate job opportunities so that people do not need to work abroad.—200

Watermelon yields rise in Monywa

WATERMELON growers in Chaung Oo Township, Monywa District, are sending 200 truckloads of watermelons to Muse per day this month, which is the peak season for watermelon sales, according to U Soe Lwin, the chairman of the organisation of watermelon growers in Chaung Oo Township.

“Over 200 truckloads of watermelons are sent to China because there’s a festival on 4 April there. Prices are high, and watermelon growers are gaining profit this year, whereas they suffered losses last year,” he added.

“The township’s watermelon yield this year reached 15 tonnes, which is up from eight tonnes last year, possibly as a result of farmers using a new growing method by covering farms with black plastic bags. This year can be called the high season of watermelon growers because businessmen, farmers and farm labourers are gaining profits,” said U Soe Lwin.

“Trucks carrying watermelons from Chaung Oo pass through Mandalay and Lashio to the Muse market on the China border. Traffic jams usually happened near Hsipaw. Trucks with watermelons arrive together at the border gate. The price can decline in this regards. Commodity depots need to negotiate prices at that time. The businessmen also need to ask for it,” the chairman said.—Myo Win Htun

CHAUNGTHA and Ngwe Saung beaches will have 24-hour electricity access at the end of this year, offering tourists more comfort during their stays.

Currently, there are electric lights between Thaletkhwat Village and Pathein, Ayeyawady Region, said U Kyaw Khaing, the chairman of the Chaungtha Hotel zone.

“We can save on generator costs since a unit of electricity costs only K75. Currently, hotels and guesthouses at the beaches supply electricity from 6pm to 6am,” he said.

“If we offer electricity during more times, the charges will increase. We can’t take more changes on accommodation to cover the charges used in providing electricity. We also offer electricity from noon to 3 or 4pm in the evening to enable visitors to get air-conditioning in their rooms. We arrange this because of the scorching sun. Since the cost of electricity per unit will decline from K300 to K75, we will end up cutting costs, allowing us to offer the excellent hotel service,” he added. Visitors and tourists come to Chaungtha throughout the year. Peak tourist season is around the Thingyan Festival, followed by school holidays in December and March.—200

New opposition party launched with merger of DPJ, smaller party

TOKYO — A new opposition party was launched yesterday through the merger of the main opposition Democratic Party of Japan and the smaller Japan Innovation Party, amid questions about the new party’s ability to win public trust amid an effective challenge to the government of Prime Minister Shinzo Abe.

At the inaugural convention, Katsuya Okada, former DPJ leader, was elected as the head of the new party, “Minshinto.” The party’s official English name is the Democratic Party. The name usually reserved for “Minshuto” which the DPJ had called itself in Japan.

The new party consists of 156 lawmakers, making it the largest opposition party since the start of the Abe government in December 2012 following a low-house election that pushed the DPJ out of government and brought Abe’s Liberal Democrat-DPJ out of government and

The post of party policy leader, was elected as the head of the new party, “Minshinto.” The leader, was elected as the head of the new party, goes to Shiori Yamao, a former DPJ member serving her second term in the House of Representatives who sharply criticised the Abe government for failing to make child care available to enough numbers to mothers desperate to work.

Former DPJ Secretary General Yukio Edano has assumed the same post in the Democratic Party.

The new party’s 156 members consist of 96 lawmakers in the lower house and 60 lawmakers in the less powerful upper house. They include five lawmakers not affiliated with either the DPJ or Japan Innovation Party. The party, however, is far smaller than the coalition of Abe’s LDP and the Komeito party, which controls a majority of the 242-member upper house and more than two-thirds of the lower house.

The merger will officially be reported to the Internal Affairs and Communications Ministry on Monday.— Kyodo News

Myanmar to survey on local rice consumption

YANGON — Myanmar plans to make survey on local rice consumption this year, according to Myanmar Rice Federation (MRF) on Saturday.

Myanmar never had the actual data on local rice consumption for 20 years.

This is the big challenge for policy makers, stakeholders, investors and exporters to develop the rice sector.

The survey will be jointly carried out by MRF, Myanmar Rice and Paddy Traders Association and University of Agriculture.

The survey targets over 4,000 households living in 14 regions and states of the country.

The survey will include rice consumption amount, daily earning of each household and kind of rice they consume.

Rice is not only the main staple food of the country but also one of the main export item of the nation.

Myanmar’s rice export reached 433.82 million US dollars for the previous 2014-2015 fiscal year.

National paddy production of Myanmar was down 2 percent annually over the past three years due to flood triggered by Cyclone Komen in late July and early August, according to the UN report. — Xinhua

Construction of Indonesian coal-fired power plant to start — media

TOKYO — The construction of a $4 billion, 2,000-megawatt coal-fired power station in Indonesia will begin on 1 April after years of delay as land acquisitions are finally complete, Japan’s Nikkei business daily said yesterday.

Neither Ichu nor J-Power could be immediately reached for comment.

Indonesia’s Supreme Court has thrown out a landholders’ lawsuit on technical grounds, paving the way for the government to take over the remaining land for the project.

The prospect of raising funds for the project were also good, the newspaper said in a report from Jakarta. It did not elaborate or give its sources.

Indonesia’s president Joko Widodo hosted the groundbreaking ceremony of the project last August with great fanfare but no ground was actually broken, with dozens of landowners refusing to give up their paddies fields.

The Batang plant was among a handful of new infrastructure projects that Indonesia hoped to finally get off the ground to ease power shortages in the Southeast Asian nation.— Reuters

Nepal’s international airport temporarily closed after bomb scare

KATHMANDU — Nepal’s Tribhuvan International Airport has been temporarily closed following a bomb scare in a Jet Airways aircraft that arrived from New Delhi yesterday, local media reports said quoting government officials.

Deputy inspector general of Nepal police, Pratap Singh Thapa, told local media that all incoming and outgoing flights have been halted following the bomb threat at Nepal’s only international airport. All the passengers in the aircraft were evacuated from the plane and their baggage are currently being screened, Thapa added.

Missing Chinese columnist released from custody

BEIJING — A prominent Chinese columnist has been released after being detained earlier this month, possibly in connection with an online letter critical of China’s President Xi Jinping, his lawyer said yesterday.

Jia Jia, who writes a regular column for Tencent Online, went missing late on 15 March, around the time he was scheduled to board a flight from Beijing to Hong Kong.

His lawyer, Yan Xin, told Reuters earlier police had detained Jia at a Beijing airport.

Jia had warned former colleagues of the danger of re-publishing an open letter calling for Xi to resign.

Yan said yesterday it was “not convenient” to elaborate on the precise reasons for Jia’s detention. He declined to confirm if it was related to the letter.

“He has been released and has already returned home,” Yan said. Yan said Jia was not available for comment.

Yan told Reuters earlier that Jia said he had not written the letter critical of Xi, but expressed concern that something could happen to him because of his warnings to colleagues about it.

Calls seeking comment from Beijing police yesterday went unanswered.

Xi has embarked on an unprecedented effort to clamp down on the Internet and censor opinions that do not reflect those of Communist Party leaders, including by imposing tougher penalties for what the government calls spreading rumours via social media.

The online letter, circulated widely at the beginning of China’s parliamentary session this month and signed by “a loyal Communist Party Member”, blamed Xi for “unprecedented problems”.

Jia’s disappearance had attracted international concern from rights groups such as Amnesty International.

A New York-based Chinese Internet activist told Reuters earlier police in Guangdong Province had detained three members of his family in connection with the same open letter.

Reuters could not independently confirm this and police in Guangdong Province, where the activist’s family lives, and foreign ministry spokesmen, were not available for comment.—Reuters

Australian actor Hugh Jackman helps swimmers to safety from dangerous surf

SYDNEY — Australian actor Hugh Jackman turned real-life action hero at Sydney’s Bondi Beach on Saturday, when he helped his son and another man to safety from strong currents in the surf.

Jackman is shown linking hands with a man and pulling him from a fast-flowing channel onto a sandbar, where the water is shallow, in television footage broadcast by the Nine Network.

The network said Jackman later helped his own son, Oscar, 15, from the same current.

Peter Adam, who told Nine he was the man Jackman helped, said he wasn’t rescued by the film star.

“He wasn’t rescuing me, I was assisting him to get his daughter up to the sandbar. He then grabbed my hand to get us up,” Adam said.

The actor is also shown beckoning other swimmers to shore, away from a rip current flowing out to sea.

Jackman was at the beach with his family, Sydney’s Sunday Telegraph newspaper reported. Witness Lynsey Murphy told the paper that surf conditions changed quickly, but that Jackman stayed calm.

“When we got in the water 20 minutes earlier it was fine. Then the water just came up suddenly,” she said.

“Hugh just pulled them calmly on to the sandbar. He then said: ‘All right, we are going to walk towards the flags’.”

A lifeguard told the paper that the beach was later closed because of dangerous surf.—Reuters

Japan, Russia agree on salmon, trout quota for Japan

TOKYO — Japan and Russia have agreed that Tokyo’s fishing quota of Russian salmon and trout in Japan’s exclusive economic zone will total 2,050 tons in 2016, the same amount agreed for 2015, according to the Fisheries Agency.

The two countries also discussed the quota for Japanese fishermen of the fish in the Russian EEZ in 2016 as well as alternative fishing methods to drift-net fishing which Russia has banned since January in its economic waters, the agency said.

But they have yet to reach an agreement and will discuss the matter in Moscow in April or thereafter.

Salmon and trout belong to the country with the river in which the eggs were laid. Japan and Russia have accordingly set annual quotas of Russian salmon and trout for Japanese fishermen within Japan’s exclusive zone as well as the Russian zone.—Kyodo News

Rule of Law and Human Rights

Dr. Khine Khine Win

In recent years, there has been an increased interest in rule of law as an assurance of stability, human rights and economic development. Rule of law takes on several meanings and it does not have a precise definition. Its meaning can vary between different nations and legal traditions. For instance, in the definition proposed by United Nations: “the rule of law refers to a principle of governance in which all persons, public and private including the State itself are accountable to laws that are publicly promulgated equally enforced and independently adjudicated and which are consistent with international human rights norms and standards” (UN Security Council 2004). In addition according to Collins Student’s dictionary, the rule of law is “the principle that everyone is subject to law”. Everyone means every human being.

There is also no precise meaning for human rights. Nevertheless, 1993 World Conference on Human Rights affirmed the crucial connection between the international peace and security and the rule of law and human rights placing them all within the larger context of democratization and development. It shows that universality agreed the rule of law and human rights are interlinked and mutually reinforcing as well as the rule of law and the maintenance of human rights are connected. Indeed, the rule of law is woven into the structure of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, UDHR from the very beginning. UDHR states in his preamble that ‘whereas it is essential, if man is not to be compelled to have recourse, as a last resort, to rebellion against tyranny and oppression, that human rights should be protected by the rule of law’.

Nowadays, the international human rights regime has become more substantial in nature as it has become more powerful. As a result, there is now greater awareness of a number of legislative, constitutional, normative, political and practical weaknesses on human rights framework. In this connection, NAVI PILLAY, former United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, said the rule of law was the backbone for the legal protection for human rights. Likewise, it must be grounded in human rights. Where as respect for the rule of law demanded compliance with the principles of equal legal protection and prohibiting of discrimination on any grounds, such as race, sex, disability, language, religion, national or social origin, and property.

The rule of law should be a living reality properly understood by ordinary people. It is constitutionally more important than is generally realized. In other words, the rule of law as supreme as the constitution itself. United Nations Secretary-General BAN KI-MOON said the rule of law was like the law of gravity: it ensured that the world remained grounded, so that order prevailed over chaos. It is the underpinning of all values, anchoring us in the common good. But unlike gravity, rule of law must be nourished by continued efforts by genuine leaders. Strengthening rule of law meant consolidating the United Nations’ three pillars: peace, development and human rights. So strengthening rule of law is crucial for human rights and also strengthening the rule of law fosters an environment that facilitates sustainable human development and the protection and empowerment of women, children and vulnerable groups.

When countries fail to establish justice and rule of law, peace and stability are suffer first. So strengthening security, strengthening peace, strengthening justice, strengthening stability must be done through the rule of law.

Indeed, the rule of law is the vehicle for the promotion and protection of all human rights. At the national level, the rule of law is at the heart of the social contract between the State and individuals under its jurisdiction and it ensures that justice permeates society at every level. It guarantees the protection of the full range of human rights and drives protection of human rights.

As you all know well, State has the prime obligation to respect, protect and fulfill of human rights for their citizens. The obligation to respect means that States must refrain from interfering with or curtailing the enjoyment of human rights. The obligation to protect requires States to protect individuals and groups against human rights abuses. The obligation to fulfill means that States must take positive action to facilitate the enjoyment of basic human rights. Responsibility to protect human rights resides first and foremost with the states themselves.

I cling to my belief in rule of law because it is important. It may be the single greatest achievement of our society. It is the vessel that keeps all our other values safe and establishing the justice, stability and growth required for sustainable development and poverty eradication. As I mentioned before rule of law is the vehicle for the promotion and protection of human rights. So if we have excellent vehicle we don’t need to worry about the enjoyment of human rights. Rule of law vehicle drives us to full enjoyment of our rights and fundamental freedom.

Without establishment of rule of law, respect of human rights can never ever happen.

Rural health branches established in remote areas

NEARLY 80 rural health branches have been established in rural areas by the Health Ministry with the assistance of the Third Millennium Development Goals Fund (3MDG), an international non-governmental organisation.

The rural health branches were designed by the United Nations Office for Project Services (UNOPS). The Ministry of Health, 3MDG and UNOPS infrastructure unit selected the villages, which are located in areas and have no existing health branches.

3MDG has delivered sustainable, efficient and responsive health-care services across Myanmar to improve maternal, newborn and child health and combat HIV and AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria. 3MDG to spend US$275 million on the improvement of health services in Myanmar.

Myanmar suffers from high maternal and child mortality. At least 2,400 pregnant women and 70,000 children die each year, largely from preventable causes. The leading causes of death by disease in Myanmar are tuberculosis, malaria and HIV/AIDS.—200

Mexicans burn Donald Trump effigies in Easter ritual

MEXICO CITY — Mexicans celebrating an Easter ritual late on Saturday burned effigies of US Republican presidential hopeful Donald Trump, whose anti-immigrant views have sparked outrage south of the American border.

In Mexico City’s poor La Merced neighbourhood, hundreds of cheering residents yelled “death” and various insults as they watched the explosion of the grinning paper-mâché mock-up of the real estate tycoon, replete with blue blazer, red tie and his trademark tuft of blond hair.

Media reported that Trump effigies burned across Mexico, from Puebla to Mexico’s industrial hub Monterrey.

The burning is part of a widespread Mexican Holy Week tradition where neighbourhoods burn effigies to represent Judas Iscariot, who betrayed Jesus Christ according to the Bible. The effigies are often modeled on unpopular political figures.

“Since he started his campaign and began talking about immigrants, Mexico, and Mexicans, I said ‘I’ve got to get this guy,’” said Felipe Linares, the artisan who crafted Trump and whose family has been making Judases for more than 50 years.

Trump, the front-runner to win the Republican presidential nomination for the 8 November election, has been accused by his party with his proposals to keep out illegal immigrants and drugs, and to make Mexico pay for it.

Mexican President Enrique Pena Nieto has said his country will not pay for the wall and likened Trump’s “strident tone” to the ascent of dictators like Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini.

Trump, who has also aroused concern among many in his own party with his proposals, has accused Mexico of sending rapists and drug runners across the border and vowed to send back their own nuclear arsenal would reduce pressure in the United States to come to their defence against North Korea and China. The United States “cannot be the policeman of the world,” Trump said and suggested that Tokyo and Seoul would move in that direction anyway if Washington “keeps on its path, its current paths of weakness.”—Kyodo News

Vucic: Facts, not names, matter when it comes to crime

BELGRADE — Serbian Prime Minister Aleksandar Vucic said Saturday that he was heading a government to which crimes and criminals did “not differ in name and surname,” but only in whether someone had committed a crime or not.

“Only do we not make a distinction according to whether a crime was committed by members of the Serbian nation or a crime was committed against Serbs. This shows the greatness of our nation and the seriousness and responsibility of the government,” Vucic told reporters.

The prime minister said following the judgment against Radovan Karadzic in The Hague that it was now more important to talk about human victims, suffering and reconciliation than about legal and political implications that the ruling might have.

Vucic said that everyone kept forgetting that Serbia had been the first to arrest those who had committed the crime in Srebrenica, and it was the only country in the region that had arrested those who had committed crimes purporting it to be in the name of Serbia.

“I have not seen any other country do that,” Vucic said.—Tanjug

Trump open to Tokyo and Seoul having nuclear weapons

WASHINGTON — US presidential candidate Donald Trump has said he is open to the idea of both Japan and South Korea developing their own nuclear weapons and would be willing to withdraw US troops from their soil, the New York Times reported in its online edition on Saturday.

In an interview with the major US newspaper, the front runner for the Republican presidential nomination said that allowing the two countries to have their own nuclear arsenal would reduce pressure in the United States to come to their defence against North Korea and China. The United States “cannot be the policeman of the world,” Trump said and suggested that Tokyo and Seoul would move in that direction anyway if Washington “keeps on its path, its current paths of weakness.”—Kyodo News

Missing Saitama girl taken into custody in Tokyo after 2 years

TOKYO — A 15-year-old girl who had gone missing from her home in Asaka, Saitama Prefecture, just outside Tokyo, two years ago, was taken into custody in Tokyo yesterday by police in connection with a murder.

The junior high school student had last been seen speaking with a young man in front of her home on 10 March, 2014. At that time, a note was found in a letterbox at her home with her handwriting saying, “Don’t look for me.”

Police were looking into her disappearance as a possible criminal case. Then yesterday, police took her into custody in Nakano Ward.

In a phone call to police the girl pleaded for help, saying the man she was with left her alone, so she took the opportunity to call police for assistance, according to an investigative source.—Kyodo News

Islamic State driven out of Syria’s ancient Palmyra city

BEIRUT — Syrian government forces recaptured Palmyra yesterday, state media and a monitoring group said, inflicting a significant defeat on the Islamic State group which seized the city last year and dynamited its ancient temples.

Syrian television quoted a military source saying the army and its militia allies took complete control of the city and were clearing mines and bombs laid by the militants.

The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said there was still gunfire in the eastern part of the city yesterday morning but the bulk of the Islamic State force had pulled out and retreated east, leaving Palmyra under President Bashar al-Assad’s control.

For government forces, the recapture of Palmyra opens up much of Syria’s eastern desert stretching to the Iraqi border to the south and to Islamic State territory in Deir al-Zor and Raqqa to the east. It follows a three-week campaign by the army and its allies on the ground, backed by intensive Russian air strikes, aimed at driving Islamic State back.

Russia’s intervention in September turned the tide of Syria’s five-year-old conflict in Assad’s favour. Despite its announcement that it was pulling out most military forces two weeks ago, Russian jets and helicopters carried out dozens of strikes daily over Palmyra at the height of the clashes.

Observatory director Rami Abdurrahman said 400 Islamic State fighters were driven out of the city of Shadadi in neighbouring Iraq, the first major victory for Iraq’s army since it collapsed in the face of an assault by the militants in June 2014.

Islamic State has lost ground elsewhere, including the Iraqi city of Tikrit last year and the Syrian town of Shadadi in February. The United States said the fall of Shadadi was part of efforts to cut Islamic State’s links between its two main power centres: the cities of Mosul in Iraq and Raqqa in Syria. The Observatory said around 180 government soldiers and allied fighters were also killed in the campaign to retake Palmyra, which is home to some of the most extensive ruins of the Roman empire.

Islamic State militants dynamited several monuments last year, but Syria’s antiquities chief said the thefts had not hampered their efforts to topple the regime.

Belgium charges airport suspect, calls off Brussels ‘march against fear’

BRUSSELS — Belgian prosecutors charged three men on Saturday with terrorist offences over the Brussels bomb attacks and authorities called off a planned ‘march against fear’ in the jittery capital to relieve pressure on an over-taxed police force.

The suicide bomb attacks targeting Brussels airport and a rush-hour metro train on Tuesday killed 31 people, including three of the attackers, and injured hundreds more. Islamic State has claimed responsibility.

Amid increasing signs that the attacks were carried out by the same militant network that was behind bombings and shootings in Paris last November that killed 130 people, German lawmakers said Europe urgently needed to improve the way its security agencies share information.

Of the three men charged on Saturday, Aboubakar A. and Rabah N., were accused of terrorist activities and membership of a terrorist group.

Rabah N. was wanted in the Brussels district of Schaerbeek for a terror plot. The other two charged on Saturday, Aboubakar A. and Rabah N., were accused of terrorist activities and membership of a terrorist group.

The other two charged on Saturday, Aboubakar A. and Rabah N., were accused of terrorist activities and membership of a terrorist group.

Belgium’s interior ministry said it had rejected a call to set up a memorial on the site of the explosions at Maelbeek metro station and a nearby airport.

The other two charged on Saturday, Aboubakar A. and Rabah N., were accused of terrorist activities and membership of a terrorist group.

The authorities also said that a man arrested on Friday after being shot in the leg at a tram stop in the Brussels district of Schaerbeek was being held for a further 24 hours.

He was identified as Abderaman A. and was one of three people arrested on Friday.

That operation was linked to the arrest in Paris on Thursday of an Islamist convicted in Belgium last year and suspected of plotting a new attack, Belgian prosecutors said.

Nigeria sends Chibok parents to see if suicide bomber is missing schoolgirl

ABUJA — The Nigerian government is sending parents from the Chibok community of northeast Nigeria to neighbouring Cameroon to verify whether a suspected female suicide bomber is one of the schoolgirls abducted by Boko Haram nearly two years ago.

Garba Shehu, spokesperson for Nigerian President Muhammadu Buhari, said the Nigerian High Commissioner in Cameroon, Hadiza Mustapha, has been in contact with Cameroonian authorities who have shown a willingness to assist the Nigerian government.

The abduction of about 270 schoolgirls by Islamic militants from a school in Chibok on 14 April, 2014, sparked international outrage and a campaign by Chibok’s parents to retake control of the girls who managed to escape, 219 of these girls remain missing.

Military and local government sources said that one of two girls arrested in northern Cameroon carrying explosives claimed to be one of the missing Chibok schoolgirls.

The girls were arrested after being stopped by local self-defence forces in Limani near the border with Nigeria that has been the target of frequent suicide bombings in recent months.

“We hope that the Chibok parents will be able to identify the girl and determine whether she is indeed one of their missing students,” Shehu told the Thomson Reuters Foundation in a telephone interview in Abuja on Saturday.

Shehu said the government was keen to ascertain the girl’s identity so she can be brought back to Nigeria and possibly assist the government in investigations regarding the fate and whereabouts of the other missing Chibok girls.

He said the two parents from Chibok selected to embark on the trip to Cameroon are Yakubu Nkeki, chairman of the Chibok Abducted Girls Movement, and Yana Galang, the group’s women leader, whose 16-year-old daughter Rukatia is among the missing.

The trip is being arranged by the government in partnership with the Murtala Muhammed Foundation in Nigeria, a non-government organisation which has been supporting the parents association and has offered to partly sponsor the trip to avoid any delays. “If it is true, we are very happy about it. If we see her with our eyes, we will know where our girls are,” Galang told the Thomson Reuters Foundation.

The two others in the picture are believed to have blown themselves up.

Cheffou was charged with taking part in the activities of a terrorist group, and actual and attempted terrorist murder.

The other two charged on Saturday, Aboubakar A. and Rabah N., were accused of terrorist activities and membership of a terrorist group.

Rabah N. was wanted in connection with a related raid in France this week that authorities say foiled an apparent attack plot.

Brussels mayor Yvan Mayeur told Le Soir newspaper that Cheffou, who said he was a freelance journalist, was “dangerous” and that he had been detained a number of times at a park where he sought to encourage asylum seekers camped there to turn to radical extremism.

The authorities also said that a man arrested on Friday after being shot in the leg at a tram stop in the Brussels district of Schaerbeek was being held for a further 24 hours.

US Democrat Bernie Sanders wins Alaska, Washington caucuses

WASHINGTON — Democratic presidential contender Bernie Sanders easily won nominating contests in Alaska and Washington on Saturday, a victory in the Western states. Sanders still faces a steep uphill climb to overtake Clinton but the big victories in the West generated more momentum for his uphill campaign and could stave off calls from Democratic leaders that he should wrap up his bid in the name of party unity.

Sanders appeared headed to victory margins of more than 50 percentage points in both Alaska and Washington. He is aimed for a third victory later on Saturday in Hawaii.

“We are making significant inroads in Secretary Clinton’s lead and... we have a path to victory,” Sanders told cheering, chanting supporters in Madison, Wisconsin. “It is hard for anybody to deny that our campaign has the momentum.”

The former secretary of state, has increasingly turned her attention toward a potential 8 November general election showdown against Republican front-runner Donald Trump, claiming she is on the path to wrapping up the nomination.

Heading into Saturday, she led Sanders by about 300 pledged delegates in the race for the 2,382 delegates needed to be nominated at the party’s July convention in Philadelphia. Aiding in the support of superdelegates — party leaders who are free to back any candidate — she has 1,690 delegates to 946 for Sanders.

Sanders, a US senator from Vermont, needs to win up to two-thirds of the remaining delegates to catch Clinton, who will keep piling up delegates even when she loses under a Democratic Party system that awards them proportionally in all states.

“These wins will help him raise more funds for the next few weeks but I don’t think it changes the overall equation,” said Democratic strategist Jim Manley, a Clinton supporter. “Hillary Clinton has too big a lead.”

But Sanders has repeatedly said he is staying in the race until the convention, pointing to big crowds at his rallies and high turnout among young and first-time voters as proof of his viability. After raising $140 million, he has the money to fight on as long as he wants.

He has energized the party’s liberal base and young voters with his calls to rein in Wall Street and fight income inequality, a message that resonated in liberal Washington and other Western states. Sanders won in Utah and Idaho earlier this week.

“Don’t let anybody tell you we can’t win the nomination or the general election,” Sanders told supporters in Wisconsin, which holds the next key contest on 5 April. “We are going to do both.”

All three contests on Saturday were caucuses, a format that has favoured Sanders because it requires more commitment from voters. They also were in states with fewer of the black and Hispanic voters who have helped fuel Clinton’s lead.

“He was just more aligned with my values. I am young and I never knew there could be someone like him in politics,” said Samantha Burton of Seattle, who said Sanders was the first candidate who had inspired her to make a donation.

Jocelyn Alt, a birthing assistant at a Seattle hospital, said she backed Clinton because she believed the times called for someone who could get things done.

“She knows how to make things happen,” she said. “I think Hillary is more likely to win against a Republican.”

After Wisconsin, the Democratic race moves to contests in New York on 19 April and a bloc of five states in the Northeast, led by Pennsylvania, on 26 April.

There were no contests on Saturday in the Republican race featuring Trump and rivals US Senator Ted Cruz of Texas and Ohio Governor John Kasich.

On Saturday, the New York Times newspaper reported that two of the well-known names on the list, John Caudwell, founder of Phones4U, and David Ross, the co-founder of Carphone Warehouse, had not signed up.
Beirut landmark bathed in Belgian colours in solidarity over attack

BEIRUT — The Lebanese capital Beirut lit one of its landmarks in the colours of the Belgian flag on Saturday in a gesture of solidarity over the suicide attacks in Brussels which killed 31 people.

The Mediterranean city endured a devastating 1975-1990 civil war and was hit by bombings last November which killed 44 people, attacks which overshadowed by killings in Paris the next day which drew worldwide grief and condemnation.

On Saturday evening one of the Pigeon Rocks, striking natural rock arches by Beirut’s sea shore, was bathed alternately in the colors of the Belgian and Lebanese flags.

“Today we send a massage of solidarity and affection...and we say to everyone, quite simply, that life must triumph over death,” Beirut governor Ziyad Chebib said at a ceremony with Lebanon’s ambassador to Belgium in the aftermath of the attacks.

Obama: US ramps up intelligence cooperation, to review ISIS fight at summit

WASHINGTON — The United States has ramped up intelligence cooperation and will review international efforts to combat Islamic State militants after the Brussels attacks during a nuclear summit with world leaders next week, President Barack Obama said.

In his weekly address broadcast on Saturday, Obama expressed condolences to the families of the Americans and others killed or hurt in the suicide bombings in Brussels on Tuesday.

“Yesterday, we learned that at least two Americans were killed. We pray for their families and loved ones,” he said. “At least 14 Americans were injured. And we pray for their full recovery, along with everyone else affected by these attacks.”

Obama returned on Friday from a trip to Latin America, where he took criticism for attending a baseball game in Cuba and for dancing the tango in Argentina in the aftermath of the attacks.

“Iran has constructed this gas pipeline up to the border of Pakistan and we are ready to deliver the gas to Pakistan at our borders. We have almost completed our share,” Rouhani said. “It is now up to Pakistan to initiate work on its side.”

Dubbed the “peace pipeline”, the $7 billion gas project has faced repeated delays since it was conceived in 1990s to connect Iran’s giant South Pars gas field to India via Pakistan.

India quit the project in 2009, citing costs and security issues, a year after it signed a nuclear deal with Washington.

The United States had opposed Pakistani and Indian involvement, saying the project could violate sanctions imposed on Iran over its nuclear activities.

Most of the sanctions were lifted in January in return for Iran complying with a deal to curb its nuclear ambitions.

At Saturday’s news conference, the Iranian president said Iran was also interested in connectivity between Pakistan’s southern port of Gwadar and the Chabahar port in southeast Iran through roads and shipping lines.

Iran had completed work on its side of a much-delayed pipeline pumping natural gas to Pakistan and would increase this up to 3,000 MW, speaking at a business conference with Rouhani earlier in the day. His Pakistani counterpart Nawaz Sharif said Pakistan and Iran had signed an agreement to increase annual trade volumes between the two countries to $5 billion by 2021.

On Friday, the Pakistani premier said Pakistan would open two new crossing points on its border with Iran, helping to encourage trade hampered by years of Western sanctions against Tehran.

Trade between Pakistan and Iran fell to $432 million in 2010-11 from $1.32 billion in 2008-09, according to the Trade Development Authority of Pakistan.

Energy-starved Pakistan suffers about 12 hours of power cuts per day and is keen to import Iranian oil, gas, iron and steel.

Iran is interested in Pakistan’s textiles, surgical goods, sports goods and agricultural products.

Pakistan also plans to set up industrial sites in the impoverished border area, especially for petrochemicals storage, and link the infrastructure to a $46 billion.

Adele plans five-year break?

LONDON — Oscar-winning singer Adele is reportedly planning another hiatus once her tour wraps up in November as she wants to spend time with her three-year-old son Angelo.

The “Hello” hitmaker has only just returned from a three-year hiatus but is keen to step away from the spotlight yet again, reported Femalefirst.

“She has told her closest pals she will step away from the limelight for five years before she next brings out an album. She’s still very new to motherhood and doesn’t want to miss out on Angelo growing up. It will be a hard thing for fans to hear,” a source said.

However, the 27-year-old singer had recently teased fans about the possibility of a new release by the end of the year.

Speaking to her fans during her first gig at Belfast’s SSE Arena in Northern Ireland earlier this month, she said: “There may be a new song towards the end of the shows.”

Nick Jonas hints new album about Olivia Culpo breakup

LONDON — Singer Nick Jonas has his upcoming album, “Last Year Was Complicated”, will feature a number of tracks about his split from Olivia Culpo.

The 23-year-old “Levels” hitmaker has confirmed he will be releasing his latest work in June, reported Female First.

“I’ve been making this record for a year and a half … Pouring everything I have into it. When I first started making I thought I knew what it would be about… Then I had a breakout. It then became very clear what this thing would be about and that I would need to dig really deep,” he wrote on Twitter. “Reliving some of these real experiences through this music is hard. But I know it’s important that I do it, I want to be an open book in my art… The first song you’re gonna hear tomorrow night is about how I literally can’t open up and be vulnerable with someone. Portuguese filmmaker re-creating Lisbon in 3D images

LISBON — Amid the cobbled hills of Alfama in the Portuguese capital, visitors can now see the city in 3D, through the oniric vision of Portuguese filmmaker Edgar Pera.

Pera’s “Lisbon Revisited” series, consisting of around 40 images, at is seen in 2D but is soon transformed in 3D when using anaglyph glasses, offered by the Casa de Liberdade — Mario Cesarny where the exhibition is taking place.

The spectator is forced through a sensory journey to question his or her relationship with the city, from the viewpoint of a transhuman or alien.

“I had the compulsion to create a form of art that is organ-ic, a way of life, in the format of film or photography,” Pera said. “Sometimes that is done by partitioning part of reality and demonstrating that even though we pass by gardens, or statues every day we are not aware of them, we don’t give them enough importance.”

Each photograph is accompanied by phrases like “To think is to be sick in the eyes” from poet Fernando Pessoa. The title, Lisbon Revisited, is also taken from a poem of one of Pessoa’s alter egos, published in 1923.

The exhibition arose from a feature film Edgar Pera made with the same title, which was launched at the Locarno International Film Festival in Switzerland in 2014.

I’m from Lisbon and grew up in Moscavide and Olivais, so have a very close relationship with the city. I don’t like to drive, I walk everywhere and I like to stop in Lisbon’s gardens,” Pera explains.

Pera started shooting his daily life in 3D in 2011, but has been filming his everyday life since 1985, when he purchased his first HDV video camera.

“I had the compulsion to film and register everything,” Pera, who is known as Portuga-gal’s Man with a Movie Camera, (inspired by Dziga Vertov) admits.

Pera’s first feature film was Manual of Evasion LX94, which features interviews with Terence McKenna, Robert Anton Wilson and Rudy Rucker.

Pera won the Pasolini Award, together with Alejandro Jodorowsky and Fernando Arra-bal, in Paris in 2006.

Nick Jonas hints new album about Olivia Culpo breakup

LONDON — Singer Nick Jonas has his upcoming album, “Last Year Was Complicated”, will feature a number of tracks about his split from Olivia Culpo.

The 23-year-old “Levels” hitmaker has confirmed he will be releasing his latest work in June, reported Female First.

“I’ve been making this record for a year and a half … Pouring everything I have into it. When I first started making I thought I knew what it would be about… Then I had a breakout. It then became very clear what this thing would be about and that I would need to dig really deep,” he wrote on Twitter. “Reliving some of these real experiences through this music is hard. But I know it’s important that I do it, I want to be an open book in my art… The first song you’re gonna hear tomorrow night is about how I literally can’t open up and be vulnerable with someone. Portuguese filmmaker re-creating Lisbon in 3D images

LISBON — Amid the cobbled hills of Alfama in the Portuguese capital, visitors can now see the city in 3D, through the oniric vision of Portuguese filmmaker Edgar Pera.

Pera’s “Lisbon Revisited” series, consisting of around 40 images, at is seen in 2D but is soon transformed in 3D when using anaglyph glasses, offered by the Casa de Liberdade — Mario Cesarny where the exhibition is taking place.

The spectator is forced through a sensory journey to question his or her relationship with the city, from the viewpoint of a transhuman or alien.

“I had the compulsion to create a form of art that is organ-ic, a way of life, in the format of film or photography,” Pera said. “Sometimes that is done by partitioning part of reality and demonstrating that even though we pass by gardens, or statues every day we are not aware of them, we don’t give them enough importance.”

Each photograph is accompanied by phrases like “To think is to be sick in the eyes” from poet Fernando Pessoa. The title, Lisbon Revisited, is also taken from a poem of one of Pessoa’s alter egos, published in 1923.

The exhibition arose from a feature film Edgar Pera made with the same title, which was launched at the Locarno International Film Festival in Switzerland in 2014.

I’m from Lisbon and grew up in Moscavide and Olivais, so have a very close relationship with the city. I don’t like to drive, I walk everywhere and I like to stop in Lisbon’s gardens,” Pera explains.

NW China cargo train connects with Kazakhstan

XI’AN — A cargo train arrived at northwest China’s Xi’an city on Saturday, carrying 2,000 tonnes of organic cooking oil imported from Kazakhstan.

The Chang’an Train, loaded with 1,000 tonnes of sunflower seed oil and 1,000 tonnes of rapeseed oil, set off from Almaty of Kazakhstan on Monday. The journey is the first regular cargo service between Kazakhstan and China.

The train started to run between Xi’an and Almaty at the end of 2013, carrying cargo from China to central Asia, but previously was empty or carried few goods on its return. It usually takes six days to complete the 3,860-km journey.

So far, the train has transported a total of more than 280,000 tonnes of goods to central Asia with a gross export value of about 290 million US dollars. — Xinhua

Dizzy Nadal retires in Florida heat, Murray moves on

MIAMI — Spaniard Rafa Nadal retired from his second-round match at the Miami Open on Saturday due to a bout of dizziness, while Andy Murray advanced despite blowing hit top at an umpire after finding a women’s ball among those he was using.

Sporadic boos broke out when 14-times grand slam champion Nadal decided he could not continue in the third set after feeling ill in typically humid conditions in south Florida.

Nadal trailed 94th-ranked Damir Dzumhur 2-6, 6-4, 3-0, with the Bosnian 30-15 up on serve, when he called it a day. It was the first time Nadal had quit during a match since a quarter-final against Murray at the 2010 Australian Open.

“Everything was fine until the end of the first set,” Nadal said. “Then I started to feel dizzy, not very good. It was getting worse and worse.”

“I wanted to finish the match, but I seriously could not. It was tough, because I felt I was playing well. I stopped because I was concerned for my health.”

Nadal twice called for a trainer, and had his blood pressure checked on the second occasion, but resumed play both times after a short break.

Dzumhur was also affected by the heat early in the match and was the first to call a trainer, but he battled on and after a poor first set eventually gained control to post his first career victory against a world top-10 player.

In the night session, Briton Murray had a heated exchange with the chair umpire en route to a 6-3, 7-5 victory over Uzbek Denis Istomin.

Murray faced break point at 2-2 in the second set when he noticed that a women’s ball had somehow got into the mix. Women en use different balls at the Miami Open, and they have a red stamping to differentiate them.

“That’s unbelievable. That’s one of the women’s balls. I could have just hit a shot with it,” Murray complained.

Though the rogue ball was removed from play, Murray was clearly flustered and netted a groundstroke in the next rally to lose the game. Murray then gave the umpire another earful.

The umpire said he was fully aware but could do nothing about what had transpired.

“At halftime I thought it was even more unfair,” asserted Murray.

The point stands. It’s the same for both,” he said.

Murray then settled down, immediately broke back and closed out the match without further incident. Number four Stan Wawrinka was the highest seed to lose on Saturday after the Swiss was sent packing 6-4, 6-3 by Russian Andrey Kuznetsov, who saved eight break points. Sixth seed Kei Nishikori of Japan moved on after beating Pierre-Hugues Herbert 6-2, 7-6(4).—Reuters

England come from two down to beat Germany in friendly

BERLIN — Substitute Jamie Vardy scored with a stunning flick, his first international goal, and Eric Dier headed a last-gasp winner as England hit back from two goals down to beat old rivals Germany 3-2 in a friendly on Saturday.

Germany appeared to be heading for a routine win when they led 2-0 through Toni Kroos and Mario Gomez, his first goal since Euro 2012, after an hour.

But Harry Kane changed the course of the game with an opportunistic goal before Vardy produced a moment of brilliance just three minutes after coming on as a substitute.

Nathaniel Clyne crossed from the right and the Leicester City striker stuck his foot out behind his standing leg to flick the ball between Germany goalkeeper Manuel Neuer and his near post.

Then Dier rose above the Germany defence to score with a thumping downward header from Jordan Henderson’s corner in the 91st minute.

It was the first time England had come back from two goals down to win since they beat Italy 3-2 in 1976 and the only time in history that Germany or the former West Germany had lost after blowing a two-goal lead at home.

Even though it was a friendly, it was still a memorable and deserved win for England’s inexperienced lineup, who were the more inventive team throughout.

“England deserved to win, even when we were 2-0 we had allowed England a lot of chances,” Germany coach Joachim Loew told ZDF television. “It has been a good lesson for our team.”

“At halftime I thought it was very unjust that we came in at 1-0 down,” England manager Roy Hodgson told ITV. “At 2-0 down I thought it was even more unfair…

“We were creating the better chances and to come back and score three goals was fantastic. The players must take great credit.”

England, refusing to be overawed, created several good openings in the first half without seriously testing Neuer.

But Germany went ahead in the 43rd minute when England goalkeeper Jack Butland sent a clearance straight to Mesut Ozil on the halfway line and he worked the ball to Kroos who scored with a swerving 25-metre shot.

Butland, injured making the clearance, was replaced by Fraser Forster, who was left powerless when Gomez got in front of Clyne to head Germany’s second in the 57th minute.

Kane began the fightback when he picked up a loose ball in the penalty area, turned past two defenders and scored with a shot into the far corner in the 61st minute.

Dele Alli had a shot blocked by Neuer’s foot, Vardy equalised and England should have won it in the 85th minute but 19-year-old Alli fired over from 12 metres with the goal at his mercy.

But Dier’s last-gasp goal made sure it did not matter to leave both team benches and the Olympiastadion crowd in a state of disbelief.—Reuters
