State Counsellor to discuss peace initiative

State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi will discuss peace initiative with the Union-level Ceasefire Joint Monitoring Committee (JMC) today, said Lt-Gen Ya Pyayt at a meeting held by JMC yesterday.

The meeting will continue today for the second day with State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, who will lead the new government’s peace initiative, in attendance to discuss guidelines and procedures relating to the Union-level ceasefire agreement, added Lt-Gen Ya Pyayt in his capacity as the chairman of the Joint Monitoring Committee.

This is the fifth meeting but the first held during the period of the incumbent government. The two-day meeting is being held at Horison Lake View Hotel in Nay Pyi Taw Council Area.

“The political issues are required to be solved only through use of political means. The meeting focused upon the formation of Mon State and Kayin State-level JMCs. The State Counsellor to discuss peace initiative meeting elected U Pyayt Son as alternate vice chairman of the committee according to the rules and regulations of the committee.

The Union-level JMC was formed with eight ethnic armed groups which have signed Nationwide Ceasefire Agreement with the Tatmadaw.

There have been three occurrences of armed skirmishes between the eight ethnic armed organisations and Tatmadaw since the signing of the NCA, said Lt-Gen Ya Pyayt.

The JMC was first formed on 18 November, 2015 with 10 representatives from the government side, another 10 representatives from eight ethnic armed organizations and six civilian representatives nominated by the both sides.

Yangon Region to develop industrial zones

THE Yangon Region government will handle industrial zones in the region and the first priority will be given to the improvement of the management sector and disciplinary matters relating to the zones, said Yangon Region Chief Minister U Phyo Min Thein on Monday.

The chief minister said that he and the respective ministers will make a tour of the zones to fulfill any and all needs.

There is also a plan to improve the small and medium enterprise business by encouraging banking systems, human resource development and providing technical assistance, the chief minister added.

Insufficient electricity, high transport charges, problems in waste disposal and a lack of skilled labour are among the challenges Myanmar is now facing and other issues such as scarcity of raw materials, the high cost of production, the needs of infrastructure and a lack of ability to penetrate foreign markets are problems to be tackled, said industrialist U Zaw Min Win.

PATENT laws are to be promulgated through parliament to help develop the innovative minds and creative ideas of the citizens, said the Union Minister for Education Dr Myo Thein Gyi yesterday in Nay Pyi Taw.

On an occasion to mark the World Intellectual Property Day held in MICC 2 in Nay Pyi Taw, the minister said that the ministry is now learning intellectual property rights from a number of experts from the United States and Japan with the aim of soon enacting protection laws here in Myanmar. As foreign investments are mostly based on how much protection they have for their investment, the patent laws play an important role in attracting them, said Director Daw Moe Moe Thein of Intellectual Property Rights Department under the Ministry of Education.

According to officials there are four laws concerning intellectual property rights to be enacted to promote the innovation of citizens, to create job opportunities and generate more income.

Yesterday was the World Intellectual Property Day and has been marked by the World Intellectual Property Organisation yearly beginning in 2001. Myanmar is the 176th country to join the organisation.

Army bristles at U Shwe Mann’s message to DSA

THE Myanmar army has strongly objected to an on-line message sent to the graduates of the Defense Services Academy 11th Intake on their 47th anniversary graduation by retired army general Thura U Shwe Mann. The press release from the military states that U Shwe Mann’s message, uploaded onto social media, is especially dedicated to the graduates of the Defense Service Academy. The army says that this kind of message can be regarded as an act designed to drive a wedge between military personnel still in service and retired military personnel and that this incident could lead to the disintegration of the military and that although the military has invariably asserted that it would co-operate with the government elected by the people, this assertion has been neglected and insinuations were made (by U Shwe Mann in his message) in the form of abstention that the military was not cooperating with the incumbent government. Furthermore, the army said, news reports that appeared in some newspapers and journals were found to be based on the former general’s message which, they claim, cannot bring any benefit to the nation or to the people. Moreover, they continued, these news reports can mislead readers regarding the performance of successive governments as well as the military’s attitudes and actions. This being so, the military decided to publish a news release to prevent disintegration within the armed forces and to avoid adversely affecting national reconciliation objectives, according to their statement.—Myanmar News Agency

Summer paddy yield high but price are dropping

Last year, rice dealers competitively purchased the rain crop despite the high price because of the low yield, and they suffered losses when they sold in border areas.

“The shortage of farm workers caused a late harvest. The price of paddy is always higher at the early harvest and when the paddy is short of supply. Sometimes, farmers are forced to sell their crops when there are buyers because they have to give back their cultivation loan. Dealers gain more profit when the price of rice has become higher”, said U Khin Nyunt who owns five acres of land.

“Dealers offer low demand out of fear for losses. The price cannot head up again these days. The price of paddy always rises in June and July, said U Soe Tun, the joint secretary of Myanmar Rice and Paddy Traders Association (MRPTA).”

“Last year, the price of paddy was just over Ks300,000 after the end of the harvest time. This year, summer paddy yield high at around 100 baskets per acre. The price of paddy always rises at end of April,” said Daw Moe Moe, a farmer from Gonnyin-tan village.

Small enterprises forced to shut down their business in Mandalay Industrial Zone

WITH the illegal inflow of products which do not meet required standards from neighbouring countries, most small enterprises are being forced to shut down their businesses in the Mandalay Industrial Zone as they cannot survive low production within a highly competitive market, said U Khin Maung Thein, the vice chairman of the Mandalay Industrial Zone Supervisory Committee.

“Products are imported via the border area without paying taxes. The small enterprises are suffering from the low production caused by old and outdated machines. We want the authorities to control the illegally imported low-quality goods which are being resold at a cheaper price, he added.

The Mandalay Industrial Zone was established in 1990 with 13 businesses and is situated on the east of the Yangon-Mandalay Road. The number of large enterprises increased from 89 to 387 plants while the medium enterprises, from 126 to 282 plants. But, the number of small enterprises decreases from 2,117 to 572 plants.

To have fair play within the high competitive market, bank loans with low interest rates are required. A regular electricity supply is also important in manufacturing. A Social Security Board’s Hospital is needed to provide medical care to labours working day and night shifts.—200

Rubber price expected to rise at end of April

LOW yields of rubber might result in a rise in rubber prices at the end of April.

“The yield of rubber declined on account of the possible impact of El Niño in South East Asia because rubber latex cannot be produced in hot weather. As you know, it is always a matter of demand and supply. When the supply is low and demand doesn’t change, the price will rise,” said U Khaing Myint, general secretary of the Myanmar Rubber Planters and Producers Association.

Production of rubber latex was forced to stop in January and February by hot weather, driving prices up.

“The weather in Mon State is still en-normal, but the yield has declined. The rubber planters won’t produce rubber latex,” said Naing Chan Yit, the chairman of the Mon State Rubber Entrepreneurs Association.

The yield in Mon State declined to about one third of production in April 2016 compared to August 2015.

There were 1.6 million acres of rubber fields in Myanmar in the 2015-2016 fiscal year, and China is the main buyer. The volume of rubber export is expected to reach over 80,000 tonnes in the 2015-2016 fiscal year. The volume of exports was over 90,000 tonnes in 2009-2010, over 80,000 in 2011-2012 and over 78,000 tonnes in 2013-2014, according to figures from the Myanmar Rubber Planters and Producers Associations.—200
North Korea seen readying another intermediate missile launch attempt

SEUL — North Korea appears to be preparing a test-launch of an intermediate-range ballistic missile, South Korea's Yonhap news agency said on Tuesday, after what the United States described as the “fiery, catastrophic” failure of the first attempt.

On April 15, the North failed to launch what was likely a Musudan missile, with a range of more than 3,000 km (1,800 miles), meaning it could, if launched successfully, hit Japan and also theoretically put the US territory of Guam within range.

The Musudan missile, which can be fired from a mobile launcher, is not known to have been successfully flight-tested.

North Korea tested its fourth nuclear bomb on 6 January and launched a long-range rocket on 7 February, both in defiance of UN resolutions. The North on Saturday conducted a test of a submarine-launched ballistic missile.

“There are indications that the North may fire a Musudan missile that it launched and failed on Kim Il Sung’s birthday on 15 April,” Yonhap quoted an unnamed official as saying. Kim Il Sung is the North’s founder.

North and South Korea remain technically at war after their 1950-53 conflict ended in a truce, rather than a treaty. The North, whose major ally is neighbour China, routinely threatens to destroy South Korea and its major ally, the United States. The 15 April failure was seen as an embarrassing blow for current leader Kim Jong Un, Kim Il Sung’s grandson, who has claimed several advances in weapons technology in recent months and is widely expected to conduct a fifth nuclear test soon.

South Korean Defence Ministry spokesman Moon Sang-gyun declined to confirm the Yonhap report but said the North’s military would likely spend some time trying to fix the problem following the failed launch. Experts see North Korea’s Musudan test as part of an effort to develop an intercontinental ballistic missile that can reach the mainland United States.

North Korea said its fourth nuclear test in January was a hydrogen bomb, although that claim has been disputed by foreign governments and experts given the relatively small size of the blast.

North Korea said its submarine-launched ballistic missile test on Saturday was a “great success” that provided “one more means for powerful nuclear attack”.

South Korea on Tuesday described the test, which sent a missile travelling about 30 km (18 miles), as a partial success.

The United States and South Korea began talks on possible deployment of a new missile-defence system, the Terminal High Altitude Area Defence (THAAD), after the latest North Korea nuclear and rocket tests.

Japan protests over North Korea’s submarine-launched missile test

TOKYO — Foreign Minister Fumio Kishida on Tuesday said Japan has lodged a protest with North Korea over the recent firing of a submarine-launched ballistic missile.

North Korea’s “provocative” nuclear test and ballistic missile launches are “totally unacceptable,” Kishida told reporters.

The protest was made through a diplomatic channel in Beijing, Kishida said.

A South Korean military source has said the projectile launched by North Korea flew about 30 kilometres from a submarine off Sinpo in the eastern part of North Korea but that the launch itself was a failure.

The launch came as the secluded country is suspected of preparing a fifth nuclear test, following its globally condemned fourth test in January, UN Security Council resolutions ban Pyongyang’s nuclear and missile development activities.

“Japan is making efforts to collect and analyze information with strong interest. We will be fully prepared to respond to any situations through coordination with other countries,” Kishida said.—Kyodo News

India, Pakistan diplomats meet after months-long hiatus

NEW DELHI — The top diplomats of India and Pakistan met on Tuesday for talks after a hiatus of several months following a militant attack on an Indian air base, in what the Pakistani side called a useful and wide-ranging exchange of views.

The low-key meeting between the foreign secretaries, on the sidelines of a regional conference in New Delhi, seeks to restore a dialogue that was derailed by the raid in January on the Pathankot air base that killed seven military.

“The meeting provided a useful opportunity to exchange views on recent developments,” Pakistan’s High Commission in New Delhi said in a statement.

It added that “all outstanding issues”, including a dispute between the two countries over the divided territory of Kashmir, were discussed at the meeting between India’s Subrahmanyan Jaishankar and his Pakistani counterpart, Aizaz Ahmad Chaudhry.

Relations remain difficult, not as their three wars over Kashmir since independence in 1947. One bone of contention has been whether to include Kashmir in the agenda for peace talks.

There was no immediate word from the Indian side on the talks, which sought to restore a dialogue launched when Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi paid a surprise visit to Pakistani Premier Nawaz Sharif in December.

India has accused Pakistan of carrying out the Pathankot attack and provided what it calls “actionable intelligence” to Islamabad to follow up. Pakistani investigators have visited the scene of the attack close to the border between the two countries but, as yet, no arrests have been made.—Reuters

Australia’s asylum seeker detention on PNG island ruled illegal

More than 800 people are detained on Manus Island on behalf of Australia. The detention centre on Nauru houses about 500 people and has been widely criticized by the United Nations and human rights agencies for harsh conditions and reports of systemic child abuse. Australian Minister for Immigration Peter Dutton said the ruling would not change its policy of offshore detention. “It does not alter Australia’s border protection policies — they remain unchanged,” said Dutton. “Those in the Manus Island Regional Processing Centre found to be refugees are able to resettle in Papua New Guinea. Those found not to be refugees should return to their country of origin.”

US Ospreys win Japanese hearts and minds with quake relief flights

IWAKUNI, Japan: The US military’s MV-22 Osprey aircraft has been a lightning rod for opposition to US bases in Japan since 24 of them were deployed on the southern island of Okinawa in 2014.

By sending eight of the tilt-rotor Ospreys to help with relief efforts for survivors of recent earthquakes on Kyushu island, both US and Japanese military planners have been able to showcase an aircraft they see as necessary for Japan’s defence.

When an Osprey set down last week on a sports ground in Hakusui village on Kyushu, the first person out was a US Marine Corps photographer taking pictures of Japanese troops unloading their equipment. Within hours, the pictures were on social media.

Opposition to US bases in Japan has simmered for years, especially on Okinawa where many people believe the MV-22, which can hover like a helicopter and fly as a fixed-wing aircraft, is prone to crashing. They say the US military’s deployment of the Osprey on Okinawa shows its disregard for their feelings.

The US military insists the Osprey is safe but in 2012 it nevertheless agreed to curb flights over heavily populated areas.

Since earthquakes killed about 50 people on Kyushu this month, the aircraft has been seen in a new light, thanks in large part to pictures of it ferrying blankets, food and water to quake survivors, posted on the 31st Marine Expeditionary Unit’s Facebook and Twitter feeds.

“We have had no negative reaction,” said Colonel Romin Dasmalchi, commander of the unit, which is based in Okinawa.

Visits to the unit’s social media sites surged by as much as 10 times after it began flying relief supplies, a spokesman for the US Marine Corps said.

Eight Ospreys were deployed for the relief effort from Okinawa to a USMC air station in Iwakuni near Hiroshima because “of the speed and efficiency of the airframe to get into those places where a traditional aircraft could not land”, he said.

By the time the US military’s relief mission ended on Sunday, its posts had earned more than 230,000 hits compared with a normal rate of between 10,000 to 50,000.

While the publicity is unlikely to placate opponents of US bases, it should improve the Osprey’s image. The deployment has also given the Japanese military a chance to see how the Osprey fits with its kit. Japan ordered five Ospreys last year, making it the first foreign force to buy it.

“The more exposure you get to any weapon system aircraft I think the better it is going to be,” Dasmalchi said.

Japan’s Ospreys will be based on Kyushu from around 2019, near a new unit of Japanese marines that represent the spearhead of Prime Minister Shinzo Abe’s plan to give Japan’s military a global security role by making it more mobile and expeditionary. — Reuters

US challenged China, 12 others on navigation rights last year

WASHINGTON — The US military conducted “freedom of navigation” operations against 13 countries last year, including several to challenge China’s claims in the South and East China seas, according to an annual Pentagon report released on Monday. The operations were against China, India, Indonesia, Iran, Libya, Malaysia, the Maldives, Oman, the Philippines and Viet Nam, the report said.

It did not specify how many such operations were conducted against each of those countries. The US military carried out single operations against Taiwan, Nicaragua and Argentina, for a total of 13 countries, the department said in the two-page report.

The freedom of navigation operations involve sending US Navy ships and military aircraft into areas where other countries have tried to limit access. The aim is to demonstrate that the international community does not accept such restrictions.

The US military has repeatedly conducted operations disputing China’s maritime claims in recent years and did so again in 2015, a year in which Beijing’s island-building activity in the resource-rich areas of the South China Sea led to rising tensions in the region.

A US guided-missile destroyer conducted a freedom of navigation patrol near one of China’s man-made islands in the Spratly archipelago in October. US military flights near the islands have been warned off.

US Defence Secretary Ash Carter said the Navy would continue to operate in the region despite China’s condemnation of the patrols.

China’s Defence Ministry said in a statement on its website late on Monday that it was deeply concerned by such operations.

“The United States carries out militarisation in the South China Sea in the name of freedom of navigation and over-flight, threatens coastal nations’ sovereignty and security and de-stroys regional peace and stabili-ty,” the ministry said.

It made the comment in response to what it said were reports of recent US military flights near Scarborough Shoal — known by Beijing as Huangyan Island — an area China seized control of after a stand-off with the Philippines coast guard in 2012.

Admiral Harry Harris, the head of US Pacific Command, said this year the Navy would step up the freedom of navigation operations in the South China Sea because of concerns China is attempting to assert its dominance by building military facilities there.

US freedom of navigation operations last year also challenged China’s claims of juris-diction in the airspace above its maritime Exclusive Economic Zone as well as restrictions it has tried to impose on aircraft flying through an Air Defence Identification Zone over the East China Sea. — Reuters
Development and Human Rights

Dr. Khine Khine Win

DEVELOPMENT is one of the most urgent human rights imperatives. Indeed, it is a human right for all individuals. The Declaration on the Right to Development describes development as “a comprehensive economic, social, cultural and political process, which aims at the constant improvement of the wellbeing of the entire population and of all individuals on the basis of their active, free and meaningful participation in development and in the fair distribution of benefits…”

Furthermore, the term “development” is closely connected to the struggle against poverty. Poverty is an urgent human rights concern itself. It is both a cause and a consequence of human rights violations and an enabling condition for other human rights violations, according to OHCHR. Human rights reinforce the demand that poverty reduction be the primary goal of development policy making.

In this regard, all human beings have a responsibility for development individually and collectively, taking into account the need for full respect of their human rights and fundamental freedoms as well as their duties to the community. Many studies show that human rights are highly correlated economic development and are often precursor for it. However economic development alone is not enough. Development without equality, without social inclusion will not reduce poverty. If people understand human rights as essential to attaining to socioeconomic goals, then they should work toward the realization of rights.

Therefore ensuring rights is a vital step toward economic development because when people are denied their rights, it often results in social instability and other conflicts which have vast economic consequences. While State are responsible for realizing human rights, other actors, including international organizations, civil societies organizations, national human rights institutions, business enterprises also have responsibilities regarding of those living in poverty. It is fact that, full realization of human right is the goal, development work is a means.

From development perspective, today human rights-based approach is viewed by many as essential to achieving development goals. So what is a human rights-based approach? A human rights based approach is a conceptual framework for the process of human development that is normatively based on international human rights standard and operationally directed to promoting and protecting human rights.

There are also some institutions that focus upon social structures and practices. Most of the wish lists are concerned with the interactions of the state and society. Their focus is on the rules, processes and behaviour that define nature and limits of political authority. They try to ensure that political actors at all levels should be responsive and accountable to the stake-holders. They also seek that the state acts impartially and fairly, and restricts itself to particular domains.

On the basis of the wish list of various organizations, good governance can be defined as the existence of political accountability, bureaucratic transparency, the exercise of legitimate power, freedom of association and participation, freedom of information and freedom of expression, sound financial management and public financial accountability, respect for the rule of law, respect for human rights, an active legislative, enhanced opportunities for the development of pluralistic forces inclusive of civil society and capacity development (Kempe Ronald Hope, Sr: 2009).

Good governance plays an important role in the creation of capable states that have the capacity to spearhead development efforts. According to Leftwich (1993), the concept of good governance has three main components. First, governance denotes the structures of political and economic relationship and rules by which the productive and distributive life of a society is governed. Secondly, good governance implies a state that enjoys both legitimacy and authority, derived from a democratic mandate and built on the traditional liberal notion of a clear separation of legislative, executive and judicial powers. Finally, good governance, from an administrative view, means an efficient, open, accountable and audited public service which has the bureaucratic competence to help, design and implement appropriate policies and manage whatever public sector there is.

Development and Human Rights

Khin Maung Aye

DESPITE having no unanimously agreed definition of the term “good governance”, the usual definition consists of a wish list of reforms, practices and outcomes with a particular eye on developing countries. Each organization concerned with the notion of good governance seems to construct its own wish list, with some laying emphasis upon political and legal institutions, participation, accountability, rule of law and human rights whereas some stressing neoliberal economic reforms and better management of resources.

US sends F-22 fighters to reassure NATO allies facing Russia

MIHAIL KOGALNICEANU AIR BASE, (Romania) — Two highly advanced US fighters flew to the Black Sea on Monday for the first time since Washington beefed up military support for NATO’s eastern European allies who say they face aggression from Russia.

President Barack Obama promised in 2014 to bolster the defences of NATO’s eastern members, unnerve by Russia’s annexation of Ukraine’s Crimea and the Kremlin’s backing for pro-Russian forces in eastern Ukraine.

A US KC-135 refuelling plane flew with the two F-22 Raptor fighters from Britain to Romania’s Mihail Kogalniceanu air base on the Black Sea.

“We’re here today to demonstrate our capability to take the F-22 anywhere needed in NATO or across Europe,” said Squadron Commander Daniel Lehoski.

“We want to … actually fly the aircraft and train with our NATO allies,” he told a travelling Reuters reporter.

The F-22s are almost impossible to detect on radar and so advanced that the US Congress has banned Lockheed Martin from selling them abroad. The US has deployed 12 of them at a British base in eastern England.

“The increased size of the 2016 deployment … allows US Forces to assert their presence more widely across the eastern frontier,” said US Air Force spokeswoman Major Sheryll Kinkeln.

“We want to be able to operate out of multiple locations. We want to be able to keep our adversary guessing on where we’re going to go next.”

The West is seeking to strengthen the defences of its eastern flank and reassure eastern European NATO members — such as Poland, the Baltic states and Czech republic which spent decades under Soviet dominance — without provoking the Kremlin by stationing large forces permanently.

But tensions are rising and Russia says the NATO build-up is stoking a dangerous situation. — Reuters

On Election Eve for five states, Trump rips Cruz and Kasich

WEST CHESTER, (Pa) — Republican Donald Trump, on the eve of primary elections in five states that he is expected to sweep, launched blistering attacks on Monday on rivals Ted Cruz and John Kasich for their 11th-hour joint effort aimed at denying him the party’s presidential nomination.

Cruz and Kasich agreed, which some stop-Trump Republican strategists say should have been undertaken weeks ago, was forged to try and keep Trump from securing the 1,237 delegates he needs to win the nomination outright and force Republicans to consider the two rivals at the party’s national convention in Cleveland in July.

Kasich, the Ohio governor, and Cruz, a US senator from Texas, agreed not to compete against each other in upcoming nominating contests that could prove to be pivotal: Indiana, Oregon and New Mexico.

Trump, speaking at Pennsylvania’s West Chester University, near Philadelphia, dismissed the deal as a sign of desperation and predicted he still would win the nomination on the convention’s first ballot. With dramatic flair, he compared his plight to a champion boxer whom Trump said he once warned not to go into unfriendly territory because the judges could rule against him.

The boxer, Trump said, replied: “If I knock him out there’s not a damn thing the judges can do.” Trump is expected to win all five of Tuesday’s nominating contests in the northeastern states of Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Delaware and Maryland, which have a total of 172 delegates at stake.

Trump is already ahead in the delegate race with 845, followed by Cruz with 559 and Kasich with 147, according to the Associated Press. After Tuesday, Indiana, which votes on 3 May, will be the next big battleground, with 57 delegates up for grabs.

The Kasich-Cruz deal already showed signs of bending on Monday, with Kasich telling voters in Philadelphia that people who want to vote for him in Indiana should still do so. “I’ve never told them not to vote for me, they ought to vote for me. But I’m not over there campaigning and spending resources,” he said.

Cruz took steps to maintain he is a serious contender for the nomination with his campaign team announcing he has developed a short list of vice presidential running mates. Traditionally, candidates wait until they have secured the nomination to select a running mate.

One person being vetted for the No. 2 position is former Republican presidential candidate Carly Fiorina, an aide to Fiorina said. Fiorina, a businesswoman, endorsed Cruz when she dropped out of the race. — Reuters

Japan prepares extra budget of over $4.5 billion for quake recovery

TOKYO — The Japanese government is looking to prepare an extra budget of more than 500 billion yen ($4.5 billion/3.1 billion pounds) for reconstruction in the areas affected by the recent earthquakes in southern Japan, sources told Reuters.

Prime Minister Shinzo Abe ordered his government on Sunday to compile the extra budget package to fund reconstruction.

The government aims to get approval from the cabinet on 13 May and put it into effect by 1 June when the current session of parliament ends, the sources said. — Reuters

Targeted air strikes kill five rescue workers near Syria’s Aleppo

BEIRUT — Overnight air strikes and a rocket attack on an opposition-held area west of Aleppo killed five rescue workers, who appeared to have been deliberately targeted, a monitoring group and colleagues nearby said.

The raids, which the rescue workers said consisted of two air strikes and at least one rocket, hit a centre for the Syrian Civil Defence, known as the “White Helmets”, in the town of Atereb, some 25 km (15 miles) west of Aleppo.

Fighting has intensified in Aleppo Province in recent weeks as a partial truce brokered the United States and Russia has all but broken down.

The Civil Defence corps work as first responders for the Syrian Civil Defence, known as the “White Helmets”, in the town of Atereb, some 25 km (15 miles) west of Aleppo.

“They targeted us very precisely,” Rady Saad, a Civil Defence worker based in northwestern Syria, told Reuters via internet. “They were in the centre and ready to respond. When they heard warplanes in the area they did not think they would be the target.” — Reuters

Japan releases detained Taiwanese fishermen

TAIPEI — The Japanese government has released a Taiwanese fishing boat and its crew members found fishing in waters near Okinotori, the southernmost point of Japanese territory, Kyodo News learned on Tuesday.

Diplomatic sources said the boat and its crew were released at 4:40 pm Japan time, after a 6 million yen fine was paid to the Japanese side.

The boat, identified as the Dong Sheng Ji No. 16, was found by the Japan Coast Guard fishing around 150 nautical miles east-south-east of Okinotori late Sunday night.

Taiwan’s Foreign Ministry had earlier demanded their “immediate” and “unconditional release,” with spokeswoman Eleanor Wang telling Kyodo News that the ministry was “not in favour” of paying any money. It was not the first time for Taiwanese fishermen to be detained by Japanese authorities for what Japan views as illegal fishing in the contested waters. — Kyodo News

Massive fire destroys museum in Indian capital

NEW DELHI — A massive fire broke out Tuesday in a multi-storied building in Indian capital city New Delhi, destroying a museum, officials said.

Six firefighters were injured while trying to douse the flames. The fire broke out early Tuesday and the flames engulfed the building of a trade body (FICCI) housing National Museum of Natural History.

“The fire erupted at the top floor of the building in Mandi House locality at around 1:45am (local time) and soon spread down to other floors,” a police official told media. “The injured firemen have been admitted in RML hospital.” — Xinhua
Syrian food crisis deepens as war chokes farming

ABU DHABI/HASAKA, (Syria) — Syria’s war has destroyed agricultural infrastructure and fractured the state system that provides farmers with seeds and buys their crops, deepening a humanitarian crisis in a country struggling to produce enough grain to feed its people.

The country’s shortage of its main staple wheat is worsening. The area of land sown with the cereal — used to make bread — and with barley has fallen again this year, the UN Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO) told Reuters.

The northeast province of Hasaka, which accounts for almost half the country’s wheat production has seen heavy fighting between the Kurdish YPG militia, backed by the US-led air strikes, and Islamic State militants.

Farming infrastructure, including irrigation canals and grain depots, has been destroyed, according to the FAO. It said the storage facilities of the state seeds body across the country had also been damaged, so it had distributed just a tenth of the 450,000 tonnes of seeds that farmers needed to cultivate their land this season.

Farmers are also struggling to get their produce to market so it can be sold and distributed to the population.

The conflict has led to the number of state collection centres falling to 22 in 2015, from 31 the year before and about 140 before civil war broke out between government forces and rebels five years ago, according to the General Organisation for Cereal Processing and Trade (Hoobwai), the state agency that runs them. Many of those lost have been damaged or destroyed.

The breakdown of the agricultural system means Syria could struggle to feed itself for many years after any end to the fighting, and need a significant level of international aid, the FAO says.

It has had a major impact on plantings; the area of land sown with wheat and barley for the 2015-2016 season stood at 2.16 million hectares, down from 2.38 million hectares the previous season and 3.125 million in 2010 before the war, and only around two-thirds of the area targeted by the government, said the FAO.

The UN organisation said its planting information came from the Syrian government. The government itself has not made public the figures for 2015/16.

The agriculture ministry could not be reached for comment. A government source told Reuters that information on the 2015/16 crop area was still not ready for publication.

“What concerns us is not the fluctuations from one year to the other, it is the worrying overall downward trend,” said Eriko Hibi, the FAO’s main representative for Syria.

Obama sends more Special Forces to Syria in fight against IS HANOVER, (Germany) — President Barack Obama announced on Monday the biggest expansion of US ground troops in Syria since its civil war began, but the move was unlikely to mollify Arab allies angry over Washington’s cautious approach to the conflict.

The deployment of up to 250 Special Forces soldiers increases US forces in Syria roughly sixfold and is aimed at helping militants, including more air strikes and Special Forces.

“The Special Forces will continue to provide critical support to local forces on the ground who ultimately must be the ones to win this fight,” Clinton’s campaign said in a statement.

In announcing the deployment, Obama emphasized the importance of sustaining the gains made in the fight against Islamic State, although he cautioned that the US forces would not be spearheading the battle.

“They’re not going to be leading the fight on the ground, but they will be essential in providing the training and assisting local forces as they continue to drive ISIL back,” he said in a speech in the German city of Hanover, using an acronym for Islamic State.

Obama was speaking on the last stop of a foreign tour that also took him to Saudi Arabia and Britain. Democratic presidential front-runner Hillary Clinton and her rival, Bernie Sanders, voiced support on Monday for the deployment.

“Special Forces will continue to provide critical support to local forces on the ground where a multi-sided civil war has raged for five years,” Sanders, a US senator from Vermont, said during an MSNBC town hall. “I think what the president is talking about is having American troops training Muslim troops, helping to supply the military equipment they need, and I do support that effort.”

The US military has led an air campaign against Islamic State since 2014 in Iraq and Syria, but its effectiveness in Syria has been limited by a lack of allies on the ground in a country where a multi-sided civil war has raged for five years.

A Russian air campaign launched in Syria last year has been effective because it is closely coordinated with the government of President Bashar al-Assad, who is Moscow’s ally but a foe of the United States.

Rising tensions with Saudi Arabia and other Gulf Arab monarchies, which have privately criticised the Obama administration’s security policy toward the region, also have complicated the US effort in Syria.

US Republican Senator John McCain called the move overdue but insufficient. “Another reluctant step down the dangerous road of gradual escalation will not undo the damage in Syria to which this administration has borne passive witness,” said McCain, who leads the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Republican presidential front-runner Donald Trump did not mention the deployment during a campaign rally in Rhode Island. He plans to address foreign policy in a speech on Wednesday in Washington.

Washington’s main allies on the ground have been a Kurdish force known as the YPG, which wrested control of much of the Turkish-Syrian border from Islamic State. But the alliance has been constrained because US ally Turkey is deeply hostile to the YPG. “Presumably these (extra US forces) are going to assist our Kurdish YPG friends to widen and deepen their offensive against IS in northeastern Syria,” said Tim Ripley, defence analyst and writer for IHS Jane’s Defence Weekly magazine.

Iran in talks with Russia on heavy water sales

TEHRAN — Iran is holding talks with Russia to sell it about 40 tonnes of heavy water from its nuclear programme, Iran’s deputy foreign minister was quoted as saying by the Fars news agency.

Under last year’s landmark nuclear deal between Iran and world powers, Tehran is responsible for reducing its stock of heavy water which is a component of making nuclear weapons and producing nuclear energy.

It is not radioactive and the nuclear deal gives Iran the right to sell, dilute or dispose of it under certain conditions.

Abbas Araghchi, who is also a top nuclear negotiator, was quoted by the Fars agency as saying late on Sunday that the United States had been the first buyer of Iranian heavy water and some other world powers, including Russia, were now showing an interest.

“We are negotiating with Russia to sell 40 tonnes of heavy water,” he said.

The Russian Foreign Ministry later confirmed Moscow was considering the purchase.

In January Iran removed the core of its Arak heavy water nuclear reactor and filled it with cement as required under the nuclear deal. The United States, Russia and China have agreed to participate in the redesign and the construction of a modernised reactor.
Fujimori’s brother says he will seek Peru presidency if she loses

LIMA (Peru) — Kenji Fujimori, the youngest son of imprisoned ex-president Alberto Fujimori, said on Monday that he will run for president in 2021 if his sister Keiko Fujimori does not win a tight run-off election on 5 June.

The comment contradicted Keiko Fujimori’s pledge that no Fujimori would seek the presidency in the next election - part of her ongoing effort to shore up her democratic credentials with voters wary of a return to the authoritarian rule of her father, Alberto Fujimori.

“The decision is mine,” Kenji Fujimori said on Twitter. “Only in the event that Keiko does not win the presidency, I will run in 2021.”

Kenji Fujimori, 35, belongs to his sister’s centre-right party Fuerza Popular and was re-elected as a lawmaker in Peru’s single-chamber Congress with more votes than any other candidate.

Peruvian law bars family members of presidents from immediately succeeding them. Patriarch Alberto Fujimori is now serving a 25-year sentence for human rights abuses and corruption during his 1990-2000 government.

“In 2021, there will be no (presidential) candidate with the Fujimori surname,” Keiko Fujimori said in a televised interview with the show Panorama on Sunday.

Keiko Fujimori, a 40-year-old former congresswoman, won the biggest share of votes in the April 10 first-round presidential election but has been seen as tied or slightly behind centre economist Pedro Pablo Kuczynski in a 5 June runoff, according to recent polls.

She is popular in poor and rural districts where her father is celebrated for building schools and cracking down on Shining Path terrorists, although she faces stiff opposition from others who consider him a corrupt dictator. Kuczynski has called on Peruvians to vote for him instead of Keiko Fujimori to avoid a “dyarchy” in the Andean country, a major exporter of copper, gold and silver.—Reuters

Venezuela court blocks another opposition tactic to oust Maduro

CARACAS — Venezuela’s Supreme Court shut down on Monday one of the opposition’s main tactics to oust socialist leader Nicolas Maduro with a ruling that any constitutional amendment to reduce the presidential term could not be retroactive.

Having won control of the legislature last year due to public ire over an economic crisis, the opposition coalition is seeking to remove Maduro via popular pressure, constitutional reform or a recall referendum.

However, government-leaning institutions are thwarting it at every turn: the National Electoral Council shot down on Monday one of the opposition’s tactics to oust Maduro via popular pressure, constitutional reform or a recall referendum.

The 35-year-old former bus driver and long-serving foreign minister narrowly won election in 2013 to replace his mentor Hugo Chavez but his popularity has tumbled amid a recession.

Opposition leaders have called for a march to the election board on Wednesday to demand paperwork in the first step towards seeking the nearly 4 million signatures needed to trigger a recall referendum.

Danish government ally, eyeing UK, urges referendum on EU ties

COPENHAGEN — Denmark should consider holding a referendum on its relations with the European Union, a key ally of the country’s minority government said on Monday, as Britain prepares to vote on 23 June on whether to leave the 28-nation bloc.

Like Britain, Denmark has negotiated several exemptions from EU laws, most notably from the euro currency. It has also boosted its presence in the bloc, said Kristian Thulesen Dahl, leader of the populist Danish People’s Party, the largest of the three parties supporting the minority government in Copenhagen.

If the Danish parliament is unable to agree on the matter, “then why not ask the Danes to decide on the matter via a referendum,” Thulesen Dahl said in a blog.

If Britain votes to leave the EU, Thulesen Dahl said he thought London would forge an accord with the EU based on close cooperation, adding that this would also “most likely” be an interesting position for Denmark. “Other countries may find it attractive as well,” he said without elaborating. He stopped short of calling for a British-style In-Out referendum on Denmark’s EU membership.

The Danish People’s Party says it is not opposed to Denmark’s EU membership but calls for less interference by Brussels in Danish affairs.

The party holds 37 seats in Denmark’s 179-seat parliament, three more than the ruling Liberal Party, giving it a strong hand in negotiations with the government. Denmark joined the European Economic Community (EEC), the forerunner of the European Union, a key ally of Britain and Ireland in 1973.—Reuters

Israel arrests 3 Palestinians for allegedly planning attack

JERUSALEM — Israeli security forces arrested overnight three Palestinians in east Jerusalem for allegedly planning an attack against Israeli authorities said Tuesday.

The three suspects, originally from Nablus in the West Bank, were arrested at the east Jerusalem neighborhood of Iabel Mukaber, the Israeli Shin Bet security agency said in a statement.

The arrest came after intelligence that the three, aged 15, 16 and 23, were planning to carry out a combined attack against Israelis in the upcoming Passover holiday, in Jerusalem, the statement said.

Three other Palestinians were also arrested overnight by the Israeli military, one in Qalandiya and two others in villages near Bethlehem in the West Bank, the Times of Israel website reported. It was not immediately known what prompted those arrests.

Israel’s security forces are on high alert this week in Jerusalem, specifically around the Old City and the Temple Mount site in east Jerusalem, amid the Jewish holiday of Passover, in which many Jewish worshippers arrive at the contentious site, a source of strife between Jewish and Muslim worshippers.

Israeli security forces have also boosted their presence in the West Bank.

Since October, 28 Israelis have been killed in a wave of stabbing, shooting and car-ramming attacks; 200 Palestinians have died in clashes with Israeli security forces or after carrying out attacks on Israelis. Last week, 20 people were injured in an explosion on a bus in southern Jerusalem. One of the injured died later; he was identified as a 19-year-old Palestinian who was affiliated with Hamas, the Palestinian organization that claimed responsibility for the blast.

Israel occupied the West Bank, east Jerusalem and Gaza Strip territories in 1967, and annexed Palestinian villages in east Jerusalem shortly thereafter, as part of the Jerusalem municipal-ity. More than 300,000 Palestinians live in this area. Israeli leaders have accused the Palestinian authorities of inciting violence, whereas the Palestinians say it is the result of 49 years of Israeli occupation and the dim prospects of establishing a Palestinian state in the occupied territories.—Xinhua
France sprints Japanese, German bids to win $40 billion Australian subs deal

SYDNEY/TOKYO — France has beaten Japan and Germany to win a A$50 billion ($40 billion/27.4 billion pounds) deal to build a fleet of 12 new submarines for Australia, one of the world’s most lucrative defence contracts, Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Turnbull announced on Tuesday.

The victory for state-owned naval contractor DCNS Group underscored France’s strengths in developing a compelling military-industrial bid and is a blow for Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe’s push to develop defence export capabilities as part of a more-muscular security agenda.

Reuters earlier reported that DCNS would be announced as the winner, citing sources with knowledge of the process.

“The recommendation of our competitive evaluation process … was unequivocal that the French offer represented the capabilities best able to meet Australia’s unique needs,” Turnbull told reporters in the South Australian state capital of Adelaide where the submarines will be built.

Australia is ramping up defence spending, seeking to protect its strategic and trade interests in the Asia-Pacific as the United States and its allies grapple with China’s rising power.

Japan’s 2016 government with its Mitsubishi Heavy Industries (7011.T) and Kawasaki Heavy Industries (7012.T) boat had been seen as early frontrunners for the contract, but their incompetence in global defence deals and an initial reluctance to say they would build in Australia saw them slip behind DCNS and Germany’s ThyssenKrupp AG (TKAG.DE).

Industry watchers had anticipated a decision to come later in the year, but Turnbull’s gamble on a 2 July general election has sped up the process.

The contract will have an impact on thousands of jobs in the shipbuilding industry in South Australia, where retaining votes in key electorates will be critical for the government’s chances of re-election.

“The submarine project … will see Australian workers building Australian submarines with Australian steel,” said Turnbull.

DCNS, which traces its roots to 1624 and is 35 per cent owned by defence group Thales SA, TCSPF, PA, proposed a diesel-electric version of its 5,000-tonne Barracuda nuclear-powered submarine.

DCNS enlisted heads of industry and top government figures to convince Australia of the merits of its offering and the benefits to the broader relationship.

Japan had offered to build Australia a variant of its 4,000 tonne Soryu submarine, a deal that would have cemented closer strategic and defence ties with two of Washington’s key allies in the region but risked antagonizing China, Australia’s top trading partner.—Reuters

Billionaire green donor launches US millennial voter drive

WASHINGTON — Billionaire environmental activist Tom Steyer’s super PAC launched a $25 million youth voter drive on Monday in seven political battleground states to help elect candidates who champion climate change policies in November’s general election.

Steyer’s NextGen Climate super PAC, a political group that raises funds to boost candidates with strong environmental platforms, said the campaign aims to boost turnout of millennials, who have become one of the largest potential voter groups.

In the lead-up to the November general election, NextGen will deploy hundreds of organisers across over 200 colleges to register young voters and facilitate on-campus voting.

“We are determined that they will be a difference maker,” Steyer told reporters on a conference call.

The group is targeting seven battleground states where Steyer said millennial voters could “make up the difference in a tight race.” Those states are Pennsylvania, Iowa, Ohio, New Hampshire, Nevada, Illinois and Colorado. Steyer has been the second largest individual political donor in 2016, having spent $13 million so far this year, according to OpenSecrets.org.

NextGen said the number of registered millennials has nearly tripled since 2008 from 17.2 million to 50.3 million, making the demographic a key political force in 2016.

Climate change and clean energy is an area where there is widespread millennial interest.

NextGen cited a June 2015 poll that found that 73 per cent of young voters want the United States to get 50 per cent of its energy from renewable sources by 2030. The group has not yet announced which candidates it will endorse in the presidential or congressional races but said it has challenged all candidates to say how they would achieve a goal of hitting a 50 per cent clean energy target by 2030.

He said the air and water impacts of fracking, a controversial drilling technique that has been responsible for a boom in US oil and natural gas production over the past decade, shows the US needs to make a fast transition away from fossil fuels. Steyer said NextGen will spend around $25 million on the months-long campaign and will launch several other initiatives later in the election cycle.

Steyer’s PAC in 2014 aimed to make climate change into a wedge issue in the 2014 midterm elections, spending over $70 million with mixed results.

But with millennial voters turning out in record numbers in the 2016 primaries, Steyer sees a formula for success. “We need to make sure to carry on that momentum until November,” he said.—Reuters

Lady Gaga goes unrecognisable with boyish look

LOS ANGELES — Pop star Lady Gaga, who is known for her over-the-top appearances onstage, toned down her look during a recent outing. The 30-year-old pop diva was almost unrecognisable as she opted for a boyish style, which she showed off in some new Instagram pictures, reported Ace Showbiz.

Ditching her extravagant style, Gaga opted for a checked shirt, black skinny jeans and a cowboy hat during the outing. She added a touch of glamour with her jewelled boots. She brought a bouquet of flowers in one of the images and captioned the pic, “Cherry blossoms for my baby.”

It’s not clear for whom the flowers were.—PTI

Richard Madden struggled with ‘Cinderella’ costumes

LONDON — Actor Richard Madden says he struggled with the skintight costumes he had to wear for Disney movie “Cinderella.”

Talking on “The Graham Norton Show”, Madden, 29, admitted the outfits he donned to play Prince Charming were more revealing than he could have imagined, reported Contactmusic.

“The costume was very constraining in ways I hadn’t imagined. It was a Disney thing and — here we go — because it was Disney, I was in quite skintight white trousers,” the former “Game of Thrones” star said. “Maybe some people would (call them) leggings — I don’t like to use that word! They can be very revealing, so we spent a few days trying out different jock straps. It’s just so dirty, even saying this story! Trying on these things, everyone’s just kinda looking at you to see what they can and cannot see under the light,” he added.—PTI

Control and conscience divides heroes in ‘Captain America: Civil War’

LOS ANGELES — Marvel’s band of Avengers are usually a friendly bunch, but when faced with the destruction of their heroic efforts to save the world, the superheroes are split between maintaining control of their powers or going under government contract, leading to an explosive battle.

“Captain America: Civil War,” out in international theaters this week and in US theaters on 6 May, holds the heroes accountable for the mass destruction caused by their efforts to save the planet. Last year’s “Avengers: Age of Ultron” ended with an entire town being lifted into the air.

In “Civil War,” Chris Evans’ Captain America fights for superheroes to govern themselves and goes head to head with his former ally, Robert Downey Jr.’s Iron Man, who wants the heroes to be governed by the United Nations.

“We like to liken it to a fight at a wedding,” said Joe Russo, who co-directed the film with his brother Anthony Russo. “It’s something that’s been brewing in a family for some time and something happens that instigates a fall-out amongst all of the characters so relevancy and topicality are really important to us because it makes the audience feel like it’s part of their world.”

“Civil War” sees Captain America’s best friend the Winter Soldier (Sebastian Stan) seemingly cause massive acts of destruction. A divided superhero camp mirrors the complexities of the current US political stage, Evans said.

“Even in American politics, no one is right or wrong. There’s no evil here, we’re not fighting Nazis or aliens. This is just a matter of whether we’re fighting for our head or our heart,” he said.

Moments of levity come courtesy of new additions to the superhero ensemble, namely Paul Rudd’s smart-talking Ant-Man and the first appearance of British newcomer Tom Holland’s Spider-Man, the latest iteration of the web-slinging hero. Spider-Man is joining Disney’s Marvel cinematic universe as part of a collaborative deal between Walt Disney Co and Sony Pictures, which owns the rights to Spider-Man. Holland will be swinging his way into 2017’s standalone film “Spider-Man: Homecoming.”

“I like the fact that they’re skewing Spider-Man young because that’s how he is in the comic books. He’s a young kid, and Tom Holland has this really great innocence and naivete but sense of subtle maturity,” Evans said.—Reuters

Sales soar for late singer Prince as his music tops Billboard charts

LOS ANGELES — The music of Prince soared to the top of the weekly US Billboard 200 album chart on Monday after the singer’s sudden death last week, as mourning fans rushed to remember the artist’s legacy through his music.

Nielsen Music said Monday it had tracked 2.3 million song sales and more than 579,000 albums sales from Prince’s catalogue in the three days following the news of his unexpected death at age 57 at his Minnesota estate last Thursday.

Album sales were led by “The Very Best of Prince”, a 2001 compilation of the R&B artist’s hits including “Purple Rain” and “Kiss,” which sold more than 250,000 copies in the three days.

The compilation topped the Billboard 200 album chart, which measures music sales on a Friday through Thursday week, with 179,000 units from album and song sales and limited streaming, according to figures from Nielsen.

Prince’s 1984 album “Purple Rain” came in at No 2 with 69,000 units sold, and the singer’s 1993 box-set “The Hits/The B-Sides” reached No 6 with 41,000 units sold.

Prince had been tenacious in limiting use of his material on YouTube and digital music streaming platforms such as Spotify and Rhapsody. The singer did make his entire catalog available on the artist-owned, premium subscription streaming service Tidal, launched by rapper Jay Z.

Art detective says female and male model used for Mona Lisa face

ROME — Mona Lisa’s enigmatic smile draws millions of viewers from across the world, all eager to see the art world’s most famous female face. But is it?

An Italian art detective is arguing that research backs his long-standing claim that Leonardo Da Vinci used both a female and male model to create the acclaimed portrait that hangs in Paris’ Louvre museum.

While the identity of the woman is not certain, historians believe Lisa Gherardini, the wife of Florentine silk merchant Francesco del Giocondo, sat for Da Vinci for the painting.

But Silvano Vincenti, who heads Italy’s National Committee for the Promotion of Historic and Cultural Heritage, says he used infrared technology to examine the painting and made key findings in its first layer.

“In that layer we can see that she was not smiling and joyful but looked melancholic and sad,” he said, adding the second model was Gian Giacomo Caprotti — Da Vinci’s male apprentice, known as Salai.

Using Photoshop, Vincenti compared the “Mona Lisa” face to other Da Vinci works Salai is believed to have posed for, including “St John the Baptist.”

“We have used all the paintings in which Leonardo used Salai as a model and compared them to the ‘Mona Lisa’ and certain details correspond perfectly; he used two models and added creative details which come from his own imagination,” he said.

“I believe that this goes with a long-time fascination of Leonardo’s, that is, the subject of androgyny. In other words, for Leonardo, the perfect person was a combination of a man and a woman.”

Vincenti also bases his theory on claims by 16th Italian art historian and painter Giorgio Vasari that Gherardini’s husband hired clowns to try to make her smile for the sitting.

Salai’s name has in the past been linked to the “Mona Lisa,” but other historians have dismissed the claims.—Reuters

Guard was wrong to silence school choir, 9/11 Memorial says

NEW YORK — A security guard who stopped a middle-school choir from singing the national anthem at the September 11 memorial in Manhattan acted inappropriately, a spokesman for the National September 11 Memorial says.

“The guard did not respond appropriately,” spokesman Kaylee Skaar said. “We are working with our security staff to ensure that this will not happen again. We reached out to the school to express our regret for how this was handled and ask the principal to share that with the students.”

Skaar said the choir was welcome to come back and sing the national anthem at the site, where more than 2,700 people died in the 11 September, 2001, attacks, a spokeswoman for the 9/11 Memorial said.

Juventus win fifth successive Serie A title after Napoli loss

ROME — Juventus won Serie A for the fifth season in a row without kicking a ball on Monday after Napoli, the only team that could have caught them, were sunk 1-0 by a late Radja Nainggolan goal at as Roma. Juventus, who have led the table since beating Napoli 1-0 in February, were left with an unassailable 12-point lead with three games each left to play as they clinched a record 32nd league title.

The match, played at a half-empty Stadio Olimpico on a sunny bank holiday afternoon, was an anti-climatic end to a most exciting Italian title races for years.

During the first half of the season, the lead had changed almost weekly with AS Roma, Napoli, Inter Milan and Fiorentina all taking turns at the top.

But, as their rivals faltered, Juventus, who beat Fiorentina 2-1 on Sunday, put together an astonishing run in which they took 73 of a possible 75 points to snare the title with games to spare.

The clash of Serie A’s two highest-scoring sides was threatened to peter out into a tame goalless draw until Nainggolan slotted the ball home in the 89th minute following a move started with a delicate pass from Roma substitute Francesco Totti.

The 39-year-old Roma stalwart, in his 24th season at the club and no longer able to command a place in the starting line-up, has made a recent habit of coming on in the last few minutes and having a major impact on games.

Roma had more possession but Napoli, whose top-scorer Gonzalo Higuain returned after a first-half goal ruled out by a hairline offside decision, had a first-half goal ruled out by a hairline offside decision. Higuain, who has scored 30 goals this season, nearly gave Napoli a first-half lead with a delicate piece of control only to see his shot saved by Wojciech Szczesny.

A Napoli goal looked imminent in the second half as Dries Mertens curled a shot agonisingly wide and Antonio Ruediger saved Roma by sliding in to take the ball off Marek Hamsik’s foot just before an almost certain score.

Instead, Nainggolan slotted the ball past Pepe Reina after Mohamed Salah managed to find the Belgian despite being surrounded by Napoli defenders. Reina, who would qualify directly for the Champions League group stage if they finish second, are now only two points clear of Roma, who are in third place, good for a berth in the final qualifying round.

Tottenham title hopes in tatters following West Brom draw

LONDON — Tottenham’s Hotspur’s Premier League title hopes are hanging by a thread after a 1-1 draw at home to West Bromwich Albion on Monday left Manchester City tantalisingly close to being crowned champions of England for the first time.

Craig Dawson’s 32nd-minute own goal put Tottenham in front as they sought to cut Manchester’s lead back to five points.

But Tottenham produced a nervy second-half display and Dawson redeemed himself when he headed his side level after 72 minutes to deflate the home crowd and no doubt kickstart a party in the east Midlands.

Tottenham struck the woodwork three times on a frustrating night and Leicester can now clinch the title if they beat Manchester United at Old Trafford on Sunday.

With three matches remaining, Leicester have 76 points with Tottenham, the only side who can deny them the title, on 69.

Manchester City and Arsenal have 64.

“It was very frustrating,” Tottenham manager Mauricio Pochettino told reporters. “It was a game we had to win. The first half we played very well but we spent a lot of energy to make it 1-0 and in the second half we lost a bit of control of the game and that allowed them to believe.”

Asked if Tottenham had blown their title chances, the Argentine added: “It’s not over, the gap is seven points and we have three games left. But it’s true it’s very difficult.”

Tottenham bossed the opening period and West Brom barely got out of their own half in the opening 15 minutes.

Leading scorer Harry Kane saw his close-range shot turned onto the inside of the post by West Brom goalkeeper Boaz Myhill and then Tottenham’s Danish playmaker Christian Eriksen grazed the crossbar with a free kick.

West Brom were well organised, however, and had managed to blunt Tottenham’s attack until the opener arrived in unusual circumstances.

Eriksen’s dangerous free kick was aimed towards Jan Vertonghen but Dawson, in his desperation to intercept it, stumbled and saw the ball go into the net off his arm.

There was relief all around a chilly White Hart Lane as the home fans again began to dream of a first title since 1961.

But the second half did not go to plan.

West Brom were far more ambitious, causing Tottenham problems with a barrage of high balls into the area. Even so Tottenham still should have doubled their lead when Eriksen and Dele Alli combined to tee up Erik Lamela but his close-range shot was saved by the foot of the post.

Tiger Woods feels ‘nice and smooth’ after first holes of the year

MONTGOMERY (Texas) — Tiger Woods played his first stretch of golf holes since last August on Monday at a course opening in Montgomery, Texas, to fuel speculations that he could return soon.

Woods was present for the opening of Bluejack National Golf Course, which he helped design. The former world number one warmed up in front of a crowd, hit a ceremonial tee shot and then played a few holes with longtime friend and fellow Major champion Mark O’Meara. “I haven’t been out here playing for this. I hadn’t played any holes until today,” Woods told reporters.

“I know people have said I’ve played holes back at Medalist, but I haven’t.” This is actually the first time I’ve played holes since Wyndham. It’s been a while.” Woods, 40, last competed at the Wyndham Championship in North Carolina last August before back surgeries ended his year.
