Restrictions on mining mounds

Aye Min Soe

As part of the new government’s ‘100-day plan’ the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation is working towards preventing deadly landslides caused from improper dumping of soil left over from mining operations.

U Win Htein, Director-General of Mining Department told Myanmar News Agency yesterday that the frequent deadly landslides in Hpakant have become an “urgent consideration for the government.”

From November 2015 to May 2016, 13 landslides have occurred due to mining companies improperly dumping soil, where migrant workers scavenge through refuse hoping to recover jade.

Local authorities have been enforcing strict rules lately when it has come to dumping, he added.

“Currently, we have suspended issuing licenses to companies, and will make arrangements for systematic mining there,” U Win Htein said.

A total of 37 landslides have occurred in Kachin State’s Hpakant Township, including the 11 November event where 114 migrant miners searching through the refuse were buried under the waste. Most recently on 8 May, thirteen miners were killed in a land slide.

Mining companies and local authorities poorly enforce safety regulations as migrants set up camps near large piles of mining refuse.

In order to prevent further deaths local authorities have attempted to move “at-risk” camps to “safe areas,” so that mining companies may dispose of wasted soil in accordance with ‘technical safety regulations’.

Police disperse labour protest near Nay Pyi Taw

Thein Ko Lwin

POLICE dispersed a demonstration held by employees of a factory in Sagaing Region yesterday as they tried to pass barricades blocking them from entering Nay Pyi Taw, arresting the movement’s leaders outside the capital.

“The workers from the Myanmar Veneer and Plywood Private Co Ltd factory in Sagaing Region did not accept the offer from police to negotiate in accordance with the Labour Law, and when they tried to pass the barricades, the police broke up the crowd without hurting them,” said U Aye Thaung, the administrator of Ottarathiri District.

Before the crackdown, the protestors reached an agreement with negotiators to hold talks with the chairman of the Nay Pyi Taw Council.

However, the protestors ultimately rejected the offer from the Nay Pyi Taw Council chairman to negotiate with five labour leaders and attempted to pass the barricades.

“Legal action will be taken against the leaders of the protest, which was held without permission from the authorities. The remaining protestors would be sent back to Sagaing,” said U Aye Thaung.

The Pyidaungsu Hluttaw approves $200m loan from World Bank for three ministries

THE Pyidaungsu Hluttaw has approved a US$200m loan from World Bank for the Ministries of Construction, Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation; and Planning and Finance during its 23rd-day session yesterday.

In his comments on the bill, military MP Lt-Col Myo Khaiing Aung called for the implementation of projects that meet international standards and focus on the durability of infrastructure. Daw Khin San Hlaing of Pale Constituency welcomed the proposed spending on undertakings for the recovery of victims of disasters in 2015, stressing the need to present biannual reports on the ministries’ progress to the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw. The World Bank’s terms and conditions for the $200m interest-free loan include a six-year concession period with a 32-year repayment term, plus an annual service charge of 0.75 per cent.

Also during yesterday’s session, U Kyaw Tint Swe was sworn in as Union Minister for the Office of the State Counsellor before the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw, and an MP submitted a proposal to rename the Ministry of Health as the Ministry of Health and Sports and to rename the Ministry of Ethnic Affairs as the Ministry of National Affairs.

Vice governor of the Central Bank of Myanmar Daw Khin Saw Oo reported to the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw on the CBM’s K500 billion loan to be disbursed to farmers during the 2016-2017 fiscal year. Union Minister for Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation Dr Aung Thu said his ministry will borrow the K500 billion loan from foreign banks in accordance with recognised international codes of conduct.

Parliamentary approval on the loan from the CBM will be sought on 23 May.

Pyithu Hluttaw session continues for 28th day

THE Pyithu Hluttaw entered its 28th day session yesterday with Union ministers responding to questions regarding a cash assistance program for monastic school teachers across the country and the upgrading of a rural road in Shan State (East).

In his reply, Union Minister for Religious Affairs and Culture Thura U Aung Ko said that K3.71 billion has been allocated to provide cash assistance to monastic school teachers across the country.

While answering a question on the upgrading of a village-to-village road in Monghay Township in Shan State (East), Union Minister for Agriculture, Livestock and Fisheries Dr Aung Thu said that the road will be upgraded next fiscal year as upgrading works for the road were not included in this year’s budget. The Union minister continued to say that the condition of 35 dams with low water storage capacity are being studied, adding that there are 581 irrigation facilities being managed by the ministry.

During yesterday’s parliamentary session the Pyithu Hluttaw Judicial and Legal Affairs Committee was formed with 13 members led by U Khin Maung Win of Lanmadaw Constituency, and U Tun of Hlahtabin Constituency was appointed as a member of the Pyithu Hluttaw Bill Committee to replace U Khin Maung Win of Lanmadaw Constituency. Moreover, three Defence Services personnel were sworn in as Pyithu Hluttaw representatives and the Bill Committee’s reports on Bills to revoke the People’s Council Law and State Council Law were read out.

Cash assistance to monastic teachers to double

THE Ministry of Religious Affairs and Culture will seek parliamentary approval to double cash assistance to teachers from monastic schools across the country as of next fiscal year, said Union Minister Thura U Aung Ko yesterday. While answering a question raised by a Pyithu Hluttaw representative, the Union minister told the Pyithu Hluttaw that a twofold increase in the cash assistance programme for the teachers will be included in the ministry’s proposed budget starting from the coming fiscal year.

U Kan Oo, Pyithu Hluttaw representative of Salin Constituency who raised the question at Parliament, said there should be an increase in cash assistance to monastic education school teachers.

According to sources, the ministry is providing K36,000 per month to a primary teacher, K41,000 to a middle school teacher and K45,000 to a high school teacher from monastic schools in Myanmar.

Daw Saw Thet Mon, a primary teacher from a monastic education school in Hlinethaya Township said that workers from the industrial zone get paid more than the monthly cash assistance received by monastic school teachers. It is hard for the monastic school teachers to make ends meet as the price of commodities increases, she added.

According to the ministry, it spent K3 billion over the 2013-2014 FY on its cash assistance programme for 6,820 teachers from monastic education schools in the country, K3.32 billion for 7,457 over the 2014-2015 FY and 3.47 billion for 7,770 over the 2015-2016 FY.

According to statistics, monastic schools operated by monasteries have provided education to more than 300,000 children across the country with the use of funding from donors and the ministry.

Myanmar, Singapore look to boost future cooperation

MYANMAR’S Union Foreign Affairs Minister Daw Aung San Suu Kyi met with her Singaporean counterpart Dr. Vivian Balakrishnan in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday, holding talks on areas of future cooperation that include education, health, agriculture, infrastructure development and trade as well as matters relating to a commemorative ceremony celebrating the 50th anniversary of the establishment of Myanmar-Singapore diplomatic ties at the Myanmar-Singapore Vocational Institute.

At a joint press conference afterwards, Singapore’s Foreign Minister said that the talks were a good example of the new government’s systematic administration and its sacrifices for the next generation.

He also expressed his belief that there would be more connectivity between the two countries at this stage of political transition in Myanmar.

Singapore, Myanmar’s third largest trading partner after China and Thailand, is the second biggest investing partner for Myanmar, added the Singaporean Foreign Minister.

While answering questions from the media, the Singaporean FM said that Singapore investing in Myanmar’s infrastructure sector will help Myanmar youth find job opportunities through more investments in education and opening of vocational training courses.

In her address, Union Minister Daw Aung San Suu Kyi said that there is no concern over sanctions against Myanmar, adding that sanctions on the country will be lifted at an opportune time.

She expressed her belief that Myanmar would be able to manage and overcome current and future difficulties.

Myanmar wants to continue its partnership with the United States, she added.

Possible Cyclone Brews in Bay of Bengal

Cyclone Komen, even though not makinglandfall in Myanmar, caused disastrous flooding and landslides, affecting western parts of the country.

Previous Myanmar President U Thein Sein declared Rahkine and Chin States, as well as Magway and Sagaing Regions as natural disaster zones on 31 July 2015. Rahkine State suffered the most from flooding.

Massive public, private and governmental support came in the wake of the aftermath. People on the streets of Yangon could be seen walking through traffic collecting donations.

A massive support base grew online as Myanmar citizens abroad through their weight behind the relief efforts.

125 people were killed with 1.7 million people displaced from last year’s disaster. 1.1 million acres of farmland was inundated by floodwater, with 872,000 acres destroyed.

Myanmar will wave its unrelenting heat wave, as isolated heavy falls descend upon Yangon. Ayeyawady, Magway, Bago and Tanintharyi Regions as of today.

“The depression will also bring unseasonably strong monsoonal winds,” Hla Tun said.

70 to 80 km per hour winds (45-50 miles) are expected with heavy squalls and rough seas for Myanmar’s coastal areas.

The same depression has caused widespread flooding and landslides in Sri Lanka with 200 families missing, according to the Sri Lankan Red Cross. On Tuesday sixteen bodies were discovered and 180 people were rescued, in an area affected by landslides in the storm-rattled country.

Heavy falls are expected in India’s southeastern states of Tamil Nadu and Andhra-Pradesh where falls of up to 300mm is expected.

Mining companies began using heavy machinery to extract jade in Myanmar as of 2005. Due to the fast extraction a deluge of migrants descended upon mining operations — seeing migrant numbers jump from an estimated 20,000 in 2012 to approximately 300,000 in 2015.

According to the Department of Mines, under the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, as of 30 November 2015: 627 mining companies operate on 7,714 plots throughout the country. While 231 companies share 311 other plots, these are small-scale productions.

As of 2000 mining companies must surrender 25 per cent of their income to the government.—Myanmar News Agency

Emerald Green project benefits about 4 million people in two years

OVER 4 million people have derived benefits from the Emerald Green project in two years, it has been reported. More than 2,000 villages will be included in the Emerald Green project, according to the Rural Development Department.

The project will be implemented in all regions and states including Nay Pyi Taw this fiscal year, said Dr. Zarni Min, Deputy Director of the Rural Development Department.

The villages were not selected by the department for the project. They were selected by local people who knew and could identify the needy in their community. The project will use kyats 6 billion for funding, he added.

The project will be launched in 20 villages in Nay Pyi Taw, 63 villages in Kachin state, 20 villages in Kayin state, 80 villages in Kayin state, 60 villages in Chin state, 140 villages in Sagaing region, 30 villages in Thanintharyi region, 140 villages in Bago region, 165 villages in Magwe region, 178 villages in Mandalay region, 30 villages in Mon state, 104 villages in Shan state, 390 villages in Ayawady region and 107 villages elsewhere which are badly in need of assistance.

The project was started in 2014. Greening activities are being carried out at 1150 villages in 125 townships, 45 Districts. Myanmar consists of 14 regions and states, two sub-states, 60 Districts, 330 townships and 64917 villages. Seventy per cent of populations live in rural areas.

The project was first launched in 143 townships in 38 Districts which have a high poverty rate. The pilot projects were launched in the 2014-2015 financial year in 1,150 villages out of 11,084 villages under the rule of the Self Administered Regions as well as the Nay Pyi Taw Council. The project included vocational training courses.

Under the Emerald Green Project, there is a revolving fund from which each village will be granted a loan amounting to Ks5 million. The loans will be managed by village committees elected by local people. The interest rate ranges from 0.5 kyat to 1.5 kyat per cent per month.—Zar Zar

China demand for Cumin Seed raises prices

The export price of black cumin sesame seeds has risen during the second week of May, as demand from China rises. According to the sesame merchants from Myanmar’s northern border areas.

The border trade is reported to have risen than the sea trade in sesame export to China, according to the statistics of the Ministry of Commerce.

Black cumin sesame seeds are offered higher prices more so than other varieties of sesa- me. Yet prices of other varities remain stable. Yangon merchants are also known to produce the product. Sesame seeds are ground up in order to make sesame powder which is mainly exported by sea, U Thaung, a sesame merchant from Mandalay noted.

In the second week of May, export volumes of various sesa- mes reached 662 tonnes worth US$900,00 via Chin-Shwe- Haw trade terminal on the Myanmar/China border. Small export operations occur in the Muse and Myawady trade zones, according to the figures of border commodity deposits. The black cumin sesame seeds trading is similar to last year’s but the price of them increased this year, with baskets of black cumin seeds fetching Ks62,000 while red sesame and the black sesame fetch Ks23,000 and Ks33,000 per tonne of markets. White sesame is worth Ks1,414,858 per tonne while that of the black sesa- mes is Ks2,126,601 per tonne, according to merchants. —MPPS/Union Daily

Fish quality drops in the Ministry of Commerce.

FOLLOWING the late yield of durians, mangoes and rambun- tans in Ye Township, Mon State, fruits produced in Myawaddy, Thanyuzayat and Mudon towns are entering the fruit market, allowing growers from those town- ships to earn a handsome price, it has been learned.

The rambutans from those townships are being sold in Ye in which fruits are being yielded late this year. The rambutan sells for up to K6,000 per viss (a viss is approxi- mately 1.6 kilograms). “The market has not flourished yet be- cause the price is still on the rise despite high supply”, said Daw Sandar, a fruiterer.

The locals of Ye townships are mainly engaged in the agri- cultural businesses. The local sea- sonal fruits like durians, mangos- tens and rambutans are suffering from scorching temperatures and drought this season. Samsung smartphones, tablets to be purchased in instalments through KBZ

SAMSUNG Myanmar has announced that seven Samsung products will be available for purchase in six-month instal- ments with zero interest through Kanbawza (KBZ) starting from 16 May.

These seven Samsung products include five smart- phones—Galaxy S7 Edge; Galaxy S7; Galaxy Note 5; Gal- axy A5 (2016); and two tablets—the 8-inch Galaxy Tab S2 and the 9.7-inch Galaxy Tab S2.

“Samsung Myanmar has introduced the new purchase plan in cooperation with KBZ. The current accounts will have no access to interest from the bank, whereas other accounts that pay interest will remain unchanged. We have a plan to add other Samsung products to this programme,” said Ko Zar Win Htet, head of the IT and Mobile Department of Sam- saung Myanmar.

Those who wish to buy these Samsung products in in- stalments can do so by opening a Current Account as well as a Call Account. Owners of these accounts will be able to pur- chase up to two smartphones or tablets per account.

The minimum amount of money that buyers must keep in the accounts will vary by prod- uct, and money cannot be with- drawn from the account during the duration of the six-month programme.

The products have one- year Samsung official war-ranties, and the programme includes door-to-door service. Buyers can also participate in other promotion programmes related to the products they buy.—GNLM

Salt shake up conducted by UNICEF

UNITEd Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF) has been pro- viding the technical assistance to improve the refining process of raw salt in Mon and Rakhaing States, as well as the Ayeyawady Region, said Mon State’s chair- person of the Salt Entrepreneurs Association, U Win Hein.

UNICEF has been assisting on developing refiners’ knowl- edge on the drying process. Under its technique, the salt is placed on a plastic tarp to dry. To produce refined salt, the process of refin- ing salt has to be changed. The manufacturers need to use the drying pots, which has been the process internationally for some time, so in order for Myanmar to meet international standards it is necessary for the refiners to meet these standards in order to export the product, he added.

Seventy salt factories in My- annmar, produce 180,000 tonnes of refined salt and 250,000 tonnes of raw salt each year. Around 30,000 to 50,000 tonnes of salt are imported from other countries. Lo- cal salt production requires access to more investments and to help es- tablish factories and improve their capacities.—Wwpu/Union Daily

UMFCCI to hold three more expos with Yorkers

THE Union of Myanmar Fed- eration of Chambers of Com- merce and Industry (UMFCCI) will hold three more exhibitions with Yorkers Trade and Market- ing Service Co Ltd, said U Myo Thant, the general secretary of the UMFCCI.

This year, the UMFCCI held a machinery exhibition in coop- eration with Yorkers, featuring construction materials, lighting equipment and machines and tools for making finished wood products. UMFCCI has also signed MoUs with Yorkers to hold three more exhibitions in the coming months.

The UMFCCI usually holds between 10 and 12 trade fairs every year, most of which in- volve MoUs with other organisa- tions. The federation usually has signed MoUs with entrepreneurs from Taiwan, China, Thailand and India, but exhibitions from Japan and South Korea are held without MoUs, according to the UMFCCI.—MPPS/Union Daily
Obama speaks to Philippines’ president-elect, stresses human rights

WASHINGTON — US President Barack Obama called incoming Philippines President Rodrigo Duterte on Tuesday to congratulate him on his election win, stressing that their countries’ alliance was based on a commitment to human rights and the rule of law, the White House said.

US officials have signalled that Washington is ready to work with Duterte despite allegations of human rights abuses in the city he led as mayor for over two decades.

Obama’s deputy national security adviser, Ben Rhodes, told a Washington seminar earlier on Tuesday that the US administration was aware there was some “controversy” surrounding Duterte and statements that drew attention in the past, but he did not elaborate.

Obama offered his congratulations to Duterte as the “presumptive president-elect.”

He won the largest share of the votes in a 9 May presidential election, according to an unofficial count by a poll watchdog, although the official result has yet to be confirmed. Obama “highlighted the enduring values that underpin our thriving alliance,” and the longstanding ties between our two peoples, including our shared commitments to democracy, human rights, rule of law, and inclusive economic growth,” the White House said.

Washington hoped “to build on progress made with the last administration” in the Philippines, Rhodes said.

“This is a new government and we’ll want to hear from them directly what their priorities are,” he said when asked about the election, adding that Washington wanted to see continued efforts to respect the rule of law and combat corruption. Duterte has been criticized for allowing a spree of vigileante killings under his administration in Davao city, and critics fear he could let them happen on a larger scale as president.

He has denied ordering any of the killings, but has not condemned them.

Washington has steered clear of the controversy, however, which analysts say reflects the reality of US national security interests given China’s increasingly assertive stance in Asia and maritime disputes in the South China Sea.

Duterte’s vows to restore law and order resonated with voters, but his incendiary rhetoric and advocacy of extrajudicial killings to stamp out crime and drugs have alarmed many people.

Rhodes noted US support for Manila efforts to resolve its territorial dispute with China in the South China Sea through international arbitration, and a recent deal allowing a greater US military presence in the Philippines.

“We believe that now as much as ever it’s important that the US and Philippines are seen working together,” he said. The US stance on Duterte could echo its approach towards India’s Prime Minister Narendra Modi. At one point, Modi was unable to obtain a US visa because of concerns about sectarian riots in the state of Gujarat when he was chief minister, but was later invited to the White House when he became prime minister.—Reuters

Thailand orders halt to Uber, Grab motorbike taxi service

BANGKOK — Thailand has ordered Uber Technologies and Grab to halt their motorcycle taxi-hailing services, a senior transport official said on Tuesday.

The services are popular in Thailand’s grid-locked cities, where bikes weaving through traffic jams get people around in a fraction of the time a car takes. There are more than 186,000 motorcycles registered to provide taxi services in Thailand, almost half in the capital, Bangkok, government data shows.

Grab and UberMoto bike services had caused conflict with those registered to provide taxi services, said Nonthapong Cherdchoo, a senior official at the transport ministry.

Grab Bike said it was working with the government to resolve the issues, while UberMoto said it would temporarily suspend services.

“Grab Bike offers a service that reduces traffic in Bangkok, one of the world’s most congested cities,” Singapore-headquartered Grab said in a statement. “Staff are well-trained and insured.”

Uber’s Asia-Pacific spokeswoman Amy Kunrjyana told Reuters. “We will temporarily suspend UberMoto services. We are doing it because we respect Thai laws. We see the need to cooperate with related agencies and have the intention to operate under the existing law.”

Uber launched its services in Bangkok in February. Authorities have arrested 66 motorcycle drivers working for Uber and Grab Bike, Kunrjyana said. They will face fines of up to 4,000 baht ($112) for first-time offences and have their licenses suspended for repeat offences. San Francisco-based Uber has grown rapidly around the world but has faced protests, bans and restrictions in a number of cities.—Reuters

Gov’t seeks smaller wage gap between regular, nonregular workers

Tokyo — The government on Wednesday called for reducing the wage gap between regular and nonregular workers to about 20 per cent from the current 40 per cent in an effort to achieve “equal pay for equal work” as advocated by Prime Minister Shinzo Abe.

In a draft plan to realize a society where every citizen plays an active role, a new goal set by Abe, the government also called for raising salaries for regular workers by about 6,000 yen to 40,000 yen a month and those for nursing-care staff by 10,000 yen a month on average.

The draft plan, which the Cabinet will adopt in late May, said that with a sound social security system and increased child-rearing support, Japan “will maintain the population of 100 million even half a century later.” The plan comes as Abe’s Liberal Democratic Party and the Komeito party will make the plan a major campaign pledge for this summer’s House of Councillors election.

“Developed countries share a common challenge of achieving sustainable growth in an aging society with a low birth rate,” Abe told a meeting with Cabinet ministers and private-sector members on a campaign to achieve “a society in which all citizens are dynamically engaged.”

The call for “equal pay for equal work” and improved working conditions for nonregular employees is key for the government to realize such a society.—Kyodo News
COLOMBO — More than 150 people are feared dead after they were buried under two landslides triggered by more than three days of heavy rain in central Sri Lanka, disaster officials said on Wednesday as rescuers raced to find survivors and recover the dead.

Torrential rains have forced more than 196,000 people from their homes, the latest official data showed, with the recovery of bodies ongoing. Another 19 bodies across the South Asian country bring the official death toll so far to 35.

More than 350 people were plucked to safety during rescue operations in landslide-affected areas across the country early on Wednesday, officials said.

Rescue efforts have focused on the town of Aranayaka, 100 km (60 miles) northeast of the capital, Colombo, where three villages were buried late on Tuesday in the central district of Kegalle.

A Sri Lankan Red Cross official who attended a disaster meeting at the Aranayaka landslide site early on Wednesday said it was feared the death toll was much higher than the official figures listed so far.

“At that meeting, it was revealed that around 300-400 people are feared to have died in the Aranayaka landslide,” Neville Nanayakkara, director general of the Sri Lanka Red Cross Society, told Reuters.

Nanayakkara was speaking before other officials said that about 150 people had been rescued from the Aranayaka area, leaving fears for the safety of at least another 150 people.

The Red Cross has set up a welfare fund for survivors of the Aranayaka landslide.

Police said another landslide at Bulathkopiya, also in Kegalle district, had buried at least 16 people.

Military spokesman Jayanath Jayaweera said troops had recovered 13 bodies from the Aranayaka site and three from Bulathkopiya.

He said the 150 people who were rescued from Aranayaka earlier this week had been sent to six camps set up for displaced people in the area.

Troops using boats and helicopters also pulled to safety more than 300 people trapped in the northwestern coastal district of Puttalam, Jayaweera said.

Floodling and drought are cyclical in Sri Lanka, which is battered by a southern monsoon between May and September, while a northeastern monsoon runs from December to February.

As long as we refuse to remain isolated

Kyaw Thura

TIME is often quoted as a great healer. Even after more than 50 years, the people in some states are yet to enjoy the fruits of peace. In a bid to end the long-festering internal armed conflict between the army and ethnic groups, the government renamed the Myanmar Peace Centre (MPC) the National Reconciliation and Peace Centre (NRPC), following a meeting on 9 May.

It is encouraging to hear what Commander-in-Chief Senior General Min Aung Hlaing said in a press conference with journalists three days ago. The army chief admitted some difficulty in dealing with ongoing fighting. It is quite understandable that the army has the capacity to root out the ethnic armed organisations left to sign the nationwide ceasefire agreement. However, the commander-in-chief showed an unusual broadmindedness, stressing that the army has to take into consideration the friendly relations with the ethnic armed groups and the neighbouring countries as well.

At this rate, negotiation with the remaining armed groups is expected to start soon, despite some sporadic clashes. Clearly, now is an opportune time for the conflicting sides to make renewed efforts to improve their strained relations by putting the interest of the people first. It does take time for the wounds to heal.

People often compare the time taken to solve a difficult problem to the length of time it takes to dig a well, saying that you cannot have water with a single stroke of digging. Similarly, it takes a little long for a seedling to grow into a tree. Either way, peace is neither a well nor a tree. Peace does not take time to prevail, as long as we refuse to remain isolated.

FROM CRADLE TO GRAVE: FAMILY DOCTORS SAVE, NULLIFY PAINS AND ACHES

Dr. Aung Soe (a) Aung Kyaw Moe
Retired State Medical Superintendent

A number of family doctors in general public study and obtain post-graduate degree of Family Medicine subject so as to be recognized as Family Physicians. Department of Family Medicine in one of the prominent foreign Medical College States that “Emergence of ‘Family Medicine’ has been hailed as a rediscovery of the human, social and cultural aspects of health and disease, and the recognition of the ‘family’ as a focal point of health care, and the right place for integrating preventive, promotive and curative services”.

Doctors, no doubt, are healers or health-care providers whereas families comprise all age groups, from new borns to elders including children, adolescents, adults men and women.

Families are on the front lines of global efforts to realize the bold and inclusive 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. They are particularly essential to achieving SDG3, in which all United Nations Member States committed to promoting healthy lives and wellbeing for all ages.

Children thrive when they receive love as well as healthcare education and other basics. During the sensitive time of adolescence, young people need emotional support along with reproductive health information and services. Family life is also crucial to the health of older people, who stay active and healthy when their contributions are appreciated in the family and community.

Family doctors support the crucial role of families in all their diverse forms. They provide access to reproductive health services so that parents can decide on the timing and size of their families. Maternal healthcare paternal leave are also vital to enable parents to give their newborns the best possible start in life.

Family Medicine may be defined as a discipline concerned with the personal, primary, comprehensive and continuing health care of the individual in relation to his family, community and environment.

Family physicians provide several types of services such as: Preventive care; Acute care; Chronic disease care management; Step down care; Elderly care; Domiciliary care and Palliative care.

There is a ten million dollar worth saying that “Prevention is better than cure.” So let me mention some points regarding Preventive Medicine of family doctors. Preventive Medicine is science and art of: Preventing disease; Prolonging life; Promoting physical and mental health and efficiency.

It is also Science and art of health promoting disease prevention, disability limitation and rehabilitation.

Family doctors have important roles: in preventive medicine; in the primary care setting at family and community level; in better position to give preventive services and Encountering illness and disease at early stages of pathogenesis.

Preventable diseases are: Genetic disorder; Conditions occurring during pregnancy and puerperium; Developmental disorders; Accidents; Infections; Addictions; Behavioural disorders; Occupational disorders; Premature vascular disease; Neoplasms; Handicap; Others; Geriatrics and Cardiology.

Preventive Strategies are: Primary Prevention; Secondary Prevention; Tertiary Prevention; To make the occurrence of disease impossible by anticipatory action and advanced provision (to prevent the disease occurrence); to check and reduce the numbers of cases of disease on going operation aimed at; reducing the incident of a disease; Duration of d/s, risk of transmission; The ill effect of disease and The burden on the family, community, country, (economic, social).

I. Primary prevention Include A. Health Promotion B. Specific Prevention

Action is taken to avert the occurrence of disease by removing the risk factors; Reduce the possibility that the agent and host will ever come in contact; Remove of noxious agent; Preventing contact between agent and host and Strengthening of human host to increase their resistance.

A. Health promotion

HP is process of enabling people to increase control over and improved health; e.g: Education about lifestyle; Personal hygiene; Elimination of vectors; Environmental Sanitation; Family welfare and Nutrition promotion.

B. Specific Prevention

To prevent occurrence of specific disease; Environmental sanitation for plague, cholera; Active immunization for EPI Ds; Chemoprophylaxis Malaria; Specific health legislation (HHR); Accidence protect measure; Radiation control and Genetic counseling.

II. Secondary Prevention

Action taken to stop or delay the progression of disease; Early diagnosis; Prompt and adequate treatment; Screening for early disease detection and prevention measures and Hospitalization and supportive measures.

III. Tertiary prevention

Action taken to minimize disability by managing established disease; All measures instituted under prevention; Disability limitation; Preventing a recurrence; And rehabilitation (physical, mental and social, psychological); To reduce the burden on family; To bring back individual towards normal life and As a productive and independent member of the family.

For the sake of general interest to Myanmar GPs, may I impart the knowledge that seven most important opportunities for prevention in UK are: - Family planning; Antenatal care; Immunization; Fostering the bonds between mother and children; Dis-couragement of smoking; Detection and management of raised BP and Helping the be-reaved.

No doubt, some opportunities may overlap in Myanmar too, in addition to premarital check ups, obesity, diabetes, drug propy laxis, advising people travelling overseas and so on.

My good wishes to all Family Doctors, on the auspicious World Family Doctors’ Day on May 19.
Army will strive for national stability and development: Senior General Min Aung Hlaing

THE army will continue to strive for the country’s stability, political integrity and development, Commander-in-Chief of Defence Services Senior General Min Aung Hlaing told Singapore’s Foreign Minister Mr Vivian Balakrishnan in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday.

The friendly relations between the two countries were established on trust, the commander-in-chief said, stressing the need to further deepen cooperation in regional affairs and bring bilateral defence collaboration to a higher level.

Mr. Vivian Balakrishnan spoke of a long tradition of relations between the peoples of the two countries, reaffirming that his country would remain a friendly neighbour to Myanmar with no interference in its internal affairs. The Singapore’s foreign minister expressed support for the ongoing changes in the country.

Russian fleet enters Thilawa Port

A RUSSIAN flagship arrived at Thilawa Port yesterday on an official visit to the country, officials said.

Under the command of Captain (Navy) Alexander Potapov, the large anti-submarine warship named the Admiral Vinogradov entered the port accompanied by two auxiliary vessels: a sea-going rescue tug and a tanker.

According to Russia’s embassy in Yangon, the warship is an Udaloy-class destroyer which has been in active service since 1988.

The visiting Russian naval officers are reported to be here to meet Yangon Region Chief Minister U Phyo Min Thein and local high-ranking naval officers.

Officials said that the visit of the Russian fleet is to strengthen the military ties and enhance the long-standing traditions of friendship between the peoples of the two countries.—GNLM

Traditional medical team provides free care to rural communities

As part of its 100-day project, a medical team led by traditional medical practitioners is taking a tour of rural areas to provide free healthcare services to rural communities, according to team member U Zaw Moe Htwe.

During the project, the team will carry out medical treatment at target villages once a month, he added.

Healthcare professionals on the team working for the Hospital of Traditional Medicine in Thaton Township, Mon State, recently provided free health-care to residents of Taungzun and Thayettaw villages.

They treated common health problems such as chronic heart disease and paralysis.

Arms, ammunition seized from KIA armed groups

KIA armed groups arrested for no obvious reasons seven innocent villagers from sabahmaw village in Nantya Village-tract in Karmzi Town, Hpakant Township, Kachin State and released only five people recently.

To save the two villagers, the Tatmadaw columns are, in cooperation with the army’s militia groups, carrying out area consolidation activities, and on 16th May morning, the Tatmadaw columns were engaged in a clash with 30-strong KIA troops near Point 646 Chankabum, with KIA retreating in disarray to the north east.

The Tatmadaw columns, in hot pursuit of KIA armed group, found a ground tent from which the Tatmadaw seized 39 small arms, three heavy weapons, 42 assorted arms, 205 rounds of assorted bullets, four hand grenades among other weapons, it is learnt.—Myawady

First adolescents conference takes place in Nay Pyi Taw

AN adolescents-focused conference took place in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday, attracting 400 teenage representatives from different parts of the country.

The two-day conference was described as a product of the joint effort by the UNICEF, ActionAid Myanmar and civil society under the supervision of the Ministry of Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement.

As the first of its kind in the country, the event was organised with the aim of addressing the challenges Myanmar adolescents face. According to organisers, the conference will issue a joint statement to map out the policy-making process.

At today’s event, the adolescent participants will express their rights and aspirations to be included on the development agenda.—GNLM

UN seeks Myanmar nationals

THE Office of Human Resources Management has announced that it will launch a programme in an attempt to attract new recruits to the United Nations.

The Young Professionals Programme (YPP) is designed to attract new talent willing to work for the global body, with officials saying that candidates to the programme will be selected through an entrance examination which will include both written and oral sections.

The written exam is scheduled to take place on 14 December, with the period for applications set from today until 19 July.

Graduates with a good command of English or French are advised to visit the UN’s career portal at careers.un.org for further details.

The programme is described as a recruitment initiative to new members at the junior professional level at the United Nations.—GNLM

Unmanned aerial vehicles (UAVs) delivered to 5th Brigade

The 5th Brigade, armed forces of the Union, has received unmanned aerial vehicles from the United States.

Two unmanned aerial vehicles (UAVs) were delivered to the 5th Brigade on 18 May, this year.

The air vehicles can be used for both reconnaissance and combat missions, in the protection of the country’s borders and to guard its airspace.

Air staff officers told Myawady that the aircraft are equipped for surveillance, and would be used in ongoing military exercises.

Democrats Clinton, Sanders split nominating contests in Oregon, Kentucky

WASHINGTON — Democrat candidates Hillary Clinton and Bernie Sanders each scored primary wins on Tuesday in yet another demonstration of how divided the party is in the drawn-out national race to win the nomination for November’s general election.

Clinton narrowly defeat- ed Sanders in Kentucky, a state where she was not expected to win. Sanders bested her in Oregon, a state that played to his strengths.

In Kentucky, the two candidates will likely split the 55 delegates up for grabs. In Oregon, Sanders will take only a handful more of the 61 delegates that were awarded.

Clinton’s sizeable lead in delegates means it is likely she will eventually be her party’s nominee, but she remains more than 100 delegates short of sealing the deal. The Democratic primary now has a two-week lull, with the final set major contests, including California, scheduled for 7 June.

Clinton, who spent the past two days campaigning in Kentuck y, would like to lock up the nomination and turn her attention to the 8 November general election and presumptive Republican nominee Donald Trump.

Trump has begun to organise his general election campaign. On Tuesday, he signed a joint fundraising agreement with the Republican National Committee. The agreement allows him to raise $449,400 from a single donor by splitting the funds between his campaign, the RNC and state Republican parties.

Trump, who eschewed donations in the political system through the primary, has thus far insisted on mostly self-funding his campaign. The shift to a more traditional fundraising approach could draw the ire of some supporters.

Trump, in an interview with Megyn Kelly that aired on Fox News Tuesday night, said he did have regrets about his actions during the Republican primary election.

“I could have used different language in a couple of instances, but overall I’m happy with the outcome,” Trump said.

Sanders supporters became angry when Nevada state par- ty officials chose to end their campaign and block efforts to award the US senator from Ver- mont more delegates than he ini- tially won in the February caucus. Clinton won the caucus.

The Nevada incident was a warning about the potential for fireworks at July’s Democratic National Convention in Philadel- phia.

Clinton’s campaign continued to express confidence that she would be able to unify the party. “Hillary Clinton is grate- ful to the thousands of Nevadans who came out to participate in the caucuses and convention pro- cess,” Clinton campaign manager Robby Mook said. “She believes every voice should be heard and no one should be intimidated, harassed or threatened in this pro- cess. When the primary process is complete, our party must come together and ensure a Democrat is elected to serve as our next presi- dent.”

Sanders on Tuesday joined his supporters in criticising the Nevada Democratic Party after Saturday’s structure.

One Sanders supporter threw a chair, unhappy about being blocked in a rules vote that was part of the effort to help the sen- ator win more delegates to the national convention. Others drew chalk graffiti on a party build- ing, while the state’s party chair- man has been receiving death threats.

Sanders framed Nevada’s in- cident as a warning.

“It’s imperative that all state parties treat our campaign supporters with fairness and the respect that they have earned,” Sanders said in a statement on the Nevada in- cident.

Sanders — who said he con- demns violence and personal har- assment of individuals — levelled some of the same complaints his supporters did, arguing that state party Chairwoman Roberta Lange did not allow a headcount on a disputed rules change. He also argued that 64 delegates to the state convention were not given a hearing before being ruled ineligible.

The state party disputed the Sanders campaign’s interpreta- tion of the events. It said some delegates did not show up at the convention and others were dis- qualified because they were not registered as Democrats in time.

“The Sanders campaign is continuing to be dishonest about what happened Saturday and is failing to adequately denounce the threats of violence of his sup- porters,” the Nevada Democratic Party said in a statement.

Sanders supporters began circulating a picture of Lange on the internet that included her cell- phone number and encouraged others to contact her to express their unhappiness.

Lange said on MSNBC she had been receiving death threats, including many containing vulgar language. Public messages sent to her Twitter account included a barrage of derogatory state- ments.

China accuses US of ‘unfair methods’ in steel dumping probe

BEIJING — The United States has employed “unfair methods” during an anti-dumping and anti-subsidy investigation into Chinese cold-rolled steel products and should rectify its mistakes as soon as possible, China’s commerce ministry said on Wednesday.

The United States on Tuesday said it would impose duties of more than 500 per cent on Chinese cold-rolled flat steel, which is widely used for car body panels, appliances and construction.

China expressed “strong dissatisfaction” with the ruling, the Ministry of Commerce said.

“The United States adopted many unfair methods during the anti-dumping and anti-subsidy investigation into Chinese products, including the refusal to grant Chinese state-owned firms a differenti- ated tax rate,” the ministry said in a statement posted on its web- site. “China urges the United States to strictly obey World Trade Organisation rules and rectify its mistaken methods as soon as possible,” it added.

Russia says it backs IOC over Beijing doping action

MOSCOW — Russia’s sports ministry said on Wednesday it fully supports actions by the International Olympic Committee to bar athletes who dope from competitions, but said clean athletes should not be excluded from the Rio games.

The ministry issued a statement in response to the IOC’s an- nouncement that suspicious test results were found in the 31 competitors in the 2008 Beijing games, and that they may be banned from Rio.

“We strongly believe that clean athletes, who have spent years of their lives training for the Games, should not be deprived of the right to participate,” the ministry said in its statement.

“Moreover, we are willing to fully cooperate with WADA (the World Anti-Doping Agency) in their investigation and we have of- ficially informed WADA of this,” it added.

India successfully testfires nuclear capable Prithvi-II missile

NEW DELHI — India Wednesday successfully testfired its indi- genously developed nuclear capable Prithvi-II missile that can carry up to 1,000 kg of warhead and hit targets 350 km away, said local media. The Indo-Asian News Service quoted officials as say- ing the surface-to-surface ballistic missile was fired from launch complex-3 of the Integrated Test Range (ITR) in Chandipur off the Odisha coast in eastern India. The trial was carried out success- fully by the Strategic Force Command (SFC) and monitored by the scientists of Defence Research and Development Organisation (DRDO), said the report.
After bombings in Baghdad kill 77, Sadr’s forces deploy in some areas

VIENNA/BIRJUH — Major power foreign ministers failed to agree a new date to resume Syria peace talks during a meeting on Tuesday, and the opposition said it would not come back to Geneva negotiations unless conditions improved on the ground.

A pessimistic atmosphere pervaded the meeting in Vienna between entries that support President Bashar al-Assad and his enemies, all of which have committed to reviving a ceasefire and peace process that have been unraveling since last month.

In a joint statement after the meeting attended by the United States, Europe and Middle East powers that oppose Assad as well as Russia and Iran, who support him, the powers called for a full cessation of hostilities and access for aid.

In stronger language than in the past, they warned the warring factions that if they repeatedly broke the truce they risked forgoing the protection of the 27 February cessation of hostilities agreement sponsored by Washington and Moscow.

They also directed the UN’s World Food Programme to air drop food, medicine and water to besieged communities starting on 1 June if humanitarian access was denied by either side.

But they did not agree on a date for peace talks to resume. The Geneva talks broke up last month after the opposition delegation quit, accusing the government of ignoring the ceasefire, and recent weeks saw an intensification of fighting, particularly near Aleppo, Syria’s largest city before the war.

UN envoy Staffan de Mistura told a news conference there was still a strong desire to keep the peace process moving.

“We want to keep the momentum. The exact date, I am not at the moment revealing it because it will depend also on other facts,” he said. He noted that the Muslim fasting month of Ramadan, which begins in early June, was coming soon.

The main opposition High Negotiations Committee said it was not willing to return to negotiations without a full ceasefire and access for humanitarian aid.

“I don’t think there will be results, and if there are any results they will not be sufficient for the Syrian people,” HNC chief negotiator Asaad al-Zoubi told Reuters ahead of Tuesday’s Vienna meeting.

“The HNC has said that if and does not reach everybody, if the sieges aren’t lifted and if a full truce does not happen, there will be no negotiations.”

At Tuesday’s meetings, the opposition said the powers had rebuked Assad by demanding that he should reach a cease-fire and ceding territory to the rebels.

“The Vienna Communique listed towns where our fellow Syrians are crying out for humanitarian aid, and crying out for humanitarian aid,” HNC spokesman Salem al-Meslet said in a statement. “Assad is not only blockading those towns, but also blocking the path to a political solution, which is the only way to end this war.”

But HNC member Bassama Kormi told Reuters the powers must do more than just irritate the gunners.

“We cannot be bombed while we’re talking about a peaceful arrangement and a peaceful transition.”—Reuters

Assignment Title:

Environmental and Social Impact Assessment (ESIA) for Sub Project One – the Environmental and Social Management Plan (ESMP) Monitoring and Reporting during Construction for the AIRBM Project

British paper’s ‘Queen backs Brexit’ headline misleading, press watchdog rules

LONDON — A headline in Britain’s top-selling newspaper The Sun claiming that the “Queen backs Brexit” was significantly misleading, press regulator IPSO ruled on Wednesday, although the paper stood by its story.

Buckingham Palace had complained to IPSO over the 9 March report, which quoted unnamed sources as saying Queen Elizabeth had made her opposition to Brexit, as membership of the European Union clear on at least two occasions in the past decade.

Britons will vote on 23 June in a referendum on whether to remain in the bloc, and the suggestion that the popular monarch was in favour of leaving was potentially an important factor in the debate.

“The headline was not supported by the text and was significantly misleading,” IPSO said in its ruling. Published on the website: “The headline contained a serious and unsupported allegation that the queen had fundamentally breached her constitutional obligations in the context of a vitally important national debate.”

Under her constitutional role, the 90-year-old queen must remain politically neutral and she has studiously avoided letting her views become public during her 64-year reign.

The Sun published the headline “IPSO rules against Sun’s Queen headline” at the foot of its front page on Wednesday, as well as an article at the bottom of page two that set out what both sides had argued and what IPSO had ruled.

But in a combative editorial, the newspaper owned by media mogul Rupert Murdoch, which sells some 1.7 million copies a day, defended its headline and said it stood by the entirety of its story.

“Does the Queen back Brexit? We’re sure she doesn’t read this.”

“Having devoted her life to Britain, we believe (her opinions) are particularly a matter of the erosion of our sovereignty by the EU.”

A newspaper wouldn’t be a newspaper if it got wind of such views, so clearly in the public’s interest to read, and didn’t publish them.

The palace had argued that the headline gave the impression that the queen backed the “leave” camp in the referendum debate, a view it described as misleading and distorted.

The newspaper said it was nonsense to say that the queen always kept her thoughts to herself, citing some remarks about Chinese officials she described as “very rude” in a private conversation that was caught on camera last week.

Ecuador hit by 6.7 earthquake; president says no damage

QUITO — A magnitude 6.7 earthquake struck Ecuador’s coast overnight in the same zone where a 7.8 tremor killed more than 650 people last month.

There was no report of significant damage from the quake, which kept a cut electricity in some coastal areas and sent people running into the streets as far away as the highland capital.

President Rafael Correa said the epicenter was the fishing village of Mompiche on the Pacific coast, and only some “small damages” had been caused.

“Keep calm everyone,” he tweeted, adding that there was no tsunami warning.

The Pacific Tsunami Warning Centre also said no Pacific-wide tsunami was expected to result.

Ecuador faces increased Zika transmission risk: WHO

GENEVA — The overall risk of a Zika virus outbreak across Europe is expected to increase in late spring and summer, with 18 countries in particular having a moderate likelihood of local transmission, the WHO Regional Office for Europe said Wednesday.

WHO assessed the risk of an outbreak in 51 of 53 member states in the region and Lichtenstein, based on the combination of two factors: the likelihood of Zika virus spread and existing national capacity to prevent or rapidly contain local transmission.

The report said the risk of local Zika virus transmission in Europe is low during the winter season, a view it changed, as mosquitoes are still inactive. However, in late spring and summer, the risk for spread of Zika virus increases.

While A. aegypti is the primary Zika vector, A. albopictus, which is present in 20 European countries, has been shown to be able to transmit Zika virus and remains a potential vector for its spread.

In 18 countries in the European region, there is a moderate likelihood of local Zika virus transmission. Among them, France, Italy, Malta, Croatia, Israel and Spain have the highest risk.

In limited geographical areas, namely Madeira Island (Portugal), and the north-eastern Black Sea coast, there is a high likelihood of local Zika virus transmission.

WHO said these countries and areas should prepare well in order to protect their populations from the spread of Zika virus disease and its potential neurological complications, including microcephaly and Guillain-Barré syndrome.

Overall, the risk of a Zika virus outbreak across the WHO European region is low to moderate during winter and summer. A total of 36 states have a very low, very low or no likelihood, owing to the absence of Aedes mosquitoes and/or suitable climatic conditions for their establishment.

Citizens post selfies with new policemen

KIEV — The launch of Ukraine’s new police patrol force last year sparked an internet craze of citizens posting selfies with newly recruited officers.

Their popularity stemmed not from their uniforms, body cameras and tablets, but the fact they did not demand bribes.

The most visibly successful reform to have emerged from the pro-European Maidan protests in 2014 is now under threat, serving and former law enforcement officials say, accusing vested interests of seeking to obstruct and discredit the force.

Vladyslav Vlasiyuk, a lawyer by training who rose through patrol police ranks to become Chief of Staff of the National Police, quit in March, “exasperated” by the pushback against change, he told Reuters in his first media interview since.

The experience he described shows how fragile Ukraine’s progress in transforming itself into a Western-facing free market democracy could prove to be.

The police reform, possibly for the first time in the former Soviet republic’s history, “showed international partners that we in Ukraine are actually able to carry out some reforms,” Vlasiyuk said.

Before Maidan, police “would always do what the prosecutors say. They would change,” he said. “The National Police positioned itself as a separate and equal law enforcement power. Prosecutors did not like it.”

“We are seeing the prosecution service chasing patrol officers for wrongdoing. There is now a tension which is blocking the reform of the national police.” — Reuters
Canada wildfire rages near oil sand facilities, extending shutdowns

CALGARY (Alberta)—A massive wildfire raging near Fort McMurray, Alberta on Tuesday threatened major oil sands production facilities, forcing the evacuation of thousands of workers and prolonging a shutdown that cut Canadian oil output by 1 million barrels a day.

The fire jumped a critical firebreak late Monday where plants and trees had been removed to stop its spread, moving north of Fort McMurray into oil sand camp areas. Some 8,000 workers were evacuated in the heavily forested northern part of the province.

The wildfire was taking a toll on the province’s economy, with one study estimating the lost oil production would cut gross domestic product (GDP) by more than C$700 million a day.

The uncontrolled blaze covered 355,000 hectares (877,224 acres), up from 285,000 hectares on Monday. The fire on Tuesday burnt a 655-room lodge for oil sands workers about 35 km (20 miles) north of Fort McMurray and threatened other housing.

High temperatures and winds were working against firefighters, and the fire was forecast to move to the east, putting oil operations in its path, officials said.

None of the oil sands have caught fire, and the industry was redoubling efforts to ensure facilities were well-protected, said Alberta wildfire manager Chad Morrison.

“Because of the cleared vegetation, lots of gravel on site and because they have an industrial firefighting service on site that understands this … we feel fairly confident the sites themselves will be OK,” Morrison told a news conference.

The lost Canadian production of 1 million barrels a day represents about one-quarter of total Canadian output. Canadian crude oil prices strengthened in light trading on Tuesday and Global oil prices touched a six-month high, with the Alberta outages among factors lending support.

Alberta Premier Rachel Notley said westerly winds were expected to push the fire closer to facilities operated by Suncor Energy Inc (SU.TO), one of the area’s biggest operators, and Syncrude, majority owned by Suncor, on Tuesday.

Suncor started an orderly shutdown of its base plant operations and said its Firebag facility will move to minimal essential personnel, while Syncrude has evacuated the majority of its workforce to Edmonton but left a minimum staff of some 100 people at its Mildred Lake upgrader and Aurora Mine.

The fire also threatened Enbridge Inc’s (ENB.TO) Cheecham crude oil tank farm south of Fort McMurray, but Notley said the fire line built there had held and winds were blowing away from the facility.

In Ottawa, federal Natural Resources Minister Jim Carr said he planned to have talks soon with energy companies to assess the damage from but gave no further details.

Australian minister warns against ‘illiterate, innumerate’ refugees

SYDNEY — Australia’s immigration minister brought border security and immigration to the centre of the 2016 election campaign, warning that resettling “illiterate and innumerate” refugees would strain the social safety net and take Australian jobs.

Border security and immigration are hot political issues in Australia that have splashed past elections and resulted in a bipartisan policy under which asylum seekers arriving by boat are sent to South Pacific island detention camps in tiny Nauru and Papua New Guinea and are deemed ineligible for resettlement.

The number of refugees attempting to reach Australia pales in comparison to those flooding into Europe from the Middle East, and the United Nations has criticized its detention camps.

The conservative government last year pledged to take 12,000 refugees from Syria on top of its 13,750 annual quota. The centre-left opposition Labor Party says it will double the annual quota to 27,000 by 2025 if it wins elections on 2 July.

“They won’t be numerate or literate in their own language, let alone English. These people would be taking Australian jobs, there’s no question about that,” Immigration Minister Peter Dutton said when asked about the proposed increase in the humanitarian intake quota.

“For many of them that would be unemployed, they would languish in unemployment queues … and the rest of it so there would be huge cost and there’s no sense in sugar-coating that, that’s the scenario,” he told Sky News late on Tuesday.

The comments drew sharp reactions from Labor and the small left-wing opposition Greens Party, which is arguing for the intake quota to be increased to 50,000 people.

Labor leader Bill Shorten blasted Dutton and Prime Minister Malcolm Turnbull for lowering the tone of the election.

“Mr Dutton didn’t just insult refugees when he made those comments, he insulted the millions of migrants who’ve contributed to making this a truly great country,” Shorten told reporters.

Greens Senator Sarah Hanson-Young called the comments “xenophobic” in a Twitter post. —Reuters

I can’t tour in Argentina: Justin Bieber

LOS ANGELES — Pop star Justin Bieber says his Purpose Tour cannot happen in Argentina.

The 22-year-old musician did not explain why he could not perform in the country, but mentioned that his lawyers passed along the verdict from the Argentinian government.

“Argentinian believers would like nothing more than to bring the purpose tour there but until the legal conditions change there I can’t.

“If things were to change I would love to come but at this time I cannot. For everyone else in South America I look forward to seeing you. Argentina I do love you. It is in fact one of my favourite places to tour. I wish this was not the case. My lawyers say it is what it is. Sorry Argentina. I love you,” he tweeted.

Bieber found himself in hot water there in 2013 when he was seen as disrespecting the country’s flag during a concert, and again last year when an Argentinian judge issued an arrest warrant for him related to an alleged assault of a photographer. The arrest warrant was revoked afterwards.—PTI

Kesha’s Billboard Music Awards performance blocked by Dr Luke

LOS ANGELES — Singer Kesha’s performance at the Billboard Music Awards has been canceled by Dr Luke and her label Kemosabe Records.

“Kesha accepted an invitation to perform on the show and she received written approval from Dr Luke,” the statement read.

Kesha took to Instagram to respond to the cancellation of her BBMAs set.

“I was very excited to perform a tribute to Bob Dylan by singing a cover of ‘It ain’t me, babe’ at the Billboard awards this year. I’m very sad and sorry to say I won’t be allowed to do this.

“I just wanted to make very clear that this performance was about honouring one of the writers of all time and has never had anything to do with Dr Luke,” Kesha wrote. —PTI

Kim Kardashian wins ‘break the internet’ prize at Webby awards

NEW YORK — Reality television stars, Hollywood actresses and social media fans came together for the 20th Webby Awards in New York on Monday, where the likes of Kim Kardashian West and Jessica Alba were honoured.

Kardashian picked up the “Break the internet” prize for her social media presence while her husband, Kanye West, who did not attend, was named Webby Artist of the Year.

Alba received the Entrepreneur of the Year award for The Honest Company, which the actress founded in 2011. The annual ceremony honours outstanding online achievements.—Reuters

Japan-born ballerina O’Neill wins prestigious Benois dance prize

MOSCOW — Dancer Hannah O’Neill on Tuesday won the prestigious award for the ballerina category in the Benois de la Danse competition, becoming the only second recipient from Japan to do so.

O’Neill, a 23-year-old premier dancer with the Paris Opera Ballet, shared the prize with Alicia Amatriain from the Stuttgart Ballet in Germany. She won the Russian award for her title role in the classic “Paquita” at the Paris Opera Ballet.

Mariko Kida of the Royal Swedish Ballet was the first Japanese ballerina to win the prize in 2014.

Speaking to Kyodo News, O’Neill’s mother Sumie, a Japanese national, quoted her daughter as saying she could not believe she had won and was lost for words. O’Neill, whose father is from New Zealand, was born in Tokyo and lived there until she was 8, according to her mother.

O’Neill began her career with the Paris Opera Ballet in 2011. In 2014, she won the silver medal at the Varna International Ballet Competition.

This year’s winners of the Benois award were announced at the Bolshoi Theater in Moscow. The annual award was created in 1992 to recognise the world’s most accomplished dancers and choreographers. Previous winners include French dancer Sylvie Guillem and Swiss dancer and director Maurice Bejart.—Kyodo News
Pear-shaped pink diamond sells for $31.5m at Sotheby’s

A British collection of 29 jewels by French jeweller Cartier sold for $3.4 million, doubling its low estimate, he said.

“We’ve made a great effort to put together a sale that we thought was suitable for this particular market which is strong for the right things,” Bennett said. “It seems to have paid off.”

Eluh Ayre Laniado, chairman of New York-based Cora International LLC, which cut, polished and sold the pink diamond, told Reuters in the showroom: “It was the time to sell. It is quite a strong price. “We think slowly the market is grouping together with people who do believe in strong prices for fancy coloured diamonds. It is a good sign because we see people who do believe in the resale value of those stones, like art,” he added. “The trend will move to white diamonds.”

Le Corbusier-designed Tokyo museum endorsed for World Heritage list

TOKYO — A UNESCO advisory panel has recommended listing 17 structures designed by Swiss-French architect Le Corbusier, including a museum in Tokyo, as World Heritage sites, the Japanese government said Tuesday.

The structures in seven countries by Le Corbusier (1887-1965), one of the leading architects of the 20th century, are grouped together with six other structures by Mies van der Rohe from Germany, including the Capitol Complex in Chandigarh, India.

The five-story building features the architect’s signature style of raising the bulk of the structure off the ground and supporting it by pilotis, or columns.

Past efforts to register his works failed in 2009 and 2011. In the latest and third recommendation, advocates reduced the number of sites to highlight works that had an impact on modern architecture.

Born in Switzerland and later becoming a French citizen, Le Corbusier, whose real name was Charles Edouard Jeanneret-Gris, is known as one of the pioneers of modern architecture along with Frank Lloyd Wright of the United States and Ludwig Mies van der Rohe from Germany.

The museum in Ueno Park in Tokyo was completed in 1959 as a symbol of resumed diplomatic ties between Japan and France after World War II. The three-story building features the architect’s signature style of raising the bulk of the structure off the ground and supporting it by pilotis, or columns.

Britain’s Peaty wins European gold in Rio warm-up

LONDON — Rio-bound world champion Adam Peaty gave Britain their first swimming gold of the European aquatics championships on Tuesday with the fastest time of the year in the 100 metres breaststroke.

The 21-year-old world record holder, still in hard training and unshaven, then went back into the pool and did it again to help the hosts end the night with another gold in the non-Olympic 4x100 mixed medley relay.

While Peaty’s time of 58.36 seconds was well off his 2015 record of 57.92, it was quicker than he had expected given that he was treating the event as a training exercise.

“I’m in one of the hardest training blocks but I can still produce a 58.3 or 58.6 on demand,” he told Reuters. “That’s a good sign for me.”

Peaty will make his Olympic debut in Rio in August as Britain’s hottest prospect in the pool. He does not lack confidence.

“It is going to be a good race in Rio because Britain is looking in a very strong place,” he said. “I don’t shiver in the pressure. I thrive in the arena so come Rio we can hopefully nail it.”

Peaty was well ahead at the turn and touched out 1.37 seconds ahead of compatriot Ross Murdoch, the 2015 world silver medallist, in a British one-two.

Lithuania’s Gedrius Titenis took bronze in 1:00.10.

The medals represented a better haul in one race than British male swimmers managed in the same pool during the 2012 London Olympics, where they came away with only a solitary silver.

“We are going to be on top strength,” Peaty said of Rio.

“My stroke just feels like it’s in a really great place. It feels strong and I’m feeling even better within myself. I didn’t think I’d go under a minute so to do it twice in one week just shows where I am.”

Hungary’s Katinka Hosszu, who may enter six events in Rio, took her second gold in two days with the women’s 200 metres backstroke. The world champion won the 400m individual medley on Monday.

France’s Camille Lacourt, silver medallist at the 2015 world championships and fourth at the 2012 London Olympics, took the men’s 100 metres backstroke gold in 53.79 seconds.

World champion and record holder Sarah Sjostroem of Sweden retained her title in the non-Olympic women’s 50 metres butterfly in 26.99 seconds.— Reuters

Manchester United ease past Bournemouth to seal fifth spot

LONDON — Wayne Rooney and Marcus Rashford scored to lift Manchester United to a comfortable 3-1 win over Bournemouth on Tuesday that secured fifth place in the Premier League table.

The game was hastily rearranged after the match on Sunday was abandoned due to a bomb scare and the first half was very low key in front of a sparse Old Trafford crowd. The one moment of quality produced a fine goal, however, just before the interval when United’s French forward Anthony Martial injected pace down the left and Rashford stepped over his cross to leave Rooney with a simple finish. The 18-year-old Rashford provided another example of his burgeoning talent with a clinical finish, his eighth goal since making his debut in February, in the 74th minute and Ashley Young added United’s third before defender Chris Smalling’s stoppage-time own goal gave Bournemouth a consolation.—Reuters

Bencic, Wozniacki pull out of French Open

PARIS — Former world number one Caroline Wozniacki and rising Swiss talent Belinda Bencic have withdrawn from the French Open due to injuries, the WTA said.

Wozniacki had withdrawn due to a right ankle injury while world number eight Bencic was out with a lower back injury, the WTA said on its Twitter feed.

Wozniacki’s injury continues a difficult season for the Dane, who was dumped from the opening round of the Australian Open and has now slumped to 34th in the rankings.

She suffered another ankle injury last month, forcing her to pull out of the Istanbul Cup tournament and a Fed Cup tie.

Bencic has also had a tough run, losing opening round matches at four of her last five events since the 19-year-old made the final at St Petersburg in February.— Reuters

Sharapova to face anti-doping hearing in London

LONDON — Maria Sharapova will attend an International Tennis Federation anti-doping hearing in London on Wednesday, British media reported, with the Russian facing a possible ban of up to four years for failing a drugs test at the Australian Open.

The five-times grand slam champion stunned the world in March when she said she had returned a positive test for meldonium, a Latvian-made heart medication which was added to the World Anti-Doping Agency’s (WADA) banned list from 1 January.

Sharapova, the world’s highest-paid sportswoman, claimed to have been taking meldonium on doctor’s orders for 10 years and had failed to note that it had become a banned substance until hearing of her failed test at the first grand slam of the year.

She was provisionally suspended on 12 March pending the hearing. Hundreds of athletes have tested positive for meldonium this year but WADA admitted last month that their bans might be overturned due to a lack of clear scientific information on how long the drug takes to be excreted from the body.

The drug’s manufacturer said traces could remain in the body for several months depending on dosage, duration of treatment and sensitivity of testing methods.

The ITF’s anti-doping program calls for a four-year suspension for a failed test but it can be reduced in various circumstances, such as for first-time offences or if the player shows no significant fault or negligence.— Reuters
