No budget cuts to construction of Myanmar-Bangladesh border fence

Nyi Nyi

No budget cuts were made to the construction of the fence along the border between Myanmar and Bangladesh, and the construction will continue, said U Zaw Htay, the deputy director-general of the President’s Office.

The 2016-2017 state budget allocated K5.5 billion to the construction of the border fence.

This budget allocation was approved by the first Phyu Hluttaw under the previous government, and when the new government came to power, the budget was re-evaluated.

Nevertheless, the approved allocation of the budget for building the border fence was neither cut nor reduced, said U Zaw Htay.

“Although the claims cannot be confirmed, concerns have been raised over border security following recent remarks made by Facebook users. This being so, clarifications must be made, and all successive governments must lay emphasis on border security,” wrote U Zaw Htay on his Facebook page.

The building of the Myanmar-Bangladesh border fence began in 2009. The task was assigned to the Office of the Quartermaster-General by Myanmar Police Force. The Myanmar Police Force, under the Ministry of Home Affairs, requested the budget for the project, and construction was assigned to the Garrison Engineering Units under the Office of the Quartermaster General.

Four phases of construction have been finished as of the 2014-2015 financial year. However, the original budget allocation from 2015-2016 did not include the current project, so additional funds were requested from the supplementary budget. However, the demands for more funds were rejected, so the funds will be sought in the next budget allocation.

The budget was not cut this year, and building of the fence has resumed, said U Zaw Htay.

TWO people are reported dead following flooding in Sagaing Region yesterday as incessant rain battered Katha, Wuntho and Kawlin townships.

In Katha, creeks swelled and flooded nearby villages, causing landslides that killed two people, according to the township’s Information and Public Relations Department.

In Wuntho, floods destroyed crops and killed farm animals across the township, damaging bridges and disrupting the area’s transportation system. Local officials coordinated rescue operations in concert with civil society organisations.

Kawlin Township also experienced severe flooding, which affected 4,000 homes.

“The water levels reached four feet in a matter of 30 minutes, but the floods subsided quickly,” said Ko Maung Maung, a resident of Kawlin.

Local officials said the rainfall reached six inches in Kawlin and 10.37 inches in Wuntho. The extent of the damage remains unknown. Sagaing Region Chief Minister Dr Myint Hlaing visited the area to help with rescue operations, a resident said, blaming the disaster on the reckless disposal of soil from gold mining.

The chief minister pledged full cooperation by members of parliament and departmental officials with rescue workers in addressing the effects of environmental degradation in the region.

The regional government contributed K20 million and emergency relief to victims of the disaster and urged officials to help with recovery and resettlement.

The region was worst-hit by severe flooding in August 2015, suffering numerous losses of lives and damages to property. The unprecedented flooding left behind a trail of devastation and across the region. — Aung Thant Khaing with local IPRDs
Phayar Thone Su border trade centre opening set after completion of Thailand-Myanmar boundary demarcation

THE Phayar Thone Su border trade centre led by US Ambassador to Singapore Mr. Kirk Thein Ko Lwin was told yesterday.

Union Minister for Commerce Dr Than Myint stressed the need for solving the controversial Myanmar-Thailand border dispute before opening the trade centre in order to avoid the possible losses of border areas.

According to the Union minister, Thailand constructed buildings and built a highway road on the country’s territory in the border area and Myanmar refused Thailand’s proposal to open a border trade centre.

Border trade and crossing matters are set to be discussed after the completion of a boundary demarcation between Myanmar and Thailand including the setting of the Phayar Thone Su border issue, said the Union minister.

He added that border trade camps are operating in Myawady, Kawthaung, Tachileik, Myeik, Hee Khee and Maw Taung on the Myanmar-Thailand border and that arrangements are being made to formally open the Maese border trade camp between Myanmar and Thailand.

During the 42nd session of the Pyithu Hluttaw the Union Minister for Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement Dr Win Myat Aye responded to a question regarding the rehabilitation programme for the erosion-stricken Kathit Khon village in Thanatpin Township.

The Union minister said that cash and gifts were presented to those who were affected by mandatory evacuation and works are currently underway to relocate them on a 31.24-acre plot of farmland in Kyrepychaung village-tract.

Regarding a question about the future of the Yangon Market which was destroyed by fire, the Union minister replied that a new building will be constructed as 56.5 per cent of shop owners voted for the complete reconstruction of the fire-ravaged market.

Construction of new building for the market will be implemented as soon as possible following the approval of the Yangon Region Parliament through the regional government, he said.—Myanmar News Agency

Kindergarten classrooms to be separate by 2020

SCHOOLS in the townships of Moehnyin are reorganising classroom plans and arranging for new teaching and learning aids in preparation for the 2016-2017 curriculum. The curriculum will reintroduce kindergarten classes.

“Rooms with timber flooring are more suitable for KG than concrete flooring. So, we’re now using wood for those dedicated rooms,” said Dr Wathun Myat Thin, head mistress of Moehnyin Basic Education High School No.1.

All schools have sent two teachers each to attend a refresh course for the new KG curriculum. According to the rules of the Education department, there shall be at least two teachers per KG class. However, there are more than 100 KG students in some schools. As many schools are understaffed, they have not been able to send KG teachers to the refresher courses, it has been learned.

“We are planning to construct separate buildings for KG classes and there will be separate rooms for KG classes at all schools by the 2020 academic year,” said an assistant township education officer.—Mang Ngai

Logging elephants to prevent from extinction

“Elephants used for logging will be saved from extinction by replacing them with the machines,” said an official from the Myanmar Timber Enterprise.

“If machines are used to substitute the work of logging elephants, it may become very costly due to fuel costs. Logging elephants need to be well taken care of so that they can live longer and be used for a longer term,” said the official.

We still use logging elephants because the forest would be damaged by the use of machines. Therefore, instead of using machines, we will take better care of the elephants for their longevity. Deterrent punishment will be meted out if people are found selling ivory. The health of the logging elephants will be closely monitored on a monthly basis to keep them fit and healthy.

There are altogether 2,729 state-owned elephants and 5,580 private-owned elephants, it is reported.—200

DPRK to convene 4th session of 13th national legislature: state media

PYONGYANG — The fourth session of the 13th Supreme People’s Assembly (SPA) of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea (DPRK) will be convened here on 29 June, the official news agency KCNA reported on Thursday.

The decision was made Tuesday by the Presidium of the SPA, the highest legislative body of the DPRK, the KCNA said in a brief dispatch without further elaboration. The SPA is convened once or twice a year. The first session of the 13th SPA re-elected top leader Kim Jong Un as the first chairman of the National Defence Commission (NDC) and Pak Pong Ju as the premier of the DPRK cabinet in April last year.

Kim was absent from the third meeting of 13th SPA convened in April last year. Pak made a report instead, addressing the issue of feeding the population. Personnel adjustment for the NDC was also made at the meeting.

The 13th SPA elected 687 deputies from across the country for a five-year term in March 2014. The SPA has the power to adopt, amend or supplement enactments to the constitution; determine state policies and budgets; and adjust the country’s leadership.

India plans expanded missile export drive, with China on its mind

NEW DELHI — India has stepped up efforts to sell an advanced cruise missile system to Vietnam and has at least 15 more markets in its sights, a push experts say reflects concerns in New Delhi about China’s growing military assertiveness.

The government of Prime Minister Narendra Modi has ordered BrahMos Aerospace, which produces the missiles, to accelerate sales to a list of five countries topped by Vietnam, according to a government note viewed by Reuters and previously unreported. The others are Indonesia, South Africa, Chile and Brazil.

The Philippines is at the top of a second list of 11 nations including Malaysia, Thailand and United Arab Emirates, countries which had “expressed interest but need further discussions and analysis”, the undated note added. A source familiar with the matter would only say the note was issued earlier this year.

New Delhi had been sitting on a 2011 request from Hanoi for the BrahMos for fear of angering China, which sees the weapon, reputed to be the world’s fastest cruise missile with a top speed of up to three times the speed of sound, as destabilising. Indonesia and the Philippines had also asked for the BrahMos, which has a range of 290 km and can be fired from land, sea and submarine. An air-launched version is under testing.

Mexico backs Indian bid to join nuclear suppliers’ non-proliferation body

MEXICO CITY — Mexico supports India’s efforts to join the Nuclear Suppliers Group (NSG), President Enrique Pena Nieto said on Wednesday, in a boost for Prime Minister Narendra Modi’s diplomatic push to end his country’s isolation over its nuclear arms programme.

India’s bid to join the NSG is due to be discussed at a plenary session of the 48-member group in Vienna on Thursday.

“Mexico recognises India’s interest in joining the Nuclear Suppliers Group,” Pena Nieto said, with Modi at his side at the Mexican president’s Los Pinos residence. “As a country we have a positive and constructive backing for this.”

India is also poised to join the Missile Technology Control Regime (MTCR) after talks this week between Modi and US President Barack Obama in Washington.

Both groups would give India greater access to research and technology, but China has so far blocked India’s accession to the NSG.

Mexico supported India’s membership because of Modi’s “commitment to the agenda of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation,” Pena Nieto said.

New Delhi’s bid for full membership, if granted, would tip the balance of power in South Asia against its arch-rival Pakistan, whose own application has been backed by China, despite questions over its proliferation record.

Pena Nieto’s support is a boost for Modi, but he must still win China’s support to seal India’s membership of the non-proliferation body. The NSG holds its annual meeting in South Korea later this month.

“I thank President Pena Nieto for his positive and constructive support for India’s membership of the Nuclear Suppliers Group,” Modi said at the end of a whirlwind week of global diplomacy in which he also won support from Switzerland.

Mexico’s backing represents a historic policy shift for the country, which has held a firm position on nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation for decades.

One of Mexico’s crowning diplomatic achievements was the 1967 Treaty of Tlatelolco, which declared Latin America and the Caribbean a zone free of nuclear weapons.

India made its formal bid for membership last month after winning a waiver in 2008 allowing it to trade in commercial nuclear technology. Modi addressed the 70th United Nations General Assembly in New York.

Japan protests after Chinese warship sails near disputed East China Sea islands

TOKYO — Japan summoned the Chinese ambassador early on Thursday to express concern after a Chinese navy ship sailed close to what Japan considers its territorial waters in the East China Sea for the first time, increasing tensions over the disputed area.

Japan said a Chinese frigate sailed within 24 miles (38 kms) of the contested territory, the islands known as the Senkakus in Japan and the Diaoyus in China, shortly after midnight.

Japan’s Vice Foreign Minister Akitaka Saiki summoned the Chinese ambassador in Tokyo at around 2 am (01:00 pm EDT on Wednesday) to “express a serious concern,” the government said in a statement.

Japanese and Chinese coastguard vessels frequently face off around the islands as both sides press their claims. Until now neither has dispatched warships to nearby waters, because doing so would inflame tensions and remove a buffer against potential armed conflict.

“We are worried that this action raises tensions to a higher level,” Japan’s Chief Cabinet Secretary Yoshihide Suga said at a regular press briefing in Tokyo.

“Related ministries are working together to deal with this and we will work closely with the US,” Suga said.

China’s Defence Ministry said on Thursday it was looking into the reports that one of its navy ships sailed close to the disputed islands, adding its navy had every right to operate in Chinese waters.

“Chinese naval ships sailing through waters our country has jurisdiction over is reasonable and legal. No other country has the right to make thoughtless remarks about this,” it said in a statement sent to Reuters.

While the US has not endorsed Tokyo’s territorial claim to the islands, which lie about 220 kms (135 miles) northeast of Taiwan, it has said the Japanese-controlled territory falls under its security treaty with Tokyo that obligates Washington to defend Japan against attack.

“We are aware of the reports and have been in touch with the Japanese government,” US Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for East Asian and Pacific Affairs, Colin Willett told reporters by telephone from Washington.

“Until I have a little more detail, I can’t really comment on exactly what (Washington’s) reaction is,” she added.

The Chinese frigate stayed in the waters around the Senkaku/Diaoyu islands for about an hour before sailing toward the Chinese coast.

Countries can police their contiguous zone, adjacent to the disputed territory, for customs and immigration violations, but can’t prevent passage by other nations’ vessels. Complicating the situation for Tokyo, three Russian naval vessels also sailed close to the islands at the same time as the Chinese warship, raising concern in Japan of a coordinated show of force by Beijing and Moscow.—Reuters

Police charge suspected ringleader in kidney trafficking racket

KOLKATA — Police have charged the suspected ringleader of an organ trafficking network accused of luring poor people to one of Delhi’s top hospitals to have their kidneys removed and sold, a police official said on Wednesday.

T. Rajkumar Rao was arrested late on Tuesday after police traced him to a house on the outskirts of Kolkata where he was living with his wife and infant son.

“He was arrested last evening and (will be) taken to Delhi for further interrogation and prosecution by the police,” a police official told Thomson Reuters Foundation on condition of anonymity.

The official said Rao was charged under various offences including removal of human organs without authority, commercial sale of organs, cheating and dishonesty, forgery and criminal conspiracy.

Police busted the illegal organ harvesting racket operating out of Delhi’s Indraprastha Apollo Hospital on Thursday, arresting five people, including two assistants to a doctor.

During investigations over the last six days, Rao and other accomplices were identified as suspected members of a criminal gang operating in India and neighbouring nations, police said.

The total number of arrests in the case now stands at 9.

The traffickers are accused of convincing poor people to sell their kidneys for an average of 300,000 rupees ($4,480) and then re-selling the organs on the black market at huge profit, police said.

Fake identification documents were used to fool hospital officials into believing the victims were relatives of recipients.

Indraprastha Apollo Hospital admitted it had unwittingly removed organs from victims and said it was co-operating with police in their investigation.

A chronic shortage of organs available for transplant fuels a booming black-market trade in body parts in India. Commercial trade in organs is illegal in India and transplant donations must be approved by a special transplant committee at each hospital.

The failure of Apollo hospital to identify the forged documentation and the possible involvement of staff has been questioned by police, but the hospital said it had followed all legal requirements.

It said on Tuesday that it had set up an independent committee to investigate gaps in its existing screening procedure. Members include a former chief justice, a high court judge and a forensic expert.—Reuters
A STATE is sustained by the obedience of its citizens. Various considerations prompt them to obey the state. It may be ‘quality of law’, or it may be ‘justice’ that the state stands for, or it may just be ‘habit’ that makes them obey the state.

These considerations allow us to understand citizenship in three ways. First, citizens are obedient to their state because they believe it is in their best interest. Second, they obey the state out of fear of punishment. Third, they obey the state because they believe it is legitimate, meaning they see the state as belonging to them and serving them. When this third group ceases to see the state as legitimate, they will no longer obey it.

It is worth recalling that citizenship should not follow the same pattern as a one-way street. Besides rights, citizenship entails a number of obligations and duties. Every society is obliged to be in constant perpetuation of itself, protecting against enemies. In addition, a society must make sure its deceased members are replaced. Citizenship has been developed to fulfill this task. Theorists of citizenship, which has evolved since the time of the Greek city-states, have grappled with this problem. A perennial feature of modern, democratic citizenship is the effort to identify the proper relationship between the individual citizen and her compatriots on one hand and the institutions of the state on the other hand.

In a sense, rights and obligations are opposite sides of the same coin. To possess rights usually places someone else under an obligation to uphold or respect those rights. If the right to life is meaningful, for instance, then the government is subject to an obligation to maintain public order and ensure personal security. Should citizens be bearers of rights alone, and should all obligations fall upon the state, order and civilized life would be impossible. Individuals who possess rights but do not acknowledge their obligations would be lawless and unrestrained.

These questions all boil down to the idea that citizenship, therefore, must entail a mixture of rights and obligations, including the very fundamental obligation of citizens to acknowledge the authority of the state and obey its laws.

In a sense, rights and obligations are opposite sides of the same coin. To possess rights usually places someone else under an obligation to uphold or respect those rights. If the right to life is meaningful, for instance, then the government is subject to an obligation to maintain public order and ensure personal security. Should citizens be bearers of rights alone, and should all obligations fall upon the state, order and civilized life would be impossible. Individuals who possess rights but do not acknowledge their obligations would be lawless and unrestrained.

These questions all boil down to the idea that citizenship, therefore, must entail a mixture of rights and obligations, including the very fundamental obligation of citizens to acknowledge the authority of the state and obey its laws.

HUMAN RIGHTS is part of the ASEAN community. In 2015 referred to in both the ASEAN Charter and the Political-Security Blueprint. In this regard, ASEAN intergovernmental Commission on Human Rights (AICHR) was inaugurated at the 15th ASEAN Summit in Chiang Mai, Thailand, in 2009 by the ASEAN Leaders. Here is it noteworthy that AICHR is an intergovernmental organization which means it is an organization established by the agreement among the nation-states. Members of the organization are composed of all sovereign states (referred to as member states). As of 2016, there are 10 member states in ASEAN, Brunei, Cambodia, Indonesia, Laos, Malaysia, Myanmar, Philippines, Thailand, Singapore and Vietnam. Timor-Leste is an observer country. The establishment of AICHR is ASEAN’s commitment to pursue forward-looking strategies to strengthen regional cooperation on human rights. In terms of human rights, there is another organization namely SEANF, Southeast Asia National Human Rights Institutions Forum in Southeast Asia Region.

What is SEANF? SEANF is a membership organization consisting of National Human Rights Institutions, NHRIs in the Southeast Asia region. The general objective of the Forum is to organize itself as a regional mechanism for the effective protection, promotion and fulfillment of the human rights of the peoples of Southeast Asia Region. It is comprised of six independent NHRIs, (1) The Indonesian National Commission on Human Rights (KOMNAS HAM), (2) The Human Rights Commission of Malaysia (SUHAKAM), (3) The Philippines Commission on Human Rights (CHR), (4) The National Human Rights Commission of Thailand (NHRC), (5) The Myanmar National Human Rights Commission (MNHRC) and (6) The Provoer for Human Rights and Justice of Timor-Leste (PDH). At present only six countries including Timor-Leste has National Human Rights Institutions.

In early 2004, the four Human Rights Commissions in South East Asia namely KOMNAS HAM, SUHAKAM, CHR, and NHRC decided to come together as a united force to help fast track the establishment of an ASEAN human rights mechanism. The first formal meeting was held in Bangkok in 2004 October. During the 4th Annual Meeting in Manila, Philippines on 29-30 January 2008, the body agreed to adopt ASEAN NHRI FORUM (ANF) as the official name and at the 6th Annual Meeting of the NHRIs, the body agreed to change its name to SOUTH EAST ASIA NHRI FORUM (SEANF) to give emphasis to the geographical sub-region. The Myanmar National Human Rights Commission (MNHRC) became the sixth member of SEANF during the 9th Annual Meeting held by NHRC on 12-14 September 2012.

SEANF has been carrying out activities and programs in the human rights issues of common concern. These inter-border issues and common concerns provided the framework of their cooperation, namely: (a) suppression of terrorism while respecting human rights; (b) human rights aspects of trafficking of persons; (c) protection of the human rights of migrants and migrant workers; (d) promotion of economic, social and cultural rights and right to development; and, (e) enhancement of human rights education under the Declaration of Cooperation for the protection and promotion of human rights in South East Asia.

On the principle of rotation, the Myanmar National Human Rights Commission (MNHRC) assumed Chairmanship of SEANF for 2016. In this regard, MNHRC already hosted a technical working group meeting for two times, 27-28 January and 2-3 June respectively in Yangon. Establishing SEANF permanent secretariat and the SEANF’s strategic plan for 2017-2022 were part of the discussions of these two meetings. As the chair of SEANF, MNHRC will host 13th Annual Meeting of SEANF in Nay Pyi Daw in September. This 13th Annual meeting will be held with two components, seminar relating to NHRIs relations with Legislative, Executive and Judiciary and annual meeting.

Southeast Asia’s economic growth showed commendable progress, however the region’s human rights and democracy situation remain uneven and fragile. Human rights remain a sensitive issue in Southeast Asia. As the network of NHRIs in Southeast Asia region, the SEANF plays a crucial role in the protection and promotion of human rights in South East Asia. Working under a cooperation framework, SEANF members undertake joint projects or activities to address issues of common concern like human trafficking, migrant workers, statelessness, business and human rights, corruption, among others. Recognizing the need to strengthen and expand the network, they continue to encourage governments of countries in South East Asia to establish an independent National Human Rights Institution. The SEANF engages with the Asia Pacific Forum (APF), Global Alliance of National Human Rights Institutions (GANHRI) formerly known as ICC, Office of the High Commissioner on Human Rights (OHCHR), and other human rights organizations to further promote and protect human rights at the national, regional, and international level. It is seeking a regular observer role at APF. What you need to know, The ASEAN Secretariat, Jakarta.
Aid, food reaches flood victims in Kawlin, Wuntho

FOLLOWING flash flooding which hit Kawlin and Wuntho yesterday, killing two people, emergency food and aid has been sent to the area.

Local authorities, battalions, non-governmental organisations and employees of Kanbawza Bank are working together, distributing food and dry rations to people displaced by the flood, said a man from a local NGO.

“When the flood hit, we cooked lunch and dinner and distributed the food to the people, following the instructions of the chairperson of the Brighter Future Myanmar Foundation,” said U Tin Lin, manager of the Kawlin KBZ Bank branch.

“The foundation is ready to continue to aid people if the flood does not recede,” he added.

Buildings including 400 houses, a health centre and a school were damaged in the flood, according to a report from local authorities. Deforestation along hilly areas is blamed by locals for the flash flooding caused by overflowing water from nearby rivers.

Torrents of water swept into Kawlin and Wuntho in the early morning and inundated the towns. The rain yesterday reached 10.35 inches.—Thitha Tun

National electrification project comes to Yangon villages

Ko Moe

THE Yangon Electricity Supply Corporation said its national electrification project will bring access to electricity to nearly 400 villages in Yangon Region.

The programme will be carried out in two separate phases. The first phase will select 205 villages, while the second phase will cover 193 villages. The project areas include Thanlyin, Kyayakan, Khayay, Thonegwa, Dala and Kawhmu in Yangon’s South District, as well as Hlegu, Taikkyi, Hnawbi, Indaing and Dapaein townships in the North District.

“The assistance of the World Bank, we are putting more effort into increasing power distribution to villages without access to electricity this year,” said U Maung Maung Latt, chair of the cooperation.

Yangon Region has 2,129 villages, of which only 685 have access to electricity.

With a budget of K14 billion (US$11,764,706), the electrification project will be implemented this financial year by the regional government, the Yangon Electricity Supply Corporation and partner electricity companies.

The Yangon Electricity Supply Corporation will buy new transformers and renovate old ones using around K5 billion in international loans.

Regional authorities will use K4 billion to purchase over 100 transformers this fiscal year.

Yangon Region is home to 29 industrial zones and 6,200 small-and-middle-sized enterprises, all of which account for the higher electricity demand in the region compared to other regions.

Yangon’s East District consumes 370 MW per year, the North District consumes 380 MW, the West District consumes 360 MW, and the South District consumes 44 MW, according to the YESCO, Yangon Region, as a commercial city, consumes nearly 1,200 MW distributed by ten 230 KV power sub-stations, which is half of the country’s total electricity generation. The city’s electricity demand increases by around 15 per cent yearly.

There are 113.64 miles of old underground electric transmission cables in Yangon.

Lives of birds to be showcased at photo exhibition

A COLLECTIVE photo exhibition to be staged in Yangon next month will showcase the lives of birds in Myanmar. The exhibition is being organised by a group of wildlife and environmental conservationists.

The event is scheduled to be held on 23 and 24 July at the Royal Rose (Taw Win Hnin Zi) Hall held on 23 and 24 July at the Royal Rose (Taw Win Hnin Zi) Hall.

Several educational talks will be scheduled for visitors to learn about the lives and challenges of rare birds, which are in danger of extinction, and will feature the natural characters and lives of native birds, their ecosystems and their challenges.

Signature campaign aims to conserve ancient Bagan sites

A PETITION to conserve the ancient Bagan cultural zone and the Ayeyawady River was recently launched by residents of the area and is being spearheaded by Safety Bagan.

After getting the green light from the local authorities, 200 people involved in the campaign rode around Bagan and Nyaung U by bicycle, motorbike and car to distribute pamphlets about the petition.

Myo Tha San, a leader of the campaign, said the petition contains five demands, including the socio-economic development for locals; legal actions against the construction of modern buildings within the cultural zone; the involvement of experts, NGOs and residents in the conservation of ancient pagodas and action against unlawful buildings along the Ayeyawady River.

The activists also called for amendments to the 1998 law regulating ancient cultural sites as residents and tourists face difficulties while visiting pagodas behind hotel buildings.

The major aim of the campaign is to urge the government to conserve Bagan’s cultural heritage. The campaign will continue for 45 days, beginning from 7 June.—Aung Thant Khaung

Computers, related accessories approved for import without licence

COMPUTERS and related accessories can be imported into Myanmar without licences this month, said U Myo Myint Tun, the secretary of the Myanmar Computer Entrepreneurs Association.

Local authorities have changed their import policy to exempt local importers from applying for licences from government departments to import computers and related accessories this month.

However, importers wishing to import mobile handsets and network-related equipment must still apply for licences from the Directorate of Telecommunications.

Under the previous policy developed in 2013, licences were required to import these electronic products.

The agreement was approved during the last week’s meeting between the Myanmar Computer Entrepreneurs Association and the Ministry of Commerce.—200

Clinton, Trump draw battle lines for ill-tempered campaign fight

WASHINGTON — US presidential candidates Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump kicked off a fierce general election battle, with Democrats accusing Trump of erratic behaviour and the Republican threatening to bring up old Clinton scandals.

Clinton, the former secretary of state, made history when she became the first woman to lead a major political party in its quest to capture the US presidency. Big primary election wins on Tuesday in California and elsewhere catapulted her to victory over Democratic opponent Bernie Sanders.

If elected on 8 November, the 68-year-old former US senator from New York would return the Clinton family to the White House 16 years after her husband, Bill Clinton, completed two terms as president.

All signs point toward a negative campaign as Clinton accused Trump of being temperamentally unfit to serve and the New York businessman charged that Clinton had a dark past and a weak record as President Barack Obama’s first-term secretary of state.

Clinton told NBC on Wednesday she would not run a “campaign of insults,” but she sought to portray the 69-year-old Trump as not fit for the Oval Office after the real estate developer repeatedly accused a Mexican-American judge of showing bias against him because of his ethnic heritage.

The Clinton campaign has pointed to criticism from leaders in Trump’s Republican Party to make this case.

“I’m going to talk about why he’s unqualified to be president based on his own words and his deeds. And I’m going to continue to make the case he is temperamentally unfit to be commander in chief,” she said in the interview.

Trump gave a carefully craft- ed primary race victory speech on Tuesday laying out his own plan of attack. To keep from stray- ing off message, he used a Tele- prompter and avoided his typical stream-of-consciousness delivery. Trump said money given to the Clinton Foundation charity from foreign donors had earned the Clintons millions of dollars and had a corrupting influence when Clinton was secretary of state.

“Hillary Clinton turned the State Department into her private hedge fund — the Russians, the Saudis, the Chinese — all gave money to Bill and Hillary and got favourable treatment in return. It’s a sad day in America when foreign governments with deep pockets have more influence in our own country than our great citizens,” Trump said.

He said he would give a speech next week “discussing all of the things that have taken place with the Clintons.”—Reuters

Blair and Major to warn Brexit threatens unity of United Kingdom: BBC

LONDON — Tony Blair and John Major will say on Thursday that a vote to leave the European Union on 23 June would jeopardize the unity of the United King- dom by undermining the peace in Northern Ireland and stoking calls for Scottish independence.

Speaking together in North- ern Ireland, the two former British prime ministers will warn that the “unity of the UK itself is on the ballot paper”, the BBC reported.

Major and Blair, who both played important roles in the Northern Ireland peace process in the 1990s, will say there is a seri- ous risk of a second independence referendum in Scotland and that an out vote could undermine sta- bility in Northern Ireland.

“We understand that, al- though today Northern Ireland is more stable and more prosperous than ever, that stability is poised on carefully constructed foundations,” Blair will say, according to the BBC.

“And so we are naturally con- cerned at the prospect of anything that could put those foundations at risk,” Blair will say.

The 1998 Northern Ireland peace deal ended three decades of tit-for-tat killings between Catho- lic-Irish nationalists who want the province to unite with Ireland and their Protestant rivals who want to keep Northern Ireland British. Over 3,000 died in the conflict.

Blacks rejected independence by 55-45 per cent in a vote in 2014 but since then the Scottish National Party has gained further strength, taking 56 of the 59 seats representing Scotland in the national parliament in London in last May’s national election.

Theresa Villiers, an opponent of EU membership who serves as Britain’s minister for Northern Ireland, said the comments by Blair and Major were irresponsible.

“Whatever the result of the referendum, Northern Ireland is not going back to the troubles of its past and to suggest otherwise would be highly irresponsible,” Villiers said.—Reuters

Second specialist vessel to join EgyptAir search on Friday

PARIS — A second ship with specialist search equipment will join the hunt for the ‘black box’ flight recorders and wreckage of a crashed EgyptAir jet on Friday, the head of France’s air accident investigation safety agency said on Thursday.

A French naval supply vessel picked up a signal from one of the two recorders on 1 June, and Egypt has chartered a second ves- sel operated by Mauritius-based Deep Ocean Search, equipped with a suitable sonar and an underwater vehicle.

Remi Jouyi, director of the BEA air accident agency which is advising Egypt on the underwater search, said the first ship continued to pick up locator signals from the first recorder, whose location had been narrowed to a radius of 1-2 kilometres.

Pending the search for the two flight recorders, one for cock- pit voice recorders and one for data, the Egyptian-led probe is still “very far” from understanding why Flight 804 crashed into the Mediterranean on 19 May, killing all 66 people on board, Jouyi told a group of aviation journalists in Paris.—Reuters

Berlusconi’s party denies press reports he may need heart surgery

ROME — Former Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi is continuing to undergo tests in hospital but is not expected to have heart sur- gery, a spokeswoman for his Forza Italia party said on Thursday, denying press reports he would need an operation.

The 79-year-old centre-right leader and media mogul was admitted to hospital on Monday suffering from what his doctors called a “cardiac deficiency”.

In unsourced reports, Italian newspapers said on Thursday that Berlusconi might need an operation in the coming hours after tests had revealed a potentially serious problem. However, Forza Italia spokeswoman Deborah Bergamini dismissed this.

“No operation is expected. What the newspapers have written is not right. It is nonsense,” she told Reuters.

“As we already said yesterday, (Berlusconi) is undergoing cer- tain tests. They will be completed today. Presumably he will go home tonight,” she added.—Reuters

Trump ‘disappointed’ by Republican criticism of judge comments

WASHINGTON — US Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump said on Wednesday he was “disappointed and surprised” by the criticism and charges of racism he had received from Republican leaders for comments he made about the Mexican heritage of a federal judge.

Trump had won more votes than anyone in the history of the party, so I was a little bit surprised when they said that,” Trump told Time. “I didn’t think it was necessary. But you know, they have to say what they have to say. I’m a big boy. They have to say what they have to say.”—Reuters

Four people hospitalised as Australian police open fire on escaped psychiatric patient

SYDNEY — Four people have been taken to hospital with gunshot wounds after Australian police opened fire on an escaped psychiatric patient armed with a knife near in crowded mall in Sydney’s north on Thursday.

A confrontation erupted when police approached a 23-year-old man who was allegedly carrying a carving knife. Police subsequently opened fire when the man, who was known to police, allegedly lunged at one of the officers in the crowded market in Hornsby, northern Syd- ney, the New South Wales (NSW) state police Assistant Commissioner Denis Clifford told reporters at the scene on Thursday.

“He was wounded several times,” Clifford said. “Unfortunately some bystanders were also injured, with either bullet or fragment wounds.”

It’s believed the bystanders were three women, aged between 60 and 80 years. All four have been treated in hospital and are in a stable condition, with the man under police guard.

Police had been searching for the man since Wednesday after he was reported missing from a nearby psychiatric facility.

Though its alarming bystanders were wounded when police fired at the man in a crowded location, the two officers made a decision in a “life-and-death situation,” Clifford said. “I wonder what may have happened had the police not intervened and stopped this person with a knife,” he said. A “critical incident investigation” has been launched, which will look into why potentially non-lethal methods, such as a Taser, were not used to subdue the man.—Xinhua

Palestinian gunmen kill four in Tel Aviv, assailants held: police

TEL AVIV — Two Palestinian gunmen killed four people at a popular shopping and restaurant area in Tel Aviv on Wednesday in an attack that sent diners, some clutching small children, running for their lives just outside Israel’s Defence Ministry.

Both gunmen, identified by police as Palestinians from a village near the city of Hebron in the Israeli-occupied West Bank, were apprehended, and one was wounded. Security footage showed the two, dressed in suits and ties and posing as customers at a restaurant, suddenly pull out automatic weapons and open fire, shooting one man point blank, as other diners fled.

Police said the assailants killed four people in the 9:30 pm (1830 GMT) assault and that six were wounded.

The attack, as families were enjoying a balmy evening out at the trendy Sarona complex, was one of the most serious in the country’s business and entertainment capital since a wave of Palestinian violence erupted eight months ago.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, returning from a visit to Moscow, rushed directly to the Defence Ministry to assess the situation with senior ministers and security chiefs. He toured the scene later and described the attack as “cold-blooded murder.”

“We held a consultation about the series of offensive and defensive measures that we will implement to act against the grave phenomenon of shootings. They certainly challenge us, but we will provide an answer,” Netanyahu told reporters.

The US State Department condemned the attack in “the strongest possible terms,” saying in a statement: These cowardly attacks against innocent civilians can never be justified.”

A lull over the past several months in what had been near-daily shootings and shootings made the attack just metres (yards) from the sprawling defense compound surprising and was likely to bring back a sense of insecurity to Israeli streets.

“I was with the family, eating pizza. We heard the shots, we didn’t know what was happening, and everybody got down on the floor. We managed to escape to a cellar,” a woman, who gave her name only as Annette, told Israel’s Channel 10 television.

Security personnel who guarded the Sarona complex fired back.

In the past half year, Palestinian attacks have killed 32 Israelis and two visiting US citizens. Israeli forces have shot dead at least 196 Palestinians, 134 of whom Israel has said were assailants. Others were killed in clashes and protests.

Tensions over Jewish access to a volatile and contested Jerusalem holy site, revered by Muslims as Haram al-Sharif (Noble Sanctuary) and Jews as Temple Mount, have fuelled the violence.

Israel says incitement in the Palestinian media and personal problems at home have been important factors spurring assailants, often teenagers, to carry out attacks.

But Israeli officials also have pointed to efforts in recent months by the Palestinian Authority, which exercises limited self-rule in the West Bank, to curb the assaults.

In a similar attack in Tel Aviv five months ago, an Israeli Arab killed two people on a main shopping street and the driver of a taxi he used to flee the scene. The assailant was killed a week later in a shootout with police at a hideout in his home village in northern Israel.

More than 22 killed, 70 wounded, in two bombings in Baghdad

BAGHDAD — More than 22 people were killed and 70 wounded in two separate bombings on Thursday in Baghdad, one targeting a commercial street and the other an army checkpoint, Iraqi police said.

The attacks come as Iraqi forces are trying to dislodge Islamic State militants from Falluja, their stronghold just west of Baghdad.

A car packed with explosive blew up in a commercial street of Baghdad al-Jadeeda (New Baghdad), an eastern district of the capital, killing at least 15 people and wounding over 50, a police officer said.

A suicide car bomb also targeted a main army checkpoint in Taji, just north of Baghdad, killing seven soldiers and wounding more than 20 others, he said. — Reuters

Turkey blames Kurdish militants for Istanbul car bombing

ANKARA — Turkish President Tayyip Erdogan’s office blamed Kurdish militants for a car bomb that killed 11 people in central Istanbul, while a second bomb on Wednesday killed five people in the largely Kurdish southeast.

Prime Minister Binali Yildirim, meanwhile, said that the Kurdistan Workers Party (PKK), blamed for Tuesday’s attack in Istanbul, had recently sought to revive peace talks and offered to lay down their arms.

A ceasefire with the PKK collapsed almost a year ago, setting off the worst violence the country has seen in two decades. Yildirim, in comments broadcast live by TKR television, said Turkey would not negotiate to end the violence.

The car bomb on Tuesday ripped through a police bus during the morning rush hour in Istanbul, killing six police officers and five civilians near the main tourist district, a major university and the mayor’s office.

On Wednesday the bomb targeted a police station in the southeastern town of Midyat, killing three civilians and two police officers and wounding more than 30 others. The province borders Syria in a region where Kurdish militants have waged a three-decade insurgency.

“All indicators and signs regarding the attack in Istanbul yesterday point to the separatist terror organisation,” Erdogan’s spokesman Ibrahim Kalin told a news conference, referring to the Kurdistan Workers Party (PKK).

“The Midyat attack is very fresh and we can only make an assessment once we have all the information,” Kalin said.

There has been no claim of responsibility from Kurdish militants. They have carried out similar attacks in Turkey’s major cities in the recent past as violence has spiralled since the ceasefire with the PKK collapsed almost a year ago. The conflict has been fuelled by the war in Syria. Turkey says the PKK — considered a terrorist organisation by Ankara, the European Union and the United States — has deep ties to the Syrian Kurdish YPG militia fighting just across the border.

The groups do not deny links. The PKK, founded the YPG as a Syrian organisation a decade ago and both are inspired by Abdullah Ocalan, who led the PKK from its inception and lived in Syria shortly before his capture in 1999.

He remains in jail. Clashes broke out between security forces and PKK militants in Midyat during the attack when the explosion destroyed the facade of a five-storey block, security sources said. — Reuters

Militants kill 43 in attack on Ethiopian base in Somalia

MOGADISHU — Somalia’s al Shabaab militant group said it rammed a suicide car bomb into an African Union military base, stormed inside and killed 43 Ethiopian soldiers on Thursday.

Residents near the base in the central town of Halgan said they heard a huge explosion and then heavy exchanges of gunfire shortly before dawn. Shots ran out at least an hour after the initial blast, they added.

There was no immediate comment from the African Union’s AMISOM force, which is made up of troops from African nations supporting Somalia’s Western-backed government and army in the fight against the al Qaeda-linked militants.

“We understand there are casualties on both sides. AU forces fought back fiercely and repelled al Shabaab,” Somali military officer Major Abdifatah Elmi told Reuters from Bulbarde town in the region. But he said he did not have figures.

“Several residents were injured by stray bullets,” he said.

AMISOM usually says it is up to troop-contributing countries to announce casualties. In the past, casualty figures cited by al Shabaab have been much higher than official numbers.

“Our fighters stormed the Halgan base of AMISOM,” al Shabaab’s military operations spokesman Abdiasis Abu Musab told Reuters. He said the group used a suicide car bomb and then militants had exchanged fire with Ethiopian troops there. — Reuters
Papua New Guinea court bars university protests after violence

SYDNEY — A Papua New Guinea court has granted an injunction barring university students from protesting on campus after dozens of people were wounded during clashes between student protesters and police in the capital, Port Moresby.

A groundswell of political unrest in recent weeks has surged in the country, just to Australia’s north, amid calls for Prime Minister Peter O’Neill to resign over corruption allegations.

Papua New Guinea is developing lucrative resource projects with energy majors ExxonMobil and Total that have made it a major gas producer. But corruption and violence are endemic in the island nation of seven million, raising concerns about its long-term stability.

The government said initial reports that up to four people had been killed were incorrect. An official said four people had been wounded in the clashes.

“Students and officials said police fired on the public and used tear gas to disperse crowds during a protest at the University of PNG's Waigani campus in Port Moresby. Protestors were later reported in the PNG highland cities of Goroka and Mt. Hagen, and in Lae on the north coast.

Papua New Guinea Higher Education Minister Malakai Tabar welcomed the court order blocking students from resuming their rolling protests.

“The overwhelming majority of students simply want to go to class, sit their exams and proceed to the next semester,” Tabar said, the Australian Broadcasting Corp. reported.

Thousands of students across PNG have been protesting and boycotting classes for weeks. They want to go to class, sit their exams and proceed to the next semester.” — Reuters

Sinkhole closes part of Canadian capital’s downtown

OTTAWA — A large sinkhole closed down part of the Canadian capital on Wednesday and forced the evacuation of businesses a few blocks from the national parliament, three weeks before Ottawa is due to host a summit of the leaders of Canada, Mexico and the United States.

The sinkhole formed on a normally busy downtown street in an area that has been under construction for Ottawa’s new light-rail transit (LRT) system. City officials said the cause of the sinkhole was not yet known but earlier gas and water leaks have been contained.

“It’s premature at this point to make the connection to LRT, although that could very well be the possibility,” Mayor Jim Watson told a news conference.

We weren’t given enough info on British paedophile: Malaysia Police

KUALA LUMPUR — Malaysia’s police chief said on Thursday that British officials did not hand over enough information to investigate convicted British paedophile Richard Huckle, as questions arose over the Southeast Asian country’s handling of the case.

Huckle, 30, was given 22 life sentences in a London court on Monday after admitting 71 charges of sex abuse against children in Malaysia and Cambodia from the ages of six months to 12.

Malaysia faces increasing pressure to explain the lack of action after British officials said they told their counterparts in Kuala Lumpur about his suspected behaviour more than 18 months ago. Malaysian investigators have expressed outrage on social media over the apathy shown by law enforcement and government officials.

Malaysian Inspector-General of Police Khalid Abu Bakar confirmed that authorities were informed of Huckle and his suspected behaviour before his arrest in 2014, despite earlier comments from other police officials that they had only been told in April this year.

But British officials were unable to provide them with more details regarding Huckle’s victims and activities, Khalid said, adding that Malaysia’s death penalty made it difficult for British police to cooperate fully.

“That was our main obstacle when dealing with European countries, because by law, they are unable to cooperate with us because we carry out capital punishment,” he said.

“When his case went to trial, it was only then that we knew that it was 23 victims, and that it involved our citizens and only then we could start tracing them,” Khalid said.

Huckle is believed to have targeted nearly 200 children in Malaysia and Cambodia over a span of nine years, posing as a photographer. English teacher and philanthropist to gain access to impoverished families. — Reuters

Unlikely casualty in California’s renewable energy boom: natural gas

SACRAMENTO (California) — In February of 2001, then California Governor Gray Davis stood at the site of Calpine Corp’s new Sutter natural gas power plant and unveiled his plan to fast-track construction of similar stations to add 20,000 megawatts of modern, efficient generation to the state in three years.

Natural gas, Davis said, was “the most environmentally friendly, clean, appropriate fuel” to help the state move beyond the energy crisis it had just endured and enable its 34 million residents “to enjoy the good life that California represents.”

Today, the plants inaugurated that day are among the casualties of a monumental shift in the US energy landscape.

An unexpected combination of oversupply of natural gas and a boom in solar and other renewable energy has depressed power prices and threatened the viability of natural gas plants that sell power into the Golden State’s electricity market. These developments are good for consumers and the environment, but tough on power producers who placed huge bets on natural gas. “The world is really changing for these independent power producers,” said Michael Picker, president of the California Public Utilities Commission, in an interview. “We don’t need a lot of gas.”

Calpine, in fact, shut down its Sutter plant earlier this year because of “poor economics.” And rival Dynegy has said it plans to leave the California market, citing the state’s focus on renewables.

To offset losses, Rockland Capital, Calpine and other plant owners, including General Electric and the Carlyle Group’s Cogentrix, are asking the state for help. They argue that it is in the state’s interest to support the natural gas plants because they provide stability and reliability — attributes that are important to the state’s power grid and something weather-dependent wind and solar can’t offer. If the plants don’t get needed support, their owners have warned, a critical safety net for the grid could disappear.

GE, which owns the Inland Empire Energy Centre in Southern California, said in a statement that state policies “make reliability and cost as low priorities,” adding that generators may be forced to shut down permanently. And in a letter to California officials in April, Rockland Capital called its 13-year-old La Paloma plant in Kern County “one of the victims” of the rise of large amounts of renewable power, and warned the plant could shut down later this year. Power producers want more long-term contracts that will compensate them for being there when wind and solar power are unavailable or when demand is particularly high.

“You do need natural gas generation as a backup for solar,” said Andrew Bischof, an analyst who tracks the power industry for Morningstar.

Nuclear power plant owners have made similar arguments in Illinois and New York, where they are competing with renewables and cheaper gas-fired power. But last week, nuclear power plant operator Exelon said it would close two Illinois plants due to a lack of progress on state legislation to support them. Texas faces similar challenges due to an abundance of wind energy, but the Lone Star state has far more nuclear and coal-fired power than California, which would waste shakeloads first.—Reuters

Kuczynski keeps narrow lead as Peru tallies presidential votes

LIMA — Former investment banker Pedro Pablo Kuczynski inched closer to winning Peru’s presidency three days after Sunday’s election, holding on to his slim but steady lead over Keiko Fujimori with just 1 per cent of the votes left to tally.

Fujimori, daughter of that country’s ex-President Alberto Fujimori, was trailing Kuczynski by 0.23 of a percentage point Wednesday, a difference of some 40,000 votes.

While those numbers have fluctuated somewhat in the past two days, Fujimori has not tied or surpassed Kuczynski since counting began.

Peru’s electoral office, ONPE, under President Pedro Pablo Kuczynski, has released initial results with 100 per cent of votes counted. The only polling firm of three that had put Fujimori ahead in its exit poll.

A group of Fujimori’s supporters gathered outside ONPE’s headquarters late on Wednesday, chanting “ONPE, listen, we’re watching you!” and waving flags in her party’s trademark orange.

Fujimori has largely remained out of the public eye since late on Sunday, when she urged her supporters to wait for complete results. Her critics on Twitter and Facebook have pressured her to concede.

But Fujimori’s allies said it was too soon.

“I still hold onto that dream” of Fujimori winning, congressionalwoman Luisa Maria Cuculiza said in a televised interview.— Reuters
Ed Sheeran faces $20m copyright lawsuit over ‘Photograph’

LOS ANGELES — Two California-based musicians are suing British singer-songwriter Ed Sheeran for $20 million over his hit song “Photograph,” which they claim bears a similar structure to one of their songs, according to court documents filed on Wednesday.

The copyright infringement lawsuit was filed by Martin Harrington, a songwriter and producer, and Thomas Leonard, a songwriter signed to Harrington’s company HaloSongs, in federal court in the Central District of California.

The two musicians allege Sheeran’s ballad “Photograph,” released as a single in 2015, has the same musical composition to their song “Amazing,” which they said they wrote in 2009.

Other named defendants include Snow Patrol’s Johnny McDaid, credited as a co-writer of “Photograph,” as well as units of Sony/ATV Music Publishing, Warner Music Group and its subsidiary, Atlantic Recording Corporation.

Representatives for Sheeran, McDaid, Sony Music, Warner Music and Atlantic did not immediately respond to Reuters’ requests for comment on Wednesday.

Harrington and Leonard are seeking a jury trial and damages in excess of $20 million, as well as royalties from the song.

In documents that include musical note comparison and chord breakdowns of the two songs, Harrington and Leonard claim the chorus of Sheeran’s “Photograph” shares 39 identical notes with “Amazing,” saying the similarities are “instantly recognisable to the ordinary observer.” The documents say that “Photograph” has sold more than 3.5 million copies worldwide, and most recently was featured prominently in romantic drama movie “Me Before You,” released last week, as well as trailers for the film. — Reuters

Sharapova banned for two years by ITF

LONDON — The career of Russian former world number one Maria Sharapova was in tatters on Wednesday after she was given a two-year ban by the International Tennis Federation (ITF) following her positive test for the banned drug meldonium.

In a statement the ITF said it had ultimately found that the 30-year-old, who will celebrate her 19th birthday next week, had failed to meet the anti-doping rules.

Sharapova told the tribunal she was innocent and a substance had been contaminated in her system.

However, the world’s highest-profile tennis player to fail an anti-doping test said she had made “a huge mistake” in failing to realize that continuing to take Meldonate would be a violation of the anti-doping code.

The ITF spent tremendous amounts of time and resources trying to prove I intentionally violated the anti-doping rules and the tribunal concluded I did not,” she said on Facebook.

The ITF had sought a four-year suspension but the tribunal rejected that, she said. “While the tribunal concluded correctly that I did not intentionally violate the anti-doping rules, I cannot accept an unfairly harsh two-year suspension.”

Rooney rules out future move to new Premier League club

LONDON — England striker Wayne Rooney says it is highly unlikely that a scenario would arise causing him to switch allegiances to any Premier League side other than Manchester United or boyhood club Everton in the future.

The 30-year-old, who will captain his country at the European Championship in France, joined United as an 18-year-old from Everton in August 2004, in a move that drew criticism from sections of the Goodison Park fan base.

However, Rooney, who has won five league titles with United, thanked both the clubs for their support throughout his career.

“Manchester United and Everton are the only clubs I have played for as a professional footballer,” he told United’s club website (www.manutd.com).

“I am happy to say now that, whatever may happen in the future, I will never play for another Premier League club. “Everton and United, along with my family, gave me the support and opportunity to help me achieve my goals and dreams.”

Rooney’s only two league clubs will face off in his testimonial at Old Trafford on 3 August.

Brazil hammer hapless Haiti 7-1 in Copa America massacre

ORLANDO — Philippe Coutinho grabbed a hat-trick as Brazil ramped up their Copa America campaign with a resounding 7-1 win over a hapless Haiti on Wednesday.

Renato Augusto scored a brace and substitutes Lucas Lima and Gabriel also goaled for Brazil, while James Marcelin put Haiti’s consolation goal.

The scoreline — identical to Brazil’s nightmare 7-1 defeat by Germany in the World Cup semi-final two years ago — takes Brazil to the top of Group B with four points, ahead of the evening’s second game between Peru and Ecuador.

Coutinho got Brazil off to a positive start in the Camping World stadium with a goal after 14 minutes when he skipped past a defender and hammered home from 20 metres out.

He doubled Brazil’s lead 15 minutes later thanks to Jonas, who was on hand to poke a loose ball across goal and leave the Liverpool player with the simplest of tap-ins.

Renato Augusto made it three in 35 minutes when he rose unmarked to head home a Dani Alves cross from the right.

Although the eight-times Copa America champions appeared to take their foot off the pedal in the second half, they still created chances at will and Augusto made it four in injury time with a trademark free-kick.

The ITF had sought a four-year suspension but the tribunal rejected that, she said. “While the tribunal concluded correctly that I did not intentionally violate the anti-doping rules, I cannot accept an unfairly harsh two-year suspension.”
