MYANMAR’S Union Minister for Foreign Affairs Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and Turkish Minister for Foreign Affairs Mr. Mevlüt Çavuşoğlu held talks in Naypyitaw yesterday focusing on cooperation between the two countries after 58 years of diplomatic relations.

The talks focused on developing a strong partnership in education, health, culture and tourism sectors, seeking ways to boost bilateral trade and open flight paths between the two countries as well as opening political dialogue between the two countries.

At a joint press conference afterwards, H.E Daw Aung San Suu Kyi said that establishing an understanding among people from diverse ethnic groups and different communities is the basic principle of the government’s policy, expressing that the Turkish Foreign Minister’s visit to Myanmar will help boost bilateral ties.

Mr. Çavuşoğlu acknowledged the Myanmar people’s efforts for transitional process of democratization, while pledging more Turkish aid for Myanmar and communities in Rakhine state.

According to Mr. Çavuşoğlu, Turkey has provided more than US$30 million to help Myanmar’s health, education and infrastructure sectors since 2012.

Aid from the Turkish government to Myanmar is delivered through the Turkish International Cooperation and Coordination Agency (TİKA) and is allocated at the Union and regional governments request.

Mr. Çavuşoğlu pledged to continue aid to Myanmar stating that Turkey wants to cooperate with international organisations, including assisting Myanmar in bringing about peace to Rakhine state and to strengthen the ongoing peace process throughout the country to help develop the country.

Mr. Çavuşoğlu also called for boosting bilateral relations and trade, further cooperation in the sectors of education, health, tourism and infrastructure and operation of flights to and from Myanmar. He also called for the relaxation of visa rules to make travel easier.

Discussion on opening an office to enhance connectivity between the ministries and ongoing works for the development of all communities in Rakhine State were discussed during talks with Myanmar’s Union minister, he added.

Union Minister Daw Aung San Suu Kyi said that efforts are being made to effectuate the development of Rakhine State, hoping that international organisations will help Myanmar.

ASEAN to launch information portal to ease regional trade

THE Myanmar Department of Trade has announced the launch of a website called ASSIST, which will act as an information portal for ASEAN businessmen to access information about the business practices, rules and regulations of their counterparts and governments in other ASEAN countries. It is reported that the website will be launched after the coming ASEAN Summit, which will be held in Malaysia in September.

“The website is being organised by ASEAN in order to make life easier for businessmen from ASEAN countries. See page 3 >>

Mandalay-Lashio-Muse road blocked for 12 hours

A 12-HOUR traffic jam began at around 10pm on Saturday near mile post No 84/1 on the Mandalay-Lashio-Muse road in Kyaukme Township, locals say.

The traffic jam was caused by a 12-wheel truck loaded with 500 motor engines on route from Kyaukme to Nawngkhai that skidded and overturned on the left side of the road.

Another accident also occurred on 9 June on the road, according to a local resident.

Traffic police helped move the overturned vehicle off the road with the use of a crane owned by Oriental Highway Co.

The truck driver has been charged by local police under Section 279 of the Criminal Law on Sunday for “Rash driving or riding on a public way”.

A police officer said: “A driver needs to have special driving skills to balance cargo weight on the road, especially in monsoon season. We have already announced our phone number to contact us when traffic congestion occurs along the road.”

The Mandalay-Lashio-Muse road is a major trading road for both Myanmar and China. About 500 cargo trucks use the road every day.

Man murdered in Kawthaung

A MAN was stabbed to death by two other men at the former’s home on Saturday. Local police arrested the suspects within two hours after they were contacted by the victim’s wife.

Ma Wah, the wife of the victim, said the murder took place while she was with her husband U Thein Lwin at their home on Duwmon-4 Street in Ayeeyae Kyaein Ward, Kawthaung Township.

Two unknown people visited the home, one of whom stabbed U Thein Lwin with a sharp-edged weapon.

Ma Wah said her husband died on the spot with serious injuries to his top part of his body.

With the help of victim’s wife, police apprehended the suspected murderer Myint Naing along with his suspected accomplice within a few hours of the incident.

According to the police investigation, a quarrel broke out between the victim and Myint Naing three days prior.

After the murder, the suspect fled to his sister’s home in Shwepyitha Township in Yangon. After hours of questioning, the suspect confessed. Police have charged the two people involved in the murder case.—Kyaw Soe

Myanmar steps up on adaptation to climate change

A national strategy workshop took place yesterday in Naypyitaw to develop a work program to help Myanmar fight against global warming. Officials from various NGO’s and INGO’s assisted in the Policy Dialogue on New Climate Change Projections. During the workshop, the Department of Meteorology and Hydrology (DMH) and Regional Integrated Multi-hazard Early Warning System (RIMES) for Africa and Asia, presented a climate outlook until 2100.

The workshop was to help develop a strong policy and to help bring about a discussion amongst politicians in order to understand how global warming threatens Myanmar. Predictions of certain weather patterns were presented yesterday showing that Myanmar is likely to face severe weather due to global warming.

Bill planned for senior citizens welfare

THE Ministry of Social Welfare, Relief and Rehabilitation is planning to adopt a bill for the welfare of senior citizens, said Union Minister Dr Win Myat Aye yesterday.

The bill will be designed to create employment for senior citizens who are able to work and provide welfare for those who are unable to work, the Union minister said, stressing his ministry’s efforts to pass the bill into law.

“When the law is made, senior citizens will have noticeable benefits from it,” he said.

On completion, the bill will be brought to the parliament.

The ministry is drafting the bill in a bid to carry out community services for senior citizens more effectively, the Union minister said.

“We must expand opportunities for senior citizens to help them demonstrate their abilities. Most retirees feel lonely at home with no one to talk to. They feel neglected or useless,” Dr Win Myat Aye said.—Thein Ko Lwin

Patients with spinal deformities to receive treatment in Mandalay

Mandalay’s orthopaedic hospital is offering spinal surgeries to more than 20 patients in the region with the assistance from a US-based NGO, Butterfly Foundation and surgeons started as of 6 June.

Four orthopaedic surgeons, two nurses and local orthopaedic surgeons will be conducting the treatment with the assistance of Dr. Kim from Butterfly Foundation.

Dr. Kyi Lwin from Mandalay’s Orthopaedic Hospital said that the surgery is only offered to patients in high-risk categories in order to help those who would not necessarily be able to afford the treatment.

Adding that the surgery will not only change the lives of patients but will also help improve the skill sets of local orthopaedic surgeons.

Patients will have to pay for their prescription medication under a cost-sharing plan with the hospital, despite the surgery being free of charge. After surgery, the patients will receive further health care and rehabilitation from the hospital.

Butterfly Foundation is a non-profit organisation bringing spine surgeons and medical teams to developing countries in order to provide free treatment and train local orthopaedic surgeons proper international surgical practices.

Businesses seek import permits

The Myanmar Fishery Products Processors and Exporters Association is seeking import permits from the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation. The association members hope to use local cold storage facilities as numbers of fish in Myanmar waters are declining.

Local cold storage factories are expected to produce more finished products if the fish import permits are granted.

A representative of the association said Viet Nam re-exports imported salmon, though they are not able to catch or farm in their country, creating more job opportunities and earning more foreign currency.

Thailand earns over US$7 billion from fishery enterprises by importing fish from abroad for their cold storage factories, he added.

Myanmar Agricultural and Fishery Products attract Korean buyers

With rising interest of South Korean entrepreneurs in Myanmar’s agricultural and fishery products, local businessmen must participate in the export sector by manufacturing standard quality products, said U Aung Soe, the director-general of the Myanmar Trade Promotion Organisation.

Myanmar exports rice, pulses, crops that produce oil, fishery products, forestry products, rubber and garments to South Korea. The value of Myanmar’s exports to South Korea is around US$160 million per year.

Myanmar imports agricultural machines, industrial products, steel and plastic products from Korea, with an import value of over $400 million.

Myanmar and South Korea initiated bilateral trade in 2007 after signing a trade deal in 2006. Trade volume between the two countries rose from 2011 to 2014, though it declined in the 2015-2016 fiscal year. Myanmar’s foreign trade is valued at $27 billion, of which South Korea is responsible for between two and three per cent.—200

Two new markets to be established in Dagon Seikkan, Shwepyitha

Land surveys will be conducted in Dagon Seikkan and Shwepyitha townships to establish two new markets starting in the first week of July, and construction is expected to be completed next year, according to the Markets Department of the Yangon City Development Committee (YCDC).

Six markets owned by YCDC will be upgraded at a cost of K3.5 billion. The markets will be inspected to determine whether they are suitable to be upgraded to two-storey buildings.

Twelve markets were upgraded in two-storey buildings at a cost of K10 billion in 2015; construction concluded in February 2016. There are a total of 173 markets run by the YCDC, including tax-free markets. If street vendors are not allowed to sell their wares at the markets, the construction of the market will be in vain, said a YCDC official.—200

This unit will be opened at Yesin Agricultural University in Zayathiri Township, Nay Pyi Taw. It will produce a variety of fruits and vegetables and handle and package the products to minimise waste on the way from farm to market.

The unit’s research will aim to raise quality of the agricultural products after harvest. It will also help develop agricultural technology policies and strategies based on its research. Boosting the quality of local produce is expected to boost farmers’ incomes.—200
Thailand’s king shows improvement following heart treatment — palace

BANGKOK — Thailand’s 88-year-old king, the world’s longest-reigning monarch, has shown signs of improvement following surgery for narrowing of the arteries, the palace said in a statement on Sunday.

King Bhumibol Adulyadej, the world’s longest-reigning monarch, has been treated for various ailments during a year-long hospitalisation in the Thai capital.

He was last seen in public on 11 January, when he spent several hours visiting his Bangkok palace.

The king’s heartbeat, breathing and blood pressure were normal, the palace said, adding that an electrocardiogram showed an increased supply of blood to the heart.

The king, who celebrated 70 years of his reign on Thursday, is seen as a unifying figure in a country that has faced decades of often deadly political upheaval.

On a few occasions the monarch has intervened when events threatened to plunge the country into crisis.

In a 7 June statement, the palace said the king had received treatment for narrowing of the heart arteries with “satisfactory results”.

Park rejects North Korea’s recent offers for talks

SEOUL — South Korean President Park Geun-hye on Monday rejected North Ko rea’s recent offers for talks, saying its northern neighbor should first denuclearize itself.

“Without (North Korea’s) denuclearization, any offer for talks is nothing but deceit,” Park said during a speech marking the opening of the newly elected National Assembly, or parliament.

Citing tough sanctions imposed by the UN Security Council to punish the North for its nuclear test and rocket launch earlier this year, Park reaffirmed her government’s stance of applying pressure on Pyongyang.

“The path toward North Korea’s denuclearization will be farther away if (South Korea) decides to hold talks with North Korea in haste only for the talks’ sake and lose the momentum of sanctions being kept up by the international community,” she said.

Following the full congressional approval of its nuclear policy last month, North Korea has been calling for inter-Korean talks, but South Korea has rejected such proposals.

Last month, North Korea made an offer to hold military talks with the South.

On Friday, the North’s official media reported that the country proposed holding talks with South Korea on 15 August to discuss the reunification of the Korean Peninsula.

The North Korean government, ruling party, and other organisations held a joint meeting in Pyongyang on Thursday and adopted an “appeal to all Koreans,” according to a Korean Central News Agency report.

In the appeal, the North proposed holding inter-Korean talks “for reunification on the occasion of the 71st anniversary of Korea’s liberation” from Japan’s 1910-1945 colonial rule.—Kyodo News

Cambodia PM shrugs off EU aid threat, opposition supporters jailed

PHNOM PENH

Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen on Monday shrugged off European parliament threats to review aid if his administration continued to harass political opponents on the same day as a court jailed three more opposition activists.

The European Union has called on Hun Sen to halt “judicial harassment” of adversaries and the United Nations has also called for dialogue between the ruling party and the opposition as tension mounts in the Southeast Asian country ahead of a general election in 2018.

The European parliament said in a resolution on Thursday that aid worth around $461 million should be dependent on improvements in human rights and called on authori ties to drop all charges against opposition leader Sam Rainsy who has been in exile since late last year to avoid arrest.

Chinese and German leaders downplay China market status tensions

BEIJING — China does not want a trade war with Europe, Premier Li Keqiang said on Monday at a news briefing with German Chancellor Angela Merkel, who called for more talks with Beijing on its market economy status under the World Trade Organisation.

Beijing sees Germany, China’s largest trading partner in the European Union, as influential in the 28-member bloc’s debate on the politically sensitive issue of its market economy status.

China agreed when it signed up to the WTO in 2001 that members could use third-market comparisons when determining if Chinese imports were being sold at knock-down prices.

That provision is set to expire in December, but anger persists over Beijing undercutting foreign industries with its heavily subsidised goods — particularly with massive overcapacity in Chinese sectors such as steel.

China is adamant that countries must abide by the deal struck 15 years ago, but reluctance in Europe to give up a method to defend against cheap Chinese imports has set up a looming dispute at the WTO and the prospect of broader trade friction.

“China has already fulfilled its obligations on joining the WTO. What’s needed now is for the other parties to fulfill the matching obligations they had promised,” Li said.

“The lack of help is what destroys the whole subject.”

I am convinced that we can find a solution on the lines of what was promised 15 years ago,” she said.

Merkel said during a trip to China last year Germany favoured granting China market economy status in principle but that Beijing still had work to do, including further opening its public procurement markets.

European commissioners are expected to debate the issue in late June or July, at a time of heightened trade tension after global rivals accused China of dumping cheap steel exports after a slowdown in demand at home.

Li said unilateral trade protection measures wouldn’t resolve the problem and that low-end steel was not something China wanted to produce or sell and was committed to phasing it out.

Merkel has also stressed the need for a level playing field for foreign firms amid growing pressure from industry to confront China more forcefully.

“Germany has always presented itself as an open investment market,” Merkel said. “We expect reciprocity also from the Chinese side.”

The report cast a shadow over the long-term prospects for the reef, which absorbs about A$5 billion (US$7.3 billion) in tourism each year. Scientists also believe UNESCO may reconsider its decision not to put the reef on its endangered list.

Turnbull, on the campaign trail for the 2 July election in tropical northern Queensland state, the usual jumping-off point for tourists going to the reef, said he would instruct Australia’s Clean Energy Finance Corporation (CEFC) to redirect A$1 billion of its A$10 billion fund.

The money would go to a loans scheme aimed at reducing the agricultural and waste water run-off that is diminishing the reef’s ability to withstand rising sea temperatures.

“Much of this will come in the form of financing solar energy, which of course will reduce emissions but also enable farmers to manage their land more efficiently ...” Turnbull told reporters in Townsville.

Pollution from water-borne fertiliser and nutrient-rich run-off limits the ability of corals to withstand higher sea temperatures associated with cyclical El Nino weather events and global warming.

Bleaching occurs when the water is too warm, forcing coral to exep living algae and calcify.

The findings of the bleaching survey came at a bad time for Turnbull, who was under pressure after Australia’s Department of Environment confirmed it had omitted its contribution to a UN report on the impact of climate change on world heritage sites over concerns it might have a negative impact on tourism.

Turnbull’s conservative coalition began the seven-week election campaign with a healthy lead over the centre-left Labor opposition but opinion polls now have them neck-and-neck.

Australia PM pledges A$1 billion to help ailing Great Barrier Reef

SYDNEY — Australian Prime Minister Turnbull, facing a tight re-election battle, pledged on Monday a A$1 billion ($738 million) fund for the Great Barrier Reef, where scientists say mass coral bleaching has destroyed vast tracts of the World Heritage site.

A report late last month said mass coral bleaching, caused by climate change, had destroyed at least 35 per cent of the northern and central Great Barrier Reef and that the coral mortality rate would likely rise.

The report cast a shadow over the long-term prospects for the reef, which absorbs about A$5 billion (US$7.3 billion) in tourism each year. Scientists also believe UNESCO may reconsider its decision not to put the reef on its endangered list.

Bangladesh arrests over 8,000 people in anti-militant drive

DHAKA — Another 3,245 more people have been arrested in the third day of Bangladesh’s on-going week-long anti-militant drive, bringing the total number of arrests to over 8,000, a police official said on Monday.

A. K. M. Kamrul Ahsan, a Bangladesh police spokesman told journalists that 3,245 people including 34 militants across the country were detained as part of the drive in the last 24 hours till 6:00 am (local time) Monday.

Police earlier detained 5,324 people, including 85 suspected militants in the first 48 hours of the clampdown against militants.

A number of secularist writers, bloggers and publishers have been killed or seriously injured in attacks carried out by extremists since 2013.

In most of the cases, it was noticed that the attacks were carried out by motorcycle-borne assailants. A day after the spouse of a top Bangladeshi police officer was shot dead by suspected militants in the country’s seaport city Chittagong, some 242 km southeast of capital Dhaka, Bangladesh’s Ministry of Home Affairs Monday banned motorcyclists from carrying more than one passenger for preventing militant attacks.—Xinhua

Families brace for worst as Florida gay club victims identified after mass shooting

ORLANDO (FtA) — Family and friends of victims trapped in a gay nightclub by a gunman pledging loyalty to Islamic State wanted anxiously on Monday to find out whether their loved ones were among the 50 people killed and 53 wounded in the deadliest mass shooting in US history.

The FBI and other law enforcement authorities were working over evidence that could explain the motives for the rampage in Orlando, Florida, a massacre that President Barack Obama denounced as an act of terror and hate.

The gunman, Omar Mateen, a New York-born Florida resident and US citizen who was the son of Afghan immigrants, was shot and killed by police who stormed the club with armored cars after a three-hour siege.

Mateen, 29, called emergency services during the shooting and pledged allegiance to the leader of the militant Islamic State group, officials said. His father said on Sunday his son was not radicalised, but indicated Mateen had strong anti-gay feelings. His ex-wife described him as mentally unstable and violent toward her.

The shooting began just after 2 am on Sunday at the crowded Pulse nightclub in the heart of Orlando, about 15 miles (25 km) northeast of the Walt Disney World Resort.

Some 350 patrons were attending a Latin music event at the club, a well-known gay nightspot in the city, and survivors described scenes of carnage and pandemonium as the shooter took hostages inside a bathroom. Nearly 24 hours after the rampage ended, authorities had publicly named only 21 of the victims, half of whom were in their 20s.

Family and friends waited for news outside a center in Orlando, where authorities were gathering details about people still missing.

Jaymie Glaespie, 35, was looking for her brother, Paul Henry. “I’ve been calling all day, and I just went to his house,” Glaespie said. “It’s just ringing and ringing.”

Mateen Mejia, 42, got good news about one friend, who sought cover during the shooting and escaped. Others were not as lucky.

“Some is dead already,” Mejia told reporters. “Six more, we don’t know.”

Mateen was an armed guard at a gated retirement community, and had worked for the global security firm G4S for nine years. He had cleared two company background screenings, the latest in 2013, according to G4S.

Despite Mateen’s 911 call expressing support for Islamic State, US officials said they had no conclusive evidence of any direct connection with foreign extremists.

“So far as we know at this time, his first direct contact was a pledge of bayat (loyalty) he made during the massacre,” said a US counterterrorism official. “This guy appears to have been pretty screwed up without any help from anybody.”

Authorities said Mateen had been twice questioned by FBI agents in 2013 and 2014 after making comments to co-workers about supporting militant groups, but neither interview led to evidence of criminal activity.

Ronald Hopper, the FBI’s assistant special agent in charge on the case, said Mateen was questioned in 2014 about his contacts with Moner Moham mad Abu-Salha, a US citizen who also had lived in Florida and became a suicide bomber in Syria that year.

Mateen’s former wife, Sito ra Yusufly, said he was emotion ally and mentally disturbed, yet aspired to be a police officer.

Yusufly told reporters near Boulder, Colorado, that she had been beaten by Mateen during outbursts of temper in which he would “express hatred towards everything and everybody.”

But his father Mir Siddique, who saw Mateen on Saturday afternoon, said he saw nothing out of the ordinary.

“Everything was normal,” Siddique told ABC News, saying his son was not radicalised. “He was just a regular person who went to work, coming back and take care of his wife and his kids,” he said. “If he was alive, I would ask him one question: why?”

In an interview with NBC news, the father said the incident in downtown Miami in which his son, saw two men kissing in front of his wife and child and became very angry.

Mateen and his family regularly attended a Florida mosque. “Not everyone had a friendship with him. He wasn’t a people person. He was not extremely friendly but he wasn’t rude ei ther,” said Mohammed Jameel, 54, a worshipper at the mosque.

Another worshipper said she recently saw Mateen dancing at his sister’s wedding, a mixed affair that was open to both men and women.

Sunday night, federal agents combed through Mateen’s apartment in the Atlantic coast town of Fort Pierce, about 120 miles (190 km) southeast of Orlando, as numerous evidence vans sat parked outside.

The FBI is currently in the apartment. “They’ll probably be there through the night,” said St. Lucie County Sheriff Ken Mascara. — Reuters

EU’s Tusk says Brexit could threaten western political civilisation

BRUSSELS — If Britons vote to leave the European Union in a 23 June referendum it could be the beginning of the end for the 28-nation bloc and for western political civilisation more generally, European Council President Donald Tusk said.

In an interview with German newspaper Bild, Tusk said a so-called Brexit vote would provide a major boost to radical anti-European forces who he said would be “drinking champagne”.

“Why is it so dangerous? Because no one can foresee what the long-term consequences would be,” Tusk said. “As a historian I fear that Brexit could be the beginning of the destruction of not only the EU but also of western political civilisation in its entirety.”

Everyone in the European Union would lose out economically if Britain left, Tusk said. “Every family knows that a divorce is traumatic for everyone. Everyone in the EU, but especially the Brits themselves, would lose out economically,” he said. — Reuters

Pope Francis expresses horror and condemnation over Orlando shooting

VATICAN — Pope Francis has expressed horror and condemnation over the mass shooting in a nightclub in Orlando, Florida, on Sunday in which 50 people were killed and dozens more wounded, according to Vatican spokesman Federico Lombardi.

In a statement, Lombardi said the Pope was shaken and saddened by the “horrible and senseless hatred” of the attack.

“We all hope that ways may be found, as soon as possible, to effectively identify and contrast the causes of such terrible and absurd violence,” the statement said.

Italy’s coastguard says 1,230 migrants rescued on Sunday

ROME — Italy’s coastguard said on Sunday a total of 1,230 migrants had been picked up in nine rescue operations in the waters between Sicily and North Africa, with one dead body being recovered.

That brings the number of people saved at sea over the past four days to more than 4,000.

On Saturday, the coastguard said it had picked up 1,348 migrants in 11 rescue operations.

Brazilian woman arrested after two boys die in jet ski accident in Japan

GIFU, Japan — A Brazilian woman was arrested on Monday after a 10-year-old boy and a 3-year-old boy were killed the previous day when her jet ski collided with their rubber boat on the Kiso River in Gifu Prefecture, police said.

Japanese police released the names of the boys as Oshi Fabio Hideki, 10, and Oishi Flavio Akira, 3, and that of the woman as Fugi moto Marjori Mayumi, 27, from Komaki in Aichi Prefecture.

The victims’ Brazilian father Oshi Akira Fabio, 35, from Kani in Gifu, and his 8-year-old daughter were also in the boat and injured, though their wounds were not life-threatening, according to the police.

Fugimoto was quoted by the police as telling investigators that she “panicked” when her jet ski speeded up. The police are looking into whether she accelerated without heeding what was ahead and subsequently lost control of the jet ski. — Kyodo News

We had excellent discussions, IMF’s Roaf says after meeting

BELGRADE — IMF Mission Chief for Serbia James Roaf told Tanjug on Monday after an official meeting with the Serbian delegation at the National Bank of Serbia (NBS) that he is satisfied with the discussions.

“We had excellent discussions,” Roaf said briefly after a plenary meeting at the NBS, which opened the official discussions between the IMF and Serbian officials.

Earlier he explained in a statement to Tanjug that he will give details at a joint press conference with the Serbian delegation after the mission.

The Serbian delegation is headed by NBS Governor Jorgovanka Tabakovic, who is also Serbia’s representative in the IMF, as well as Finance Minister Dusan Vujovic and Minister of Economy Željko Ser tic and their aides. — Tanjug
In formulation of youth policy

Khin Maung Aye

A YOUTH policy is being formulated to produce all-round qualified youths by the Ministry of Social Welfare, Relief and Re-settlement as part of its 100-day plan. The ministry held a youth forum in May that was attended by over 500 youths. The youth policy is being formulated with the objectives of keeping the youths strong and enabling them to maintain mental health, positive attitudes, discipline, high educational qualifications, creativity, social awareness and patriotism.

This month will also witness a youth affairs conference in Monywa, Sagaing Region, in which the following five topics will be discussed: youth and drugs; youth, human rights and democracy; youth and peace; youth and natural environmental conservation; and youth and attitudes toward youth affairs. This conference is expected to yield a youth affairs policy that will reflect the voices of the youths participating in the conference.

At this juncture, it is worth noting that the majority of the world’s nations have youth affairs policies because their governments have come to understand that the national-level youth policies can be employed in their approach to dealing the youth affairs. The United Nations Security Council has adopted a resolution concerning the youth. The youth policies adopted by European countries are also found to include education and training, employment and entrepreneurship, health and social welfare, social inclusion, innovation and culture. These policies are aimed at encouraging youths to actively participate in their societies and enabling them to enjoy equal rights in education and employment.

Regarding youth policies, there are three levels—national, regional and international. This being so, in the implementation of youth policies, it is essential for governments to implement national policies in consideration of both the regional context and international context so that national implementation will be in accord with regional and international norms.

Opinion

D o you know which group is the world’s largest minority? Disabled people group are the world’s largest minority. The United Nations estimates that over a billion people live with some form of disability and they are disproportionately represented among the world’s poorest and at greater risk of suffering from violence, disaster, poverty, and many other hardships.

Eighty per cent of persons with disabilities live in developing countries, according to the UN Development Program (UNDP). 2014 National Census result showed 4.6% of the country population is living in disability in Myanmar and females have higher rates of disability than males and disability prevalence rate is higher in Ayeyawaddy region followed by Chin state.

Persons with disabilities include those who have long-term physical, mental, intellectual or sensory impairments which in interaction with various barriers may hinder their full and effective participation in society on an equal basis with others. They are vulnerable and they face many barriers in their daily life. Disability affects hundreds of millions of families in developing countries. The World Bank estimates that 20 per cent of the world’s poorest people have some kind of disability and tend to be regarded in their own communities as the most disadvantaged. Dr. Amartya Sen pointed out in his keynote address at the World Bank’s conference on disability, the poverty line for disabled people should take into account the extra expenses they incur in exercising what purchasing power they do have. A study in the United Kingdom found that the poverty rate for disabled people was 23.1% compared to 17.9% for non-disabled people, but when extra expenses associated with being disabled were considered, the poverty rate for people with disabilities shot up to 47.4%.

In terms of education, disability rates in the population are higher among groups with lower educational level in the countries of the OECD, Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development. In the OECD countries, students with disabilities in higher education remain under-represented, although their numbers are on the increase, says the OECD. On average, 19 per cent of less educated people with disabilities, compared to 11 per cent among the better educated. Ninety per cent of children with disabilities in developing countries do not attend school, says UNESCO.

From human rights perspective, there is the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD). This Convention was adopted on 13 December 2006 during the sixty-first session of the General Assembly by Resolution A/RES/61/106. CRPD ensures people with disabilities around the world can enjoy their human rights. It does not create a special or different human rights for people with disabilities and it helps countries how to act to assure people with disabilities are guaranteed human rights.

The purpose of the Convention is to promote, protect and ensure the full and equal enjoyment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms by all persons with disabilities, and to promote respect for their inherent dignity. According to UN treaties collection, 164 countries are state parties of CRPD today. Myanmar acceded CRPD on 7 December 2011. Since then the government of Myanmar has taken some legislative and policy steps that indicate commitment to advancing the rights of persons with disabilities.

These steps include enacting disability rights law on 5 June 2015, establishing national committee for the rights of people with disabilities chaired by Vice-president, forming Myanmar council of persons with disabilities. Moreover, Educational Rights of People with Disabilities were taken part in the National Education Law. These are the kind of efforts to promote support for disabled people and encourage an understanding of disability issues.

Despite having progress nowadays not only in Myanmar but also worldwide disabled people still facing many barriers and having impact more or less. Barriers include attitudinal, communicative, physical, social, policy and transportation etc. Although they face different kinds of barriers in their daily life, luckily today understanding of disability with a view from society is improving in comparison with over the last decade. In order to promote and understanding of people with disability and encourage support for their dignity, rights and well-being, International day of people with disability is annually held on December 3. People from many countries worldwide participate in various ways to promote the International Day of Persons with Disabilities. However, there are many things still need to improve and need more understanding from society. We need to change our perspective form charity perspective to human rights perspective.

It is important to see that disabled people are the people same as you. They do have dignity and rights same as you. We must respect their dignity and rights as you respect to able persons. Furthermore we have to make sure that disabled people are fully inclusive and equally living with in society as others.

Government alone cannot do and also people to overcome the various issues related to disabled people. We all need to work together. We need to cooperate with NGOs, CSOs, UN and other international organizations and also organizations of disabled people. We do also need good and sustainable policy for disabled people and must implement effectively with cooperation and understanding each other. Here, bear in mind that we have all obligations for our society.

Remember you can be a disabled person any time and it can happen anywhere. So be kind to, respect and understand disabled persons anytime, anywhere. You must not discriminate against them. Let them do what they can. Let them participate how they can. Let them say what they want to say. They have all rights like you. We have to encourage them all to participate in every affair. I do believe if the disabled person flourish, family will flourish, if the family flourish, society will flourish, if the society flourish the country will flourish. Last but not least, I do always pay respect to disabled people and I do pay respect to their slogan of disability rights movement, “Nothing about us without us”, I wish all of you feel the same to me.

Military personnel contributed voluntary labour in communal sanitation

TATMAWDA personnel carried out communal sanitation work in the compound of the Aungzaingyaun Aungthapayay-tahtarmon Tat Oo Monastery in Myitkyina, Kachin State, on 11 June.

The military staff cut bushes and cleaned the drainage system to allow for the proper flow of water in the compound of the monastery. They also cleaned the platform of a stupa in the monastery.

Similarly, Tatmadaw members from the Southeast Command cleaned guesthouses as well as the compound of the Shwe Nattaung Basic Primary School in Mawlamyine, Mon State, that day.

They cleaned rubbish and weeds and dug drains within compound of the hostels and the monastery.

They also sprayed mosquito repellent in the men’s and women’s hostels.

Land prices rise around Ngapali despite lack of buyers

THE value of real estate around Myanmar’s premier beach destination, Ngapali, located in Rakhine State’s Thandwe District, has appreciated, despite the absence of a buyers’ market, according to local residents.

“The price of real estate in the area was stable prior to the beginning of the Ngapali Beach Hotel Zone project. Professional real estate agents don’t exist here. Owners just say the price they’d be satisfied to sell off more ambiguously defined land in terms of ownership rights if they are offered a high price, such as swathes of forests and mountains located behind their villages, through which claims of ownership are legitimized by the span of time a family has tilled that land.

“Some people sell whole expanses of mountain land, which they claim through generations of cultivation. A whole mountain can fetch about K200 million, while the price of land near the main road in the urban centre of Ngapali Beach can cost up to a billion kyat,” said U Myint Wai, a resident from Mazin Ward in Ngapali Beach. —Myitmakha News Agency

Senior General Min Aung Hlaing receives Turkish FM

COMMANDER-in-Chief of Defence Services Senior General Min Aung Hlaing and Turkish Foreign Minister Mr Mevlut Cavusoglu held talks yesterday over the promotion of relations between the armed forces of the two countries and promotion of cooperation in non-military fields.

During the meeting in Nay Pyi Taw, the two also discussed issues related to providing aid to communities in Rakhine State, efforts at peace and national reconciliation in Myanmar and recent efforts by the Tatmadaw to put the country on the path to democracy. —Myawady

Woman killed by crocodile in Ayeyawady Delta

A CROCODILE has attacked and killed a woman as she was cleaning a bucket in a nearby river outside Bogalay on Saturday.

Ma Khang Kaing Oo, 29, from Hsinai Village was later confirmed dead; reports aren’t specific enough to confirm if her remains have been recovered.

Myanmar’s delta region is no stranger to crocodile attacks, as they occur yearly. Yet, there is no specific data that shows how frequent or at what time of year attacks are most prevalent.

Meinmahla Kyun Wildlife Sanctuary is located at the mouth of the Ayeyawady River. The sanctuary attracts visitors keen on viewing crocodile-hatching camps and conservation projects in the region’s mangrove forests—the forests are in a steady decline due to deforestation in the area.

Wildlife conservation groups have erected warning signs to alert villagers that crocodiles pose a threat in the area. —Hsyu Naing (Bogalay)
US may not make Afghanistan troop decision by Warsaw summit

WASHINGTON — US President Barack Obama may not decide before a NATO summit next month whether to alter plans to nearly halve America’s forces in Afghanistan, a diplomat and a US official said.

A decision had been expected at or before the summit in Warsaw on 8-9 July on whether to stick to plans to slash the 9,800 troops to 5,500 before Obama leaves office next year.

Former commanders and envoys have warned that it would be a mistake. And with preparations in full swing for the summit, the timing of any decision by Obama remains unclear.

US Defence Secretary Ash Carter flies to Brussels on Monday to meet NATO counterparts, with Afghanistan expected to be high on the agenda.

One reason to decide on slowing the US drawdown before the summit might be to encourage NATO allies to keep their troops in Afghanistan, where President Ashraf Ghani’s government is battling a Taliban insurgency that has gathered fresh momentum.

NATO allies seem less intent on cutting their troop presence, which could give Obama more time to formulate and telegraph his own plans.

“We have been moderately, pleasantly surprised at the willingness to stay at current levels of most other allies, and some willingness to consider increasing,” said the diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

“Just because there is a summit doesn’t mean (you) need a decision,” he added.

To be sure, Afghanistan will be a major issue at the summit and Obama still could make a decision before then.

“It does not have to happen by Warsaw but it certainly will be a topic there,” said a US official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Former Niger Delta militants urge Avengers to join in government talks

YENAGOA, (Nigeria) — A group of former Nigerian militants have urged the Niger Delta Avengers, who have claimed responsibility for a recent string of attacks on oil and gas facilities, to join in discussions with the government, a statement said on Sunday.

Last week, the Avengers said they would not cooperate with a government initiative to start talks with them and other militants over their demands for a greater share of oil wealth and pollution in the impoverished southern swamp area.

The attacks have cut Nigeria’s oil output to a 20-year low.

The Movement for the Emancipation of the Niger Delta (MEND) said: “If indeed your cause is to avenge the injustice done to the Niger Delta region then, we urge you to ceasefire and join us to the table of negotiation with the federal Government.”

MEND, one of largest militant groups until it signed up for a government amnesty in 2009, said in a statement it had nominated a team of negotiators on its own behalf.

“Following useful exploratory discussions held with high ranking officials of the current administration... MEND has constituted (a team) to dialogue with the federal Government on the immediate, medium and long-term future of the Niger Delta region,” it said.

MEND has said some of its former commanders and fighters make up the Avengers, claims denied by the group. Security officials have also linked a MEND commander to the Avengers, though he denies this.

The government has moved in army reinforcements to the southern swamps but Western allies such as Britain have said widespread poverty and oil spills in the Niger Delta need to be addressed to stop the militants.—Reuters

Bomb blast in central Beirut aimed at bank

There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

Lebanon’s central bank has pushed its commercial banks to heed the US act, and Blom Bank only.

Local television showed footage of a damaged building, with one hole in a concrete wall, and said shattered glass had fallen to the ground from several stores up.

The head of Lebanon’s internal security force, Ibrahim Basbous, said the bomb had contained around 15 kg of explosive material and had been placed in a flower bed, the National News Agency said.

Interior Minister Nohad Machnouk said: “Politically it is clear that the target was Blom Bank only.”

He said the attack had nothing to do with the militant group Islamic State, which has mounted suicide bombings in Beirut.

Finance Minister Ali Hassan Khalil tweeted that the attack had “targeted the stability of the whole of Lebanon”.

Scientists use climate, population changes to predict diseases

LONDON — British scientists say they have developed a model that can predict outbreaks of zoonotic diseases — those such as Ebola and Zika that jump from animals to humans — based on changes in climate.

Describing their model as “a major improvement in our understanding of the spread of diseases from animals to people”, the researchers said it could help governments prepare for and respond to disease outbreaks, and to factor in their risk when making policies that might affect the environment.

“Our model can help decision-makers assess the likely impact (on zoonotic disease) of any interventions or change in national or international government policies, such as the conversion of grasslands to agricultural lands,” said Kate Jones, a professor who co-led the study at University College London’s genomics, evolution and environment department.

The model also has the potential to look at the impact of global change on many diseases at once. “Around 60 to 75 per cent of emerging infectious diseases are so-called “zoonotic events”, where animal diseases jump into people. Bats in particular are known to carry many zoonotic viruses.

The Ebola and Zika viruses, now well known, both originated in wild animals, as did many others including Rift Valley fever and Lassa fever that affect thousands already and are predicted to spread with changing environmental factors.

Jones’ team used the locations of 408 known Lassa fever outbreaks in West Africa between 1967 and 2012 and the changes in land use and crop yields, temperature and rainfall, behaviour and access to healthcare.

They also identified the sub-species of the multimammate rat that transmits Lassa virus to humans, to map its location against ecological factors.

The model was then developed using additional information on climate changes, future population density and land-use change.

“Our approach successfully predicts outbreaks of individual diseases by pairing the changes in the host’s distribution as the environment changes with the mechanisms of how that disease spreads from animals to people,” said David Redding, who co-led the study.

“It allows us to calculate how often people are likely to come into contact with disease-carrying animals and their risk of the virus spilling over.”

The team tested their new model using Lassa fever, a disease that is endemic across West Africa, to test if a virus was passing to people from rats. Like Ebola, Lassa causes haemorrhagic fever and can be fatal.

The study, published in the journal Methods in Ecology and Evolution, tested the model with Lassa and found the number of infected people will double to 406,000 by 2070 from some 195,000 due to climate change and a growing human population.

Vaping teens more apt to move on to regular cigarettes — US study

NEW YORK — Older teens who try electronic cigarettes have six times the odds of trying regular cigarettes within two years than those who never puffed on the devices, a study published on Monday found.

Schools are concerned that kids who experiment with e-cigarettes may be moving on to other types of tobacco products, like combustible cigarettes, which are arguably a lot more dangerous,” said University of Southern California researcher Jessica Barrington-Trimis, lead author of the study published in the journal Pediatrics.

E-cigarettes are handheld electronic devices that vaporize a fluid typically including nicotine and a flavor component. Using them is called “vaping.”

The researchers based their findings on surveys conducted by USC involving about 300 high school students in southern California in 2014. About half of the students said they had at least tried an e-cigarette.

In a 2015 follow-up survey, about 40 per cent of those who had tried an e-cigarette by the previous year had tried regular cigarettes. That compared to about 11 per cent of those who said they had not tried an e-cigarette in the prior year’s survey. After adjusting the statistics for gender, ethnicity, grade and parental education, the researchers calculated that the teens who tried the e-cigarettes had six times the odds of taking up smoking than those who never tried them.

When the researchers looked at teens who said on the first survey that they had no intention to smoke, the risk of moving from e-cigarettes to regular cigarettes by the next year was 10 times greater than those who never vaped. Barrington-Trimis said the risk among teens committed to not smoking “suggests this is not just occurring among kids who intended to smoke anyway.” The survey participants were 11th and 12th grade students who all were at least 18 years old by the second survey. The American Academy of Pediatrics recommended in 2015 that the devices be regulated as tobacco products due to concerns they would lead teens to regular cigarettes and also expose their developing brains to nicotine.

The US Food and Drug Administration last month took wide-ranging steps to crack down on e-cigarettes and banned sales to anyone under age 18.

Dr. Michael Siegel, a professor at the Boston University School of Public Health and a proponent of e-cigarettes as a way to wean smokers off conventional cigarettes, said the study did not prove e-cigarette use had prompted the teens to take up regular cigarettes.

Siegel, who was not involved in the study, said the first survey did not determine how many times the teens had vaped, asking only if they had used e-cigarettes at least once.

“What’s probably happening is these kids did not become regular vapers, (and) they turned to smoking,” Siegel said. “If they turned into regular vapers, they wouldn’t have turned to smoking.”

Abortion providers, opponents brace for US high court decision

WASHINGTON — As she waits for the US Supreme Court to rule on a challenge to a restrictive Texas abortion law, Amy Hagstrom-Miller said she hopes she will not have to close up to three of the clinics she operates in the state, but is planning for it just in case.

Hagstrom-Miller founded Whole Woman’s Health, which runs four facilities in Texas that provide abortions and led the legal challenge to the law. She said she has spreadsheets listing staffs who would be laid off if the court allows the law to survive, and is thinking about selling buildings and medical equipment as well as shutting her clinics in Fort Worth, San Antonio and McAllen.

“I would be irresponsible if I didn’t plan,” Hagstrom-Miller said in an interview.

The Supreme Court is due to rule by the end of June on whether the Texas law, which imposes strict regulations on abortion doctors and clinic facilities, violates a woman’s constitutional right to end her pregnancy as set out in the landmark 1973 Roe v. Wade ruling. The court has not issued a major abortion-related ruling since 2007.

The law requires abortion doctors to have “admitting privileges,” a type of formal affiliation, at a hospital within 30 miles (48 km) of the clinic. That provision has been implemented. A second provision, not yet in effect, requires clinics to have costly hospital-grade facilities including extensive standards for such attributes as corridor width, room size, floor tiles and the swinging motion of doors.

Supporters of the law, passed by a Republican-led legislature and signed by a Republican governor in 2013, say it was enacted to protect women’s health. — Reuters

Nervous Baltics on war footing as NATO tries to deter Russia

VILNIUS — Leaders in the Baltic countries and Poland fear the force NATO plans to deploy on their territory is too small and symbolic to deter an attack on Russia, whose 2014 annexation of Crimea is fresh in the memories of the former Soviet bloc states.

They will this week press other ministers of the western military alliance to help them build an air defence system against Russian aircraft and missiles. But that would be a highly sensitive step, likely to be condemned by Moscow as yet more evidence of a NATO strategy threatening its borders.

Asked about the likelihood of Russian aggression in the Baltics, Lithuania’s Defence Minister Jozas Olekas told Reuters: “We cannot exclude it. They might exercise on the borders and then switch to invasion in hours.”

Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia see themselves on the front line in any potential conflict with Moscow and say they are putting their armies on a war footing, meaning they can be mobilised almost immediately.

NATO defence ministers are set to agree this week on a new multinational force of 4,000 troops for the Baltics and Poland.

The United States, Germany and Britain are set to lead battalions of about 1,000 troops each. Canada may lead a fourth.

While the Baltic nations welcome the deployments, they say the build-up must go further - pointing to Russia’s efforts to develop an “anti-access” capability in the Kaliningrad exclave bordering Lithuania and Poland, using missiles and submarines to stop NATO moving reinforcements into the Baltics.

The Baltics want NATO fighters to protect their skies and are seeking medium-range missile interceptors from Norway’s Kongsberg Gruppen and US defence contractor Raytheon.

“We need to stop possible air aggression,” said Olekas. “We are discussing creating a regional medium-range air defence system together with the Latvians, the Estonians and the Poles.”

Olekas expects to raise the matter with NATO colleagues at the ministers’ meeting on Tuesday and Wednesday in Brussels.

The head of the Estonian defence force Lieutenant General Riho Terras said: “The first and foremost is the defence of our airspace. Air defence is the challenge that needs to solved together with the NATO alliance.”

“We are not talking about defence of Lithuania, we are talking about the credibility of the whole alliance,” said Lithuania’s Foreign Minister Linas Antanas Antanas Linkevicius.

But such calls would require stretched NATO governments to beef up the so-called air policing mission that regularly intercepts Russian jets flying over international waters close to the Baltic states. The Baltic nations rely on their NATO allies’ quick reaction aircraft to patrol their skies, with no mandate to confront hostile aircraft in a conflict.

Four British Eurofighter Typhoon fighter jets and four Portuguese F-16 fighter jets are currently carrying out the air policing mission. Officials say a lot more would be needed for air defence.

Mexico arrests teacher union boss, doubles down on education reform

Ruben Nunez (L), a member from the National Coordination of Education Workers (CNTE) teachers’ union takes part in a march against President Pena Nieto’s education reform, along Reforma Avenue in Mexico City.

MEXICO CITY — Mexico’s government said on Sunday it had arrested the leader of a dissident teachers’ union for alleged corruption, redoubling efforts to impose its authority on an education reform that has sparked months of protests in the country.

Deputy attorney general Gilberto Higuera told a news conference that Ruben Nunez, head one of the most combative factions of the CNTE union, had been held on suspicion of receiving money of illicit origin through the organisation.

“This is another step in the process of full application of the law, and respect for the rule of law,” said Javier Trevino, deputy minister of education.

Nunez is secretary general of the CNTE’s Section 22 in the southern state of Oaxaca, a long-standing holder of resistance to government efforts to reform the education system.

According to Higuera, Section 22 made a deal with companies supplying the teachers’ union to charge an illegal 3.5 per cent commission on sales, money its leaders then used for personal ends and to fund demonstrations by its members.

Between 2013 and 2015, more than 24 million pesos ($1.29 million) were acquired by Nunez as part of the scheme, he added.

The CNTE was defiant following Nunez’s arrest.

“We’re not going to give up our fight,” Section 22 member Juan Garcia told a crowd of supporters in Oaxaca’s capital, Oaxaca City.

Organising marches and protests that have frequently caused chaos in the Mexican capital, the CNTE has spearheaded efforts to resist the education reform, in particular its mandate to carry out evaluations of teachers.

Critics argue many teachers in the poorer south lack the financial support to meet required standards.

President Enrique Pena Nieto has staked his name on the reform, describing it as the most important for Mexico’s future.

In the past month the government has said over 4,000 teachers in the states of Michoacan, Guerrero, Oaxaca and Chiapas on the Pacific seaboard will be dismissed.

Two other senior figures in Nunez’s group have also been arrested in recent days, and the three men are in prison in the northern city of Hermosillo, officials said.—Reuters

Zimbabwe villagers displaced by diamond mining hope to see action from government

MUTARE, (Zimbabwe) — Villagers re-located to a sprawling government-owned farm complex in eastern Zimbabwe to make way for the nation’s biggest diamond field are hoping President Robert Mugabe’s move to take control of the valued resource will benefit them.

More than 1,000 families were moved in 2009 from a village adjacent to the Chiadzwa diamond field in Marange to Arda Transau, a 12,000 hectare farm settlement about 40 km (25 miles) to the north with promises of a better life.

Ard Transau was billed as a new township with tarred roads, shops and health clinics - but seven years later the villagers say they have yet to see the promised education and health facilities while their homes are crumbling and food is scarce.

Seven mining companies licensed to mine the area were ordered in March to leave by Mugabe who accused them of robbing Zimbabwe of wealth.

Mugabe took over all diamond operations in the newly-formed Zimbabwe Consolidation Diamond Company (ZCDC), Some of the affected diamond companies - Mhada Diamonds and Anjin Investments - have since taken the government to court with the issue still pending before the courts.

While Mugabe’s move could further tarnish the country’s image as a risky investment, with investors already unnerved by his drive to force foreign-owned firms to sell majority shares to locals, the relocated villagers are hoping it will help them.

Caiphas Mujuru is one of the Arda Transau residents lobbying the government to get ZCDC to address the problems faced by the villagers who are facing severe food shortages.

“The life is really difficult here at Arda Transau. We are going hungry,” Mujuru told the Thomson Reuters Foundation.

“We had been promised honey and milk but here it is now a nightmare for us.” When the villagers were moved, each family was given $1,000 in compensation and a four-room house but these new dwellings, painted bright yellow, have since developed cracks. Families were promised 11 hectares of arable land including one hectare earmarked for irrigation to run small piggery or poultry projects but this never happened, the villagers say.

People in Marange hoped the diamond industry would pump money into reviving failing irrigation schemes as small-scale farmers cannot maintain or replace ageing equipment and national law requires mining companies to help local communities develop.—Reuters
Russia and England could be expelled from Euro 2016 if violence persists

PARIS / MARSEILLE, (France) — European soccer’s governing body warned the English and Russian soccer associations on Sunday their teams could be disqualified from Euro 2016 if there was more of the fan violence that has inured several dozen people.

UEFA’s threat came after it began disciplinary proceedings against the Russian federation on Sunday following ugly scenes inside Marseille’s Stade Velodrome stadium at the end of Saturday’s match between England and Russia.

Masked Russian fans charged at England supporters, punching and kicking them. Some England fans had to scramble over barriers to escape.

UEFA said it would also investigate allegations of racist behavior and the throwing of missiles and fireworks.

The violence in the stadium followed three days of clashes between English, Russian and French fans in the Mediterranean port city of Marseille that drew a strong response from riot police.

The English and Russian fans will almost certainly cross paths in northern France later this week, with Russia playing Slovakia in Lille on Wednesday and England facing Wales only 40 km (25 miles) away in Lens on Thursday.

Russian Sports Minister Vitaly Mutko, who had initially denied there had been any crowd disturbance, said UEFA was right to investigate.

It is the second time in as many European Championship tournaments that the Russian federation has faced sanctions because of its fans.

Russia was fined and given a suspended six-point deduction for its Euro 2016 qualifying campaign after fans assaulted stadium security staff and displayed illicit banners at the 2012 tournament in Poland and Ukraine.

The British government urged calm on all sides and offered to send more police to France ahead of England’s next game.

“With the initiative, China has established the Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank (AIIB) and the Silk Road Fund — to invest in connectivity and integration among countries along the Maritime Silk Road,” Hun Sen said.

Cambodia launches China-backed Maritime Silk Road Research Centre

PHNOM PENH — Cambodian Prime Minister Samdech Techo Hun Sen and Chinese Ambassador to Cambodia Bu Jianguo on Monday inaugurated here the (21st Century) Maritime Silk Road Research Center, aiming to further broaden Sino-Cambodian relations and cooperation.

“The 21st Century Maritime Silk Road initiative, along with the Silk Road Economic Belt, is a wise initiative of the Chinese leaders in the new generation,” the prime minister said during the inauguration ceremony.

To back the initiative, China has established the Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank (AIIB) and the Silk Road Fund — to invest in connectivity and integration among countries along the Maritime Silk Road,” Hun Sen said.

Zayn Malik cancels UK concert appearance due to anxiety

LOS ANGELES — Singer Zayn Malik called off his UK concert appearance as he is suffering from the worst anxiety of his career. The 23-year-old Pillowtalk hitmaker was scheduled to appear at Summertime Ball 2016 in London on Saturday (June 11) night, reported US magazine.

Zayn took to Twitter to issue an apology to those who were waiting to see him perform live at Wembley Stadium. “To all those people who have been waiting to see me perform at the Capital Summertime Ball today,” he began. “I am writing this up to everybody I’ve let down today. I know those who suffer anxiety will understand and I hope those who don’t can empathise with my situation.” — PTI

ANGELINA JOLIE says she was once asked to lose weight early in her career. The 46-year-old Ain’t Your Mama singer when she was struggling to establish herself in Hollywood, people (including her own manager) used to tell her she needed to be thinner, reported E!online.

“They kept telling me to lose weight, and most importantly my UK fans. “Unfortunately my anxiety that has haunted me throughout the last few months around live performances has gotten the better of me … with the magnitude of the event, I have suffered the worst anxiety of my career,” he wrote. The singer said he will try his best to come out of the situation and hopes his fans will understand his situation.

“I cannot apologies enough but I want to be honest with everyone who has patiently waited to see me. I promise I will do my best to make this up to everybody I’ve let down today. I know those who suffer anxiety will understand and I hope those who don’t can empathise with my situation.” — PTI

Smash hit ‘Hamilton’ sweeps Tonys with 11 wins during somber ceremony

The musical, which tells the story of the ill-fated Hamilton with a deft musical melding of hip-hop and rap, R&B, ballads and traditional Broadway showstoppers, also won for featured actress and actor and several technical awards. A somber note was cast over the festivities by the attack on a gay nightclub in Orlando, Florida early on Sunday that killed 50 people and wounded 53. Several winners spoke of the tragedy in their acceptance speeches.

Jessica Lange, winning her first Tony as morphine-addicted Mary Tyrone in “Long Day’s Journey Into Night, said the honor “fills me with such happiness, even on such a sad day as this.”

Host James Corden opened the usually ebullient show with a statement to victims and others affected: “Your tragedy is our tragedy … hate will never win.”

“Theatres are a symbol and a celebration of that principle,” he said.

Miranda, accepting best score for a musical, delivered a sonnet for his acceptance, done in the style of verse heard in “Hamilton”.

“Senseless acts of tragedy … times of hate,” he said, his voice breaking as he ended with “love is love is love, cannot be killed.” Miranda also won best book of a musical.

Backstage, Sir Andrew Lloyd Webber said: “No child is ever born to hate.”

Frank Langella, who won his fourth Tony for best actor in a play as an Alzheimer’s-afflicted patriarch in “The Father,” said the theater community stood in support. “I urge you, Orlando, to be strong,” Langella said.

“The Humans” won the Tony for best play, while Jayne Houdyshell and Reed Birney were named best featured actress and actor in a play for family drama. It also won for scenic design. — Reuters

Angelina Jolie in early talks for Murder on the Orient Express remake

LOS ANGELES — Actress Angelina Jolie is in early talks to star in Fox Studios’ remake of Murder on the Orient Express.

Actor-director Kenneth Branagh is helming the project and will also star as Hercule Poirot, reported Variety.

The producers are Branagh, Ridley Scott, Simon Kinberg and Mark Gordon.

Michael Green is writing the screenplay based on Agatha Christie’s novel.

Published in 1934, the novel revolves around a murder on board the famous train. The film follows Belgian detective Poirot, who is handling the case, in which a number of passengers could potentially be the murderer.
Japanese woman wins bandoneon championship

FUKUOKA — A Japanese woman fascinated by a “breathing” music instrument called a bandoneon was selected last week as the world’s most talented player of the instrument, which is indispensable for the Argentine tango.

Yukie Kawanami, 36, won the 1st Che Bandoneon International Competition held in August 2015 as part of the Stowe Tango Music Festival in the Vermont city. The event in the United States was aimed at promoting tango musicians.

Kawanami was one of four finalists who survived an audition using recorded videos on the YouTube video sharing site and swept the championship in the finals held in Stowe.

With the appearance of a square accordion, the bandoneon has bellows between two wooden boxes that contain reed organs controlled by rows of buttons covering a five octave range. The bellows, when expanded and contracted, provide air to the reed organs to produce sounds.

“What I like about the bandoneon is that I can produce music that sounds as if the instrument is breathing,” said Kawanami, who is one of the few up-and-coming female bandoneon players in Japan.

Kawanami, from Munakata, Fukuoka Prefecture, southwestern Japan, started playing piano when she was 6 and entered the Tokyo College of Music.

But she was captivated by the Latin instrument when she happened to see Ryota Komatsu, a leading Japanese bandoneon player, performing during a TV programme shortly before she took an entrance exam for the college.

“It just clicked,” Kawanami said. She wrote a letter to Komatsu and became his apprentice upon entering the college. While taking piano lessons at school, she devoted the rest of her time to bandoneon practice.

Having graduated from the college, she pursued a career as a bandoneon player and released a CD album.

But she was diagnosed as suffering from thyroid cancer in November 2011 and had surgery to remove all her thyroid. She still needs to have a checkup every four months.

“It won’t change anything even if I worry (about a possible recurrence of cancer),” she said. “So I take it positively and keep going.”

Kawanami is eager to perform on various occasions even outside her field and has played “debayashi” music that announces the entrance of a “rakugo” storyteller on stage and also played with an orchestra in a classical concert. She said her current dream is to invite bandoneon players from Argentina and go on a grand tour with them all around Japan.—Kyodo News

Gladiators fight again in ancient Roman settlement in Austria

PETRONELL, (Austria) — Gladiators reenacted fights in the amphitheatre of the ancient Roman city of Carnuntum whose archaeological remains stretch over 10 square kilometres (3.86 square miles) in eastern Austria.

Clad in leather armour and feathered metal helmets, men attacked one another with wooden batons and painted shields as children and women in Roman costumes looked on. Archaeologists have reconstructed part of Carnuntum — which they say used to be a hub of the Roman Empire around 1,700 years ago — for tourists, who can now relive ancient Roman culture in the gladiator school, public baths and a museum.—Reuters

Germany shows muscle, Poland enjoys 1st win, Modric magic

LILLE, (France) — UEFA EURO 2016 Day 3 witnessed world champion Germany’s dominating strength, Poland’s first win in the tournament’s history and the magic of Croatia’s Real Madrid playmaker Luka Modric.

Germany beat Ukraine 2-0 in its first match of Group C here on Sunday night with 63 percent ball possession and the completion of 612 passes against 202 for Ukraine.

German central defender Shkodran Mustafi, 24, opened the scoring in the 19th minute when the Valencia defender outjumped Ukrainian midfielder Serhiy Sydorchuk to power a header into the top corner of the net.

It was the first international goal for Mustafi.

The second goal appeared in the 92nd minute when substitute playmaker Bastian Schweinsteiger, who just came from the bench for two minutes, picked Mesut Ozil’s pinpoint cross in the box and guided a bounced volley past the helpless Ukrainian keeper Andriy Pyatov.

“Pyatov was at least another 10-15 percent better than the man we thought he was,” said the German coach Joachim Low.

“It was just the beginning, the next matches will show that we can play even better,” said Poland midfielder Grzegorz Krychowiak. Lewandowski, Poland’s top star, scored 13 in the Euro 2016 qualifiers, was besieged by defenders of Northern Ireland when he touched the ball and had no chance to score.

In Paris, a thumping volley from Modric helped Croatia earn a 1-0 victory over Turkey in its Group D opener.

The 30-year-old sent in the dipping volley with his right foot in the 41st minute.

“It was one of his (Luka’s) best matches in Croatia’s history. He was really playing well. He was really our leader,” said Croatia coach Ante Cacic.

“We saw that the ball hit his hand but you can’t complain,” said Brazil centre half Miranda, a two-time World Cup winner.

Brazil tried from the first minute to score but the ball didn’t want to go in unfortunately, and that’s football. “If you don’t score you pay for it.”

The result lifted Peru to the top of Group B and eliminated Brazil, who dropped down to third place behind Ecuador and the United States being played in the United States to celebrate the centenary of governing body CONMEBOL and the Copa America.

Following the conclusion of the first two groups in the 16-team competition, Peru will play Colombia in the quarter-finals in New Jersey on Friday, while the host nation will take on Ecuador in Seattle a day earlier.

Mexico, Venezuela and Argentina have already qualified from the other two groups with a match to play with either Chile or Panama joining them in the quarter-finals pending the result of their showdown on Tuesday.

The loss was a harsh one for Brazil, who knew a draw would have been enough to see them advance and were generally the better team without ever really threatening the Peruvian goal.
