President U Htin Kyaw and wife host welcoming ceremony for Laotian president

PRESIDENT U Htin Kyaw and his wife Daw Su Su Lwin held a welcoming ceremony yesterday on the lawn of the Presidential Palace in Nay Pyi Taw for the president of the Lao People’s Democratic Republic Mr. Bounnhang Vorachith and his wife Mrs. Khammeuang Vorachith.

After the welcoming ceremony, State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi cordially greeted the visiting Laotian president inside the Presidential Palace.

A Myanmar-Laos bilateral meeting followed, attended by the two Presidents, the State Counsellor, Union Ministers U Kyaw Tint Swe, Dr Pe Myint, Thura U Aung Ko, U Thant Sin Maung, Dr Myo Thein Gyi and U Win Khaing, Minister of State for Foreign Affairs U Kyaw Tin and visiting Laotian ministers and officials.

During the meeting, both sides discussed cooperation and the promotion of peace and stability in border regions, repairing damage to border posts caused by severe weather conditions and floods, resumption of Yangon-Vientiane and Luang Prabang-Bagan direct flights, reviews of existing agreements between the two countries and matters related to supporting each other in regional and international arena.

Next, the two Presidents witnessed the signing of an agreement on the Myanmar-Laos Friendship Bridge by Union Minister for Foreign Affairs Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and Laotian Foreign Affairs Minister Mr. Saleumxay Kommasith.

President U Htin Kyaw and his wife visited the Gems Museum in Nay Pyi Taw.

In the evening, the Laotian President and his wife concluded their one-day visit to Myanmar and left from Nay Pyi Taw for Vientiane, Laos.

Mr. Bounnhang Vorachith has visited Myanmar twice, in 2003 and 2004, while he served as Laotian Prime Minister. He made a third visit in 2015 as the Vice President of the Lao People’s Democratic Republic. Yesterday was his fourth visit to Myanmar. —Myanmar News Agency

Proposed to develop comprehensive plan for floods and water scarcity discussed

The second Amyotha Hluttaw session entered its ninth day with lawmakers holding discussions on a motion calling for a comprehensive plan for flooding that occurs annually in the delta and coastal regions and for nationwide water shortages during the dry season. Also discussed was restoring rivers for the benefit of river-side residents.

In his discussions Defence Services Personnel Hluttaw Representative Major Zaw Tun stressed the need for taking the challenges of funds and technology into account to ensure effective preparedness measures.

Regarding the problem of water scarcity, he called for short-term and long-term water shortage mitigation plans and measures to ensure an adequate supply of water. The parliamentarian pointed out that it is hard for the government to perform river dredging operations as a preventive measure against floods across the country due to financial constraints, suggesting that these works should be carried out under a BOT system.

Moreover, he emphasised the need to seek expert recommendations prior to conducting dredging works and building water facilities.

The Pyithu Hluttaw session continues with query session, discussions on proposal

Regarding a question about damaged primary school buildings in Leshe Township, the deputy minister said that severe weather conditions in the region caused minor damage to the school buildings, which were soon repaired.

During yesterday’s Pyithu Hluttaw session, parliamentarians held discussions on a motion calling for necessary measures against the possible adverse affects of floods on dykes in Ayeyawaddy Region, expressing their support for the proposal.

In their discussions, lawmakers stressed the need of urgent repairs of dykes that are more than 150 years old.

Next, the Deputy Minister for Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation Dr Tun Win gave a clarification on the proposal, and the Pyithu Hluttaw decided to wait and see whether to put the proposal on the record.—Myanmar News Agency

Red Cross opens emergency flood shelters in Hinthada

THE Myanmar Red Cross Society (MRCS) has opened up a series of emergency flood shelters in villages of Ayeyawaddy Region’s Hinthada Township which were hit by floods, according to township branch of the MRCS.

Members of Hinthada’s RCS, in cooperation with local NGOs, have been transporting emergency relief and opening flood shelters in monasteries and school buildings of five villages within the township.

“We’re uncertain how many people have been affected by the flooding. We’ve utilized monasteries and schools from nearby villages to open flood shelters, and we’re currently collaborating with the local authorities in conducting search and rescue efforts in remaining areas,” said U Win Ko Ko, second in command of Hinthada Township’s RCS.

Recently collected data reveals more than 250 victims are seeking refuge at each of the shelters setup in the villages of Shwehintha, Lakechaung, Taunggonsu and Sitkone.

“We’ve had to abandon our home to come and seek shelter at the monastery. We receive donations of rice from well-wishers, but we can’t return home since the flood waters have yet to subside,” said Ko Min Lwin of Lakechaung village.

Village authorities — in collaboration with members of the MRCS, the auxiliary fire service and charity associations — are reportedly conducting search and rescue efforts, data collection and emergency health care within the villages in Hinthada Township affected by the recent flooding.—Myanmar News Agency
Myanmar, Laos ink agreement on management of friendship bridge

MYANMAR and Laos signed an agreement yesterday for management of the friendship bridge that links the two Southeast Asian countries.

The agreement for the first bridge ever across the Mekong River between the two countries was signed by Union Foreign Affairs Minister Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and Laotian Foreign Affairs Minister Mr Saleumxay Kommasith in the presence of President U Htin Kyaw and his counterpart Bounnhang Vorachith.

The bridge, which links Myanmar’s Tachileik in eastern Shan State to Laos’ Luang Namtha Province, was inaugurated last year by the then-presidents of both countries. The bridge was opened in May 2015.

The idea of constructing the 691.6 meter-long Myanmar-Laos Friendship Bridge at a cost of 26 million U.S. dollars was first raised during an earlier visit to Myanmar by Lao Prime Minister Thongsing Thammavong in July 2011. The project begin in February 2013.—GNLM

Protection and promotion of farmers’ rights and interests critical to national economic growth: Vice President

THE Leading Committee for Farmers Rights, Protection and Interests Promotion held its first plenary session at the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday.

Speaking at the meeting, Vice President U Henry Van Thio said that measures to protect and promote the rights and interests of farmers should be consistent with the implementation of government policies.

The vice president quoted the new economic policy stating that special emphasis would be placed on a balanced development of agriculture, livestock and industry to ensure inclusive economic growth, food security and increased export.

He spoke of a financial system that would help stabilise the monetary sector and enable farmers and farmers to enjoy sustainable economic growth.

He pointed out the need to have an insight into the current situation of the agricultural sector, calling for combined efforts to promote agriculture without focusing on paddy growing alone.

He described the rigorous implementation of farmers’ rights and interests as an urgent need for the country’s economic development. The government has enacted a law to protect the rights of farmers and promote their interests, the vice president said, adding that a leading committee has also been formed to ensure the welfare of farmers.

Govt ready to supply paddy seedlings to farmers in flooded areas

THE Union Government has plans to distribute paddy seedlings to farmers who faced devastation of their paddy fields due to the current flooding, said Deputy Minister for Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation Dr Tun Win.

“Due to experiences in the past, the government has already arranged to provide the farmers in flood-hit areas with paddy seedlings,” said the deputy minister to reporters in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday.

Currently, about 20,000 acres of paddy fields are under water due to overflow from the Ayeyawady, Chindwin and Ngawan rivers. The government is taking measures to prevent more flooding on the paddy fields, it has been learned.

During last year’s floods, about 200,000 acres of rain-fed fields were submerged. Meanwhile the Ministry of Defence announced that it will provide evacuation and relief works in flood-hit areas with military helicopters and watercrafts.

“All local battalions and armies have been alerted and are made quick responses to disasters in their respective areas,” said Union Minister for Defence Lt-Gen Sein Win.

Currently, the Ministry of Defence has sent two floating hospitals and helicopters to participate in evacuation and relief activities.

Rising water on the Ayeyawady, Chindwin, and the Ngawan rivers has caused flooding in Hinthada, Zalan, Kyangin, Myan Aung, Ingapu, Maubin, Pantanaw and Danna-buu townships since early August.

The Meteorology and Hydrology Department has alerted people living in low-lying areas to be aware of possible floods and to move to shelters that the government has established.

including a one-year-old child and a 94-year-old man. Most of the victims were children aged from 1 to 12.

As soon as the information was received on 20 July, medical staff were sent to immediately perform disease control actions that included diagnostic testing, the director-general said.

On August 5, a medical team that specializes in infectious disease performed the Health Ministry disease control and prevention measures and provided health care services to the local people in the region in cooperation with regional medical teams.

A Tatmadaw helicopter carrying three specialists will fly to the villages that report disease outbreaks, said the director-general in good weather.

He added that there were 13 deaths in Nannya Township , 11 of whom were children under the age of five. The others were a 24-year-old person and a 54-year-old person. They died between 28 July and 2 August.

A medical team from Don Hee station hospital has provided health care, while other medical teams that include specialists and a military medical team will arrive soon, the director-general said.

Samples from of the patients were sent to the National Health Laboratory in Yangon and a press release will be issued after results of the tests are obtained, added the director general.

As sandbanks clog up rivers, flooding augmented in Rakhine State

SANDBANKS, which are blocking the course of rivers and streams in Rakhine State, need to be dredged to prevent flooding, say local residents and engineers.

They point out that low-lying townships within the state are prone to flooding when rivers and streams in mountainous areas flow down into the sea, leaving behind sandbanks, highlighting how the dredging of these sandbanks could help abate the extent of such floods.

“Sandbanks blocking the course of rivers need to be dredged; current flooding has affected townships located 100ft above sea level. Waters rise, not because of tides, but because of rainwater in rivers and streams that fail to flow out into the sea,” said U Shwe Thein, a marine expert and chief engineer of an international shipping company.

Residents of Rakhine State have reportedly made overtures to local government for assistance to tackle annual flooding which destroys lives, properties and farming.

SANDBANKS

“Rainfall, which washes down off the mountains, causes rivers and creeks to overflow and flood low-lying areas; whole stretches of riverbanks have been swept away. Research on the state’s waterways needs to be conducted with the help of experts. We need to dredge rivers and streams that have been silted up with sandbanks,” said U Aye Thar Aung, vice chair of Amyotha Hluttaw.

Rakhine State is a coastal region abound with rivers and creeks. It’s famous for its rivers of Kaladan, Laymyo, Nat and Maya.

Myanmar’s waterways to get nationwide upgrade

ACCORDING to a statement by Dr Htun Win, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation, upgrades are to be made to current waterways, as well as the digging or entirely new ponds and rivers, in a bid to develop the country’s agriculture and livestock sectors.

The announcement came during the ceremony to celebrate the Myanmar Fisheries Federation’s 17th Anniversary on Sunday.

“In our country, which is known the world over for its delta region and abundance of ponds and lakes, there is a complete dearth of meat and fish. It’s a situation whereby the nation’s commercial capital relies on fish being delivered in from the heart of the Ayeyarwady Region,” said Dr Htun Win.

The present shortage of meat, fish and agricultural products within Myanmar reportedly stems from the systematic confiscation of farmland by consecutive erstwhile governments, rendering agricultural and livestock sectors with just 20 per cent of farmland left upon with which to conduct their activities.

“[Further] ponds will be dug in regions where fishing ponds already exist. The plan to rejuvenate these areas is a good one. But it’s a very large-scale initiative, encompassing the entire country,” said U Win Kyaing, general secretary of the Myanmar Fisheries Federation.

The issuing of state economic policy will reportedly see the industrial sector connect with the agriculture, meat and fish sectors in which value-added processed products will be exported to international markets in lieu of presently exported unprocessed goods.

AUTHORITIES of the Muse (105-mile) Trade Zone have issued a warning to individuals holding expired individual trade cards, saying they must apply to renew the card before the designated date.

Border authorities have issued 165 IRCs to merchants in Muse, a town in northern Shan State, 36 of which require renewal this month.

“We will no longer renew expired cards after this month,” said Daw Ni Ni Maw, head of the 105-mile trade zone. “Only twenty-one expired card holders have made contact with the department.”

The term of the ITC is one year. The card grants the holder permission to carry out export and import processes with neighbouring countries for up to K15 million worth of trade per week. The card holder is required to renew it one month ahead of the expiry date. Over the designated period, the ITC holders shall pay a penalty of K5,000.

Aung Zaw Lin, an ITC holder, who imports auto accessories from China, said that the authorities should allow K30 million worth of trade dealing a week. He claimed he has stopped using the ITC as it is difficult to balance import volume and trade value. He now operates an import business through an export/import company.

Since 2012 authorities have permitted individual trading at 18 border trade camps, with plans to remove some restrictions and regulations for individual traders to promote the country’s trade sector.

The import value between 1 April and 8 July this fiscal year at the Muse border trade camp reached over US$4 billion. Between April and mid-July, over $300 million worth of goods were imported by individual trade card holders.—Aung Thant Khaing

Yangon’s suburban property market slumps

THE property market within the suburban outskirts of Yangon (Myanmar’s commercial capital) has subsided of late, according to real-estate agents, induced by a fall in property prices.

Ko Aung Thura, a broker of Aung Yadana Real Estate Agency situated in Dagon Myothit (South), says property prices in the city’s suburbs depreciated in the wake of transition to a new government following last year’s general elections, with expensive house prices during the tenure of the erstwhile government reportedly even beyond the reach of most businessmen.

“The current property market has slowed down because of changes to the political landscape. Previously, a plot of land on either side of a main road sold for between K50-60 million, approaching K70 or 80 million. But now, such a plot may only fetch around a meager K30 million,” he said.

A fall in property prices depresses the market as property dealers keep out, waiting for the time when prices will shoot back up again to trade.

U Wai Yan, a property analyst from Dagon Myothit (North), has expressed the situation of the property market in Dagon Myothit (North) used to be similar to that of its southern cousin, Dagon Myothit (South).

“Around a 40’ x 60’ land in North Dagon last year shot over the K100 million price mark. Now, though, and we’re faced with a situation where prices are falling as sales wane. Land prices used to be exorbitantly high during the previous government’s administration, while the market is currently still subdued since the swearing in of a new democratic government,” he said.

Yangon’s suburban property market was difficult to control during the former government’s administration, while real estate agents and market analysts speculate that this month long lull in the market, in the wake of a new government, might pick up with the onset of 2017.—Myitmakha News Agency

Importation of diamonds illegal, says IRD

THE Internal Revenue Department (IRD) has expressed that diamonds are forbidden from being imported into Myanmar, while a special goods tax is levied on jewelry encrusted with diamonds mined within the country.

“A five per cent tax is levied on jewelry made with diamonds. Taxes are then not allowed to be further levied upon selling within a jewelry store. But, one must be able to show proof [that tax has already been paid],” said U Myo Ko, director of the IRD.

Diamond encrusted jewelry sold within gemstones stores in Myanmar reportedly features diamonds illegally imported into the country from Hong Kong and through the Myanmar - India border town of Tamu. Industry insiders have also made it aware that diamonds from India are usually of a poor quality.

“A great deal of the diamonds used in studded jewelry, which are sold in stores throughout Myanmar, originate in India. The shops doctor the diamonds to hide their actually quality,” said a gemstone tradesman who wished to remain anonymous.

According to the Myanmar Gems and Jewellery Association, the absence of government permission to import diamonds and other gemstones from abroad means such gems are entering the country through illegal channels.

In regard to tax policy on diamonds within Myanmar, as official tax levies on foreign diamonds do not yet exist, it renders such diamonds presently being utilized within the country as having been smuggled in illegally from neighboring countries or overseas.

“All diamonds within Myanmar have been smuggled in. If [the owners or sellers of these diamonds are] ever questioned, they must pretend that they’re family heirlooms,” added the anonymous gems tradesman.

As well as diamonds, the IRD has made it known that it is illegal to import other such gemstones into Myanmar including gold and emeralds.—Myitmakha News Agency

Sesame price likely to fall at harvest time due to low demand from China

LOCAL merchants have estimated that the price of sesame is likely to drop at harvest time this season due to low demand from China.

“There is a quality problem with export items. It creates difficulties with the European market. That is why the sesame price is estimated to decline this season” a sesame merchant said.

U Sai Ba Nyan, vice chairman of the Myanmar Pulses, Beans & Sesame Seeds Merchants Association, said, “Sesame prices have also decreased on the world market. We saw a decrease of US$300 per tonne of the crop compared to last year because of fertiliser problems.”

Currently, merchants sell a tonne of black sesame for between K1,300 and K2,300, and white sesame for around K1,400.

The lower price of sesame will strongly affect local exporters, said U San Hlaing, a grower from Bago Region who hopes the price will rise again for the coming harvest season in September.

Myanmar normally exports about 100,000 tonnes of sesame to partner countries including China, Japan, South Korea and EU member countries. Seventy per cent of the total volume went to China.—200

Number of hotels increases to 1,300 nationwide

THE number of functioning hotels counted up until the end of July this year has reached 1,361 with 33,355 rooms nationwide, according to official figures released by the Ministry of Hotels and Tourism.

The ministry is confident that this number can satisfy increasing demand for hotel rooms to accommodate the rising number of tourists, it is reported.

To provide better services for both local and foreign visitors the ministry erased some restrictions on the issuing of licenses to investors to establish hotels and other development facilities across the nation.

There are 342 hotels with over 16,000 rooms in Yangon Region, 179 hotels with nearly 7,300 rooms in Mandalay Region, 63 hotels with around 5,100 rooms in the capital Nay Pyi Taw, 81 hotels with over 2,700 rooms in Bagan and NyaungU, 24 hotels with 1,163 rooms in Ngwe Saung Beach, 23 hotels with 874 rooms in Chaungtha Beach, 120 hotels with about 3,600 rooms in Taunggyi of Shan State.

Licenses have been issued to tour operators, tour guides and related applicants by the ministry. Up until the end of last month, the ministry granted nearly 2,200 licenses to tour operators, over 930 transport licenses, around 3,950 tour guild licenses and over 2,700 local tour guide licenses.

Since 2011 the country has seen a growing influx of tourists year on year. It hosted over 4.6 million foreign visitors last FY, an increase of 52 per cent compared with 2014. The ministry estimates that the number will increase to 5.5 million this FY.

The ministry further estimates that international tourist arrivals in the country are likely to reach 7.5 million by 2019.—GNLM

Indonesia arrests six suspects allegedly planning Singapore attack

JAKARTA — Indonesian authorities arrested six suspected militants on Batam island on Friday who were believed to be linked to the Islamic State group and plotting an attack on nearby Singapore, an Indonesian police spokesman said.

The suspects had stepped up security in response to a threatening statement by Islamic State in Singapore that has said the case was being investigated.

“Indonesian police spokesman Agus Rianto told reporters the suspects had been plotting with a member of the Islamic State militant group in Syria to attack Singapore via Batam, which is about 15 km (10 miles) south of Singapore,” Rianto said.

“What we understand so far is that they were planning to attack vital objects, busy areas including police offices,” Rianto said.

The six suspects were suspected to have links to Bahrain Naim, an Indonesian for Singapore’s interior ministry said in a statement.

“The public are advised to remain vigilant.”

Indonesian investigators believe that Naim was one of the masterminds behind an attack in January in the Indonesian capital of Jakarta, in which eight people were killed including the four attackers.

“There’s a link to Bahrain Naim because there was communication with Bahrain Naim — but whether they were affiliated with Bahrain Naim’s group or not — is what we’re investigating now,” Rianto said.

Security officials fear that Naim and other Islamic State leaders were now asking supporters in Indonesia and other nations to launch attacks at home, instead of being drawn to the fight in the Middle East.

“One thing I think is clear is Bahrain Naim has been able to establish a lot of communication with a lot of people through his social media network,” said Jakarta-based security analyst Sidney Jones.

“This would be a departure for Bahrain Naim and his supporters if they were really thinking of attacking targets outside Indonesia,” he said.

Southeast Asian militants fighting for Islamic State in the Middle East have said they have chosen one of the most wanted men in the Philippines to head a regional faction of the radical group that includes Indonesia and Malaysians, security officials said last month.

Indonesian forces were also on heightened alert following the killing of the country’s most-wanted militant last month. Sanjoso, among the first Indonesians to pledge loyalty to Islamic State, was killed in a gun battle with security forces on the island of Sulawesi. — Reuters

Ousted Thai PM Yingluck defends rice subsidy at criminal trial

BANGKOK — Ousted former Thai prime minister Yingluck Shinawatra defended her management of a rice subsidy scheme, which critics say hemorrhaged billions of dollars, and told a court on Friday it had not distorted global prices.

Yingluck, Thailand’s first female prime minister, was removed from office by a court decision in 2014.

The rice scheme, a flagship election policy that helped sweep her to office in a landslide in 2011, was a catalyst for months of crippling street protests in 2013 that led to the military coup.

“The rice policy could increase people’s income and the price of rice for farmers,” Yingluck told the Supreme Court north of the capital, Bangkok.

“It did not distort the market,” she said. “We saw that the benefits of the scheme outweighed the monetary losses.”

Yingluck has been charged with criminal negligence over her management of the rice programme, which was one of the populist policies engineered by her brother, former prime minister Thaksin Shinawatra.

Thaksin was central to a conflict that has divided Thais for more than a decade. He lives in exile abroad to avoid a jail term for abuse of power charges.

The Shinawatras enjoy support in the mostly poorer north and northeast of Thailand while their opponents, including the country’s military-appointed legislature that accuse the Shinawatras of corruption, mostly hail from Bangkok and the south.

Yingluck is accused of failing to stem losses from the multi-billion dollar subsidy scheme, which distorted global prices and saw Thailand lose its crown as the world’s number one rice exporter to India.

On Monday, the military government said it would also lodge a civil case against Yingluck and some of her former ministers.

The rice scheme cost the state 206 billion baht ($8.20 billion), it said.

Yingluck has consistently denied any wrongdoing and has said the case against her is being rushed deliberately.

She told the court that she was in charge of formulating the policy, not the day-to-day running of the scheme.

Supporters earlier handed her flowers as she arrived at the trial, while others held framed pictures of Yingluck and her brother Thaksin. Yingluck was banned from politics for five years in January 2015 after a military-appointed legislature found her guilty of mismanaging the rice scheme.

The scheme left Thailand with around 18 million tonnes of rice in stockpiles. The military government has sold more than 5 million tonnes in a series of auctions since taking power. — Reuters

Sonia Gandhi has shoulder surgery after fall at campaign stop

NEW DELHI — Sonia Gandhi, the leader of India’s main opposition party, has undergone shoulder surgery at a New Delhi hospital after suffering a fall on a campaign stop this week, senior Congress party officials said on Friday.

Gandhi, 69, dislocated her left shoulder when she fainted on Tuesday while launching her party’s campaign for next year’s Uttar Pradesh state election in the holy city of Varanasi, Prime Minister Narendra Modi’s parliamentary constituency.

Gandhi suffered acute dehydration while travelling in an open vehicle for four hours through large crowds.

“She has dislocated her shoulder after a fall and is now undergoing surgery for 48 hours,” said a senior party official, who did not wish to be named as he was not authorised to speak to the media.

The Italian-born politician, who led her party to two successive terms governing the world’s largest democracy, has played a pivotal role in the political arena since being treated abroad for an unknown illness in 2014. Despite persistent speculation, she has yet to hand over the party leadership to Rahul Gandhi, her 46-year-old son and the great grandson of India’s first prime minister Jawaharlal Nehru. — Reuters

Access to Justice

Dr. Khine Khine Win

Access to justice is an inherent rule of law and a fundamental requirement of any democratic society. Justice is a broad notion that is based on the concept of moral rights that incorporates varying perspectives on fairness, ethics, rationality and law. Keep in mind that access to justice is fundamental human rights. The Constitution of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar (2008), section 21(a) states “Every citizen shall enjoy the right of equality, the right of liberty and the right of justice”. Article 8 of the UDHR where it declares that “Everyone has the right to an effective remedy by the competent national tribunals for acts violating the fundamental rights granted him by the Constitution or by law”. When a right is violated or damaged is caused, access to justice is of fundamental importance for the injured individual and it is an essential component of the rule of law.

The United Nations National Assembly formally adopted the Transforming our world: 2030 agenda for sustainable development” by UN member States in September 2015. It is a new compact for people and planet anchored in 17 sustainable development goals (SDGs) and 169 targets. The Goals and targets stimulated the action over the next fifteen years in areas of critical importance for humanity and the planet. In January 2016, the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) adopted its new 2025 Community Vision. This guiding document acknowledges the complementary relationship between the UN’s 2030 Agenda. By adopting this vision, ASEAN became the first regional body to acknowledge its members efforts to implement and monitor the SDGs. Again, Chair’s Statement of “20 Years of ASEAN: Partnership for the Future through Connectivity” welcomed again the adoption in 2015 of the 2030 agenda for Sustainable Development. Every lending partner agreed to work together towards the timely and full implementation of the goals set in this document at the national, regional and global levels.

SDGs recognize the central role of justice in achieving development, with Goal 16 specifically guaranteeing “equal access to justice for all”. In this regard, ASEAN Regional Consultation on the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), Access to Justice and Legal Aid was held on May 26-27, 2016 in Jakarta, Indonesia. Over 100 participants including government officials and civil society members from ASEAN countries, representatives from ASEAN bodies, academics and international experts on measuring access to justice and legal aid were attended. The meeting provided a platform for regional participants to gather best practices on providing legal aid for poor and vulnerable people, strengthening access to justice provisions in ASEAN countries, as well as tracking progress and measurement of access to justice. This initiative aimed to develop national commitments to strengthen the rule of law and implement Goal 16 of the SDGs for peace, justice and strong institutions, and concrete actions for future cooperation in the ASEAN region. ASEAN has taken the initial and demonstrated that regional bodies can provide invaluable support to national efforts to implement and monitor the justice commitments of the SDGs. By seeing aforementioned facts, we can understand that ASEAN member countries are readiness to cooperate together to implement SDGs including Goal 16.

There is no access to justice where people do not have legal awareness or information or knowledge of rights or where there is a weak justice system. For instance to address violations of human rights by the duty bearers, increase knowledge and awareness on human rights issues are needed. Therefore a broad dissemination of information about rights is essential for an access to justice. On the other hand, improve rule of law will improve access to justice. Rule of law is undermined if people cannot exercise their rights to access to justice. Even rule of law is rightly regarded as being the foundation of any democratic society it is meaningless if there is no access to justice. No doubt, every government has a fundamental responsibility to ensure access to justice is available when there is no other realistic option for people. If they fail their responsibility, there will be no justice. If there is no justice there will be no peace.

Martin Luther King said “Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere”. Whatever affects one directly, affects all indirectly.

Pact’s village banking scheme arrives Thaton

PACT Myanmar will support the establishment of sustainable village banks in rural areas of Mon State’s Thaton Township, a Pact Myanmar facilitated capacity development workshop held in Thaton on 4 August has revealed.

Daw Maw Maw Soe, chief program coordinator for Pact Myanmar, stated during the workshop that the international NGO would provide support to develop the capacity of women in rural areas in the handling monetary and business enterprises which would allow for the materialization of village banking from investment through a self-sustainable system of savings.

“The key aspect of this project is for women from villages to lead the founding of village banks from their own savings, which they can then run as a financial enterprise, lending money out to other villagers in the form of credit. It will allow a profit to be made, off the money saved, in the form of interest received from the borrower. It’s a method that allows hard earned money can be allocated. More than just an business enterprises, the program will empower women socially, enabling them to take action on female related social issues within their villages, added the Daw Maw Maw Soe.

The systematic selection of the program management committee; reliable methods of handling finances and weekly meetings of bank members, during which bank teller systems are studied; together with the setting of regulations on methods of saving through savings books and records, will reportedly allow for financial transparency in the process the issuing of credit loans.

The village banking scheme will be rolled out across more than 70 villages in Thaton Township with 90 groups comprising 2,250 members. The scheme is one which has reportedly already been implemented in over 11,000 villages across five regions and three states around Myanmar.—Myitmakha News Agency

Paradoxes of pedagogical approaches

Kyaw Thura

STATE Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, in an educational seminar on pedagogy in Nay Pyi Taw two days ago, attached importance to the use of the learner-centred teaching in brightening the future of the country, alerting all the education practitioners to the need to be imaginative about how to promote the country’s education standard.

In the past six years, the Ministry of Education has attempted to introduce the Child-Centred Approach (CCA) in the education setting across the country, but to be frank, the attempt still remains a failure. The problem seems to arise from a misunderstanding about the interpretation and application of this approach. In fact, this practice of teaching and learning is not a methodology but a philosophy. This does not necessarily mean that learner-centred teaching must focus on a single teaching method.

It is, therefore, absolutely vital for the authorities in the field of education to consider what barriers there are to the use of this approach in our classrooms. To some confusing extent, the phrases of the learner-centred teaching, the learning-centred teaching and the student-centred learning are in common use in the teaching and learning context. On the whole, these phrases are all variations of one approach.

One critical point to ponder is that traditional teaching approaches still reign supreme in the field of education, making some eager teachers feel reluctant to adopt the learner-centred approach. Another issue is concerned with large class sizes and inadequate infrastructure with a result that teachers have to emphasise group goals over the needs of individual students. Despite the difficulties, teachers have the responsibility to transform their students into self-driven lifelong learners.

All things considered, the reform in the education system involves the reform in teaching and learning, which in turn should come up with necessary changes in the assessment system across the curriculum.

National Natural Disaster Management Committee meets

VICE PRESIDENT U Henry Van Thio highlighted the importance of community-based Disaster Management planning for preparedness, prevention, response and recovery operations while addressing a work coordination meeting of the National Natural Disaster Management Committee (NNDMC) in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday.

In his address, the Vice President, chairman of the committee, said those who have a role in disaster management must follow Natural Disaster Management law, rules and regulations that have been enacted. He called for seeking better ways to mitigate disaster risks in townships and stressed the need for making strides in building a better committee to win the public’s trust and reliance.

Disaster response plans must be in place before a disaster occurs in regions and states, he said.

Govt budget falls short of connecting Minbya to national grid

RAKHINE State’s Minbya Township will no longer be graced by the presence of twenty-four hour electricity as union government has reportedly not budgeted the K40 million required to make it a reality, according to staff of the Yoma Company - the body responsible for extending the electricity network.

The company has made it known that two and four miles of cable, in Mrauk-U and Minbya Townships respectively, remain to be extended to secure a round-the-clock electricity supply, but completion of these activities has been hindered by an absence of a required government budget.

“The extension of electricity cables from Mrauk-U to Minbya is about 96 per cent complete; there’s just four per cent left to go - a total of six miles of cable. The rainy season has inhibited us from continuing our activities for the time being, but it’s the absence of funds which will render the project permanently unfinished,” said U Sit Kyaw Myint, managing director of the Yoma Company.

Begun in 2014, work was undertaken with government funding to connect Mrauk-U and Minbya with a 20 mile-long 66KV electric cable, together with construction of sub-stations within the town of Minbya itself, in order to supply twenty-four hour electricity by connecting it up to the national grid. Furthermore, a total of five 200 KVA generators, together with miles of 11 KV and 400 KVA cables, were built within Minbya by companies hired out by the union government for which expenses have reportedly amounted to over K107 million.

“Companies have been implementing [electricity access expansion] after signing contracts with union government. They [the government] have already allocated a budget for the activities. Companies are waiting to see if more funds will be issued,” said U Hla Htun, head of the Minbya Township Department of Electricity.

The department has voiced that nearly 300 households presently come and pay their electricity meter bills at their offices. The residents of Minbya only receive a meager four hours of electricity a day, from between 6:30 - 10pm, provided through one 500 KVA and two 200 KVA generators.—Myitmakha News Agency

POEM:
The Sunny Morning Struck the Bell

The sunny Morning struck the bell, the rings of bronze resonance rippling in the air wafted from a pagoda somewhere, and the merit someone was sharing came to my heart, unaware.
Sadu, Sadu, Sadu, I said to myself, elated, muddled feelings surging within abated.

The grey Evening tolled the knell, the heavy rings of bronze resonance in the ponderous air up from a church somewhere, flowing down, fading out, ebbing like the tide.
From my heart dropped a heavy sigh: What things have I done in this short journey before I die?

Bangladesh team in Manila says close to recovering only fraction of heist money

MANILA — A Bangladesh central bank team visiting Manila to recover $81 million stolen from its account in New York said it was close to getting back $15 million of the loot frozen by the Philippines, but first has to prove ownership of the cash to its hosts.

The Philippines’ Department of Justice (DoJ) has asked the Bangladesh Bank delegation to file a legal motion, taking its claim to $15 million of that, but the casino money will have to be pursued separately, said two sources close to the visiting team.

“We are in the final stages of recovering the $15 million, but for the rest we hope a (Philippines) senate hearing on the issue resumes so that we can get to know more details about the case,” said John Gomes, Bangladesh’s ambassador to the Philippines, who is helping the bank representatives on a four-day visit to Manila ending Friday.

The last Philippines Senate hearing into the heist ended in May as a new government came to power under President Rodrigo Duterte. No date has been announced for a resumption.

Bangladeshi officials say the money was able to disappear into the casino industry in the Philippines because of systemic failures at RCBC, not just individual error by some of its officers.

RCBC’s then president Lorenzo Tan told a Senate hearing in March that the incident was “some judgment error from the people on the ground”.

The Bangladesh delegation consists of Debasroop Deb Nath and Abdul Rah from Bangladesh Bank’s financial intelligence unit, and Bangladesh Bank lawyer Ajmalul Hossain. They have already met the DoJ and officials from the anti-money-laundering council in Manila, and will be seeing central bank officials on Friday.

The team has prepared an affidavit citing a letter by the New York Fed to the Philippines’ central bank, in which the Fed said the money was stolen from Bangladesh Bank’s account.

The affidavit will be given to the DoJ to file with a court, the sources said.

Gomes told Reuters late Thursday he hoped the $15 million would be returned in a month. He will hold a press conference on the issue later on Friday.

In our earlier report, the Philippines Senate committee of the DoJ, told Reuters that it has already drafted court documents to begin recovery of the $15 million, but it was important for Bangladesh to prove it is their money.

The Philippine Amusement and Gaming Corporation (PAGCOR), a government body that regulates casinos in the country, has promised to cooperate with Bangladesh Bank to help it recover the $2.7 million it has frozen, Gomes said.—Reuters

Thai election in 2017 regardless of referendum vote, says junta chief

BANGKOK — A general election will take place in 2017, Thailand’s junta chief said on Friday, no matter what the outcome of Sunday’s national referendum on a new constitution that will decide the country’s future.

Two years after the military seized power in a May 2014 coup, Thai voters will vote whether to accept a military-backed constitution that critics, including major political parties, say would weaken the role of elected officials and extend the military’s influence for years to come.

If the constitution is approved, the military junta can claim legitimacy and plan the election. A “no” vote could delay a return to democracy as the junta produces a new draft.

“I have talked to officials and to the Prayuth junta and we are confident the referendum will not be held if it is defeated,” said Prayuth. “We need to hold a general election in 2017 because that is a promise we made.”

The junta leader, who is also the prime minister, said the referendum would be the first major test of the junta’s popularity. Critics argue the constitution, to replace one torn up by the military after the coup, will entrench military rule.—Reuters

Beef sets, lavish free meals off limits in South Korea crafty crackdown

SEOUL — Lavish free meals, rounds of golf and expensive gifts of beef andginser will soon be off-limits for civil servants, teachers and journalists in South Korea under a law aimed at clamping down on graft that has long been pervasive in professional life.

The anti-corruption law that takes effect next month imposes spending limits on entertainment and gifts, curtailing a tradition of hospitality that many restaurants, retailers and farmers worry will deal a blow to business.

“It’s making it illegal for those who have the money and are willing to pay more. This is nonsense,” Yoo Byoung-hee, 45, a cattle breeder in Jecheon, south of Seoul, told Reuters by telephone.

Yoo was among farmers who protested against the law last month in front of parliament.

Boxed sets of beef, especially the prized domestic hanwoo variety, can cost hundreds of dollars and are a staple of gift-giving during the Chuseok holiday next month, as well as during Lunar New Year.

Less-expensive gift sets feature items ranging from apples and Spam to shampoo.

The anti-corruption law had been debated since 2011 and has been welcomed as a tool to clean up professional life in a country that ranks 37th out of 168 on Transparency International’s corruption perceptions index.

But many worry about its impact on a sputtering economy.

The law could wipe out 11.6 trillion won ($10.43 billion) in revenue for sectors including food, golf, consumer and retail goods, the Korea Economic Research Institute said in June.

Some groups, including the agricultural ministry, have called for an easing of the rules, which limit the value of gifts to people in the targeted categories to 50,000 won ($45) and meals to 30,000 won ($27).

Gifts, meals and entertainment that are paid for in a personal capacity are not covered by the law. It does not apply to members of parliament or much of the private sector.

President Park Geun-hye said on Tuesday it was important to mitigate the negative impact of the law while maintaining its core purpose.

“One of the laws is implemented and transparency and fairness in our society are improved, the effectiveness of our economy will increase and South Korea’s potential growth may be improved,” she told a cabinet meeting.

According to a survey by the Anti-Corruption and Civil Rights Commission last year, 59.2 percent of South Koreans believed the country was corrupt.

Graft scandals are common. Last year, former Prime Minister Lee Wan-foo was convicted after receiving 30 million won ($27,000) in a shopping bag during a parliamentary election in 2013, according to prosecutors. He is appealing.

Since the Constitutional Court ruled in favour of the law last month, many restaurants and retailers have been scrambling to adjust, tweaking meal offerings and downsizing gift sets.

Dave Yoon, head of Hae-woon, the country’s biggest seafood restaurant chain, said it would introduce a 30,000 won multi-course meal once the law takes effect.

“Revenue is probably going to go down but we made this decision because we feel like we have no other choice,” he said. “We’ve had so many customers come to us worrying about the law because many of our clients come to Hae-woon for business. You have to do what you can to keep customers coming.”—Reuters
Support for Germany’s Merkel plummets after attacks

BERLIN — Popular support for Chancellor Angela Merkel has plunged according to a poll conducted after attacks in Germany, with almost two-thirds of Germans unhappy with her refugee policy.

The survey for public broadcaster ARD showed support for Merkel down 12 points from her July rating to 47 per cent. This marked her second-lowest score since she was re-elected in 2013. In April last year, before the migrant crisis erupted she enjoyed backing of 75 per cent.

Merkel’s open-door refugee policy has come under attack from critics after five attacks in Germany since 18 July have left 15 people dead, including four assailants, and dozens injured.

Two of the attackers had links to Islamist militancy, officials say.—Reuters

Italy airport reopens after cargo plane slides onto local road

MILAN — A northern Italian airport reopened on Friday hours after being temporarily shut down when a cargo plane exited the runway after landing and slid onto a local road, Italy’s civil aviation authority ENAC said. The two-person crew of the aircraft was unharmed and there were no injuries on the ground, ENAC said in a statement.

Black Lives Matter protesters block road to London’s Heathrow Airport

LONDON — Protesters from the British arm of the Black Lives Matter movement blocked the main road to London’s Heathrow Airport on Friday, causing traffic congestion at the busiest airport in Europe.

Police made several arrests and one lane was now open, they said in a statement, after earlier media reports of protesters lying down across the five-lane slip road leading to the airport from a major motorway connecting London to western England.

One news photograph showed a Black Lives Matter banner spread across the road, referring to the name of the movement which started in the United States as a reaction to fatal shootings of black people by white US police officers.—Reuters

EU says Spain’s support for TV broadcasters unlawful

BRUSSELS — The European Commission on Friday said a Spanish plan to support private television broadcasters is in breach of state aid rules.

No recovery will be required as no state aid has yet been disbursed, the Commission said.

“This measure provided a selective advantage to terrestrial broadcasters and platform operators over other available technologies,” Margrethe Vestager, the commissioner in charge of competition policy, said in a statement.

The Spanish scheme was part of the country’s switch from analogue to digital broadcasting. The private broadcasters subsequently financed the switch without state aid.—Reuters

Singapore forms new independent bureau to investigate air, marine accidents

SINGAPORE — Singapore has formed a new bureau to conduct investigations into air and marine accidents and incidents since August, according to a statement from the Ministry of Transport (MoT) on Friday.

The new Transport Safety Investigation Bureau (TSIB) was restructured from the Air Accident Investigation Bureau (AAIB). It will be independent of and separate from any judicial or regulatory proceedings, and make recommendations to enhance the safety of air and sea transport, MoT added.

“The new TSIB is an independent bureau that will conduct investigations into air and marine accidents and incidents, and make recommendations to enhance the safety and security of air and sea transport,” the ministry explained.—Xinhua
Brazil Senate committee clears way for Rousseff’s removal

BRASILIA — A Senate impeachment committee voted on Thursday to put suspended Brazilian President Dilma Rousseff on trial in the full chamber for breaking budget laws, opening the way for her to be removed from office.

The 21-member committee voted 14-5 to try Rousseff for allegedly doctoring government accounts to allow more public spending in the run-up to her 2014 re-election.

Her impeachment would mark the end of 13 years of rule by the centre-left Workers Party. Along with a string of corruption scandals, it has already set off Brazil’s worst political crisis in decades as the country prepares to host the Olympic Games in the midst of a severe recession.

The political uncertainty has kept most foreign leaders away from the Games, which open on Friday in Rio de Janeiro.

The Senate will vote next Tuesday whether to accept the charges against Rousseff and begin her trial that should reach a verdict at the end of the month.

“The committee vote confirms not only that Rousseff knowingly broke fiscal laws, but also that she was a dishonest administrator,” committee member, Senator Ricardo Ferran, told reporters.

Surveys by Brazilian media indicate that more than two-thirds of the senators favour removing the leftist leader, which would confirm interim President Michel Temer in her place for the remainder of her term through 2018.

Rousseff has denied she broke budget laws and maintains she is the victim of a right-wing conspiracy to overthrow her government that advanced the interests of Brazil’s poor. Her office declined to comment on the committee vote.

Rousseff is accused of altering official budget figures and using funds from state-run banks to cover the up the real state of Brazil’s faltering economy as she ran for re-election.

Her trial in the Senate would be presided over by Chief Justice Ricardo Lewandowski, whose office said proceedings could start on 26 August and last about a week.

Brazil’s stock market and currency have strengthened since Rousseff was suspended by the Senate on 12 May as investors bet on her removal and the confirmation of Temer, who has outlined policies favouring private business.—Reuters

Security heightened as Pope visits namesake’s church in central Italy

ASSISI (Italy) — Pope Francis visited the birthplace of the Franciscan order in central Italy on Thursday amid some of the tightest security ever seen on a papal trip, in the wake of a string of militant attacks across Europe.

The pope’s brief afternoon trip to Assisi, in central Italy, took place a day after Italian police announced they had increased security around the Vatican and religious sites in Rome. It was not immediately clear if the heightened security in Rome and Assisi was prompted by last week’s murder of a Catholic priest in a French church. A Vatican spokesman said he was not aware of any specific threats against the pope.

Police put a three-ruled security perimeter around the basilica of St. Mary of the Angels in the lower quarter of Assisi, requiring most people to walk the last few blocks inescaping heat.

They placed large concrete barricades at the entrances of the perimeter, apparently to thwart any attacks similar to the one in Nice, France, last month when a 31-year-old Tunisian drove his truck into a crowd, killing 84 people. Thousands of people, including journalists, were checked two or three times as they approached the basilica the pope visited and those allowed to enter had to show photo identification matching names on tickets.

Pope Francis, 79, who said at the start of his trip to Poland last week that it was wrong to equate Islam with violence, met the Imam of the nearby city of Perugia, inside the basilica.

The pope who took his name in homage to the saint most associated with peace and protection of the environment, prayed in a small church that St. Francis re-paired with his own hands in the early 13th century.

The pope’s trip took place on the 800th anniversary of the so-called “Par-don of Assisi”, a ritual St. Francis founded urging people to seek pardon for their offences to others.

St. Francis founded his order of monks in the small stone church which is now inside a huge basilica built around it in the 17th century.

Vietnamese PM urges prompt actions to deal with consequences of floods

HANOI — Vietnamese Prime Minister on Friday urged relevant agencies to have prompt actions to deal with consequences of complicated flood situation caused by Typhoon Nida in northern Viet Nam.

So far, one more person was killed by flood, increasing the number of flood victims in Viet Nam to four, Viet Nam state-run news agency cited Lao Cai Steering Committee on Natural Disaster Prevention and Control as saying.

Among the four deaths, one person was in Sa Pa town in Lao Cai province and three others were in Lao Cai Bat Xat district.

Meanwhile, seven others remain missing, including six people in Bat Xat and one person in Sa Pa.

Lao Cai authorities have been requested to deploy forces to search for the missing, arrange shelters for those whose houses were washed away by floods as well as supply necessities for local residents.

Other localities have been asked to have plans to evacuate their residents from areas with high possibilities of flash floods and landslides, according to a document by the Prime Minister.

From Tuesday to Thursday, due to impacts of Typhoon Nida, as many as 15 houses were totally collapsed while 311 others were partially damaged in Viet Nam northern and central areas. Over 160 hectares of crops were damaged, according to Central Steering Committee on Natural Disaster Prevention and Control on Friday.

Typhoon Nida made landfall at the Dapeng Peninsula in the city of Shenzhen, southern China’s Guangdong province on Tuesday. Tornado and heavy rain triggered by Typhoon Nida killed two people in Viet Nam’s Lao Cai earlier on Tuesday.

Black Lives Matter activist sues Baton Rouge police over arrest

BATON ROUGE — A prominent activist in the Black Lives Matter movement, DeRay McKesson, on Thursday sued the chief of the Baton Rouge police department and other officials over the arrests of nearly 200 demonstrators during peaceful protests about police killings.

In the federal civil rights lawsuit, which seeks class action status, McKesson and fellow protesters Kira Marrero and Gloria La Riva complained that police were unnecessarily aggressive in arresting them on 9 July.

The lawsuit covers arrests in the Louisiana capital between 6 July and 11 July. The East Baton Rouge Parish Attorney’s Office said they had no immediate comment on the lawsuit.

The activists were protesting the 5 July shooting of a black man, Alton Sterling, outside a convenience store, one of a string of high-profile police killings of black people by white officers over the past two years that were caught on video and reopened debate about race and discrimination in the United States.

McKesson, known for his activism on social media and who ran in the 2016 Democratic Party primary for mayor of his hometown of Baltimore, Maryland, said in the lawsuit that demonstrators sought to have all arrest records expunged as well as unspecified damages.

The allegations in the lawsuit include 16 violations of law by Baton Rouge police, excessive use of force, conspiracy to deprive testers of their civil rights, negligence and arrests without probable cause.

The 23-page complaint said charges of simple obstruction of a highway against nearly 200 protesters who were arrested were ultimately dropped by the local prosecutors office, though they still had to pay administrative and court fees.

“Throughout the protest, the Defendants responded in a militarised and aggressive manner,” the complaint said. “All class members now have criminal arrest records, which in this digital age could adversely affect their future employment, education, reputations, and professional licensing.”

A day after Sterling’s death, another black man, Philando Castile, was shot to death by a policeman during a traffic stop near St. Paul, Minnesota. The back-to-back killings brought out protesters nationwide but after a rally in Dallas, Texas, a gunman shot dead five police officers in an ambush. Days later, three Baton Rouge police officers were also killed in an ambush. Authorities said the shootings of officers by black gunmen were apparently in anger over the deaths of black people at the hands of police, but they were not connected to the peaceful protest movement.—Reuters

World Bank approves new safeguards criticised by some NGOs

WASHINGTON — The World Bank approved new rules on Thursday that aim to expand protections for people and the environment in projects financed by the bank while making it easier for borrowers to comply with its standards.

But the first major update to the World Bank’s safeguard policies in nearly 20 years has drawn fire from some non-profit groups for creating “loopholes” with more vague language and more reliance on borrower country laws and standards.

“The bank has effectively dismantled thirty years of environmental and social safeguards more in line with those of other multilateral development banks,” said Stephanie Fried, executive director of the Ulu Foundation, a non-profit group focused on forest preservation. World Bank President Jim Yong Kim defended the changes as a compromise that strengthens many protections while eliminating “onerous” requirements in countries whose environmental, labour and human rights standards match those of the World Bank.

The new standards, which are due to be fully implemented by 2018, will also bring the World Bank’s human rights safeguards more in line with those of other multilateral development banks.

Kim told reporters on a conference call that one key example of the changes will be increased protections for lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender communities. The bank pulled out of a $90 million loan to Uganda’s health system in 2014 after the government passed a law that imposed life sentences for certain homosexual activities and made it a crime not to report violations.

Kim said the World Bank had committed in increased funding to work with its 189 member countries to lift their own environmental and human rights safeguards to match those of the Washington-based development lender.

The new standards come at a time when the World Bank is facing new competition from the Chinese-led Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank, which announced its first loans of about $509 million in June. Kim said the World Bank could create safeguards so onerous that borrowers might be unable to comply with them, or it could allow unacceptable outcomes for poor and indigenous communities.—Reuters

Refugee crowned ‘wine queen’, as German tradition evolves

TRIER, (Germany) — A Syrian refugee has been crowned “wine queen” in Germany, winning a traditional annual honour that used to go to local young women from wine-growing families.

Winemakers in the Mosel region selected the 26-year-old Ninorta Bahno to counter growing resentment in Germany against refugees after some 1 million arrived last year.

Many wine-producing regions in Germany pick a wine queen each year, a practice that dates back to the early 20th century when they would wear folkly dirndl dresses and embody the traditional image of German womanhood.

Taking to the podium at a wine festival in Trier in a sleeveless peach-color dress and her long black hair topped by a tiara, Bahno, who fled the Syrian war three years ago with her sister, cut a very different figure. Addressing wine fans in the western German city, she thanked them “for taking me in” and said she hoped her coronation would encourage other refugees who are finding it hard to adjust to life in Germany.

“I know that as a refugee it is very difficult at first to integrate in a new country. First you have to understand the laws and traditions here, and then you have to practice them,” she said.

“Therefore I want to be an ‘ambassador’ so that I can put this into practice and integrate here in Germany, and for the other refugees.”

As wine queen, Bahno, who is training for a job at an employment office, will help publicize wine from four Mosel vineyards.

As a Christian, rather than a Muslim like the majority of Syrian refugees, she has not had to overcome a taboo on drinking alcohol, an activity most Germans see as important to their culture.

“You have to have a bit of courage to ask one of the refugees. I wanted to send a message by doing that,” Peter Terj, chairman of the Trier-Otwe wine-growers association, said.

“Lots of people say ‘we cannot manage it’, I say we, Germany, can manage it and she has managed to become an excellent wine ambassador.” — Reuters

Comic actress Lily Tomlin to get Screen Actors Guild lifetime award

NEW YORK — Lily Tomlin, one of America’s most enduring comic actresses, will receive a lifetime achievement award in January from the Screen Actors Guild (SAG), the group announced on Thursday.

Tomlin, 76, who rose to fame in 1969 through television’s “Rowan and Martin’s Laugh-In” weekly show, went on to headline movies like “Nashville,” and Broadway shows that have brought multiple Emmy and Tony awards.

SAG President Gabrielle Carteris in a statement called her “an extraordinary actress, as equally adept at narrative drama as in comedy roles. But it is through her many original characters that Lily’s creative genius fully shines.”

Tomlin, who also has two of America’s highest artistic awards with a Kennedy Center Honor and Mark Twain Humor Prize, is currently co-starring in the Netflix comedy series “Grace and Frankie” with Jane Fonda.

Tomlin will receive her lifetime achievement honour at the SAG annual awards ceremony in Los Angeles on 29 January. Previous recipients include Mary Tyler Moore, Carol Burnett, Clint Eastwood and Elizabeth Taylor. — Reuters

Clint Eastwood — Trump says ‘dumb things’ but people should ‘get over it’

LOS ANGELES — Clint Eastwood, the 86-year-old four-time Oscar winner, excoriated the current generation of Americans as weak and overly sensitive while backing Donald Trump even though the Republican presidential hopeful has “said a lot of dumb things.”

Eastwood, a prominent celebrity supporter of the Republican Party who appeared at its 2012 US presidential nominating convention, offered a harsh assessment of Americans in an interview with Esquire magazine published on Wednesday.

“He’s onto something because secretly everybody’s getting tired of political correctness, kissing up,” the acclaimed actor and director said of Trump. “That’s the kiss-ass generation we’re in right now. We’re really in a pussy generation. Everybody’s walking on eggshells.”

“We see people accusing people of being racist and all kinds of stuff. When I grew up, those things weren’t called racist,” Eastwood added.

Given the choice between Democratic presidential nominee Hillary Clinton and Trump in the 8 November election, the celebrated star of “The Good, the Bad and the Ugly” said, “That’s a tough one, isn’t it? I’d have to go for Trump? you know, ‘cause she’s declared that she’s gonna follow in Obama’s footsteps.”

In one of the most unusual speeches at a major US party convention, Eastwood four years ago addressed an empty chair used to symbolically represent President Barack Obama on stage at the Republican convention in Tampa, Florida, in a rambling denunciation of Obama.

Asked by Esquire what troubled him most, Eastwood referred to his chair speech.

“What troubles me… I guess when I did that silly thing at the Republican convention, talking to the chair,” Eastwood said.

In the interview, Eastwood made reference to the uproar in May that followed Trump’s comments accusing the judge overseeing a fraud lawsuit involving Trump University real-estate seminars of being biased against him because of Trump’s pledge to build a wall along the US-Mexican border to block illegal immigration. US District Judge Gonzalo Curiel is an American of Mexican descent.

Eastwood told Esquire that Trump was portrayed as “a racist now because he’s talked about this judge.”

“And yeah, it’s a dumb thing to say. I mean, to predicate your opinion on the fact that the guy was born to Mexican parents or something,” Eastwood said. “He’s said a lot of dumb things. So have all of them. Both sides. But everybody — the press and everybody’s going, ‘Oh, well, that’s racist,’ and they’re making a big hoodoo out of it. Just fking get over it. It’s a sad time in history.”

There were more than 100 tweets per minute about Eastwood on Twitter by Thursday afternoon. More than half of the tweets mentioning the Hollywood star were of negative sentiment, according to social media analytics firm Zoonough. — Reuters

Nathan Fillion to guest star on ‘Modern Family’

LOS ANGELES — Actors Martin Short and Nathan Fillion will make a guest appearance in the eighth season of “Modern Family.”

The casting was revealed by executive producer Steve Levitan at the Television Critics Association summer press tour, reported Deadline.

Fillion, whose ABC procedural “Castle” was canceled in May after eight seasons, will play Rainer Shine, a local weatherman who becomes entangled with the Dunphy family. Short will guest star in episode two of the upcoming season as promotional maven Merv Schechter. — PTV

New Harry Potter book breaks Australian sales record

SYDNEY — The latest installment of the hugely popular Harry Potter series has become Australia’s fastest selling book of the decade, local media reported on Friday.

More than 170,000 people have rushed to grab a copy of the two-part series book titled “Harry Potter and the Cursed Child” in the first three days of its release, said publishing house Hachette Australia.

The book which was released on 31 July by author J.K. Rowling, director John Tiffany and playwright Jack Thorne has become Australia’s fastest-selling script book since the release of Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows in 2007.

The unprecedented response to the play script has left retailers scrambling to order thousands of copies more to satisfy Hogwarts-hungry readers.

Booktopia’s head of marketing John Purcell said the online-only business sold out of the title despite placing four bulk orders, totaling more than 8,000 copies.

To date, author J.K. Rowling has sold 450 million copies of her Harry Potter seven-book series worldwide. —Xinhua
The global sporting tribunal opened the door wider to Russian dopers

RIO DE JANEIRO — A global sporting tribunal opened the door wider to Russian participation at the Rio Olympic Games on Thursday, ruling that an Olympic ban on two Russian rowers and a swimmer with histories of doping was unenforceable.

The decision, on the eve of the opening ceremony, could invite a dozen more appeals against the ban from Russian competitors, according to the tribunal’s chief, and undermines Russian arguments that the ban lacks legal justification.

“We can do an appeal in 24 hours, so anything is possible,” Matthieu Reeb, secretary-general of the Court of Arbitration for Sport (CAS), told Reuters when asked if there was enough time for other athletes to have their ban overturned.

“It’s a first step,” he said, referring to the Thursday’s rulings. “There’s now potentially a way to get through.”

In response to evidence of state-sponsored doping in Russia, the IOC last month directed sports federations to allow Russian athletes to compete only if they met certain criteria, including a clean doping past.

Dozens of athletes were later excluded.

One of the athletes who could take advantage of the new ruling is whistleblower Yulia Stepanova, who, together with her husband, ignored the Russian doping scandal by revealing the extent of the state-backed doping programme.

Stepanova had been cleared to compete by the world athletics federation, which praised her courage in the affair, but the IOC refused to allow her to run in Rio due to her own doping past.

Russian officials in Rio could not be immediately reached for comment, but earlier the head of Russia’s Olympic committee told reporters in the host city that the ban was discriminatory.

Alexander Zhukov said it was unfair Russian sports stars such as double Olympic champion pole vaulter Yelena Isinbayeva would now watch the Games from home while past doping offenders, including top U.S. runner Justin Gatlin, took to the field.

On Thursday, CAS ruled in favor of an appeal against the ban by four-times breaststroke world champion Yulia Efimova as well as rowers Anastasia Karabeshkova and Ivan Podshivalov.

Efimova had been disqualified from competing by swimming governing body FINA between October 2013 and February 2015 after testing positive for traces of the anabolic steroid DHEA.

CAS say the Olympic ban was unenforceable, saying an athlete cannot be sanctioned twice for a doping offense.

FINA will now have to decide on her eligibility.

Karabeshkova and Podshivalov also argued that they should be allowed to compete given they had already served their doping suspensions. CAS sent their case back to the International Rowing Federation to decide on their eligibility “with out delay”.

Sport has been struggling for years to reconcile calls for a harder line on drug cheats against demands for natural justice.

The IOC had to ban cheaters from the Games in 2011 with its own ‘Oka rule’ — a suspension from the next Olympics for anyone with a six-month doping ban or longer — but that was also thrown out by CAS at the time.

A similar rule by the British Olympic Association to ban the nation’s drugs cheats from Olympic participation for life was also rejected by CAS ahead of the 2012 London Games, allowing sprinter Dwain Chambers to race.

Several Olympic teams have competitors, who have been sanctioned for anti-doping rule violations in the past, in their ranks, including Gallin and their teammate LaShawn Merritt.

Brazil held goaless in exciting opener

RIO DE JANEIRO — Brazil failed to make a winning start despite home advantage, a multi-million dollar strike force and a highly rated front three of Neymar, Gabriel Barbosa, the Santos striker, and Gabriel Jesus, and 19-year-old winger Raheem Sterling to put home unhappy after the second game of the day ended goaless.

That result was not the only surprise as their great rivals Argentina lost 2-0 to Portugal. It was the South Americans’ first Olympic reverse in 13 games. Argentines were unbeaten in winning gold during their last two appearances in 2004 and 2008.

Holders Mexico drew 2-2 with Germany in Salvador, with all four goals coming in the second half.

Later in the day, South Korea put eight goals past debutants Fiji. Ryu Seungwoo got a hat trick in the demolition in Salvador, with seven of the eight goals coming in the second half.

The goals also came in the second half at the same venue earlier in the evening, when Mexico drew 2-2 with Germany.

In Thursday’s final match, Nigeria beat Japan 5-4 with Oghenekaro Etebo grabbing four goals. Earlier on Thursday, Iraq and Denmark kicked the tournament off with a 0-0 draw at a mostly empty National Stadium.

The first goals in the competition came soon after in Rio, where Honduras beat Algeria 3-2 in an enthralling match.

The opening ceremony for the Rio Games took place on Friday but the men’s soccer tournament began 24 hours earlier, a day after the women’s soccer teams began their quest for gold. Twelve women’s teams are in Brazil, along with 16 men’s sides.

The competition is being played in Rio and six other cities.
