Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, Senior General discuss ways to move peace process forward

STATE Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and Commander-in-Chief of Defense Services Senior General Min Aung Hlaing held talks yesterday on ways to push forward the country’s peace process.

During the meeting at a hall of the President’s Office in Nay Pyi Taw, they discussed matters related to ending armed conflicts in Kachin State and northern Shan State, national reconciliation, internal peace, stability and the rule of law and holding the Union Peace Conference—21st Century Panglong.

Also present were Deputy Commander-in-Chief of Defense Services Commander-in-Chief (Army) Vice Senior General Soe Win, Union Minister Lt-Gen Ye Aung, Attorney-General of the Union U Tun Tun Oo, Chairman of Peace Commission Dr Tin Myo Win, Lt-Gen Mya Tun Oo of the Office of Commander-in-Chief (Army) and Judge Advocate-General Lt-Gen Soe Htut.

Before the meeting with General Min Aung Hlaing, Daw Aung San Suu Kyi announced that the 21st Century Union Peace Conference will kick off on 31 August. Daw Aung San Suu Kyi is the chairperson of the Central Committee for holding the Union Peace Conference-21st Century Panglong. Speaking on the occasion to the committee, she emphasized the need for continued coordination on preparatory works being carried out by the government side.

The meeting of the Central Committee was held at the Presidential Palace in Nay Pyi Taw. During the meeting, those present reported on progress in preparations for holding the conference and work to be done by respective committees.

The meeting was attended by the Union ministers, central committee and working committee members and officials.

The Central Committee on holding the 21st Century Union Peace Conference was formed on 3 August with the release of Notification 57/2016 by the President’s Office, comprising the State Counsellor as chairperson, Union Minister U Kyaw Tint Swe as vice chairman, the Union ministers and deputy ministers as members, Deputy Minister U Khin Maung Tin as secretary and Retired Lt-Gen U Khan Zaw Oo and Director-General U Zaw Than Thin of the Union Government Office as joint secretaries.

Under the Central Committee, Working Committees led by the Union ministers and deputy ministers were also formed with departmental officials.—Myanmar News Agency
Debate on flood mitigation and water scarcity continues

AMYOTHA Hluttaw representatives continued a debate yesterday on a proposal calling for a comprehensive plan for flooding that occurs annually in the delta and coastal regions, a nationwide water shortage during the dry season and restoring the rivers that once benefited the people.

Daw Ei Ei Pyone of Ayeyawady Region Constituency 8 called for dredging operations as flooding is directly tied to dry creeks and rivers and stressed the need for a special fund to implement flood mitigation measures.

In his discussion, Dr Khun Win Thaung of Kachin State Constituency 11 emphasized the need to control logging and reforestation, calling for an initiative encouraging everyone to plant at least 10 trees a year as a bound duty of every citizen.

The MP stressed the need for punitive actions to be taken against the dumping of gold mine waste in rivers and streams and silt dredging for proper flow of water to reduce the risk of flooding.

Likewise, Daw Shwe Shwe Sein Latt of Bago Region Constituency 3 expressed her support for the proposal, suggesting an urgent need to focus on a national water law. Dr Win Myint of Ayeyawady Region Constituency 10 said that deforestation is the root cause of landslides, flooding and dried-up rivers and streams, pointing out that Myanmar is ranked third-worst for deforestation in the world, after Brazil and Indonesia.

He highlighted the importance of strict adherence to the laws protecting the forests, international technology cooperation for development of rivers and water resources and increasing the durability of dams and reservoirs to prevent floods.

Moreover, the MP called for mobile water supply systems to relieve water scarcity in the dry season and improving the readiness of the ministry concerned for drought response. —Myanmar News Agency

Pyithu Hluttaw representatives query Union Minister on education matters

THE Pyithu Hluttaw session entered its tenth day, with parliamentarians asking the Union minister for education.

During yesterday’s session, the Union Minister for Education Dr Myo Thein Gyi responded to the questions on promotion of the country’s education sector.

On the opening of a technical high school or a training school in North Okkalapa Township, the Union minister replied that the ministry’s Department of Technical and Vocational Education planned to conduct short-term vocational training courses at Handicraft School on Dhamma Thuka street in Wai bargi Moshie ward in the township.

Training programs have been launched for course instructors under the assistance of the Asian Development Bank and Total E&P Myanmar, said the Union minister, adding that the short-term vocational training courses will be opened following the completion of major repair works for the building and installation of necessary equipment.

Regarding three schools in Phhasuang Township, the Union minister quoted geologists as saying that two primary schools and a middle school (branch) in three villages in the township were classified into a risk zone following a landslide last year.

He went to say that risk zone students of the three schools were moved to schools in other villages and new school buildings were built in the villages for better convenience to the students.

As villages at risk of landslide were relocated to safer places and new school buildings were built, reopening of the three schools needs the remark of the Kayah State government, added the Union minister.

Also during yesterday’s session, a proposal calling on the Union government to allow budgets for construction of staff quarters at basic education schools in rural areas was put forward to the parliament in conjunction with submission of another proposal calling for a policy on assessment for learning and teaching at the basic education level. —Myanmar News Agency

Myanmar Railways to upgrade five train stations, improve services

Ko Moe

MYANMA Railways will transform five train stations into model ones and provide rail commuters with better services, said MR’s General Manager (Lower Myanmar) U Tun Aung Thin yesterday.

According to the MR, the targeted five train stations are Yangon Central Railway Station and Insein, Bago, Mingaladon and Danyingone railway stations.

Railway staff have been given training to provide better service to the train passengers, said the general manager, adding that works are also underway to improve infrastructure along with a capacity building program.

Stressing the convenience of train travel, the MR organized a two-day training course at its office in Yangon yesterday in cooperation with the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA) following a similar course in Nay Pyi Taw on 3-5 August.

Mr. Mitsuo Higashi, policy adviser to the MR, expressed his view that better services are needed for passenger satisfaction, saying that it is required to ensure security in the railway yard and develop infrastructure and human resources for the railway transport service.

Yangon’s circle line is 46km long and has 38 stations. More than 73,000 passengers depend on rail transport every day in Yangon.
Rakhine govt announces multi-sector development project

THE Rakhine State government has announced it has begun to draw up a project for social and economic development across six sectors within the state.

The decision to draw up such a multi-sector project for regional social and economic development comes from discussion on the issue during a multi-stakeholder workshop convened during the first week of August between the Rakhine State government, independent consultants, civil society organizations and bodies of the United Nations.

U Kyaw Aye Thein, Rakhine State Finance, Revenue, Planning and Commerce Minister, revealed the six sectors prioritized for inclusion in the project are agriculture and livestock industries, environmental protection, capacity development in education and healthcare, transportation and infrastructure; tourism; development of small and medium-enterprises; and the emergence of industrial zones.

“Our Rakhine State government has selected six sectors for which development will be prioritized,” said U Kyaw Aye Thein.

The drawing up of the project will reportedly be based upon three policy criteria: proportionate development of the entire region; accordance with existing union-level social and economic development policy; and the prohibition of technology or enterprises which could incite regional antagonism.

Concerted efforts to compile the aforementioned project will reportedly be made until the end of this October by the Rakhine State government, together with representatives of INGO Renaissance Institute and the Rakhine Thahaya Association.—Myitmakaha News Agency

USDP to submit peace policy to upcoming Union Peace Conference

Thein Ko Lwin

THE Union Solidarity and Development Party will submit its peace policy to the upcoming government-led Union Peace Conference, said USDP Chairman U Thein Sein while addressing a workshop on National Reconciliation and Internal Peace in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday.

The USDP’s stance on peace implementation is set to be announced at the Union Peace Conference following discussions among party members from regions and states, added the party leader, expressing hope that the peace policy will assist the country’s peace process.

Also present at the workshop to last for four days were central committee members, Hluttaw representatives and party members.

In his address, U Thein Sein stressed the need of taking balanced measures while building a federal Union, highlighting the importance of peace in the country.

According to the sources, peace initiatives that emerge from the workshop will seek approval at the USDP’s third national convention on 20 August.

Detained Myanmar workers arrive Yangon from Malaysia

Thura Lwin (ECO)

THE first batch of detained Myanmar citizens in Malaysia returned to Yangon yesterday via chartered flight under agreements of the Kanbawzah’s Brighter Future Myanmar Foundation-BFM.

The group comprising 138 Myanmar citizens were welcomed at the Yangon International Airport by officials of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Ministry of Home Affairs, Ministry of Labour, Immigration and Population, the Brighter Future Myanmar Foundation and their families.

The foundation also provided K100,000 to each migrant worker. The remaining Myanmar citizens will also be brought back home by a chartered flight, according to BFM.

According to sources, 2,294 Myanmar citizens were detained for various reasons in 11 camps in Malaysia. From 2013 to 2016, KBZ’s BFM Foundation also sponsored the return of more than 3,000 workers from Malaysia, more than 500 Myanmar fishermen from India and 510 trafficked Myanmar fishermen from Indonesia.

So far, a total of more than 4,200 Myanmar citizens have been brought back home by BFM.

Early struggle for democracy remembered in Yangon, Mandalay

Ko Moe/Aung Thant Khaung

Commemorative ceremonies for the 28th Anniversary ‘8888’ Democracy Movement took place at Mahabandoola Park in front of the City Hall in Yangon and Dhammasala Hall in Mandalay yesterday.

“We are here to honor all those who laid down their lives for the country’s struggle for democracy, which is remembered today,” said U Min Ko Naing of the Peace and Open Society.

Activists, student unions, civil society organizations and interfaith groups read out messages, shared accomplishments and laid wreaths at the entrance to Mahabandoola Park at the ceremony.

In the afternoon, cutouts of the number 8 were laid across the floor at the park in commemoration of the fallen heroes of the ‘8888’ uprising. Likewise, a similar ceremony was held in Mandalay, with activists and various organizations offering prayers to the monks, reading out commemorative messages on the 28th Anniversary ‘8888’ Democracy Movement and holding political talks.

Although full representative government has not been realized in Myanmar, democracy is on track, said U Min Htet Nyen Chan, who acted as MC at the commemorative ceremony in Mandalay.
Survey aims to record wildlife in Hukaung Valley Tiger Reserve

A survey will soon begin to observe and document tigers and gibbons in the Hukaung Valley Tiger Reserve this year by a local team working for conservation of wildlife in the sanctuary, a spokesperson of the team said.

With the assistance of the Global Environment Facility (GEF), the systematic research programme will begin at the reserve areas located in Nanyau Township in Kachin State, focusing on documenting the behavior of elephants, tigers and gibbons and other biodiversity with the use of modern techniques.

Under the new scheme, well-trained staff will carry out camera trapping activities once or twice a month, with plans to capture audio of gibbons by using a sound-recording system. According to 2013-2014 figures, between 72 and 82 tigers are at the 2,494-square mile wide Hukaung Valley Tiger Reserve situated in Hukaung Valley nearTanai, a township in Myitkyina District of Kachin State.

It is the natural habitat for nearly 40 kinds of mammals including tigers, leopards, elephants, bears and different species of monkeys, seven species of snakes, six species of frogs, over 370 species of birds, 46 species of freshwater fish, turtles, butterflies and more than 13,000 species of plants. — Zar Zar

Elephant hunter arrested by forest police

A 45-YEAR-OLD man on Saturday was arrested by the forest authorities in Ngaputaw Township when he and his colleagues were caught cutting up a dead elephant, apparently to sell to Chinese merchants.

After a tip-off, a police team raided a site in the Myittaya forest reserve where they discovered four people cutting up the dead wildlife.

Police collected skins, bones, ivory and meat of the elephant as well as two rifles and related equipment from the scene.

Apart from Soe Naing (aka Maung Pha), the rest of hunters escaped from the police. Police are still investigating the cases in an effort to arrest the three men—Zaw Myo, 27, Maung Maung, 33 and Maung Maw, 29, who are still on the run.

According to the investigators, the hunters mostly sell the elephant products to Chinese merchants in Mandalay, who export the wildlife products to China via Muse, a border town.

Illegally harvested hardwood seized in Sagaing

OVER one tonne of hardwood was seized by local authorities on 6 August in Yinmabin Township in Sagaing Region.

Acting on a tip-off, a joint task force, including officials from the township forest department and police, began an investigation in the northern part of a creek near Panmahton Village in Tarwa Village-tract on Saturday evening.

They discovered ten illegally harvested Padauk logs weighing 1.2694 tonnes, which have been seized by the township forest department.

Police are still investigating the case to find and arrest the owner of the restricted forest products, who will face charges under the existing forest law. — Tun Ko Ko (Yinmabin)

Hundreds of stimulant tablets seized on Panglaung-Nay Pyi Taw road

STIMULANT tablets worth about K2.4 million were found in four packets containing 200 tablets each in a vehicle on Panglaung-Nay Pyi Taw road on Sunday, according to the Panglaung Township police.

Police said that six people, including Aung Kyaw Thant, the driver of the car, were arrested after an inspection of the vehicle revealed the seized stimulant tablets hidden under the seats.

Charges were filed against the driver and five others, police said. — Thet Ko Lwin

Nine people arrested for gambling

NINE people, including a woman and an elderly man, were arrested on Saturday while they were gambling in Hsakha Village in Myingyan, a township in Mandalay Region.

310 killed, 1,684 injured in traffic accidents in July nationwide

LAST month, 310 people were killed and 1,684 others were injured in traffic accidents across the country, according to official figures recently released by the Myanmar Police Force.

The figures show that the number of road accidents in July reached 1,106 cases nationwide.

Yangon Region had the most accidents with 218 cases, Mandalay Region was the next highest with 170 cases, followed by Bago Region with 154 cases, Sagaing Region with 121 cases, Ayeyawady Region with 117 cases, Magway Region with 107 cases and Mon State with 52 cases.

Kachin, Kayah, Kayin, Chin, Mon, Rakhine and Shan states, Tanintharyi Region and the capital Nay Pyi Taw all had fewer than 50 cases.

Among states and regions, Mandalay Region topped the chart with 64 deaths, followed by Yangon Region with 54 deaths and Sagaing Region with 36 deaths. — Shinwe Myint Oo (Shwepyitha)
Growsers request relief on two per cent tax levied on vegetable exports

THE Myanmar Fruit, Flower and Vegetable Producers and Exporters Association (MFVPEA) has requested the revision of a two per cent of advanced income tax levied on vegetable exports. “We vegetable exporters have to pay two per cent of advanced income tax in the border areas. If we carry the vegetables with 17-tonne truck, we have to pay for 17 tonnes of loads although they are not 17 tonnes in weight. The vegetable merchants are also faced with losses of the vegetables. We have to pay advanced income tax even if we have not earned any money,” said U Kyaw Thu, the secretary of Myanmar Fruit, Flower and Vegetable Producers and Exporter Association. “We have requested to pay income tax under the name of the growers. If it is not allowed to pay, we want the authorities to relax two per cent of advanced income tax and we want them to levy a tax depending on the actual income of the whole year.”

Currently, the vegetable merchants have to pay two per cent of advanced income tax at the department concerned. When they pay income tax for the whole year, deducting a relief, two per cent of advanced income tax will be reimbursed. The association organizes the vegetables expo and conducts technical awareness campaigns of the agriculture.

They also go on inspection tours to the farms, making the growers connect with the businesses.

Permits only for family use cars to be issued for locally produced cars

WHEN locally produced cars are deregistered at the Road Transportation Administration Department, slips or import permits only for family use cars will be given, said an official from the Road Transportation Administration Department. Some owners of locally manufactured cars are observing without making theirs deregister because they want to gain an import permit for their trucks.

Among locally produced Jeeps, Shan Star and Dagon Jeeps are in demand because of their reasonable price and quality. There are some dishonest owners who deregister their trucks and double cabs as damaged cars, and so, slips for commercially used vehicles were granted instead of slips for family use cars. The slip price has risen to over Ks1 million. The slips for vehicles used for business purposes will be issued when the damaged cars are deregistered. Locally produced Jeeps, vans, station wagons and double cabs are entitled to be granted slips. — 200

Trade value through Muse border trade camp on the decline this FY

TRADE value through the Muse border trade camps has been on the steep decline, it has been learnt from the statistics of the Ministry of Commerce.

Currently, the trade value via the 105th Mile Muse border gate has amounted to over US$13 million. At the same period last year, about US$47 million in trade value was attained, according to the statistics.

The decline in trade value is attributed to the confiscation of sugar and rice by Chinese authorities, who have recently began enforcing the ban on the export of sugar and rice through border camps. Since then, the export of rice and sugar to China has been suspended. The action has dramatically slowed activity in Muse, where, in the past, long queues of trucks could be seen arriving and leaving. As a result of the suspended trade, the truck drivers, merchants and labourers have suffered financially. This is why trade value through the border areas has slumped this year, said a rice merchant from Muse commodity depot.

Trade value at the other border trade camps between Myanmar and China — Lweje, Chin Shwe Haw and Kamppike Tee — are over US$240 million. The Muse border trade camp is one of the largest trade camps in Myanmar. — GNLM

Plaspalum Atratum and Mombasa Guineu grass varieties to be imported from Thailand

TWO grass varieties, Plaspalum Atratum and Mombasa Guineu, will be imported from Thailand to help develop the dairy farming businesses, said U Khin Hlaing, the chairman of the Myanmar Dairy Association.

Plaspalum Atratum can be grown in a variety of soil, including well-drained areas. Mombasa Guineu can be grown under the shady trees. These grass varieties can produce more milk for milk cows, and result in a higher protein content. This is the reason why the grass seeds are imported. About five kilograms of grass seeds are required for an acre, but only a kilogram of grass seeds is required if these are systematically cultivated. A kilogram of grass seeds sells for Ks11,000, it is learnt from Myanmar Dairy Association. — 200
Indonesian group behind Singapore plot has ‘dozens of members’

JAKARTA — Indonesian authorities said on Monday several suspected Islamist radicals arrested last week on suspicion of plotting to attack neighbouring Singapore were part of a group that has “dozens of members” and has been active for two years.

Counter-terrorism forces arrested six men on Friday on Batam island, just to the south of Singapore. The arrests came amid mounting concern about the spread of Islamist ideology in Indonesia, the world’s largest Muslim-majority nation.

National police spokesman Boy Rafli Amar said the group mostly recruited members online and was taking instructions from Bahrun Naim, an Indonesian who has joined Islamic State (IS) in Syria.

“The GRD group has been in operation for two years and has dozens of members,” Amar told a news conference in Jakarta, referring to the group named after its leader Gigih Rahmat Dewa.

“This group is an extension of Bahrun Naim’s vision and mission. We cannot underestimate them.”

Authorities in Indonesia say dozens of men have gone to join IS in the Middle East. Security officials fear that IS leaders are now instructing people online on how to mount attacks and assemble bombs and weapons. Authorities say they are working to block radical online content.

Following the arrests on Friday, Singapore’s home affairs minister, K. Shanmugam, said the men had planned a rocket attack on Marina Bay, a central entertainment area with a waterfront promenade, giant ferris wheel and a swanky casino resort. Police seized bomb-making materials, guns and arrows from suspects’ homes in Batam. But, police said, there were no signs that a rocket attack was anything more than a plan.

“There was no specific time frame for them to attack Singapore, but that was their target,” Amar said. The vast majority of Indonesians practice a moderate form of Islam. The country saw a spate of attacks from homegrown militants in the 2000s, including a bombing at a nightclub on the holiday island of Bali that killed 202 people. — Reuters

Dozens of Philippine officials surrender after being linked to drugs trade

MANILA — Dozens of Philippine government and police officials turned themselves in on Monday, a day after President Rodrigo Duterte linked them to the drugs trade, stepping up a war on narcotics that has killed hundreds since he took office in June.

More than 400 suspected drug dealers have been killed by police across the Philippines since Duterte took over, officials say. Broadcaster ABS-CNN put the number at over 800, though this includes executions by anonymous vigilantes.

On Monday, 27 mayors and 31 police officers, including a colonel, went to the national police office in the capital, Manila, to clear their names, fearing the president’s order to hunt them down if they failed to surrender within 24 hours.

Several local officials reported to regional police offices to beat the deadline set by Duterte, who won elections in May on a single platform of fighting crime and drugs.

On Sunday, he identified about 160 officials in a name-and-shame campaign.

“I want to change,” a Cebu-based businessman tagged as a top-level drug trafficker told reporters after he met national police chief Ronald dela Rosa.

Nicknamed “the punisher” and “Duterte Harry” for his brutal fight on crime, Duterte has hit back at activists incensed by the surge in the killings of suspected drug traffickers.

Alarmed human rights groups have urged the United Nations to condemn the rise in extrajudicial killings. The Philippine Senate is to hold a legislative inquiry.

Dela Rosa reprimanded the police officers on Duterte’s list, threatening to kill them if they continued to protect drug traders and resell seized drugs. At one point, he challenged them to a fistfight.

“I am mad with what is happening,” Dela Rosa said in a speech to local officials and police. “I am ashamed. We should be the ones arresting these people, but we are protecting them. I will kill you if you will not change.”

All police officers linked to the drug trade were disarmed, investigated and could face criminal and administrative cases if there was strong evidence, said national police spokesman Dionardo Carino.

“They will be accorded due process,” he added.

Besides local officials and police officers, Duterte’s list included two retired police generals, soldiers, paramilitary members, judges and a former lawmaker. — Reuters

Suicide bomber kills at least 63 at Pakistan hospital

QUETTA — A suicide bomber in Pakistan killed at least 63 people and wounded dozens more in an attack on mourners gathered at a hospital in Quetta, according to officials in the violence-plagued southwestern province of Baluchistan.

The bomber struck as more than 100 mourners, mostly lawyers and journalists, crowded into the emergency department to celebrate the death of a prominent lawyer who had been shot into the main court complex, senior police official Nadeem Shah told Reuters.

He was the president of Baluchistan Bar Association.

They were targeted as they gathered outside the emergency department in Quetta’s Lady Health Center Hospital, where the explosion occurred, said reporters that at least 63 people had been killed, with more than 50 wounded, as the casualty toll spiked from initial estimates.

“There are many wounded, so the death toll could rise,” said Rehmat Saleh Baloch, the provincial health minister.

Television footage showed scenes of chaos, with panicked people fleeing through debris as smoke filled the hospital corridors.

The motive behind the attack was unclear and no group had yet claimed responsibility, but several lawyers have been targeted during a recent spate of killings in Quetta.

The latest victim, Bilal Anwar Kasi, was shot and killed while on his way to the city’s main court complex, senior police official Nadeem Shah told Reuters.

“We accept the result of the referendum and will wait and see what happens in the 2017 election,” said Sataporn Prompapan, chairman of the United Front for Democracy Against Dictatorship.

“We will decide our next steps soon,” he said.

Opposition to the junta was muted ahead of the vote in Thailand’s northeast, once a hotbed of resistance.

A second ballot question that would allow the Senate to elect a prime minister jointly with the lower house was also winning by a wide margin.

“Although many suspected that the new charter could undermine their previously held democratic rights, the perceived risk of greater political uncertainty and economic instability, if the constitution had been voted down, was far less appealing,” said John Marrett, Research Analyst Asia at the Economist Intelligence Unit. Interviews with military officers showed the military’s ambition was to make future coups unnecessary by weakening political parties and obliging future governments to follow a 20-year national development plan set by the army.

Japan’s emperor speaks to public in remarks suggesting he wants to abdicate

TOKYO — Japanese Emperor Akihito, 82, in a rare video address to the public on Monday, said he worried that age may make it difficult for him to fully carry out his duties, remarks widely seen as suggesting he wants to abdicate.

Public broadcaster NHK reported last month that Akihito, who has had heart surgery and been treated for prostate cancer, wanted to step down in a few years — which would be unprecedented in modern Japan.

Once considered divine, the emperor is defined in the constitution as a symbol of the state and the unity of the people. He has no political power.

Akihito stopped short of saying outright that he wanted to abdicate, which could be interpreted as interfering in politics.

“When I consider that my fitness level is gradually declining, I am worried that it may become difficult for me to carry out my duties as the symbol of the state with my whole being, as I have done until now,” he said.

Akihito took the throne after the death in 1989 of his father, Hirohito, in whose name Japan fought World War II. He has sought to soothe the wounds of the war in Asia during trips overseas and tried to bring the monarchy closer to the people.

Akihito feels strongly that an emperor’s full performance of his duties is integral to his constitutional role, experts say.

Opinion polls show the vast majority of ordinary Japanese sympathize with the emperor’s desire to retire, but such a step would need changes to the law.

Akihito has been cutting back on official duties, with his heir, 56-year-old Crown Prince Naruhito, taking his place. There were limits to how far that could go, he said on Monday.

The emperor also seemed to cast doubt on whether it was appropriate to use an existing system that would allow Naruhito to take over as regent if his father were incapacitated.

“Even in such cases (of a regency), however, it does not change the fact that the emperor continues to be emperor until the end of his life, even though he is unable to fully carry out his duties as the emperor,” Akihito said.

Prime Minister Shinzo Abe told reporters that, in view of the emperor’s age and the burden of his official duties, it was necessary to consider what steps could be taken.

The idea of abdication has sparked opposition from Abe’s conservative base, which worries debate of the imperial family’s future could widen to the topic of letting women inherit and pass on the throne, anathema to traditionalists.

Thailand, seeking stability, approves military constitution

BANGKOK — A democratically elected government will take power in Thailand at the earliest by December 2017, a senior Thai official said Monday, after the country endorsed a military-backed constitution paving the way for a general election.

Thais handed the junta of Prime Minister Prayuth Chan-ocha and military officers showed the December vote will be a milestone in the army’s bid to extend its hold on power through the constitution.

A literature review of governance reveals that governance, which is widely defined as the traditions and institutions that determine how authority is exercised in a country, matters to economic development (Kaufmann et al: 2000). Several cross-national empirical studies have found a positive relationship between the quality of institutions and governance structures and economic growth. In this regard, it is worth recalling that economists, development experts and international policy-makers have reached a consensus that good governance is a pre-requisite for sustainable development.

According to their assumptions, if states can ensure efficient markets especially through enforcement of property rights, rule of law, reduction of corruption and commitment not to expropriate, private investors will drive the economic development. This approach implicitly stresses the priority to develop market-enhancing governance, and is nowadays a dominating paradigm supported by international development and financial agencies (North: 1990).

There is no doubt that market is important to foster and enable the economic development, which is likely to be faster if market that mediates allocation of resources becomes more efficient. Economists agree that governance is one of the major factors that explain the divergence in performance across the developing nations. The differences of view among economists when it comes to governance are to do first, with the types of state capacities that make up the significant governance capacities needed to accelerate the growth and secondly, with the importance of governance in relation to other factors in the earlier stages of development. On the first issue, the empirical support for this argument usually comes from cross-sectional data on governance in developing countries that generally indicate that countries with better governance performed better (Khan: 2006). In contrast, institutional economists base their argument on case studies of rapid growth, which is associated with governance capacities.

Such being the case, it can be said that although good governance is one of the necessary conditions for economic development of a state, it is not the solitary and sufficient condition because there are many other factors which are equally important to promote economic development.

E very year in the month of August people around the world get reminded of atomic bombings of two Japanese cities, Hiroshima and Nagasaki during the final stage of the World War II. The second World War ended abruptly in August, 1945, killing nearly 130,000 people by means of dropping bombs which remain the only use of nuclear weapons for warfare in history.

On August 6, the United States dropped an atomic bomb by the name of Little Boy on the city of Hiroshima. The then President Harry S. Truman called for Japan’s surrender 16 hours later; Japanese response to this ultimatum was to ignore it. Three days later, on August 9, the U.S dropped a second atomic bomb named Fat Man on the city of Nagasaki.

On August 15, six days after the bombing of Nagasaki and the Soviet Union’s declaration of war, Japan announced its surrender to the Allies.

The bombings’ role in Japan’s surrender and their ethical justification are still debated. Some critics argue most of the dead were civilian in both cities, although Hiroshima had a sizable garrison; others defend the Second World War ended suddenly, thereby saving millions of human lives and got a good lesson for future generations.

A United Nations Peacekeeping Training Course, a programme involving the Myanmar Tatmadaw (Defence Services) and Australia, was opened in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday, with an address by Deputy Commander-in-Chief of Defence Services Commander-in-Chief (Army) Vice Senior General Soe Win.

In his address, the Vice Senior General expressed thanks for cooperation extended by Australian officials to conduct the training programme and called on trainees to strive for producing beneficial results. The Australian Ambassador to Myanmar also spoke on the occasion.

The training programme is scheduled to last for 10 days until 18 August, with the aim of enabling Myanmar Tatmadaw’s officers to learn about the UN peacekeeping processes, exchange views between trainees and trainers and strengthen bilateral relations between the two Defence Services.

MoHT hopeful tourism law will ease industry headaches

PLANS are being made to allow the Myanmar Hotel and Tourism Law to be enacted before the current year is out, according to the Ministry of Hotels and Tourism.

“There should be laws [in place] for any place or job; sectors are weak without them. Since this law is for development of the tourism sector, it’s a law that will be beneficial as it has been drawn up to safeguard entrepreneurs, hoteliers as well as the government,” said U Myint Htway, official of the Ministry of Hotels and Tourism.

The legislation was presented to the Attorney-General’s Office in June and will continue to be submitted to the President’s Office as well as government departments concerned. After this is complete, it will then reportedly be submitted through the ranks of the Hluttaw.

“The enacting of this law will allow for current irresolvable grievances to be resolved. Presently, there’s nothing which can be used to resolve something that comes up with a foreigner or between Myanmar nationals (within the tourism sector); we have no legal support to back us up. The passing of the law will allow us to take legal action. It’s better to have [the law] than be without it,” said U Nyi Nyi Naing, a tour guide.

Myanmar boasts 1,355 licensed hotels - comprising more than 52,600 rooms - together with 227 licensed domestic and foreign tour operators and 636 licensed tour guides, the records of the Ministry of Hotels and Tourism have revealed.

Fisheries research plans to commence this November

FISHERIES research will be conducted in Myanmar’s territorial waters in November and December of this year, said U Tun Win Myint, the head of the Yangon Region Fisheries Department.

With the assistance of a Norwegian research vessel, the scheme is likely to be commenced after the wet season in order to compile statistics of endangered fish species and to help reverse decreasing fish resources.

A similar survey was made in 2013 November along the Ayeyawady, Rakhine and Taninthayi coastal areas with the help of the Norwegian government.

The study finds fish resources have declined 43 per cent, including 33 per cent of deep-sea fishes and 10 per cent of fish living below surface water, compared to past surveys made in 1979-1980.

During last year’s open fishing season, the country extracted 2.8 million tonnes of sea fish.

The number exceeded the past maximum figures of fish production. The authorities allowed over 600 fishing vessels to operate in the closed season last year. Only 40 per cent of fishing vessel applications have been granted this year. The government has designated a closed season (between June and August) since 1993 to protect the country’s fisheries resources from extinction.

According to suggestions made by the Food and Agriculture Organization, based on research conducted between 1979 and 2015, Myanmar should catch at most 100,000 tonnes of sea fish per year.

Letter to the Editor

I and other readers were attracted by the article titled “Ostracism does not work for re-integration of ex-inmates” written by Khin Maung Aye in the opinion column of the GNLM appeared on 03.08.2016.

Khin Maung Aye has pointed out the improved policy to the inmates and management in the correctional facility in Myanmar. He especially highlighted the news about the inmates who have passed the matriculation in 2015-2016 academic year and their teachers were honored on 30th July. It was a very striking news indeed. The writer also presented the present policy towards prisoners and the policy of punishment are totally different from the past. He also stressed the need to have the correct outlook towards the jail-returnees those who have completely served the terms.

Khin Maung Aye’s constructive perspective and analysis on the inmates in prisons in Myanmar are rather agreeable and acceptable. He has urged the communities to welcome the re-integration of ex-inmates instead of ostracizing as even the incumbent government is helping and changing its policy towards the former inmates.

I am doubtless to agree to Khin Maung Aye’s opinion because the inmates will have chance to get access to education (any further education), vocation and livelihood only after they have completely served the terms or they have been released on clemency. Even when they are still in the prison, they are allowed to learn or sit for the matriculation examinations conducted by the government and they can do their religious rituals that they profess. For examples, the inmates who profess Buddhist can meditate with the guidance of Buddhist monks in the prison. Actually these opportunities are given to them according to the present policy laid down by the present government. Thus, they would be able to reintegrate with their local communities or societies after their wrong behaviors were corrected during the terms they served. People from their communities should also welcome with helping hands and optimistic attitude towards them. Normally the people ostracize the ex-inmates for fearing that the ex-inmates might give them some trouble in the society. Therefore, the ex-inmates need to commit that they will serve for the interest of the community, people and their families in socially and morally acceptable manner and behavior so that the trust can be built between the community and the ex-inmates concerned. This is the best way for the ex-inmates to reintegrate with their communities concerned.

If an ex-inmate reverts to the previous type, he or she ought to pay for his or her sin. Nobody will excuse him or her again in the society concerned.

As we all know, poverty, misuse of drug and alcohol, ignorance of law, criminal behavior, making friends with thugs, extreme anger, inordinate greed, lust, blindness and cruel-mindedness instigate the men and women to commit crimes or violate the laws in all societies. I firmly believe we humans should avoid or control all extreme emotions and behavior in life.

Trump to outline economic policy as he seeks to regain momentum

NEW YORK — Republican presidential nominee Donald Trump on Monday will outline an economic policy that includes tax help for working families in a major speech in Detroit as he tries to regain momentum after a series of self-inflicted wounds.

Trump is scheduled to speak at noon EDT (1600 GMT) to the Detroit Economic Club, according to The Detroit News, which said Trump’s aides told the newspaper the speech will focus on trade, taxes, immigration and regulation. The club, whose members are area business leaders, is a traditional venue for political candidates to discuss their economic views.

The Detroit speech will be Trump’s first on the economy since announcing a 13-member team of economic advisers last week. It also comes after he slogged through perhaps his worst week as a candidate, getting entangled in a fight with the Muslim parents of a four-year-old boy who was cut by a razor blade at their New Jersey school.

A Trump campaign aide, who asked not to be identified, said Trump’s economic plan will lessen the tax burden on parents who pay for childcare because “we don’t want it to be an economic disadvantage to have children.”

Trump also will propose stronger protections for American intellectual property and a temporary moratorium on new regulations, the aide said. Trump’s plans also will include proposing a 15 per cent corporate tax rate, an idea that is on his website. The current federal rate is 35 per cent.

Members of Trump’s advisory group shared their views on policy with senior Trump aides on Sunday in a conference call, said banker Stephen Calk, one of the members who took part.

Calk, described Trump’s vision for taxes as the biggest tax revolution since President Ronald Reagan in 1986. He said the plan was to lower the corporate tax burden and encourage US companies with operations abroad to repatriate profits at a reduced tax rate.

The current corporate rate is 35 per cent and Republicans have long sought to reduce it. Trump’s rough ride last week, plus a boost in support for Democratic candidate Hillary Clinton after she accepted her party’s nomination at its Philadelphia convention, has taken its toll on him.

A Washington Post-ABC News poll released on Sunday gave Clinton an eight-point lead, 50 per cent to 42 per cent. A Reuters-Ipsos poll from last week had her in the lead with a smaller margin of three points.

Clinton will offer her own economic vision in a speech in Muncie, Indiana on Monday.

Trump’s Detroit event gives him a chance to regain the initiative and outline some substantive policy proposals on the economy ahead of the November election. Technological and financial services businesses have been key players in Trump’s economic vision in a speech in Muncie, Indiana.

Japan orders military to be ready for North Korea missile launch at any time

TOKYO — Japan ordered its military on Monday to be ready at any time to shoot down any North Korean missiles that threaten to strike Japan, putting its forces on a state of alert for at least three months, a defence ministry official and media said.

Up to now, Japan has issued temporary orders when it had indications of an imminent North Korean missile launch that it has canceled after a projectile had been launched.

However, because some tests firings are hard to detect, it has decided to put its military on standby for a longer period. The order will be reviewed after three months, state broadcaster NHK said.

Ten killed, 30 injured in road mishap in northern India

NEW DELHI — At least 10 people have been killed and more than 30 others injured in a road mishap in the northern Indian state of Uttar Pradesh, a senior police official said Monday.

“The incident took place late Sunday evening when a tractor trolley in which the victims, mostly pilgrims, were travelling overturned in the state’s Saharanpur district,” he said.

The victims were travelling for a religious congregation in Sultanpur village from Sahajaya area in Saharanpur when the mishap took place, the official said.

While 10 people died on the spot, those injured have been admitted to a local hospital where the condition of a few are said to be serious, he said.

A probe has been ordered into the incident, the official added.

In a separate incident, 16 others were reportedly killed and three injured when a train hit a tractor trolley carrying pilgrims, police said.

People were on their way to their village for the annual Hindu festival of Gokulashtami when the accident occurred.”

Helicopter carrying 7 crashes in Nepal, no survivors found

KATHMANDU — A helicopter carrying seven people crashed in central Nepal on Monday afternoon, with no survivors found, according to authorities.

“Search-and-rescue teams from the police and the army that reached the crash site found no survivors,” Home Ministry spokesman Yadav Koirala told Kyodo News.

The chopper was carrying a sick woman, her infant child, and relatives from western Nepal’s Gorkha district to Kathmandu when it crashed in a forest in Nuwakot district, about 25 kilometres north-east of the capital, said police officer Kaushal Budhathoki.

Russia: Paralympics ban over doping is grave human rights abuse

MOSCOW — The head of the Russian Paralympic Committee said on Monday a decision to bar Russian athletes from taking part in next month’s Rio Paralympics over doping allegations was a grave human rights abuse.

Vladimir Lukin, president of the committee, told a news conference in Moscow that Russian paralympians were not guilty of doping and that he was ready to prove that the team had fulfilled all its anti-doping obligations.

“The overwhelming majority of sportspeople who were prevented from taking part in the Games were absolutely clean sportspeople,” said Lukin, saying he was ready to provide evidence that the Russian team had run a tight anti-doping programme.—Reuters

Zimbabwe’s Mugabe says seeking measures to speed up public worker’s pay

Election re-run in Spain would result in another hung parliament — poll

MADRID — A third election would do little to break Spain’s political stalemate, with the People’s Party (PP) of acting Prime Minister Mariano Rajoy seen winning the vote but coming far short of a parliamentary majority, an influential poll showed on Monday.

Spain is already eight months into a deadlock created short of a parliamentary majority, as far-left parties, Unidos Podemos (“Together We Can”) and Ciudadanos (“Citizens”) would come fourth with 12 per cent, down from 13 per cent.—Reuters
American, Australian kidnapped in Afghan capital: officials

KABUL. — Afghan authorities are searching for an Australian and an American who were kidnapped by gunmen in the capital, Kabul, officials said on Monday.

The pair, believed to be affiliated with a Kabul university, was taken by four or five gunmen from a nearby road late on Sunday, said an official with the Ministry of Interior who spoke on condition of anonymity.

It was not immediately clear who was responsible for the abduction.

The Australian Embassy in Kabul confirmed one of its citizens had apparently been abducted but said it would not comment further due to privacy and safety considerations.

“We continue to advise Australians not to travel to Afghanistan because of the extremely dangerous security situation, including the serious threat of kidnapping.”

A spokesman for Australia’s Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade said in a statement.

The US State Department said in a statement it was aware of reports an American had been kidnapped but had no other information to offer.

Kidnapping is a major problem in Afghanistan with Afghans the most affected, although a number of foreigners have also been abducted in recent years.

An Indian aid worker was abducted in Kabul in June and released the following month.

At least two other foreigners, from Germany and the Netherlands, were taken from the same neighbourhood in separate incidents last year.

Those two foreigners, both of them women, were eventually released unharm ed, with police saying the kidnappings were most likely motivated by money.

Syrian government delivers supplies to Aleppo via alternative route — monitors

BEIRUT (Aleppo) — Syrian government forces delivered food and fuel to neighbourhoods they control in the divided city of Aleppo on Monday, using an alternative road after rebels cut off the main supply route into those areas, a monitoring group said.

Insurgents effectively broke a month-long government siege of eastern, opposition-held Aleppo on Saturday, advancing against President Bashar al-Assad’s forces and their allies and cutting off a strip of government-held territory to connect with fighters in the encircled sector.

That rebel advance severed the primary government supply corridor running into the city from the south, and raised the prospect that government-held western Aleppo might in turn become besieged by the insurgents.

The army and its allies made the aid delivery via the Castello Road, which extends into Aleppo from the north, the British-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said.

Castello Road was captured by government forces last month. It had been the main opposition supply route into the city.

A Syrian military statement confirmed Monday’s delivery of supplies, although it did not specify the route used.

A western Aleppo resident said supplies had arrived. “Today fuel, food and petrol came in — the government opened up an alternative route,” Tony Ihsaq said via internet messenger.

Rebel sources and the Observatory said there were plans on the opposition side to bring humanitarian supplies into eastern Aleppo from insurgent-held territory further west, but that the route was not secure.

Syrian warplanes have been bombing the Ramousah area, where the rebels advanced and cut the road on Saturday, leaving no safe passage for civilians, the Observatory said.

The Syrian military statement said government forces were shelling rebel positions in the Ramousah area. The Observatory said rebels had bombarded areas of western Aleppo overnight.

Assad’s forces are supported by Russian air power, Iranian militias and fighters from Lebanon’s Hezbollah group who have sent reinforcements to shore up the army.

The multi-sided civil war in Syria, raging since 2011, has drawn in regional and global powers, caused the world’s worst humanitarian emergency and attracted recruits to Islamist militancy from around the world.—Reuters

Saudi-led coalition air strike kills nine civilians in Yemen market: residents

DUBAI — A Saudi-led coalition air strike killed nine civilians outside the Yemeni capital Sanaa on Sunday night, residents said, as forces loyal to the exiled government stepped up an offensive in the area.

The strike hit Odhar village in the Nehm area, which has been at the center of renewed fighting between supporters of President Abd-Rabbu Mansour Hadi’s government and Iran-backed Houthi forces.

UN-backed peace talks to end Yemen’s conflict broke down over the weekend, and pro-government forces said they had begun an offensive to retake Sanaa.

Two residents of the Nehm area reached by telephone said four people returning from a market were killed when their vehicle was hit as it passed a grocery store. Five people in the store also died in the air strike, they said.

Saba, the state news agency run by the dominant Houthi movement, said 12 people died including six members of the same family, and that some bodies were burnt beyond recognition. The agency said 17 others were wounded.

A spokesman for the Saudi-led coalition referred inquiries to the Yemeni government.

A government military spokesman said he was checking the report.

At least 6,400 people have been killed in Yemen’s 16-month war, half of them civilians, according to the United Nations.

The Saudi-led alliance has said it wants to avoid civilian casualties, and an internal investigation published last week largely exonerated mass-casualty strikes, saying the presence of Houthi fighters.

Comments to Reuters from rights groups and witnesses at the time of the attacks suggested they had together killed hundreds of civilians.—Reuters

Tokyo urges China not to escalate East China Sea tension

TOKYO — Japan said on Monday it would respond firmly after Chinese government vessels had intruded into what Tokyo considers its territorial waters near disputed islands in the East China Sea 14 times at the weekend, stoking bilateral tensions.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Yoshihide Suga said Tokyo would continue to urge China not to escalate the East China Sea dispute, while also responding firmly and calmly.

Suga told a news conference that a total of 14 Chinese government vessels had entered "contiguous waters", which can be policed for customs and immigration violations, in recent days and intruded into what Japan considers its territorial waters 14 times.

Twelve Chinese vessels remained in the area early on Monday, he said. Agencies including the coast guard would act together closely to deal with the situation, Suga said.

A Japanese government source, who asked not to be identified, said Japan's Coast Guard had stepped up its patrols in the region at the weekend but declined to give further details.

Chinese activity near the islands, known as the Senkaku in Japan and the Diaoyu in China, has heated up since Friday, prompting repeated Japanese protests, including three on Sunday alone.

Some 230 Chinese fishing vessels were also in the area on Saturday, Japan's foreign ministry said.

The incidents come amid heightened tensions after an arbitration court last year judged China's sweeping claims over the islands and near-litoral waters were not valid.

Ties between China and Japan, the world's second and third largest economies, have been plagued by waters. China accused Japan's new defence minister, Tomomi Inada, on Friday of recklessly misrepresenting history after she declined to say whether Japanese troops had massacred civilians in China during World War II.

Inada echoed Suga's comments and said on Monday Japan's military would conduct air patrols to provide information to the coast guard.

India urges China not to escalate East China Sea tension

India has refused to recognize that ruling. Japan called on China to adhere to the verdict, which it said was binding. This prompted warnings from Beijing to Tokyo not to interfere.

On Saturday, China's foreign ministry spokeswoman Hua Chunying said in a statement on the ministry's website China had indisputable sovereignty over the islands and near-litoral waters. China accused Japan's new defence minister, Tomomi Inada, on Friday of recklessly misrepresenting history after she declined to say whether Japanese troops had massacred civilians in China during World War II.

Japan's leader has been criticized for his handling of the territorial dispute with China over a group of islands known as the Senkaku in Japan and the Diaoyu in China.

Indian PM advocates strong action against cow vigilantes

NEW DELHI — Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi has condemned the recent attacks on the low-caste Dalit community and advocated strict action against cow vigilantes.

During his first visit to the southern state of Telangana Sunday, he asked people to protect Dalits, saying that they have "suffered for centuries" and that they "shouldn't suffer anymore."

"If you have a problem, if you feel like attacking someone, attack me, not my Dalit brothers. If you want to shoot anyone, shoot me, not my Dalit brothers," Modi said.

He added: "What is the reason we have our Dalit brothers? What right do you have? The section which has suffered for centuries, will you force them to suffer more?"

Earlier that day, the prime minister came down heavily on "fake cow protectors," saying that they were "dividing the nation and should be isolated and punished."

This was his second statement in two days against such attacks. On Saturday, Modi advocated action against "anti-social elements who masquerade as cow protectors to save themselves."

The prime minister's comments came in the wake of recent attacks on Dalits, the most prominent being the public flogging of four Dalits by cow protectors last month in the western state of Gujarat.

Murder of former leading N.Ireland militant sparks fresh fears

BELFAST — A leading member of a major Northern Ireland paramilitary group that said it got rid of all its weapons six years ago was shot dead in Belfast Monday, the police said.

Tensions in the region were heightened again on Monday, with fears of a fresh feud that could raise tensions in the British-controlled province.

Local media named the deceased as John Boreland, who was injured in a previous murder attempt two years ago, and was a member of the Ulster Defence Association (UDA) whose scrapping of weapons in front of independent monitors in 2010 completed the disarming of Northern Ireland's main militant groups.

A 1998 peace deal largely ended three decades of bloodshed between Catholic Irish nationalists, seeking union with Ireland, and predominantly Protestant unionists who want to remain part of the United Kingdom, but pockets of violence remain.

A murder linked to former Irish nationalist militants led to a political crisis last year between the former foes who jointly ran the power sharing executive when it raised questions about whether the province's ceasefire was being properly adhered to.

Canada seizing more suspect money from Chinese travellers

TORONTO — Canada has been seizing increasing amounts of undeclared or suspected criminal money from mainland Chinese travelers, border officials said, with the amount confiscated last year more than double that taken in 2013.

Capital flight in various forms has been a growing concern for China, with factors ranging from the depreciation of the yuan to an anti-corruption campaign launched by Chinese President Xi Jinping at the end of 2012.

Reuters obtained limited seizure figures from the Canada Border Services Agency under the country’s access-to-information laws. The agency provided more comprehensive numbers in July.

The data showed seizures from Chinese citizens dipped by about one-quarter from 2012 to 2013, when they were at C$5.5 million ($4.22 million). Seizures jumped to nearly C$11.5 million last year.

At least C$6.5 million has been seized so far in 2016. By year end, that figure could eclipse 2015 levels, as the data consistently showed more seizures in the second half.

According to the agency, suspected criminal proceeds and undeclared money over C$10,000 could be seized. The former is forfeit, while the latter can be seized. The former is nearly C$11.5 million last year.

Burial of Philippine dictator Marcos in heroes’ cemetery triggers debate

MANILA — The Philippines has begun preparations for the burial of late dictator Ferdinand Marcos at a cemetery for national heroes, a decision that drew criticism from the vice president and could polarize the country.

President Rodrigo Duterte said he was fulfilling a campaign promise to have Marcos, who ruled with an iron fist for two decades, interred at the heroes’ cemetery as a former president and soldier.

On Sunday, Defence Secretary Delfin Lorenzana assigned armed forces chief of staff General Ricardo Visaya, to handle arrangements for the burial next month, in line with the “verbal order of the president to implement his campaign promise”.

“I am just implementing a presidential directive, whatever I think is immoral,” Lorenzana told reporters on Monday.

“He deserved to be buried at the heroes’ cemetery based on the criteria from the military regulations,” he said.

Marcos was a soldier and guerrilla leader during World War Two when the former US colony was occupied by Japanese forces. As a dictator in the 1970s and ‘80s, Marcos, his family and cronies amassed an estimated $10 billion in ill-gotten wealth and thousands of suspected communist rebels and political foes were killed. His wife, Imelda, denies amassing wealth illegally.

Vice President Leni Robredo said she opposed Duterte’s decision to transfer the strongman’s remains from his home town of Batac in the northern Philippines to the cemetery.

“The Marcos is no hero,” she said in a statement. “How can we allow a hero’s burial for a man who has plundered our country and was responsible for the death and disappearance of many Filipinos?”

Robredo, a human rights advocate, defeated the dictator’s son and namesake, Ferdinand Mar- cos, in a vote for the vice presidency in May.

She said Duterte’s decision would not bring unity but would “deepen the healed wounds” of Marcos’ victims.

Some Roman Catholic bishops and left-wing activists also opposed Marcos’ burial.

“It is a great insult,” said one prominent bishop, Arturo Bastes.

‘Suicide Squad’ smashes records with $135.1 million debut, ‘Nine Lives’ dies

LOS ANGELES — “Suicide Squad” smashed records, scoring a colossal $135.1 million debut despite suffering some of the worst reviews of the year.

That sets a new high-water mark for an August launch, topping “Guardians of the Galaxy’s” $94.3 million bow. It also ranks as a new personal best for star Will Smith, trumping “I Am Legend’s” $77.2 million debut in 2007.

The action spectacle is also resonating with foreign crowds. “Suicide Squad” earned $132 million overseas from 57 territories, bringing its global total to more than $267 million.

“It bested anything that we could have expected,” said Jeff Goldstein, Warner Bros. distribution executive vice president. “The marketing campaign was brilliant and the performances by the cast, and the marketing campaign was brilliant. It was an all-out attack on the whole idea of entertainment.”

New York’s David Edelstein branded the film “the worst of the worst,” and MTV’s Amy Nicholson dismissed the picture as “two hours of padding.”

Audiences appeared to like the film better than critics, handing the film a B+ CinemaScore. Younger consumers appear to like the film better than older moviegoers, with audiences under the age of 18 giving it an A rating. The question is will “Suicide Squad” show some endurance?

“There’s a major disconnect between what the critics are saying and what audiences are seeing,” said Goldstein.

“Batman v Superman: Dawn of Justice,” the previous entry in DC Comic’s series of interconnected superhero films, was also a critical piñata. It managed to overcome the bad notices to debut at $166 million, but the poor word-of-mouth caught up to the film in its second weekend, pushing receipts down by nearly 70%.

There are signs the box office reviews are already hobbling “Suicide Squad.” The film dropped sharply on Saturday, falling 41% from its Friday numbers, although it should be said that those grosses include Thursday pre-show results.

The studio has a lot riding on “Suicide Squad.” It spent $717 million making the picture, including tens of millions on reshoots. But the cost isn’t the only concern. DC is struggling to generate the same level of excitement for its stable of Batman, Superman, and other Justice League fixtures that Marvel has managed to stoke for its movies about costumed avengers. It needs more of its films to be beloved as well as financially successful.

Production on the film was reportedly rushed with writer and director David Ayer having less than two months to turn a script around. The film features a team of super villains who are recruited for a black ops mission by the US government.

Men accounted for 54% of “Suicide Squad’s” opening weekend audience, with more than half of the audience clocking in under the age of 25. Warner Bros. released the film across 4,255 locations. Imax accounted for 381 of those venues, and the big screen company comprised $11 million of the first weekend gross.—Reuters

Jackie Chan wows Aussie audience on his first public talk in Sydney

SYDNEY — Hollywood ace Jackie Chan wowed hundreds of people at the Sydney Opera House on Saturday night with an honest take on how he got started in show business and the ups and downs he had to endure to achieve success.

Chan who is currently in Australia filming his latest flick “Bleeding Steel” was speaking to a packed audience at his first public Sydney talk titled “Jackie Chan in Conversation.”

“I came to Australia when I was 13. I think at that time there was only something like 13 million people in the whole country and this is a huge country, it’s very little compared to Hong Kong, but there (in Hong Kong) everywhere you go you see people, poor people, but in Canberra when I walk out the street at 5pm there is nobody,” Chan said.

Chan also recalled how he had to resort to using hand gestures and facial expressions to communicate with the Australians during his early days in Canberra as he hardly spoke a word of English then.

“My father used to leave me to the shopping mall daily before heading off to work. He would also give me some money to buy food. As I couldn’t speak a word of English then, I had a hard time buying food with the money my father had left me.”

“When people spoke to me in English, I would just nod my head and walk away, because I didn’t know how to answer them back. In the end, I would stay hungry for hours and by the time my father came (to pick me), I would be starving. That’s when I decided that I could no longer go on (and that) I needed to learn English,” Chan said.

“Chan later decided to adopt the name “Jack” permanently but added the “e” at the end, after a Peng Shui expert told him that it would bring him better luck. And Chan hasn’t looked back since, from a low-end stuntman, Chan soon worked his way up and became a worldwide sensation for his leading roles in Kung-Fu style movies. Today, at 62, Chan has starred in more than 250 films and invested close to 50 years of his life in the trade.—Xinhua

Dramatic volcano-themed light show opens Festival on Edinburgh’s Castle Rock

EDINBURGH — The volcanic rock on which Edinburgh Castle perches became the screen for a 3-D digital light show on Sunday night, turning the western facade into a kaleidoscope of its past for the opening ceremony of the 2016 Edinburgh Festival, the world’s biggest annual arts event.

The 350-million-year geology of the craggy Scottish capital was the inspiration for the show, blazing the rock in cascades of light to the delight of the 27,000-strong crowd watching live.

The animation focused on the idea of “deep time”, a geological concept pioneered by James Hutton in Scotland in the 18th century, which helps to explain the earth’s formation.

The show was created using architectural mapping technology and took almost 15 km of cable and 42 projectors to pull off. Set to an electronic soundtrack by Glasgow rock band Mogwai, it was billed by the organisers as “one of the largest and most unusual pieces of projection undertaken anywhere in the world”—Reuters
CARACAS — An art gallery in the Venezuelan capital is honouring the late Mexican artist Frida Kahlo with an exhibition featuring the works of 50 female Venezuelan artists.

The exhibit — entitled “Always Frida” — is being displayed at the Florida Art Gallery in Caracas marking the 109th anniversary of Kahlo’s birth.

Kahlo, whose reputation has bloomed in Venezuela especially in the last decade, is famous mainly for self-portraits and her depiction of female experiences and forms.

“In this exhibition we are featuring art masters as well as amateur artists, all very representative of our country and, in fact, all female,” said Mirla Soto, the exhibition’s curator.

RIO DE JANEIRO — Michael Phelps picked up his 19th gold medal on a second night of world records in the Olympic pool, with Katie Ledecky cruising to women’s 400 metres freestyle victory and Britain’s Adam Peaty running away with the men’s 100 breaststroke.

Sweden’s Sarah Sjostrom extended Saturday’s record spire in winning the 100-metre butterfly, and Peaty and Ledecky followed suit in the next two finals before the US men’s team, with Phelps swimming second, took the 4x100 freestyle relay.

Six swimming world records have now fallen in two days of competition, and the United States moved level with Australia on two gold medals each.

Phelps, the most decorated Olympian of all time, now has 19 golds, two silvers and two bronzes. For his relay team, with Phelps swimming second, took the 4x100 freestyle relay.

In a reminder of the doping controversies that dogged the build-up to the Olympics, there were loud boos for Russian breaststroker Yulia Efimova and the men’s relay team.

Efimova, who has served two doping suspensions, succeeded in an appeal last week against being banned from Rio.

She was one of a number of Russians who argued successfully that excluding them from the Olympics would be punishing them again for the same offense. She qualified second for Monday’s 100 breaststroke final, 0.02 seconds behind Lilly King of the United States. — Reuters

RIO DE JANEIRO — For all-around gymnastics gold medallist Kohei Uchimura, the Olympic Games is firmly planted in Brazil.

The reigning Olympic and world champion confided on Sunday he was hit with a $5,000 yen ($5,000) data roaming bill on Sunday he was hit with a $5,000 roaming bill.

When Uchimura checked his bill, he couldn’t believe his eyes. “$500,000 yen...” sighed the 19-year-old told reporters.

“I wanted the first 200 to hurt as little as possible and I really felt like I could build into it and really explode that last 50,” said Peaty after leading the race from start to finish.

Britain’s Peaty set his second world record in consecutive days, and seemed surprised by the margin of his victory — 1.56 seconds — over defending champion Cameron van der Burgh of South Africa.

“I touched the wall and looked around and thought ‘where is everybody?’ Peaty told reporters. The last British man to win an Olympic swimming gold was Adrian Moorhouse in the same event in 1988, six years before Peaty was born.

On a big night for the British team, Jazz Carlin won a silver medal behind Ledecky.

In the butterfly, Sjostrom became the first Swedish woman to win an Olympic gold medal, with Canada’s 16-year-old Penny Oleksiy taking silver.

American Dana Vollmer, the 2012 champion, clinched bronze. “The feeling is totally crazy. I didn’t realise it was a world record,” Sjostrom said.

“I knew I was big favourite. I was under pressure, so I tried to focus on no disasters. Before the start I said to myself: ‘It’s just a pool. It’s nothing. I know what to do.’”

Late Ibrahimovic strike gives Mourinho first United trophy

“Finally it’s amazing that such a good player is with us,” Mourinho told a news conference after United’s 2-1 Community Shield victory over Premier League champions Chelsea.

“I come to win, to come to win.”

Mourinho was speaking after United had released a statement saying they had given permission to have a medical with the club, started brightly, with Wayne Rooney and Ibrahimovic forming a lively forward pairing.

“I feel good,” Ibrahimovic told BT Sport. “The first official game, we play for a trophy and we win.”

“This is my 31st trophy. I’m super happy,” added the former Juventus, Inter Milan, Barcelona and Paris St Germain striker.

“I hope I can win much more than this.”

Another of United’s new signings, Eric Bailly, made an encouraging start, although he was regularly tested by Vardy.

“I think it was a fantastic performance. It wasn’t.”

Mourinho told BT Sport after the traditional curtain-raiser to the English season. “I wouldn’t be ambitious if I said it was a fantastic performance. It wasn’t.”

United, who confirmed in an official statement before the match that Juventus have given midfielder Paul Pogba permission to have a medical with the club, started brightly, with Wayne Rooney and Ibrahimovic forming a lively forward pairing.

LONDON — Manchester United’s new striker Zlatan Ibrahimovic’s strick late to ensure Jose Mourinho’s reign got off to a winning start as the FA Cup holders beat champions Leicester City 2-1 in the Community Shield at Wembley on Sunday.

Ibrahimovic leap above Foxes captain Wes Morgan in the 83rd minute to head Antonio Valencia’s cross beyond goalkeeper Kasper Schmeichel, the Swede marking his official debut with a decisive contribution and securing United a record 21st Shield.

Leicester’s England forward Jamie Vardy had equalised early in the second half after capitalising on a hideous lapse from Marouane Fellaini following Jesse Lingard’s superb solo opener for United just past the half-hour mark.

“It’s an important victory but we have lots of work to do,” Mourinho told BT Sport after the traditional curtain-raiser to the English season. “I wouldn’t be ambitious if I said it was a fantastic performance. It wasn’t.”

“I think the minimum we deserved was penalties but when you play against great champions, this can happen,” said Leicester manager Claudio Ranieri.— Reuters

Age is just a number for Chusovitina

RIO DE JANEIRO — If there was a gold medal on offer at every competition for the oldest gymnast on show, Oksana Chusovitina would have needed to hire Fort Knox to stockpile a hoard of precious metal.

In a sport over-populated by tiny teenagers, 41-year-old Chusovitina has kept her body “lean and mean” for over four decades so that she can compete against rivals younger than her 17-year-old son Alisher.

“When I compete … if they gave a few more marks for age it would have been great!” Chusovitina, whose gamble to keep competing paid off as she put younger challengers to shame on Sunday by qualifying for the eight-woman vault final.

So long is her career that the majority of her Rio rivals were not even born when she was a member of the triumphant Unified Team, representing former Soviet republics, in 1992.

There was certainly a lot of love in the Rio Olympic Arena for the oldest ever gymnast to compete at a Games.

The cheers were loud and prolonged when the venue’s MC introduced the Uzbek as “a living legend” and the volume went up a few notches as she sprinted down the runway before launching into her first vault — a layout front somersault with 1-1/2 twists.

A hop back on landing did little to dampen the mood and a score of 15.166 proved that she was not in Rio to simply compete competing at a record seventh Olympics for a gymnast.

Wearing a pink and white shimmering leotard, her toned arm muscles were in full display as she lifted off for her second vault — a double twisting Tsukahara — which earned her 14.833.

“I really love the sport, I love to give pleasure to the public. I love to come out and perform for the public and for the fans,” said Chusovitina, who has competed under the Soviet Union, Unified Team, German and Uzbek flags during her career.

Asked how she rated her performance, she assessed: “I’m alive. I’m well and that means everything’s okay.”

The Uzbek gymnastics lifespan defies logic as the next eldest competitor in Rio after her is 32-year-old Vasiliki Millousi from Greece.

While Chusovitina does not think what she is doing is remarkable, 1996 Olympic champion Kerri Strug said it was “unbelievable” that one of her contemporaries was still going strong.

“Kudos to her for being so disciplined with her diet, staying lean and mean at that age. It only gets harder to compete with these youngsters but she’s doing it,” the American told Reuters.— Reuters
