VP pledges to assist in rehabilitation of flood victims in Ayeyawady Region

VICE President U Henry Van Thio pledged to assist in the rehabilitation of flood-affected people in the Ayeyawady Region and stressed the need to step up preparedness to fight such disasters in future.

At a meeting with flood-affected people sheltering at a monastery in Nyaungdon, the vice president called on locals to cooperate with the government in disaster preparedness matters as the country is experiencing flooding nearly every year.

During his tour of Ayeyawady Region, Vice President U Henry Van Thio visited flood-affected places sheltering at temporary relief camps in Ngathaingchaung, Laymyatnar, Hinthada, Zalun, Danubyu and Nyaungdon and presented aid to them.

The vice president also inspected dams and dykes.

The flooding hit nineteen townships in the region, displacing more than 120,000 residents.

Local authorities have established more than 680 shelters for the peoples in the areas affected by flooding.

The flooding has reportedly submerged more than 202,000 acres of farmland with paddy plants, according to the General Administration Department of Ayeyawady Region.

The flooding has also forced schools to shut their doors in the region.

Meantime, three rivers which are currently exceeding their flooding danger level are expected to fall back to safer levels over the next two days, according to the Department of Meteorology and Hydrology Department.

Reviewing of political dialogue framework: steps to all inclusiveness

The three-day meeting to review the political dialogue framework ended yesterday in Yangon and outcomes of the discussion will be put forward to the meeting of Union Peace Dialogue Joint Committee meeting in Nay Pyi Taw on Monday.

The tripartite meeting was participated in by representatives of the government, 16 armed ethnic organisations and UPD-JC-member political parties.

“We see the dawn of the peace and we are on the middle of the road to the federal union,” said Khu Oo Reh, Head of the Delegation for Political Negotiation (DPN), to reporters after the meeting.

“We can build the Federal Union only when we all are in unity,” he added.

He, on behalf of the non-signatories to the Nationwide Cease-fire Agreement, stressed the need to take time for those groups to reach consensus on facts in the political dialogue framework because they are new faces at the meeting.

During the three-day meeting the DPN discussed ways for the non-signatories to the NCA to be able to participate in the Union Peace Conference-21st Century Panglong.

“The proposal of the DPN and ways for non-signatories to NCA to participate in the Union Peace Conference will be decided at the UPDJC meeting on 15 August,” said U Hla Maung Shwe, Secretary of the Preparation Committee for Holding the Union Peace Conference—21st Century Panglong.

The three-day meeting saw progress and some issues remained to be discussed, said U Hla Maung Shwe.

“The road to negotiation is open to all and we will continue discussions with the DPN,” he added, “we are also in negotiations with them to hold discussions again around 20th August. That’s the way the peace process is moving.”—Ye Khaing Nyunt

Nearly a million acres of paddy planted in Yangon Region

OVER 900,000 acres of monsoon paddy have been successfully put under cultivation across the greater Yangon Region this rainy season, according the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation.

U Myo Tint Htun, assistant secretary of the ministry, told the Myitmakha News Agency that they have anticipated 1.2 million acres will be planted before the rainy season comes to a close. “Monsoon paddy was planted in areas of Yangon, which first see the rains, around the end of May. All paddy will have been planted by September. We’re presently providing training on the usage of re-planting machines to encourage farmers, in areas where farmlands are in short supply, to utilise the machines,” he said.

2nd batch of detained Myanmar workers returns to Yangon from Malaysia

THE second batch of detained Myanmar citizens in Malaysia arrived back to Yangon on Friday via charter flight.

The return of the group comprised of 137 Myanmar citizens was sponsored by private donors: The Mother Trading and Construction Co Ltd, Pho La Min Co Ltd and the Mba Gwaye foundation.

Of 700 detained workers who have already received a Certificate of Identity, 275 have been brought back home, it has been reported.

The first batch, comprised of 138 workers, returned on 8 August under the arrangement of the Kanbawta’s Brighter Future Myanmar Foundation-BFM.

The remaining citizens will also be brought home by charter flight, according to the BFM.

Over 600kg of relief supplies to Naga remains stuck in Mandalay airport

MORE than 600 kg of relief supplies to be airlifted to meagles-stricken Naga still remains stuck at the airport in Mandalay Region, according to relief workers.

An airlift of food and medical supplies to the remote town was arranged because other means of transportation would take a week, said U Ke Jung of the Naga National Council. Nearly 1,000 kilograms of relief supplies had been stuck at the airport for three days, he said, adding that passenger flights were the only options.

Efforts to curb illegal logging in Bago Region undermined

IN just four months since the new NLD-led government came to office, legal action has been taken against over 300 individuals for illegal logging, and more than 1,800 tons of illegally logged timber has been confiscated, within Bago Region, says the local Department of Forestry.

A total of 128 vehicles were caught illegally transporting the confiscated timber, which is reportedly comprised of over 700 tons of teak, 500 tons of hardwood and 600 tons of other miscellaneous varieties of wood.

“Our crackdown on illegal logging activities in the region gathered pace during the new government’s 100 day projects initiative. In comparison with last year, the magnitude of confiscated timber was similar, but the number of vehicles caught transporting it has doubled. The reason for this can be analysed as illegal loggers using a variety of ways to evade the authorities by changing up their methods of transportation; smaller loads transported more frequently with smaller, less attention-drawing vehicles,” said U Zaw Win Myint, director of the Department of Forestry for Bago Region.

Aided by the Bago regional government, a concerted effort was made by government departments concerned to collect information on, and to reveal the whereabouts of illegal logging activities in the region; before conducting parameter sweeps in large groups to arrest, the trading of unlicensed chainsaws is being closely monitored. Plans are also in place to conduct a series of surprised inspections [on areas where logging activities are taking place], and to conduct educational awareness campaigns with the general public in a bid to persuade them to play a part in helping tackle the problem,” said U Kyaw Min, Bago Region Natural Resources, Forestry and Environmental Conservation Minister.

According to Section 43(a) of the 1992 enacted Forestry Law, anybody caught logging or transporting teak wood, or in possession of illegally logged teak, can face either seven years in prison, a fine of K50,000, or both. While Section 42(b) of the same laws stipulates those caught transporting or in possession of other forbidden timber, without a permit, could find themselves with either a two year prison sentence, a K20,000 fine, or both.—Myitmakha News Agency

Designs, decorations to new National Library discussed

A coordination meeting took place in Yangon yesterday to discuss the relocation of the National Library to the head-quarters of the Myanmar Oil and Gas Enterprise in the centre of downtown.

Present at the meeting were Religious and Cultural Affairs Union Minister Thura U Aung Ko, Permanent Secretary Dr Nandar Hmun, departmental officials, researchers, librarians and invited guests. Thura U Aung Ko said the library had to be relocated as its current location was not convenient for visitors. The union minister called on researchers and librarians to pool ideas for turning the library into a more impressive and more significant place for visitors.

Department of Historical Research and National Library Deputy Director General U Aung Myint gave a briefing on elaborate designs and decorations to be made at the new location.

The National Library has a large collection of books, periodicals, manuscripts and other rare books, holding 172,356 books, 435,580 periodicals, 12,323 palm-leaf manuscripts, 345 letters, 25,468 rare books and other literary materials.

The Bernard Free Library was handed over to the Ministry of Culture in 1952 and renamed State Library, which was opened at the Jubilee Hall in Yangon on 1 June the same year. After being renamed National Library, the facility was moved to a building in Pansodan Street and then to Yangon City Hall. The library was moved to two new locations before settling in Tamwe township.

The library building in Tamwe suffered some damage from the Cyclone Nargis in 2008 and as a result was moved to Yankin township.—Myanmar News Agency

Myanmar’s film industry to seek government support

THE Myanmar Motion Picture Organization will reportedly make efforts to submit a proposal to Hluttaw by the end of the year to entreat government support for the difficulties and requirements of the country’s motion picture industry.

U Lu Min, chair of the organization, explained to Myitmakha News Agency how the submission to Hluttaw will be a document of compiled of the difficulties faced by the industry, and the requirements needed to overcome them, that will come out of a motion picture industry forum to be held this August.

“Our aim is to be ready to make a submission to Hluttaw by the end of the year. We’ll ask the advice of those in the industry during the soon-to-be-held forum. A document to submit to Hluttaw will only be put together after the forum,” he said.

The chairman added that while those in motion picture industry need to cooperate in developing Myanmar’s industry, they don’t have the capacity to do it alone; assistance is also required from state government.

U Zagana, director, actor and comedian, emphasizes the importance of putting together a systematic framework of demands so the proposal to government for assistance can be as efficient as possible.

“In the past, we just used to take whatever the government threw at us. Now, though, and we must also rely on our ourselves and our own efforts.

The government will only know what difficulties one is encountering if you let them know.”

That said, “I’m not a fan on complete dependence on government assistance. If we ask the government for something, there’s also the onus on us to take responsibility. If they give us something, we must ask what we can give in return,” he said.

The motion picture industry in Myanmar currently suffers from a dearth of film studios in which to shoot motion pictures as well as venues in which to showcase them, as movie theatres and cinemas are forced to close for a lack of revenue, or are being bought out by developers.

The ubiquitous presence of pirated DVDs across the country is also reportedly a contributing factor in the industry’s demise.—Myitmakha News Agency

General Aung San’s photograph to adorn schools and government offices across Kayin State

THE Kayin State Hluttaw has reportedly approved a proposal by U Thant Zin Aung, MP for Myawaddy Constituency, who proposed portraits of General Aung San be hung in schools and government offices throughout the state.

“Three proposals were discussed during the last session of the Hluttaw. The third of which was a proposal urging the government to pay respects to national hero General Aung San by having his photograph hung up in schools and government departmental offices.

This third proposal was successful in being passed,” said U Saw Chit Khin, speaker of the Kayin State Hluttaw.

The statement was made during an inaugural meeting on the 74th anniversary of government, Kayin State Hluttaw MPs, civil society organizations and members of the general public at the Town Hall in Yadanar Hotel in Hpa-an on 7 August.

“Photos of General Aung San should be hung across the entire country, not just within the confines of Hluttaw. I’m happy to hear of the Hluttaw passing the proposal and I want to thank the MP who put it forward,” said U Kyi Htay, a resident of Hpa-an Township’s Ka-waing village.

The proposal was originally proposed to the Kayin State Hluttaw during a regular session on 20 July.—Myitmakha News Agency

Value of peanuts fall in Monywa as Chinese trade dries up

PEANUTS in wholesale centers within the Sagaing Region town of Monywa have depreciated in price since the end of July with the drying up of trade with China, wholesalers have told Myitmakha News Agency.

The recent poor business in business with China is reportedly a combination of transportation difficulties and an absence of fresh peanuts within Monywa markets.

“It’s difficult to read the situation of Chinese traders. Trade was good this time last year, but this year the peanut business has slumped. It’s probably because the peanuts for sale in local markets aren’t fresh anymore. The market could pick back up when the next batch of peanuts are harvested,” said Ko Kyi Hlaing, a peanut trader from Monywa.

A weight of 1.2 bushels of white and red peanuts fetched a reportedly good price of K48,000 and K64,000 respectively in 2015, while this year the value of these quantities of the groundnut have depreciated to K40,000 for white peanuts and plummeted to a meager K41,600 for red peanuts.

“We plant both white and red varieties of peanut of which there is more demand for red peanuts. We can get a good price for red peanuts. The poor state of the peanut market at the moment will see peanut farmers incur losses this year,” said Myo Myint Soe, a peanut farmers from the town of Butalun, Sagaing Region.

Peanut traders says the groundnuts from Monywa are mainly transported to the country’s major urban centers of Yangon and Mandalay, and exported to neighboring China to the north.—Myitmakha News Agency
Free vaccines for animals in flood-hit areas being distributed

THE Livestock Breeding And Veterinary Department is providing free medical treatment to animals in flood-hit areas of Sagaing region, it has been learned.

Local officer Dr. Aye Aung and staff provided free vaccination shots to animals in Mya Shwe Si and Bein Nwe Chaung villages, Yinmabin township, on Friday.

The department provided vaccines against foot-and-mouth disease to 25 animals in Mya Shwe Si and 102 animals in Bein Nwe Chaung. The department also performed blood tests on 15 animals. The mobile veterinary team plans to go to other flood-affected villages in the region.

U Soe Naing, a farmer in Bein Nwe Chaung village, expressed his gratitude to the vets.

"I am grateful to the vets who provided the vaccine for my animals," he said.

American-based Norwegian cruise line to recruit Myanmar seafarers

An American-based Norwegian cruise line will recruit more Myanmar seafarers after they initially hired more than 100 Myanmar seamen earlier this year, it was learnt from the maritime recruitment service agency.

Myanmar seamen are known to be hardworking with skilled manners, making them ideal employees, officials said. The cruise lines plan to recruit again during this year. Myanmar seafarers enjoy the rights provided by the Norwegian cruise line. Therefore, this is a win-win situation for both sides, said Ko Wai Min from maritime recruitment service agency.

The seamen who will be employed by the Norwegian cruise line will provide services on the luxury cruise liners that sail around the globe. These seamen will be hired from US$500 to US$1,800, depending on their rank. The maritime recruitment service agency will start to recruit Myanmar seamen starting the last week of August.

Myanmar seafarers will work together with those from European countries as well as Indonesia, The Philippines and Singapore. Those interested can visit the website of this cruise line via https://www.ncl.com/ for further information.

Nearly 280 outbound tour licenses granted by MoHT

THE NUMBER of outbound tour licenses issued by the Ministry of Hotels and Tourism till Tuesday has reached nearly 280, according to the ministry’s official figures.

Since December 2015 the ministry has granted insurance of outbound tour license to tour operators under the permission of the Union government, with plans to expand the licensing services in accordance with the ministry’s rules and regulations to promote the country’s tourism industry, a spokesperson of the Directorate of Hotels and Tourism said.

Price of palm oil could fall

THE palm oil price is likely to turn downward in Yangon markets because of the decline in the world’s palm oil price and the approaching of the cargo ship at Yangon Port, said U Yee, a shopkeeper from Lanmadaw Township.

The price of world palm oil was US$650 per FOB tonne on 2 August, whereas that price has increased up to US$680 per tonne on 5 August. The original purchase price of the palm oil at the port were around Ks1,455 per viss at the end of July and then, has risen Ks1,513 per viss on 5 August, it has been learnt. The wholesale price of the palm oil in Yangon markets is Ks1,490-1,495 per viss at the end of July. However, the wholesale price has reached up to Ks1,615 per viss on 5 August, it was learnt from Ko Myo, in-charge of edible oil at Seinpan Street. The wholesale price of palm oil per viss at the Yangon market is Ks100 higher than the price offered at Yangon port. The price gap is possibly due to the decrease in the number of cargo ships entering Yangon at that time, it is learnt. The world palm oil price had surged for four days as of 3 August, but after that the price began to fall. —Khin Htun (MAL)

Over K6 B in taxes expected to be collected from sale of stamps this FY

THE Internal Revenue Department expects to collect over K6 billion worth of taxes through the sale of stamps this fiscal year, its spokesperson said.

The department granted nearly 100 licenses to sell stamps to applicants in 33 townships in Yangon earlier this month.

A total of 99 applicants passed an examination organised by The Internal Revenue Department, a second step, it has been learned.

The stamp price is fixed for 267 H.S coded products with the relevant tax stamp laws, regulations. Authorized stamp dealers will enjoy 4 per cent of the profit made through stamp selling. They must sell the stamps at a fixed price. Serious action will be taken against those caught breaking the rules, according to the department.

Twenty-five kinds of stamps have been issued by the government. These stamps are available in revenue departments in each township as well as at Myanmar Economic Bank branches.

The Internal Revenue Department has been collecting 4 kinds of taxes and duties, namely income tax, commercial tax, stamp duty and state lottery tax from the 2011-12 fiscal year onwards.

Japan’s UN envoy receives South Korean state medal

NEW YORK — Japanese Ambassador to the United Nations Koro Bessho received a medal from South Korea on Friday for his contribution to bilateral relations.

South Korean Ambassador Oh Joon awarded the Gwanghwam Medal of the Order of Diplomatic Service Merit to Bessho in a ceremony at the country’s mission to the United Nations in New York. The medal is the highest honour in the Order of Diplomatic Service Merit. Prior to taking up the post of UN envoy in June, Bessho served as ambassador to Seoul for nearly four years from September 2012, contributing to a landmark agreement last December to resolve the issue of Korean women forced into wartime brothels for the Japanese military.

The Japanese ambassador told reporters that he was “greatly honoured” to receive the medal and would continue to work hard on improving ties between the two countries.

Philippine govt, Moro rebel group reiterate commitment to peace process

KUALA LUMPUR — The Philippine government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) re-juvenated the peace process in the Southern Philippines on Saturday by launching the implementing phase of the peace agreements.

The meeting held in the Malaysian capital is the first under President Rodrigo Duterte, two years after the signing of the Comprehensive Agreement on the Bangsamoro (CAB) between the Philippine government and MILF in 2014 facilitated by Malaysia. Philippine presidential aide on the peace process Jesus Dureza hailed the entering of implementation phase as another milestone in the peace process, stressing the commitment by the new Philippine administration to honor previous peace agreements.

Manila’s commitment was partly demonstrated by the high level delegation at the meeting, including cabinet members like Foreign Secretary Perfecto Yasay and senior lawmak- ers.

Murad Ebrahim, chairman of MILF, said continuing the peace process remains the only reasonable and viable path that could bring progress, development and lasting peace to the Philippines.

He said MILF would welcome Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) led by Nur Misuari as well as other factions to participate in the peace process.

Nepal to strengthen inspections for pilots to ensure air safety

KATHMANDU — As human errors have been pointed out as a major reason for increasing air accidents in Nepal, the Nepalese authorities have said that they would strengthen inspections for “health and behav- ior” of crew members.

The Himalayan country witnessed six air accidents in the last one year, killing 36 passengers and crew members. Speaking at Committee for Good Governance and Monitoring of Nepalese Parliament on Friday, Sanjeev Gautam, director general of Civil Aviation Authority of Nepal (CAAN), said that the CAAN has now decided to focus on addressing human behavior issue of the crew members. “We don’t understand why the pilots are repeatedly entering clouds as it is a violation of the standard operating procedure,” he said.

Gautam told the lawmakers that the CAAN has issued a circular to airline operators telling them that if any pilots were found entering into cloud during the monsoon season, their ли- censes would be withdrawn immediately. Secretary of Ministry of Culture, Tourism and Civil Aviation Prem Kumar Rai also said that the government would implement the policy of regular health check for pilots before they start a flight.

Nepalese lawmakers said that if the current safety issues are not corrected immediately, anyone could be a victim. They said that repeated air accidents have spread the bad image of Nepal as a risky country for travel.

Cambodian PM urges DPRK to return to six-party talks

PHNOM PENH — Cambodian Prime Minister Samdech Techo Hun Sen on Friday urged the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea (DPRK) to return to the six-party talks in order to maintain peace and stability in the Korean peninsula, a Cambodian senior official said.

Hun Sen made the remarks during a meeting with newly-appointed DPRK Ambassador to Cambodia Jung Yun Gon, according to Kao Kim Hourn, minister attached to the prime minister.

“The prime minister had called on the DPRK to comply with all relevant resolutions of the United Nations Security Council and urged the resumption of the six-party talks in order to maintain peace in the Korean peninsula,” Kao told reporters after the meeting.

“The prime minister underlined that what Cambodia wanted to see is peace and stability in the Korean peninsula,” he said.

The six-party talks began in August 2003 as a forum focusing on the DPRK’s nuclear programme and were halted in April 2009 when the DPRK announced that it would no longer take part in the talks in a reaction to the international condemnation of its long range missile test.

The countries directly involved in the six-party talks are South Korea, the DPRK, China, Russia, the United States and Japan.

Thaksin’s party denies role in Thai blasts as police hunt suspects

BANGKOK/HUA HIN — The Thai political party whose governments have been overthrown by the country’s ruling generals denied on Saturday having any role in the bomb attacks on popular tourist destinations that killed four people and wounded dozens.

The blasts on Thursday and Friday in five of southern Thailand’s internationally known resorts came days after Thais voted to accept a military-backed constitution that paves the way for an election at the end of 2017.

Analysts say suspicion would inevitably fall on enemies of the ruling junta beaten in the referendum and insurgents from Muslim-majority provinces in the south of the mostly Buddhist country.

Fears that followers of former prime ministers Thaksin Shinawatra and his sister Yingluck Shinawatra, including an opposition movement sympathetic to the Shinawatras known as the “red shirts”, could be blamed prompted a senior figure in their Puea Thai Party to issue a sharp denial.

“People through social media, are sending messages saying Thaksin Shinawatra is behind these events,” Noppadon Pattama, a former foreign minister, said.

“This is slander and defamation. Anyone who is a former prime minister is worried about the country and would not do such evil,” said Noppadon, who served in both Thaksin and Yingluck’s cabinets.

No group has claimed responsibility for the wave of bombings, which sent shudders through the tourism industry, one of the few bright spots in Thailand’s sluggish economy.

For more than a decade Thailand has been divided between populist political forces led by Thaksin, who was toppled in a 2006 coup, and the royalist and military establishment, which accuses him of corruption. His sister Yingluck swept to power in an election in 2011, before being ousted in another coup in 2014.

At last Sunday’s referendum voters in Thaksin’s northeast stronghold voted to reject the constitution, which opponents of the junta said would entrench the military’s power and deepen divisions.

Voters in three mostly Muslim southern provinces, where separatists have been fighting with the military for more than a decade in an insurgency that has cost 6,500 lives, also voted against the new constitution, while the rest of the country accepted it. The bombs on Thursday and Friday went off in the upscale resort of Hua Hin and beach destinations in the south including Phuket, Phang Nga and Surat Thani, a city that is the gateway to popular islands in the Gulf of Thailand.

Police and Thailand’s foreign ministry initially ruled out links to Islamist terrorism and foreign terror groups, though national police chief Jakthip Chaijinda later told reporters that the devices were similar to those used by Muslim separatists.

Pornsupat Pongcharen, a deputy national police chief, told reporters on Saturday that no arrests had been made, but DNA samples collected at the blast sites would be compared with DNA samples stored in databases in the southern Muslim provinces.

The attacks came on a busy weekend for tourism as domestic and international visitors flocked to seaside resorts on a long weekend for a public holiday. Hua Hin, an easy weekend getaway for residents of Bangkok, was returning to normal on Saturday — though most businesses in the vicinity of the Thursday night explosions remained closed, a Reuters witness said. —Reuters

China to use tougher environmental standards to tackle capacity glut

SHANGHAI — China will use the stricter enforcement of environmental, safety and energy efficiency standards as well as tougher credit controls to help fight against overcapacity in key industrial sectors, the government said.

The world’s second-largest economy has identified overcapacity as one of its key challenges and has already pledged mass closures in the steel and coal sectors, but it has so far fallen short on its targets.

The Ministry of Industry and Information said on Friday in a policy document published on its website it would “normalise the stricter implementation and enforcement of mandatory standards” to tackle overcapacity in sectors such as steel, coal, cement, glassmaking and aluminium.

It would implement a “differential credit” policy that would allow lenders to extend loans to help firms restructure while cutting off funding for poorly performing enterprises targeted for closure.

Firms that fail to comply with new energy efficiency targets would be given six months to rectify and would be closed if they fail to make progress.

Those that continue to exceed air and water pollution standards would be fined on a daily basis and in serious cases ordered to shut.

It said authorities would cut off power and water supplies, and even demolish the equipment of firms that fail to meet environmental and safety standards.

Facilities could also be sealed off to prevent them from going back into operation.

The ministry also repeated a previous pledge to implement differential and punitive power pricing policies to force firms to toe the line.

Beijing is concerned that some local governments have not been acting with enough urgency when it comes to dealing with overcapacity problems.

On Thursday, the state planning agency singled out regions such as Inner Mongolia, Fujian and Guangxi for failing to make progress.

China plans to close 45 million tonnes of annual crude steel capacity this year, and 250 million tonnes of coal production, but only a third of the closures were completed by the end of July, the National Development and Reform Commission said.

Woman found in Cambodian jungle reunited with Vietnamese family

PHNOM PENH — A woman who was found in the jungle in Cambodia’s northeastern province of Ratanakiri in 2007 was reunited with her Vietnamese family on Saturday, a member of her adoptive family told Kyodo News.

Rochom P’ngieng, 39, was reunited with family in Gia Lai, a province in Viet Nam which borders Ratanakiri, according to the woman’s adoptive younger brother, Rochom Kamphy.

He said that during the almost 10 years since she was found naked in a jungle, his family had raised Rochom P’ngieng well and that he was “so sorry to lose her.”

However, since legal documentation was provided to Cambodian authorities proving her father was a Vietnamese man identified as Peo, the family in Cambodia had no choice to but to accept the news and allow her to return.

Rochom Kamphy, who is a police officer in O’Yadon district in Ratanakiri Province, said Peo, 70, handed over documents in July to Cambodian authorities in the district, claiming Rochom P’ngieng was his daughter, and that she had gone missing in 2006 due to mental health problems. Peo reportedly said he only realized that it was his daughter through seeing recent Facebook posts.

On 21 February 2007, about a month after Rochom P’ngieng was found, Kyodo News went to her adoptive family’s home in Ratanakiri, at which time a man claiming to be her father, Sal Lou, said the woman was his missing daughter.

Speaking, at that time, Sal Lou claimed that Rochom P’ngieng, then 27, had gone missing in 1989 while walking two buffalos.

Also in 2007, Ngeth Sothea, police chief of the terrorism office in Ratanakiri Province, said he had heard Sal Lou’s story in 1993 and had helped him search for his daughter for two years, but found no trace. In an interview with Kyodo News in 2007, a Spanish psychologist who had visited the family on three consecutive trips said he had no interest in searching for any real story of how she lived in the jungle, but rather was helping Rochom P’ngieng adapt back to a normal, social and family life.

Also in that year, Kyodo News observed the woman’s appearance and actions.

Rochom P’ngieng was then unable to communicate with anybody, including her adoptive brothers, sisters and parents, except to smile and laugh. —Kyodo News
Teacher education forum

A forum on teacher education was held in Community Zone, Gold Camp in Nay Pyi Taw, from 4 to 5 August 2016. Participants were different stakeholders of education such as ministers, rectors from different universities, teacher educators from Yangon University of Education, Sagaing University of Education and University of Devel-oment of National Races, principals from Education Colleges, international organizations, etc. In this forum, 9 papers were submitted and discussed. In the morning section of the first day, 4 papers were read and they were discussed in the afternoon. The other papers were read and discussed on the second day. The objectives of this forum are:
1. To discuss developing advanced teaching methods for academic, educational and co-curricular subjects, teacher competency standards framework and future plans
2. To discuss teacher quality according to education law
3. To discuss future plans for upgrading courses on teacher education
To fulfill these objectives, 9 papers were submitted and they are as follows:
Paper 1 - Upgrading the present education colleges with a 2-year training programme to education degree colleges with a 4-year training programme
Paper 2 - Proposed curriculum framework for 4 year education degree colleges
Paper 3 - Teacher certification system and teacher licence
Paper 4 - English proficiency courses for in-service teachers
Paper 5 - Quality assurance of in-service teachers
Paper 6 - Teacher competency standards framework
Paper 7 - Learning opportunities for teachers for upgrading teacher education
Paper 8 - Investigation into KG teachers’ understanding
Paper 9 - Promotion system and teacher salaries

The purpose of paper
(1) is to upgrade present education colleges to 4-year education degree colleges. Teacher education systems of some ASEAN countries are also presented in the paper. According to the proposed plan, education colleges will be upgraded to 4-year education degree colleges and affiliated with local universities and colleges.

In the Comprehensive Education Sector Review (CESR) (phase1), some key findings in analysis of Teacher Education include:
A. Teaching competency is not specifically recognized, and the teacher education curriculum requires significant strengthening.
B. Time for qualified practice teaching at ECs is inadequate, and teaching contents are not specialized.
C. Teacher educators at teaching institutes should be well-qualified if these institutions are to be upgraded to international levels.

Major recommendations include:
A. Formulate a Teacher Competency Framework according to the levels set by the Government or revise the present draft, as well as prepare a skill-centred teacher education curriculum.
B. Upgrade the present two-year training at ECs to a four-year degree, including the teaching of specialized education subjects.
C. Promote Teacher Competency and Services ranks to Educationist level 1, 2 and 3 at each school level, based on a teacher’s academic degree, and ensure that this system is practised.
D. Reorganize the Teacher Education Supervisory Committee to ensure that members are qualified educators. Establish a Department of Teacher Education under the MoE.

It is, therefore, found that proposed upgrading programme is based on the recommendation of CESR.
In discussion section, some suggest that there may be some issues of insufficient material resources and human resources in upgrading 22 education colleges to 4 - year education colleges simultaneously. Therefore, some suggested to upgrade only some education colleges in big towns as a pilot project. Some suggested education colleges should be affiliated with universities of education.

Paper 2 is proposed curriculum framework for 4 year education degree colleges. In the introduction of present paper, it is stated that teacher education should be reformed according to the reports of CESR, JICA, STEM, etc. As in paper (1), teacher education training programmes of some ASEAN countries are also stated. In this proposed framework, educational subjects, academic subjects, co-curricular activities and practicum are stated in terms of semesters.

Paper (3) is concerned with teacher certification system and teacher licence. According to this paper, there will be three types of certification.
1. 1-year basic course + 3-year primary teacher education primary teacher certificate
2. 1-year basic course + 3-year junior teacher education junior teacher certificate
3. 1-year basic course + 3-year senior teacher education senior teacher certificate

In type 3 of this proposed certification system, a trainee can become a senior teacher after att-tending only four years. But the present universities of education offer 5-year courses for the senior teachers. Then there will be a question if four year course is sufficient to produce a senior teacher while other age-old universities of education still take 5 years to do so.

Paper (4) is discussed for the English language proficiency of in-service teachers. Paper (5) is for the quality assurance of in-service teachers. This paper suggests not to appoint primary teachers without teacher training. It also suggests to revise entrance system for selecting trainees for education colleges, not only to consider academic qualification, but to include attitude on teachers. This paper also suggests to establish Department of Teacher Education under the Ministry of Education. It is found that this suggestion is line with one of the recommendations of CESR.

In paper (6), teacher competency standards framework is discussed. Paper (7) suggests some learning opportunities for the quality assurance of teacher education. Paper (8) is research-based paper which investigates the understanding of the KG teachers on KG curriculum. Findings are based on the responses of questionnaire.

Paper (9) is concerned with promotion system and teacher salaries. In this paper, promotion systems and pay scales of some countries are included. For instance, it is stated that income of primary teachers in Japan, Britain, America and Singapore is higher. But it is high that of other professions in these countries. Promotion system is based not only on services but also on work performance. Based on these findings, some suggestions for changing present salary and promotion system are suggested.

It is an undeniable fact that education plays an important role for the development of a nation. Successful education system depends on teacher education system. Therefore, this forum is important for the country. This forum can be said to be a milestone in an attempt to reform teacher education system of Education Colleges.

Securing an export market for WPC could mitigate deforestation: MPIA

THE Myanmar Plastic Industries Association (MPIA) has made it known they are currently searching for an international market to export wood-plastic composites (WPCs), a substitute for timber which could reportedly mitigate deforestation.

"WPCs can protect against deforestation. It’s not a material which inflicts upon the environment. The sale of a ton of WPCs could mitigate against the sale of a ton of timber. It’s a material that can also provide an income from abroad. It’s currently being produced domestically, with efforts being made to find a foreign market for export. Rather a lot of foreign countries utilise WPcs," said U Htun, president of the MPIA.

The market price for a ton of WPCs within Myanmar of K1.7 million is just half of the current value of such a quantity internationally of K3.4 million. U Htun says that as well as this allowing Myanmar to export WPCs at competitive prices, it could mitigate against deforestation of Myanmar’s woodlands if export business proved to be a success.

WPCs are comprised of seventy percent sawdust and thirty percent plastic and produced as a substitute for timber. It is water, termite and mold resistant and reportedly comes with a twenty year guarantee.

"It’s good that WPCs could protect against the chopping down of trees. That said, it needs to be able to withstand heavy weight. It can be utilised for aesthetic purposes, but I doubt it could be used as flooring or to stack goods," said Maung Soe, a carpenter from Yangon’s Hlaing-Thayta Township.

WPC is currently being manufactured in Myanmar with German technology. Myanmar representatives will reportedly travel to plastic emporiums in Taiwan and Thailand over the next couple of months to showcase the WPC in the hope of securing a foreign market for export.—Myanmar Times News Agency

Letter to the Editor

RECENT announcement by the Department of Post and Telegraph (PTD) under the Ministry of Transport and Communications, to register the phone SIM cards had caused some dissatisfaction among some users. In my opinion it is necessary and is also important to register. In fact when the private operators were allowed to provide mobile phone services, it was necessary for the users to register the SIM cards they purchased right away. I remember I had to provide a copy of my Citizen ID, name and address and if I remember correctly, a copy of Form 10 to the dealer.

Later, it wasn’t the users’ fault, but the dealers didn’t bother to register the cards they sold. It should have been taken actions against the dealers and the operators for not obeying the regulations set by the department concerned. Thus this present situation could have been avoided if all parties—the PTD and the operators such as the MPT, Teleenor and Ooredoo had observed the regulations in the first place.

As for the users, they should try to understand that this is not a new regulation but has been in place right from the start. This is a normal practice in every country.

It is now more important than ever, to have the SIMs registered as the security of the countries in the region are under threat from terrorist groups.

Some people are posting on the social media that it isn’t required in Thailand to register the SIMs. They are wrong. I had noticed long time ago, that every SIM bought had to be registered. Thailand had even gone a step further to tighten the security of their country by requiring every foreigner entering their country to use the tracking SIMs so as to be able to monitor their movements and locate their whereabouts at anytime.

I would like to suggest to the PTD through your esteemed daily to consider introducing the tracking SIMs for the foreigners.

I remain Sir.

Yours truly,

Khin Maung Myint

POEM:

Before rainy season

* In South wayward wind
Moving and swaying young reeds
While their heads up
Drizzle of rains showers
In the evening’s beauty.

* Long poem and trip of twelve months
Is it far ?
Is it long ?
Leaves of willow facing their breasts
And smile.

* That poem is wanted
Not to be lost
According to the law
To take action to those who accept
In among multi-coloured trees
And greenish clouds
Hand the rhymes out
Umm. . . for the poet
There’s just incessant rain
On half of his breast.

Trump backs off ISIS comments; party head appears at rallies in show of unity

ALTOONA (Pa.) — Republican Donald Trump on Friday backed away from comments calling President Barack Obama and Democratic nominee Hillary Clinton the founders of the militant group Islamic State, while the Republican Party sought to project unity behind their candidate.

A new poll showed Trump, whose unfiltered speaking style has repeatedly landed him in hot water, losing ground in three crucial states ahead of the 8 November general election against Clinton.

In a surprise appearance, Republican National Committee Chairman Reince Priebus, who in private expressed fury over some of Trump’s actions earlier this month, introduced the candidate at a campaign event in Erie, Pennsylvania, and the two hugged on stage.

“We’re so honored to be working with Donald Trump and the campaign,” Priebus told thousands of Trump supporters.

“And don’t believe the garbage you read. Let me tell you something. Donald Trump, the Republican Party, all of you, we’re going to put him in the White House and save this country together.”

Republican sources earlier this month said Priebus was furious over Trump’s failure to endorse House of Representatives Speaker Paul Ryan and his feud with the parents of a Muslim American soldier killed in Iraq. Trump did endorse Ryan a few days later.

Trump brought Priebus on stage later at another rally, in Altoona, Pennsylvania, to thank him for the work he has done as he insisted there is great unity in the party.

“I have to say we have great unification,” Trump said.

Trump on Friday told the rally in Altoona and Erie that his remarks earlier this week calling Obama and Clinton the founders of ISIS, as Islamic State is also known, had been sarcastic.

“I have been saying because it’s true, but somewhat sarcastically, that he’s the founder of ISIS and she’s a close second,” Trump said in Altoona.

Trump first made the unconfirmed claim on Wednesday and repeated it throughout the week.

Trump claimed sarcasm in July as well after he was heavily criticized for inviting Russia to dig up tens of thousands of “missing” emails from Clinton’s time as US secretary of state.

A Wall Street Journal/NBC News/Marist poll released on Friday suggested support for Trump is eroding among voters in three battleground states.

Such states are hotly contested because their populations can swing either to Republicans or Democrats and thus play a decisive role in presidential elections, which are ultimately decided by the state-by-state tally of the Electoral College.

The poll found Clinton widening her lead in Colorado, Virginia and North Carolina, while holding her advantage in Florida.

Clinton released her tax returns on Friday, painting the move as a sign of transparency that her campaign says Trump lacks.

US presidential candidates are not required to release their tax returns, but it has become a common custom.

Trump has cited an audit by the Internal Revenue Service in refusing to release his returns. Trump also has said his taxes are not one’s business and that they reveal little.

Trump scheduled a speech in Warren, Ohio, on Monday that will focus on how he would handle the threat posed by Islamic State. Trump has said he would “knock the hell out of ISIS,” without offering details.

Trump has been mired in repeated controversies in recent days. He drew heavy criticism after he suggested gun rights activists could take action against Clinton, a statement he later said was aimed at rallying votes against her.

Nearly one-fifth of registered Republicans now want Trump to drop out of the race for the White House, according to a Reuters/Ipsos poll released on Wednesday.

Republicans frequently trace the birth of Islamic State to the Obama administration’s decision to withdraw the last US forces from Iraq by the end of 2011.

But many analysts argue its roots lie in the decision of George W. Bush’s Republican administration to invade Iraq in 2003 without a plan to fill the vacuum created by Saddam Hussein’s ouster. It was Bush’s administration that negotiated the 2009 agreement that called for the withdrawal of all US forces from Iraq by 31 December, 2011.

At his Erie event, Trump seemed to acknowledge he is facing a formidable opponent in Clinton as well as a difficult electoral path.

“The Republicans have a tougher path — not my fault,” he said. Clinton’s campaign is “smart to keep her out of the spotlight.

“She doesn’t talk to reporters very often. ... She doesn’t expose what’s going on up here, which isn’t good,” he said, meaning her brain. “She’s doesn’t express her mind to questions. What they want to do is try to fake it through the spotlight.

“He said he wants authorities to monitor the voting closely. “I know what’s happening here, folks. She can’t beat what’s happening here.” — Reuters

Russia says Lavrov, Steinmeier to meet on Ukraine, Syria

MOSCOW — The Russian and German foreign ministers, Sergei Lavrov and Frank-Walter Steinmeier, will meet on Monday to discuss the conflicts in Ukraine and Syria, Russia’s Foreign Ministry said on Saturday.

Tensions between Russia and Ukraine escalated this week after President Vladimir Putin accused Ukraine of sabotage plans in Crimea, the peninsula Russia annexed from Ukraine in 2014.

The meeting follows Turkish President Tayyip Erdogan’s visit to Russia this week where he discussed the Syrian conflict with Putin, in their first meeting following a diplomatic rift after Turkey shot down a Russian warplane in November. — Reuters

Malaysia arrests Islamic State suspects for grenade attack on bar in June

KUALA LUMPUR — Malaysian police have arrested nine militants, including two suspected of carrying out a grenade attack, claimed by Islamic State, in Malaysia on Saturday, the country’s police chief said on Saturday.

A known Malaysian IS fighter in Syria, Muhammad Wanndy Muhammad Jeddi, had said in a posting on his Facebook page that the group had carried out the 28 June attack on a bar in the Puchong neighbourhood that wounded eight people.

If the claim was genuine it would have been the first attack by IS on Malaysian soil. Inspector-General of Police Khalid Abu Bakar said in a statement the two men who carried out the attack had been caught in the northeastern state of Kelantan, where they had been awaiting instructions from Wanndy to carry out further attacks. — Reuters

IS leader in Afghanistan killed in US drone strike

WASHINGTON — The head of Islamic State in Afghanistan was killed in a US drone strike last month, the Pentagon said on Friday.

Hafiz Saeed Khan was killed on 26 July in the Achi district of Afghanistan’s eastern Nangarhar province, said Pentagon Deputy Press Secretary Gordon Trowbridge in a statement.

Khan, a former senior leader of the Pakistani Taliban, was appointed head of the IS’s branch in Afghanistan in January 2015 after pledging allegiance to IS leader Abu Bakr al-Baghdaidi, according to a US Treasury sanctions notification last year.

Khan helped establish training camps in western Afghanistan for the IS and was responsible for a series of suicide attacks that killed up to 30 people in Jalalabad in April 2015, the Pentagon said. — Xinhua

Seven injured in refinery flash fire in Texas

HOUSTON — Seven people were injured on Friday after a flash fire broke out at a refinery in Port Arthur, a city about 146 km east of Houston in the US state of Texas.

Kurz thanks Serbia for helping reduce migrant wave

VIENNA — Austrian Foreign Minister Sebastian Kurz on Friday thanked Serbia for its contribution to a reduction of the migrant wave through the closure of the Balkan route.

Following a meeting with a Serbian delegation headed by Prime Minister Aleksandar Vucic, Kurz said Serbia was maintaining excellent cooperation with Austria in dealing with the refugee crisis.

At the same time, Austria is faced with an increased migrant flow via Italy and measures must be taken to reduce it, he said.

The issue of migrants was one of the key topics in the discussions, Serbian Foreign Minister Ivica Dacic said after the meeting. — Tanjug BEIRUT — US-backed forces have seized full control of the northern Syrian city of Manbij near the Turkish border after the last remaining Islamic State fighters, who had been using civilians as human shields, left, a spokesman for the group said on Friday.

Syria Democratic Forces (SDF) were now sweeping the city after the departure of a last remaining group of militants who had been holed up in the city. They had freed over 2,000 civilian hostages who had been held by the militants, Sharfan Darwish of the SDF allied Manbij Military Council told Reuters.

“The city is now fully under our control but we are undertaking sweeping operations,” Darwish said, adding militant sleeper cells in the city were still a threat.

The SDF, with heavy air support from a US-led coalition, said last week they had taken almost complete control of Manbij, where a small number of IS fighters had been holed up.

The SDF’s offensive, which began at the end of May, aims to remove Islamic State from areas it controls along the Turkish border.

The Manbij operation in which US special forces have played a significant role on the ground marks the most ambitious advance by a group allied to Washington in Syria since the United States launched its military campaign against Islamic State two years ago.

Manbij’s loss to the militants is a big blow as it is of strategic importance, serving as a conduit for transit of foreign jihadists and provisions coming from the Turkish border.

Earlier the alliance of Kurdish and Arab fighters grouped in the SDF said Friday’s operation was “the last operation and the last assault.”

Darwish said earlier roughly 100 Islamic State fighters were left in the city centre using civilians as human shields, some of whom were killed trying to flee.

Reuters pictures showed residents being released from an Islamic State-held neighbourhood on Friday and being welcomed by SDF forces.

Kurdish sources and the Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, which monitors Syria’s five-year-old conflict, later said around 500 cars had left Manbij carrying Islamic State members and civilians.

They were heading northeast towards Jarablus, a town under Islamic State control on the Turkish border, the Observatory said.

The convoy carried the final Islamic State members leaving the city, under an agreement between the fighting parties that would not be announced officially, Kurdish sources and the monitor said, marking the end of the operation.

The SDF’s campaign quickly captured the countryside surrounding Manbij, but slowed once fighting entered the city, The SDF said it had been avoiding a large-scale assault inside Manbij out of concern for civilians.

Dozens of civilians, including children and women from Manbij who had fled the city at the height of the aerial strikes, were killed in suspected US coalition air strikes last month, residents and monitors said.

US officials have said once the Manbij operation is completed, it would create the conditions to move on the militant group’s de facto capital of Raqqaa. US officials anticipate a tough battle.

Afghan Taliban free six crew of Pakistani helicopter captured after crash

ISLAMABAD — Five Pakistanis and a Russian who were captured by the Afghan Taliban after their government helicopter crashed in eastern Afghanistan have been released and returned to Pakistan, the foreign ministry said on Saturday.

The Russian-made transport helicopter belonging to the Punjab provincial government was on route from Peshawar in north-west Pakistan to Uzbekistan for maintenance on 4 August, when it suffered a technical failure and crashed-landed in the Taliban-held Logar Province in eastern Afghanistan earlier this month.

The crew’s release was arranged through a handover between tribes in the border region, from where they were transferred to Islamabad by helicopter, the ministry said in a statement.

“The six member crew of Punjab government helicopter that went missing in Afghan­istan on 4th August 2016 has been recovered and arrived in Isla­mabad today,” it said.

Whereas Pakistan acknowledges it wields some influence with the Afghan Taliban, it denies Afghan and US accusations that it provides support and sanctuary for the Afghan Taliban and its leaders.

Pakistan says it has been a victim of terrorism, much of it from groups based in Afghanistan, for years.

Initial reports after the crash had indicated that there were seven passengers but Foreign Min­istry spokesman Naqeez Zakaria said on Saturday that it turned out there were only six on board.

One of the seven people listed on the flight manifest had been unwell and wanted to fly, a ministry official said on condition of anonymity.

Fighting in Yemen kills over 3,700 civilians since March of last year: UN

GENEVA — Ground battles and airstrikes in Yemen have killed 3,704 civilians and injured 6,566 since March of 2015 when Saudi Arabia led a military coalition against the Houthis and Saleh’s forces, a UN official said on Friday.

Ravina Shamsdin, spokes­person for the UN High Commiss­ioner for Human Rights, told a press briefing here on Friday that the number of civilian casualties in Yemen has been steadily mounting over the past few weeks.

“Despite the cessation of hostilities, between 11 April and 11 August of this year, we have documented 515 civilian casualties, including 272 deaths and 543 injured,” she said, adding that of these 49 civilians were killed and another 77 injured in just the past week. She told reporters that only several days ago, on 9 August, an airstrike hit Al Khaffa food facto­ry in the Al Nahdhah district of Sa­na’a, killing 10 civilians, including three women who worked in the factory. According to her, a journal­ist was reportedly struck by two shells on 5 August.

Yemen has been locked in a civil war since the Houthis seized power and overthrew the Yemeni government in late 2014. In March 2015, the Saudi-led coal­ition launched a bombing campaign to restore the legitimacy of the government. However, the mili­tary intervention has deepened the conflict and crises across the country. —Xinhua
Global polio eradication hopes hang in the balance after Nigeria setback

LONDON/GENEVE - After two years in which the disease appeared beaten in Africa, polio eradication hopes hang in the balance with two cases of paralysis in Nigeria suggesting the virus has fought back, UN experts said on Friday.

Many more cases of polio paralysis could come to light as investigators go into areas of northeastern Nigeria where the country’s first cases in the two years were confirmed on Thursday.

“There could very well be more cases,” Michel Zaffran, head of polio at the World Health Organization, told reporters in a series of briefings.

He said health authorities would be carrying out detailed surveillance in the state of Borno and surrounding areas to see whether and how many other children might have been affected.

“If this virus has been circulating for several years, there’s a risk many more children have been paralysed. We need carry out intensive and active surveillance to identify them,” he said.

The polio virus, which invades the nervous system and can cause irreversible paralysis within hours, spreads rapidly among children, especially in insanitary conditions in war-torn regions, refugee camps and areas where healthcare is limited.

Experts estimate that for every case of polio that paralyses its victim, 200 silent infections go undetected.

The WHO said it is planning a large, rapid response to the disease’s re-emergence in Nigeria, beginning next week with emergency vaccination campaigns in four local government areas near the two confirmed cases.

The Islamic extremist group Boko Haram is active in Borno and instability in the northeastern state has hampered efforts to get vaccines to children at risk.

But Zaffran said health authorities would work with local religious and community leaders to try to ensure better access.

“Beyond that, emergency national immunization rounds will also be carried out in Nigeria and neighboring countries of Chad, Cameroon, Niger and the Central African Republic,” he said.

“There is a very active response being planned to ensure that we interrupt this outbreak and do not allow it to spread to neighbouring countries,” Zaffran said.

Zambia’s opposition leader takes narrow early lead in election

LUSAKA — Zambia’s main opposition leader Hakainde Hichilema took an early lead over President Edgar Lungu on Saturday in a tight election battle fought as the key copper producer’s economy stutters due to weak commodity prices.

Zambia will have to hold a second round of elections due to a large voter turnout.

The electoral commission in Zambia (ECZ) delayed announcing the first results on Friday, saying audits were taking longer than expected mainly as investigators go into areas of northeastern Nigeria where the country’s first cases in the two years were confirmed on Thursday.

“The could very well be more cases,” Michel Zaffran, head of polio at the World Health Organisation, told reporters in a series of briefings.

The Islamic extremist group Boko Haram is active in Borno and instability in the northeastern state has hampered efforts to get vaccines to children at risk.

But Zaffran said health authorities would work with local religious and community leaders to try to ensure better access.

“Beyond that, emergency national immunization rounds will also be carried out in Nigeria and neighboring countries of Chad, Cameroon, Niger and the Central African Republic,” he said.

“There is a very active response being planned to ensure that we interrupt this outbreak and do not allow it to spread to neighbouring countries,” Zaffran said.

Brazil sets final impeachment trial date for suspended president

BRASILIA — Brazil’s Supreme Court announced on Friday that the final impeachment trial of suspended President Dilma Rousseff will be held on 25 August.

On 10 August, the Senate voted 59-21 to move ahead with the trial, after a recommendation to do so by its impeachment committee.

Next week, Ricardo Lewandowski, the president of the Supreme Court, will meet with leaders of different political parties to determine the procedure of the trial and voting. He will seek to broker a deal about the length of the sessions, the intervals and the time each senator will have to speak before casting their vote.

Expectation among analysts are that the trial will last under five days, although allies of interim president Michel Temer are seeking to reduce this period further.

A vote by two-thirds of the 81 senators (54 votes) are needed for Rousseff to be impeached and permanently removed from office.

Changing Cuba pays homage to Fidel Castro ahead of 90th birthday

HAVANA — Cuba is awash with official tributes to former leader Fidel Castro ahead of his 90th birthday on Saturday, even as its people and leadership have begun to look beyond the legacy of the Communist-rulled state’s founding figure.

Dotted around Havana, flags read “Gracias, Fidel!” and billboards cite his best-known phrases, while state media churns out stories about the man who toppled a US-backed dictator in 1959 and went on to rule Cuba for nearly half a century.

Thousands are expected to attend street concerts over the weekend in honor of Castro, who is revered as a hero by many for freeing Cuba from US domination and bringing universal health care and education, but loathed by others for his long grip on the island.

“Fidel is an example for the whole world, he is a large personality because of all he did for our country,” said Yoelmis Mengana, a shop owner, after touring an exhibition of photos of Fidel in Havana’s grandiose Hotel Nacional.

The birthday celebrations hark back to an era when “El Comandante” nationalized the economy and ruled almost single-handedly, but Cuba has changed since Fidel’s brother, President Raul Castro, officially took the reins of power in 2008.

The younger Castro, 85, has brought detractors with “eternal enemy” the United States and pushed through market-oriented reforms to the Soviet-style command economy, while also offering more internet access and fewer restrictions on travel.

Hundreds of thousands of Cubans now work for themselves or for small private businesses and a jump in tourism, likely to accelerate with the start of regular commercial flights to and from the United States later this month, has fueled a new sense of openness and economic opportunity on the island.

In public comments, Fidel has lent only lukewarm support to his brother’s initiatives, but his influence has waned externally as well as at home.

On his 80th birthday, Fidel Castro said from an intestinal ailment that nearly killed him, but his ideas were enjoying a renaissance among a bloc of leftist presidents resisting the traditional domination of the United States in Latin America.

A decade later, that bloc is crumbling. In Brazil and Argentina, a shift to the political right has toppled Fidel’s friends.

Venezuela’s socialist President Nicolas Maduro will visit Cuba for Fidel’s birthday, local media reported. But Venezuela, an important ally of Cuba under late left-wing populist Hugo Chavez, is in crisis and has slashed the exports of subsidized oil that Havana long depended on.

It is not clear whether Fidel, who has not been seen out and about for months, will make a public appearance.

At least two dead, two injured as rains pound US Gulf Coast

BATON ROUGE (La) — Torrential downpours in parts of Louisiana and Mississippi caused flooding on Friday that killed at least two men, left two people injured and forced residents to evacuate homes throughout the region, officials said.

Pounding rain over the past two days led Louisiana Governor John Bel Edwards to declare a state of emergency, and forced the closure of schools, government offices and many roads.

The National Weather Service issued a flash flood watch into the weekend for parts of southern Mississippi, southeastern Louisiana, including New Orleans.

The severe weather comes five months after March flooding in Louisiana and Mississippi that left at least four dead and thousands of homes damaged.

The body of a 68-year-old man was recovered near Baker, Louisiana, near the state capital of Baton Rouge, after he drowned while attempting to evacuate, said William “Beau” Clark, coroner in East Baton Rouge Parish.

In northern Louisiana, the body of an unidentified man was recovered from a pickup truck that had been swept off a highway near the town of Greensburg, the St. Helena Parish Sheriff’s Office said.

Officials advised area residents to boil water and imposed a curfew, the sheriff’s office said.

In Mississippi, water rescues were continuing throughout the day and two people were reported with minor injuries in Harrison County, where roads were reopened by the afternoon, the state’s Emergency Management Agency said.

Two counties, Pike and Amite, were experiencing flash and river flooding after being inundated with more than 10 inches (25.4 cm) of rain since midnight, said Mississippi Emergence Management Agency Executive Director Lee Smithson.

Turkey criticises UN rights boss for comments on failed coup

ISTANBUL — Turkey on Saturday criticised a top UN human rights official for saying Ankara should stern its “thirst for revenge” after a failed coup attempt and denied people’s rights were being violated in a purge of officials and professional ranks.

UN High Commissioner for Human Rights Zeid Ra’ad Al Hussein called on Ankara this week to uphold the rights of detainees held since the 15-17 June abortive putsch.

Authorities have suspended, detained or begun investigating thousands of soldiers, police, judges, journalists and civil servants.

Turkish foreign ministry spokesman Tanju Bilgic, in a statement, said “Zeid’s comments were unacceptable.

“It is at best an unfortunate statement for a UN official tasked with guarding human rights to say ‘he has no sympathy’ for coup plotters instead of condemning these terrorists who have attempted this bloody coup,” Bilgic said.

Western allies worry that President Tayyip Erdogan is using the putsch and the purge that has followed to tighten his grip on power.

But many Turks are angered by what they see as a lack of Western sympathy over a violent coup attempt by a rogue faction in the Turkish military using fighter jets, helicopters and tanks in which 240 people died.

Johnny Depp’s family wants him to reunite with Vanessa Paradis

LOS ANGELES — Actor Johnny Depp’s family and friends are reportedly rooting for him to reunite with ex Vanessa Paradis, amid his stalled divorce with Amber Heard. The 53-year-old actor and the Paradis, 43, were together for 14 years before they separated in 2012, reported Aceshowbiz.

“Vanessa has been there for Johnny throughout the entire mess. We’re all rooting for them to get back together!” Lily probably blames Amber for breaking up her parents and she’d love for them to get back together — they both would,” said Heather Rassel, who was once married to Depp’s nephew. The former couple have two children, daughter Lily-Rose Depp and son John Depp III together.

My celebrity crush is Meryl Streep: Idris Elba

LOS ANGELES — Actor Idris Elba says he has a huge crush on veteran actress Meryl Streep.

The 43-year-old “Star Trek Beyond” actor said he became so nervous when he met her that he couldn’t utter a word.

“My celebrity crush is Meryl Streep. When I met her, my tongue swelled up in my mouth,” Elba said.

Apart from Streep the actor said he is a big fan of Denzel Washington and would love to work with him.

“I want to work with Denzel Washington one day. He’s a hero of mine.”

Elba, who is also a DJ, opened up about his love for music saying he started deepjaying when he was just eight years old.

“When I was 8 years old, I deepjayed for my mom’s and dad’s birthday parties and house parties. I felt like a big man. I deepjayed. I’ll shamelessly plug that I just dropped a record of my own called ‘Spectacle,’ which I edited,” he said.—PTI

Dolly Parton never wants to retire

LONDON — Veteran singer Dolly Parton says she has no plans to retire from music.

The 70-year-old country star said ‘retirement’ doesn’t appeal to her and she doesn’t want to miss on the love fans shower on her, reported Digital Spy.

“Why would I ever do that?! That word doesn’t register with me. I cannot possibly imagine retiring. What would I retire to? For me not to think that I would have something to do, that I would miss out on all the excitement and all the fans. All these dreams and creative ideas that I have. There is no way that I would ever retire,” Parton said.

The “Unlikely Angel” singer said only bad health can hold her back from creating music.

“The only thing that would lay me low or even slow me down would be if I were sick or if my husband was sick and needed me. But I intend to work for as long as I can.

“If I’m lucky enough to live to 100, I hope to be like Betty White and Bob Hope and George Burns. I want to be working. And Tony Bennett, he is doing pretty good! I want to be like that!” she said.

Jackie Chan to lend voice to ‘Lego Ninjago Movie’

LOS ANGELES — Chinese action star Jackie Chan, Dave Franco, Kumail Nanjiani and Michael Pena are among the actors who will lend their voices to the latest Lego animated film, “The Lego Ninjago Movie”, Warner Bros announced.

Justin Theroux, Fred Armisen, Abbi Jacobson, Olivia Munn and Zach Woods also are part of the voice cast, according to The Hollywood Reporter.

The plot, per the studio, revolves around the battle of Ninjago City and “calls to action young Lloyd, aka the Green Ninja, along with his friends, who are all secret warriors and Lego Master Builders.

Led by kung fu master Wu, as wise-cracking as he is wise, they must defeat evil warlord Garmadon, the worst guy ever, who also happens to be Lloyd’s dad.

“Pitting mech against mech and father against son, the epic showdown will test this fierce but undisciplined team of everyday ninjas who must learn to check their egos and pull together to unleash their true power,” the studio description added.

Chan will voice Master Wu, while Franco will voice Lloyd. Theroux is playing Garmadon and Munn is taking on the role of Lloyd’s mother. The ninjas will be voiced by Armisen, Jacobson, Nanjiani, Pena and Woods.

The film is being directed by Charlie Bean (‘Tron: Uprising’) and produced by Dan Lin, Phil Lord, Chris Miller and Roy Lee. Maryann Garger also is producing.

22nd Sarajevo Film Festival kicks off

SARAJEVO — The 22nd Sarajevo Film Festival (SFF) officially opened on Friday night with a red carpet ceremony.

The festival was officially opened by two-time Oscar-winning US actor and producer Robert De Niro during a ceremony at the National Theater.

After the opening ceremony, Robert De Niro was presented with the first Honorary Heart of Sarajevo — Lifetime Achievement Award in front of an audience of more than 3,000 people at the Open Air Cinema.

Then, the audience enjoyed Martin Scorsese’s legendary “Taxi Driver” which has been restored for its 40th anniversary in which De Niro starred. In the following eight days, tens of thousands movie lovers will be able to watch 222 films from 61 countries and regions around the world.

The Sarajevo Film Festival, launched in 1995, has become a leading cultural event in the Balkan region. Some 100,000 fans were expected to visit Sarajevo during the event, according to organisers.—Xinhua

Soccer: We lost to ‘cowards’, US keeper says

RIO DE JANEIRO — US goalkeeper Hope Solo called Sweden “a bunch of cowards” after they knocked the United States out of the Olympic women’s football tournament on penalties on Friday.

“I think we showed a lot of heart,” Solo told Sports Illustrated after the Europeans moved into the semi-final 4-3 on penalties. “We came back from a goal down. I’m very proud of this team.”

Neither side could find a breakthrough in extra time, before Sweden’s decisive penalty. Solo, who played her 200th game for her country earlier this month, missed penalties after the game finished 2-2.

“It was the first time that the United States have not reached the Olympic final,” she said.

“Don’t call them cowards.”

Several athletes chose not to come to Brazil citing Zika scares and Solo posted pictures on social media wearing a mosquito mask over her face and carrying industrial quantities of repellent.

She also indulged in what appeared to be blatant game-manship on Friday by calling for a new set of gloves immediately before Sweden’s decisive penalty.

Solo has regularly courted controversy and Friday’s incident was not even her first in these Olympics. The Washington-born goalkeeper was booed mercilessly by experienced Romanian pair.

Spain’s Nadal and Lopez win gold in men’s doubles

RIO DE JANEIRO — Rafa Nadal and Marc Lopez of Spain won the Olympic men’s doubles tennis title on Friday, beating Romania’s Florin Mergea and Horia Tecau to secure their country’s third gold medal of the Rio Games.

Nadal and Lopez defeated the Romanians 6-2, 3-6, 6-4 while American duo Steve Johnson and Jack Sock beat Canada’s Daniel Nestor and Vasek Pospisil 6-2, 6-4 to clinch bronze.

The doubles win sets up Nadal for a potential golden double in the men’s events at the Rio Games as he is still alive in the singles draw.

Nadal, who won singles gold in Beijing eight years ago and missed the 2012 London Games due to a knee injury, will play Argentina’s Juan Martin del Potro in the semi-finals on Saturday.

Nadal said his partner was a close friend even though they had little experience of playing together and were tested by an experienced Romanian pair.

“I think we showed a lot of heart,” Solo told Sports Illustrated after the Europeans moved into the semi-final 4-3 on penalties. “We came back from a goal down. I’m very proud of this team.”

But I also think we played a bunch of cowards,” she said. “The best team did not win today,” she told the sports magazine, later confirming in a Tweet that she had made the comments after the match in Brasilia.

“Sweden dropped off. They did not want open play. They didn’t want to pass the ball. They didn’t want to play great soccer,” she said.

“Losing sucks. I’m really bad at it,” Solo said in her tweet confirming and resendings the comments she made to Sports Illustrated.

The United States were the better team throughout but Alex Morgan and Christie Press missed penalties after the game ended 1-1 after extra time.

It was the first time that the United States have not reached the Olympic final.

“The best teams in the world have to deal with inferior opposition that bunkers in and defends,” former US men’s captain Alexei Lalas said in a tweet. “But they don’t call them cowards.”

Solo has regularly courted controversy and Friday’s incident was not even her first in these Olympics. The Washington-born goalkeeper was booed mercilessly by Brazilian fans angry at her comments on the Zika virus.

Several athletes chose not to come to Brazil citing Zika scares and Solo posted pictures on social media wearing a mosquito mask over her face and carrying industrial quantities of repellent.

She also indulged in what appeared to be blatant game-manship on Friday by calling for a new set of gloves immediately before Sweden’s decisive penalty.

Solo, who played her 200th international last week, played well in her opening two games, with wins over New Zealand and France, but had a nightmare in the 2-2 draw against Colombia and was at fault for both goals.

She had little to do against Sweden as the United States struggled to break down their opponents, who tried to hit them

A gruelling match lasting two hours and 26 minutes was a challenge for Nadal who has had an exhausting schedule and cited fatigue when he pulled out of the mixed doubles on Thursday.

After two matches on Friday, the second of which stretched into the night, Nadal will have little time to recover before the singles semi-final at mid-day on Saturday.

“I will be at a disadvantage, but the scheduling is just something you have to accept,” he said.

Nadal has struggled with a wrist injury this year and the left-hander, more known for his serve and volley play typical of doubles, arrived in Rio having not played since withdrawing from the French Open in May.

“Just 25 days ago I couldn’t even train,” Nadal said, adding that he was unsure until days before the Games whether he would compete at all.

Murray, Nadal both squeak into semi-finals

RIO DE JANEIRO — London Olympic champion Andy Murray reached the semi-finals of the men’s tennis on Friday after winning a third-set tie-break to scrape through a testing encounter against American Steve Johnson.

Spain’s Rafa Nadal also secured a spot in the semi-finals with a hard-fought victory against local favourite Thomaz Bellucci of Brazil, rallying back after losing the first set.

Britain’s Murray, the world number two, edged into the last four with a 6-0, 4-6, 7-6(2) victory but was pushed to the limit by the 22nd-ranked Johnson.

The players traded service breaks and blazing passing shots in the final set but Murray showed steady nerves to win the tie-break, closing out the match with a deftly placed overhead smash.

“It was a very tough match and I just managed to turn it around in the end,” Murray told reporters. “For me it has nothing to do with having won the gold in London. For me it’s about trying to win more medals for the country and the team.”

Murray will face Japan’s Kei Nishikori who edged out France’s Gael Monfils 7-6(4), 4-6, 7-6(6) in a tense third set tie-break after facing repeated match points.

Nadal, ranked fifth in the world, was tested by No. 54-ranked Bellucci in a centre court stadium filled with passionate Argentine fans, but found his rhythm in the final two sets, to clinch the 2-6, 6-4, 6-2 victory.

“The atmosphere was tough, but at the same time I enjoy it,” Nadal told reporters. “I managed to come back in some tough situations.”

Nadal will take on Argentina’s Juan Martin del Potro, who advanced with a 7-5, 7-6(4) win over Spain’s Roberto Bautista Agut, drawing enthusiastic chants from rafters packed with blue-and-white clad fans from neighbouring Argentina.

Nadal will also team up with Marc Lopez in the men’s doubles final against Romania’s Florin Mergea and Horia Tecau.

“After winning a third-set tie-break to go through to the men’s tennis,” Murray will face Japan’s Kei Nishikori who edged out France’s Gael Monfils 7-6(4), 4-6, 7-6(6) in a tense third set tie-break after facing repeated match points.

Singapore euphoric over first ever Olympic gold medal

SINGAPORE — Singapore received its first ever Olympic gold medal on Friday, as Singaporean swimmer Joseph Schooling clinched victory in the 100m butterfly event at the Rio games.

Schooling, 21, won with a time of 50.39 seconds, beating other contenders including giants of the sport, such as American swimmer Michael Phelps.

The victory also marks the first ever gold medal by a Southeast Asian male swimmer.

Thousands of Singaporeans cheered Schooling on while watching the event live on their TV sets or online, while some groups gathered at public places to cheer and celebrate the victory.

Singapore’s Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong immediately posted a congratulatory message online, saying, “You made us very proud today.”

Schooling, who is studying at the University of Texas at Austin, left Singapore in 2009 to train for his swimming career in the United States.

Singapore’s main English language newspaper said, “Joseph Schooling’s single-minded, seven-year chase of his Olympic dream” showed to “the world — and his countrymen back home — what a small country like Singapore can achieve at sport’s pinnacle.”

Despite being Southeast Asia’s most economically advanced economy, Singapore had historically suffered from lacklustre performances in the international sporting arena, lagging behind its regional neighbours, which have accumulated more Olympic medals.

Before the Rio games, Singaporean athletes had won only two silver and two bronze medals in the entire history of the games.

Messi back for Argentina after reversing decision

BUENOS AIRES — Lionel Messi has announced that he will play for Argentina, reversing his decision in June to retire from international football.

The Barcelona forward said he would not play for Argentina again after the team lost to Chile in the final of the Copa America in the United States.

However, in a statement on Friday, Messi explained that he wanted to continue representing his country as he preferred “to help from within”.

“I consider there to be a lot of problems in Argentine football and it’s not my intention to create another one,” the 29-year-old said.

“There are a lot of issues that need to be resolved in Argentine football but I prefer to help from within and not to criticise from the outside. “A lot of things went through my mind on the night of the final and I gave serious thought to quitting but my love for my country and this shirt is too great,” the player said.

A few hours later Messi was named in new coach Edgardo Bauza’s squad to face Uruguay and Venezuela in 2018 World Cup, South American qualifiers to be held in the first week of September. Bauza, who replaced Gerardo Martino after he quit in July over the FA’s failure to prepare a strong under-23 team for the Rio Olympics, was in Barcelona on Thursday for a meeting with his team captain.

Messi, who has scored a national record 55 goals in 113 appearances, has lost four major finals with Argentina, three in the last two years including the 2014 World Cup final to Germany in Brazil.

The June reverse in New Jersey was the second successive Copa America penalty shootout defeat by Chile in 12 months.

Messi, unhappy with the Argentine FA’s running of the team, planned to speak out after the Copa final but felt he could not after they were beaten.

His return will be a relief for the FA, mired in an economic and management crisis and assisted by a so-called regularisation committee appointed by world football’s governing body FIFA.

Schooling, 21, won with a time of 50.39 seconds, beating other contenders including giants of the sport, such as American swimmer Michael Phelps.

The victory also marks the first ever gold medal by a Southeast Asian male swimmer.

Thousands of Singaporeans cheered Schooling on while watching the event live on their TV sets or online, while some groups gathered at public places to cheer and celebrate the victory.

Singapore’s Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong immediately posted a congratulatory message online, saying, “You made us very proud today.”

Schooling, who is studying at the University of Texas at Austin, left Singapore in 2009 to train for his swimming career in the United States.

Singapore’s main English language newspaper said, “Joseph Schooling’s single-minded, seven-year chase of his Olympic dream” showed to “the world — and his countrymen back home — what a small country like Singapore can achieve at sport’s pinnacle.”

Despite being Southeast Asia’s most economically advanced economy, Singapore had historically suffered from lackluster performances in the international sporting arena, lagging behind its regional neighbours, which have accumulated more Olympic medals.

Before the Rio games, Singaporean athletes had won only two silver and two bronze medals in the entire history of the games.
