The month of June saw an apparent spike in threats against the freedom of expression, with the arrests of 5 journalists from 3 media organizations, as well as additional charges laid against media and members of the public.

Tatmadaw detains 3 journalists and 4 civilians

On 26 Jun, the Tatmadaw detained and charged 3 reporters and 4 civilians under the Unlawful Associations Act for allegedly “having connections” with the Ta’ang National Liberation Army (TNLA), an ethnic armed organization.¹ Democratic Voice of Burma (DVB) reporters Aye Naing and Pyae Phone Naing, and Irrawaddy reporter Thein Zaw (aka Lawi Weng) were covering a drug-burning event organized by the TNLA in northern Shan State to mark the International Day against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking, when they were taken into military custody in Shan State.² The court hearing was set for 11 July.³

On 28 Jun, lawyer Robert San Aung said that the journalists “were just doing their jobs in the public interest.”⁴ The arrests alarmed the Burmese media community, fearing increased restrictions on freedom of expression.⁵ Media organizations sent an open letter to the country’s leaders describing the arrest as “ensuring the press”⁵ and calling for the immediate release of the 3 detained journalists.⁶ The New York-based Committee to Protect Journalists described the arrests as “... an affront to democracy in Myanmar.”⁷ Activists said that Section 17(1) of the Unlawful Associations Act was one of the many laws used to suppress opposition.⁸ President’s Office spokesperson Zaw Htay blamed the journalists for the arrests, saying that they should have informed security forces of their presence in a conflict area.⁹

Telecommunications Law: More arrests, more outrage

On 2 Jun, police arrested The Voice Daily’s chief editor Kyaw Min Swe and columnist Kyaw Zwa Naing under the controversial Section 66(d) of the Telecommunications Law for allegedly defaming the Tatmadaw by publishing a satirical article on Burma/Myanmar’s armed conflict and peace process [see May Bulletin].¹⁰ Legal consultant Khin Maung Myint said authorities acted unfairly and inconsistently after the Bahan Township Court rejected bail for Kyaw Min Swe and Kyaw Zwa Naing on 8 Jun.¹¹

On 16 Jun, Kyaw Min Swe testified he was solely responsible for posting the article on social media. The court dropped the charge against Kyaw Zwa Naing and released him because his article was to be printed and not distributed online. On 16, 23, and 30 Jun, the court denied the bail requests of Kyaw Min Swe, who was not in good health.¹²

On 23 Jun, the police summoned Kyaw Min Swe and Kyaw Zwa Naing once again for further investigation into the case under another lawsuit filed by the Tatmadaw over the same satirical article.¹³ The lawyers of Kyaw Min Swe and Kyaw Zwa Naing pointed out that it is prohibited to charge the same people in the same case with a different clause of a law.¹⁴

HUMAN RIGHTS

Anti-Muslim tensions simmer

On 2 Jun, Burmese/Myanmar authorities charged 3 Muslims for praying in front of a shuttered Islamic school [see April Bulletin] in Rangoon/Yangon.\textsuperscript{30} Rangoon officials threatened to take action against people praying in public without official permission as they allegedly blocked the road and threatened "stability and the rule of law" but local Muslims said they did not have enough places to pray.\textsuperscript{31} Human Rights Watch said that "religious believers should not be threatened or criminally charged simply for exercising their fundamental right to observe and practice their religion".\textsuperscript{32}

On 5 Jun, Arakan/Rakhine State lawmakers urged the government to build more non-Muslim ethnic villages in Muslim-majority townships in northern Arakan State. Deputy Minister of Border Affairs Gen Than Htut said that 36 villages were already built in Buthidaung and Maungdaw townships for local Rakhine and other non-Muslim households; the government provided them with a home, farmland, garden space, a trishaw, sewing machine, rice and other food supplies, and a cultivator.\textsuperscript{33}

In Jun, supporters held "We Love Wirathu" campaigns to defend the extremist monk Wirathu after Anti-FALSE Buddhist Doctrine Group collected signatures across Rangoon for a petition asking the State Sangha Maha Nayaka Committee (Ma Ha Na) to publicly clarify whether or not Wirathu's actions and speeches conformed with Buddha’s teachings.\textsuperscript{34} On 12 Jun, media reported that Wirathu accused Facebook of "falling under control of Muslims" after his accounts were blocked.\textsuperscript{35}

23 Jun: The Tatmadaw released 67 children and young people from its rank in the first discharge to take place in 2017.

24 Jun: US Secretary of State Rex Tillerson, disregarding his own staff assessments, removed Burma from a US list of the world’s worst offenders on the use of child soldiers. Human Rights Watch said it was a "completely premature and disastrous action that will effectively betray more children to continued servitude and rights abuses."

29 Jun: The police charged 4 local farmers under Article 19 of the Peaceful Assembly Law for protesting against the Letpadaung copper mine, together with dozens of local farmers. The farmers said that the company’s mining was causing air pollution and environmental degradation.

WOMEN RIGHTS

Victims of military sexual violence still denied justice, intimidated

On 19 Jun – International Day for the Elimination of Sexual Violence in Conflict – women’s rights groups stressed the need for justice for victims of violence. Kachin Peace Network liaison officer Khon Ja declared that there was no justice for victims of sexual violence in conflict areas of Kachin and Shan states. Director of Htoi Gender and Development Foundation Nang Pu said that rape was used as a weapon in conflict, the Tatmadaw enjoyed impunity, and survivors were threatened not to report cases. Shan State Women Affairs Committee member and SNLD lawmaker Nang Khin Htar Yee said soldiers were responsible for most rapes in Shan State, but were not held accountable.

Phalon-Sawaw Democratic Party’s Women Affairs Committee chairperson Nay Say Hwa called for a separate law specifically to prevent sexual violence in conflict zones and an increased participation of women at the country’s major decision-making level to encourage more prevention and protection plans.

Tatmadaw aircraft crashes, 122 people killed

On 7 Jun, a Y-8F 200 Tatmadaw aircraft crashed into the Andaman Sea during a routine flight from the southern city of Myeik to Rangoon/Yangon, killing 122 people on board. Most of the passengers were the wives and children of servicemen.55 On 18 Jun, navy vessels and fishing trawlers recovered 92 bodies and plane debris off the coast of the town of Dawei.53

Tatmadaw Commander-in-Chief Sr-Gen Min Aung Hlaing said that the 3 possible causes for the crash were mechanical failure, an explosive material on board or pilot error.54 A Burmese/Myanmar ship retrieved the black box of the plane, which consisted of a digital flight data recorder and a cockpit voice recorder, raising hopes of discovering the still unknown cause of the plane crash.55

ETHNIC AFFAIRS AND CONFLICT

Fighting increases in Kachin and Shan states; thousands newly displaced

On 23 Jun, the Northern Alliance – composed of the Kachin Independence Army (KIA), Arakan Army (AA), Ta’ang National Liberation Army (TNLA), and Myanmar National Democratic Alliance Army (MNDAA) – accused the Tatmadaw of launching increased offensive operations against its members.56

On 3 Jun, renewed hostilities broke out between the Tatmadaw and the KIA in KIA-controlled gold and amber mining areas of Tanai Township, Kachin State. First clashes were reported near Nam Byu and N’Ga Ga villages. Local residents said that artillery shells hit a house in Kawng Ra village, injuring a woman and her 2 daughters.57

On 5 Jun, the Tatmadaw dropped warning letters in the mining areas, ordering all people to leave their homes by 15 Jun - or be arrested and charged for having connections with the KIA.58 It stated that the purpose of this ―clearance operation‖ was to eliminate the mining’s negative environmental impact.59 Rights groups questioned if the Tatmadaw’s concern for the environment was genuine, considering that the government-approved jade mining in Hpakant damaged Burma’s “jade land”.60 KIA officials said that the Tatmadaw’s attack was an attempt to cut KIA’s sources of income.61

As a consequence, thousands of people fled, but locals said that some villagers remained behind in nearby villages.62 On 7 Jun, authorities prevented 500 to 700 villagers from traveling by boat to the safety of Tanai Town.63

On 16 Jun, as the deadline passed for civilians to leave the mining areas in Tanai Township, fighting between the Tatmadaw and the KIA flared anew. Clashes were reported at Ja Htu Zup and Kaung Ra villages.64 On 22 Jun, in a further escalation of the conflict, the Tatmadaw ordered people in Tingkawk village, Tanai Township, and Nawng Mi, Warazup, and Shaduzup villages, Hpakant Township, to not leave their villages until 2 Jul as the Tatmadaw prepared for battles in the area.69

On 22-27 Jun, the Tatmadaw launched an offensive against a TNLA base near Man Lan village, Namhsan Township, northern Shan State.66 Hundreds of people left their homes to escape the shells rained down during the Tatmadaw’s assault. At least 2 civilians were killed and hostilities were reported to be ongoing in areas of Kutkai and Namhsan townships.67 On 26 Jun, artillery shells fell on Pain Hwal village, Kutkai Township, killing 2 residents and injuring 1 other. Shells also landed in nearby Namkhon and Pan Say villages.68

Man Lan residents said that Tatmadaw troops from IB 501 and 503 entered their village without provocation and detained residents, beating and accusing them of having links with the TNLA.69

Situation in Arakan State further deteriorates

On 20-21 Jun, the Burmese security forces raided a suspected insurgents’ camp and killed 3 men during a 2-day clearance operation on the Mayu mountain range in Maungdaw and Buthidaung townships, Arakan/Rakhine State.70 The government claimed that an anonymous source told them that armed training sessions have been carried out in the mountains of the region over a long period, and that militants were “regrouping” in the area.71

Attacks against civilians continued in Arakan State. On 24-25 Jun, 4 more people were killed in 3 other violent incidents.72 As authorities identified the perpetrators as Muslims, the incidents increased the mistrust between Buddhist and Muslim communities living in the area.73 Fearing further attacks, about 200 Rakhine Buddhist from villages in Maungdaw Township left their houses.74 The State Counselor Office Information Committee said that 38 residents were murdered and 22 people went missing or were abducted between 9 Oct 16 to 26 Jun 17 in Maungdaw Township.75

Meanwhile, on 29 Jun, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs ordered its embassies not to issue visas to UN fact-finding mission members, re-asserting its refusal to cooperate with the UN’s efforts to investigate reported atrocities by the Tatmadaw in Arakan State.76

Peace process updates:

1 Jun: The Shan Nationalities League for Democracy (SNLD) requested the National League for Democracy (NLD) government to eliminate the term “non-secession” from the political dialogue. It reminded the government that the Shan State freely decided to join the Union and wanted this freedom and dignity maintained.77

8 Jun: The KNU-Concerned Group – chaired by Padoh Naw Zipporah Sein, former vice president of the Karen National Union (KNU) – rejected the 37 points agreed upon at the second round of the 21st Century Panglong Conference [see May Bulletin]. It said that those principles were not all-inclusive of ethnic groups.78

20-29 Jun: The United Nationalities Federal Council (UNFC) held a conference in Chiang Mai, Thailand to discuss the future of the coalition. Senior KIA official and outgoing UNFC chairperson Lt Gen N’Ban La said the recent KIO/KIA switch from the UNFC to the Panghsang group was a necessary move to be "more united" with northern allies because of "...the government’s and the Tatmadaw’s pressure, and discriminatory administration practices" [see February Bulletin]. The UNFC elected Nai Hong Sar – New Mon State Party (NMSP) member and previous UNFC vice chairperson – as new chairperson.

Other developments:

9 Jun: Jakarta-based Institution for Policy Analysis of Conflict (ICAP) warned that "...the persecution of Muslims in Burma adds to the potential for radicalization in diaspora communities and to the perception in extremist circles in Southeast Asia that Rohingyas are ripe for recruitment."

9 Jun: National Socialist Council of Nagaland-Khaplang (NSCN-K) leader Shangwang Shangyang Khaplang died aged 77. The NSCN-K did not announce a successor.

13 Jun: A Kachin Independence Organization (KIO) tribunal sentenced poppy growers Nsan Naw Mai and Diapha Gam from Tayawn village, Tanai Township, to death and 7 years’ imprisonment respectively for killing anti-drug activist Lahtaw Tu Sai on 15 Jan 2016.

16 Jun: The Chin National Democratic Party (CNDP) and Chin Progressive Party (CPP) agreed to merge into one political party.

21 Jun: The Karenni Civil Society Natwork (KCSN) called for the withdrawal of Tatmadaw troops, the cessation of mega-development projects, and the provision of humanitarian assistance for refugees in order to guarantee peace in Karenni/Kayah State.

DISPLACEMENT

IDPs in Arakan State still facing discrimination, ad hoc measures

Burmese/Myanmar authorities started closing camps for long-term internally displaced persons (IDPs) in Arakan/Rakhine State, as recommended by the interim report of the Advisory Commission on Rakhine State [see March Bulletin]. However, IDPs criticized the way the government began the task. Authorities prevented Muslim Kaman IDPs in Ramree camp from returning to their land due to alleged security concerns and offered them money to relocate in other places. Arakanese Buddhists were instead resettled to newly-built homes in the neighboring Kyaukphyu area.

Meanwhile, UNHCR associate communications Officer Andrew Dusek said that IDPs forced to leave their homes in the context of the clearance operations carried out in Maungdaw Township [see October Bulletin] urgently needed shelter solutions. OCHA noted that the IDPs expressed concerns over the government’s plan to build 13 “model villages” for 1,152 households. They worried about limited space and future livelihoods in these new villages.
Other developments:

1 Jun: Karen National Union (KNU)’s Mutraw District officials supported IDPs’ demands for the Tatmadaw to withdraw its troops from villages in Mutraw District, Karen State, and let them return to their homes.

2 Jun: Media reported that a refugee was found dead in Kutupalong camp, Bangladesh.

3 Jun: Malaysian police caught 6 human traffickers selling Rohingya children in Malaysia, rescuing 11 victims and finding evidence of the sale of other 6, each for about US$ 300.

5 Jun: To mark State Counselor Aung San Suu Kyi’s visit to Canada, Karen refugees in Canada published an open letter to raise concerns over militarization and human rights abuses in ethnic areas of Burma/Myanmar even while the government pushes ahead with the peace process.

7 Jun: Clashes in mining areas of Tanai Township, Kachin State, forced thousands of people to flee their homes [see Ethnic Affairs and Conflict].

11 Jun: The Khalifa Bin Zayed Al Nahyan Foundation (KBZF) gave 1,870 food baskets to over 900 Rohingya refugee families in Malaysia.

19 Jun: The International Organization for Migration (IOM) reported that suicide among Burmese refugees in Mae La camp, Thailand, increased at an alarming rate in the last 2 years.

DEMOCRACY AND GOVERNANCE

NLD bars members from public criticism of govt, party

On 24-25 June, the National League for Democracy (NLD) banned its members from leaking information to the press and from making social media criticisms against party members or the government. Central Executive Committee member Win Htein said that members can criticize the government and the party through letters or oral discourses, but not through the press or social media. Violators will face sanctions and charges in accordance with the party’s rules and regulations.

ECONOMY

China freezes Burmese bank accounts for alleged links to online gambling

On 23 June, about 200 traders in Muse trade zone, Shan State, protested after the Agricultural Bank of China (ABC) froze several traders’ accounts on 14 June, over alleged links with online gambling, and illegal transfers in 3 provinces. On the same day, ABC reopened about a third of the accounts.
There are varying figures on the number of frozen Burmese/Myanmar citizens’ accounts—ranging from 132 according to the Myanmar Ministry of Commerce, to 341 according to Muse District Administrator Kyaw Kyaw Tun.

Issues continue to plague the Kyaukphyu SEZ project

On 9 Jun, extensive research revealed that work on contracts and land acquisition for the Kyaukphyu Special Economic Zone (SEZ) in Arakan/Rakhine State had already begun, ahead of environmental and social impact assessments. Legal experts said this could be in breach of national laws. Experts added that while environmental and social assessments had not yet started, Kyaukphyu SEZ’s main developer Beijing-based CITIC Group (CITIC.UL) asked Burma to finalize contract terms by the end of 2017 so that the construction could start in 2018. Experts feared that the project was being rushed, since environmental and social preparations would take years to complete.

On 19 Jun, farmers proposed compensation rates for the 250 acres of land, located in 4 village tracts in Kyaukphyu Township, selected for part of the Kyaukphyu SEZ. The farmers proposed up to K90 million (US $66,000) per acre as compensation for paddy fields, K70 million (US $51,000) per acre for pastureland and K50 million (US $36,000) per acre for farmland acquired for the project. The proposal came after a meeting between Kyaukphyu SEZ committee chairman Dr. Soe Win and 63 farmers from Thaing Chaung, Kat Tha Pyay, Chaung Wa and Khandi villages. The Kyaukphyu SEZ committee did not comment on the amounts requested. Arakan National Party’s regional MP Phoe San criticized the meeting as lacking transparency and said the authorities should have included lawmakers and local organizations at the meeting and released the discussions to the public.

On 28 Jun, MP Phoe San pointed out at a parliamentary session that nearly K35.5 million (US $26,000) remained unaccounted for out of the K65 million (US $47,000) state fund for compensation for the water reservoir project which would provide water for the Kyaukphyu SEZ. Before implementing the project, the Myanmar Kyaukphyu Special Economic Holding Public Company Ltd. (MKSH) negotiated the compensation between the government and the farmers. Divisional minister of mining, agriculture, and livestock Kyaw Lwin said that MKSH withdrew K28 million (US $20,000) of the fund from the government and deposited it at a local bank. MKSH member Kyaw Soe denied this and said that the company fronted the said amount for seized land but K18.5 million (US $13,500) was already repaid by the state government.

UN denies report of Burma’s resident coordinator leaving her UN post

On 23 June, the United Nations (UN) denied reports that UN resident coordinator in Burma/Myanmar Renata Lok-Dessallien was being ‘rotated’. On 13 June, media reported that Lok-Dessallien was leaving the UN post for her failure to prioritize human rights, referring to an internal document prepared for the new UN Secretary General Antonio Guterres. The UN clarified that the Resident Coordinator post in Burma would be elevated to the level of an Assistant Secretary-General to further strengthen collaboration between the UN and Burma.
