Lawsuit filed against owners of Ava tailoring for allegedly abusing maids

THE Myanmar Anti-Human Trafficking Unit and Yangon Region Social Welfare Department have filed lawsuits against the owners of Ava Tailoring, accusing them of abusing their two maids.

Following a formal complaint on 22 June against the accused, the Myanmar National Human Rights Commission asked Kyauktada Township Police to investigate the case, alleging that maids San Kay Khine, 17, and Thazin, 16, were ‘tortured’ by their employers, said U Zaw Win, a member of the Myanmar National Human Rights Commission, at a press conference in Yangon yesterday. The commission found that the two girls have been working at the house for two years and were reportedly kept away from their relatives without being paid salaries in later month.

The man who made the complaint suggested that the parents of the victims file a lawsuit against the owners of the tailor shop on 15 August. The two maids were returned to their parents in early September after a police investigation. But during negotiations mediated by MNHRC, the victims agreed to a Ks5 million settlement instead of pursuing the case in court.

THE Pyithu Hluttaw meeting continued for the 37th day with a question and answer session and the submission of a proposal yesterday.

In his response to questions regarding the agriculture sector, Union Minister for Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation Dr Aung Thu said that the distribution of quality strains, agricultural inputs and farming equipment to farmers are being carried out along with educational talks on the dissemination of knowledge about the use of fertilizers and pesticides, the establishment of modern research farmlands and the inspection and issuance of licenses regarding agricultural inputs.

The ministry will seek technological and financial assistance from international development partners pertaining to the improvement of waterways and the maintenance of dams, added the Union minister.

On a question regarding whether a plan to change the date of Peasants’ Day, held yearly on every 2 March, the Union minister stressed the need for farmers’ consent and legal procedures to change the date, adding that the ministry has no plan to change the date of Peasants’ Day.

During yesterday’s session, U Kyaw Aung Lwin of Setotaya Constituency submitted a proposal calling for the Union government to make efforts to help and protect abused and exploited Myanmar citizens working abroad in cooperation with designated countries to the parliament.

Bill to amend the 1973 Law of Myanmar Board of Examinations to be reviewed

THE Amyotha Hluttaw decided to review a bill to amend the 1973 Law of Myanmar Board of Examinations following a debate on the bill by parliamentarians during its 35th day meeting yesterday.

In his discussion, U Soe Thein alias U Maung Soe of Taninthayi Region Constituency No 10 pointed out that some words contained in the bill need to be amended and removed in order to meet legal terms and to be more meaningful.

Likewise, U Kyaw Naing of Yangon Region Constituency 12 said that there would be no changes in the Myanmar Board of Examinations if it was to be formed again with those in the education sector led by the Minister for Education as chairman in accordance with the previous law, calling for the development of syllabi and curricula and for the formation of the Board to meet international standards.

Dr Than Win of Mandalay Region Constituency 1 expressed his support for the bill, stating that the bill provides room for action against student misconduct during exams.

An education system depends upon the existence of an examination system, one that can guarantee the eradication of examination malpractices, added the lawmaker.

Regarding the bill, the Speaker of the Amyotha Hluttaw said that the bill will be reviewed by the Bill Committee.

Next, the Bill to repeal Emergency Provisions Act was approved as submitted by the Bill Committee and parliamentarians were invited to discuss the third revised bill to amend the Ward or Village-tract Administration Law sent back by the Pyithu Hluttaw with amendments.

During yesterday’s Amyotha Hluttaw session, Deputy Minister for Electricity and Energy Dr Tun Naing responded to questions regarding matters related to electrification.

Regarding a call for the connection of electricity to Tamu in Sagaing Region via the national power grid, the deputy minister said that budgets have been set for the 2017-2018 FY to implement construction of sub-power station projects and the installation of a 230KV Kalay-Tamu power line that will run 90 miles. Upon completion, Tamu will be provided with electricity from the national power grid.

Likewise, the deputy minister replied to questions regarding electrification in Chin State, saying that the installation of a 66KV Mindat-Matupi power line and construction of a sub-power station are being implemented by the tender-winning Aung Myint Mo Co., Ltd.

The ministry will seek a budget to install a 66 KV power line to Yayzwa at an opportune time following a feasibility study there, added the deputy minister.

On the power supply to Lailinpin, arrangements have been made to electrify the town using a 250KVA diesel generator and plans are underway to set up a 2.75-mile power line in next fiscal year, said the deputy minister.

In his response to a question regarding embezzlement cases involving rural electrification activities, the deputy minister said that the ministry laid down a set of 12 points for rural electrification committees to follow, saying that action is being taken against persons including departmental personnel suspected of being involved in embezzlement cases.—Myanmar News Agency

Garment industry sector rapidly expanding

THE foreign exported value from the garment industry under the cutting-making and packing (CMP) system sits at US$ 745.488 million for the 2016-2017 FY, representing an increase of over US$ 500 million compared with the same period last year, according to the Ministry of Commerce.

Last year, US$ 232,808 million was earned from the garment industry. According to World Atlas Data, Myanmar exported US$ 1.6 billion worth of garment finished products over the 2015-2016 FY, however Myanmar will only receive 10 per cent of that due to the country’s limited ability to value-add to the products.

Japan tops the list for orders of garment products from Myanmar. In 2015, Myanmar exported US$ 580 million worth of garment products to Japan, it has been learned from the Myanmar Garment Entrepreneurs Association.

Myanmar has the potential to more than double its garment exports by exporting garments to the USA, according to the MGEA.

“Foreign companies are ready to implement local garment industry investment but we are still dealing with the government to get the land we need,” said U Aung Naing Oo, director general of the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration.

The Directorate of Investment and Company Administration is planning to lay out a local garment industry zone in Yangon and Bago regions.

MPT SIM Card registry reaches over 1,700 in Lashio Township

OVER 1,700 users of Myanmar Post and Telecommunication (MPT) SIM Cards in Lashio have registered as of 19th August, it is learnt from MPT.

US bombers fly over South Korea for second time since North’s nuclear test

OSAN (South Korea) — Two US supersonic bombers flew over South Korea on Wednesday, with one of them landing at an air base 40 km (25 miles) south of the capital, the second such flight since North Korea’s 9 September nuclear test.

US Forces Korea said the flight by a pair of B-1B Lancer strategic bombers based in Guam was a show of force and of US commitment to preserve the security of the peninsula and the region. The United States, which has about 28,500 troops in South Korea, also showed a B-1B bomber landing at the base in South Korea.

The South’s Yonhap news agency said the aircraft flew over a US live-fire training site in the Pocheon area bordering the North.

North Korea has ignored global condemnation of its fifth nuclear test on 9 September, and this week it said it had successfully tested a new rocket engine that would be used to launch satellites, again in violation of UN sanctions.

The leaders of the United States and China, which is the North’s main diplomatic ally and economic benefactor, condemned the latest nuclear test and pledged to step up cooperation at the United Nations and in law enforcement channels.

UN diplomats say the two countries have begun discussions on a possible UN resolution in response to the latest nuclear test, but China has not said directly whether it would support tougher steps against North Korea. China, which has objected to the US deployment of a THAAD missile defence system in the South, could counter the North’s missile threat, called on “all parties to exercise restraint and to avoid any actions that could further escalate tensions”.

South Korea’s prime minister, Hwang Kyo-ahn, told parliament South Korea wanted existing UN sanctions against the North tightened by removing loopholes that allow it to trade in minerals, if it is for subsistence.

North Korea has been testing nuclear weapons and ballistic missiles at an unprecedented rate this year, beginning with its fourth nuclear test in January and including the launch of a satellite in February that was widely seen as a test of long-range ballistic missile technology. The North’s test of a new rocket engine for satellite launches this week was believed to be part of a long-range missile programme, according to the South’s military. North Korea’s leader, Kim Jong Un, ordered preparations for the launch of a satellite “as soon as possible” on the basis of the successful test, its state media reported.

North Korea this month fired three missiles that flew about 1,000 km (600 miles), and in August tested a submarine-launched ballistic missile that experts said showed considerable progress. It also launched an intermediate-range missile in June that experts said marked a technological advance for the isolated state after several failed tests.

Philippines to suspend over ten more mines in environmental crackdown: minister

MANILA The Philippines will suspend more than 10 additional mines in an ongoing environmental crackdown on the sector but the announcement of who will be shut has been moved to on 26 September, the minister in charge of mining said on Wednesday.

The Southeast Asian nation, the world’s top supplier of nickel ore, has already halted the operations of 10 mines, eight of them nickel producers, for environmental lapses since it launched an audit in July, stoking increases in global prices.

Environment and Natural Resources Secretary Regina Lopez said more than 10 additional mines will “definitely” be suspended “because of the many violations.”

Other details, including the identities of those to be suspended, will be announced on 26 September, she said.

On Monday, Lopez told Reuters that it was “possible” that a further 10 or more mines could be suspended.

As Mongolia teeters, bond investors bank on China for bailout

HONG KONGLONDON — Holders of Mongolia’s high-yielding dollar bonds are looking beyond a sharp rise in sovereign default risks on a bet that China or the International Monetary Fund (IMF) will help cushion the once-booming commodity producer to stay solvent.

Mongolia, a vast country of 3 million people, is perhaps the most extreme example among oil and metal-rich nations that binged on debt during the good times and were pitched into hardship when the commodity boom bust turned to bust. The borrowings have left the $12 billion economy staggering under total foreign debt — public and private — of over $20 billion, and a state debt burden that the government predicts could hit 78 per cent of annual output by the end of the year.

Other countries in Mongolia’s high-risk “B” rating category have an average 50 per cent debt ratio, the Moody’s agency says.

On Wednesday, the country’s state-backed development bank must pay a $16.7 million coupon to bondholders.

That is unlikely to pose a problem but over $1 billion of bonds mature between March 2017 and January 2018, while $120 million in coupons are due from now to the end of this year. “In terms of Mongolia’s economics these are very significant amounts,” said Weafer, senior partner at the Mac-Rayo Advisory consultancy.

Mining firms’ woes are adding to the headache — Hong Kong-listed Mongolian Mining Corp is in default and Reuters reported last week that state-controlled Erdener was prevented from transacting metals sales in London after a court froze its UK assets over unpaid debts.

News of acute dollar shortages within Mongolia have increased investors’ unease. The tugrik currency has slumped 15 per cent since June and the government has even fallen behind on payrolls to Olympic athletes.

In contrast to the panic within Mongolia, its sovereign bonds have weakened but not collapsed — the 2018, 2021 and 2022 bonds trade between 85 and 103 cents in the dollar, levels that don’t imply serious default concerns.”

China’s premier says US ties will develop no matter who wins election

NEW YORK — China and the United States will keep developing positive relations no matter who wins November’s US presidential election, Chinese Premier Li Keqiang told an economic forum in New York on Tuesday.

Li declined to comment on which candidate he favoured.

Republican Donald Trump has threatened to slap tariffs on Chinese goods and push for tougher trade talks if elected. His Democratic rival, Hillary Clinton, has changed tack on trade, backing free trade deals.

Both candidates have been critical of China’s assertive pursuit of territory in the South China Sea, a potential flashpoint in Asia and a cause of significant friction in relations between Washington and Beijing. Li, who was attending the UN General Assembly in New York, said the US election was an internal affair for the United States, so what he could say was very limited, but he went on to remark: “No matter who gets elected in the US presidential election, I believe China-US ties will continue to grow steadily and in a positive direction.”

Li responded to complaints from foreign business leaders about restricted access to the Chinese market by saying that China was open to foreign investment, although some economic sectors were not yet mature.

“This process of them becoming more mature is also a process for them to open up and the areas of the Chinese economy open to foreign investment will only increase and China will only open its door even wider. The door will not close,” he said.

Referring to a US-China Bilateral Investment Treaty that has been long in negotiation given disagreements about access to sectors the sides deem sensitive, Li said as long as both countries took a strong and pragmatic approach, they would be able to reach a mutually beneficial agreement.

As an example of China’s willingness to open up its markets, Li said China had decided to designate a Chinese investment bank as a clearing bank for renminbi business in New York and welcomed foreign banks in the city which met eligibility requirements to become clearing banks for the currency.

He also said China would soon allow imports of beef from the United States, now that Chinese quarantine procedures had been completed. Li pledged that China would not engineer a devaluation of its currency to boost exports for its economy, which is growing at its slowest rate in two decades. Some critics in Washington have alleged Beijing is still manipulating its currency, although the US Treasury says its assessment is that it is not under-valued. China’s economy will continue its growth momentum this year, Li said. “I can say here that in the third quarter of this year, or until the end of this year, China’s economy will maintain this momentum of steady growth.” China’s growth target for this year is 6.5 to 7 per cent. In the second quarter of this year, the world’s second-largest economy grew 6.7 pec ent from a year ago, according to official data.

South Korea says aid to flood-hit North Korea improper

SEOUL— South Korea’s Unification Ministry said Wednesday that providing assistance to flood-hit North Korea is inappropriate in the wake of Pyongyang’s repeated provocations, including its claim just the previous day to have successfully tested a new rocket engine.

“North Korean leader Kim Jong Un is seen laughing heartily at the engine test site while (the North) is claiming to have suffered its largest-ever damage from flooding since national liberation,” ministry spokesman Jeong Joon Hee said during a press briefing.

“This with this double-dealing attitude of North Korea taken into account, I think we should ask ourselves whether moves like these are appropriate,” he said, referring to a request by a South Korean civic organisation for permission to contact the North Korean side to discuss the supply of relief materials.

The ministry, which is responsible for relations with North Korea, said Monday it rejected the request.

North Korea said Tuesday it successfully tested a new high-powered rocket engine ostensibly for launching satellites, but which was seen as another step in the North’s quest for an intercontinental ballistic missile.

In a photo carried Tuesday by the North’s Rodong Sinmun, the mouthpiece of the ruling Workers’ Party of Korea, Kim is seen laughing at the engine test site.

North Korea’s fifth nuclear test on 9 September and a string of launches of various types of missiles and artillery shells have drawn a storm of condemnation from the United States, Japan, and South Korea. South Korea’s opposition parties, meanwhile, have increased calls for the government to provide aid to North Korea by separating humanitarian aid from the nuclear test.

A 11 September report by the North’s official Korean Central News Agency said, “recently, strong wind and heavy rainfalls, the worst-ever climatic phenomenon in Korea after its liberation, swept over several cities and counties along the River Tuman in the northern part of the DPRK, causing huge losses.” DPRK is the acronym of North Korea’s formal name, the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea.

“The storm and flooding left houses tens of thousands of families and public buildings collapsed and railways, roads, electric power system, industrial establishment and farm lands destroyed or submerged,” it said.

Japan likely to scrap fast-breeder nuclear reactor: reports

TOKYO — Japan is likely to scrap a prototype fast-breeder nuclear reactor in the country’s west that has operated for less than a year in over two decades, local media reported on Wednesday.

More than 1 trillion yen ($9.84 billion) of publicly injected money has been injected into the Monju facility, but Japan’s nuclear regulator last year declared its operator unfit following years of accidents, missteps and falsification of documents.

The government is also grappling with a wave of anti-nuclear sentiment among its population in the wake of the Fukushima atomic disaster.

Tokyo believes it would be difficult to gain public support to spend another $80 billion yen on the project over the next 18 years if the reactor was restarted, the Nikkei business daily and Mainichi newspaper said, without citing sources.

A government official did not immediately respond to a request for comment from Reuters. The reactor’s operator, the Japan Atomic Energy Agency, declined to comment.

Science Minister Hirokazu Matsuno, Trade Minister Hiroshige Seko and others will hold a meeting on nuclear issues on Wednesday, with media reporting that they will likely decide to shift policy away from developing the fast-breeder reactor.

A formal decision to decommission Monju is likely to follow by year-end after talks with local governments, the Nikkei and Mainichi added.

The call to decommission Monju has been growing in the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, with scant results from using around 20 billion yen of public money a year for maintenance alone.

Located 400 km (250 miles) west of Tokyo, the 280-megawatt reactor was designed to burn plutonium refined from spent fuel at conventional reactors to create more fuel than it consumes. That process that was seen promising for a country whose limited natural resources force it to rely on imports for virtually all its oil and gas needs.

With all but three of Japan’s 42 commercial reactors still shut as a result of the 2011 Fukushima disaster, there is little meaning to the costly exercise of extracting more plutonium from spent fuel, critics say.

The Yomiuri newspaper said Japan would continue to develop a fast breeder technological demonstration reactor that has been proposed in France.

Japan will also continue research at its first experimental fast-breeder reactor, Joyo, a predecessor of Monju, the Nikkei said.—Reuters

No excuse for abuse

Kyaw Thura

The number of people affected by humanitarian crises has almost doubled in the past decade, with more than 76 million people from 31 countries in urgent need of assistance, according to the United Nations. The persistent, sometimes blatant, violation of human rights includes the abuse of housemaids, which is unacceptable in every sense. There is a critical need to prepare for and respond to such inhumane treatment to housemaids who are living in the most deplorable conditions.

Despite the existence of government’s bodies like ministries and departments, committees and commissions are formed at different levels of administration. In this respect, there arises a question as to whether they have been institutionalised to pass a verdict over a horrendous abuse that can be considered a criminal case.

Following a Myanmar Now 19 September news report of two young girls tortured for over five years as housemaids in Kyauktada township, Yangon, the police launched an investigation under the anti-human trafficking law. The news went viral on social media within minutes following the news of the police commenting that the case can be interpreted as a challenge to the country’s judicial power.

The girls, who are from a village in Kawkhmu township, had suffered gruesome torture throughout their bondage at Ava tailoring shop in Kyauktada township until they were returned to their parents. According to reports, the Myanmar National Human Rights Commission brokered a compensation of K5 million between them.

Now that MNHRC’s name is mud across social media, activists, as well as the legal community, have called for justice by denouncing the commission’s handling of the domestic abuse case as a monetary victory over legal protection.

The FIRST RUSSIA-ASEAN UNIVERSITY FORUM

Professor Chaw Chaw Sein

My trip to Vladivostok, located in Far East, Russia is to participate in Russia-ASEAN University Forum, which was organized by two Russian top universities—the Moscow State Institute of International Relations (MGIMO) and the Far Eastern Federal University (FEFU). It was a two-day forum and was held in Vladivostok, Russia from 1st September to 2nd September 2016. The campus, FEFU was chosen as a venue since the APEC Summit was hosted by Russia in 2012. The campus has become the traditional location for the Eastern Economic Forum, the annual Pacific International Tourism Expo (PITE) and other international event. The forum was held together with Eastern Economic Forum, which was attended by Russian President Vladimir Putin and high-level officials and business communities around the world.

Let me share some interesting points about Far East. Since 2000, the term, “Far East” has been increasingly used to signify the Far Eastern federal district, which is made up of nine territories with Russia’s total area, it has only about 26% of Russia’s total population. The region has been virtually isolated from the international environment. However, the situation changed in 1990s when the Soviet Union collapsed. In 1990s, the Russian Far East enjoyed full liberalization in its exterior relations, especially in trade. While in the 1990s, Moscow almost completely neglected the Russian Far East, largely leaving it to the region’s own devices.

However, under President Putin, the central government began to reassert its influence, including in the area of the region’s external links. The government even adopted a special program under the title “Vladivostok City as a Center for International Cooperation in the Asia-Pacific.” In May 2012, President Putin created a special development ministry for the development of Far East. Three bridges appeared in Vladivostok before the APEC Summit 2012. A high level bridge over the Golden Horn connected the Center of Vladivostok with the Mys Chukin District and became one of the largest cable bridges in the world. New bridges decorated seaside city, caught the fancy of local residents and becomes a new symbol of Vladivostok. The Eastern Economic Forum was first held in 2015. It welcomed more than 15,000 officials, representatives of business and expert communities from 26 countries of Southeast Asia, Europe and America. After exploring about the Far East, one thing come to my mind is about the Rakhine State, which is a poor region of Myanmar and people are struggling within their own state.

It was such an exciting trip for me to explore “Far East”. It was a long trip; it took five and half-hours from Yangon to Incheon with Korean Air, nearly two hours from Incheon to Vladivostok with Siberian Air. There were altogether nine delegations representing Myanmar from Ministry of Education and two from Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Permanent Secretary from Ministry of Education led the delegations of education. Let me also share my view on this Russia-ASEAN University Forum. The participants who were invited by Russian government were from ministerial level to director level. All the education ministers of ASEAN member countries were invited to participate. The aim of holding such kind of forum is to establish network between the ASEAN and Russian universities. Ministers for education from Laos, Vietnam, Thailand and Cambodia participated very actively and discussed future collaboration with Russian universities. This is a good opportunity for all ASEAN universities to grab full scholarships offered by Russian government. The forum is the first ever of Russia-ASEAN University Forum and is also a follow up Russia-ASEAN Summit, held in Sochi in early June 2016 to which our president U Htin Kyaw attended. The Russian government encouraged and funded their Universities to extend research collaborations and exchange of faculties and students.

Although my mother ministers of education, I participated this forum as a representative and member of the Myanmar ISIS, a think tank under Ministry of Foreign Affairs. As representing Myanmar ISIS, I have to speak in special session on “Second Track Dialogue on Security Issues: Contributions of ASEAN and Russian Experts and Scholars”. There were ten speakers in this sessions and I am only a female speaker. I felt honored to conduct as a speaker in representing my country and my University. Almost all the speakers spoke about the role of Russia in the South China Sea, how Russia view on security in Asia-Pacific, the role of think tank in contributing policy recommendation to the respective governments. It was a great opportunity for me to meet with these officials and shared my view on security issues. They are also amazed and impressed with the changes in Myanmar. I came back full with thought on how can I bridge the Universities in Myanmar with Russia. As a follow up, two delegations from MGIMO visited Myanmar ISIS and my University for future collaboration. Universities in Myanmar are collaborating with many universities around the world especially with China, Japan and Korea. Now it is an opportunity for us to network with another major power country in Far East, Russia. Not to lose the opportunity comparing with other ASEAN Universities, voice of Myanmar should also be aired and not to hesitate to participate in the forums hosted by Far East, Russia.

I would like to express my heartfelt thanks to my Ministry and my country for giving me a chance participate Russia-ASEAN University Forum. My special thanks go to MGIMO and FEFU for providing all the necessary requirements and taking care of me during my stay in Far East. Finally, I extend my gratitude to the Ministry of Education and University of Yangon as well as Myanmar ISIS for every single arrangement to make my trip successful.

The settlement of the case through compensation has sparked public debate and the MNHRC has been criticised for not taking serious action.

The agreement that came out from negotiations between the two sides was done in accordance with the right vested in the commission. The duties and rights of the human rights commission are to investigate cases accordingly, to report some cases to the ministries concerned, including the Ministry of Home Affairs, to probe into some cases, and to give suggestions to authorities. The commission has no right to make decision over the cases,” said U Zaw Win.

Japan, UNICEF team to strengthen protection of women and children

THE Government of Japan has contributed approximately US$ 2.2 million to UNICEF to assist women and children’s protection throughout Myanmar, it has been learned.

Using the contribution, UNICEF, in partnership with the Union government, will work to both prevent and respond to cases of gender based violence, as well as contribute to the on-going development and capacity building of key government departments and civil society groups, namely through the provision of quality social work.

“The prevention of violence against children based on gender is challenging. Myanmar dramatically”, The training and capacity building for social workers will help tackle this challenge. I also believe these measures will benefit the whole of society long after the completion of the programme.” said Tateshi Higuchi, Ambassador of Japan to Myanmar.

Activities to be undertaken through this partnership will also enhance the capacity of law enforcement and justice systems to provide child friendly and gender sensitive approaches when working with children in contact with the law.

The contributions from Japan will also reportedly reach out to the most vulnerable adolescent girls and boys in conflict areas to promote their life-skills and their capacity to address the risks they face on a daily basis.

“Important efforts are made by the Government and civil society to respond to violence against women and children. However, there are important gaps that require urgent technical and financial assistance. This contribution will help bridge those gaps, transforming the lives of thousands of children, and empowering girls so that they can better protect themselves from increased risks, including in conflict-affected areas.” said Bertrand Banneu, UNICEF Representative to Myanmar.—GNLM

Mobile medical teams provide health care to people in Shan State

THE Ministry of Health has sent its mobile medical teams to remote areas to provide health care service to the people.

The mobile medical team in Shan State is currently touring two villages per month, providing medical care to villagers.

According to the mobile team, the major problem of the villagers is that they can not easily access to health care centres due to poor infrastructures.

“The route is very bad during rainy season often with dangerous landslides,” a villager.

Dr Maung Maung Thein, Medical Officer of Hopone Township, said the most common cases for adults are kidney problems due to unpurified water consumption and high blood pressure, and for children is seasonal cold.

The team has provided the basic medical care to the villagers and disseminated the knowledge on health and advised them to change their lifestyles such as using adequate salt, less oil and a diet without artificial sweeteners.

Local authorities have already sent a request letter to the Ministry of Health for opening rural health care center in the village.—Kay Khaing

Brexit prompts some Jewish Britons to reconcile with German roots

LONDON — For London rabbi Julia Neuberger, Britain’s vote to leave the European Union has had a very personal impact: she has decided to seek German citizenship, laying to rest her family’s painful legacy of the Nazi era.

Neuberger is among a significant number of Jewish Britons whose dismay over Brexit has led them to invoke a German law allowing people to renounce German citizenship by the Nazis between 1933 and 1945, and their descendants, to have it restored.

“It was Brexit that tipped me off, but now in my mid-60s I feel like I’ve made my peace with Germany and this step will only take me closer,” said Neuberger, whose mother left Germany for Britain in 1937 to escape Nazi persecution of the Jews. Now, a German passport holds the promise of a future with full access to the EU and its practical benefits such as freedom to travel, live and work anywhere in a bloc that has 27 other nations — rights that Britons may no longer enjoy after Brexit is enacted.

Some of Britain’s estimated 260,000 Jews remain implacably opposed to the idea, and for Neuberger too the decision to apply for German citizenship tugs at deep emotional baggage due to the weight of history.

“My daughter asked ‘why would you want to do this after all they did to us?’” — said Neuberger, senior rabbi at the West London Synagogue and a member of the House of Lords, the upper chamber of the British parliament. “But there is some German in me after all and it goes very deep.”

Neuberger, whose application is being processed, still has her maternal grandparents’ old German passports. Their covers bear a black eagle with outstretched wings perched on a swastika, and the first inside pages are stamped with a red “J” for Jew. It is a remarkable twist of history that Jews who lost family members in the Holocaust are now using such old documents to obtain modern Germany’s maroon-coloured passports. Germany’s Foreign Ministry said that since the Brexit referendum in June, the London embassy had received about 400 inquiries about how to apply for German citizenship under article 116 of the constitution and call on the two countries to reconcile with German roots.

G-7 countries vow to take steps in response to North Korean provocations

NEW YORK — The foreign ministers of the Group of Seven countries pledged on Tuesday to coordinate and take effective measures in responding to a series of North Korean provocations, including its fifth nuclear test earlier this month despite international opposition.

“Cooperation by China and Russia are important, I want to make use of the G-7 joint statement and call on the two countries for their support in seeking a new UN Security Council resolution to impose tougher sanctions on North Korea,” Japanese Foreign Minister Fumio Kishida told reporters after a meeting with his G-7 counterparts in New York.

The joint statement released after the G-7 meeting said, “Sharing deepening concerns over the recent developments in North Korea’s nuclear weapons and missile programmes, we stress our determination to take further significant measures in effective response to provocations by North Korea.”

They condemned “in the strongest terms” North Korea’s latest nuclear test conducted 9 September. The nuclear test followed one in January and came on the heels of more than 20 ballistic missile launches this year. The foreign ministers of the G-7 — Britain, Canada, France, Germany, Italy, Japan and the United States, as well as the European Union — issued the statement as they gathered on the sidelines of the UN General Assembly meeting in New York.

Aside from North Korea, the G-7 foreign ministers also voiced “opposition to any unilateral actions that raise regional tensions” and expressed “concern over recent incidents that have occurred in the East China Sea,” in an apparent reference to the heightened presence of Chinese government vessels around the Japanese-controlled Senkaku Islands.

Some of the vessels, spotted along with hundreds of Chinese fishing boats, entered Japanese territorial waters around the uninhabited islets, claimed by China which calls them Diaoyu.

Regarding the situation in the contested waters of the South China Sea, where China is proceeding with land reclamation and building outposts for military purposes, the ministers expressed “strong opposition.” The ministers said an UN-backed tribunal’s decision on 12 July that invalidated China’s claims to almost all of the waters is a “useful basis for further efforts to peacefully resolve disputes in the South China Sea.”

China rejects the decision and says the dispute in the South China Sea with five other smaller claimants should be resolved bilaterally, not multilaterally, and without the interference of non-claimant countries such as the United States and Japan. —Kyodo News

Air raid kills several medical workers, insurgents near Aleppo: monitors

BEIRUT — An air raid carried out overnight by Syrian or Russian warplanes killed four medical workers and at least nine rebel fighters near Aleppo, the Syrian Observatory for Human Rights monitoring group said on Wednesday.

The raid hit the town of Khan Touman southwest of Aleppo city, an area controlled by insurgents. The British-based Observatory said the rebels killed were from the Islamists alliance Jaish al-Fatah.

The medical staff killed were working for the Union of Medical Care and Relief Organisations (UOSSM), it said. UOSSM confirmed in a statement that four of its staff had been killed. —Reuters

Flash floods in Indonesia kill 20; rescuers hunt for missing

GARUT (Indonesia) — Indonesian search and rescue teams worked on Wednesday to find victims of flash floods that killed 20 people and damaged hundreds of homes, authorities said.

The floods hit the Garut area, about 200 km (125 miles) southeast of the capital, Jakarta, on Tuesday after torrential rain.

“We’ve reported that we found 20 bodies and we’ve identified 15 of them,” said Endah Trisnawati, a member of a police disaster victims identification unit. It was not clear how many people were missing but some officials had said it could run into 15. Some media reported 20 people were unaccounted for. Authorities said search and rescue operations would go on. —Reuters

Vucic meets with Stoltenberg, soon to visit NATO headquarters

NEW YORK — Serbian PM Aleksandar Vucic will soon visit NATO’s Brussels headquarters, Vucic and NATO Secretary General Jens Stoltenberg agreed on Tuesday.

Vucic and Stoltenberg met on the fringes of a UNGA session in New York to discuss the situation in the Western Balkan region.

Reacting to a statement by NATO General Petar Pavlo that the Balkans remained a potential source of war conflicts, Vucic had said on Sunday he wanted to speak with Stoltenberg as soon as possible.

In an interview to the RTS, Vucic said he was disappointed with Pavel’s statement because Serbia was not threatening anyone.

Serbia did not want any fighting or conflicts, but to develop as a country, Vucic said. —Tanjug

India to merge rail budget with union budget — govt source

NEW DELHI — The cabinet on Wednesday approved the merger of the railway budget with the annual budget, a government source said, ending almost a century-long practice.

India’s use of a railway budget separate from the national one is a relic of its colonial past, when the network was the country’s major industrial asset and a major revenue earner.

Separately, the cabinet has given its approval to merge the plan and non-plan expenditure distinctions in the annual budget, Steel Minister Birender Singh told reporters. —Reuters
US portrays NY bomb suspect as jihadist who praised bin Laden

NEW YORK — Federal prosecutors on Tuesday charged the Afghan-born man suspected of weekend bombings in New York and New Jersey with 10 counts including use of weapons of mass destruction, portraying him as a jihadist who begged for martyrdom and praised Osama bin Laden.

The suspect, Ahmad Khan Rahami, bought bomb components on eBay, made a video of himself testing out homemade explosives, and kept a journal expressing outrage at the US “slaughter” of mujahideen in Afghanistan, Iraq, Syria and Palestine, federal officials allege.

“Insallah al-Ghoul (God willing),” the sounds of bombs will be heard in the streets. Gun shots to your police. Death to your oppression,” Rahami, who came to the United States at age 7, wrote in a journal he was carrying when arrested.

Rahami was apprehended on Monday in Linden, New Jersey, after a shootout with police that left him with multiple gunshot wounds. He was listed in critical but stable condition on Tuesday, and police had not yet been able to interview him in depth, New York Police Commissioner James O’Neill said. Federal prosecutors from separate districts in New York and New Jersey charged him with four and six counts respectively.

In addition to leaving the bomb that exploded on Saturday evening in the Manhattan district of Chelsea that wounded 31 people, they allege he planted a pipe bomb on the New Jersey shore that injured no one when it exploded on Saturday morning.

He also is accused of planting another pressure-cooker bomb in Chelsea that failed to explode, and multiple devices at a train station in Elizabeth, New Jersey. One of those exploded as a bomb squad robot attempted to defuse it.

The charging documents and accompanying sworn statements from Federal Bureau of Investigation agents offer the first official explanation of what they believe to be the bomber’s motive.

“As the charges were made public, the White House for the first time said it appeared the attacks were an act of terrorism. Earlier in the investigation, officials had withheld such an assessment until they could discern a motive. “It does appear this was an act of terrorism,” White House spokesman Josh Earnest said during a press briefing in New York City.

At least one victim in the Chelsea blast was knocked unconscious and another hospitalised to remove ball bearings from her body, metal fragmentation from her ear and wood shards from her neck, the charging documents say.

Surveillance video from the bomb scenes and fingerprints on unexploded devices also point to Rahami, according to the documents.

The three counts of using weapons of mass destruction, one from New York and two from New Jersey, each carry a maximum sentence of life in prison.

In addition to the federal charges, New Jersey state prosecutors from Union County have charged Rahami with five counts of attempted first-degree murder for firing at police officers and two second-degree weapons counts.—Reuters

Russian aircraft believed to hit Syria convoy, US officials say

UNITED NATIONS/BEIRUT — The United States believes two Russian aircraft attacked an aid convoy near Aleppo in a strike that shattered a one-week truce, US officials said on Tuesday, but Russia denied involvement.

Despite the military blame game over Monday’s deadly attack, diplomats struggled to save the US-Russian ceasefire agreement that took effect on 12 September. The incident, in which 18 trucks from a 31-vehicle convoy were destroyed, looked likely to deal a death blow to diplomatic efforts to halt a civil war now in its sixth year.

Two Russian Sukhoi SU-24 warplanes were in the skies above the aid convoy at the exact time it was struck late on Monday, two US officials told Reuters, citing US intelligence that led them to conclude Russia was to blame.

Russia’s foreign ministry spokeswoman denied the assertion, telling reporters at the United Nations the US administration “has no facts” to support the claim, adding: “We have nothing to do with this situation.”

Ben Rodens, a deputy US national security adviser, said the White House held Russian responsibility for what he called an “enormous humanitarian tragedy” but he did not address whether the attack was carried out by Russian aircraft.

Early Russia, which demied its aircraft or those of its Syrian government allies were involved, had said it believed the convoy was not struck from the air at all but had caught fire because of some incident on the ground.

The Syrian Red Crescent said the head of one of its local offices and “around 20 civilians” had been killed, although other death tolls differed. The attack prompted the United Nations to suspend all aid shipments into Syria.

Senior officials from 23 nations emerged from a one-hour meeting on Syria at a New York luxury hotel with little more than an agreement to meet again, or Friday, about how to end a conflict that has killed hundreds of thousands and driven millions from their homes.

They also differed on the chances of renewing the ceasefire. “The ceasefire is not dead,” US Secretary of State John Kerry said after the meeting, which he hosted with Russian Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov.—Reuters

As peace nears, Colombia’s FARC rebels reunite with lost families

YARI PLAINS, (Colombia) — Tatiana, her pregnant belly bulging beneath a T-shirt decorated with the FARC rebel group’s logo, leans down to stroke her teenage son’s hair, as if to reassure herself he is really beside her.

The shy teenager, who often touched his mother’s hand or put an arm around her, grinned ruefully when Tatiana asked him to go back to school. She joined the rebels in part because her poor parents couldn’t fund an education.

Her current pregnancy was unusual. Rebel couples must seek permission from their commanders to have sexual relations, and guerrilla doctors often perform abortions. Babies can usually only be carried to term if a relative will take them in.

Now a final signature on the deal is near, FARC couples have begun to look forward to once-forbidden parenthood.

“It’s only now we’re thinking of it as possible,” said Yefferison, 36, who has been with his partner Patricia for six years. “We want a family where we can educate our children, where they can be professionals. We don’t want them to live through what we have lived through.”

Despite his first child’s impending arrival, Omar said he is still committed to the Marxist cause and would return to fight if the peace accord falls through.

“If the government does not hold its part of the deal and we have to leave our son, then we will leave him.”—Reuters
Protest erupts after police kill black man in North Carolina

CHARLOTTE (N.C.) — Protesters blocked a highway and clashed with police in Charlotte, North Carolina, early on Wednesday morning after officers fatally shot a black man they said they had a gun when they approached him in a parking lot.

About a dozen officers and several protesters suffered non-life threatening injuries during an hours-long demonstration near where Keith Lamont Scott, 43, was shot by a policeman on Tuesday afternoon, police and local media said on social media.

Early Wednesday morning, protesters blocked Interstate 85, where they stole boxes from trucks and started fires before police used flash grenades in an attempt to disperse the angry crowd, an ABC affiliate in Charlotte reported.

Earlier in the evening, police in riot gear reportedly used tear gas on protesters who threw rocks and water bottles at them as they wielded large sticks and blocked traffic. One officer was sent to the hospital after being struck in the head by a rock, police said.

Charlotte Mayor Jennifer Roberts urged for calm.

“Only peace is holy, and not war,” the Argentine-born pontiff said.

Francis, leader of the world’s 1.2 billion Roman Catholics, prayed in the basilica with Archbishop of Canterbury Justin Welby, spiritual leader of the world’s 80 million Anglicans, and Patriarch Bartholomew, spiritual leader of up to 300 million Orthodox Christians around the globe.

In a final appeal that key representatives signed and gave to children from around the world, they vowed “to oppose every form of violence and abuse of religion which seeks to justify war and terrorism.”

“No to war! May the anguish cry of the many innocents not go unheeded. Let us urge leaders of nations to desist the caus- es of war: the lust for power and money, the greed of arms’ dealers, personal interests and vendettas for past wrongs,” the appeal said.

The narrow, cobblestone paths of Assisi echoed with the sound of different languages when Shinto priests in red-and-white robes crossed paths with rabbis in black and Muslims in white as each group converged outside St. Francis Basilica to join the Christians.

Speaking during the Christian service, Francis said the world could not ignore “our brothers and sisters, who live under the threat of bombs and are forced to leave their homes into the unknown, stripped of everything.”

Pope Francis and world religious leaders vow to oppose terrorism in the name of God

ASSISI, (Italy) — Pope Francis and leaders of other world religions said “No to War!” on Tuesday, vowing to oppose terrorism in God’s name and appealing to politicians to listen to the anguish cry of so many innocents.

Francis flew by helicopter to the central Italian hilltop city that was home to St. Francis, the 13th century saint revered by many religions as a patron of peace and nature and a defender of the poor.

The head of the Roman Catholic Church closed a thre- e day meeting where about 500 re- presentatives of Christianity, Islam, Judaism, Buddhism, Hinduism, Shintoism, Sikhism, Judaism, Buddhism, Hinduism, Shintoism, Sikhism, Zoroastri-anism and other faiths discussed how their members could better promote peace and reconciliation.

Francis, who delivered two addresses and shared meals with the leaders, said indifference to suffering had become “a new and deeply sad paganism” that caused some to turn away from the vic- tims and refugees with the same ease as changing a television channel.

Near the end of the gathering, members of each religion prayed in a separate locations and then joined each other in a square out- side the famous pink stone basilica where St. Francis is buried.

Prayers were said for the victims of war, including in Syria and Afghanistan, and for the refugees fleeing the conflicts. A woman refugee from Aleppo now living in Italy told the pope at final gathering “my heart is in tatters”.

“If only peace is holy, and not war,” the Argentine-born pontiff said.

Francis, leader of the world’s 1.2 billion Roman Catholics, prayed in the basilica with Archbishop of Canterbury Justin Welby, spiritual leader of the world’s 80 million Anglicans, and Patriarch Bartholomew, spiritual leader of up to 300 million Orthodox Christians around the globe.

In a final appeal that key representatives signed and gave to children from around the world, they vowed “to oppose every form of violence and abuse of religion which seeks to justify war and terrorism.”

“No to war! May the anguish cry of the many innocents not go unheeded. Let us urge lead- ers of nations to desist the caus- es of war: the lust for power and money, the greed of arms’ dealers, personal interests and vendettas for past wrongs,” the appeal said.

The narrow, cobblestone paths of Assisi echoed with the sound of different languages when Shinto priests in red-and-white robes crossed paths with rabbis in black and Muslims in white as each group converged outside St. Francis Basilica to join the Christians.

Speaking during the Christian service, Francis said the world could not ignore “our brothers and sisters, who live under the threat of bombs and are forced to leave their homes into the unknown, stripped of everything.”

South African police clash with protesters at Wits University

JOHANNESBURG — South Af- rican police fired stun grenades and arrested 31 students in clash- es at Johannesburg’s University of the Witwatersrand on Tues- day, as countrywide protests de- manding free tertiary education entered a third week.

Demonstrations this year and in 2015 over the cost of uni- versity education — prohibitive for many black students — have highlighted frustration at the in- equalities that persist more than two decades after the 1994 end of white minority rule.

The current protests were triggered by a government rec- ommendation that 2017 tuition fee increases be capped at 8 per cent — above South Africa’s cur- rent inflation rate of 6 per cent.

Critics have said the increase would further disadvantage black students already under-represent- ed.

Several students hurled rocks at the main building of the university known as “Wits,” shattering windows, after they were prevented from entering by private security guards who retali- ated by throwing rocks back at the students.

World leaders must show us the money to hit goals on poverty, inequality

LONDON — World leaders need to ramp up investment to achieve a set of global goals agreed a year ago to combat poverty, inequality, and make the world a safer place by 2030, according to a key adviser on the United Nation’s blueprint for the future. Jeffrey Sachs, a Columbia University economist, is special adviser to UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon on the Sustaina- ble Development Goals (SDGs) signed by the UN’s 193 member states in a blaze of publicity with backing from the Pope to Sha- kira. But a year on and studies are giving poor progress reports to the ambitious, broad set of 17 goals with 169 targets that were adopted after three years of brainstorming.

A UN report this month warned the world was set to miss the 2030 deadline to ensure all children had access to secondary education by more than 50 years due to a lack of funding.

A series of modeled esti- mates published by medical jour- nal The Lancet said unequal ac- cess to health services and poor quality care for pregnant women threatened to sideline a goal to cut maternal deaths by 68 per cent to 70 per 1,000 live births.

Sachs said the knowledge was there to solve some of the world’s most pressing problems — to bring maternal deaths down to near zero, save millions of children every year, and to decar- bonize the energy system — but not the investment.

“What we don’t have is the attention span, the systems, the politics, to shift a modest amount of our annual output in the direc- tion needed,” he told the Thom- son Reuters Foundation in a tele- phone interview.—Reuters

WELLINGTON — New Zealand's immigration boom struck a record with 125,000 newcomers landing in the 12 months through August, yet shortages of skilled labour in hot sectors like tech and construction are fuelling criticism of government policies.

The latest data, released on Wednesday by the statistics office, will likely add to the growing calls for the government to do more to attract the right kind of workers needed to fill jobs in the Pacific nation.

The country's centre-left opposition party, rather than conservatives, has led that criticism, and in July even the central bank called for a review of immigration policies. "The key issue around migration is what is the — for want of a better word — the quality of the people that we bring in," Reserve Bank of New Zealand governor Graeme Wheeler told a news conference last month, reinforcing the call for a review.

"What are the skills they're bringing in and can they add value to the economy?" he added.

Foreigners with experience in areas on the country's skill shortage list had a better chance of gaining a work visa and residency, which offered benefits such as the country's free public health services. However, only eight per cent of work visas went to people on that list, according to Immigration Minister Michael Woodhouse.—Reuters

UK not turning away from world after Brexit vote, PM May tells United Nations

UNITED NATIONS — British Prime Minister Theresa May told leaders on Tuesday that her country will not turn away from the world after the shock vote to leave the European Union, seeking to allay fears over the future unity of the West.

In her maiden speech to the United Nations General Assembly, May sketched her views on how to deal with terrorism, mass migration and modern slavery while also calling for modernisation of the 71-year-old organisation.

"When the British people voted to leave the EU, they did not vote to turn inwards or walk away from any of our partners in the world," May told the General Assembly.

"The United Kingdom has always been an outward-facing, global partner at the heart of international efforts to secure peace and prosperity for all our people. And that is how we will remain."

The 23 June vote took many investors and chief executives by surprise, triggering the deepest political and financial turmoil in Britain since World War II and the biggest ever one-day fall in sterling against the dollar.

Britain's allies fear that its exit from the EU could mark a turning point in post-Cold War international affairs that will weaken the West in relation to China and Russia, undermine efforts towards European integration and hurt global free trade.

Britain retains its role in the NATO military alliance as the EU's biggest defence spender, its permanent veto-wielding seat on the UN Security Council and four submarines armed with nuclear ballistic missiles. But some diplomats and CEOs are worried that Brexit could torpedo Britain's economic interests and clout, a suggestion that riles British ministers.—Reuters

Pitt expresses sadness over Jolie divorce filing as Hollywood power couple splits

LOS ANGELES — Actress Angelina Jolie has filed for a divorce from actor Brad Pitt, her husband of two years and romantic partner since 2005, her attorney said on Tuesday, signaling the end of one of Hollywood’s most glamorous and powerful couples.

“This decision was made for the well-being of our kids. She will not be commenting, and asks that the family be given its privacy at this time,” attorney Robert Offer said in a news release.

The Oscar-winning actress filed in Los Angeles Superior Court on Monday, citing irreconcilable differences, court documents showed. Jolie sought full physical custody of their six children ages 8 to 15 with visitation for Pitt but did not seek spousal support. Jolie cited their separation date as 15 September.

“I am very saddened by this but what matters most now is the well-being of our kids,” Pitt told People magazine. “I kindly ask the press to give them the space they deserve during this challenging time.”

Jolie and Pitt, known collectively as “Brangelina,” were one of the entertainment world’s most visible couples, due to their good looks, successful films and activism. They married in 2014 after a decade together.

Their relationship was steady fodder for tabloids with reports focusing on what role Jolie played in the breakup of Pitt’s marriage to actress Jennifer Aniston and, more recently, possible trouble in the marriage. Media commentators reacted with surprise and sadness to the news. “Today shall go down as the day love died,” Vogue magazine said in an online report on the couple’s split.

Social media buzzed with the renewed attention, mentioning roughly 720 times per minute on Twitter, more than triple mentions for the United Nations General Assembly, according to analytics firm Zoonami.

Jolie, 41, who won a best-supporting actress Oscar for her portrayal of Jordan in “Girl, Interrupted,” was previously married to actors Jonny Lee Miller and Billy Bob Thornton.

Pitt, 52, was married to Aniston in 2003 when he and Jolie filmed “Mr. & Mrs. Smith,” the story of assassins unknowingly assigned to kill each other. There were reports of an affair, but Jolie told Vogue they were only “very, very good friends” until Pitt and Aniston split in 2005.

Before their August 2014 wedding at their French estate, Jolie and Pitt had said they would not wed until same-sex couples were allowed to marry.

While Pitt and Jolie won praise for their on-screen chemistry in “Mr. & Mrs. Smith,” their most recent film collaboration, “By the Sea,” last year was about a married couple drifting apart. Jolie wrote and directed the latter.

Jolie has been estranged from her father, actor Jon Voight, but he told “Inside Edition” he was concerned about the divorce filing. “It’s very sad,” he said.

“Something very serious must have happened for Angelina to make a decision like this,” Peter Walzer, a California attorney who represented actress Kate Holmes in her divorce from superstar Tom Cruise, said in a phone interview it was unusual Jolie sought sole physical custody of the children and it was equivalent to saying Pitt was not competent to be a parent. “It’s an insult,” Walzer said.

Jolie had an offbeat reputation early in her career but has taken on humanitarian causes and was named a special envoy for the UN High Commissioner for Refugees. She traveled to Afghanistan, Sudan, Tanzania, Iraq and Jordan to call attention to the plight of refugees and the underprivileged.

The couple started a foundation to finance reconstruction of homes in New Orleans after Hurricane Katrina. Together they started the Jolie-Pitt Foundation in 2006 to help charities worldwide.

Their children include sons adopted from Cambodia and Viet Nam and a daughter adopted from Ethiopia, as well as three biological children. To encourage other women, Jolie spoke out publicly about elective surgeries in 2013 and 2015 to remove her breasts, ovaries and fallopian tubes as a preventive measure due to a family history of cancer.

‘L.A. Confidential’ director Curtis Hanson found dead at California home

LOS ANGELES — Movie director Curtis Hanson, who won an Oscar for “L.A. Confidential,” was found dead in his California home on Tuesday, the Los Angeles Police Department said. He was 71.

Paramedics found Hanson at his Hollywood Hills home at about 5 pm local time (0000 GMT). Hanson, who was pronounced dead at the scene, died of natural causes, a police spokeswoman said.

He had retired in recent years due to Alzheimer’s, according to Variety.com.

Hanson, along with Brian Helgeland, won an Oscar for “L.A. Confidential” for best writing for their adapted screenplay of the novel of the same name by James Ellroy.

As a producer of the stylish 1997 period film, Hanson also shared the nomination for best picture and was nominated for best director. “L.A. Confidential” won an Oscar for best supporting actress, Kim Basinger and was nominated for its cinematography, art direction, sound, editing and score.

The film reproduced ’50s Los Angeles life and the business side of the costumes, and Hanson used an ensemble cast that also included Kevin Spacey, Russell Crowe, Guy Pearce, James Cromwell, Danny DeVito and David Strathairn.

“Curtis Hanson’s resplendently wicked ‘L.A. Confidential’ is a tough, gorgeous, vastly entertaining throwback to the Hollywood that did things right,” The New York Times said. The film was a popular success, grossing $126 million worldwide, according to Variety. Hanson followed “L.A. Confidential” with the popular comedy “Wonder Boys,” adapted by Steve Kroves from the novel by Michael Chabon about an English professor, played by Michael Douglas, who is under pressure to finish his book amid a literary festival in Pittsburgh. —Reuters

Blunt embraces dark, damped protagonist in ‘Girl on the Train’

LONDON — Happily married with two young children, actress Emily Blunt relished the opportunity to play a divorced, alcoholic, damaged protagonist in her latest thriller, “The Girl on the Train.”

Blunt, married to actor John Krasinski and known for embracing comedy in “The Devil Wears Prada,” “The Five-Year Engagement” and “Into the Woods,” told Reuters that she wanted the challenge of portraying something darker.

“It’s just to do something else and something incredibly damaged and unsettling,” she said on the train track-themed carpet at the film’s London premiere on Tuesday. “In The Girl on the Train,” based on Paula Hawkins’ novel of the same name and out in theaters on 7 October, Blunt plays Rachel Watson, a lonely woman devastated by divorce and battling alcohol addiction. Infatuated by the seemingly perfect couple (Luke Evans and Haley Bennett) she sees from her daily commuter train that runs past their house, Rachel sees something shocking one day and becomes enraged. Driven by intrigue, passion and suspense, Rachel has a chance to engage in the lives she has only watched from afar, but the lengths she goes to uncover the truth could lead her to a dangerous situation. “It’s a story full of people suffering with their own demons and addictions and betrayal and loss and love,” Evans said.

Director Tate Taylor, best known for 2011’s “The Help,” said he was drawn to the exploration of “humanity and the human condition at its worst,” and wanted to portray an accurate representation of addiction. “I felt like it was important to represent (addiction) properly for all those affected by it,” he said.

LONDON — Britain’s famous red telephone boxes may no longer be used for their original purpose in an age of smartphones but one company is giving them a makeover — as mini-offices.

Pod Works, which membership costs 300 out, said Wednesday. "We’re hoping to provide a wave of media coverage around 50 songs chosen by fans through online voting, which is opening others and is opening others to Wood with a terse statement: “CBS stands by the broadcast and will do so in court.”

The two-part, four-hour programme aired amid a wave of media coverage surrounding the 20th anniversary of the JonBenet Ramsey case, one of the most sensational unresolved murders in the annals of American crime.

The body of the blond, blue-eyed girl, who had been beaten and strangled, was found in the basement of her parents’ Boulder, Colorado, home on 26 December, 1996, hours after her parents reported the 6-year-old child missing and a ransom note left in the house.

No one has been charged with her murder. A grand jury voted in 1999 to indict the parents, John and Patsy Ramsey, but then-District Attorney Alex Hunter declined to file charges, citing a lack of evidence.

In the conclusion of the CBS show that aired on Monday, a panel of experts said it was its opinion that Burke Ramsey, who was 9 at the time of the homicide, struck his sister in the head with a heavy object, perhaps not intending to kill her. The girl’s parents then staged a crime scene to make it appear that an intruder was the culprit, the group of law enforcement, forensic pathologists and other experts concluded.

Wood called CBS “corporate profit mongers” who aired the programme during the September “sweeps” for maximum ratings benefit.

In a recent interview on the “Dr. Phil” talk show, Burke Ramsey, now 29, denied that he harmed his sister, and said he suspected a pedophile who stalked child beauty pageants was the killer.

Wood said a written disclaimer that CBS aired with its show, saying the opinions “represent just some of a number of possible scenarios,” did not go far enough.—Reuters

UK’s famed red phone boxes get revamp — as mini-offices

DENVER — The lawyer for the family of slain child beauty queen JonBenet Ramsey denounced a CBS documentary theorizing she was killed by her brother, Burke, as a “false and unprofessional television attack,” and threatened to sue the network for libel.

L. Lin Wood, an Atlanta attorney who said he had successfully other media outlets over similar accusations against Burke Ramsey, branded the programme as a broadcast riddled with “lies, misrepresentations, distortions and omissions.”

“I will be filing a lawsuit on behalf of Burke Ramsey,” Wood told Reuters in a telephone interview. “CBS’ false and unprofessional attacks on this young man are disgusting and revolting.”

The network responded to Wood with a terse statement: “CBS stands by the broadcast and will do so in court.”

The three-CD boxed album, called “SMAP 25 YEARS,” will consist of around 50 songs chosen by fans through online voting, out of about 400 the group has released since its CD debut in 1991, Victor Entertainment Corp. said.

The voting opened early Wednesday and ends on 4 October.

SMAP will also release a Blu-ray and DVD of its music video and live clip collection on 28 December, without planning to release a new song, according to Victor. The group caused a brief media frenzy in January when the news of their potential breakup surfaced, before band members said later that month they would stick together.

At the time, fans launched a campaign to express their support through the purchase of CDs of “Sekai ni Hitotsu Dake no Hana” (The Only Flower in the World). SMAP’s best known song, and as a result pushed the 2003 hit song to No. 1 again on a Japanese hit chart. But in August, talent agency Johnny & Associates Inc. said that SMAP will break up on 31 December and all the members — Masahiro Nakai, Takuya Kimura, Tsuyoshi Kusanagi, Goro Inagaki and Shingo Katori — will remain with the agency and focus on solo careers starting next year.

UK’s famed red phone boxes get revamp — as mini-offices

LONDON — Britain’s famous red telephone boxes may no longer be used for their original purpose in an age of smartphones but one company is giving them a makeover — as small offices.

Pod Works is hoping to lure those who sit in coffee bars to work on their laptops to its revamped booths, which boast wifi, plug sockets, a phone, printer, scanner and free coffee and tea.

Once dotting British cities, towns and villages, the red telephone boxes have dwindled in number over the years, replaced by modern booths or simply removed. Some have been turned into libraries or coffee shops.

“We thought it was a good idea to repurpose these and take them into the 21st century,” Pod Works UK managing director Lorna Moore said.

“The sheer volume of tourists who come and stand by the box and take selfies and photographs indicates just how iconic and important they are.”

Pod Works launched its first such work station in central London’s Russell Square this month and is opening others across the capital, for which membership costs 25 pounds a month. It plans to expand to other British cities in October.

“We’re hoping to have 50 out by Christmas and then this next year we will have 300 out,” Moore said. —Reuters

Tottenham put no time frame on Kane injury

LONDON — Premier League high-flyers Tottenham Hotspur declined to put a time frame on Harry Kane’s ankle injury on Tuesday amid speculation that the England striker could be out for two months.

The 23-year-old scored the winner against Sunderland on Sunday but was carried off in the 87th minute after turning his ankle while tackling Papy Djilobodji.

“He has injured his ankle ligaments. We will continue to assess him every day but don’t want to put a time frame on it.” Spurs manager Mauricio Pochettino said on the club’s Twitter feed.

Tottenham are third in the league standings, with three wins from five games, and travelled to promoted Middlesbrough on Saturday.

They are also competing in the Champions League again after a five-year absence, with group-stage matches against CSKA Moscow and Bayer Leverkusen on 27 September and 18 October.

A prolonged absence for Kane could also hit England, who have a World Cup qualification need for three points against Slovakia and Montenegro in October.

Kane ended last season as the Premier League’s top scorer with 25 goals, the first Englishman to achieve the feat since Sunderland’s Kevin Phillips in 1999-2000.
