Government refutes rights group report on Rakhine

THE government yesterday strongly refuted a recent report by a rights organization that accused Tatmadaw troops of burning down houses in northern Rakhine State.

A special press conference was held at the Presidential Palace in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday to announce the formation of an information committee that would be in charge of releasing information about the conflicts in Rakhine, but the main topic of discussion was the recent Human Rights Watch report that alleged government troops had set fire to houses in Maungtaw on 10 November. Based on the report, the Bangkok Post published a news story on 14 November about human rights abuses, allegations that the government resolutely denies. The Tatmadaw True Information Team has also refuted the report.

Concerning the accusations in the report, it has been announced that findings of the committee from its field inspections will be released shortly. The Bangkok Post on 14 November published a news story about violent attacks by government troops in Maungtaw that started on 9 October, the same day that border guard outposts were attacked by armed men. Other media outlets also published the news story.

The State Counsellor, in consultation with leaders of the Tatmadaw, sent teams to Maungtaw, Kyetyoepin, Pyaungpate, Dargyisar villages and surrounding areas by Tatmadaw helicopters on 15 November in order to take photos or to get a first-hand view of the situation. The Tatmadaw field inspection team found that 105 structures in Warpate, 30 structures in Kyetyoepin Village, 30 structures in Dargyisar Village, 20 structures in Pyaungpate Village had been burnt down. Findings of the teams were displayed at the press conference that showed photos from Human Rights Watch as well as those from the Tatmadaw that seemed to show very different views of the same area.

The government photos showed much smaller areas of burnt houses, while the Human Rights Watch photos show much greater devastation. The government contends that the burnt homes shown in their photos were caused by attackers, not by the Tatmadaw.

Yesterday’s news conference also included an announcement from the Secretary of the State Counsellor’s Office Information Committee. Deputy Director-General U Zaw Htay of the President’s Office said that a State Counsellor’s Office Information Committee has been formed by the president’s office. The aim was to release correct information about the situation in Rakhine State in a timely manner.

The committee will hold press conferences and issue press releases when warranted. Then, the committee responded to queries of the media.

Concerning the question that a State Counsellor’s Office Information Committee is established under the President’s Office said that the area taken by Tatmadaw troops in helicopters last week, below, show fewer areas of destruction. The government also contends that the arson fires were set by attackers.

A photo released by Human Rights Watch, above, shows widespread areas of burnt homes in Maungtaw that they allege were set by Tatmadaw troops. High tax rate resulted in low demand in condominium market

WITH the high tax rate levied on property, the luxury condominium market is cooling, the developers said.

According to the new Condominium Law, 20 per cent of the value of a condo worth between Ks30 and Ks100 million if the buyers failed to explain how they earn and 30 per cent for a condo valued above Ks100 million have to be paid. Sellers have to pay 10 per cent of the value.

In addition, there is a 7 per cent stamp duty on the sale of property in the three biggest cities of Myanmar -- Yangon, Mandalay and Nay Pyi Taw. A 5 per cent stamp duty is levied on real estate dealings in other cities.

With the appreciation of the US dollar, the sale of mid-quality and high-quality condominiums are often conducted using dollars instead of kyats, it is learnt from the real estate market.

The price of luxury condominium apartments slumped by about 15 per cent because of the cool market, whereas other condominium prices went up.— Mon Mon

Myanmar Industrial zone operations expected to double in 2017

BUSINESSES in industrial zones are expected to double in number next year because many businessmen are eyeing the sector for investment, said U Aye Thaung, the chairman of Shwe Lin Pan Industrial Zone.

The industrial business plays a vital role in the country’s economy, which is expected to be bolstered by a flood of foreign direct investments. Therefore, the industrial zone operations are likely to increase twofold.

Producing skilled labourers is crucial to effectuate the development in an industrial zone. There are currently 29 industrial zones in Myanmar. That number is low when compared to international countries, which means there is much room for growth.

Moreover, the industrial zones that can fulfill the requirements of the domestic market and produce quality products are essential to an emerging economy. Many food products are still currently imported from the foreign countries. Therefore, fixing the infrastructure problem in industrial zones should be given priority, according to officials.

Rubber market sales stable despite high price

THE export market of rubber is stable in spite of the current high price, which resulted from the rise in the global rubber price, businessmen said.

Over 80 per cent of rubber production in Myanmar is slated for export to China. Local rubber consumption is below 10 per cent. However, the rubber demand in the domestic market has risen because of increase in tyre production.

The export volume of rubber will rise only if the production rate from rubber farms is boosted. Most rubber farm owners sell the latex once it is produced. Only some of them store the rubber while waiting for the price goes up.

Over 80,000 tonnes of rubber are exported yearly and this year, export volume is expected to hit nearly 100,000 tonnes, according to the Myanmar Rubber Planters and Producers Association.

The price of raw rubber price is Ks840 per pound, which is about Ks140 higher than the price from the same period of last year, it is learnt from rubber entrepreneurs.— Ko Htet
New Zealand evacuates tourists, locals stranded by earthquake

WOODEND/WELLINGTON — Helicopters ferried scores of residents and tourists out of a small New Zealand town on Wednesday as others boarded naval ships, three days after the region was completely cut off by landslides following a major earthquake.

Prime Minister John Key pledged to push emergency laws through parliament if necessary to prop up businesses in Kaikoura, a seaside tourist town famed for its whale watching and seafood delicacies some 150km (90 miles) north of Christchurch.

“If we are helping pay the wages and we can get some of the tourists back ... then we can get through the worst of it and get you out the other side,” Key told business leaders in Kaikoura after flying in by helicopter.

International tourists contributed NZ$14.5 billion (S$14.3 billion) to the New Zealand economy in the year to March, the private-sector Tourism Industry Association (TIA) estimates, up 20 per cent on the previous year and over-taking the dairy industry as the country’s biggest export earner.

One tourist ferried out of Kaikoura by helicopter said he planned to continue his journey, despite describing the 7.8 magnitude quake that killed two people as “very frightening.”

“It was rocking around like there were 10 people who were outside pushing it,” Chris Stewart, 62, a financebroker from Australia, said of his experience inside a campervan.

Stewart landed with other evacuees in Woodend on Wednesday, a small town north of the South Island’s largest city of Christchurch, where officials processed people in a community hall.

Asked if he was concerned about staying in New Zealand, where he plans to hire another campervan to complete his two-week holiday, Stewart said: “Hell no, I’ve crossed it off the bucket list: lived through an earthquake.”

The quake that struck just after midnight on Monday rocked much of the country, waking people and stirring memories of the 6.3 magnitude Christchurch tremor that killed 182 people in 2011. A tsunami alert that followed Monday’s quake sent many rushing for higher ground, before the threat was lowered.

Local TV pictures showed huge landslides covering roads and rail routes, and crevasses in highways. Large sections of rocky coast were covered in seaweed and abalone, apparently lifted out of the sea by the force of the quake.

Key on Wednesday rang US President-elect Donald Trump, after making his calls earlier in the week. Key said Trump expressed sympathies over the earthquake and the pair discussed the economy and trade.

Several ships were diverted from celebrations of the Royal New Zealand Navy’s 75th anniversary to head to Kaikoura with supplies and emergency aid.

Transport Minister Simon Bridges said officials were working night and day to clear an inland route.

Key told local businesses he was considering “throwing some money” at an international online campaign to promote Kaikoura once road access had been restored to reassure tourists it was safe to visit as the peak summer season approached.

The government would also put together a business package in the next few days to allow businesses to keep staff on the payroll until tourists returned, Key said.

After the meeting, local resident Glenn Ormsby said businesses were still worried: “Summer’s coming up, and what do we do? It’s a really tough period and what do we do?”

In the capital, Wellington, large buildings rocked by the quake were shut off due to earthquake damage as aftershocks continued and strong winds were expected in the coming days.

Authorities said they would have to bring down a multi-storey building near the country’s Parliament due to structural damage. The Defence Force’s damaged headquarters was closed to its 1,200 staff and a spokesman said he did not know when it would re-open.

Japan regulator OKs another nuclear reactor to run beyond 40-yr limit

TOKYO — Japan’s Nuclear Regulation Authority gave approval on Wednesday for a third reactor to operate beyond the mandated 40-year maximum lifespan, signaling a further weakening in enforcement of the limit introduced after the 2011 Fukushima disaster.

The No. 3 unit at Kansai Electric Power Co.’s Mihama plant in Fukui Prefecture is the latest reactor allowed to continue in service beyond the limit following two such units at the utility’s Takahama complex, also in Fukui.

The Mihama No. 3 unit, which began commercial operation in December 1976, went offline in May 2011 for a regular checkup and has not been restarted, undergoing inspections to meet tougher safety requirements introduced after the Fukushima disaster.

Kansai Electric plans to spend about 165 billion yen ($1.8 billion) to upgrade the facilities at the reactor with a capacity of 826,000 kilowatts to meet the new regulations, which reflect the lessons learned from the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant disaster.

The restarting of the reactor is not expected before the spring of 2020 to allow time for the operator to finish preparing all the required safety measures, according to Kansai Electric. The utility said in a written comment that it hopes to “smoothly resume the operation of reactors whose safety is confirmed,” adding it will start considering details of construction work for safety measure as soon as possible.

The Nos. 1 and 2 reactors at its Oi nuclear power plant on the Sea of Japan coast have been in commercial operation for 36 to 37 years. The company is considering extending the operation period for the two reactors as well.

The 40-year operational limit has been included in the regulations with the aim of encouraging the retirement of aging reactors that could prove prone to accidents. Although operation for an additional 20 years is possible, nuclear regulators initially indicated that it would be extremely difficult to actually get approval for an extension.

Utilities have decided to scrap their aging reactors due to expensive safety costs. Kansai Electric has given up restarting the Nos. 1 and 2 reactors of the three-unit Mihama plant. A total of six reactors at five plants in the country will be scrapped under the 40-year rule.—Kyodo News
Investigation into scandal-hit South Korean president expected to be delayed indefinitely

SEUL — South Korean prosecutors initially announced its plan to investigate scandal-hit President Park Geun-hye on Wednesday, but the investigation is expected to be delayed indefinitely as the president’s counsel requested it to minimize the number of being investigated.

The prosecution office has claimed the need for a face-to-face questioning of President Park no later than Wednesday given that it plans to visit Park’s prolonged confidante, Choi Soon-sil, suspect of intervening in state affairs from the shadows, around Saturday. However, the embarrassed president’s attorney said on Sunday that the number of the face-to-face questioning should be minimized as rival political parties agreed to a bill to appoint a special prosecutor who will probe into the case independently. Questioning the president through documents would be desirable, the attorney noted.

Prosecutors said it can investigate President Park on Thursday, but the direct questioning looks hard to be carried out by the current investigative unit of the Seoul Central District Prosecutors’ Office in capable of forcing the president to be investigated.

The attorney, who is seeking to let the president avoid multiple investigations, is forecast to accept a document questioning by the current investigative unit and allow the special prosecutor to directly question him when he was campaigning as the capable of the president to be investigated.

The country’s constitution, a president has immunity from being criminalised except for charges of treason and insurrection, but investigation is allowed if the indictment is suspected until the end of single, five-year term.

Opposition parties denounced the delayed investigation. Choo Mi-ae, chairwoman of the main opposition Minjoo Party, told a supreme council meeting that it was deplorable for the president’s lawyer to insist on the minimized probe and document questioning when new suspicions surrounding the scandal emerge everyday.

Choo, who is leading the party’s campaign to let President Park resign, raised suspicions about the president’s attempt to destroy evidence, saying the case cannot be concluded without investigation into the president who is suspected of having a deep involvement.

Rail project in focus as Japan, Malaysia leaders meet in Tokyo

TOKYO — Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and Malaysian counterpart Najib Abdul Razak began talks in Tokyo on Wednesday, with the leaders expected to touch on a proposed high-speed railway line linking Malaysia’s biggest city of Kuala Lumpur with Singapore.

Japan is set to pitch its “shinkansen” high-speed rail technology for the project when bidding opens next year, as part of Abe’s strategy to grow infrastructure exports.

Abe has stressed Japan’s status as an exporter of “high quality” infrastructure, emphasising the shinkansen’s safety record.

Najib’s visit comes on the heels of his top two weeks ago to China, seen as becoming Japan’s closest competitor for the project. Najib lost out to China in bidding in September last year for a high-speed rail link in Indonesia between the capital Jakarta and Bandung, a provincial capital.

“Japan places high importance on our relationship with Malaysia, and I look forward to working with (you) toward marking next year 60 years since the establishment of bilateral diplomatic relations,” Abe told Najib at the outset of their talks.

“Next year is a very important milestone in our bilateral ties, and we must make it very significant…to indicate that our relationship is enduring, our relationship is strong and our relationship is mutually beneficial,” Najib replied.

The leaders are also likely to discuss territorial disputes in the South China Sea, according to Japanese government officials.

Malaysia is one of several Southeast Asian countries with an overlapping territorial claim with China in the sea. While Japan does not have any claim to the South China Sea, it has repeatedly condemned attempts to unilaterally change the status quo in light of its own territorial row with China in the East China Sea.

The South China Sea also serves a key shipping route for Japan’s imports, especially of oil from the Middle East.

Following the leaders’ talks, the governments of both countries are expected to sign an agreement for Japan to provide Malaysia with two used patrol vessels from the Japan Coast Guard.

Japan has also given patrol vessels to Indonesia, the Philippines and Vietnam in an effort to strengthen the maritime security of countries abutting the South China Sea.

The leaders are expected to affirm their coordination as strategic partners in addressing issues of regional importance, the Japanese officials said. Japan and Malaysia are this year serving overlapping two-year terms as nonpermanent members of the UN Security Council.

Chansomone Chanyalath said in his opening remarks of ASEAN Defence Ministers Meeting (ADMM) Re-treat.

“In general, regional and international environments continue to undergo complex and rapid changes, ASEAN and the international communities continue to be concerned about challenges and developments across regions of the world, Lt. Gen. Chansomone said.

“Terrorism and extremism are posing threats to regional and global peace and stability as demonstrated by the brutal attacks in many parts of the world including in our region,” he said.

“Natural disasters and climate change also continue to pose threats and challenges to regional security since they adversely impact people’s livelihoods as well as the national, regional and international socio-economic development,” the Lao defence minister said.

The ASEAN Defence Ministers Meeting Retreat is one of the multilateral meetings being held in Laos as per its 2016 chairmanship of the 10-member grouping.

Human rights vs protectionism

Khin Maung Aye

THE universal recognition of human rights calls for the constitution-alisation of international law and foreign policies based on human rights and principles of rule of law, limitation and separation of government powers, social justice and national as well as international constitutionalism (Petersmann). The eight core principles of constitutionalism must be applied in mutual levels wherever power risks being abused.

Constitutionalism is described as a bottom-up struggle for the protection of human rights as well as human dignity in the Kantian sense of maximum equal liberty for the personal development of every individual. In this regard, it is worth remembering that the WTO guarantees of freedom, non-discrimination, rule of law, compulsory adjudication of international disputes, and of a mutually beneficial division of labor are compatible with the six basic functions of human rights law.

Whatever the justifications for, or consequences of, economic protectionism, it is an inescapable fact that as a policy that denies individuals the opportunity to trade freely, it is not compatible with individual rights. Advocates of protectionism argue that tariffs and quotas protect American businesses and American jobs from foreign competition, and protecting jobs is more important than protecting individual rights (David Holeberg).

In fact, protection of individual rights is an essential pre-condition for the very existence of jobs as well as the only conditions without which jobs are worth nothing, just as they were in former Soviet Russia, Nazi Germany or ancient Egypt. Without individual rights, jobs are nothing more than the assigned toil of slaves. The simple truth that domestic jobs are not protected, but in effect are destroyed by protectionism. Of course, some jobs, the jobs of the protected industries, are not lost – at least not in the short run, and thus are protected and even created. But what about all other jobs that will be lost because of the protectionist policies?

As an afterthought, think about the principle of protectionism being extended to regions/states too, since it should be obvious that it is not there. Then, following the premise of the good of protecting jobs, imagine extending protectionism to cities to protect city jobs, then to neighborhoods, and ultimately to families. Then, the whole family will buy from outsiders, then a single family can have and keep all the jobs they want and do everything on their own. Wouldn’t consistent protectionism be great?

Those Which Are Worth Being in Compliance With Ethics

Wai Yan Maung

SUCH-AND-SUCH a saying had ever been heard.

American newspaper publisher, Joseph Pulitzer, once said that the 3 eternal principles for journalists to conceive in their minds are accuracy, accuracy and accuracy. Pulitzer, a journalist and the writer of the work, “Hirishima” said, “A journalist must not concoct stories and use any subterfuges in their writings. He is always to be ready to say truths without hesitation.”

To err is human, but —

There is no one free from errors, but as a journalist with an onerous responsibility, compared to those of ordinary people, needs to pay great attention to their works so as not to humble and harm the reputation of other individual or organization or the majority.

As per the promulgated news media law, journalism is emphatically acknowledged to be the fourth estate. It is regarded as the one responsible for linking 3 Pan-els—legislative, executive and judiciary bodies with the Fifth Panel, all citizens.

Especially, in time of building a democratic federal nation people greatly hoped for, news media is responsible for reporting in the right way to protect democracy and for making prompt response to requirements and interest of the society.

Controlling those performing their respective responsibilities in the above-said 3 panels to harmoniously move on the right path and not to go astray is the ethic of journalism.

Media ethics and news media

In the promulgated news media law, it is definitely prescribed that journalists are under duty to abide by ethics acquired. There are accuracy of facts and thorough scrutiny of any information included in it.

In addition, media ethics enacted by Society of Professional Journalist—SPJ in 1996 and which is still being exercised by international media men contain the fact: “Every news and information from available sources must undergo the process of confirmation for accuracy of facts & figures and it must be free from careless mistakes. Concurrently, any biased writings will never be allowed.”

So long as being in compliance with media ethics and reporting in the right way exist, media will get the respect and trust of 3 Panels, reliance and trust of the people and acknowledgment and trust of international media. Depending upon abiding by media ethics, value, reputation and professional status can be assessed.

Such-and-such a story is being heard.

Yet, some journalists are making false news as if someone is speaking out it. Those include fabrication and subterfuges. They neglect the truth. Some influential persons from media group themselves are saying in a wrong way without hesitation.

Are defamatory accusations in compliance with media ethics?

Recently, a person, in-charged of a media organization, described his accusation in an article under the caption of “Government organizations fail to abide by the news media law,” in bold type. In its body, the sameness remarks: “His comments made while making conclusion over an event are defamatory accusation towards all governmental organizations operating the nation’s ma-chineries on behalf of the people.

No one is above the law. Yet, readers may misconstrue that the government itself did not follow the news media law, thus causing the potential loss of people’s trust over their hoped-for government.

It can be assumed to be a miserable one because it does not comply with 3 principles of Joseph Pulitzer as well as ethics for media men to follow as prescribed in section 9 of news media law. Furthermore, humiliating words caused misunderstanding and defaming over organizations and their leaders. What they said on purpose may raise a futuro over leading role of the aggrieved party. Media have no right to say whatever they want. They must speak out the truth and what they speak out must be true. This inci-dent reminds me of John Hersey’s words: A journalist must not concoct stories and use any subterfuges in their writings. He is always to be ready to say truths without hesitation.”

Freedom of expression means that —

During the time of the former regime and since the advent of the incumbent government’s rule, “Freedom of Press” and “Freedom of Expression” are widely shouted.

In accordance with the pre-scription, “Every individual is able to openly disclose their belief and opinions if they are not against the law prescribed,” censorelaw was abolished in August of 2012.

Yet, as regards those who abused freedom of expression, U Zar Ga Nar made a noteworthy remark, “Freedom of expression is not freedom of insult. We value freedom of expression. It is the freedom of what we want works well.” U Zar Ga Nar is none other than a famous performer as well as a prisoner of conscience. He dared to criticize and point out weakness of consecutive govern-ments.

Union Minister for Informa-tion too called for media men to express in accord with media ethic and to pay stress to take re-sponsibility and accountability, together with freedom of expres-sion, at the 5th media develop-ment conference held early this month.

What will happen to cases which do not comply with ethic?

Citizens will be harmed first due to these cases. Conse-quences which will result from misunderstanding false as true can be enlarged too much.

The second victim is the aggrieved person or organization who is accused. A wrong news may lead a person or organization to a ruined life or situation.

The third victim is the per-son in question—that is himself who creates the harm. The aggrieved can respond to it according to his will. The offender has no right to say what to do and what not to do, just after express-ing at random without accuracy of facts.

In article 347, chapter 8 of the Constitution of Republic of the Union of Myanmar, it is prescribed that the Union shall guar-anantee any person to enjoy equal rights before the law and shall equally provide equal protection. And it is prescribed in article 375 that accused shall have the right of defence in accord with the law.

However, now is the time for the whole populace to shape our country with our concerted efforts. For this I would not like our panels to spend our precious time by solving problems within us. This is my real desire.

To sum up, would that —

We, the media men stand up as the fourth estate, performing our duties in the interest of the nation, acquiring the whole populace including the government as the media men abiding by ethics acquired.
Government refutes rights group report on Rakhine

He also said that findings of the committee will be released starting tomorrow, with the media allowed to cover news in the area in the same ways as diplomats were allowed to visit. A news team from the Ministry of Information led by a director has been sent there in cooperation with the Ministry of Defence and Ministry of Home Affairs. Based on the security situation of the news team, private media will also be sent there, he said.

He also pledged to cooperate with the media for sensitive conflict reports in the future.

U Zaw Htay continued to say that the office of the Rakhine State Information Committee is open at the Presidential Palace, with Maj-Gen Soe Naing, the deputy leader of the Tatmadaw Information Team, together with other responsible personnel being at the office.

He also pledged that the information team of the Tatmadaw would release ground reports in Rakhine State as soon as it is ready.

Regarding the challenges faced by the government in restoration of community peace and stability in Rakhine state, U Zaw Htay said out of 36 suspects arrested on 12 November, Mohammad Islam, 41, was living in Pwintphyuchaung Village and he, along with villagers, went to the fighting with the government troops.

He added that Mohammad Islam told the police during the interrogation that the violent attackers who came back from Bangladesh set fire to the homes.

The Deputy Director-General continued to say that Sardu Armay, who was arrested on 14 November, told police that he came to Myasin Village together with villagers to fight the government troops.

U Zaw Htay continued to say that diplomats asked the villagers during their trip to the conflict areas whether they understood the writings on the placards they were holding, the villagers replied that they did not understand them and they received the writings from Viber. The villagers did not answer who sent the words to them, he added.

Maungtaw conflict was not a simple phenomenon and it was found that violent attackers are planning how to fight the security forces when the troops came to their village.

It needs to create an environment for peaceful coexistence of the both communities to get grid off the extremism from the villagers who were inculcated, he added.

However, it was found that it was difficult to solve the issue as the attackers are mixing with the villagers and it needs to take time to settle the problem, he said.

During the investigation into rape accusations in the conflict areas, local women replied that no rape cases happened there, he said.

The fresh conflict in the Rakhine State was the third one and instigators behind the conflict were linking with the international communities, he said.

Press Release 1/2016
2nd Waning of Tazaungmon, 1378 ME
(16 November 2016)

The following is an unofficial translation of press release 1/2016 of the State Counsellor’s Office information committee.

1. As regards the news item about burning the abodes in Maungtaw area which appeared in Bangkok Post 14th November 2016 issue, the statement of the Tatmadaw’s True News Releasing Body was published in State-run newspapers of 15/11/2016 issue.

2. To be able to release the true situation concerning the news accurately, aerial photos were taken by Tatmadaw’s Border Command in the villages of Wapeik, Kyeteyoepin, Dargyizar and surrounding area in addition to on-the-ground-sighting in the evening of November 15. During the inspection, it was found that nearly 105 buildings in Wapeik village were burnt down, with about 30 in Kyeteyoepin, 30 or so in Dargyizar and some 20 abodes in Pyuangoku set on fire.

3. Upon receipt of the news that some 10 armed attackers entered Wapeik village in the evening of November 13, security forces went to clear them out. Due to the clearance attack of the security forces, the attackers set houses in the village on fire and fled away. That news was published in the Myawaddy newspaper and broadcast on Myawaddy TV on November 14. The Bangkok Post covered a news report based on satellite photos released by Human Rights Watch, in which it accused that some 100 buildings were burnt down before November 13. It was reported in Myawaddy newspaper and on Myawaddy TV on October 13 that there were only 25 buildings burnt down in the above-said village before the news released by HRW. According to findings from investigation, it is learnt that 105 units out of its original number of buildings—261 houses were ruined in the fire. Despite the fact that 245 houses in the village of Kyeteyoepin were described to have been burnt down in Bangkok Post, only 30 out of its original number—362 were found to have been destroyed by the arsonists.

Similarly, according to the on-the-ground-survey, there were only 30 buildings burnt down out of its original number—330 in Dargyizar village. BP accused that 700 buildings were destroyed by the arsonists. Although HRW expressed that 85 buildings were ruined in the fire, the actual number was only 20. It has been released that outbreaks of fire were caused by the violent attackers.

4. During the aerial inspection of the fire-destroyed sites by helicopter, some buildings were found blazing near Yekhatchang Gwasone village at 3 p.m or so. Government troops in the line of security duty extinguished the fire. In it, 17 houses were burnt down.

5. It was found that armed attackers waging terrorist attacks on Maungtaw area are burning villages and spreading false news and concocted stories linking with some media with a view to getting monetary aids from international organisations and misunderstanding security forces launching area clearance operation. The activities of area clearance operations in Maungtaw area will be released to keep pace with the time.

Workshop on federalism held in Nay Pyi Taw

NAING THET LWIN, the Union Minister for Ethnic Affairs, delivered a speech at a workshop on federalism held at Royal President Hotel in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday morning.

“It is necessary for us to thoroughly study the characteristics of federalism. Now that the term ‘federal’ is officially accepted, mottoes and slogans such as ‘From 21st Panlong Union Peace Conference to Democratic Federal Union,’ are being heard everywhere. And billboards showing support of the whole populace are ubiquitous” he said in his speech.

He went on to say, “In exercising federalism, one country differs from another. Similarly, their results are found to be different. Only if federalism is suitable for nature and the real situations of a nation, can success be achieved. We need to openly discuss federal systems. If we can relate experiences gained from this workshop and study further, it will be of great help for peace, stability and development of our country.”

U Han Yong Hue, Executive Director of the Euro-Burma Office (EBO) Myanmar, Mr Don Stephenson of Canada Foreign Ministry (Myanmar Affairs) and Programme Director of Forum of Federations extended greetings and posed for the photos.

The workshop was attended by inter-region and state ministers for ethnic affairs, international scholars and representative officials. During the meeting, the subjects—introduction to federalism, unity and difference, sharing power and authority, sharing of natural resources, federalism and resource sharing, and protection of minority rights under federalism—will be discussed.

Mr Stephenson of Ministry of Canada Foreign Affairs (Myanmar programme) said: “I am very glad to share knowledge and experience on Federalism not only from Canada but also international experiences including India and Germany. I deeply assert that federal systems which is suitable for one country should be built depending on the respective countries’ historical background and nature in building federal systems. According to the experience of Canada, it is of great need to have a political leader with skilled and broad-minded vision. There needs to be peaceful negotiation among political leaders. And we need to reach an all-inclusive agreement. If we build federalism based on understanding, we will gain national reconciliation, political stability and economic wealth.”

U Han Yong Hue, executive director of EBO Myanmar, said the conference was important from an informational and practical perspective.

“At the request of the Ministry of Ethnic Affairs to discuss federalism, we held this meeting in collaboration with Forum of Federations and international experts to know well about what federalism is, how it is to be implemented. Ministers at Region and State levels as well as the whole populace need to know federalism so that we can build a federal nation. Federal means a kind of government’s administrative system. Federal attends democracy.”

The programme director of Forum of Federations said the two-day workshop was designed to give historical context to federalism and also to see how it could be applied to Myanmar.

“Federalism causes unity, economic development, mutual understanding and peace,” Mr. Stephenson said. “Our organization is a Canada-based non-governmental organization, consisting of board of members sent by 10 federal countries. We will discuss facts on federal systems in a short period of time.” —Myanmar New Agency

Harvesting demonstration on model field in Kayin State

A paddy plantation demonstration using the Sin Thu Kha pedigree seed—registered seeds (RS), and certified seeds (CS) — and harvesting on a model field took place on the five acres of paddy fields owned by farmer U Tar Kalose in Flue Village, Myawady Township, Kayin State on Tuesday.

At the event, the township officer of the Myanmar Agricultural Service said that farmers should use seeds produced from Sin Thu Kha pedigree paddy seed production fields in order to achieve higher paddy yield. Pedigree paddy seeds have been stored in systematic ways to distribute to the farmers so that they can grow pedigree paddy in real time.

To find out an accurate paddy yield per acre, a paddy on a 0.10 acre field was harvested with the use of winnowing machine. The paddy yield per acre is 110.81 baskets per wet paddy and 99.73 baskets per dry paddy.

“Myanmar Fruit, Flower and Vegetable Producers and Exporters Association will submit a proposal to the government to get loans for growers with the aim of further developing the sector,” he said.

“The growers need the capital when they grow the fruits and vegetables. So, we will submit the proposal to the government. We also plan to give loans to the cultivators”, said U Soe Than Min Din, chairman of the Myanmar Fruit, Flower and Vegetable Producers and Exporters Association (FFVPEA).

The FFVPEA is planning to build a mango, pomelo, avocado and mushroom cultivation zone. Also, the FFVPEA will submit a proposal to receive land from the government.

Fruits and vegetables from Myanmar are mainly exported to China. The FFVPEA will try to export Myanmar fruit not only to China but also to other countries such as Malaysia, Singapore, and the European countries. — Myitmakha News Agency

Kurdish militia YPG to depart Syria’s Manbij after training, US diplomat says

ISTANBUL/BEIRUT — The Kurdish YPG militia will pull its forces from the Syrian city of Manbij and withdraw east of the Euphrates River in order to participate in the campaign to liberate the Islamic State stronghold of Raqqa, it said in a statement.

US special envoy Brett McGurk described the move as a “milestone”, saying on Twitter that all YPG units would depart Manbij after training local units to maintain the city’s security against Islamic State.

Turkey has repeatedly called for the YPG to withdraw east of the Euphrates. Ankara views the militia as a hostile force with deep links to Kurdish militants who have fought a three-decade insurgency on Turkish soil. Ankara has also said YPG fighters should not be involved in the planned Raqqa offensive.—Reuters

Air strikes pound rebel-held east Aleppo after weeks-long pause

BEIRUT — Intense air strikes resumed in rebel-held districts of eastern Aleppo after a weeks-long pause on Tuesday, killing at least three people, residents and a war monitor said.

Syrian state television said the Damascus government’s air force took part in strikes against “terrorist strongholds” in Aleppo’s Old City while Russia said the Damascus government and Russia “will not be the united front that they used to be”. The bombardment appeared to mark the end of a pause in strikes on targets inside the city declared by Syria’s government and Russia on 18 October.

“Our houses are shaking from the pressure. Planes are soaring above us and the bombardment is around us,” said Modar Shekh, a resident of eastern Aleppo. Both rocket strikes by jets and barrel bombs dropped by helicopters were used, residents and a war monitor said.

State-owned Ihbabariyah television reported large troop deployments along several main fronts in the Aleppo theater in preparation for a major ground offensive that it said was imminent and awaiting “zero hour” to begin.

The renewed violence in Aleppo will be closely followed in Washington where President-elect Donald Trump has signed a law to stop training local units backed by Turkey, the United States and Gulf monarchies.

Damasuscs describes all the rebels fighting to oust Assad, who remains in power, as a “terrorist group” and has threatened to retaliate against any attack on Syrian territory.

Islamic State does not operate in rebel-held areas, including eastern Aleppo, but the former Nusra Front, now known as Jabhat Fateh al-Sham, does.

Aleppo has for years been divided into government-held western and rebel-held eastern sectors but the Syrian army and its allies managed to isolate and besiege the insurgent districts during the summer. Its allies include Iran’s Revolutionary Guards, Lebanon’s Hezbollah and Iraqi Shi’ite militias.—Reuters

Hundreds of people take arms against Taliban in Afghanistan as armed group speeds up activities

SHEBERGHAN, (Afghanistan) — Hundreds of people have taken up arms against Taliban outlet in the northern Jawzjan province after the armed group has intensified activities in the neighbouring Saripul and Faryab provinces.

“Several hundred people gathered in Faizabad district, Jawzjan province this afternoon and vowed to support government forces in the war against Taliban rebels,” a pro-government armed man Zabi Khan told Xinhua on Tuesday.

He added that the people have bought arms and ammunition with their own money to fight Taliban insurgents, and that “the remedy to eliminate Taliban rebels is mobilizing people against the hardliner group and backing government forces.”

Taliban militants fighting the government to retain power, according to locals, have killed innocent civilians, destroyed schools and ruined health clinics.

“We have been fed up with the Taliban’s harsh interpretation of Islam and their despotic policies,” another pro-government armed man, in the northern Faizabad district, said.

Khan told Xinhua, warning the armed insurgents to either lay down arms or face dire consequences of the people’s wrath.—Xinhua

Global terrorism deaths fall, but rise 650 per cent in OECD countries

LONDON — Deaths from terrorism in OECD countries increased by 650 per cent last year despite a marked fall globally as Islamic State (IS) and Boko Haram militants suffered military defeats at home but committed more attacks abroad, a report said on Wednesday.

The Global Terrorism Index (GTI) said worldwide there had been 29,376 deaths caused by terrorism in 2015, a drop of 10 per cent and the first fall in four years, as action against Islamist militants IS in Iraq and Boko Haram in Nigeria cut the numbers killed there by a third.

However, the report said the groups had spread their actions to neighbouring states and regions, causing a huge increase in fatalities among OECD member countries such as the United States and European nations.

It said 21 of the 34 OECD member countries had witnessed at least one attack with most deaths occurring in Turkey and France where coordinated attacks by IS gunmen and suicide bombers at the Bataclan music venue, a soccer stadium and several cafes in Paris last November killed 130 people. The GTI said 21 of the 34 OECD member countries had witnessed at least one attack with most deaths occurring in Turkey and France where coordinated attacks by IS gunmen and suicide bombers at the Bataclan music venue, a soccer stadium and several cafes in Paris last November killed 130 people.

The annual index ranks countries based on data from the Global Terrorism Database run by the Institute for Economics and Peace (IEP) think-tank.

The United States ranked 36th, with France 29th, Russia 30th and the United Kingdom 34th. The global economic impact of terrorism was assessed to be $896 billion with Iraq suffering the greatest impact, at 17 per cent of its Gross Domestic Product (GDP).

IS was the deadliest group in 2015, the report said, overtaking Boko Haram with attacks in 252 cities that led to 6,141 deaths.

However, Boko Haram’s move into neighbouring countries Niger, Cameroon and Chad saw the number of fatalities in these countries increase by 157 per cent. — Reuters

Greek police, protesters clash in Athens during Obama visit

ATHENS — Riot police fired teargas on Tuesday at protesters demonstrating just a few kilometers (miles) from the presidential mansion where Greek leaders were hosting a state banquet for visiting US President Barack Obama.

About 7,000 people, among them many hooded protesters and members of the Communist-affiliated group PAME, marched through the streets of central Athens holding banners reading “Unwanted!” The police clashed with the protesters after they tried to break through cordon lines to reach the government building and the US embassy. Some demonstrators threw two petrol bombs at police before dispersing into nearby streets close to Athens’s main Syntagma Square.

In a separate protest in the northern city of Thessaloniki, protesters burned a US flag.

The visit comes only two days before the anniversary of a bloody 1973 student revolt that helped topple the 1967-1974 military junta which was backed by the US government.

Obama, who will be succeeded in January by Donald Trump, arrived in Greece on Tuesday on his last foreign tour as president of the United States. — Reuters

France, UN tell Trump action on climate change unstoppable

MARRAKESH, (Morocco) — France and the United Nations on Tuesday stepped up warnings to US President-elect Donald Trump about the risks of quitting a 2015 global plan to combat climate change, saying it would be “disastrous for future generations and it would be dangerous for the planet.”

French President Francois Hollande, addressing almost 200 nation meeting in Morocco on ways to slow global warming, said that inaction would be “disastrous for future generations and it would be dangerous for the planet.”

Both he and UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon called on Trump, who has called the 2015 global plan a hoax, to drop a campaign pledge to cancel the global 2015 Paris Agreement that aims to shift from fossil fuels to cleaner energies.

“The United States, the largest economic power in the world, the second largest greenhouse gas emitter, must respect the commitments it has undertaken,” Hollande said at applause. The agreement was “irreversible,” he said.

In such UN meetings, it is rare for leaders to single out others for even veiled criticism. Both Hollande and Ban were among the architects of the Paris Agreement.

“What was once unthinkable has become unstoppable,” Ban said at a news conference of the Paris deal, agreed by almost 200 governments last year after two decades of tortuous negotiations. The accord formally entered into force on 4 November after a record 195 countries ratified it.

Ban said, saying he had spoken to Trump by telephone after his victory and planned to meet him. Ban, who has made climate change a core part of his 10-year UN stewardship ending this year, said climate change was having severe impacts from the Arctic to Antarctica and that 2016 is on track to be the warmest year on record.

Trump has said he wants to boost the US coal, oil and shale industries, abandoning President Barack Obama’s plan to cut greenhouse gas emissions by 26-28 percent below 2005 levels by 2025. The Paris accord, aiming to prevent warming to levels that would be irreversible, was driven by increased scientific certainty that man-made emissions drive heat waves, floods and rising sea levels.

Assange questioned for second day at Ecuador’s UK embassy over rape allegation

LONDON — Prosecutors questioned WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange for a second day at the Ecuadorian embassy in London, where he has been holed up for four years, in an investigation into allegations that he committed rape in Sweden in 2010.

Assange, who enraged Washington by publishing a flood of secret US diplomatic cables, fled to the embassy for fear that Sweden could end up sending him to the United States where he could face a long prison term for leaking US secrets.

Thailand finds 33 new cases of Zika, says health ministry

BANGKOK — Thai health officials on Wednesday said 33 new Zika virus cases have been detected in the country as officials step up screening for groups at high risk from the disease such as pregnant women.

“We confirmed 33 new cases last week and have detected the virus in two further provinces,” Ministry of Public Health spokesman Suwannachai Wattanayingcharoenchai told Reuters.

Suwannchai said health campaigns warning travelers about Zika have been increased as many Thai tourists flock to the capital Bangkok to take part in national mourning activities for King Bhumibol Adulyadej, who died on 13 October.

“This is a period of movement with people coming to the capital from the provinces to take part in various activities,” he said. “We have to remind them that Zika is a silent disease and some people won’t have symptoms.”

Thailand became the first country in Southeast Asia in September to confirm Zika-linked microcephaly, a condition that results in babies being born with small heads, and has one of the highest number of Zika cases in the region.

Other parts of Southeast Asia have reported dozens of cases of Zika, including city state Singapore where 450 cases have been reported in 2016. Thailand has reported more than 680 cases of Zika since January but its Department of Disease Control has said the virus is manageable.—Reuters

Van Gogh museum dismisses claim discovered sketchbook authentic

PARIS — The Van Gogh museum in Amsterdam has dismissed an art historian’s claim that a collection of discovered sketches were drawn by the Dutch artist, saying they were imitations.

At a news conference in Paris on Tuesday, Bogomila Welsh-Ovcharov presented “Vincent van Gogh, The Lost Arles Sketchbook,” a book showing prints of dozens of drawings the University of Toronto professor and Van Gogh specialist say are by the artist.

Welsh-Ovcharov and publishers Seuil say the sketches are from the post-impressionist painter’s move to Arles in the south of France in 1888. However, the Amsterdam museum, a leading authority on the “Sunflowers” and “The Harvest” artist, said its experts disagree after looking at pictures of the works.

“The Van Gogh museum has seen a high number of drawings as photographs,” Welsh-Ovcharov told reporters.

“Now, when I was a university professor and I taught courses on connoisseurship and on art history, that is the worst thing anyone can do — to tell me that they made a decision on what is a work of art by a photograph.”

The museum, which counts some 500 Van Gogh drawings and four of his sketchbooks, said it had known “for some time” of the album, adding its experts had studied “high-quality” photographs of 56 drawings, out of a total 65, sent to them.

“There’s an opinion, based on years of research on Van Gogh’s drawings in the museum’s own collection and elsewhere ... that these album drawings are imitations of Van Gogh’s drawings,” it said.

“The experts examined its style, technique and iconography, and among their conclusions were that it contains distinctive topographical errors and that its maker based it on discolored drawings by Van Gogh,” Welsh-Ovcharov said.

She was called while in France to look at a sketchbook found in a storeroom in Arles which had come to the attention of Franck Baillie, who manages an auction house in Paris, to verify whether it was by Van Gogh.

“I looked at it and ... it was an ‘OMG’ moment, oh my God, and I said it’s not possible, I’ve seen many Van Goghs that were supposedly Van Goghs and they weren’t,” she said.

“And I looked at it and I saw all the things that Van Gogh stands for in terms of reed-pen brushwork, graphite under-ground work, the whole possible elements,” she said, adding she had the drawings verified by various specialists.—Reuters

Late actor Mifune honoured with star on Hollywood Walk of Fame

LOS ANGELES — A ceremony was held Monday to unveil a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame for the late Japanese actor Toshiro Mifune, who appeared in a number of films directed by Akira Kurosawa.

“He would talk in a gruff manner, and always have a perfect posture like a true samurai even at home,” the 28-year-old film producer said of his grandfather, who died when he was nine.

Mifune (1920-1997) rose to prominence with his roles in famed director Kurosawa’s films including “Rashomon” (1950) and “Seven Samurai” (1954). The Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, which administers the honour for entertainment professionals, announced in June last year that Mifune would be added to the list.

Steven Okazaki, who directed “Mifune: The Last Samura,” an upcoming documentary film on the legendary actor, also attended the event.—Kyodo News

Pink diamond nets $18 million in ‘healthy’ market: Christie’s

GENEVA — A pear-shaped pink diamond sold for 18.127 million Swiss francs ($18.11 million) on Tuesday to an Asian collector bidding by telephone at an auction marked by “healthy prices”, Christie’s said.

The top lot at its semi-annual Geneva sale, the stone weighs 9.14 carats and is graded fancy vivid pink, the highest possible color grading. Its pre-sale estimate was 16 million Swiss francs to 18 million.

“The pink diamond (went to) an Asian collector, a big mega Asian collector,” Rachul Kadakia, international head of jewelry at Christie’s, told reporters after the sale.

In May, rival Sotheby’s sold a pear-shaped vivid pink diamond of 15.38 carats for 30.8 million Swiss francs ($31.47 million at the time), setting a world record.

Christie’s, celebrating its 250th anniversary, netted nearly 97 million Swiss francs with 77 per cent of 217 lots sold, against 110 million francs a year ago. Several major gems, including a Colombian emerald and diamond ring by New York jeweller David Webb, stalled on the block.

A pair of diamond drop earrings, “Miroir de l’Amour” (Mirror of Love) by a new French boutique jeweller that has revived the illustrious name and “same philosophy” of 18th Century jewellers Boehmer et Bassenge, sold for 17.56 million Swiss francs after more than 5 minutes of bidding. They had no reserve price, the secret minimum set by the owner, which is rare at auctions.

“It made a great price for a really fabulous pair of diamonds. Very healthy prices will give a great boost to the white diamond market,” Kadakia said. “Diamonds are bouncing back.”

The auction house said the flawless white stones, weighing 52.55 and 50.47 carats, respectively, are the “world’s largest perfect pear-shaped diamond drops ever to be offered at auction”. The pre-sale estimate was 20.30 million Swiss francs for the earrings, whose buyer remained anonymous.

“The buyer is highly likely to be a newly minted Russian or Chinese billioniare oligarch or business tycoon, who does not shy from flaunting their wealth,” Tobias Kormind, managing director of London-based 77 Diamonds, said in a statement earlier this week.

Roma designer hopes fashion can build bridges in Hungarian society

BUDAPEST — Transforming traditional flowery Roma patterns into bold, modern prints, designer Erika Varga aims to use fashion to increase acceptance of the Roma minority in Hungarian society.

She launched Romani Design, Hungary’s first Roma fashion label, with her younger sister Helena Varga six years ago.

Since then her colourful, sometimes flamboyant designs have won fans in Hungary, as well as in Brussels, Berlin, Paris and India, where she has also presented her women’s and menswear collections.

Inspired by the traditional clothing of her rich Roma cultural heritage Varga, 46, hopes fashion can fight stereotyping in society.

“We talked a lot about how important it is to find and live fully their Roma identity,” she said of her mentoring work. To succeed in this, she said, society needs to change as well, to be more open towards Roma people, who make up about 3 per cent of Hungary’s population.

“The reason why Romani Design was created is that I wanted a much more intensive and stronger communication channel and ... to boost the prestige of Roma culture,” Varga told Reuters in the small sewing room in her studio in Budapest. At a glitzy fashion show in the capital featuring Hungarian designers over the weekend, held by Marie Claire magazine, models stroled the catwalk in Varga’s vibrant Romani designs.— Reuters

Japan to launch satellite 20 December to explore Van Allen radiation belt

TOKYO — Japan’s space agency said on Tuesday a satellite will be launched 20 December from the Uchinoura Space Centre in southwestern Japan to study high energy electrons in geospace.

The Japan Aerospace Exploration Agency said a second-generation Epsilon rocket will carry the satellite named the Exploration of Energisation and Radiation in Geospace aloft.

The satellite will gather information meant to clarify how highly charged electrons in the Van Allen radiation belt are created, as they are generated and vanish repeatedly along with space storms. The radiation belt lies within the geosphere, or the region of outer space nearest to earth and including the upper atmosphere, ionsphere and magnetosphere.

The 26-metre-high second Epsilon Launch Vehicle is a revamped version of the first one launched in September 2013, with enhanced launch capability and artificial intelligence that performs checks and monitor operations.

The Epsilon rocket will be launched between 8pm and 9pm on 20 December from JAXA’s space center in Kimotsuki, Kagoshima Prefecture.— Kyodo News
Spain fight back to snatch draw with England

LONDON — Isco scored in the sixth minute of stoppage time as Spain launched an improbable fightback to snatch a 2-2 friendly draw against England with both their goals coming after the 89th minute at Wembley on Tuesday.

But Isco was allowed time to find the net in the 92nd minute with a fine effort after a well-worked move that saw him score.

England had taken the lead through Jordan Henderson’s 25th-minute goal, but Isco equalised just before half-time.

The match was a tight affair with both sides creating chances, but neither was able to make the most of them.

With Isco scoring in the 90th minute, the game ended in a draw, much to the relief of both sets of fans.

LONDON — It has been missing for a while but Novak Djokovic rediscovered his warrior spirit to tame Canada’s Milos Raonic 7-6(6), 7-6(5) in a riveting duel and guarantee progress from his group at the ATP World Tour Finals on Tuesday.

The 29-year-old Serbian’s recent malaise has cost him the world number one ranking, he held for 126 weeks but Djokovic, aiming for a fifth consecutive title, was equal to everything — just.

Having won a high-intensity first-set when Raonic double-faulted on set point in a tense tiebreak, Djokovic looked to have been chasing in the second to lead 4-2.

Raonic, who dialled up his mighty serve to speeds of 140mph, stormed back to rock Djokovic on his heels and came within a missed forehand of extending the match into a deciding.

But Djokovic produced a magical backhand thud at 5-5 in the night’s second tiebreak, then an ace, before Raonic succumbed to an eighth successive defeat at the hands of the Serb when his backhand flew wide.

With two wins in the bag Djokovic, whose form has tailed off since winning the French Open in June, is now assured of a semi-final spot although with 200 ranking points up for grabs in his final group match against Gael Monfils he will not be letting up.

Raonic will be favourite to beat Dominic Thiem and reach the semis too, although the Austrian will be heartened by his 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 defeat of fellow debutant Monfils earlier.

“I managed to hang in there mentally and stay strong and believed that the opportunities would come,” said Djokovic, who needs to better Andy Murray’s performance here to reclaim the number one ranking, said.

“It could have gone either way this match. He’s such a strong player and got his fire-power. Two tiebreaks against a big server is a great win.”

Despite having won only one set in their previous seven matches, Raonic betrayed no inferiority and forced Djokovic to save three break points early on. — Reuters

Djokovic digs deep to repel Raonic onslaught

SAN JUAN (Argentina) — A Lionel Messi masterpiece, netting a brilliant free kick before laying on two more goals, put Argentina’s World Cup qualifying campaign back on track with a reounding 3-0 win over Colombia on Tuesday.

The win lifted Messi’s team, recovering from two successive defeats, into fifth place in the South American group with 19 points, one behind Ecuador and Chile, who beat Uruguay 3-1 with an Alexis Sanchez brace.

Brazil, away to Peru in Lima in a later match, top the table with 24 points while Uruguay are second with 23.

Colombia dropped to sixth on 18 points.

The top four go through to the 2018 finals in Russia with the fifth, at present Argentina qualifying for an intercontinental playoff for another berth.

“It’s hard to analyse (the match) when you concede those kinds of goals and the more so when one team has a player like Messi,” said Colombia coach Jose Pekerman.

“With the second goal, the match became practically impossible (for us). You try to get goals back but we couldn’t and Messi made the difference.”

Argentina took a ninth-minute lead when Messi curled his free kick over the wall and into the top left corner of David Ospina’s net off the underside of the bar for his 57th Argentina goal.

Falcao came close for Colombia when Messi fed Angel Di Maria but his shot from a tight angle hit the post.

Di Maria did, however, break a goal drought for his country stretching back eight matches, in the 83rd minute.

Messi cheekily stole the ball from a defender, raced into the box and laid the ball square where Di Maria blasted his 18th Argentina goal into the roof of the net.

Rodriguez hit the post with a free kick in stoppage time with Colombia’s last chance of the match.

In Santiago, Sanchez scored twice in the second half as Chile came from a goal down after Edison Cavani had put the Uruguayans ahead and Claudia Bravo saved a late Suazo penalty.

Striker Eduardo Vargas equalised in first half stoppage time and Sanchez put Chile ahead in the 73rd minute of stoppage time with a header.

Vargas headed the ball on with his head and it rattled the net.

With 10 minutes left Messi’s superb ball over the defence was met on the edge of the six-yard box with a firm header into the bottom far corner by Lucas Prato, justifying his inclusion in place of the benched Gonzalo Higuain.

Colombia pushed Argentina back in the second half though the home side threatened again when Messi fed Angel Di Maria but his shot from a tight angle hit the net.
